AN APPENDIX

TO THE

Three English Volumes in Folio of MORERY's

GREAT

Hiſtorical, Geographical, Genealogical and Poetical

DICTIONARY:

Being a Curious MISCELLANY of Sacred and Profane Hiſtory.

Containing, in ſhort,

The LIVES and moſt Remarkable ACTIONS

MVSEVM

OF

The Patriarchs, Judges, and Kings of the Jews; Of the Apoſtles, Fathers, and Doctors of the Church; Of Popes, Cardinals, Biſhops; &c. Of Hereſiarchs and Schiſmaticks, with an Account of their principal Doctrines; Of Emperors, Kings, Illuſtrious Princes, and Great Generals; Of Ancient and Modern Authors; Of Philoſophers, Inventors of Arts; and all thoſe who have recommended themſelves to the World by their Valour, Vertue, Learning, or ſome Notable Circumſtances of their Lives. Together with the Eſtabliſhment and Progreſs both of Religious and Military Orders, and the Lives of their Founders. As alſo the fabulous Hiſtory of the Heathen Gods and Heroes.

The DESCRIPTION

Of Empires, Kingdoms, Common-Wealths, Provinces, Cities, Towns, Iſlands, Mountains, Rivers, and other conſiderable Places, both of Ancient and Modern Geography; wherein is obſerv'd the Situation, Extent and Quality of the Country; the Religion, Government, Morals and Cuſtoms of the Inhabitants; the Sects of Chriſtians, Jews, Heathens and Mahometans; the principal Terms of Arts and Sciences; the Publick and Solemn Actions, as Feſtivals, Plays, &c. the Statutes and Laws; and withal, the Hiſtory of General and Particular Councils, under the Names of the Places where they have been celebrated.

The whole being full of Remarks and Curious Enquiries, for the Illuſtration of ſeveral Difficulties in Theology, Hiſtory, Chronology and Geography, &c.

This APPENDIX being collected from Authors of Character, and chiefly from the French SUPPLEMENT to the ſaid DICTIONARY, printed in Holland in the Year 1716. And wherein Foreign Lives and Tranſactions are continued to the ſaid Period.

By JER. COLLIER, A. M.

LONDON:

Printed by Geo. James; and ſold by R. SARE and F. GYLES in Holborn; B. and S. TOOKE at the Middle-Temple Gate; G. STRAHAN over-againſt the Royal Exchange; W. TAYLOR in Pater-Noſter-Row; J. BOWYER, and W. and J. INNYS, in S. Paul's Church-Yard. MDCCXXI.

AN

APPENDIX

TO THE

Three English Volumes in Folio, of MORERY's

GREAT

Historical, Geographical, Genealogical and Poetical

DICTIONARY:

Being a Curious Miscellany of Sacred and Profane History.

Containing, in short,

The LIVES and most Remarkable ACTIONS

FR MVSEVM
BRITANNICVM

The Patriarchs, Judges, and Kings of; Of the Apostles, Fathers, and Doctors of the Church; Of Councils, Bishops; &c. Of Patriarchs and Sabbaticks, with an Account of their principal Doctrines; Of Emperors, Kings, Illustrious Princes, and Great Generals; Of Ancient and Modern Authors; Of Philosophers, Inventors of Arts; and all those who have recommended themselves to the World by their Valour, Virtue, Learning, or other Noble Endowments or their Lives. To which is added the Establishment and Progress both of Religious and Military Orders, and the Lives of their Founders. As also the fabulous History of the Heathen Gods and Heroes.

The DESCRIPTION

Of Empires, Kingdoms, Common-Wealths, Provinces, Cities, Towns, Islands, Mountains, Rivers, and other considerable Places; both of Ancient and Modern Geography; wherein is observed the Situation, Extent and Quality of the Country; the Religion, Government, Morals and Customs of the Inhabitants; the Sects of Christians, Jews, Heathens and Mahometans; the principal Terms of Arts and Sciences; the Publick and Private Actions, as Feasts, Plays, &c. the Sentences and Laws; and withal, the History of General and Particular Councils, under the Names of the Places where they have been celebrated.

The whole being full of Remarks and Curious Enquiries, for the Illustration of Several APPENDIX Authors of Characters, and chiefly from the French SUPPLEMENT to the two Dictionaries, printed in Folio in the Year 1701. And wherein Foreign Lives and Translations are continued to the End of Queen Anne's Reign.

By JER. COLLIER, A. M.

LONDON:

Printed by Geo. Strahan and Rob. Gosling in Fleetstreet; B. and S. Tooke at the Middle-Temple-Gate; G. Strahan over-against the Royal Exchange; W. Taylor in Pater-Noster-Row; J. Nicholson, and W. and J. Innys, in St. Paul's Church-Yard. MDCCXXI.

TO THE READER.

THIS APPENDIX to the Three Engliſh Volumes of Morery's DICTIONARY, being chiefly collected from the French and Dutch Supplement printed in Holland in 1716, it may be expected I ſhould lay a brief Account of this Outlandiſh Performance before the Reader.

To begin, the laſt French Edition of Morery was printed in Five Volumes at Paris in 1712. To this, in 1714, they publiſhed a large Supplement by itſelf, conſiſting of Corrections and new Articles, that thoſe who were furniſhed with the former, might not be oblig'd to purchaſe the laſt Edition. As ſoon as this new Supplement came into Holland, the Dutch Bookſellers reſolved to print it there, as an Addition to their Three Editions, the laſt of which was publiſhed in 1702. But to make the Work more complete, they apply'd to a Learned Perſon who had gone a conſiderable Length in drawing up a Supplement. Their Application being comply'd with, this Author threw the whole Paris Supplement into the Dutch Edition of 1716. As to the Enlargements upon old Matter, the Additions are only inſerted where the Senſe is clear, without the whole Article. Theſe Additions, together with ſome little Repetition, ſometimes neceſſary for Perſpicuity, are mark'd with a *, which Aſterisk is likewiſe, generally ſpeaking, ſet before the Citations.

The Miſtakes in the Paris Supplement are corrected. Farther, Morery gives the Hiſtory of none but dead Authors; but the French Supplementer ventures more Freedom, and furniſhes ſome of the Living. The Dutch Gentleman writes by Morery's Precedent, and meddles with no body out of their Coffin.

The French Supplementer, tho' he promiſes an Inſertion of the new Articles in the Paris Edition of Morery, A. D. 1712, and which are omitted in the Editions prior to this Date; notwithſtanding this Promiſe, he falls pretty much ſhort in the Performance. This Deficiency is made good in the Dutch Preſs: Here the Reader will find Articles extracted from the laſt Paris Edition, which are neither in the Holland Editions, nor in the Paris Supplement. And beſides, there are additional Articles of Geography, which the Author of the French Supplement ſeems to have neglected, eſpecially upon the Courſe of his Undertaking.

As to the Head of Geography defective in Morery, 'tis now ſupply'd, tho' not without ſomething of Diſtinction. For Inſtance, with reſpect to Kingdoms, States and Provinces, which we are concerned to be better acquainted with; here the Plan is farther beaten out, and the Detail more particular; but as to Places remote, and ſeldom taken Notice of, the Management is ſomewhat different. With regard to the firſt, not only the Names of the Cities and Boroughs are mentioned, but even the Villages ſometimes, where there's any thing uncommonly remarkable.

And in regard Morery has miſs'd pretty much in his Deſcription of Copenhagen, and his Overſights are corrected from the Memoirs of a very conſiderable Perſon, who lived more than twenty Years in that City; they muſt not go unmentioned. And ſince theſe Corrections ſtand in the Dutch Undertaker's Preface, the Reader ſhall have them in the Engliſh one.

Copenhagen, ſays Morery, is divided by a great Arm of the Sea. This Arm is ſo far from being a great one, that the Bridge which lies over it, is ſhort of fifty Paces. The ſmaller Diviſion, is that in the Iſland Amagger. This, as the Dutch Prefacer obſerves, ſerves, is ambiguouſly expreſs'd, and ſeems to report that the whole Iſland Amagger lies within the Circuit of Copenhagen, which is a Miſtake; for this Iſland is two or three Miles in Circumference. It ſhould have been ſaid therefore, that this Part of Copenhagen, which is called Chriſtian-Haven, from Chriſtian IV. who built it, ſtands within the Iſland Amagger, and the other Moiety in that of Zealand.

The Caſtle, continues Morery, ſtands in this Diviſion. But there are two Structures in Copenhagen called Caſtles, the Citadel and the King's Palace, call'd the Schloot: But neither of theſe are ſituate in the Iſland Amagger, but in that of Zealand.

Morery falls into the ſame Miſtake with reſpect to the Situation of the Mint, the Exchange, and the Arſenal, which he tells us are in the Iſland Amagger; but he is quite out; for theſe three Buildings are in the Iſland of Zealand.

Morery adds, that Tycho-Brahe's fine Globe is in the Arſenal: But this is not ſo; for this Globe is lodg'd in the Obſervatoire, commonly called the Round-Tower. He mentions a great many Bridges in Copenhagen, whereas there are but two at the moſt, one of which is only for the Convenience of the Garriſon, and has no more than a few Planks laid together.

He reports the principal Churches are S. Nicolas, the Holy-Ghoſt, and Our Lady's. They ſhould have been reckon'd thus: Our Lady's, which is the Cathedral; S. Peter's for the Germans, S. Nicolas, the Holy Ghoſt, and Trinity.

He ſpeaks of the Tailebote Caſtle: But this Caſtle is but a ſmall Timber Houſe. And beſides, the Name is Tollebode, which ſignifies the Cuſtom-Houſe.

To conclude; the moſt remarkable Things in Copenhagen are, 1. The Haven, which is admirable. 2. The Citadel, which defends the Town, and is a regular Pentagon. 3. The Arſenal. 4. The Obſervatoire, a very high round Tower, and which a Man may drive up in a Coach. 5. The Exchange. 6. The Libraries. 7. The Room of Curioſities in the Arſenal. The Houſes in this City are computed at about five thouſand eight hundred, and the Inhabitants threeſcore thouſand. Thus far the Dutch Supplementer.

As to my Share, over and above Tranſlating, and ſometimes Enlarging, a ſhort Suggeſtion may ſerve. And here the Reader may pleaſe to take Notice, that the following Articles are of my own Collection, viz. the Speeches delivered upon publick Occaſions by the Conſul Marius and Cataline; by Symmachus Governor of Rome, with S. Ambroſe's Counter-Harangue relating to the Altar of Victory; the Diſpenſing Power, Grabe, Medals, Points, (Hebrew,) Pyrrho; the Jews Modern, the Samaritans Modern; with others too many to mention.

The Errors occaſion'd by the Preſs, and otherwiſe, in the two firſt Engliſh Volumes of this Dictionary, printed at London in 1701, are corrected, and the Hiſtory of Foreign Affairs carried as far as the Year 1716. As to the Tranſactions in our Iſland and Ireland, my Period may be ſeen in the Title Pages and Prefaces to the Three Engliſh Volumes.

In the Edition of Morery printed in 1701, there are ſome Lives of Saxon, Engliſh and Scottiſh Kings, together with other Perſons of Condition, written in a fanciful or negligent manner. Theſe being the Remains of a former Edition, in which I had no Concern, could not well be altered, conſidering the Model then agreed on. However, where the Perſons are imaginary, and the Hiſtory romantick, I have directed expunging the Articles.

I am far from Tranſlating the whole Two Folio's of the Dutch Supplement. This would have unneceſſarily ſwell'd the Price, and been heavy in the Entertainment: For not a few Heads in this Holland Impreſſion are borrow'd from the three Engliſh Volumes: And as for the reſt paſs'd over, they are foreign Genealogies, lean Subjects, and ſuch as make no Muſick.

I ſhall now referr the Reader to the Book, and detain him no longer with Introduction.

A LIST OF

Some of the SUBSCRIBERS NAMES, the reſt not being ſent in.

A

John Alleyne Eſq;
The Rev. Roger Altham, D. D.

B

The Rt. Hon. Lord Bruce.
Samuel Baldwin Gent. Large Paper.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Bell.
Mr. Thomas Bird.
Mr. Bloodworth.
Mr. George Boheme.
Thomas Bowdler Gent.
Mr. Jonah Bowyer, of London, Bookſeller.
Mr. William Bowyer, of London, Printer.
The Rev. Thomas Brett, LL. D.
Mr. Burrel, of Durham.

C

Mr. Clayton, of the Middle Temple.
Sir John Colleton Bar.
Anthony Collins Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Collier, of S. Columbe.
Cuthbert Conſtable, of Barton-Conſtable, Eſq;
Mrs. Cotton, of Eaſt-Barnet, Hertfordſhire.

D

Peter Davis Eſq;
Ralph Daviſon, of London, Gent. Large Paper.
William Dean Eſq;
Sir John D'Oyly Bar.
George Draper Eſq;
The Rt. Hon. Lord John Drummond.
John Drummond Eſq;

E

Lieutenant-General Erle.
William Edwards Gent.

F

The Rt. Hon. John Earl Fitzwilliams, of Milton, Northamptonſhire.
The Rev. James Fenton, LL. D. Vicar of Lancaſter.
Mrs. Fielding, of Arundel-ſtreet, London.
William Ferrour Gent.
Mr. David Fotheringham, Merchant.

G

The Rev. Dr. Gaſcoign, Rector of Enfield.
Robert Goſling, of London, Bookſeller.
Mr. Fletcher Gyles, of London, Bookſeller.

H

The Rev. Mr. Henry Hall.
H. Henning Eſq;
Charles Hornbey, of Grey's-Inn, Gent. Large Paper.
Mr. Culpepper Hougham.
Mr. Huddleſton, of London.

I

Geo. James, of London, Printer.
Tho. Jett Eſq; Large Paper.
Mr. Innys, of London, Bookſeller.
Benedict Ithel, of Temple-Dinſley, Hertfordſhire, Eſq;
James Joye Eſq;
H. Juſtis, of Grey's-Inn, Gent.

K

Mr. Richard King, of London, Bookſeller.

L

The Rt. Hon. the Earl Loudon.
Sir Nic. L'Eſtrange Bar.
Mr. James Linfield.
Robert Lloyd, of London, Eſq;
Narciſſus Lutterell, of Little Chelſea, Eſq;

A LIST of ſome of the Subſcribers Names.

M

Kennet Mackenzy Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Richard Mayo.
The Rev. Thomas Milner, M. A. Vicar of Bexhill, Suſſex.
D'Oyly Michell Eſq;
The Hon. Roger North Eſq;
Benjamin Machal, of Machal in Staffordſhire, Gent.
George Munſon, of Broxbourne in Hertfordſhire, Eſq;
John Muriell Eſq;

N

John Nicholas Eſq; Large Paper.

O

Mr. Alexander Ouchterlony, Merchant.

P

The Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.
Mr. Wm. Payne, of Clothworkers Hall.
Theophilus Parſons Eſq;
John Pearce, of Penrin, Gent.
The Rev. Mr. Richard Pearſon.
Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, Large Paper.
William Mackworth Praed, of Trevethow, Eſq;
Herbert Price, of Weſtminſter, Eſq;

R

Sir Jemmet Raymond.
Mr. Thomas Richardſon, of London, Apothecary.
Mr. James Rider of London.
John Rugg, of the Inner-Temple, Gent.

S

The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Stamford.
Mr. Richard Sare, of London, Bookſeller.
Sir John Shelley, of Michael-Grove, Bart.
Richard Slany Eſq;
Sir Edward Smith Bart.
Robert Stonicliſt, of London, Gent.
William Strahan, LL. D. of Doctors-Commons.
Mr. George Strahan, of London, Bookſeller.
Willam Stuart Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Willam Syms.

T

William Tankard Eſq;
William Taylor Gent.
Mr. Taylor, of London, Bookſeller.
Henry Temple Eſq;
John Temple Eſq;
Mr. Benjamin Tooke, of London, Bookſeller.
Mr. Charles Townley, Large Paper.

V

The Rev. —— Uvedale, LL. D. of Enfield.
Richard Vivian Eſq;

W

The Rt. Hon. the Lord Walgrave.
George Wharton, M. D. and Fellow of the College of Phyſicians, Large Paper.
Mr. William Weſtbrook, Merchant.
The Rev. Mr. Mountague Wood.
John Worth, of Penryn, Eſq;

A N

AN APPENDIX TO THE Great Hiſtorical, &c. DICTIONARY.

THIS Letter was formerly a Vowel in the Oriental Languages: For Inſtance, in the Samaritan and Hebrew, where it had the Power of our A. However, the Learned are not altogether agreed about this Matter. The Latins made ſometimes uſe of this Capital for the Number Five hundred, as may be ſeen in Valerius Probus. Baronius mentions ſeveral old Verſes uſed for marking Numbers: The firſt of which is,

Poſſidet A Numeros quingentos ordine recto.

When there was a ſtrait Line ſtruck over the Head of the A, it ſignify'd Five thouſand. Amongſt the Forms of the Roman Courts of Juſtice, A ſtands for Abſolvo; for which Reaſon it is called a Letter of Grace. Upon Inſcriptions and Medals, A ſtands for a great many Words; for Auguſtus, Ædes, Ædilis, Ædilitas, Æra, Ærarium, Ager, Albo, Amicus, Anima, Anni, Annis, Anno, Antiquo, Argentum, Aula, &c. In Proper Names, A is put for Aulus; but becauſe anciently they uſed to write without parting the Words from each other, this has ſometimes been the Occaſion of Miſtakes and Ambiguities: For Inſtance, in the Word Agellius, ſome will have it that A ſignifies Aulus; and others make it the firſt Letter of Agellius. A, D, in the Letters Miſſive, of the old Romans, ſignify Ante Diem; and ſome ignorant Tranſcribers, miſtaking the meaning, made AD of them. For Proof of this, the Reader may conſult moſt of the Editions of Tully's Epiſtles, where we read, ad IV. Kal. ad VI. Id. ad III. Non. &c. inſtead of Ante Diem IV. Kal. &c. Thus in Valerius Probus, A. D. P. ſtands for Ante Diem, Pridie. * Iſidor. Etymolog. Lib. 1. Pierius. Hieroglyph. Lib. 47. Voſſius. Sanctius, &c.

AAGARDUS, (Nicholas) Rhetorick Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Copenhagen, flouriſh'd towards the middle of the Seventeenth Century, and publiſh'd the following Tracts; De Optimo Genere Oratorum. De Ignibus Subterraneis. Animad. in Ammianum Marcellinum. De Stylo Novi Teſtamenti. Diſputationes in Tacitum. De Nido Phœnicis. De Uſu Syllogiſmi in Theologia, &c. * Geo. Matth. Konig. Biblioth. Vetus & Nova.

AALEM. See Morery, Vol. I. and for thirty Families, read three hundred.

AAMA, a Province in Africk, fifteen Days Journey from Tunis: There's no coming at it without great Difficulty and Danger; Travellers being oblig'd to paſs through a Defile of fifteen Miles in Length, and but twenty Paces in Breadth. Each Side of this narrow Paſſage has a deep River cover'd with Sand; and notwithſtanding the Stream is very rapid, it is hard to diſcover the Motion of the Sand upon the Surface. In ſhort, there is no diſtinguiſhing the Terra-firma from the Water, without a long Pole to ſound with. * Revolut. de Tunis.

* AARDALFFIOERD, in Latin Aardalius Sinus, a Gulph in the Northern Ocean, upon the Coaſt of Bergen in Norway, near the Town Stavanger: Some Maps call it Bulen Fioerd. * Bandrand.

AB, ſignifies Father in Hebrew, from whence comes the Chaldee and Syriac Abba, and the Greek and Latin Abbas. S. Mark and S. Paul have retain'd the Syriac and Chaldee Word Abba, to ſignify Father; becauſe, when they wrote, 'twas commonly ſo uſed in the Synagogues and Chriſtian Aſſemblies. The Evangeliſts and Apoſtles have inſerted a great many Syriac Words in their Goſpels and Epiſtles; and, becauſe they wrote in Greek, they have likewiſe given the Interpretation in that Language. Thus Barthomeus is ſaid to be the Son of Timeus; Tabitha means Dorcas; and Elymas ſignifies a Magician, as it's explain'd by S. Luke. Farther, Abba, which ſignifies a Father in the common Senſe, was afterwards uſed as a Mark of Affection and Regard. The Scribes and Phariſees affected this Diſtinction from a Principle of Pride; for which Reaſon, our Saviour commanded his Diſciples to call no Man Father on Earth, becauſe One is our Father, which is in Heaven. The Chriſtians afterwards called the Governor of a Monaſtery an Abbot: This Title, in the Reign of Charlemagne, has been given to Temporal Lords. There was likewiſe formerly Count Abbots in France; and the Genoeſe call one of their Magiſtrates the People's Abbot. * Rom. Cap. viii. v. 15. Galat. Cap. iv. v. 6. Mark, Cap. xiv. v. 36. S. Matt. xxiii. v. 9, &c.

* ABAFFI, (Michael) Prince of Tranſylvania, ſet up for Governor of this Country in the Year 1661. He ſtyl'd himſelf likewiſe Prince of Sicily, and his Father was a Magiſtrate in Hermanſtat, the Capital of Tranſylvania. Chimin Janos, ſupported by the Emperor, was a powerful Rival for ſome time; but the Grand Seignior undertaking the Protection of Abaffi, caſt the Scale on that ſide: He had other Competitors, who, tho' making their Court to Mahomet IV. could do nothing to his Diſadvantage. In the Year 1687, the Emperor Leopold concluded a Treaty with Prince Abaffi and the States of Tranſylvania; in which 'twas ſtipulated, That the Prince of Tranſylvania ſhould have the ſame Privileges and Authority which had been granted him by the Grand Seignior and the States, upon Condition that he ſhould govern according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Country. A Defenſive Alliance was likewiſe agreed between the Imperialiſts and Tranſylvanians. Upon the Death of this Prince, the Emperor own'd his Son for his Succeſſor; but Count Tekly diſputing for the Principality with him, and being aſſiſted by the Turks, made himſelf Maſter of ſeveral great Towns in 1690. This Year the Grand Vizir Kuperly, having the Command of the Ottoman Forces, defeated the German Army, and regain'd ſeveral Places conquer'd by his Imperial Majeſty; for inſtance, Niſſa, Wydin, Semandria, Belgrade, &c. But there was none but this laſt of any conſiderable Strength. After this Advantage, the Faction continuing in the Turkiſh Empire, Tekly could make nothing of his Pretenſions in Tranſylvania; for the Imperialiſts recover'd all they had loſt in this Principality, not excepting Great Waradin, which they took after a Blockade of two Years. * Memoires du Temps.

ABAGAMEDRI, a large Country in Ethiopia, Part of the Dominions of the Abyſſine Emperor; it's ſituated between the Nile, the Abanhi, and the Coaſt of Zangebar. * Sanut. Lib. 2. Robbe Geograph. Tom. 1.

ABARINDA, a Promontory in Aſia the Leſs, near Lampſacus, upon the Helleſpont: 'Twas hither that Conon the Athenian Admiral retir'd with nine Ships, after he had been beaten by Lyſander. * Plutarch. Life of Lyſander.

ABARITH, a Town in Galilee, where the Burghers ſignaliz'd themſelves in the Jewiſh War with the Romans, having the good Fortune to take all the Baggage and Equipage belonging to King Agrippa, and the Queen Berenice his Siſter. * Joſeph. Lib. 2. de Bell. Judaic. cap. 43.

ABASCHES, (or Abaſſi.) They live in Georgia, upon the Confines of Mingrelia, in the Levant: They ſubſiſt themſelves chiefly upon Rapine and Plundering their Neighbours. To ſtop their Incurſions, 'twas thought neceſſary to build a Wall of ſixty Miles Circumference, as Father Lamberti, a Theatin, reports, who liv'd a long time in this Country. Theſe People are ſometimes call'd Abaſſas; they are mention'd in Juſtinian's Novels; and the Hiſtorian Procopius relates they were Chriſtians, and had been Allies to the Romans a long time. * Baudrand, Calvin, Lexic. Jurid. &c.

ABBAS-ABDALLA, (or Ebn-Abbas-Abdalla,) Mahomet's Couſin-German, and Grandſon to Abdallmothleb, this falſe Prophet's Grandfather; he is reckon'd a Doctor of the firſt Claſs amongſt the Turks: Theſe they call Saabath, by way of Excellency, as much as to ſay the Prophet's Companions. Abbas-Abdalla's Authority is of the greateſt Conſideration for determining Matters of Traditions. They report that the Angel Gabriel, that brought Mahomet the Alchoran, appear'd to him at Ten Years old, and made him Maſter of the Senſe of that holy Book; and in Conſequence of the Privilege of this Viſit, he had the Title of Targi uman Alchoran; that is to ſay, Interpreter of the Alchoran. He died in the Year of the Hegyra 68, or that of our Lord 690. When he expir'd, they cry'd out through all the Neighbourhood, that the great Rabani, or Inſtructor of the Muſſilemans, was dead.

ABBESS, upon the Vacancy of an Abbey or Priory, Application was made to the Founder for proceeding to a new Election. After the Election was made by the Houſe, and the Patron had given his Conſent, he wrote to the Biſhop to confirm the Proceedings. At the Confirmation of the Elect, the Abbeſs took an Oath of Canonical Obedience to the Biſhop of the Dioceſe, by which ſhe engag'd her Duty to the Biſhop and his Succeſſors, and promis'd to govern purſuant to the Statutes of the Foundation, and to maintain and preſerve the Goods, Rights, and Eſtates belonging to the Houſe. The ſame Forms and ſolemn Engagements were requir'd of Prioreſſes, Abbots and Priors. * Collier's Church Hiſt. Vol. II. p. 107. & Records Num. XXXIII. & IV.

* ABBOT, (George) Upon his Misfortune of ſhooting the Keeper at Bramzill-Park, King James I. order'd ſeveral Biſhops, Judges and Civilians, to enquire whether the Caſe amounted to an Irregularity. This Committee, upon the Score of the different Opinions of the Canoniſts, came to no Reſolution in their Anſwer; but deſir'd his Majeſty's Diſpenſation to indemnify the Archbiſhop: Upon which the King awarded a Commiſſion to Williams Biſhop of Lincoln, then Lord-Keeper, and ſeven other Biſhops, empowering them to diſpenſe with any Irregularity or Suſpicion of Irregularity, in caſe the Accident had drawn a Blemiſh of that Kind upon Abbot. Not to mention the favourable Report in the Commiſſion, there was a learned Apology drawn up for the Archbiſhop; in which ſeveral Objections, fetch'd from the Canon Law, are diſabled, and a Biſhop's Recreation in Hunting prov'd Defenſible from Charta de Forreſta, 13 R. II. Cap. 13. from Lyndwood's Provincial Conſtitutions, and from Sir Edward Cook's Opinion when the Queſtion was put to him. Thus the Archbiſhop was ſcreen'd from Proſecution, and kept his Poſt. But about ſeven Years after, in the next Reign, upon his refuſing to licenſe Dr. Sibthorp's Sermon, where, to promote the Loan, this Divine had laid down Arbitrary Maxims, and deliver'd ſeveral things againſt Law, and ſubverſive of Property. For refuſing to licenſe this Sermon, the Archbiſhop incurr'd his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and was ſuſpended from his Archiepiſcopal Juriſdiction. * Collier's Church Hiſtory, Vol. II. and Records N° CVIII. Reliq. Spelman.

ABDIA, a Mountain in Paleſtine, within the Tribe of Manaſſes, beyond Jordan: 'Twas ſo call'd from Abdia, or Obadiah, Steward of King Ahab's Houſhold, who hid and maintain'd fifty Prophets in the Time of Famine in a Cave here. This Mountain afterwards proving a Shelter for Thieves, Herod the Great diſlodg'd them, and ſtopt all the Caverns. 1 Kings Chap. xviii. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

ABDIARA, a Kingdom in India beyond the Ganges; it lies North of the Kingdom of Pegu: The Capital of the ſame Name ſtands upon the River Pegu. * Baudrand.

ABDIRAN, a Saracen Prince, who making a ſtout Reſiſtance againſt Charlemagne, paſs'd the Garonne, ſack'd Bourdeaux, and gave himſelf up to all manner of Licenciouſneſs. * Sabell. Ennead.

* ABEL. To add ſomething to what has been ſaid in the firſt Volume of Morery and the Supplement, it may be obſerv'd that the Scripture informs us, that Cain brought of the Fruit of the Ground for an Offering; and that Abel offer'd the Firſtlings of his Flock, and the Fat thereof; but then theſe laſt Hebrew Words may be tranſlated, Firſt-fruits and Milk. For the Word Cheleb, which in this Place is tranſlated Fat, is in other Places of the Septuagint turn'd Milk. Thoſe who expound the Text in Geneſis to this Senſe, obſerve that nothing ought to be offer'd to God but what it was cuſtomary to make uſe of for the Support of Life. And that ſince at this time of Day no Fleſh was eaten, it ſeems not at all probable any Animal ſhould be ſacrific'd to God Almighty: And, beſides, 'twas the Practice of the higheſt Antiquity to make no Religious Offerings, excepting the Fruits of the Earth, Wool, Herbs and Flowers. Notwithſtanding this Remark, all the Verſions and Expoſitors of the Bible agree that Abel offer'd the Firſtlings of his Flock; and that which follows of his offering the Fat, is no more than a Hebraiſm, and only means that he offer'd the beſt of the Kind; for in this Language, Fat is made uſe of to ſignify the Goodneſs and prime Quality of Things: Thus the Fat of Wheat ſignifies the beſt. 'Tis uncertain whether Abel offered a whole Victim, or only a Part of the Animal; whether 'twas a Peace-Offering, or an Holocauſt. The Talmudiſts will have it a whole Burnt-Offering.

uncer-

Our Bleſſed Saviour gives Abel the Title of the Firſt Righteous Perſon that was murdered. Some of the Fathers were of Opinion that Abel was never married; but upon what ground they went, it's not eaſily diſcovered. On the contrary, 'tis probable, that ſince Abel lived 128 Years, (Geneſ. iv. v. 25. compared with Gen. v. v. 3, 4, and 5.) and in a time too when the Multiplication of Mankind was neceſſary; for theſe Reaſons, I ſay, 'tis probable that Abel had Wife and Children. To proceed, notwithſtanding Abel deſerves no leſs than the reſt of the Patriarchs to ſtand in the Saints Kalendar, and that his Offering is mentioned in the Sacrifice of the Maſs, with the Sacrifices of Abraham and Melchizedeck; yet we don't find the Primitive Church paid this Regard to his Memory. The Greek Church, though they have particular Feſtivals for the Patriarchs, and Prophets, have not ranged Abel in the Holy Liſt; neither does his Name appear in any of the Latin Martyrologies, till the Tenth Century: And over and above, 'tis not in the new Roman Martyrology. However, the Litanies, which invoke him for the Recommendation of dying Perſons, have been made long ſince. Some Martyrologies ſet him at the 25th of March, as being a Type of our Saviour's Paſſion, whoſe Death the Ancients reckoned to this Day. * Hieron. Tradit. Hebraic. in Geneſ. Eutychius. Patriarch. Alexandr. in Annal. Pererius, &c. in Geneſ. Bayl. Diction. Hiſtoric.

ABELLI, (Lewis) Biſhop and Count of Rhodes, lived to the latter End of the Seventeenth Century: Amongſt ſeveral other Performances, he wrote a Tract in Divinity, called Medulla Theologica, which gave Occaſion to Boileau to call him Moëlleux in his Lutrin.

Que chacun prenne en main Moëlleux Abeli.

This Biſhop lays down Maxims very diſtant from the Janſeniſt Doctrine. He is charged with aſſerting, 1. That a Man may follow a leſs probable Opinion, and practiſe that which is ſinful, according to the Opinion of another Caſuiſt, which ſeems to us more probable. 2dly, That 'tis not certain that the Precept of loving God above all other Things, is perpetually obliging upon the ſcore of intrinſick Reaſonableneſs, and not by Accident only, as this Author ſuppoſes. 3dly, That a Confeſſarius never needs ſcruple the Abſolving thoſe Penitents whoſe Lives are no better than a continual Viciſſitude of Confeſſions and Relapſe. Abelli wrote the Life of Vincentius Paulus, the Founder and firſt General of the Congregation for the Miſſionaries; a Tract of the Principles or Moral Rules delivered in the Chriſtian Religion: He likewiſe wrote a Book concerning the Church's Tradition, with reference to the Worſhip of the Bleſſed Virgin, &c. This laſt Performance, printed at Paris in a Second Edition An. Dom. 1675, was a very entertaining Piece to the Proteſtants, becauſe it furniſhed them with good Arguments againſt the Converters, who would make them believe, that if there was any thing puſhed too far in theſe Religious Applications, they were only ſome Monaſtick Fancies, or unallowed Exceſſes, which were conſtantly corrected by the Biſhops. This Book the Reformed made great uſe of againſt Monſ. de Meaux's Expoſition of the Catholick Faith. In ſhort, Abelli made himſelf a Champion for the moſt extravagant Opinions relating to the Worſhiping of the Bleſſed Virgin. Theſe Exceſſes were very unſerviceable to the Biſhop of Meaux's Undertaking, and fell foul upon thoſe moderate Perſons who either publiſhed or approved a Book, entituled, Avis Salutaires de la Sainte Vierge à ſes Devots Indiſcretes: Or, the wholſome Advice of the Bleſſed Virgin to her Indiſcreet Worſhipers. Abelli reſign'd his Biſhoprick when he found himſelf diſabled by Age. He retired to the Monaſtery of S. Lazarus, and died in October 1691, in the 88th Year of his Age. * Bayle Dictionaire Hiſtor.

ABELLINAS, (Abellina Vallis.) A large and pleaſant Valley in Syria. It lies between the Mountains of Libanus and Antilibanus: The River Pharfar runs through it, and it takes in the famous Damaſcus. * Baudrand.

ABIA, the fifth King of the Parthians: He levy'd War againſt Izates King of the Adiabenians. The Enterprize was undertaken at the Inſtance of Izates's Nobility, who had made an Inſurrection againſt him, becauſe he had gone over to the Jewiſh, or (as ſome ſay) the Chriſtian Religion. Abia was unfortunate in this unjuſt, invaſive Expedition. For after a Defeat in the Field, he retired to a Caſtle, where he was ſo hard preſſed by Izates's Troops, that at laſt, deſpairing of an Eſcape, he killed himſelf for fear of falling into the Enemy's Hands. * Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 20. cap. 2.

ABIA, Chief of one of the four and twenty Courſes into which the Jewiſh Prieſts were divided by King David. Every one of theſe Claſſes ſerved ſucceſſively at the Altar ſeven Days, that is, from one Sabbath to another. The Privilege of Chief, ſettled by King David, continued in the ſame Family. The Headſhip or Primacy of the firſt Claſs fell to Joiarib or Jehoiarib, and that of the eighth Courſe to Abiah and his Deſcendents. The Turns of theſe four and twenty Courſes were finiſhed in a hundred and ſixty eight Days. Joiarib's Courſe entred upon their Miniſtration on the 15th of July, in the 4709th Year of the Julian Period. This is proved, becauſe, according to the Jews, the Courſe of Joiarib was in Office when Jeruſalem was taken by Titus Veſpaſian, in the 4783d Year of the Julian Period, the 70th of our Lord, the 9th or 10th of the Month Ab, which begins the 27th of July upon Friday in the Evening. From hence it follows that the Courſe of Joiarib muſt begin upon a Sabbath-day the 4th of Auguſt. Now in reckoning back from this Year 4783 of the Julian Period, and counting 161 Revolutions, in which the whole Service of the Turns of the Sacerdotal Families was finiſhed, reckoning to each of theſe Revolutions or Circuits of Time 168 Days; for within this Period the Miniſtrations of the four and twenty Courſes were completed: Now upon this Computation, the Day when the Courſe of Joiarib (mentioned in 1 Chron. xxiv.) firſt entred upon Service, falls upon a Saturday the 15th of July, in the 4079th Year of the Julian Period. Now the Courſe of Abia being the eighth, that muſt follow by conſequence fifty Days after, which falls upon Saturday the 2d of September, according to the Julian Kalendar. This Remark ſerves to fix the Time of S. John Baptiſt's Conception; for his Father Zacharias, Prieſt of the Courſe of Abia, officiated in the Temple a few Days before his Wife Elizabeth conceived. * 1 Chron. xxiv. v. 10. Luke i. v. 5. Thoinard, Harmon. Evang. Printed at Paris in 1707.

ABILA. There were three Towns of this Name: The firſt was in Cœlo-Syria. Euſebius reports, 'twas alſo called Lyſania, from Lyſanias the Governor. The Territory and Dependencies of this Town are called Abilene by S. Luke. There was another Abila in Phœnicia, and a third near the River Jordan. * Luke cap. iii. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 29. cap. 5. Plin. Lib. 5. cap. 18.

* ABLAVIUS, (or Ablabius) was Præfectus Prætorio under Conſtantine the Great, from the Year 326 to 337. His Intereſt being great at this Emperor's Court, put him in a Condition to weigh down his Rival Sopater: He had a great Poſt in Africk in the Year 314, if that Letter for conveying the African Biſhops to the Council of Arles was ſent him by Conſtantine: But the Name in a Manuſcript is Ælaphius, and moſt probably it ſhould be Ælianus. Ablavius was Conſul in the Year 331, and had a ſtately Houſe at Conſtantinople, which was afterwards Placidia's Palace, Daughter to Theodoſius the Great. The Emperor Conſtantine at his Death appointed him to aſſiſt his Son Conſtantine at the Council-Board. But this young Emperor ſoon diſmiſſed him, upon Pretence to gratify the Military Men. Ablavius, thus diſcarded, retired to his Country-Houſe in Bithynia, where he enjoy'd himſelf not long: For the Emperor Conſtantius ſent ſome Officers of the Army with a Letter to him, by which he ſeemed to make him Partner in the Empire: At leaſt Ablavius interpreting the Contents to this Meaning, aſked them where the Purple was which was ordered him by the Emperor: Upon this, more Officers ruſhed in and killed him. His Daughter Olympiadis was contracted to the Emperor Conſtans, who treated her accordingly. But this Prince being killed in the Year of our Lord 350, his Brother Conſtantius married her to Arſaces King of Armenia. * Eunap. cap. 4. Zozim. lib. 2. Ammian. Marcell. lib. 2.

* ABNER, the Son of Ner, was Saul's Uncle, and General of his Forces. * 1 Sam.

* ABONITICHOS, or (Abonus's Wall) a Town of Paphlagonia near the Euxine Sea. 'Twas here that the famous Impoſtor Alexander I. appeared. Lucian makes Men-

Mention of him in his Pſeudomantis. This Alexander deſired, the Romans the Name of the Town might be changed and called Jonopolis. Ptolomy places it between Sinope and Teuthrania.

ABOU-HANIPHA, ſurnamed Al-Nooman, a famous Arabian Doctor. He was Son to Thabet, and born at Conſa in the 80th Year of the Hegyra. He is reckoned the moſt famous Expoſitor of the Mahometan Law: He is counted the Chief of the four Heads of thoſe Sects, whoſe Deciſions 'tis equally lawful to follow in doubtful Queſtions. Notwithſtanding his Qualifications, his Reputation did not run high till the Caliph Almanzor impriſoned him at Bagdet for refuſing to ſign the Opinion of Abſolute and Irreſpective Predeſtination. But Abou-Joſeph who was at the Head of Juſtice, and may be ſtyled the Chancellor of the Empire under the Caliph Hadi, brought Abou-Hanipha's Doctrine to ſuch a Degree of Credit, that no body could be a good Muſsleman without being an Hanaphite, that is, a Diſciple of Hanipha. He died in Priſon at Bagdet in the 105th Year of the Hegyra. About 335 Years after his Death, Sultan Melikſchah, of the Family of the Selvigides, built him a ſtately Mauſoleum in the Town laſt mentioned; where he likewiſe founded a College for thoſe who profeſſed his Sect. This was done in the Year of our Lord 1092.

The principal Works of this Doctor are the Meſnad, that is to ſay, the Support, in which he endeavours to make good the principal Points of the Mahometan Belief, from the Authority of the Alchoran and Tradition. He wrote likewiſe a Treatiſe called Filcalam, that is to ſay, Scholaſtick Divinity, and a Catechiſm, entituled, Moallém, or the Maſter; where he aſſerts, that a true Muſsleman, who is Orthodox in the Faith, can never be liable to God's Diſpleaſure, though he falls into a great many Sins; for remarkable Failures in Duty don't make a Man loſe his Faith; and that Grace is not at all incompatible with ſinful Practice. Theſe and ſome other reſembling Propoſitions gave one Vazai an Occaſion to write a Tract againſt him, entituled, The Contradictions of Abou-Hanipha. A great many Mahumetan Authors of Character have written a Panegyrical Life of this Doctor; and ſome of them pretend to find his Name in the Old Teſtament, and that the Scriptures have ſome Predictions concerning him no leſs than of their Prophet Mahomet. All theſe Authors agree, that he was a moſt excellent Perſon both in Learning and Practice, and that his Life was remarkable for Diſcipline, and Diſengagement from the World: Theſe extraordinary Qualities make him conſidered as the Head and principal Director in the Mahometan Religion; and there are none but the Schütes or Followers of Hali who reject him. * D'Herbelot. Bibliothec. Orientale.

ABOULMAAN, and Ghil-Mirzah, were the laſt Deſcendents of Tamerlane, who reigned in the Trans Oxane Province, and in that of Choraſſan. They formed an ill-concerted Enterprize with Argoun Prince of Candahar againſt Schei-beg King of the Usbecks. This Prince defeated them in a Set-Battle, where they loſt both their Lives and Dominions. Another Branch of Tamerlane's Poſterity retreated to the Indies, and erected the Empire of the Mogul, where they reign at preſent. * D'Herbelot. Bibliothec. Orientale.

* ABRAHAM, (the Patriarch) lived 175 Years. The Hiſtory of this great Perſon being mentioned at large in the Scriptures, which are in every body's Hands, I ſhall forbear dilating upon it. The Sethian Hereticks diſperſed a Book called, the Apocalyps or Revelation of Abraham, as S. Epiphanius reports. Origen cites a ſpurious Piece of this Patriarch, where a good and a bad Angel diſpute concerning his Salvation. Abraham's Aſſumption is likewiſe a ſuppoſititious Tract; 'tis cited in the Synopſis that goes under the Name of S. Athanaſius. The Hiſtorian Hecatæus, if we may believe Joſephus, wrote Abraham's Life. In the New Teſtament the Place where good Mens Spirits were carried after Death, is called Abraham's Boſom. The 9th of October is marked for Abraham's Feſtival in the Martyrologies. The ancient Chriſtians built a Church where they ſuppoſed him buried, which the Turks have ſince changed into a Moſque: The pretended Oak at Mamre had a great Regard paid it both by Pagans and Chriſtians, till the Reign of Conſtantine the Great, as S. Jerom informs us. But this Emperor broke the ſuperſtitious Cuſtom, and built a Church there. * Geneſ. Philo. Lib. de Abraham. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 1. Euſeb. Præp. Evangel. Lib. 9. cap. 17. Epiphan. &c.

* ABSOLUTION. As far as the Seventh Century, when the Penance was publick, Abſolution for great Crimes was ſeldom or never given before Satisfaction. When the Miſbehaviour was unknown, the Prieſt frequently abſolved the Penitent ſoon after Confeſſion. At the latter End of the Second, and the Beginning of the Third Century, ſome Crimes were refuſed Abſolution: But afterwards none were denied, after they had gone through the Courſe of Diſcipline. The Penitent, who had been excluded the Church's Communion, was reſtored upon Abſolution. The Form of this Diſcharge was Deprecatory till the Thirteenth Century, as appears by the Ordo Romanus, the Penitential of Egbert, and the Euchologion: But all theſe Forms ſuppoſed the Power of the Keys, and that Biſhops and Prieſts are particularly commiſſioned for this purpoſe. Notwithſtanding the Uſe of the Deprecatory Form, there's no Reaſon to quarrel at that called the Indicative; where the Prieſt pronounces, I abſolve Thee. For the Forms of Abſolution, though never ſo Indicative and Abſolute, are always to be conſtrued in a Deprecatory Senſe: For no Prieſt ever pretended to abſolve in his own Name, or by vertue of an Independent Authority. No; the Power is ſuppoſed to be borrowed, and the Office exerciſed by a delegated Juriſdiction. 'Twas the Cuſtom to grant a publick Abſolution upon Monday in Paſſion-Week to thoſe who were put under Penance in the Beginning of Lent. In Spain, and at Milan, this ſolemn Abſolution was given on Good-Friday: Upon which Day, or Eaſter-Eve, 'twas likewiſe granted in the Eaſtern Churches. Afterwards, in the Twelfth Century, it has been the Cuſtom of the Church of Rome to abſolve the Penitents upon Confeſſion, before Penance performed.

Abſolution ad Cautelam, is granted to a Perſon excommunicated in an Eccleſiaſtical Court, from whence the Defendant makes an Appeal: The Deſign of it is to put him in a Condition to maintain his Cauſe before a ſuperior Juriſdiction. * Hittorpius. Godeau's Church Hiſtory, Lib. 3. Morinus de Penitent.

* ABSYRTUS, Son of Aëtes King of Colchos. Valerius Flaccus reports, that Aëtes ſent him with a Fleet to purſue his Siſter Medea; and that having come up with her at the Mouth of the Iſter, juſt when ſhe was to be married to Jaſon, he diſturbed the Wedding, and threatned to burn their Ships. Pliny relates, that Abſyrtus was killed upon the Coaſt of Dalmatia, which gave the Name to thoſe Iſlands called Abſyrtides. According to Hyginus, he gave Chaſe to Medea and Jaſon, as far as the Adriatick Sea: That he reach'd them upon King Alcinous's Dominions: That being ready to come to Blows, this Prince mediated an Accommodation, upon Condition Medea's Honour had been preſerved: But Jaſon not liking this Article, conſummated the Marriage. Upon this Abſyrtus purſued him, and was ſlain. * Apollonius, Lib. 4. Argonaut. Plin. Lib. 3. cap. 26. &c.

ABULLA, one of the two little-made Rivers which ſurround the Country about Baſſora, a Town of Arabia the Happy, near the Mouths of the Tygris and Euphrates, in the Perſian Gulph. The other River is Mocali. The Country water'd by Abulla is the moſt fruitful and pleaſant in the Turkiſh Dominions. P. Daniel Huet. Traité de la Situation du Paradis Terreſtre, Chap. 17.

ABU-SAID, was Tamerlane's Great Grand-Son, and ſucceeded Abdallah, Son of Ulug-Beg in the Territories of Turqueſtan, beyond the River Oxus. He was poſſeſs'd at firſt of the Country of Khoraſan, and extended his Empire from Caſgar to Tauris towards the Weſt, and from Kerman to Khovarezſmie. But after ſeveral fortunate Expeditions, and having refuſed a Peace offered him by Huſun Caſſan, and purſuing him too far, he fell into an Ambuſcade, and was ſlain near Tauris. Abuſaid lived till towards the latter End of the Fifteenth Century. * D'Herbelot, Dictionaire Oriental.

ABYDOS, A Town in Phrygia the Leſs, over againſt Seſtos. The Bridge which Xerxes made over the Helleſpont, between theſe two Towns, was ſeven Furlongs long. Herodot.

* ACADEMY. (The French.) This Society, ſince the Printing of their Dictionary in 1694, have thought fit to review this great Work; and to make it more ſerviceable to the Publick, they intend to furniſh a Second Edition, where all the Words will be ranged in Alphabetical tical Order; whereas in their first Edition the primitive Words are only disposed in the manner above mentioned, and the Derivative or Compounded placed under them. In the mean time, they have employ'd themselves in making Remarks on the French Language, and particularly upon the Performance of M. de Vaugelas.

ACADEMY (Royal) of Inscriptions, settled by Lewis the Fourteenth in the Year 1663. It consisted at first of no more than four or five Members, whose Business it was to make Inscriptions, Types, and the Legenda for Medals; to furnish Devices and other lasting Curiosities for the Honour of the King's Memory. The Number of this Society was afterwards increased to a President and eight Fellows. And in the Year 1701, the King put them under a stated Regulation, and augmented their Number to forty. They meet at the Louvre upon Tuesdays and Fridays in the Afternoon from Three to Five. At present, the Business of this Academy is chiefly to strike Medals upon the principal Occurrences relating to France. However, they spend some of their time in reading upon old Medals, and retrieving a great many curious Things in the Greek and Latin Antiquities. They have furnish'd the History of Lewis the Fourteenth in Medals. A considerable Performance 'tis, both with respect to the Stamps and Characters, and the Matter contained in them.

ACADEMY, (the Royal) of Sciences, founded at Paris in the Year 1666, chiefly by the Assistance of Monsieur Colbert, Comptroller-General of the Finances, at the Instance of the Abbot Bourzeis, and M. du Clos. These Gentlemen made a great Progress upon the Subject of their Business: But notwithstanding their Success and regular Meetings, they were not confirmed by the French King till the Year 1699. By the Rules of their Society, settled by his Majesty, they are to consist of four Sorts, that is, eighteen Honorary Members and Pensioners, and the same Number of Associates and Elevés, or Scholars. In each of these Distinctions there are three Geometricians, three Astronomers, three Mechanick Philosophers, three Anatomists, three Chymists, three Botanists, with a Secretary and Treasurer. The Meetings of this Academy are at the Louvre every Week on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Every one of these Academy Gentlemen choose a Subject to work on. At every Meeting, the Pensioners, when their Turn comes up, are obliged to give some Observations upon the respective Sciences: The Honorary and Associate Members have the Liberty to report what they have remark'd. All their Papers are lodged in the Secretary's Hands. These Gentlemen make Experiments, and report what curious Passages they meet with in Foreign Books. And here the Works of the Members are read, and a Critick made upon them. This Academy has a Privilege from his Majesty to examine all sorts of Engines and Machines. There is already publish'd a History of their Observations for several Years; where the Reader will meet with a great many serviceable and curious things. * Hist. de l'Academie Royale des Sciences.

* ACACIA, or Acalia (Martin.) For the Year five hundred and forty one, in Morery Vol. I. read, one thousand five hundred forty one.

ACANTHONAULONA, or Acanta-Launona, a Town within the Tribe of Benjamin, near Gibea of Saul, distant almost four Miles from Jerusalem, and famous for the Romans making it a Place d'Armes when they besieg'd Jerusalem. * Joseph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 5. c. 6.

ACCENSI, or Accensi Forenses, Officers belonging to the Roman Consuls, Decem Viri, Prætors, Proconsuls, and Governors of Provinces, under the Republick. They were chosen out of Manumized Slaves: There was more Trouble than Credit in their Business, as we may learn from Tully in one of his Letters to his Brother Quintus, Proconsul of Asia: Accensus eo etiam numero, quo eum majores nostri esse voluerunt; quod hoc non in beneficii loco, sed in laboris aut muneris, non temerè nisi libertis deferebant quibus non multo secus quam servis imperabant. They went before the Magistrates, and executed their Orders. Their chief Employment was to call the People to the publick Assemblies. And it is from this Branch of their Function that Varro says they were called Accensi, from acciendo. The Form the Magistrates made use of upon this Occasion was, Voca ad Concionem omnes Quirites huc adduce. That is, Summon all the Romans to appear at the Assembly. Thus the Accensus used to cry, Omnes Quirites ite ad Concionem, Gentlemen all to the Assembly. Part of their Business was to attend the Prætor or Chief Justice when upon the Bench, and to give him Notice of the Time every three Hours. Thus at Nine in the Morning, which was the Romans third Hour, they cry'd aloud, Hora tertia. Accensi in the Roman Troops, according to Festus, were Supernumeray Soldiers, and made use of as Recruits to those that were dead or wounded.

* ACCENT. To what is mentioned in Morery's Supplement under this Article, may be added, that M. Wetzstein, Greek Professor at Basil, has written a learned Dissertation against the Paradoxes of M. Hennin, in which he maintains, that the Accents either in Prints or Manuscripts are much more ancient than the other pretends. 'Tis true, he grants that these Accents have not always been mark'd by the Ancients in the same manner, and gives the Reason for it: For since the Pronunciation of the Greek Language was not the same among all the Subdivisions of that Nation, 'tis not at all strange that the Dorians should mark one way, and the Eolians another: And farther, he takes notice that the same People have pronounced differently upon the Progress of Time. This very learned Dissertation was publish'd at Basil in 1686, with the Title of Dissertatio Epistolica de Accentuum Græcorum antiquitate & usu. 'Tis set to the End of his Apologetick Discourse for the true Pronunciation of the Greek Tongue.

Though it's not impossible to fix the Time differently from this Author when the Greeks mark'd their Books with Accents; yet it may be safely affirmed, that Hennin and Isaac Vossius have made these Distinctions too modern, and that Wetzstein likewise has stretch'd some of his Assertions a little too far. The first Greek Manuscripts where these Accents and Aspirations are met with, it may be, reach no higher than the Seventh Century. And of this we have several Instances in the Palæographia of Father Bernard of Montfaucon. Notwithstanding there are a great many Manuscripts after this Period, in which there are none of these Marks: But it does not follow from hence, that the Greeks made Use of no Accents in these later Centuries. This Observation proves no farther than that the greatest Part of the Transcribers neglected to insert them; and for this Reason we seldom find old Manuscripts accented. The Marks have been different in different Ages; at first they made use of Points, which altered after the Twelfth Century, with farther Variations downwards. The Greek and Latin Copy of Cambridge, containing the four Evangelists, and the Acts of the Apostles, and which is more than one thousand Years old, has no Accents. 'Tis true, the Greek and Latin Copy of S. Paul's Epistles, in the French King's Library, of no less Antiquity than the Cambridge Manuscript, has Accents; but then 'tis apparent they were afterwards inserted, because they have no Resemblance with the Hand of the Book. Georgius Syncellus mentions a Greek Copy of the Bible very exactly transcribed, and distinguished with Points and Accents. This Author reports, that this Copy came into his Hands from the Library of Cæsarea in Cappadocia; and that by the Title-Page it appears, it had been transcribed from another Copy corrected by S. Basil.

Hennin does not seem perfectly exact, where he asserts the Accents were invented by the Arabians, and brought to Perfection by Aschalil, about the time of Mahomet's Death; that the Masorets of Tiberias began this Custom about the middle of the Sixth Century; and that Rabbi Judah Ben David Ching, born at Fez in the Eleventh Century, gave the finishing Stroke.

'Tis granted possible, that the Jews may have borrowed their Points for their Vowels from the Arabians; but which way they should take their Accents from them, is somewhat incomprehensible; because the Arabick Tongue has no Accents in Prose, or Verse. 'Tis true, Poetry is very ancient among the Arabians, and used a great while before Aschalil-Ebn-Ahmed, who only improv'd it towards an Art, by distinguishing the Measure of the Verses, which we call Feet. This Matter has been well dilated on by Samuel Clark, in his Book entituled, Prosodia Arabica.

As to the Jews, 'tis very probable the Masorets of Tiberias put Accents to the Hebrew Texts of the Bible. Those who affirm, that Rabbi Judah of Fez perfected the Manner and Use of these Accents, go only upon a Supposition that this Rabbi was the first Jewish Grammarian:

rian: But this is a Miſtake; for Rabbi Saadias Gaon, who lived a great while before Judah Ching, wrote a Hebrew Grammar. The Hebrew Accents have ſomething common with the Greeks and Latins; they mark the Strength and Faintneſs in Pronounciation, that is, where the Voice ought to riſe or fall. When a learned Jew reads the Hebrew Bible, he comes ſomewhat near ſinging, becauſe he pronounces with all the Inflections of the Voice, directed by the Accents. That which is particular to the Hebrew Language in reſpect to Accents, is, that they have the ſame Effect with the Points and Virgulæ in Latin, Greek and French, and diſtinguiſh the Sections, Periods, and Parts of Periods. * P. Simon. Crit. Hiſt. of the Old Teſtament. Palæograph. Græc. D. Bernard. de Montfaucon.

ACCIUS, a modern Poet, living, according to Julius Scaliger, at the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century. He is ſaid to be the Author of a Paraphraſe upon Æſop's Fables, in Hexameters and Pentameters. Scaliger commends him for a judicious Poet, for the Purity of his Diction, and the Harmony in his Verſification. However, he makes him ſome Abatement, and obſerves, that Accius ſometimes miſcarried, by endeavouring to throw too much Senſe into a few Words, and giving himſelf the Liberty of Points and Jingles. * Jul. Scalig. de Art. Poet. &c.

* ACCOLTI, (Francis) For Four hundred ſixty and nine in Morery Vol. I. read, One thouſand four hundred and ſixty nine.

* ACCURSIUS, (Francis) born at Florence, in the Thirteenth Century, gained a great Reputation by his Gloſſes upon the Civil Law. He taught in this Faculty at Bologna, and afterwards going off to a cloſe Retirement, he wrote upon the whole Civil Law. This Work, being ſo very ſerviceable to young Students, made all the other Gloſſes before him in a manner inſignificant, being neither ſo exact in their Method, nor full in their Matter. The Contradictions obſerved in Accurſius, in the Opinion of ſome learned Men, are not to be reckoned either to any Inconſtancy of Sentiment, or Defect of Memory; but that in reporting the different Opinions of thoſe before him, he only mentioned the firſt Letter of the Authors Names. This Letter, as his Vindicators will have it, being worne out, or omitted in ſeveral Copies, the Reader has miſtaken his Opinion, for a Teſtimony cited by him. His Authority was formerly ſo great, that they called him the Advocates Idol. A great many Civilians ſince his Time have taken as much Pains to comment upon his Gloſs, as to explain the Texts of the Pandects and Codes. Ludovicus Vives, and ſome other Criticks, who admire Language, and a beautiful way of Writing, have exclaimed violently againſt the Barbarouſneſs of his Style. Accurſius died in the Year 1229. He uſed to ſay, there was no need of ſtudying Divinity for Knowledge in Religion, the Roman Laws being ſufficient Inſtructors in that Matter. * Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ACEPSIMAS, an Anchorite in the Neighbourhood of Cyrus in Paleſtine. He ſpent ſixty Years in a Cell without ſpeaking to any body, and lived only upon Water and Lentils: At laſt, foreſeeing the Time of his Death, he opened his little Apartment about ſeven Weeks before his Deceaſe, and received Viſits. His Biſhop, being one of his Viſitors, laid his Hands on him, and ordained him Prieſt, which he ſubmitted to upon the Conſideration that he had but a few days to live. * Theodoret. Hiſtor. Religioſ.

ACGIA, one of thoſe Iſlands the Arabians call Ranege, which lies in the Æthiopick Ocean over againſt Zanguebar, or the Coaſt of Caſreria. The Inhabitants of this Iſland are almoſt all Foreigners and Mahometans. 'Tis about thirty Miles from the main Land over againſt the Town Baïs. 'Tis four hundred Miles in Circumference. There is no Wheat grows in the Iſland, but the People ſubſiſt upon a ſort of Indian Grain call'd Mays. There is another leſſer Iſland near this, with a Volcano Mountain in the Middle of it, and diſcharges great Quantities of Fire. * Herbelot. Bibliothec. Orientale.

ACHAIS, a Town upon the Caſpian, near the River Oxus. 'Twas called Heraclea, till Antiochus, Son to Seleucus, rebuilt it. * Plin. Lib. 6. cap. 16.

* ACHILLES. This Hero did not leave Troy upon his Diſguſt with Agamemnon, as is related in the firſt Volume of Morery; but only retired to his Tent upon the Sigæan Shore, and forbore fighting till Patroclus was killed, and Agamemnon had given him Satisfaction. * Hom. Iliad. 1. & alibi.

ACHMET, Son of Sarim. There is a Book of his extant, which pretends to interpret Dreams upon the Principles of the Indians, Perſians, and Egyptians. 'Twas tranſlated by Leo Tuſcus from Greek into Latin about the Year 1160. 'Twas publiſh'd in Latin in 1577 from a very imperfect Manuſcript in Sambucus's Library: And in this Edition it paſſed for a Tract written by Apomaſares. Leonclavius gave the Publick Notice of this Miſtake in his Turkiſh Annals. Rigaltius was the firſt that publiſhed it in Greek: And upon the ſcore of the Reſemblance of the Matter with Artemidorus, he printed it at Paris with that Book in 1603. Rigaltius is of Opinion that this Achmet was the Son of Habramius, mentioned by Geſner; that he was a Phyſician, and wrote a Treatiſe ſubdivided into ſeveral Books, entituled, Peregrinantium Viatica: That this Book was in Greek in Don Diego Hurtado de Mendoza's Library, who was Ambaſſador at Vienna when Geſner wrote. Achmet's Name is not inſerted in Leo Tuſcus's Copy: Rigaltius has tranſlated the Preface from this Manuſcript into Latin; though he is inclined to believe, 'tis none of Achmet's, but made by Leo Tuſcus. That which is moſt conſiderable is, that Achmet and Syrim ſtand upon the Title of the Manuſcript with the Names of Syrnacham, Baram, and Tarphan. The firſt of theſe three laſt was Dream-Interpreter at an Indian Prince's Court; the ſecond practis'd in the ſame Character at Saaniſan, the King of Perſia's Court; and the third had the ſame Buſineſs in Egypt. After all, this Book was written by ſome Chriſtian; for the Author begins with the Holy Trinity. Rigaltius believes the Greek Text no more than an old Tranſlation, and that the Original was written in Arabick. * Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ACHSIKETH, a Town in the Trans-Oxane Province, and a Dependence on the City Fargana, ſtands upon the River Schaſch or Jaxartes, according to Baudrand. 'Tis ſituated in a very pleaſant Champaign; all the Eaſtern Geographers place it in the Latitude of forty two Degrees and twenty Minutes, with the Longitude of one hundred and one Degrees, twenty Minutes. There was a famous Doctor born in this Town called Achſikethi: He wrote a Book of Schorou, or the Mahometan Laws, which has been commented upon by Sighanaki. * Herbelot. Dictionaire Orientale.

ACIDALIUS, (Valence) had a ſtrong Talent for Criticiſm, and promiſed a great deal that way if his Life had held. He was born at Wiſtoch, in the Elector of Brandenburg's Dominions, in the Sixteenth Century. 'Tis thought his ſtudying with too much Application was the Cauſe of his Death, which happend in the twenty ninth Year of his Age, An. 1595. There are Notes of his upon Quintus Curtius, Tacitus, Velleius Paterculus, and Plautus, beſides Harangues, Epiſtles, and Pieces of Poetry. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

* ACOEMETÆ, Monks ſo called by the Greeks, becauſe, as ſome pretend, they never went to Bed: But this is a Miſtake; for 'tis impoſſible they could always be ſinging Divine Service without ſome Repoſe. To go to Matter of Fact, they ſubdivided their Society into ſeveral Choirs, each Choir ſinging the ſame Office ſucceſſively without Intervals of Silence: So that relieving each other, the whole Day and Night were ſpent in theſe holy Exerciſes. A Noble Man, called Johannes Studius, founded a Monaſtery for theſe Acœmetæ at Conſtantinople, and dedicated it to S. John Baptiſt: And thus the Acœmetæ, about the Year 463, were called Studitæ. There were about a thouſand Religious ſettled in this Houſe, which was a long time famous for a great many People eminent for Devotion and Learning. This Monaſtick Inſtitution was afterwards ſettled in the Weſt. Sigiſmund King of Burgundy brought it into a Monaſtery at Augaunum: 'Twas likewiſe introduced at S. Dennis, Dijon, S. Martins of Tours, and ſeveral other Monaſteries in France. The Latins call this Office, Laus Perennis. * Evagrius, Lib. 3. cap. 18. & 21. Theodor. Lector. Lib. 1. King Pipin's Charter, and the Edict of King Clovis concerning the Monaſtery of S. Dennis, Du Cange, &c.

ACOSTA, (Peter Raymond) For Grand Maſter of Malta, in Engliſh Morery, Vol. I. read Grand Maſter of Rhodes.

ACOUS,

ACOUS, a Town in the Valley of Aſpe in the Bearn, where the General Aſſembly for the Country is held: 'Tis about twelve Miles below the Town of Oleron. * Davity, Tom. 5.

ACRA, a Hill in Jeruſalem, upon which the Palace for the Sanhedrim was built: 'Twas burnt by the Romans when Titus took the Town. When the Latin Chriſtians were Maſters of Jeruſalem, and inſtituted an Order of Knights, they built them an Hoſpital upon this Hill for lodging Pilgrims who came to viſit the Holy Land; and from hence they were call'd Knights of S. John d'Acra. Afterwards, Ptolemais was call'd Acra when theſe Knights retir'd thither, after they had loſt Jeruſalem and the reſt of Paleſtine. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

ACRABATANE, or Acrabatanus, a Lake of Ethiopia, near the River Aſtabore, which the Inhabitants were forc'd to quit upon the ſcore of the prodigious Number of Scorpions. For this reaſon the Country is call'd the Country of Scorpions. Bochart, Hieroz. Lib. 4. cap. 29.

ACRAS, a Mountain of Syria near Laodicea; it tumbled into the Sea in the Year of our Lord 856. This Earthquake was felt in Syria, Arabia, Perſia, and as far as the Khoraſſan. D'Herbelot. Bibliothec. Oriental.

ACRATUS, a Manumized Slave belonging to the Emperor Nero; he was always prepar'd for Miſbehaviour and Miſchief, and for theſe Qualifications he was ſent into Aſia and Greece to ſeize the moſt valuable Statues of the Gods, and all the Wealth that was conſecrated to them. When he came to execute his Office at Pergamus, and attempted to carry off the fineſt Performances in Sculpture and Painting, the Burghers made ſuch a vigorous Oppoſition, that he was forc'd to retire with nothing. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 15. & 16.

ACRON, or Acronius, (John) taught the Mathematicks, and read upon Phyſick at Baſil with great Reputation; he died in the Flower of his Age 1563, and wrote de Terræ Motu, de Sphæra, de Aſtrolabii & Annuli Aſtronomici Confectione. There was another Ruart Acronius, at the beginning of the Conteſt between the Calviniſts and Arminians. He wrote a Tract againſt the latter, with reference to the Magiſtrates Power in Matters of Religion. He was one of the ſix Champions for the Contra-Remonſtrants againſt the Arminians, at the famous Conference at the Hague, held in the Year 1611. Bayl. Diction. Hiſtor.

ACSOR, a Town of the Upper Thebais upon the Nile, about a Day's Journey from Couſs, the moſt Southern Town of Egypt: The Ground is well improv'd, and produces great Quantities of Date-Trees; and the Earth is particularly fine for making Earthen-Ware, for which they have a great Trade in all the Country of Egypt. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

ACTE, or Acta, a delicious Country upon the Coaſt of the Ægean Sea, near Mount Athos. Acte in Greek ſignifies the Beach; and from hence likewiſe Attica was firſt call'd Acte, becauſe it ſtretches along the Shore to the Promontory Sunium. Acte was likewiſe the Name of a Territory in Peloponneſus. * Theophraſt. Lib. 8. Plantar. Plutarch. 4. Simpoſ. Q. 4. Thucyd. Lib. 4. &c.

ACTE, a Woman-Slave enfranchis'd by Nero, who was ſo fond of her, that he was very near making her Empreſs. This Perſon being an Aſiatick, Nero took Occaſion to give out that ſhe was certainly deſcended from Attalus King of Pergamus. * Sueton. in vit. Neron. cap. 28.

ACTS of the Apoſtles, the fifth Canonical Book in the New Teſtament. S. Luke declares himſelf the Author in the Beginning of the firſt Chapter, in his Addreſs to Theophilus; from whence it appears that the Acts was written after his Goſpel. It is call'd the Acts of the Apoſtles, becauſe it contains the Hiſtory of what was done by them after our Saviour's Aſcenſion, at Jeruſalem and in Judea, and other Countries. S. Luke carries the Hiſtory in general to the time the Apoſtles diſpers'd themſelves for preaching in remoter Parts; and afterward confines himſelf to the relating S. Paul's Voyages, Succeſſes and Hardſhips, till he was tranſported to Rome. In this Book, the Beginnings and firſt Progreſs of the Chriſtian Church, and by what extraordinary Aſſiſtances the Goſpel was afterwards propagated to diſtant Countries of the Gentiles by S. Peter and S. Paul, are related. S. Luke delivers nothing of the Voyages and Succeſs of the reſt of the Apoſtles; becauſe he was neither an Eye-Witneſs of Matter of Fact, nor could learn it from his Maſter S. Paul. He gives us an Account of the Time when he finiſh'd this Hiſtory at Rome, which was two Years after S. Paul's Arrival there; that is, in the Year of our Lord 63. From hence it may be collected, that this Book takes in the Hiſtory of about thirty Years. 'Tis written with great Elocution: His Manner of Reporting is noble; and the Speeches, eſpecially that of S. Paul to King Agrippa, are written with great Force and Addreſs. S. Chryſoſtom complains that this Book was not often enough read by the Chriſtians of his time. There are ſeveral Books entitled the Acts of the Apoſtles, forg'd either by Hereticks or other indiſcreet Chriſtians. The firſt who ventur'd upon this Practice was a Prieſt, and S. Paul's Diſciple, who out of an exceſſive Zeal for his Maſter, forg'd the Acts of S. Paul and Tecla, and put them upon S. Luke: But Tertullian and S. Jerom aſſure us, that he was convicted of this Impoſture by S. John. Afterwards the Manicheans, mention'd by Philaſtrius, counterfeited the Acts of S. Peter and S. Paul, in which they interſpers'd their own Heterodoxies. And here they make the Apoſtles maintain, that the Souls of Men and Beaſts are of the ſame Nature, and report Miracles wrought by them to make Dogs and Sheep ſpeak. Afterwards the Acts of S. Andrew, S. John, and the Apoſtles in general, were counterfeited by the ſame Hereticks; as S. Epiphanius, Philaſtrius, and S. Auſtin relate. The Ebionites had likewiſe a ſpurious Book of the Acts of the Apoſtles, as we may learn from Epiphanius. To theſe may be added the Voyages of S. Peter, falſly attributed to S. Clemens Romanus; the Acts of S. Philip and S. Thomas, written by the Encratitæ and Apoſtolici; the Memoires of the Apoſtles, furniſh'd by the Priſcillianiſts; the Itinerary of the Apoſtles, rejected in the ſecond Council of Nice; and ſome others. * Du Pin. Biblioth. Eccleſ. &c.

ACTS of the Conſiſtory, were Edicts or Declarations of the Roman Emperors in Council, and ran in this Form: Imperat. Diocletianus & Maximianus A. A. in Conſiſtorio Dixerunt: Decurionum Filii non Debent Beſtiis Objici. That is, The Emperor's Diocleſian and Maximian have declared in Council, that the Children of the Decuriones, or Senators in Country Boroughs, ought not to be thrown to the wild Beaſts in the Amphi-Theatre. The Senate and Military Men, either through Fear or Flattery, oftentimes ſwore by theſe Edicts of the Emperors: And Tacitus relates, that Nero ſtruck the Name of Apidus Merula out of the Senator's Liſt, becauſe he refus'd to ſwear by the Acts of the Emperor Auguſtus. * Antiq. Rom.

ACTS of the Martyrs, or Acta Martyrum, a Book not read in the Congregation by the Church of Rome: For though the Roman Catholicks don't queſtion the Truth of ſeveral Matters of Fact; yet in regard the Authors are unknown, and a great many Romantick Relations intermix'd, ſuch as the Lives of S. Quiriſius, S. Julitta, and many others, they think it adviſable to ſtand off from the whole. However, this Church allows the Lives of Paul the Hermit, of Arſenius, Hilarion, and other Monks; but then they are only thoſe written by S. Jerom. In ſome Churches, the Acts of S. Sylveſter are read, though the Author is altogether unknown. * Gelaſ. 1. de Lib. Apocryph.

ACTIUS, (Thomas) a Lawyer, who wrote a Book de Infirmitate & ejus Privilegiis; and another upon Cheſs. His firſt Treatiſe is inſerted in the Seventh Tome of Tractatus Tractatuum. * George Mathias Konig. Biblioth. vetus & nova.

ACUDIA, a very remarkable ſmall Bird in the Weſt Indies; 'tis made like a Beetle, and is leſs than a Sparrow. This little Bird is made uſe of inſtead of Lamps or Candles to work by in the Night, affording Light enough to Spin, Write or Paint by. It has two Stars near the Eyes, and two others under the Wings, which project a great many Rays, and enlighten to a ſurprizing degree. If any one rubs his Hand or his Face with the Moiſture of theſe little Stars, he will appear all of Fire while the Moiſture laſts. This Bird was very ſerviceable to the Indians, who knew nothing of Wax or Tallow-Candles till the Spaniards came among them. * Herrera.

ACUMOLI, or Acumulum, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples, in the farther Abruzzo, upon the Confines of Marca Anconitana and Umbria: It ſtands upon the River Trento, between the Towns Aſcholi and Rieti. * Baudrand.

ACZU,

ACZU, or Acſu, a Town in Great Tartary, near the Lake of Kithay, according to Sanſon's Maps; but in the newer Maps of Mr. Witſen, it ſtands in the Kingdom of Tanguth, upon the Border of the Lake Chiamoy, or Chimoi. Some are of Opinion, that Aczu may be the old Auzacia, Capital of Scythia, and call'd Imaus. * Mat. Diction. Geograph.

ADAD, or David, King of the Auxumites, a People in Ethiopia, made War upon Damian, King of the Homerites, who liv'd in that Part of Arabia the Happy, now call'd the Kingdom of Aden. Theſe Homerites had been Chriſtians for ſome time, and govern'd by a Prince of that Belief. But Damian was a great Enemy to Chriſtianity, perſecuted thoſe who profeſs'd it, and gave the Jews leave to exert their Malice to exterminate the Chriſtians. Adad being in ſome Diſpoſition to turn Chriſtian, made a Vow to be baptized, in caſe he defeated the Enemy. Upon coming to a Battle, he gain'd an entire Victory; and carrying on his Succeſs to the Extent of his Wiſhes, he made good his Promiſe, and by his Example brought on the Converſion of his Subjects. * Cedren. le Sueur, Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe & de l'Emp. ſur l' An 541.

* ADELBERT, or Albert, Biſhop of Prague in Bohemia: The Incorrigibleneſs of his People made him quit his Dioceſe, and travel into Hungary. From hence he went forwards into Pruſſia; but the Country being too obſtinate to relinquiſh their Idolatry, they martyr'd the Biſhop, and cutting the Corpſe in pieces, left it for Birds of Prey. * Hoffman.

ADALGISUS, Sovereign of the Azorenians, who ravag'd Lombardy: This Adalgiſus hew'd the Ambaſſador of Beneventum and Capua in pieces, upon his Return from Conſtantinople, where he had procur'd Succours from the Emperor Baſilius againſt him. * Zonaras Cedren.

ADAM, Archdeacon of the Patriarchal Chamber, and Head of the Religious in Chaldea. Elias, the Neſtorian Patriarch of Babylon, ſent him to Rome in the beginning of the Seventeenth Century: This Patriarch having got his Biſhops to examine the Profeſſion of Faith ſent him by Pope Paul V. charg'd Adam to preſent the Inſtrument to his Holineſs, with the Amendments made by his Prelates; giving this Adam Order at the ſame time to correct what the Pope ſhould find exceptionable: This ſeem'd a very reſigning Commiſſion, which Adam executed with great Care and Punctuality. He carry'd a Writing with him, wherein he pretended to ſhew the Reſemblance between the Eaſtern and Roman Church, and that their Diſagreement was only in Terms. This accommodating Confeſſion was firſt laid before his Patriarch, and by his Order tranſmitted to the reſt of the Biſhops of that Party, and a whole Year was ſpent in going from Town to Town to procure the Biſhop's Approbation. Peter Strozza, Secretary to Paul V. was order'd to draw up an Anſwer to this Confeſſion: This Reply had more Stiffneſs than Condeſcenſion in it: He conſtrued nothing to a favourable Senſe, but put the Legate to the Hardſhip of complying not only with the Doctrines, but with the Manner of the Expreſſion uſed at Rome. However, Adam ſubmitted to the full Length, ſign'd the Pope's Propoſals from Point to Point; and not contenting himſelf with abjuring the Errors of his Countrymen, he wrote ſeveral Tracts, and got them diſpers'd at home, to diſengage the People from their Miſtakes, and ſhew to what degree he had been enlighten'd in the Weſt. After three Years ſtay at Rome, he return'd to his Patriarch, and brought him Pope Paul the Vth's Brief, in which the Softnings and Temper propos'd by this Patriarch were all rejected, as has been already obſerv'd. Adam return'd with two Jeſuites in his Retinue, who had Inſtructions to endeavour the entire Re-union of this Sect. * Bayle's Diction. Hiſtor.

* ADAM de Orlton. For One thouſand three hundred and ſeventy five, in Morery Vol. I. read One thouſand two hundred and ſeventy five.

ADAM, or Adamantio. For Gregory III. in the Firſt Vol. of Morery, read Gregory XIII.

ADARSA, or Adaſa, a Paleſtine Town within the Tribe of Ephraim. At this Place Judas Maccabeus, with three thouſand Men, gain'd an entire Victory upon Nicanor, and kill'd him thirty five thouſand upon the Spot. Joſephus calls the Town Adaſo. * 1 Maccab. 7. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 7. cap. 17.

ADELITES, or Almoganenians, in Latin Adelitti, Almoganeni, a Name the Spaniards gave certain People, who by the Flight, Sound and Singing of Birds, could exactly foretell what good or ill Fortune would happen to any body. They were very careful to preſerve this nice Learning in Books, where there are Rules laid down for all ſorts of Predictions: Theſe Fortune-Tellers are rang'd under three Diviſions, Maſters, Fellows, and Scholars. They are reported to be ſurprizingly knowing in another ſort of Buſineſs; that is, to tell not only which way Horſes and Beaſts of Burden have gone, but they will point out the Road where any Man has paſs'd, either alone or in Company, with that Particularity, as to tell you whether the Ground is hard, ſoft or dirty; whether it's ſandy or greenſword; whether 'tis a great Road or Bye-Path, cauſey or rocky. So that in ſhort, they can tell you the exact Number of the Travellers; and, if need be, trace them by the Print of their Feet. * Laurent. Valla. Lib. 1. Hiſtoriarum.

ADEMAR, or Aimar, a Monk of S. Cibar, in Angoleſme, liv'd in the Beginning of the Twelfth Century: He wrote a Chronicle of Aquitaine, beginning in the Year 829, and ending in 1029. He wrote likewiſe a Chronology of the Abbots of Limoges, publiſh'd by Father Labbé, in his Biblioth. of Manuſcripts. He got Amalarius de Officiis Divinis tranſcrib'd, and ſome of the Learned make him the Author of the Supplement to this Work. This Supplement treats of S. Bennet's Monaſtick Rule; 'tis publiſh'd by Mabillon in his Analecta: Tho', after all, 'tis more probable Amalarius himſelf wrote this Additional Tract, notwithſtanding it is not found amongſt his Manuſcripts. * Voſſius de Hiſtor. Latin. Du Pin. Biblioth. Eccleſ. XI. Cent.

* ADEODATUS, See Morery, Vol. I. where 'tis miſprinted Adeodarus.

ADAERBIGIAN, or Adherbigian, a Province in Perſia, the ſame with what was anciently call'd Media, within that Empire: 'Tis in this Province that Cajumarath, who, according to ſome Authors, was the Son of Aram, Grandſon to Sem, and Great Grandſon to Noah, began the firſt Race of the Perſian Kings. This Country is very near the Gordian Mountains, where, according to the Eaſtern Tradition, Noah's Ark reſted; and 'tis very probable that the firſt Monarchy was ſet up in this Country. The Perſians believ'd the Worſhip of Fire was firſt ſettled in this Province by Zoroaſtres. The Poet Selman, in his Panegyrick upon this Province, ſays, that God has made the moſt illuſtrious Diſcovery of his Glory in this Place. This Province takes in Part of Media and Armenia the Great. The chief Towns are Tabris, or Tauris, Ardebil, Maraga, Selmas, Nakſchivan, Merend, Siahkouch, &c. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orientale.

ADGILUS, Duke of Friſia, ſucceeded his Father Rabed in the Year 719. He countenanc'd the Chriſtian Religion, tho' much harraſs'd by his Father. He died in the Year 737, and was ſucceeded by Gondeband. * Le Sueur Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe & de l'Empire.

ADHED Ledinillah, was the Eleventh and Laſt Caliph of the Fathamites in Egypt; he was Son to the Emir Joſeph, and began to reign in the Year 1160. He govern'd to Commendation, and was a Prince of great Bounty and Magnificence. In his Time, the Franks entred Egypt with a powerful Army, and oblig'd this Prince to ſue for a Peace, and pay them a Million of Dinars, to reimburſe them for the Charge of the Expedition. The Franks marching into Grand Caire to receive this Sum, frighted the Burghers to that degree, that by Adhed's Conſent, ſome of the principal Inhabitants wrote to Sultan Noradin, then in Poſſeſſion of Syria, to let him know the miſerable Condition the Franks had reduc'd them to, and ſolicite for Succours. Noradin, who was in the Intereſt of the Caliphs Abaſſides of Bagdet, (Enemies to the Fathamites) making his Advantage of this Occaſion, ſent his beſt General Schirgoneh, that is, in the Perſian Language, the Lion of the Mountain, to their Aſſiſtance. This great Man bringing eighty thouſand Horſe with him, the Franks did not think it adviſeable to hazard a Battle; for as ſoon as they were inform'd of his March, they left Egypt and reimbark'd. Schirgoneh mov'd on notwithſtanding, and came to Caire in the Year of our Lord 1168. The Caliph looking on him as his Deliverer, receiv'd him with all imaginable Regard, put him in the Poſt of Firſt Miniſter, with with the Command of all his Troops; but his Advancement was but ſhort, his Death happening about ſeven Weeks after; Adhed gave his Command to Saladin, Schirgoneh's Nephew. This General aiming farther, endeavour'd to diſpoſſeſs Adhed: This Project going on ſucceſsfully, Saladin acquainted Sultan Noradin with what paſs'd; upon which this Prince immediately ſent him Inſtructions to coin Money with Moſthadi's Effigies, the thirty third Caliph of the Abaſſides, then reigning at Bagdet. This Order being executed when Adhed was ſick, he died without knowing how things went againſt him. After his Death, Saladin made himſelf abſolute Maſter of Egypt; the Caliph of Bagdet was recogniz'd, and an End put to the Government of the Fathamites. This Account is ſomewhat differently reported by Gulielmus Tyrius, but too long to be inſerted. D'Herbelot Biblioth. Orientale.

ADIMA, a Town in Muſcovy, upon the Mooxa, in the Mordnates Country, ſeventy Miles from Moſcow. * Hoffman.

ADMIRAL, (The Iſles of) Inſulæ Admirales, African Iſlands in the Sea of Zanguebar, lying North of Madagaſcar, and Eaſt of the Kingdom of Melinda. * Baudrand.

ADO, Archbiſhop of Vienne, in Dauphiné, was born the beginning of the Ninth Century: He wrote a General Chronicle, divided into ſix Periods. The 1ſt begins with the World, and reaches to the Deluge; the 2d begins at the End of the firſt, and is carry'd to Abraham; the 3d ſtretches from Abraham to David; the 4th ends at the Captivity; the 5th comes forward to our Saviour's Incarnation; and the 6th commences from that Period, and reports what happen'd to the Author's time. * Baronius, Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. Du Pin IX. Cent. &c.

ADONAI, ſignifies Lord in the Hebrew Language. The Maſſorets ſet the Points which belong to the Conſonants of the Word Adonai under Jehovah, becauſe the Jews were prohibited to pronounce that Word; none but the High-Prieſt having the Liberty to ſpeak it, and that only in the Sanctum Sanctorum. * Genebrard, Capell. de Nomine Dei Tetragrammato.

ADOPTIANS, Hereticks in ſeveral Parts of Spain: The Heads of their Sects were two Biſhops, Felix and Elipandus; they held our Saviour was God only by Adoption. This Heterodoxy was likewiſe call'd the Felician Hereſy, and ſeems a Branch or Conſequence of Neſtorianiſm. It was condemn'd at the Council of Frankfort in the Year 794. * Hornius, Hiſtor. Eccleſ.

ADORATION, or a Circumſtance of Worſhip the Pagans gave their pretended Deities: The Poſture for this Religious Regard was putting their Hand to their Mouth and kiſſing it. Thus, as Pliny deſcribes it, Adorare is, manum ad os admovere. They paid their Adoration ſometimes ſtanding, and ſometimes kneeling, with their Faces cover'd; and after having turn'd to the Right about their Statues and Altars, they fell proſtrate, and kiſs'd their Hands. They worſhip'd none but Saturn, with their Head uncover'd, which was originally a Greek Cuſtom. And thus in Feſtus, Lucem facere, Saturno Sacrificantes, is to uncover their Heads. 'Tis certain, the Romans had always a Veil or Mask on, when they Sacrificed, for fear they might be diſcompoſed at the Sight of ſome unfriendly Perſon, call'd off their Attention by affecting Objects, or diſturbed by ſome unluckly Omen. The Roman Cuſtom of turning to the Right about the Statues and Altars, gave occaſion to the Gingle in Plautus's Curculio; where Phredromus crying, Quo me vertam neſcio; Palinurus anſwers him, Si Deos ſalutas, dextro verſum cenſeo. Proſtration was likewiſe the laſt Circumſtance in Adoration. Thus Livy, ſpeaking of the Carthaginian Ambaſſadors, tells us, that when they came into the Roman General's Tent, they threw themſelves at his Feet in the Poſture of Adoration; More adorantium procubuerunt. Some haughty Roman Emperors required this deep Homage; but thoſe who were moſt modeſt, particularly Alexander Severus, refus'd ſuch extravagant Submiſſion. Dii prohibeant, ſays this Prince, ut quiſquam ingenuorum pedibus meis oſculum figat. Lampridius.

ADRAMITTIUM, a Sea-Port in Troas. S. Paul did not embarque for Rome at this Place, but at Cæſarea in Paleſtine; and therefore the Ship of Adramittium, mention'd in Acts xxvii. is to be underſtood only of a Ship belonging to that Port. See Engliſh Morery, Vol. I.

ADRIANI, (John Baptiſt) born at Florence, in the Year 1511. He was deſcended from a noble Family, and wrote a Continuation of Guicciardin in Italian. His Hiſtory begins in the Year 1536, and is written with great Judgment and Exactneſs. He had his Memoirs, as it's moſt probable, from Coſmus Duke of Tuſcany, a Prince of great Genius and Penetration. Thuanus, who gives this Account of Adriani, frankly confeſſes that he has borrow'd a great deal from this Author. Beſides this Hiſtory, Adriani has three Funeral Orations extant; one upon the Death of Charles V. another upon that of Coſmus Great Duke of Tuſcany, and the third upon Jane of Auſtria, married to Francis de Medicis. Bayle thinks him the Author of a long Letter about the old Painters and Statuaries, printed in the beginning of Vaſſari's third Volume. * Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 68. Poggian. de Scriptoribus Florentinus. Bayle Dict. Hiſtor.

ADRIATICK, Mare Adriaticum, or Illyricus Sinus; now call'd the Gulph of Venice. 'Tis this Part of the Mediterranean which ſtretches from the Summer Weſt, to the Winter Eaſt, between Illyricum and Italy. 'Tis about ſix hundred Italian Miles in Length, and two hundred where broadeſt, and took its Name from the old Town Adria, at the Bottom of the Gulph. The ancient Geographers call it Mare Superum, or the Upper Sea, in Contradiſtinction to that upon the Coaſt of Tuſcany, which they call Mare Inferum, or the Lower; commonly giving the Diſtinction of Upper to that Part of the Globe which lies Northward. This Gulph, much the biggeſt in the Mediterranean, may be ſubdivided into ſeveral others; for Inſtance, the Gulphs of Camerino, Cattaro, Santa Croce, Drin, Narenza, Syponto, and Trieſte. There are a great many Rocks and Iſlands in this Gulph upon the Coaſt of Illyricum, moſt of which belong to the Venetians. The Country upon each ſide of this Gulph are, in the modern Names, Albania, Dalmatia, Iſtria, Friuli, Marcha Treviſana, the Dukedom of Venice, La Poleſine di Rovigo, the Duchy of Ferrara, Romandiola, the Duchy of Urbin, Marca Anconitana, Abruzzo, Capitanata, Terra di Bari, and Terra di Otranto. Several old Authors by the Adriatick mean all that Part of the Sea near Italy. Thus S. Luke (Acts xxvii. v. 27.) relates, that S. Paul, when caſt upon the Iſland Melita, or Malta, was wreck'd in the Adriatick; for its plain by the Quarter of the Wind, and the Coaſt S. Paul ſteer'd afterwards to go to Rome, that the Iſland Melita in the Adriatick, between Italy and Illyricum, was not the Place where S. Paul's Ship was ſtranded. Notwithſtanding there are ſeveral Princes whoſe Dominions confine upon the Adriatick, as the Grand Seignior, the Emperor of Germany, the Republick of Venice, the Pope, and the little Commonwealth of Raguſa, the Venetians pretend to be ſole Maſters in this Sea, and make out their Claim to this Sovereignty by Conqueſt, and long Poſſeſſion. The Pope ſends a Bull every ninth Year to the Senate of Venice, to confirm the Grant of the Tythes of the Clergy to this Government for the Defence of the Gulph. * Leander Alberti Deſcript. Ital. Juſtiniani & Nani, Hiſtory of Venice. Houſſaye, Hiſtoire du Gouvernement de Venice.

* ADRIAN, the IId Pope, a Roman by Deſcent, was ſeventy ſix Years old when elected to that Dignity: The beginning of his Pontificate was diſturbed by ſome ſeditious Commotions at Rome, rais'd by the Duke of Spoleto; but the Emperor Lotharius marching into Italy, quell'd theſe Diſturbances. Thus things being brought to a State of Repoſe, Adrian, by way of Acknowledgment, took off the Excommunication pronounc'd upon this Prince by Nicolas, his Holineſs's Predeceſſor. The Cenſure paſs'd for the Emperor's having divorced his Empreſs Thyedburga, and married Valrade; and that this Relaxation might be defenſible, Adrian had the Emperor's ſolemn Word, that he had quitted Valrade; but his Majeſty, who did not deal ſincerely, died ſoon after at Lucca in the Year 868. This Year Adrian held a Council at Rome againſt Photius; and afterwards ſent two Legates, Donatus and Stephen, to aſſiſt at the General Council at Conſtantinople in 869. He approv'd what was done againſt Photius in this Council; but afterwards embroiled himſelf with the Greek Emperor, and the Patriarch Ignatius. 'Twas upon a Diſpute for Juriſdiction in Bulgaria, which both the Pope and Patriarch of Conſtantinople laid claim to. There are extant about thirty ſix or thirty ſeven Epiſtles of this Pope, upon different Subjects relating to the Church. He was ſucceeded by John VIII. * Anaſtatius in vit. Nicol. Platinæ. Ciaconius. Du Cheſne. Baronius Annal. Du Pin Bibliotheque, Eccleſ. IX.

ADRIAN VI. For Charles the Bald, in Morery Vol. I. read Charles the Hardy.

ADRIANUS, (Cæſar) Inſtead of he adopted Antony Le Debonnaire, Morery Vol. I. read he adopted Antoninus Pius.

ADRIAN VI. He was choſen Pope by Charles V.'s Party: He refus'd the changing his Name. Soon after his Promotion to the Chair, he renewed the Alliance with Charles V. compoſed the Diſturbances in Italy, and attempted a Reformation in the State and Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline; ſent his Nuntio Cherigat, Biſhop of Teramo, with large Inſtructions and a Brief to the Dyet held at Nuremberg, in the Year 1522; in which Year the Iſle of Rhodes was taken by Solyman the Magnificent, on Chriſtmas-Day. Some Hiſtorians charge Adrian VI. with neglecting the Succour of this Iſland. However, it muſt be ſaid he had great Deſigns for promoting the Honour of God and the Reformation of Manners; but Death prevented the Execution of what he had projected. He died in the ſixty fifth Year of his Age, having ſat but a Year, eight Months, and ſix Days. Some blame him for being too ſlow and irreſolute in what he undertook; that he was no Friend to Learning, and under-qualify'd for the Politicks and Fineneſs of the Court of Rome, which made Cardinal Pallavicino give him the Character of an excellent Churchman, but an indifferent Pope. However, in ſaying this, Pallavicino ſpoke more like a Stateſman than a Cardinal; for it's certain Adrian VI. was a moſt excellent Pope. 'Tis true, the Romans did not admire him, becauſe he ſhew'd himſelf averſe to Luxury and extravagant Expence; and that he was more inclin'd to reform the Italian Cuſtoms than to imitate them. His Epitaph is an Evidence of the Modeſty and Unpretendingneſs of his Temper; and that Poſts of Government and Command were a Mortification to him. Hadrianus VI. hic ſitus eſt, qui nihil ſibi infælicius in vita, quam quod imperaret, duxit. This Pope wrote ſeveral Tracts. Quæſtiones quodlibeticæ. Diſputationes in Lib. 4. Magiſtri Sententiarum. Epiſtolæ, &c. He order'd his Fourth Book, upon the Maſter of the Sentences, to be reprinted when he was Pope: Neither would he allow the expunging what he had written, that the Pope might err, even in Matters of Faith. * Onuph. & Ciaconius, in Vit. Pontiff. Bellarmine de Script. Eccleſ. Poſſevin. in apparat. Du Pin New Biblioth. Eccleſ. XVI Cent.

ADRIAN, ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Cæſarea, in the Perſecution rais'd by Gallerius Maximianus. The Occaſion of his being at Cæſarea, was a Viſit to the Confeſſors. The Governor Firmilian order'd him to be thrown to the Lions on the 5th of March; upon which Day his Feſtival is kept by the Latin Church. * Euſeb. de Martyribus Paleſtinæ.

ADRIAN, a Greek Author, in the beginning of the Sixth Century; he wrote an Introduction to the Scripture, printed in Greek at Augsburgh in 1602, and inſerted in the Eighth Volume of the Engliſh Criticks. * Caſſiodor. de Divin. Lection. Photius Biblioth.

ADRIAN, an African by Birth, and Abbot of the Monaſtery of Neridan; was pitch'd on by Pope Vitalian to travel into England for the Converſion of the Saxons: He accompany'd Theodorus thither, whom the Pope had nominated Archbiſhop of Canterbury. They came into France in the Year 669, and from thence went forward into England. Adrian aſſiſted Theodorus to perſuade the Britans to a Conformity with the Cuſtoms of Rome, to inſtruct the Saxons, and bring the Engliſh to a ſtricter Diſcipline. He ſurviv'd Theodorus, and lived to the 9th of January 709. * Bede Hiſt. Mabillon, Second Siecle Benedictin.

ADRUMETE, a Town in Africk, upon the Sea, in the Byzacene Province: 'Twas a Colony of Phœnicians, and an Epiſcopal See under the Metropolitan of Carthage: 'Tis call'd Adrumetos by Ptolomy, and Adrumetum in Saluſt and Pliny. There was a Council held there in the Year of our Lord 394. 'Tis thought 'tis the ſame Town with that call'd Mahometta in the Kingdom of Tunis, upon the Mediterranean. * Strabo Lib. 7. The Notitia of Africk, in the laſt Edition of Optatus, publiſhed by M. Du Pin.

ADVOCATES of Churches, in Latin Advocati: So thoſe were call'd, who were entruſted with defending the Rights and Privileges of the Church in Temporal Courts; for this reaſon they are commonly call'd Defenſores. At firſt, thoſe who manag'd this Buſineſs were Bariſters by Profeſſion, and pleaded for the Churches upon Occaſion; but afterwards this Name was given to Military Men of Quality, who march'd their Forces to repel any remarkable Invaſion on the Church. Thus the Church of Rome, when oppreſs'd by the Lombards, choſe the Kings of France, or Emperors of Germany, for their Defenſores or Protectors. 'Tis reported in the Life of Charles the Great, that the Romans pitch'd upon him for S. Peter's Advocate againſt the Kings of the Lombards; and that Pope Leo III. ſent him a Banner, and Keys, as Marks of the Poſt he had undertaken. The Emperor Henry II. had likewiſe the Title of S. Peter's Advocate. The Advocates of the Church were choſen at firſt by the reſpective Biſhops and Abbots, before the Earls of the Precinct, empower'd by the Prince for this purpoſe. Sometimes the Prince named them, and ſometimes the Pope. The Founders of Churches often reſerv'd the Titles and Juriſdiction of Defenders to themſelves, and their Heirs. Upon the Progreſs of Time, thoſe who appear'd in Civil Courts, to maintain the Intereſt of the Church, rais'd a Juriſdiction to themſelves, and ſat as Judges in Cauſes where the Vaſſals and Tenants of the Church were concern'd: The Churches likewiſe ſettled ſome Part of their Demeſnes upon them, the better to engage their Aſſiſtance. When any Force or violent Diſſeizure was to be remov'd, theſe Defenders rais'd the Churches Vaſſals, and brought them into the Field: They likewiſe carry'd the Standards of their reſpective Churches. Thus the Count de Vexin, as Advocate for the Abbey of S. Dennis in France, carry'd the Oriflamme. The chief Defenders conſtituted Deputy-Advocates under them, who took care of the Dependencies upon the Church or Abbey. But theſe Men, upon the Score of their Exactions and Injuſtice, had their Office ſuppreſs'd at the Council of Rheims, An. Dom. 1148. * Du Cange Gloſſar. Latin. See Defenders in Morery's Supplement.

ÆGIALIUS, Son of Adraſtus, one of the ſeven Greek Officers call'd Epigonæ; that is to ſay, the Sons of thoſe Generals that were kill'd at Thebes. Theſe Epigonæ march'd to Thebes, to revenge the Diſgrace done to their Fathers, whom the Thebans would not ſuffer to be buried. Ægialius was the only Perſon that was kill'd in the Conteſt by Laodemantus; the other ſix returned with Victory. * Hygin. Fab. 71.

ÆGILA, a Town in the Territories of Sparta. During the ſecond War with the Meſſenians, 'twas attack'd, when the married Women were keeping the Feſtival of Ceres; but the Women, who it ſeems were the beſt Guard of the Town, charged with their Knives and Spits, and fought with ſuch Courage, that they forced the Enemy to retire, and took the General Ariſtomenes Priſoner. * Pauſan. in Meſſen.

ÆGIUCHUS, one of Jupiter's Names; 'tis the ſame with Ægiochus. There are Medals of the Emperors Philip and Valerian; upon the Reverſe of one of which there is a Goat, with this Inſcription, JOVI CONSERVATORI AUGUSTI; and upon the other, a Goat with a little Jupiter upon her Back, with theſe Words, JOVI CRESCENTI. * Antiq. Græc. & Rom.

ÆGON, a famous Combatant at the Olympick Games, born at Zacynthus, or Zant: He took a Bull by one of his Feet, dragg'd him from a Hill into the Town, and made a Preſent of him to his Miſtreſs. * Theocrit. Idyll. 4.

ÆLIA, the Name of ſeveral Towns built by the Emperor Ælius Adrianus. The moſt famous was Ælia Capitolina, or Jeruſalem.

ÆLIANUS, (Mœvius) an Italian Phyſician, who, in a great Mortality, was the firſt that preſcrib'd Treacle againſt the Contagion; which prov'd a Remedy to thoſe that had the Plague, and a Preſervative to others. Galen, in his Tract of Treacle, gives this Phyſician great Commendation for his Skill in managing his Patients.

ÆLIUS, (Gallus) a Roman Gentleman, lived in the Reign of Auguſtus, and was the firſt that brought Arabia Felix under the Roman Juriſdiction. The Geographer Strabo accompanied this Officer into Egypt, and other African Provinces. * Plin. Lib. 6. c. 38. Strabo Geogr.

ÆOLIA, a Country of Aſia in the Ægean Sea, now call'd Sarcum: 'Tis not that Place where the Poets ſuppoſe Æolus keeps his Court. The Iſlands between

Sicily

Sicily and Italy, being in Mythology the Seat of the Winds. * See Engliſh Morery, Vol. I..

ÆONS, Hereticks who appeared in the Firſt Centuries of Chriſtianity. The Gnoſticks, Valentinians, and their Diſciples, ſuppoſed a great many Æons, out of which they made their Sovereign Being, which they called Pleroma, or an entire Deity. To underſtand their Heterodoxies, we are to obſerve that their Principles are drawn from Platoniſm, which maintains different Ideas in God Almighty; which, as ſome of thoſe Philoſophers fancy, are real and diſtinct Eſſences. 'Twas under this Notion theſe Hereticks conſidered them, aſſerting them Perſonal Beings, and Emanations from God Almighty: That they were of the ſame Subſtance and Nature, though of different Degrees in Greatneſs and Power. Simon Magus was the firſt Inventor of theſe Æons. This extraordinary Knowledge they called Gnoſis, from whence the Gnoſticks had that Diſtinction. Valentinus improved this Syſtem, to which his Diſciples have made Additions and Alterations, ranging the Production and Claſſes of the Æons as their Fancy led them. The firſt Gnoſticks had but eight Æones in their Scheme, under four Conjugations: The firſt was Bythos and Sige, Depth and Silence. 2. Mens & Veritas, the Mind and Truth. 3. Verbum & Vita, the Word and Life. 4. Homo & Eccleſia, Man and the Church. The Gnoſticks who came afterwards made a large Supplement, and at laſt Valentinus furniſhed his Pleroma with thirty Æons, to which he gave different Names, drawn from the Divine Attributes. Sophia, or Wiſdom, which is the laſt of theſe Æons, produced Achamot without the Pleroma, and Chriſt and the Holy Spirit within it; and all theſe Æons in Conjunction formed the Saviour. All Material and Immaterial Beings, even to the Demiurgus, or Maker of the World, are ſaid to ſpring from the Paſſions of Achamoth. Of all Valentinus's Scholars, none but Accionicus kept cloſe to his Maſter's Syſtem; the reſt made a great many Alterations, either in the Number, Ranging, or the Names of the Æons. * Iren. Lib. 1, 2. Tertul. contra Valentin. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 31.

ÆSION, a Nobleman of Athens; had ſo great an Eſteem for Demoſthenes, that he publickly declared this Orator had done more Honour to Athens, than 'twas poſſible for his Country to return. * Plutarch. Vit. Demoſthen.

AFRASIAB, the ninth King of Perſia, of the firſt Dynaſty, called Piſchtadians: He was a Turk by Birth, and King of all the Country beyond Oxus, or Gihon; ſince called Turqueſtan. This Prince, notwithſtanding his Turkiſh Deſcent, was extracted from Tour, Son of Feridoune King of Perſia, and in vertue of this Genealogy, laid Claim to the Perſian Kingdom. He tried to make good his Pretenſions againſt Mamougcher, then reigning in Perſia; and handled this Prince ſo roughly in the Field, that he was forced to fly to the Mountains of Thabareſtan in Hyrcania. However, ſome time after Afraſiab came to a Treaty with this unfortunate Prince, and gave him Leave to return to his Dominions, upon Condition that the River Oxus or Gihon ſhou'd be the Barrier between Perſia and Turqueſtan. This Treaty was kept during the Life of Mamougcher; but Naudar, his Son, who ſucceeded him, made an Infraction upon the Articles. This proved an unfortunate Step, and drew a formidable Army of Turks into the Field, who paſſing the Gihon, came powdring upon him. Afraſiab, who commanded theſe Troops, pick'd out Naudar, and killed him with his own Hand. This Blow put an End to the War; for the Perſian Army having loſt their Prince and General, were quickly routed, and the Turk, in conſequence of this Victory, became Maſter of Perſia, where he reigned without Diſturbance twelve Years. There was then in Perſia a famous Nobleman, called Sam Neriman, who was reckoned the braveſt Perſon in the Country; but he unfortunately died at this Juncture. However, Sam left a Son behind him, called Zallzur, no leſs qualified in Reſolution than his Father. This Nobleman, not enduring the Ravage and Cruelty of the Turks, raiſed a conſiderable Army, attacked Afraſiab, chaſed him out of Perſia, and obliged him to repaſs the Gihon. And after having reſcued his Country from an inſupportable Oppreſſion, inſtead of mounting the Throne himſelf, he went in queſt of ſome Perſon of the Royal Family. At laſt he met with a Prince of this Deſcent, called Zou, or Zab, Son of Taa-maſh, and had him crowned. And thus he retrieved the Honour of his Nation, and repair'd the Breach which a Foreign Uſurper had made in the Line of the Piſchtadians.

Kiſchtaſb, Son of Zou, was not ſo proſperous upon ſucceeding his Father; for Afraſiab gave him Battle, and routed him to that degree, that he was forced to quit his Dominions, and leave the Conquerors a third time Maſter of all Perſia. And ſoon after Kiſchtaſb died, and the Monarchy of the Piſchtadians ended with him. In the mean time Zall-zur, who had canton'd ſome Troops, and fortified himſelf in the Southern Parts, called Siſtan, or Segeſtan, was very ſolicitous for an Expedient to deliver his Country from the Devaſtations, Inſults and Barbarities of theſe Turkiſh Gueſts. While his Thoughts were thus employ'd, a brave and enterprizing Perſian Prince ſet up his Standard againſt the Foreigners; his Name was Kaicobad, who goes for the Founder of the ſecond Regnant Family of the Kings of Perſia. This Prince, after he had got himſelf proclaimed by the Country, ſent for Zall-zur, and his Son Roſtam, and gave them the Command of his Army. Upon this, they immediately marched againſt Afraſiab, gave him a total Rout, and forced him to retire out of Perſia. However, this Diſgrace did not diſcourage him from levying new Troops, and making his utmoſt Effort againſt the Perſians. This happen'd in the Reign of Kaikhoſe-rou, Kaicobad's Grandſon: But this Expedition proved fatal to the Aggreſſor; for being puſhed with his Brother Ghar-ſchiavez to the Mountains of Adherbigian, or Media, they were both taken Priſoners, and put to Death. This Account Khoademer, a Perſian Author, gives of this Matter. But to examine the Hiſtory more cloſely, Afraſiab muſt have lived three or four hundred Years, to have had a Share in all theſe Martial Undertakings; and therefore to bring Truth and Time together, we are to obſerve ſome Hiſtorians relate that all the Kings of Turqueſtan, ſo famous for Victory and Succeſs, took the Name of Afraſiab or Farſiab, that is, Conqueror of Perſia. However, the Prince of this Name above mentioned conveyed his Memory to Poſterity with great Advantage; and all the Turkiſh Families, who have made a Noiſe in the World, pretend a Deſcent from this great Conqueror. Selgiuk, Founder of the Monarchy of the Selgiuſides, had a mind to be reputed the four and thirtieth in the Male right Line from Afraſiab. And the Ottoman Monarchs, who draw their Genealogy from the Selgiuſides by the Family of Ogouz-khan, put Afraſiab among the reſt of their Anceſtors. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

* AFRICK. This Diviſion is taken under two Diſtinctions by the Ancients, 1*ſt*, for the third Part of the World, parted from Aſia by the Nile, and ſurrounded by the Sea for the Remainder; 2*dly*, for the Country which ſtretches along the Coaſt from the Streights of Gibraltar as far as the great Syrtes, to the Place which old Authors call Aræ Philenorum. In this Senſe it was a Roman Dioceſe, diſtinguiſhed from Egypt, and comprehended Mauritania, Numidia, the Territories of Tripoli and Zingitana, which Diviſion was particularly called Africk.

The Original of the Africans.

Africk was inhabited by the Deſcendents of Mizraim, Son of Ham, who planted Egypt and Lybia, and ſtretcht forward by little and little to the Extremities of the Country. 'Tis likewiſe believed that the Poſterity of Phut, another Son of Ham, ſettled in Lybia and Mauritania. As for Cuſh, the firſt Son of Ham, the Æthiopians are deſcended from him; but then theſe Æthiopians are properly Arabians. 'Tis certain, that not only Egypt and the Coaſt of Africk, but likewiſe the more Inland Parts, to the utmoſt Bounds, have been very anciently inhabited by different Clans, little known at a Diſtance. The Lybians had a great Share of Plantation; the Nazamones another; and the reſt was planted by a great many diſtinct Nations, whoſe Names are mentioned by Herodotus, Pliny, and the old Geographers. The Phœnicians and Greeks ſettled ſeveral Colonies along the Coaſt of the Mediterranean. The moſt famous is that of Carthage, built by Dido, who came from Tyre to Africk in the 882d Year before the Incarnation.

The Diviſion of Africk.

Africk, according to what has been obſerved, being taken for the third Part of the World, may be divided by the old Geography into three Parts; that is to ſay, Egypt, which takes in Lybia and Thebais; Africa, which comprehends all the Country along the Coaſt from the great Syrtes to the Streights, and which is ſeparated by a Ledge of Mountains from the Inner Lybia; and the third

third Subdiviſion, which takes in all the reſt of Africk from theſe Mountains, and the Confines of Egypt, to the fartheſt Point of that Continent. The old Roman Geographers ſubdivided that which they called Africk properly into three Provinces, Mauritania, Numidia, and Africk. Each Diviſion was afterwards farther ſubdivided into two; that is, Mauritania into Tingitana; and Cæſarienſis, and one Part of Numidia, was made a ſeparate Province, and called Mauritania Sitifienſis. Africk was likewiſe ſplit into three Cantons, that is, into the Proconſulary, Byzacena and Tripolitana. This was the Diviſion of Africa in the Reign of Theodoſius the Great, excepting that Mauritania Tingitana was disjoined from the African Provinces, and laid to Spain. Egypt was anciently divided into three Parts, the Upper and Lower Egypt, and Thebais; Lybia, which lies next to the Mediterranean, and takes in Cyrenaica and Marmarica; was joined to it. The reſt of Africk was divided into the Inward Lybia, and the Upper and Lower Æthiopia.

The moſt conſiderable Towns in Africk.

Formerly Carthage was the Metropolis of Africk: The Republick, of which this City was the Capital, diſputed a long time with the Romans for the Sovereignty of the World. 'Twas ſackt and burnt by Scipio the Younger, in the Conſulate of Cornelius Lentulus, and Lucius Mummius, in the 608th Year of Rome. It remained uninhabited 22 Years, and then the Romans ſent a Colony thither, which ſignified little. About 200 Years after, Julius Cæſar ſent a ſecond and much better furniſhed Colony, which reſtored the Town almoſt to its firſt Luſtre. From this Time it was the Capital of Africk, and one of the moſt conſiderable Cities of the Empire, till 'twas taken by the Saracens, towards the latter End of the Seventh Century; and now being entirely ruined, the Burghers and Wealth were carried off to Tunis.

Utica was the next conſiderable City to Carthage. Theſe two Towns were ſituated in two large Promontories, with large Bays. The other conſiderable Places in the Proconſular Province are, Adrumetum Hippozaritos, and Tabraca upon the Sea; Thapſus, Telepte, Ruſpæ, Capſa, Tiſir, and Tuburdes, diſtant from the Shoare. In the Tripolitane Diviſion, Tacape, Sabrata, Oca, Abrotonon, and Leptis, along the Coaſt. In Numidia, Hipporegius or Hippo, and Ruſſicada, by the Sea Side; Conſtantina, Milevis, Bagais, Tagaſta, Madaurum, Sicca, Lambeſa, and Tebeſta, up in the Country. In Mauritania Sitifienſis, Igilgilis, now called Gigeri, upon the Sea, and Sitiphe farther up in the Country. In Mauritania Cæſarienſis, Tipazum, Ruſuccurra, ſituate upon the Coaſt. In Tingitana Tingis, now Tangier, upon a Promontory of the Streights, Lixa Banaſa, and Sala upon the Ocean; Ruſſacadira upon the Mediterranean; Volubilis and Tocoloſida up in the Country. To paſs from the Condition of Things under the Roman Empire, and come to the Modern State: The principal Towns of Africk at preſent are, Morocco, Fez, Algier, Tunis, Tripoli, and Barca. In Egypt, Alexandria, Grand Caire, Zaide, and Damietta. In the Country all along the Coaſt of the Weſtern Ocean, Darra, Teſete, Zuingſiga, Genehoa, Tombut, Cano, Caſſera, Gangara, Madinga, Gubar, Zegzeg, Zamphara, Benin, Diafara, Medras, Salvador, Engara de Dongo, and the Cape of Good Hope. Upon the Red Sea ſtands, Suaquem, Ercoco, and Adel. Along the Coaſt of the Arabian and Æthiopick Ocean, Magadozo, Melinde, Mombazza, Quiloa Mozambique, Mongalo, and Barva. In the Abbiſſine Empire, Chaxumume, Angot, Beleguanza, Abiancantiva, Sova, Amera, Ambiam, Georgia, Zet, Tirut, and Caphat. And in the Empire of Monomotapa, the Towns are, Zembra, Bagametro, Butua, and Monomotapa.

And now a Word or two, by way of Supplement, touching the Chriſtian Religion formerly ſettled in a great Part of this Country. Norwithſtanding Salvian (Lib. 7. de Provident.) affirms, that the Church of Carthage was founded by the Apoſtles, 'tis certain, S. Auſtin owns (de Unitate Eccleſ. cap. 15.) that the Africans were not converted till Chriſtianity had made a great Spread in the World; it ſeems probable was not planted in Africk till about 100 Years after our Saviour's Paſſion; and that the firſt Miſſionaries for this Purpoſe were ſent from Rome, as S. Auſtin and Pope Innocent the Firſt aſſure us. But granting this Part of the World had not the Happineſs of the earlieſt Converſion, it can't be denied but that Chriſtianity gained Ground in a very little time, and flouriſhed in all that Part of the Country under the Roman Empire. The Perſecutions carried off a great many; but the Martyrs ſuffering with ſuch Reſolution, made their Religion ſpread the farther. For Tertullian obſerves, Plures efficimur quoties metimur à vobis, ſemen eſt ſanguis Chriſtianorum. When the Heathen Perſecutions ceaſed, the African Church was harraſs'd with the Donatiſts Schiſm, which began in the Year 370, and laſted above three Centuries, notwithſtanding the Deciſion of Councils, Laws of Princes, publick Conferences, and ſeveral learned Tracts made uſe of to ſuppreſs it. The Diviſion of Provinces in the Church was in the time of S. Cyprian, ſettled conformably to the Civil Regulations; but the Metropolitical Juriſdiction was not fix'd to the Metropolis, the eldeſt Biſhop of the Province being reckoned the Metropolitan. But here the Biſhop of Carthage muſt be excepted; this Prelate being as it were the Patriarch of all Africk, and had particular Privileges in Precedency and Power thro' all the Provinces. And as Africk was plentifully inhabited, and ſtock'd with a great many Cities, Towns, Villages and Caſtles; ſo the Biſhops were proportionably numerous; inſomuch that ſometimes Villages and Caſtles were erected into Sees. Thus the African Councils conſiſted commonly of a great many Biſhops. In the Conference held at Carthage in 411, there appeared 470 of this Order. And in a Liſt of the African Biſhops, drawn up in the time of Hunnericus King of the Vandals, there were 458, and all baniſhed by this Arian Prince. Notwithſtanding this Calamity, the Catholick Churches recovered in ſome meaſure; ſo that when Juſtinian regained Africk, Reparatus of Carthage held a Council of 217 Biſhops. The whole Number of the African Biſhops, drawn from old Regiſters and Records, were 690. But when the Country was conquered by the Saracens, the Church was in a manner entirely ruined; for in the Popedom of Gregory VII. there were but three Biſhops in all Africk. The Arabians, who ſeized the Country in the VIIth Century, brought in Mahometaniſm. The Natives, who were tired with their Government, and drove them into the Deſarts, have been notwithſtanding ſo unhappy as to retain their Heterodoxies.

* AGATHO, (Pope) was a Monk of Sicily, promoted to the Chair after Domnus, the 11th of April, 679. In his Pontificate, the Church was diſturbed with the Hereſy of the Monotholites. Agatho got this Hereſy condemned at Rome in a Council conſiſting of 120 Biſhops. Afterwards he ſolicited the Calling the Sixth General Council at Conſtantinople in 608, and ſent four Legates with Letters to the Emperor Conſtantine Pogonatus. Before he was Pope, he was Treaſurer to the Church of Rome. He refuſed to pay the cuſtomary Tribute to the Emperor, which his Predeceſſors had paid when their Promotion was owned by their reſpective Emperors. But it ſeems this Pecuniary Homage was firſt impoſed by the Gothick Kings in Italy, and from their Time continued by the Emperors of Conſtantinople. The great Authority which, as the firſt Volume of Morery relates, was given to S. Cyril, S. Athanaſius, S. Ambroſe, S. Auſtin, and S. Jerom, in the Sixth General Council, muſt be underſtood of their Writings; for theſe Fathers were dead long before. * Du Cheſne. M. du Pin, Nouvelle Biblioth. &c. VIIth Cent.

AGE, at firſt reach'd no farther than five and twenty or thirty Years, but afterwards 'twas ſtretch'd to a hundred. Servius upon Virgil obſerves, that an Age is ſometimes taken for thirty, ſometimes for a hundred, and ſometimes for a thouſand Years. Man's Life is commonly divided into four Ages, or Diſtinctions of Time; that is, Infancy, which goes to fourteen Years; Youth or Adoleſcence, which ends at four and twenty; the latter Part of Youth, and Middle-Age, reaches to ſixty; and Old Age takes the reſt. Under the Roman Republick, the Age in which a Man was qualified to ſerve in the Field, and in Poſts of Government, is as follows: To be liſted, the Perſon muſt be at leaſt ſeventeen Years old: No body could be Queſtor or Treaſurer before ſix and twenty. Thirty Years was required to be choſen a Tribune of the People, or an Ædilis; and at this Age the Patricii, or young Noblemen, were admitted into the Senate. A Man could not be choſen Prætor till five and thirty, nor Conſul till forty three. However, ſometimes Diſpenſations were granted under the Emperors. It appears from Tacitus, that at the Beginning of the Roman Com-

Commonwealth, Offices of the greateſt Dignity and Concern were given without any nice Regard to the Perſon's Age; and thus the Reader may meet with young Conſuls and Dictators. As far as we can learn, the Age for theſe Poſts of Honour and Truſt was not fix'd till the 373d Year of Rome, under the Conſulſhips of Poſthumius Albinus, and C. Calpurnius Piſo. That then, as Livy reports, the Tribune L. Julius got a Bill paſs'd for regulating the Age for Offices. * Antiq. Rom. Roſin.

* AGENOR. Some will have it that Agenor and Belus were Sons of Libya and Neptune, and that this Libya was Io's Daughter, whoſe Father was Taſus, deſcended from Inachus: That Agenor travelled into Europe, married Thelephaſſa, by whom he had four Sons, Phenix, Cilix, Cadmus, and Taſus, and a Daughter called Europa, whom ſome believe was Phenix's Grand-Daughter. This is what Apollodorus relates. But to diſmiſs this Account, which has ſomewhat of a Fabulous Air, and proceed to what looks like Truth; Cadmus built Thebes, 1519 Years before the Incarnation. Phenix and Cylix left their Names upon Phœnicia and Cilicia, and Taſus built Thaſus. About the ſame time, Danaus Son of Belus, and Brother to Agenor, came, as 'tis pretended, from Egypt into Greece. A great many Authors are of Opinion, that Agenor, Cadmus and Danaus, were not of Egyptian, but Phœnician Original. Others report Agenor the Son of Triopas, a King of Argos, and that his Son Grotopus ſucceeded him. It muſt be confeſſed, the Genealogies of theſe very ancient Times are not a little perplex'd; ſo that it's hard to draw a Deſcent without ſome Miſtake. * Marmora Arundeliana. Plutarch. Pauſan. Euſeb.

AGISYMBE, a large Country in Æthiopia beyond the Equator, according to Ptolomy. Some will have it the ſame with Zanguebar. Sanſon, not improbably, believes Agiſymbe is the Country which goes under the Name of Monemugi and Monomotapa. M. Maty, in his Geographical Dictionary publiſhed in 1701, makes Agiſymbe a Town in the Kingdom of Congo: That it ſtands in the Duchy of Batta, upon the River Lelunda, above the Town of S. Salvador, from whence 'tis diſtant threeſcore Miles.

AGNAN, (S.) Biſhop of Orleans in the Fifth Century. In this Prelate's Time, Attila King of the Huns marched into France, plundered the Country, and threatned Orleans with a Siege: Upon this the Biſhop went to Aetius, the Emperor's General, then at Arles, to ſolicite for Succours. Aetius promiſed to ſend him Relief upon the Enemy's Aproach; and ſitting down before the Town, S. Agnan gave the firſt Notice of the Succours March, kept up the Courage of the Garriſon and Burghers; ſo that Attila was forced to raiſe the Siege, and was afterwards routed. 'Tis ſaid that Agrippinas, Governor of Orleans, having recovered his Health by the Benefit of S. Agnan's Prayers, granted him a Diſcharge of all the Priſoners: And that in Memory of what was now done, (by a particular Privilege afterwards granted) the Biſhops of this Town have a Right to releaſe all the Malefactors upon their firſt Day of their coming thither. In Proceſs of Time, this Entry of the Biſhop grew ſtill more honourable; Four Barons of the Duchy of Orleans being obliged, by their Tenure, to carry him in a Chair upon their Shoulders. * Gregor. Turon. Lib. 2. cap. 7. S. Marthe. Gallia Chriſtiana.

AGNES. (S.) The Acts of her Martyrdom, under the Name of S. Ambroſe, being counterfeit, there's nothing to be known certainly of her, but what is reported by Prudentius in his 14th Hymn, and by S. Ambroſe in his Book De Virginitate. Their Account comes to this; That this Girl, at about twelve or thirteen Years of Age, made a noble Confeſſion of Faith at Rome, underwent a great deal of Torture, and was executed at laſt. Prudentius adds, that the Judge finding that Torture could not ſhake her Conſtancy, condemned her to be expoſed without her Cloaths, and that ſhe was preſerved from the Barbarity of this Sentence by a Miracle: The firſt that offered to look on her, being ſtruck blind, fell down half dead. 'Tis ſaid this Proſecution was brought upon her by one that courted her for Marriage, whom ſhe refuſed, and declared unalterably for a ſingle Life. The Time of her Martyrdom is not certainly known. Bollandus reckons it to the Reign of Aurelian, in the Third Century; but Father Ruinart, a Benedictin, thinks the Aſſigning it to the Year 304 moſt probable. S. Jerom ſays in Commendation of her, that her Fortitude conquered her Age, and the barbarous Judge that condemned her; and that ſhe was willing to ſuffer Martyrdom, rather than quit her Reſolution of not living like a Nun. Beata Martyr Agnes, quæ ætatem vicit & tyrannum, & titulum Caſtitatis Martyrio conſecravit. * Hieron. Epiſt. ad Demetriad. Auguſt. Serm. 273. & 354. Martyrologies. Menæon, &c.

AGNO and Clanio, Clanius Fluvius, a River in the Kingdom of Naples: It riſes in the Mountains confining upon the farther Principality, croſſes Terra di Lavoro, runs near Nola and Acerra, makes the Lake of Patria, and then diſcharges itſelf into the Gulph of Gaeta, between the Mouth of the Vulturnus, and the Ruins of Cumæ. Some Maps call this River Patria. * Leandre Alberti, Deſcription of Italy.

AGNOITES, ſo called, becauſe they pretended our Bleſſed Saviour did not know the Day of Judgment: They were a Branch of the Eutychian Sect, and Themiſtius was the firſt who propagated this Miſbelief in the Sixth Century. Eulogius, Patriarch of Alexandria, who lived in the ſame Age, wrote a Tract againſt theſe Agnoitæ, and ſent it to Gregory the Great, who approv'd the Performance. Photius has given an Extract of this Treatiſe, and affirms ſome Monks of Paleſtine were the Beginners of this Hetorodoxy. * Gregor. Magn. Lib. 8. *Epiſt.*42.

* AGOBARDUS, Arch-biſhop of Lyons, a celebrated Prelate in the Ninth Century. At the Council of Attigni, held in the Year 820, he appeared vigorouſly againſt thoſe that ſeized the Revenues of the Church, and afterwards wrote againſt the Encroachment. To this Period his Conduct was unexceptionable; but in the Year 833, he was ſo hardy as to declare againſt his Prince Lewis le Debonair, in Favour of his Son Lotharius, who rebelled upon his Father. Agobardus went ſo far in this ſcandalous Revolution, as to vote the Depoſing of Lewis in the Aſſembly at Compiegne. The Rebellion being broken, and the Emperor reſtored the next Year, his Majeſty got Agobardus depoſed in the Council of Thionville. His Buſineſs was two Years afterwards brought upon the Board, at a Meeting of the States at Stramiac near Lyons; but the Biſhops being not there, there was nothing done. At laſt Lewis le Debonair's Children having got themſelves reconciled to their Father, Agobardus was reſtored to his See, and aſſiſted at a publick Meeting at Paris; and in ſhort, he recovered the Favour of this Emperor. He was both a Learned Divine and an Able Stateſman: He wrote againſt the Worſhip of Images, and ſeems to have been of the Opinion, that it was adviſable to remove them quite out of the way. He wrote againſt the Heterodoxy of Felix Biſhop of Urgel, who held our Bleſſed Saviour was the Son of God by Adoption. He addreſſed the Emperor that the Laws againſt the Jews might be put in Execution: He likewiſe ſolicited the Repeal of Gondebaud's Law, which allowed the deciding Controverſy by ſingle Combat, or by Fire or Water Ordeal. He maintained the Rights and Authority of the Sacerdotal Order, and anſwers the Objection that wicked Prieſts had no Commiſſion to adminiſter the Sacraments. Laſtly, he wrote a Book to diſengage People from a Miſtake then generally followed, that Witches have a Power to raiſe Storms. Papirius Maſſonus publiſhed his Works in 1606. Baluzius printed them again in 1666. This laſt is a very beautiful perfect Edition, and furniſhed with curious Remarks. It has likewiſe the Addition of Agobard's Tract againſt Amalarius's Book De Officiis Divinis. * Ado, Vienn. in Chron. A. C. 810, and 815. Walafridus, Strabo in Carm. apud Caniſium, Antiq. Lect. Papirius Maſſonus, & Baluzius. S. Marthe, Gallia Chriſtiana.

AGONISTARQUE, Agoniſtarcha, a Perſon whoſe Buſineſs it was to ſee the Athletæ exerciſed before the Combat. This Office is mentioned in an Inſcription publiſhed by Ligorius, as follows:

APOLLINI. INVICTO
SACRUM.
M. AURELIUS. M. AUG.
LIB. APOLLONIUS.
AGONISTARCHA. COM
MODIANUS.

The Agoniſtarcha's Office differed from that of the Gymnaſiarcha, being the firſt Perſon in the School of Exer-ciſe: His Buſineſs was likewiſe different from the Præfectus Ludi. The Reader may conſult Mercurialis de Arte Gymnaſtica concerning the Diſtinction of theſe Employments.

AGONISTICKS, a Branch of the Donatiſts in Africk: They committed a great many Diſorders, under the Pretence of ſeeing Juſtice done in Towns and Places where Fairs were kept. Optatus takes notice of them thus; Præcones per vicina loca, & per omnes nundinas miſit circumcelliones, Agoniſticos nuncupant. Optat. Lib. 3. contra Parmen.

AGOUSTA, Auguſta, a ſmall Town in Sicily, but very ſtrong: It ſtands upon the Eaſtern Coaſt of the Iſland, and was built in 1229 by the Emperor Frederick; who three Years after ordered a Citadel to be made to improve the Fortifications. It ſtood at firſt almoſt upon an Iſland, in a very rich Spot of Ground; and to make the Place ſtill ſtronger, the little Iſthmus was cut through in the Sixteenth Century, and a Stone Bridge made for a Communication with the Continent. This Town has a very large Haven, defended by three ſtrong Forts, built upon Rocks in the Sea; ſo that Ships may ride there with all the Security imaginable. 'Twas carried by the French, not without Difficulty, in 1675. But they thought it adviſable to quit it three Years after. This Town was almoſt ſwallowed up by an Earthquake on the 11th of January in 1693. * Cluver. Baudrand.

AGRANA. (Lex) For eight hundred Acres, in Morery Vol. I. read, eighty Acres.

* AGRICOLA, (Cneius Junius) Domitian's General and Vice-Roy in Britain: March'd into the Northern Parts of the Iſland as far as Gramp's-Hill, or Grant's-Baine, defeated Galgagus, General of the Calidonians, in a main Battle; brought this Part of Britain to a Submiſſion, ſailed round the Iſland, and arrived at Richborough in Kent, from whence they ſet out. * Tacit. in Vit. Agric.

* AGRIPPA, (Herodes) was Grand-ſon to Herod the Great. His Uncle Herod Antipas married his Siſter, and was Tetrarch of Galilee when this Herod Agrippa was made King of Judea by Caligula. Herod Antipas, after the Death of Tiberius, loſt his Tetrarchy: For his Wife being an ambitious Lady, affected the Title of Queen, and prevailed with her Huſband to go to Rome for that Diſtinction. But Agrippa had ſo much Intereſt with the Emperor Caligula, that he baniſhed them both to Vienne in Dauphiné. However, out of Regard to Agrippa, he was willing to give his Siſter her Liberty; which ſhe handſomely refuſed, and followed her Huſband's Fortune. * Joſeph. &c.

AGRIPPA, (Vibulenus) a Roman Gentleman, proſecuted for Treaſon by Tiberius, in the Year of Rome 789. Having obſerv'd the Iniquity of the Proceedings at Tryals of this nature, he did not think it worth his while to prolong his Life till Sentence paſs'd, but poiſoned himſelf in the Court before the Evidence had gone through their Charge againſt him. People were much affected with this deſperate Expedient; which Surprize was ſtill increaſed by ſeeing Agrippa, juſt expiring, dragged from the Bar to the Priſon, and ſtrangled there. * Dio Caſſius, Lib. 58. Tacit. Annal. Lib. 6. cap. 40.

AGRIPPINUS, (Paconius) a Stoick Philoſopher, who lived in Nero's Reign. Epictetus and Arrian mention him with great Commendation, for ſhewing himſelf ſo decently undiſturbed when indicted for Treaſon. Agrippinus's Sentence proved only Baniſhment, notwithſtanding he ſhewed the ſame Diſaffection to Arbitrary and Tyrannical Princes, for which his Father ſuffered under Tiberius. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 16. Sueton. in Tiberium, cap. 61.

AGRIPPINUS, Biſhop of Carthage, lived about the End of the Second Century; though neither the Year in which he was promoted to that See, nor the Time of his Death, can certainly be determined. He held a Council at Carthage, where it was decreed, that Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, pretendedly baptized during their Separation from the Church, ſhould have Catholick Baptiſm given them at their Return. This Practice held on in Africk, and a great Number were re-baptized from this Biſhop's time to S. Cyprian. This laſt Prelate maintained the ſame Sentiment againſt Pope Stephen, and kept cloſe to the Deciſion of the Council above mentioned. Some Authors have thought Agrippinus the immediate Predeceſſor to S. Cyprian, and S. Auſtin ſeems to favour this Opinion. But it appears clearly from S. Cyprian himſelf, that Agrippinus lived much higher in Antiquity. Quando multi jam anni ſunt, ſaith this Father, & longa ætas, ex quo, ſub Agrippino bonæ memoriæ viro, convenientes in unum Epiſcopi plurimi, hoc ſtatuerint, &c. That which is particularly remarkable upon this Subject is, that Agrippinus did no more than carry on the Cuſtom ſettled both in Africk and Aſia, and confirm'd by the Councils of Iconium and Synnada, as Firmilian reports in a Letter to S. Cyprian. * Cyprian. Epiſt. 71. & 73. Auguſt. Lib. 3. de Baptiſm. Annal. Cyprian. ad Ann. 248, &c.

AGUIRRE, (Joſeph Saenza) Cardinal, was of the ſame Family with Michael Aguirre: He entred into the Order of the Benedictins when very young, and was conſiderably remarkable for a good Life and Learning. After having been Abbot of the College of S. Vincent at Salamanca, he was firſt choſen Reader upon the Scriptures, and afterwards Cenſor and Secretary to the Council of the Inquiſition in Spain. At laſt, Pope Innocent XI. gave him a Cardinal's Cap in 1686. His Studies were not at all broken by this Promotion: He went on with what he was upon, and publiſh'd a Hiſtory of the Councils of Spain, much larger and better vouched than that which Garcias Loaiſa put out in the Sixteenth Century. He likewiſe publiſhed a Syſtem of Divinity, drawn from the Works of Anſelm Arch-biſhop of Canterbury. His Behaviour was all along Exemplary: His Purple gave him no Tincture of Intereſt or Pride. For Inſtance, he made no Scruple to retract in writing his Opinion of the Doctrine of Probability; being convinced 'twas not agreeable to the Strictneſs of the Chriſtian Morality. He was born the 24th of March 1630, and died at Rome Auguſt the 19th, 1699. His firſt publick Performance in Learning was a Tract entituled, Ludi Salmanticenſes: It contained Theological Diſſertations. In 1671, he printed three Tomes of Philoſophy. Two Years after, he publiſhed a Tract upon Ariſtotle's Morals, and another upon the Vertues and Vices. And in 1683, he printed a Book againſt the Declaration of the French Clergy at their Aſſembly in the Year 1682. 'Tis entituled, Defenſio Cathedræ Sancti Petri. * Memoires du Temps. M. Dupin, Nouvel. Biblioth. XVII. Cent.

AGULANS, a People mentioned by Hiſtorians who wrote the Holy War; they own'd the Saracens for their Sovereigns when the French marched into Syria: Though, after all, 'tis not certain whether they were a Nation or a diſtinguiſhed Party, for they are mentioned with Publicans and Azymites. The Hiſtorian Guibart reports, that theſe Agulans were about three thouſand; that they valued neither Swords, Arrows, nor Lances; themſelves and their Horſes being ſheathed in Iron. As for their Offenſive Weapons, they had nothing but a Ponyard. * Guibart Geſtorum Dei, Lib. 3. cap. 8.

AGYLÆUS, (Henricus) tranſlated Photius's Nomo-Canon. This Verſion, and that of Gentianus Hervetus made before, were printed without the Greek Text. But Agylæus's is preferable to the other for two Reaſons; firſt, there is more in it, being made from an entire Greek Copy; and, 2*dly*, it runs more in the Lawyers Style. Thus, notwithſtanding the Nomo-Canon was firſt printed at Paris in Greek and Latin, with Hervetus's Verſion, and Balſamon's Commentaries, afterwards Henricus Juſtellus, in his Bibliotheca Juris Canonici Veteris, has publiſhed this Nomo-Canon in Greek and Latin, with Agylæus's Tranſlation; to which he has added Photius's Prolegomena, which lay concealed a great while, and at laſt were brought to Light by the Learned Uſher, Arch-biſhop of Ardmagh. In this new Edition, Juſtellus has mark'd the Differences in all the Manuſcripts he had an Opportunity to look into. He has likewiſe made a Supplement, or Addition, of what he thought wanting in the Greek, corrected the Tranſlation where he found it not anſwer the Original, and altered ſome Terms where the Expreſſion upon Subjects of Divinity, was not altogether exact. * Juſtel. in Præfat. Gerard. Voſſ. &c.

AGYLLA, a very old Town in Tuſcany, ſo call'd from its Founder; who, according to Virgil, brought a Colony from Lydia.

Haud procul hinc ſaxo incolitur fundata vetuſto,
Urbis Agyllinæ ſedes, ubi Lydia quondam
Gens bello præclara, jugis inſedit Hetruſcis.

Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus, Lib. 3. and 4. relates, that the Town was built by the Pelaſgans, who came from Theſſaly.

Lyco-

Lycophron, Livy, and Halicarnaſſeus, deſcribe it Rich and Powerful: It was afterwards call'd Cap, and now Cervetæra. Virg. Æneid. 8.

AHMED, (Khan,) Son of Holagu, and Brother to Abaka, whom he ſucceeded, was the ninth Emperor of the Moguls, of the Family of Ganghis Khan. 'Tis the ſame Perſon with Nicoudar Oglan: He was the firſt of the Moguls that turn'd Mahometan; and after receiving this new Religion, took the Name of Ahmed. He wrote a long Letter to Sultan Almaleck Almanzer Kellaon, Sovereign of Egypt and Syria, and at that time the moſt conſiderable Muſſelman Prince. The Purport of Ahmed's Letter was to give him an Account of his Converſion; that he reſolv'd to declare publickly for Mahometaniſm, and give Countenance and Protection to all thoſe of that Religion: He ſucceeded his Brother Abaka to the diſinheriting of Argoun, his Brother Abaka's Son. This Sultan's changing his Religion, occaſion'd great Diſturbances in the Kingdom, and embroil'd him with his own Family, for the Moguls or Tartars had then a ſtrong Inclination for the Chriſtian Religion; inſomuch that this Prince, tho' commendable enough in ſeveral reſpects, could never gain them to his Intereſt. His Government was ruffled in the firſt Year of his Poſſeſſion, which makes the 1282d Year of the Incarnation; for Argoun, Son of Abaka, being uneaſy at Ahmed's uſurping his Throne, retir'd into the Province of Khoraſan, where he made what Preparation he thought neceſſary to attack his Uncle, but did not aſſert his Right openly till the Year after. Ahmed, advertis'd of theſe Commotions, order'd his Troops to march under the Command of Alinak, a brave and experienc'd General, who ſoon diſperſed the Troops that Argoun had drawn together. This young Prince being thus unfurniſhed with an Army, was oblig'd to retire toward Khoraſan, and ſhut himſelf up in the Caſtle of Burdeah, where Alinak was quickly with him. However, he did not think it proper to apply to Force, but made Argoun believe he could reſtore him to his Uncle's Favour: Upon this Aſſurance Argoun ſurrender'd himſelf, and was convey'd to the Sultan's Camp; but as ſoon as he came there, his Uncle order'd him to be ſecur'd, and a Guard of four thouſand clapt upon him. Ahmed now fancying himſelf diſentangled, and out of Danger, reſolv'd to return to Bagdet to live at his Eaſe, and reſign himſelf to his Pleaſure. Before he went off, he order'd the Emir Bouga, who had the Charge of Argoun, not to let him live above a Week: But this Emir Bouga, with a great many other Court-Lords, not being pleas'd with the Sultan's unactive and voluptuous way of Living, reſolv'd to enlarge Argoun, and fall upon Alinak's Quarters. This Reſolution being immediately executed, Alinak was ſurpriz'd and kill'd with the Sultan's Principal Officers. Argoun putting himſelf at the Head of his beſt Troops, purſued the Sultan, who receiving Advice of what paſs'd, got off from Effarain where his Mother Coutai-Khatoun was encamp'd, near Serab in the Province of Adherbigian; but ſome of Argoun's Horſe purſu'd ſo hard, that they quickly overtook him, and brought him to Argoun's Camp. This Prince put him into the Hands of the Sultaneſs Kongurtai, his Mother-in-Law, whoſe Children Ahmed had put to Death. This Princeſs having ſuch a Revenge in her Power, had him quickly executed: This happened in the Year of our Lord 1284. * D' Herbelot. Biblioth. Orientale.

AICSTADT, Aiſtadienſis, or Quercu Politanus Epiſcopatus, a little State in the Circle of Franconia in Germany; it reaches in Length from Eaſt to Weſt upon the River Alt-Mul fifty four Miles; the Breadth is but ſmall, about fifteen Miles towards the Eaſt Quarrer, and nine in the Weſt: 'Tis a fruitful Country, tho' Woody in ſome Places. On the Weſt, 'tis bounded with the Marquiſate of Anſpach, and on the Eaſt with the Duchy of Newburgh and the Palatinate of Bavaria. The principal Towns are Gunzenhauſen, Dolmſtein, and Aicſtadt; the Capital Weiſemburgh, tho' within this Biſhoprick, is a Free Imperial Town. The Biſhoprick of Aicſtadt is Suffragan to the Archbiſhops of Mentz; one of which founded it in the Year 748. This Biſhop is a Prince of the Empire, and the Cathedral Chapter conſiſts of a Dean and ſixteen Canons. * Maty, Diction. Geograph.

* AIDAN, born in Ireland, in the Seventh Century: He was ſent by a Synod of the Scots Clergy to convert the Engliſh in Oſwald King of Northumberland's Dominions. At his coming to Oſwald's Court, and being ſucceſsful in his Miſſionary Employment, he deſir'd the Biſhop's See might be fix'd in Holy Iſland. Before he went off, he receiv'd the Epiſcopal Character from a Scots Synod; and now the Buſineſs of Religion under Aidan's Conduct and Application went happily forward; the Audiences were numerous, and Churches built in ſeveral Places: Lands were granted by the King for Support of Monaſteries, and a great many of the Engliſh put themſelves under the Diſcipline of the Religious Societies. This way of living might probably be recommended to them by the Scottiſh Miſſionaries, who were moſt of them Monks; Aidan himſelf being of that Order, and belonging to the Monaſtery of Hii or Iona. As for his Practice and Behaviour, 'twas particularly ſerviceable and engaging; he lived up to his Doctrine, and made his Example wonderfully ſignificant. He minded nothing of Secular Intereſt, and was, as it were, dead to the Common Satisfactions. Whatever the King or any Perſons of Fortune or Figure gave him, he generally gave away to the Poor; whoever he met with, whether Rich or Poor, he uſed to apply himſelf to them: If they were Pagans, he inſtructed them in the Principles of Chriſtianity, and attempted their Converſion. If they were Chriſtians, he confirm'd them in their Faith, and preſs'd a ſuitable Practice. He likewiſe took care that all thoſe that travell'd with him, whether Clergy or Laity, ſhould ſpend a conſiderable time in reading the Holy Scriptures. Aidan, notwithſtanding his Succeſs and admirable Qualifications, did not keep Eaſter as the Feſtival was ſettled by the Council of Nice, but govern'd himſelf by the Eaſtern Practice, prior to that Synod, and which was ſtill follow'd by the Scots, Picts and Britans. Aidan died in the Year VCLI. * Bede, Lib. 3. Cap. 3. Malmsbur. de Geſt. Reg. Ang. Lib. 1. Huntington. Hiſtor. Lib. 3.

AJAX. The Emperor Auguſtus attempted a Tragedy of this Name: He began with great Fancy and Inclination; but not liking his Performance, he blotted what he had written; and being asked what had become of his Ajax, his Anſwer was, In ſpongiam incubuit. And here the Jeſt lay in the Ambiguity of the Word; Spongia ſignifying both a Spunge and a Dagger. * Sueton. See Engliſh Morery Vol. I.

AIGLE, ad Aquilas, Aquila, a Town in Germany in the Dioceſe of Cleves, on the Moſelle, over againſt the Mouth of the Sare, two Leagues above Treves; to which 'tis ſaid to have formerly been a Suburb. In this ſmall Town there is a very ancient Mauſoleum ſeventy Foot high, and in a Pyramidal Figure. * Maty, Diction. Geograph.

AIGLE, Aquila, ad Aquilas, a ſmall Borough in Switzerland, near the Country of Vallais and the Lake of Leman; 'tis the Head of a Government call'd Les Quatre Mandemens d' Aigle. It belongs to the Canton of Berne. * Maty, Diction. Geogr.

AIGLE-NOIR, (or the Black Eagle) an Order of Knighthood, inſtituted (January 18, 1701.) by Frederick Marquis of Brandenburgh, Elector of the Empire: The Deſign was to give a Luſtre to his Coronation, when he made himſelf King of Pruſſia at Koningsberg the ſame Day. The Collar of the Order is an Azure Croſs bordered with black Eagles, and tied with an Orange-colour'd Ribbon, which falls from the Left Shoulder under the Right Arm; the Motto is, Suum cuique, Let every Man have his own. The Statutes made for this Military Society are printed in Folio in High Dutch, in which the Medals, the Habits, and Ornaments of theſe Knights, together with their Arms and Seal, are inſerted. This Prince made twenty Knights at his Coronation, who were Princes, or ſome others of the beſt Quality in his Court. * Memoires du Temps.

AIR. The ancient Heathens deify'd this Element, and Anaximenes the Mileſian, and Diogenes Apolloniates, maintained it the Sovereign Being. Tully and S. Auguſtin have taken Pains to confute thoſe Philoſophers. S. Auguſtin affirms theſe two learned Men deify'd the Air, becauſe they believed an Infinite Intelligence pervaded every Part of it, and that was likewiſe furniſh'd with a vaſt Number of Finite Spirits. This Opinion is much the ſame with that of the Platoniſts, who held God the Soul of the World, and that every Part of the Univerſe was ſtock'd with Spirits. The Aſſyrians and Africans call the Air Juno, or Venus Urania. With the Egyptians, the Air went under the Name of Minerva, Minerva, and was worſhiped with the ſame religious Regard paid to this pretended Deity. Diodorus Siculus has given an intelligible Explication of this Egyptian Myſtery: He obſerves they call the Air Minerva; that ſhe was Jupiter's Daughter, and a Virgin, becauſe this Element is not ſubject to Corruption, and that 'tis lodg'd in the Upper Part of the World; which Situation gave Riſe to the Fable, that Minerva was born of Jupiter's Brain: They gave her blue Eyes, becauſe the Air appears of that Colour. The Greeks and Romans called the Air both Jupiter and Juno. The reaſon of this double Diſtinction, was their obſerving two different Qualities in the Air; the one Active and Maſculine, the other Paſſive and Feminine. Thus Seneca, in his Natural Queſtions, tells us, Aera Marem judicant, qua ventus eſt, Fœminam qua nebuloſus & iners. 'Tis true, in their Natural Philoſophy, Juno commonly goes for the Air: And Tully explains the Fable thus; Aer, ut Stoici diſputant, inter mare & cœlum, Junonis nomine conſecratur, quæ eſt Soror & Conjux Jovis, quod ei ſimilitudo eſt Ætheris & cum eo ſumma conjunctio. Thus the Reaſon of Jupiter and Juno's Marriage is, becauſe the Sky and the Air are of a reſembling Nature, and in a cloſe Union with each other. * Julius Firmicus. Lib. de Error. Profan. Relig. Diodor. Sicul. Cic. de Nat. Deor.

AITZEMA, (Leon Van) a Gentleman of Weſt-Friezland, born at Doccum in the Year 1600; he was Reſident for the Hans Towns at the Hague. He wrote a Hiſtory of the United Provinces, very ſerviceable to thoſe employed in Publick Affairs; for here the Treaties of Peace, the Inſtructions and Memoirs of Ambaſſadors, the Letters and Anſwers of Sovereign Princes and States, the Capitulations of Towns and other publick Inſtruments, are tranſcrib'd verbatim from the Originals. Sometimes theſe State and Hiſtory Papers are inſerted in the Language in which they were written, with a Flemiſh Tranſlation; ſometimes without a Verſion, and ſometimes the Original is omitted, and only tranſlated into Flemiſh; and in ſome Places theſe Memoirs appear in a Foreign Language, without advertizing the Reader whether Originals or not. There has been two Editions of this Work; the firſt begins at the End of the Truce concluded between Spain and the United Provinces, reaches from the Year 1621 to 1625. The Second Edition, in Seven Volumes in Folio, was printed in 1669 and 1671. The laſt of theſe Volumes furniſhes a General Table for the other Six, with a Relation of the Peace of Munſter; together with another Treaty call'd, the Lion Reſtored. This laſt gives a Recital of what paſs'd in the United Provinces in 1650 and in 1651, with reference to ſome Poſts of Importance fill'd upon the ſetting aſide the Prince of Orange. Wickfort, in his Treatiſe of an Ambaſſador, Tom. I. p. 172, gives this Character of Aitzema's Performance. His Hiſtory, ſaith he, may ſerve for an Index or Repertorium to thoſe who can't come at the Publick Records; but then there is neither Method nor Style in that Part of the Book which is of his own Compoſing. This is commonly the Fault of thoſe who pretend to write Hiſtory in Holland, when they go upon this Buſineſs without Publick Order or Permiſſion; for in ſuch Caſes, there is neither Judgment nor Truth in what they produce. Notwithſtanding this Criticiſm, the Hiſtory is certainly a very uſeful Book, and the Author is particularly obſerv'd to report Diſputes concerning Religion in a very impartial Manner. * Bayle Dict. Hiſtor. Bernard dans la Table Alphabetique des Livres miſe au devant du Recueil des Traitez de Paix, en 4 Volumes in Folio.

AIUS, or Locutius, a pretended Deity, to whom the Romans built a Temple in their New-Street: 'Twas upon this Occaſion, "One Nœrus Ceditius, a Peaſant, gave No-"tice to the Tribune, that as he happened to walk thro' "the New-Street in the Night, he heard a Voice bigger "than Humane from the Top of Veſta's Temple, who "gave Warning that the Gauls were marching for Rome." This Notice, tho' neglected for the Meanneſs of the Perſon, was made good in the Event. Camillus therefore propos'd, that to remove the ill Conſequences of giving ſuch a Provocation to the Gods, they ought to acknowledge this admoniſhing Voice for a new Deity, under the Name of Aius, or Locutius; and to erect an Altar, and offer up Sacrifices to him. Afterwards, when the Town was demoliſh'd by the Gauls, and 'twas debated in the Senate, whether they ſhould quit Rome and tranſplant themſelves to Veii in Hetruria, or ſettle upon the Place and rebuild it; it happen'd when this Point was under Deliberation, that ſome Troops marching by, one of the Captains cry'd out with a loud Voice at Aius's Temple, Enſign, plant your Colours here, for this is a better Place for us than any other. This unexpected Motion carry'd their Veneration ſtill higher for their Deity Locutius, and made them reckon him the Titular or Guardian Spirit of the Town. * Livy, Lib. 5. cap. 50. Cicer. Lib. 2. de Divinat. Valer. Maxim. Lib. 1. cap. 7. Plutarch in Vit. Camill.

AKIBA, Pezron pretends he has alter'd the Hebrew Text in the Scripture, concerning the Length of the Patriarchs Lives: That the Deſign of this Falſification, was to make People believe the Time for the Appearing of the Meſſiah was not yet come; becauſe, according to the Jewiſh Tradition, Chriſt was not to appear till the World had laſted ſix thouſand Years; but this Cenſure of Pezron is without any good Grounds. Akiba, as the Jews relate, lived a hundred and twenty Years. 'Tis affirm'd by ſome, that he counterfeited a Book under Abraham's Name concerning the Creation; and that he was the firſt who put the Deuteroſes or Jewiſh Traditions in Writing. * Baron.

* ALCANTARA. Expunge in Morery Vol. I. and was ruined by Pompey's Captains.

ALABASTER, (William) an Engliſh Divine, born in the Sixteenth Century, at Hadley in Suffolk; he was Chaplain to the Earl of Eſſex at the Expedition of Cadiz. 'Tis thought the Pomp and Religious Decorations in the Churches of the Roman Catholicks, and the Regard they paid to the Sacerdotal Character, gave him the firſt Thoughts of going over thither. Theſe Diſpoſitions being cultivated by his new Acquaintance, they made what they call a Convert of him; but upon Experience, not finding his Account in this Change, and diſliking the exceſſive Regard paid to Saints, Angels and Images, he return'd to England and his firſt Religion. Here, after ſome time, he was made Canon of S. Paul's, and Rector of Tharfield in Hertfordſhire. He was a very good Hebrician, but had his Jugment miſled by ſtudying and admiring the Cabbaliſts. Of this Misfortune, he gave too much Proof in his Sermon when he commenced Doctor in Divinity at Cambridge; he took his Text out of the 1ſt Chapter of the Chronicles, Verſe the 1ſt. Adam, Seth, Enoch. Here, after having ſkim'd over the Literal Senſe, he run upon the Myſtick, aſſerting, that Adam in this Place ſignified Misfortune and Miſery; interpreting the reſt of his Text in this ſingular precarious manner. Francis Garaſſe, a Jeſuite, falls upon Alabaſter in his Doctrine Curieuſe, printed in 1623. 'Tis upon the Expedient Garaſſe makes uſe of to diſentangle himſelf from the Objection, touching the three Days and three Nights that our Saviour was to remain in the Heart of the Earth, as Jonas did in the Whale's Belly. "Alabaſter's Expoſition, "ſays this Jeſuite, is ſtill more remote from common "Senſe: This Expoſitor founds himſelf upon Rabbinical "Fancies; which, were they as ſolid in Truth, as they "are ſubtle in the Contrivance, would be pleaſant "enough. Upon theſe Authorities, Alabaſter in his "Apparatus affirms, that Jonas and our Saviour remained "exactly three Days and three Nights, the one in the Heart "of the Earth, and the other in the Whale's Belly, in the "following manner; Jonas, ſays he, was carry'd to the "Center of the Earth, as himſelf declar'd. Ad extre-"ma montium deſcendi, & terræ vectes circumdederunt me." For being thus deep in the Earth, he had Day and "Night all at once: For looking towards our Hemiſ-"phere, he had Day in his Face, and Night at his Back; "and the next Day the Tables were turn'd, and the "Proſpect contrary. The Inference is, that having "remain'd but a Day and a half in this Condition, ac-"cording to common Computation, by this nice Specu-"lation he muſt have been three Days at the Center, "becauſe he had all that at one time which we have by "Succeſſion. Thus our Bleſſed Saviour, being in the "Heart of the Earth, had, like Jonas, Day and Night "together, in regard his Soul went as far as the Center "of the Earth, that he might have Day on one ſide "and Night on the other; that by this means he might "ſhorten his State of Separation, without ſtraining Truth, "or prejudicing the Prophecy; ſo very deſirous he was "to viſit his Diſconſolate Diſciples. Now, continues "this Jeſuite, this Expoſition wreſts the Holy Scripture, "is altogether forced and whimſical, and reſembles the "Reveries of the Rabbins. 'Twas not therefore without

"Reaſon,

" Reaſon, that this Book was condemn'd at Rome". Bonfrerius, in his Prolegomena to his Commentary upon the Pentateuch, printed in 1620, is no leſs ſevere upon Alabaſter: His Apparatus in Revelationem Jeſu Chriſti was printed in 1607. He likewiſe wrote Spiraculum Tuborum, ſeu Fons Spiritualium Expoſitionum ex æquivocis Pentaglotti Significationibus. Ecce Sponſus venit ſeu Tuba Pulchritudinis, hoc eſt Demonſtratio quod non ſit illicitum, nec impoſſible computare durationem mundi, & tempus ſecundi adventus Chriſti. Lexicon Hebraicum in Folio. * Fuller's Worthies, &c.

ALADULIA, a Province of Natolia in Aſia, ſituate between Amaſia to the North, and Caramania to the Weſt; and lying upon the Mediterranean to the South and Eaſt. Euphrates and the Mountains of Amanus part it from Turcomania, from Diarbeck, and Syria; it comprehends Armenia the Leſſer of the Ancients, and the Eaſtern Part of Cilicia. Aladulia was formerly governed by Kings of its own; but the Turkiſh Emperor Selim I. ſeized it, after having beheaded Uſtiagel, their laſt Prince, who was betrayed by his General, and put into the Sultan's Hands. Aladulia at preſent is parted into two Moieties; the Northern Diviſion lying between Taurus and Euphrates, is a Beglerberg or Government, called Maraſch, from its Capital: The Southern Part is ſituated between Mount Taurus and the Mediterranean, where the moſt remarkable Towns are Ajazzo, and Adena. 'Tis joined to the Beglerberg of Aleppo. * Baudrand.

ALAIN, (John) Johannes Alanus, a Dane, born in 1563, and died in 1630: He wrote a Treatiſe of the Original of the Cimbri, and their different Sentiments; Of Natural and Artificial Logick; of the Pronunciation of the Greek Tongue; An Apology for Saxo Grammaticus, againſt Goropius Becanus. * Vindingius in Rectorib. Hafniæ. Geo. Math. Konig. Biblioth. vetus & nova.

ALATORF, Olotief, and Anaetoa, Alatopha, Alatutha, Anætoa; a great Chain of Mountains, which M. Weitzſen has put in his New Map of Tartary. They reach from the Country of Paſcatir, near the Head of Jaick, almoſt to the Mouth of that River, all along the Eaſtern Bank. Alatorf has different Names, according to the different Countries the Mountains reach thorough. In Putkatir or Paſcatir 'tis called Oeralsk, Oelotawa, Eural, or Yſer Geberchte, that is, the Iron Mountain: Over againſt the Lake of Jaick, they call it Soramtowa. Towards the South, Weitzſen places Sout-Bergen, that is to ſay, the Mountains of Salt; and after them lie thoſe of Eurack. M. Weitzſen obſerves the Northern Part of theſe Mountains is a fruitful Country; and that 'tis furniſhed with Mines of Iron, with Cryſtal, and Quarries of Alablaſter: And here he places the Mountains which the Ancients called Rhamici, or Rhimnici Montes.

ALAUTA, Aluta, a great River in European Turky. It riſes in the Carpathian Mountains, in the Northern Parts of Tranſylvania, near the little Town of Czyk. From thence it runs near Braſſow and Hermanſtadt: From thence into Moldavia, where it runs by the Town of Alauta, and diſcharges itſelf into the Iſter between Widdin and Nicopolis. * Baudrand.

ALBA, or Alva (Ferdinand Alvarez de Toledo, Duke of) was born in 1508. His Father was Garſias Duke of Alva, and his Mother Beatrix de Pimentel, Daughter to the Earl of Beneventum. Garſias being killed in a Battle againſt the Moors, his Son Ferdinand was bred under his Grandfather, who took great Care of his Education: He had but a ſlender Fancy for learning Latin: He was afraid Study would emaſculate him, and that he ſhould reſemble ſome People of Quality, who dozed away their Life, and had nothing but Learning to value themſelves upon. His Inclination lay wholly for the Profeſſion of Arms. The Narrative of a Battle was a great Pleaſure to him, and the moſt frightful Stories of Danger did not make him the leaſt afraid. His Grandfather, who was General againſt the French and the Navarrois, carried him into the Field when he was a Child; and here it was he learned his Martial Exerciſes. He made his firſt Campaign at ſixteen Years of Age, under the Conſtable of Caſtile, who beſieged the French in Fontarabia. He was very ſerviceable in the taking this Place, and was made Governor of it. His Grandfather died in 1527; and the next Year the young Duke married Mary Henriquez, Daughter to Don Diego Henriquez Count of Alba, by Katharine de Toledo his firſt Wife. In 1531, he attended Charles the V. into Germany, whither this Emperor march'd to ſtop the Incurſions of the Sultan Solyman. The Duke of Alva being come up with the Army as far as Hungary, he threw himſelf entirely into the Friendſhip of Count Nadaſti. He followed this great General through all his Motions, and learned his Martial Skill. Solyman being beaten out of Hungary, the Duke returned into Spain with the Emperor. And now Part of his Buſineſs was the Education of his eldeſt Son Frederick: And having formed this Youth to his Satisfaction, he carried him along with him to the Conqueſt of Tunis, whither he was ordered to go with Charles V. and where this Duke contributed very much to the Succeſs of this Expedition. Not long after, the Emperor undertook the Siege of Marſeilles againſt Alva's Advice, who would have had his Majeſty ſit down firſt before Lyons, a rich populous Town, but not fortified. He likewiſe repreſented that the Carrying this Place would in all likelihood oblige Francis I. King of France, to make a Peace upon any Conditions. But the Duke's Opinion not being approved, he was forced to obey. He paſſed the Alps at the Head of the Guards, the whole Army quickly marching after him. When he came before Marſeilles, he examined the Place, and immediately foretold a Diſappointment. And thus firmly believing the Town would not be taken, he made a farther Attempt to diſſuade the Enterprize, but to no purpoſe. In ſhort, the Siege was undertaken, and afterwards raiſed: The Air being unhealthy, threw a Sickneſs into the Army, which carried off a great Part of the Troops. The Emperor countermarched into Italy, and from thence returned to Spain, after having had an Interview with Francis I. at Aigues-Mortes. The Duke attended his Majeſty every where, and proved very ſerviceable at the Council-Board. For now Charles V. valued his Advice more than ever, in regard of his late Miſcarriage, for not following it. His Majeſty having taken a Reſolution to go for Germany, much diſunited by Luther's Doctrine, and ready to break out in a Civil War, he choſe to leave the Duke in Spain, being apprehenſive the French might give ſome Diſturbance on that ſide, and likewiſe thinking it adviſable to leave ſo ſignificant a Perſon with his Son Philip; this young Prince being commanded at the ſame time to reſign to the Duke's Advice, no leſs than if there had been Orders received from his Father. Theſe firſt Commotions in Germany, being quickly quieted, gave Charles V. Leiſure to undertake the famous Expedition againſt Algier. The Duke was ordered to go along with his Majeſty, and make every thing ready for the Undertaking. He executed his Orders with ſuch Diſpatch, that in a little time a Fleet of two hundred Sail was ready to embarque and ſail; the Troops having five thouſand young Gentlemen amongſt them. But by good Luck, this Army did not immediately go aboard: The Men being many of them new-raiſed, the Duke was deſirous to exerciſe them through the Forms of Diſcipline. Now this Buſineſs taking up ſome time, he could not follow the Emperor ſo ſoon as might be expected. In the mean time Charles's Fleet was wreck'd, and his Majeſty forced to come back with leſs than ten thouſand Men out of the fourſcore thouſand he had put aboard. This Misfortune reconciled him to the Duke's ſlower Motions. In the Year 1542, Francis I. having declared War againſt Charles the V. Alva was made General of the Army againſt the French; and here he executed his Commiſſion to great Commendation, covered Catalonia from the Enemy's Incurſions, preſerved Perpignan, and with a handful of Men baffled all the Attemps of the French. At his Return to Court, he married his eldeſt Son Frederick de Toledo, Marquis of Coria, to Hieronyma de Arragon, Daughter to the Duke of Corduba. The Diſappointment at the Siege of Perpignan did not rebate the Courage of the French; and beſides, the Princes of Germany ſeem'd to threaten a Revolt. This being the Face of Affairs, Charles V. reſolved for Germany. At his going off, he left the Government of his Dominions to his Son Philip, and entruſted the Duke of Alva with the Command of his Troops for the Defence of Spain. He likewiſe made the Duke Preſident of the Council, and enjoined Philip to be governed by his Advice. But his Managing at the Helm in Spain proved but ſhort; the Diſturbances in Germany riſing to a menacing Appearance, the Emperor thought it neceſſary to have him with him. Upon this, he was commanded to join his Majeſty in Flanders, where he was made Great-Maſter of the Houſhold, and Generaliſſimo of the Imperial Forces. The War flaming out in Germany, and the Proteſtants taking the Field with a formidable Army, manag'd ſo negligently in Confidence of their Strength, and the Duke hitting the Blot, and making his Advantages of their Miſconduct, brought the Emperor almoſt to as great a Superiority before Winter, as he was inferior to the Enemy in the beginning of the Campaign. His Majeſty carried ſeveral Towns upon a Siege, and forced a great many others to ſurrender without being attack'd, none but the Duke of Wirtemberg refuſing a Submiſſion. The Duke of Alva having Orders to bring him to, marched at the Head of a ſtrong Detachment, over-run all the Country of Wirtemberg with Fire and Sword, carried off a vaſt deal of Plunder, with which he remounted and cloathed his Soldiers, paid them their Arrearages, and gave them ſeveral Months Pay by way of Advance. The Duke of Wirtemberg, frightned with this terrible Ravage, offered to ſubmitt. The Duke of Alva was of Opinion, he ought not to be received, but his Advice was not taken. However, the Emperor offered him the Duchy of Wirtemberg, which he refuſed, and ſuggeſted to his Maſter the beſtowing it upon ſome Prince of the Houſe of Auſtria, which the Emperor would not do. Thus the Duke of Wirtemberg remained poſſeſs'd of his Duchy, only delivering up three of the principal Caſtles as Security for his good Behaviour. To proceed, Charles V's getting the Victory at Mulberge, was chiefly owing to the Duke of Alva. This General, who till now had prudently avoided a Battle, declared for paſſing the Elb, on the other ſide of which River the Duke of Saxony was intrenched. Alva was one of the firſt that threw himſelf into the Water, to encourage his Troops. In ſhort, the Duke of Saxony was beaten, and taken Priſoner, andthe Gaining this Battle put the Emperor in a Condition to give Law to his Enemies. 'Twas ſaid, that the Day of the Fight, and a little before, there appeared ſeveral Prodigies. Upon this Report, when the Duke was afterwards at the Court of France, Henry II. aſked him, If he perceived the Sun ſtood ſtill that Day: To which the Duke anſwered, That he was ſo buſy in minding what paſs'd upon the Ground, that he had no Leiſure to obſerve the Sky. The Emperor reſolving to deprive the Elector of Saxony of his Title and Dominions, was inclinable to beſtow them upon Maurice Duke of Saxony, to whom they had been promiſed. The Duke of Alva did what he could to diſſuade him from this Diſpoſition: He ſuggeſted that this Prince was altogether unworthy his Majeſty's Bounty: That to believe Maurice would be true, and acknowledging, was to look but a little way into the Politicks; for this Prince, by coming into the Emperor's Intereſt, had broke through his Conſcience and Religion. In ſhort, he foretold all Maurice's Miſbehaviour to the Emperor. But his Majeſty having paſſed his Word, thought himſelf indiſpenſably obliged to make it good. Thus Peace being reſtored in Germany, the Emperor reſolved to ſend for his Son Philip, the Duke of Alva having the Charge of conveying him thither. This Prince was ordered by his Father, that in his Paſſage through Italy, where the Princes would entertain him, when he admitted any of them to his Table, the Duke of Alva ſhould have the ſame Honour. But this Nobleman being a Perſon of Thought, declined appearing in great Towns, where the Princes of Italy eat with Philip, either becauſe he was apprehenſive Philip might refuſe him this Regard, notwithſtanding the Emperor's Orders; or elſe he was willing to guard againſt Envy, and drawing the Diſaffection of the Firſt Quality upon him. When Philip returned into Spain, the Duke was commanded to attend him; and by this means he eſcaped the Misfortune of being at the Emperor's Retreat from Maurice Duke of Saxony. Alva, upon his Arrival in Spain, retired to his Eſtate, being unpleaſed with Philip's ſtiff poſitive Temper, and reſolved not to flatter his Pride. But he was quickly called off from this Privacy, and ordered to march with a conſiderable Force to the Emperor, who had now great Occaſion for his Aſſiſtance. When his Majeſty was informed of Alva's Arival, he fetch'd a deep Sigh, and ſpeaking to his Officers and Court about him, he told them, they had ſhown their Loyalty in following him in his Flight; but if the Duke of Alva had been there, (ſaid he) he would have attended me in my Victory. The Emperor having made the Peace of Paſſaw, turned all his Force againſt France. He ſat down before Metz, notwithſtanding the Duke did his utmoſt to diſſuade him; and here, after ſeveral unſucceſsful Efforts, where this General did all that could be expected from a Man of Capacity and Courage, they were forced to riſe before the Town. The Duke ſpent the Winter at Bruſſels with the Emperor, who carried on the War againſt France. And now Alva could not be ſpared from his Majeſty to command the Army: But after ſome Stay at the Court, was diſpatch'd to Spain to direct Philip in his Meaſures, and convoy him into England, where he was to marry Queen Mary. The Duke was afterwards ſent into the Duchy of Milan and Kingdom of Naples, to command the Army there, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf upon ſeveral Occaſions. The Emperor had now reſigned the Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, and the Duchy of Milan, to his Son Philip, whoſe Court was then divided into two Parties. The Duke of Alva was at the Head of one of them; and Roderic Mendez de Silva, Prince of Eboli, headed the other. This Prince was a Perſon of Addreſs, and of a bending complaiſant Humour, and one that could ſpeak very well. If what ſome Hiſtorians report of him is true, he gained his Maſter's Affection by the moſt ſcandalous Compliance, and that the Share of Favour he had was owing to an Intrigue which Philip had with Eboli's Wife, and to the ſcandalous Correſpondence encouraged by her Huſband. On the other ſide, the Duke of Alva's Temper was free, reſolute, and averſe to Flattery: His briſk and unceremonious Behaviour, diſobliged his Enemies, and ſometimes gave Diſguſt to Philip himſelf. Now the Duke appearing a formidable Rival, the Prince of Eboli always took Care of removing him from the Court, upon Pretence of ſome Honourable Employment; and the French having made a great Progreſs in the Duchy of Milan, Roderic de Mendez procured the Duke the Management of this War. He was made Viceroy of Naples, Governor of the Duchy of Milan, General of the Troops in Italy; and all this with larger Powers in his Commiſſion, than had ever been granted to Viceroys and Generals. But the Affairs of Milan were in a very ill Condition; the Money which was promiſed the Duke, was not ſent him; the Remittance being ſtopt by the Intrigues of the Prince of Eboli. Want of Pay in the Army, made the German Troops mutiny, ſo that the Duke could do nothing conſiderable, making but a faint Oppoſition againſt the French; who, beſides their other Succeſſes, took Vulpian, notwithſtanding Alva's utmoſt Efforts to prevent the Loſs of that Place. While he was preparing to revenge the Diſgraces of this Campaign, he underſtood the Emperor, the Courts of England and France, had concluded a Ceſſation of Arms for five Years; and now Philip II. was King of Spain by the Emperor his Father's Reſignation. Soon after, Pope Paul IV. breaking with his Catholick Majeſty, and bringing Henry II. of France into his Intereſt, the War re-commenced in Italy, and the Conduct of it was put into the Duke of Alva's Hands, who marched into Naples, where the Enemy were likely to appear moſt formidable. He prevailed with the Great Duke of Tuſcany to come into the Spaniſh Intereſt, having perſuaded Philip to give him Piombino. He omitted no Expedient to diſpoſe the Pope to a Peace: But this proving impracticable, he thought it beſt to be beforehand with the French. To this purpoſe he marched his Army into the Territories of the Church, took Anagnia, Tivoli, Oſtia, and ſeveral other Places. Theſe Succeſſes put Rome into a great Conſternation, and made them think upon fortifying the Town.

In the Year 1557, the French King ſent the Duke of Guiſe to command his Army in Piedmont. This General having failed in his Attempt upon the Bridge of Sture, beſieged Valencia, and took it; and having traverſed the Milanoiſe, joined the Pope's Troops, made the Town of Rome eaſy, retook Oſtia, and ſeveral other Places carried by the Duke of Alva the Campaign before: And here the Spaniſh Governors of theſe Towns were ſeverely puniſhed for not doing their Duty; Alva in the mean time making a vigorous Preparation to oppoſe the Enemy, who now ſeem'd to have Fortune on their ſide. He furniſhed the Garriſons which lay moſt expoſed with Ammunition, and levy'd Troops to put them in a Condition to keep the Field: This laſt was done with the three Millions of Crowns the Third Eſtate of Naples offered him, of which he refuſed to take any more than the the Moiety. As for the great Lords, he not only took what they preſented him with, but laid a Tax upon them over and above: For the making them poor, he thought a good Expedient to ſecure them againſt a Revolt. To keep the Great Duke of Tuſcany in the Spaniſh Intereſt, he diſpoſed Philip II. to yield Siena, with the Dependencies, to that Prince. He was ſo well ſkilled in making Advantage of the Juncture, that the French, who flattered themſelves with the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Naples, made very ſlow Advances in that Country. This ill Succeſs brought them to a Miſunderſtanding: The Duke of Guiſe laid all the Fault of the Miſcarriage upon the Caraffa's, the Pope's Nephews. He beſieged Civitella to no purpoſe, and one of the Detachments of his Army was beaten. This Train of ill Luck made him reſolve upon quitting the Kingdom of Naples. Colonna, one of the Spaniſh Generals, defeated the Troops of the Church, and afterwards took Segni, where the Soldiers carried off a great Booty; the Town ſurrendring at Diſcretion, being plundered. Theſe Misfortunes terrified the Burghers of Rome, and brought them to deſire a Treaty. The Duke of Alva ſeeming diſinclined to this Propoſal, marched immediately into the Territories of the Church, and reſolved to finiſh the War with all Expedition. And now, after ſeveral Advantages, he determines for taking of Rome: And every thing being ready for the Enterprize, and the Night for the Attack come, the Scouts diſpatched to examine the Condition of the Place made their Report, that the Burghers were in a profound Security, and apprehenſive of nothing. But notwithſtanding the Opportunity ſeem'd to preſent thus fair, the Duke changed his Mind all on a ſudden. This new Reſolution the Hiſtorian reckons to Piety, and the Force of Conſcience, which now awakened upon him: He ſeemed to tremble at the Undertaking: The Sacking of an Holy Town, the Sacrilegious Ravage, the Profanations of Churches, the Burning ſo many Palaces and Streets, the Impriſonment, and (it may be) the Death of the Common Father of Chriſtendom, and a great number of Eccleſiaſticks, gave a terrible Shock to his Imagination. Colonna and the other General Officers preſſed him to no purpoſe: For he could by no means reconcile himſelf to the carrying a Place, which muſt prove ſo fatal in the Iſſue. The ſame Hiſtorian relates this Recollection was well rewarded. It ſeems the Scouts had made a falſe Report; and 'tis poſſible the Duke might be otherwiſe informed how Matters ſtood; for the Romans were really in a good Condition to receive the Enemy; and if they had been attack'd, the Duke had run an equal Riſque with the Garriſon. At the ſame time, News arrived of the famous Battle of S. Quintin, where the French were routed. This Defeat made Henry II. call the Duke of Guiſe out of Italy, and diſpoſed the Caraffa's to a Peace, which was concluded immediately after. The Duke of Alva, upon his coming to Rome, was very well received by the Pope, who granted him the Collation to Benefices within his Eſtate, and the Diſpoſal of the Revenues of the Church during a Vacancy; which Privilege is ſtill enjoyed by his Poſterity. Soon after, he went into the Duchy of Milan, where he brought the Country, which was very much diſturbed by the War, to a State of Repoſe. After this, he paſs'd into Flanders, where the War with France was carried on with great Vigour; and here the Duke did his Part in the Field to Commendation. The Peace concluded at Chaſteau-Cambreſis was farther confirmed by the Marriage of Philip II. with Elizabeth of France. The Duke was pitched upon to marry this Princeſs for his Maſter. He was very honourably treated at Henry II's Court, who made him ſeveral conſiderable Preſents; which the Duke refuſed to receive, being apprehenſive his Enemies might thence take Occaſion to make him ſuſpected by the King his Maſter: However, he took thoſe the Princeſs Elizabeth made him with Inclination enough. The Inſurrections in the Low Countries continuing, the Duke of Alva was ſent to ſuppreſs them. He arrived there in 1567, with ten thouſand effective Men, under the Command of the beſt Officers, which the Wars of Charles V. or Philip II. had bred in Europe. To theſe muſt be added two thouſand Germans, raiſed by the Ducheſs of Parma in the laſt Commotions. Upon the firſt Report of Alva's Coming, the Trading People of the Towns and Country, began to retire out of the Provinces in ſurprizing Numbers: Inſomuch that the Ducheſs Governeſs wrote to the King, that in a few Days above an hundred thouſand Men had left the Country, and withdrew their Effects. The Duke's firſt Action was the ſeizing Count Egmont and Count Horn: Upon this, the Ducheſs of Parma deſired Leave of the King to retire; which Requeſt was eaſily granted, and the Duke of Alva made Governor in her room. In this Poſt he had a Grant of Powers never before given to any Governor.

But before his going off from Spain, the Reader ſhould be acquainted with what happened when he took his Leave of Don Carlos, Philip's Son. The Duke having told his Highneſs he was going to correct the Flanderkins for their Wickedneſs and Rebellion; this Prince, with the Dagger in his Hand, reply'd in a Paſſion, I had rather drive this Ponyard through your Heart, than ſuffer your going with ſuch an Hoſtile Diſpoſition to ruin thoſe Provinces I have ſo great Affection for: And having ſaid this, he fell upon the Duke, who clos'd ſo inwardly with him that he could not be hurt, the Prince finding himſelf diſappointed, cried out, The Duke attempted to aſſaſſinate him; but the King believing nothing of it, commended the Temper of his Miniſter.

To return to the Low Countries, where the Duke ſet up a Sovereign Council of Twelve, for the Tryal of all Crimes committed againſt the King's Authority; this Court of Juſtice the People called, The Council of Blood. The Duke was the Head of this Council: As for the reſt of the Bench, they were Lawyers, of mean Birth and little Merit; excepting Barlemont and Noircarne, who were Gentlemen of Quality: And here Sentence was often paſs'd by only two or three of theſe Judges. For Inſtance, Strale, the Burgo-maſter of Antwerp, was condemn'd by no more than Vargus, and two other Spaniards. This Court had Sovereign Juriſdiction, and there lay no Appeal from it; the Duke having ſuppreſs'd Part of the Juriſdiction of all other Courts in the Low Countries, to raiſe the Authority of this. By this new Erection, great Numbers were Condemn'd and Executed for the late Inſurrection: The Inquiſition deſtroy'd ſtill more, though contrary to the parting Advice of the Ducheſs of Parma, and the Remonſtrances of the People. The Towns regretted the Breach of their Charters, the People the Loſs of their Liberties, the Knights of the Golden Fleece their Privileges: For by the Statutes of their Order, they were not to be try'd but by the Members of their own Society, the King being preſent. But all theſe Securities and Privileges were over-ruled by the Council of Twelve. As for Alva, notwithſtanding his other good Qualities, he was of a cruel and inexorable Diſpoſition; his Troops were violent and brave, and wiſh'd for nothing ſo much as a Rebellion: And as for the People, they were enrag'd to the laſt degree. In ſhort, the Face of Things was exceedingly diſmal; nothing but Seizure and Proceſs, Confiſcation and Impriſonment, Blood and Horror, Inſolence and Dejection, Puniſhments executed, and Revenge projected. In the beginning of June 1568, eighteen Lords and Gentlemen ſuffer'd at Bruſſels; the Drums were order'd to beat at the Execution, to prevent the People's hearing what was ſaid by the Priſoners, and for fear their Compaſſion might drive them to a Revolt. The Execution of Count Egmont and Count Horn at this Town, ſeem'd to put an end to the Subjects Patience, and gave Occaſion to thoſe Commotions which loſt the King of Spain the Seven Provinces; for now the Prince of Orange being ſummon'd to his Tryal, and not appearing, was condemn'd, proclaim'd Traitor, and his Eſtate in the Provinces ſeiz'd. The Prince, who went off into Germany, being ruffled with this Uſage, raiſes Forces, marches into the Low Countries, and entertains thoſe who offer'd to join him. But after ſome Variety of Succeſs, by the Conduct of the Duke of Alva, and the Bravery of his Veteran Army, he found himſelf oblig'd to diſband his Troops, and retire into Germany. Upon this, the Duke returns in Triumph to Bruſſels, demands a General Tax of the Hundredth Part of every Man's Eſtate to be rais'd at once, and for the future the Twentieth of all Immovables, and the Tenth of all that was ſold. The States conſented to the firſt Tax, but refus'd the other two, upon the Score of Poverty, and Diſadvantage to Trade. The Duke inſiſting upon his Demands, they petition the King for Relief, but without Succeſs; and thus the Matter reſted till the latter end of the Year. But the Duke, now impatient of farther

Delay,

Delay, publiſh'd the Edict at Bruſſels without the States Conſent: The People refuſed to pay, the Soldiers begin to levy by Force, the Country forbears the Market, and the Burghers by Conſequence want Proviſions. The Duke is enrag'd, calls the Soldiers to Arms, and commands ſeveral that refus'd the Payments to be hang'd that Night upon their Sign-Poſts. And now the Officers and Guards being ready to begin the Execution, News comes to Town of the taking of the Brill by the Gueſes; and the Apprehenſions this Turn had given of a ſudden Revolt in the Province of Holland. This unexpected Blow ſtruck the Duke of Alva, and for the preſent made him give over his Taxes and Executions. But falling afterwards into a Courſe of Cruelty, the Rebellion encreaſed; and the King of Spain being afraid of a total Defection of the Provinces, recall'd the Duke of Alva, whoſe violent Proceedings had ſet all things in a Flame. To mention ſomething of the Detail; his Son, after the taking of Haerlem, which ſurrender'd at Diſcretion, order'd two thouſand to be executed; and his Father is ſaid to have boaſted, that in ſix Years time he had diſpatch'd eighteen thouſand Men at the Gallows. In the midſt of this unaccountable Management, he had his Statue caſt in Braſs, out of the Cannon taken from Lewis of Naſſau: The Figure, in an inſulting Poſture, trampled upon two Statues, which repreſented the two Eſtates of the Low Countries. This provoking Appearance was erected in the Citadel he had built at Antwerp, for the overawing that populous and mutinous Town: But his Memory was far from being immortalized by this Contrivance; for after he had quitted the Low Countries, his Statue was pull'd down and broken.

Upon his Return into Spain, he met with a Buſineſs, which, as 'twas manag'd, gave him ſome Trouble: Frederick de Toledo, Marquis of Coria, was ſomewhat of an amorous Complexion. This young Nobleman happened to fall in Love with one of the Queen's Maids of Honour: His Courtſhip was well enough receiv'd by his Miſtreſs, and countenanc'd by the Queen; but his Fancy happening to decay, or removing to ſome other Object, the Lady took it ill to find herſelf abandon'd, and declar'd the Marquis had promis'd her Marriage. On the other ſide, the Marquis denied the Engagement: The King and the Queen concern'd themſelves in the Affair, and endeavour'd to bring the Marquis to a Compliance; and upon his ſtanding off, the Duke was mov'd to lay his Command upon him. Alva thinking this Match would be ſome Diſadvantage to his Family, prov'd no more tractable than his Son. Upon this, the Marquis were made a Priſoner at large, and ſent to the Caſtle of Tordecillas; the King telling the Duke at the ſame time he might withdraw from the Court. Upon this, he immediately went to Alva, and order'd his Son to take Poſt and come to him; and the ſame Day he reach'd his Father, he had him marry'd to his Couſin Mary de Toledo, and the Wedding was conſummated the Night following; and now being ſecure he could not be forc'd to a diſagreeable Match, he return'd next Day to Priſon. The King reſenting theſe bold Steps, order'd the Son a cloſer Confinement, and ſent the Father to the Citadel of Uzeda. The Pope and ſeveral other Princes ſolicited for his Liberty; but Philip was inflexible, and nothing but the Vacancy of the Throne in Portugal could have procur'd theſe two Priſoners Enlargement. There were ſeveral who put up a Claim to this Crown, and poſſibly the King of Spain's Pretenſions were none of the beſt: However, he was moſt in a Condition to maintain his Title; and being of Opinion he could not put his Army in better Hands than the Duke of Alva's, he gave him and his Son their Liberty, without being petition'd. The Portugueze making a ſhort and a languid Defence, the Duke conquer'd the Country almoſt as faſt as he could march through it. Soon after the Succeſs of this Expedition, he died in his Maſter's Arms at Thomar, where the States were aſſembled: This happened on the 12th of January 1582, in the ſeventy fourth Year of his Age. The Body was carried to the Church of S. Stephen in Salamanca, and laid in the Duke of Alva's Vault. * Strada de Bello Belgico. Temple's Obſervations on the Netherlands. Maurier Memoires. L'Hiſtoire de ce Duc; Imprimée a Paris en deux Volumes in 12*mo, en* 1698. Ou l'Extrait de cette Hiſtoire, qu'on trouve dans les Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres du mois du Janvier 1699, pag. 50.

ALBAZIN, Albacinum, a Town in Great Tartary, upon the River Tarmour, in the Province of Dawia; lies in the 122d Degree of Longitude, and the 54th of Latitude. 'Tis three Months Travelling from Moſcow hither, and about a Fortnight hence to Pekin. This is Pere Avril the Jeſuite's Account, which agrees with Mr. Weitzſen's Map. This Town belongs to the Muſcovites, and is the Merchants Road from Moſcow to Pekin: It has a good Citadel for its Defence againſt the Tartars and Chineze. * Pere Avril, Voyage à la Chine, &c.

ALBERT, (De Lobes) flouriſh'd in the Eleventh Century: Sigebert reports him a celebrated Perſon for the Belles Lettres, and Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity: That he immortaliz'd his Memory by writing the Lives of the Fathers, and making Hymns in Honour of the Saints; and particularly, he inſtructed Burchard Biſhop of Wormes, and perſuaded him to apply himſelf to the Study of Eccleſiaſtical Learning; and that this Biſhop's Magnum Volumen Canonum was, in a great meaſure, written by Albert. * Trithemius. Sigebert. in Chron.

ALBERT, Archduke of Auſtria, Son of Erneſtus Prince of Stiria, of the Branch of Inſpruch; of which Leopold, Son of Albert the Wiſe, was the firſt Anceſtor. This Albert, Archduke of Auſtria, had a long Conteſt with the Emperor his Brother Frederick III. touching the Succeſſion of Ladiſlaus. After a War of ſix Years, he was put to the Bann, or out-law'd in the Dyet at Ratisbon, held in 1463; Frederick ſucceeded as Heir to his Dominions. This Albert founded the Univerſity of Friburg. * Hoffman, Lexic. Univerſ.

ALBERT, Surnamed the Fair, Son of Magnus Duke of Mecklenberg, had more Inclination for Repoſe than War: However, he aſſiſted his Brother Henry againſt the Lubeckers, and was afterwards at the Siege of Gueldres for the Emperor Charles V. After the Death of Frederick I. King of Denmark, this Prince and Chriſtopher of Oldenberg ſupported the Intereſt of Chriſtian II. then kept a Priſoner, and defended Copenhagen againſt Chriſtian III. but at laſt he found himſelf oblig'd to ſurrender and aſk a Peace. His Son John Albert, a learned Prince, and his Brother Ulrick Biſhop of Swerin, were great Benefactors to the Univerſity of Roſtock. This John Albert brought in the Auguſtan Confeſſion as far as his Authority reach'd, and entred into a League for the Defence of Religion, and the Enlargement of the Landgrave of Heſſe. * Spener, Sylloge Geneal. Hiſt.

ALBERT, (Valentine) was Philoſophy and Divinity Profeſſor at Leipſick, and manag'd in the Chair to Commendation thirty four Years. Amongſt other Tracts, he wrote An Explication and an Apology for the Auguſtan Confeſſion, An Examen of the Council of Trent, and of Boſſuet Biſhop of Meaux's Expoſition of the Catholick Faith: He died in 1697, at ſixty Years of Age. * Acta Leipſiaca.

ALBORAC, the Horſe's Name that carry'd Mahomet from Mecca to Jeruſalem. The Arabian Mahometans believe Abraham, Iſhmael, and ſeveral of the Prophets made uſe of this Horſe. Now there being ſix hundred Years between our Saviour and Mahomet, the Horſe having lain by a great while, grew reſtive, and would not ſuffer any body to mount him, unleſs the Angel Gabriel ſat behind the Rider. There are ſome Mahometans who deny this Relation, and pretend that Mahomet had the ſole Privilege of breaking him for the Saddle; and this is the Horſe he intends to mount at the General Reſurrection. * Bochart. Hieroz. Part II. Lib. VI.

ALBORG, Alburgenſis Epiſcopatus: 'Tis one of the four Provinces of North Jutland, in the Kingdom of Denmark; 'twas formerly call'd the Dioceſe of Burglaw: It lies almoſt wholly within the Gulph of Alborg, the German Sea, and the Categat. 'Tis divided into thirteen Bailliages, containing ſeventy ſeven Pariſhes; Beſides its Capital of this Name, there are Wenſuſſel and Tyſtd, two other, not inconſiderable Towns. * Baudrand.

ALBORG, the Canal of Alborg, or Lymacus Sinus, a Gulph in the Baltick; 'tis commonly call'd a Canal, becauſe it has little Breadth, but a great Length, ſtretching from Categat, where it begins, to within a League of the German Ocean, and almoſt parting the Peninſula of Wenſuſſell from the reſt of Jutland. * Baudrand.

* ALCALA, a Town of Spain in Newcaſtile: 'Twas here that Cardinal Ximenes printed his Polyglott Bible: It ſtands in a Plain, has a very beautiful Square, and a ſtately ſtately Palace. 'Tis eighteen Miles from Madrid, and forty five from Toledo; 'twas very flouriſhing in the Goths Time, had a Biſhoprick Suffragan to Toledo; and 'tis mention'd by Prudentius in one of his Hymns. * Prudent. in Periſt. Hymn 4. Middendorpius de Academ. Melchior de la Cerda, Lib. de Appar. Latin. &c.

* ALCIAT, or Alciato, (Andrew) a very learned Lawyer. However, 'twas his Emblems that gain'd him the greateſt Part of his Reputation: There is a great deal of Elocution, Force and Pleaſantneſs in them: And, beſides the Beauty of the Compoſition, they are ſerviceable for the Conduct of Life. * Baillet Jugement des Scavans ſur les Poëtes, Tom. 7.

ALEANDER, (Jerom) of the ſame Family with Jerom Alexander, Archbiſhop of Brindi, and Cardinal. Jerom in this Article quitted Friuli, his Native Country, went to Rome, and was Secretary to Cardinal Octavio Bandini; he ſtudied the Civil Law, and wrote a Commentary upon Caius's Inſtitutes: He was one of the Academy of the Humoriſts, and wrote a very learned Tract in Italian upon the Motto of this Society. He explain'd Antique Sculptures and Inſcriptions, in a Quarto publiſh'd at Rome in 1616, and entitled, Explicatio Antiquæ Tabulæ Marmoreæ Solis Effigie Symboliſq; Exculptæ: Explicatio Sigillorum Zonæ Veterum Statuam Marmoream cingentis. He wrote upon the Subject of the Suburbicary Churches, publiſh'd a Tract againſt one Salmaſius, who had wrote for the Proteſtants upon that Argument. He wrote an Apology for Signior Marino's Adonis, againſt the Satyrical Attack of Signior Stiliani. Urban VIII. having a great Eſteem for him, got him remov'd from the Service of Cardinal Bandini, and made him Secretary to Cardinal Francis Barbarini, his Holineſs's Nephew. When this Cardinal was ſent Legate à Latere to France, Aleander went in his Train; his Conſtitution was but ſlender, and his Health infirm. Thus the Entertainments he made and receiv'd being too much for him, occaſion'd a Sickneſs, of which he died. He wrote with great Perſpicuity and Elegance, inſomuch that Nicius Erythræus uſed to make him this Compliment; When I read your Works, (ſays he) I fancy myſelf a Man of Senſe, and Capacity; but when I turn over other Authors, who value themſelves upon their Elocution, I find myſelf a very ignorant Fellow; for I know nothing of what they would be at. Nit. Erithræus, Pinacorth. I. Pag. 46. Baillet. Jugemens des Savans, ſur les Poets, No. 1420, &c.

ALEXANDER VIII. (Peter Ottoboni) was born in the Seventeenth Century; his Father Mark Ottoboni, Great Chancellor of Venice, purchas'd a Patent to make him a Nobleman, which coſt him a hundred thouſand Ducats. His Son Peter ſtudied firſt at Venice, and afterwards at Padua, where he commenc'd Doctor of Law: From thence he remov'd to Rome, where Pope Urban VIII. made him his Referendary. His Holineſs afterwards made him Governor of Terni, Rietti, Civita Caſtellana, and Auditor of the Rota, at the Nomination of the Republick of Venice. Innocent X. who ſucceeded Urban VIII. in 1644, made him Cardinal Prieſt of S. Saviour's in Lauro: He was afterwards made Biſhop of Breſcia. In 1655, when Alexander VII. was advanc'd to the Papal Chair, he made him his Datary, and oblig'd him to quit his Biſhoprick of Breſcia, to have him with him. He was afterwards a Member of all the Congregations at Rome, made Biſhop of Freſcati, and Sub-Dean of the Cardinals College. At laſt, upon the Death of Innocent XI. he was choſen Pope, October the 6th, 1689. The War which then broke out between the Houſe of Auſtria and France, was not a little ſerviceable to Ottoboni's Election; for the Neutral Cardinals were afraid of making a Pope who was born a Subject to the King of Spain; for Innocent XI. who came into the World under this Circumſtance, happen'd accidentally to promote the Intereſt of the Reform'd, by countenancing the Houſe of Auſtria againſt France. The Neutral Cardinals therefore believ'd that Ottoboni, who had liv'd a great while in the Church's Dominions, and was a Venetian by Birth, was, with regard to the preſent Juncture, preferable to any other. All the Advantage which France gain'd by this Choice was, that Alexander VIII. encourag'd the Venetians ſo ſtrongly to make War upon the Turks, and aſſur'd them of ſo conſiderable an Aſſiſtance, that the Peace which the Emperor projected with the Port (to employ all his Troops againſt France) came to nothing. As for the reſt, Alexander VIII. minded little, excepting the aggrandizing his Family. This is a Truth, as our Supplementer obſerves, ſo well known, that it can't paſs for a Calumny: However, it may not be amiſs to give two Inſtances, amongſt a great many; Monſ. Menage, in his Menagiana, ſpeaking of Alexander VIII. who was choſen Pope at ſeventy nine Years of Age, and in three Weeks had promoted all his Nephews, aſk'd one of his intimate Acquaintance what they ſaid of him. The Anſwer was, They ſaid he would loſe no Time for the Advancement of his Family. Oh! Oh! (ſays his Holineſs) Sono vinti tre hore e mezza: The Clock ſtruck three and twenty hours and a half. The other Inſtance is in the Journal de Savans, of the 15th of December, 1692. Edit. de Holl. "Amongſt other Commendations which John Palacio gives Innocent XI. he "flouriſhes moſt upon his having kept his Nephews all "along in a private Condition: This he makes an Imitation of our Saviour, who knew no Relations but "thoſe that did the Will of his Father. Alexander VIII. "had quite different Views from his Predeceſſor. However, Palacio endeavours to fetch him off, and would "have the Reader take Notice, that even here this latter "Pope follow'd our Saviour's Example; for our Saviour, ſaith he, honour'd thoſe of his Family with the "Prieſthood, and charg'd them with preaching the Goſpel: Thus (continues the Journal) a Man of Elocution can eaſily find a Colour to flatter the Paſſions of "thoſe in Power, and excuſe the Irregularity of their "Conduct." The Points in diſpute between the Courts of Rome and France gave little Diſturbance to Alexander VIII. He took care to keep his Deſigns in reſerve, and only amus'd the Miniſters of Lewis XIV. For a little before his Death, when he found the Opportunity preſented, he publiſh'd a Bull againſt every thing the French had done, to the pretended Prejudice of the Papal Authority. And now, in hopes his Holineſs might prove more favourable, they began to change their Language in France: The Poets, and Orators made Panegyricks upon Alexander's Adminiſtration; but here they forgot Solon's Maxim, That there's no pronouncing upon the Happineſs of any Perſon till he is dead. This Pope reign'd but a Year and four Months; for he died February 1, 1691. * Memoires du Temps, Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

* ALEXANDER, Biſhop of Byzantium, aſſiſted at the Council of Nice; but 'tis not certain whether in Quality of a Biſhop, or whether he was ſent thither as a Prieſt delegated by his Biſhop Metrophanes. Thus 'tis difficult to determine preciſely when he was conſecrated Biſhop: Some ſay it was in 313, others in 315 or 317. The Author of the Paſchal Chronicle reckons it to the Year 323, and ſome others to that of 320. Sozomen reports, that Conſtantine, after the Defeat of Licinius, making his Entry into Byzantium, gave Audience to the Philoſophers, who preſented a Remonſtrance againſt this Emperor's bringing in a new Religion; and complaining that the ancient Cuſtoms for Adoration practis'd by the Greeks and Romans, and obſerv'd by his Majeſty's Predeceſſors, were growing into Contempt and Diſuſe; and upon their deſiring a Conference with Alexander the Biſhop, the Propoſal was accepted. When the Philoſophers met for this Purpoſe, Alexander deſir'd them to pitch upon one to ſpeak for the reſt, who were to be ſilent. When the Speaker was choſen, Alexander commanded him in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt not to ſay a Word. Upon this Order, the Philoſopher remain'd ſpeechleſs for that time. If Alexander was then Biſhop, as Sozomen affirms, it muſt have been in the Year 323; for 'twas then Conſtantine came to Byzantium, after he had routed Licinius. But this Relation of Sozomen's after all may be a little queſtionable. Alexander nam'd Palus for his Succeſſor, and died in the Year 336 or 337; for thoſe that make him live to 340, don't ſeem to be aware that Paulus, his Succeſſor, was baniſh'd by Conſtantine, and condemn'd in 338 in an Arian Synod. * Athanaſ. Epiſt. ad Solit. Socrat. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 1. & 2. Sozom. Lib. 3. Baron. Annal. &c.

ALEXANDER, Biſhop of Hierapolis, aſſiſted at the Pſeudo-Synod of Epheſus in 429, was the Head of a Party againſt S. Cyril of Alexandria, occaſion'd a long Miſunderſtanding among the Biſhops, and was at laſt depos'd and baniſh'd to Phamoſis in Egypt. He wrote twenty Epiſtles, now in the Collection of Chriſtianus Lupus. * Concil. Epheſ. Du Pin. New Eccleſ. Hiſt.

ALEXANDER, a Martyr, and Companion of S. Sisinnius and S. Martyr, travell'd from Cappadocia into the West, and settled at Milan, when S. Ambrose was Bishop there. This Prelate sent them to Vigilius, Bishop of Trent, in order to their being employ'd in the Conversion of the Neighbourhood. Sisinnius was ordain'd Deacon, Martyr Reader, and Alexander Ostiarius. They acquitted themselves in their Mission with Success, and built a Church in a Town call'd Methon, situated in a Valley of the Alps, twenty four Miles from Trent. Sisinnius was first murder'd by the Pagans, and the next Day Martyr and Alexander shar'd the same Fate. This happen'd on the 29th of May, in the Year 397. * August. in Epist. 139. Paulin. in Vit. Ambros. Ruinart, &c.

ALEXANDER, call'd de Sancto Elpidio, a Town in Italy near Rome, elected General of the Hermits of S. Augustin in the Year 1312, and Archbishop of Amalfi in the Kingdom of Naples in the Year 1325, was a Person of great Learning and Piety. This Alexander, at the Instance of Pope John XXII. wrote a Treatise of the Jurisdiction of the Empire and the Pope's Authority: 'Tis divided into two Books, and printed at Lyons in 1438, and at Rimini in 1624. * Ughel, Italia Sacra, Possevin. Du Pin New Eccles. Library, &c.

* ALEXANDER, a Heretick and Disciple of Valentinus, maintained that the Flesh of Christ might be accounted Human, without being of Man's Substance. See English Morery, Vol. I.

ALEXANDER, Son to Theodorus, was sent to Rome by Hyrcanus, to request the Senate that the Jews might not be oblig'd to serve in the Field in the Sabbatick Year; that they might be free from Taxes during that time, and enjoy the rest of their Privileges: All which was granted them. This Address was presented in the Consulship of Dolabella. * Joseph. Antiquit. Lib. 14. Cap. 17, 22.

ALEXANDER, surnamed Lysimachus, of the Sacerdotal Family, and Alabarcha of Alexandria, that is, Overseer of the Salt-Works. He was one of the Jewish Assembly, where S. Peter and the rest of the Apostles were question'd about their preaching and working Miracles. This Alexander was imprison'd by Caligula, and confin'd till the next Reign, when Claudius discharg'd him. * Joseph. Antiquit. Judaic. Lib. 19. Cap. 4.

ALEXANDER, (Noel) a Dominican, and one of the most laborious Authors of the Seventeenth Century, was born at Rohan in 1639. His first and principal Performance is his Course of Positive Divinity, entitled, Choses Choisies de l'Histoire Ecclesiastique, avec des Dissertations Historiques, Chronologiques, Critiques & Dogmatiques, sur plusieurs Pointes importantes. He continued this History to the Year 1600, in twenty six Volumes in Octavo: There was a Critick run upon his first Volume, but suppress'd. Father Alexander, though disengag'd from the Trouble of answering these Remarks, had another Business which gave him a great Disturbance: For having defended the Propositions of the Assembly of the Clergy held in 1682, some Articles of the Liberties of the Gallican Church, and the Pretensions of the Regale, he fell under Disfavour at the Court of Rome, and his Works were condemn'd by a Decree of Innocent XI. dated July 13, 1684. In this Instrument, all People are forbidden to read, keep, or print Alexander's Books above-mention'd, under Penalty of Excommunication, not to be taken off but by the Pope. However, this did not discourage Father Alexander from going on with his Course of Divinity, which he had then brought no farther than the Thirteenth Century. This Work being written upon the same Principles with what had been censur'd, the Court of Rome had no reason to be satisfy'd with it. Whilst this voluminous Undertaking was finishing, he wrote several distinct Dissertations: There are four upon Thomas Aquinas's Works, with a Character of his Person. He had a Contest in Print with Father Frassier a Cordelier, concerning the Vulgar Translation of the Bible. He also wrote in Defence of Sacramental or Auricular Confession against Daillé. After having gone through the Questions in Divinity which occur, in Church-History, as far as the Year 1600, he wrote upon the History of the Old Testament in the same manner: The Performance is in five Tomes, begins with the Creation, and reaches to our Saviour's Incarnation. He afterwards publish'd a System of Dogmatick and Moral Divinity in ten Volumes: He likewise wrote Rules or Instructions for Preaching, and undertook a Commentary upon the Scripture, and begins with the four Gospels. The Epistle Dedicatory to Pope Clement XI. is couch'd in a Strain of deep Submission, where he makes a sort of Recantation for having sign'd a famous Case of Conscience. All these Books are written in Latin; but these following, of which he is the Author, are in French, viz. L'Apologie des Dominicains Missionnairs de la Chine, contre la Defense des nouveaux Chrétiens de la Chine. Eclaircissement sur la Denonciation faite a N. S. P. le Pape sur les Memoires de la Chine. Conformité des Ceremonies Chinèses, avec l'Idolâtrie Grecque & Romaine: Et sept Lettres sur la Morale, la Predestination & la Grace, dans les Principes des Thomistes, contre le P. Daniel. Un Commentaire sur les Epîtres de Saint Paul. * M. Du Pin New Eccles. Library, Seventeenth Century, Bayle Diction. Histor.

ALFAQUINS, Alfaquini, the Name of certain People who liv'd conceal'd in Spain, and are as it were the Priests for the Moors there. J. Royas mentions them in his Book concerning the Proceedings against Hereticks. "In the Kingdom of Valencia, saith this Author, 'tis "lawful for the Inquisitors to proceed against Jews and "Saracens, or other Infidels not baptized, who pretend "to argue with the Christians; particularly if they are "of that Distinction they commonly call Alfaquins, or "those who hinder the Exercise and Jurisdiction of the "Inquisition, who circumcise Infants, tamper with He-"reticks, solicite Christians to renounce their Faith, or "to follow the Customs and Publick Ceremonies of the "Mahometans." * J. Royas. de Hæret. Part I. Sect. 522. Hoffman, Lexic. Univer.

* ALFRED. To the Actions and Character of this Prince in the first Volume of Morery, may be added his Civil Regulations, &c. somewhat more at large. This Prince divided the Kingdom into Counties, and the Counties into Hundreds, and the Hundreds into Tythings. This last Division was call'd Tythings, because ten Housholders and their Families were thrown into a distinct Body: These ten Men were all bound to the King for their good Behaviour of each other; particularly, the Lords were to answer for their Slaves, Husbands for their Wives, and Fathers for their Children till fourteen Years of Age. Now if any of the ten happen'd to break the Peace, or fall under Forfeiture, the other nine were to have him ready for Justice, and see him forthcoming. If the guilty Person fled for it, he was not to be receiv'd in any Place without a Certificate from his own Tything; and if any Person was admitted to live at large in a Town, without being entred into some Tything, the Place was finable at the King's Mercy. The Forms of Original Writs are suppos'd to have been first settled by this Prince: The Office of Sheriffs was also his Constitution. The Valuation of the Kingdom, drawn up by the Conqueror, and call'd Doomsday-Book, was taken from King Alfred's Schemes; who making an Enquiry into the Estates and Proprietors of the Kingdom, caus'd the whole Account to be registred in his Winchester Book: From this Register the Conqueror took his Matter and his Method; insomuch that his Doomsday-Book was little more than a larger Edition of that of Winchester. County-Courts, and Court-Leets, were another Regulation of this Prince. He was so great a Justicer, that he us'd to re-examine the Causes try'd in his Absence; and if he found any Injustice done, 'twas his Method to send for the Judges and expostulate with them; and if he found them sway'd either by Favour or Interest, he punish'd severely, and return'd the Lex Talionis upon them. Thus the Mirror of Justice, written in the Reign of King Edward I. tells us, that he executed forty four Judges in one Year. This Prince, considering the Age he lived in, was considerably Learned, as appears by his Translation of Bede's History, the Pastoral of Gregory the Great, Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, and several other Authors, as his Kinsman Ethelwerdus relates of him. In short, considering his whole Life, he appears to be almost a Prodigy of Sense, Virtue, and Greatness. To look to the devout Part of him, he seems to have always lived in a Cloyster. By his Conduct and Exploits in the Field, one would think his Genius and Time had been wholly spent in the Camp. By his Writings, that the University of Oxford, which he founded, had engross'd him: And lastly, by the Prudence of his Administration, and Skill in the Art of Government, he seems to have made Law and Politicks his whole Study. * Asser. Meneven. de Alfred. Reb. Gest. Malmbs. de Gest. Reg. Angl. Collier's Church Hist. Vol. I, &c.

ALGOW,

ALGOW, in Latin, Algea, and Algovia, anciently called Almengovia, a German Province in Swabia: 'Tis bounded on the North by the Danube, on the East with the Lec, to the West with the Hegou and the Lake of Conſtance, and on the South with the Earldom of Tyrol. Within the Circuit of Algo, there lies within this Country the Marquiſate of Burgaw, and the Earldom of Bregentz and Montford, the Dioceſe of the Biſhop of Augſburg, the Eſtates of the Abbot of Kempten, of the Earls of Foucres, of Walbourg, Konigſeck, and Mindelheim, with the Towns of Augsburg, Kempten, Memingen, Iſne, Lindaw, Biberach, and Wangen. This Country has been left out in moſt Part of the new Maps. * Baudrand.

ALI Ben Hamoudah, the Twelfth Caliph of the Mahometans in Spain: He deſcended in a right Line from Haſſan, Hali's eldeſt Son: He ordered his Predeceſſor Solyman to be ſlain, with all his Family, under the Pretence of taking a Revenge for Moizad. This Murder was executed in the Year of our Lord 1070. But 'twas not long that his Ambition and Barbarity proved ſerviceable to him: For in leſs than two Years, one Abdalrahman, a Relation, outed him of all, and took the Style of Caliph, with the Surname of Mortaddi. Soon after this Diſgrace, Ali was killed by one of his own Slaves, and Caſſen Ben Hamoudah, his Brother, took the Title of Caliph Caiem: This Prince reigned to the Year of our Lord 1021. The Spaniſh Hiſtorians call him Ali Ebn Hamed. 'Twas this Caiem that made a Break in the Regnant Family of the Ommiades in Spain. * D'Herbelot, Bibliothec. Orientale.

ALIBINALI, Alibinalium, a Town in Arabia the Happy in Aſia, near the Principality of Alibinali, of which 'tis the Capital. 'Tis about one hundred and fourſcore Miles from Amanzirifden, a little farther from Fartach, and about ſeventy five from Guebelhaman. The Province, which has its Name from this Town, is in the Country of Seguer, between the Principalities of Fartach, Amanzirifden, Femini, and the Arabian Sea. Alibinali and Guebelhaman are the principal Towns in't. * Baudrand.

ALICANT, (The Gulph of) formerly called Illicitanus Sinus: It lies in the Mediterranean, and ſtretches along the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Valencia in Spain, from Cape Martin to Cape de Palos. The Gulph takes its Name from the Town of Alicant. * Baudrand.

ALICE, (The Cape of) Aliſium Promontorium, a Promontory or Cape of the Higher Calabria in the Kingdom of Naples: It lies upon the Southern Part of the Gulph of Tarentum, and on the Eaſt it is bounded by the Town Umbriatico, which was formerly called Crimiſa. * Baudrand.

ALIMENTARIES. So the Romans called poor Children and Orphans of either Sex who were maintained at the publick Charge. The Money for their Support was either paid out of the Exchequer, or raiſed upon Funds, which the Emperors and private Perſons had ſettled by their Laſt Will and Teſtament upon theſe Hoſpitals. Theſe Children they called Alimentarii Pueri, and Alimentariæ Puellæ. They frequently took their Names from their Founders, and Foundreſſes. Julius Capitolinus, in the Life of Antoninus Pius, reports, that this Prince ſettled a Society of Girls, called Fauſtinæ, from the Name of his Empreſs, Puellas alimentarias in honorem Fauſtinæ, Fauſtinianas conſtituit. The ſame Author, ſpeaking of the Emperor Alexander Severus, tells us, he followed Antoninus's Precedent, and founded a Houſe of Charity for Boys and Girls, and left his own and his Mother's Name upon it. Puellas & Pueros, quemadmodum Antoninus, Fauſtinianas inſtituerat, Mammeanas & Mammeanos inſtituit. * Jul. Capitolin. in Antonin. & Sever.

ALINGE KHAN, or Ilinge Khan, the Fourth King of the Eaſtern Turks, deſcended from Turk, the Son of Japhet, as they pretend. In this Prince's Reign the Turks lived in great Wealth, and much at their Eaſe: This Proſperity made them forget the Traditions of their Anceſtors; and Primitive Religion thus decaying in their Memory, they ſunk firſt to Licentiouſneſs, and afterwards into Idolatry. This Alinge Khan had two Sons Twins, Tatar and Mogul, and when their Father grew diſabled by Age, he divided his Dominions between them. Theſe two Princes, after their Father's Deceaſe, lived very amicably with each other, and governed their reſpective Kingdoms with great Juſtice and Conduct. But their Succeſſors not inheriting the ſame Probity and Underſtanding, proved the Occaſion of Quarrels and Wars between the two Nations of the Tartars and Moguls, who took their Name from theſe two Princes. * D'Herbelot, Bibliothec. Orient.

* ALIPIUS, Biſhop of Tagaſta, an African Town in Numidia: He was born at this Place in the Year 357. He was an intimate Friend of S. Auſtin, learned Rhetorick and the Belles Lettres of this Father, followed him to Carthage, and afterwards to Rome, and was entangled with him in the Manichean Hereſy. He ſtudied the Law at Rome, and was afterwards Aſſeſſor or a Judge Aſſiſtant to the Emperor's Treaſurer for Italy. However, he reſigned his Office, to go along with S. Auguſtin to Milan, where he was likewiſe Aſſeſſor to the Vicarius or Vice-Roy of Italy. S. Auguſtin and this Alipius were converted at the ſame time to the Catholick Faith, and baptized together at Milan by S. Ambroſe: This was done on Eaſter-Eve in the Year 387. From Milan they returned to Rome, and from thence into Africk, where they lived in a Retirement near Tagaſta. When S. Auguſtin was ordained Prieſt for Hippo, he drew his Friend into the Monaſtery he had founded in this Town. Afterwards Alipius travelled into Paleſtine, where he made an Acquaintance with S. Jerom. At his coming home, he was choſen Biſhop of Tagaſta in 394, which was two Years before S. Auguſtin was advanced to the See of Hippo. The Roman Martyrology ſets him at the 15th of Auguſt. * Auguſtin. Confeſſ. 6, 7, 8. Epiſt. 22, 23, 24, 25, 27. &c. Id. ad Boniface. Lib. 1. Contra duas Epiſt. Pelagianorum, Lib. 2. Hieron. Epiſt. 82, &c.

ALLEN, (William) a Londoner, born in the Seventeenth Century: He was a Tradeſman; and though not bred to Learning, being of a ſerious Temper, he was naturaly inclined to Regularity and Strictneſs of Diſcipline. Thus, before his Underſtanding was grown up, he was entangled amongſt the Sectaries, the ſpecious Appearance of extraordinary Devotion, and better Principles, drawing him into Error. At firſt he fell in with the Antinomians, who under a Pretence of doing Honour to our Saviour, and raiſing the Efficacy of Grace, make good Works in a manner wholy unneceſſary. Upon his leaving this Perſuaſion, he turned Anabaptiſt. Afterwards it pleaſed God to diſengage him from his Miſtakes, and bring him to the Communion of the Church of England. And to convince the World he did not alter his Opinion without good Grounds, he publiſhed a Tract, in which he gives his Reaſons for quitting the Anabaptiſts. But it ſeems thoſe who printed his Works all together, could not meet with it. He likewiſe publiſhed another Tract againſt the Diſſenters, in which he makes it appear the laſt Steps he took in Religion were not made without mature Deliberation. Rich. Baxter endeavoured to confute this Juſtification; to which Allen replied: But neither is this Reply extant amongſt his Works. Notwithſtanding Allen had no learned Education, he was a Perſon of great Induſtry, and reading Books of Rhetorick and Logick in the Engliſh Tongue, formed a handſome Style, and wrote with Strength and Perſpicuity. His Works are printed in Folio at London in 1707. The Subjects are as follow: I. Of the Nature, Ends, and Difference between the two Covenants. II. A Diſcourſe concerning Faith. III. Reflections upon the Doctrine of Juſtification, with Remarks upon a Book written by Robert Ferguſon, entituled, What the Offices of Reaſon are in the Article of Religion which concerns Juſtification. IV. The Juſtification of Chriſtians explained and ſettled. V. A Diſcourſe concerning the Divine Aſſiſtance, or Grace. VI. A Practical Diſcourſe concerning Humility. VII. An Exhortation to Peace and Concord among Chriſtians. VIII. A ſerious and compaſſionate Diſcourſe to the Nonconformiſts, particularly to the Anabaptiſts. IX. Catholiciſm, or divers Enquiries concerning the Nature and Extent of the Viſible Church, and her Communion. X. Πρῶτον ψεῦδος, or the firſt Error of the Quakers diſcovered and confuted. XI. The Myſtery of Iniquity explained. XII. The Future State of the Church. XIII. Of the Nature, Time of Accompliſhment, and Order of the things foretold in the 11*th Chapter of the* Revelations. To which is added, a Diſcourſe upon the Author's Death. * See his Works.

ALLIROTHIUS, the Son of Neptune, who being deſirous to revenge the Diſgrace his Father had received in his Conteſt with Minerva, for the Founder of Athens, went by his Father's Order to cut down the Olive-Tree that that Goddeſs had raiſed on a ſudden. But he happen'd to miſcarry in his Enterprize; for the Ax fell off the Helve, and wounded him mortally. * Apoll.

ALMAGESTE, pronounced and written by the Arabians, Almageſhi, or Almegiſthi: 'Tis Ptolemy's Syſtem of the World, called in Greek, Syntaxis Megiſti. 'Tis from this laſt Greek Word that the Arabians have drawn their corrupt Pronunciation; and 'tis by another little Corruption from the Arabians that we have made our Almageſt. This Book was tranſlated from the Greek into Arabick by Iſahac Ben Honain: 'Tis lodged in the King of France's Library, N. 887. * D'Herbelot, Bibliothec. Orientale.

ALMACUS, or Thelemachus, (Saint) an Hermit, who lived in the Eaſt: He came to Rome, in the Reign of Honorius, and ſeeing the Gladiators playing a Prize, endeavoured to prevent theſe barbarous Diverſions, as being contrary to the Spirit of Chriſtianity. The Spectators being provoked at this Attempt, ſtoned him to Death, which gave him the Honour of Martyrdom, and the Emperor an Opportunity to put down theſe Shews. His Feſtival ſtands at the firſt of January. * Theodoret, Lib. 5. cap. 26. Bede, Martyrol.

* ALNEY, a ſmall Iſland in the River Severne. For a larger and more Authentick Account of the Duel fought here by Edmond Ironſide and Canutus, ſee Collier's Church Hiſtory, Vol. I.

ALOGIANS, Hereticks ſo called, becauſe they denied our Saviour Chriſt to be the Eternal Word or Logos. Now their Sophiſtry being ſufficiently confuted by the Goſpel and Revelation of S. John, they pretended, as Epiphanius relates, theſe two Books were made by the Heretick Cerinthus; tho' S. John wrote his Goſpel on purpoſe to anſwer and expoſe this Heretick. Theodotus, a Currier of Byzantium, afterwards maintained Cerinthus's Errors. * Tertull. Lib. de Præſcript. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 51. & 54. Auguſtin. de Hæreſ. cap. 33.

ALOMATON. 'Tis in Latin, Soſtenium Michaelium, a Fort in European Turky. It ſtands in Thrace or Romania, upon the Streights of Conſtantinople, at the Paſſage into the Black Sea. 'Tis plainly the Place the Maps call Caſtel Nuovo d'Europa, which is oppoſite to another in Natolia called Caſtel Nuovo d'Aſia. Amurath demoliſhed the Church dedicated to S. Michael, built by the Emperor Conſtantine the Great, and erected the Fort Alomaton on the Ruins, which is therefore called in Latin, Michaelium. * Baudrand.

ALTAEMPS, (Mark) Pope Pius IV's Siſter's Son, was one of the Cardinals that preſided at the Council of Trent. His Father Wolfgand Altaemps was a Count of the Empire, in the Dioceſe of Conſtance. This Dignity of Legate at the Council was procured him by People that meant him no Service. For the Borrome's, who were related to the Pope in the ſame Degree with Altaemps, being deſirous to remove him from the Court, work'd him this Commiſſion for Trent. He ſtaid at this Council ſomewhat more than a Year; then the Pope recalled him to levy Troops for his Defence: For his Holineſs being informed that the Dukes of Saxony, Wirtemberg, and the Landgrave of Heſſe, were raiſing Men, and that the Germans had a ſtrong Fancy to take Rome by Storm, (where they found ſo much good Plunder in the Year 1527,) he was very unwilling to be ſurprized. The Harangue Monſ. Pibrac, the French Ambaſſador, made in the Council, diſguſted this Cardinal very much: He was of Opinion it ought to have a ſmart Anſwer, ſaying withall, That the Inſolence of this Pettyfogger, who uſed only to diſcourſe with little People, ought to be reprimanded. To ſpeak clearly, he was neither furniſhed with Learning nor Experience for his Legantine Poſt. But Pius IV. his Uncle, was ſatisfied the other preſiding Legates could ſupply his Defects, and teach him how to manage at a General Council. When the Pope ſent him Nuncio to the Emperor Ferdinand's Court in the Year 1560, he ordered the famous Cornelius Muſſus, Biſhop of Bitonto, to go along with him for his Inſtructor. This Family roſe in their Titles and Dignities afterward; for there was a Duke of Altaemps who died in 1620. This Duke was a Perſon of Learning, and 'twas he that collected the Altaemſian Library, ſo famous at Rome, and which was not wholly ſold out of the Family when Mabillon travelled into Italy. This Duke, Chriſtened John Angelo, publiſh'd the Life of Pope Anicetus. Gaudentius, another Duke of Altaemps, who died in 1677, was no leſs curious in collecting Books, and remarkable in Learning. He publiſhed S. Chryſoſtom's Life, and another entituled, Piety Triumphant under Perſecution. * Amelot de la Houſſaye, in his Marginal Notes on Father Paul, and Cardinal Palavicini's Hiſtory of the Council of Trent. Mabillon, Muſæum Italic.

ALTENA, in ſome Maps Altona, a great Town in the Duchy of Pinemberg, near the River Elb. It is almoſt contiguous to Hamburgh, and the Juriſdiction of it is divided between the Town of Hamburg and the Lord of Pinemberg; the Streets are large, and the Town built high. The little River which runs through the Middle of it parts the Juriſdiction of the five Proprietors, who have their Guards on each Side the Brook. The Daniſh Troops are poſted on one Bank, and thoſe of the chief Magiſtrate of Hamburgh on the other. The Reformed of Hamburgh, both Germans and French, go thither for the Exerciſe of their Religion. This Town was wholly burnt in the late War between the Swedes and Danes. 'Twas the Swedes who reduced it to this Condition by way of Reprizal. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu, & Memoires du Temps.

ALTAR, a ſort of Table. Noah, at his coming out of the Ark, built an Altar to the Lord, and offered Sacrifices upon it, (Geneſ. viii. v. 20.) Abraham built one at Sichem, and called upon the Lord there. He likewiſe built another in the Vale of Mamre, (Geneſ. xii. v. 7. Gen. xiii. v. 4. and 18.) Iſaac and Jacob likewiſe built Altars for Divine Worſhip. God ordered the Iſraelites not to make him an Altar of Earth, nor build it of Free-Stone, nor make any Steps for an Aſcent. The Tabernacle had two Altars; one for the Burnt-Offerings, deſcribed Exodus xxvii. and the other for Incenſe, mentioned in the xxxth Chapter of that Book. Joſhua, after the taking of Ai, made an Altar of Rough Stone, and ſacrificed upon it. The Children of Iſrael were allowed but one Altar for Sacrifice. The Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the Half-Tribe of Manaſſes, were forced to Apologize for the Altar they made: They juſtified themſelves by declaring 'twas not deſigned for ſacrificing, but only for a Monument of their Relation to the other Tribes, (Joſhua xxii.) The Temple had likewiſe two Altars for the ſame Purpoſes with thoſe in the Tabernacle. 'Twas not lawful for the Jews to ſacrifice at any other Altar. The Primitive Chriſtians had likewiſe Altars in the Places where they met for Religious Worſhip; and here they offered the Euchariſtick Sacrifice. The firſt Altars were Wooden Tables; afterwards they made them of Stone. And in the Year 509, the Council of Paris paſſed a Canon that none but Stone Altars ſhould be conſecrated. S. Gregory Nyſſen (Orat. in Baptiſmum Chriſti) mentions Stone Altars. In Optatus and S. Athanaſius's Time, that is, in the Fourth Century, Altars were commonly made of Wood. The Conſecrating of Altars is an ancient Ceremony, and reſerved to the Biſhops. After the Clergy were not allowed to make uſe of any but conſecrated Altars, they made Portable Altars, which were uſed in Places where there were none conſecrated. The Church had ſome of theſe when Bede and Hincmar were living. Formerly there was but one Altar in a Church; but afterwards there were ſeveral ſet up in the little Chappels in it. * Bona de Rebus Liturgicis.

ALTAR, Menſa Protheſeos, or a Side-Board. Thus the Greeks call a ſmall ſort of Altar, upon which they bleſs the Bread before they ſet it upon the great Altar where the Euchariſtick Sacrifice is performed. Goar, in his Notes upon the Euchologion, is of Opinion that the Greek Protheſis ought to be tranſlated a Table, and not an Altar. For we are to obſerve, that the Greek Church has never above one Communion in a Day, and that upon the ſame Altar; and that the Protheſis is only a preparatory Place, upon which the Prieſt pronounces ſeveral Benedictions. Goar affirms, that formerly this Table, or Protheſis, was in the Veſtry or Sacriſty; and anciently in the Weſtern Church, the Euchariſtick Bread was prepared with a great many Ceremonies in the Sacriſty. * Du Cange, in Verbo Protheſis. Meurſius Gloſſar. in Pane, P. Simon ſur les Opuſcules de Gabriel de Philadelphie.

ALTAR of Lyons, Ara Lugdunenſis, dedicated to Auguſtus, in the Year of Rome 744. It ſtood in a Temple built at the common Charge of a great many Gauliſh Clans, who had each of them their reſpective Statues with Inſcriptions. 'Twas in this Temple, as Suetonius reports, that the Emperor Caligula ſet up learned Exerciſes.

ciſes. Hither a great many Orators and Poets came from diſtant Parts, to ſhew their Talents in Poetry and Haranguing. But here was a rugged Condition thrown in; for he that happen'd not to pleaſe the Audience, was obliged to expunge his Exerciſe with his Tongue, or elſe to be thrown like a Dog into the Soane. This made Juvenal mention the making a Speech before the Altar at Lyons as a very formidable Circumſtance.

Palleat ut nudis preſſit qui calcibus anguem,
Aut Lugdunenſem Rhetor dicturus ad Aram.

* Sueton. in Vit. Calig. Juvenal. Satyr. 1. *v.*43. Danet.

ALTENAW, a Town in Lower Saxony, in Latin Altenavium; ſtands in the Country of Grabenhage, upon the River Ocker, three Leagues from the Town of Goſlar to the South, and ſix from Halberſtadt to the North-weſt. * Baudrand.

ALTEN-HOENAW, Vetus Hoenavia, a Town in the Duchy of Bavaria in Germany; it ſtands upon the River Inn, above Waſſerbourg. Some are of Opinion that Alten-Hoenaw was formerly called Æni Pont, OEni Pons. * Maty, Diction. Geograph.

ALTER-DE-CHAON, Altera Chaonis, a Town of Portugal in Alentejo; it ſtands upon the River Avis, four Leagues from the Town of Port Alégre to the Weſt. Some Geographers take this Town for that anciently called Alteri & Alterium, which others fix at the Village of Aerra. * Baudrand.

* ALTHEA, Wife to Æneus King of Calydonia, and Mother to Meleager. This Son having killed her two Brothers for attempting to rob his Miſtreſs of the Honour of killing the Calydonian Boar, ſhe threw the fatal Log of Wood into the Fire, which, had it not been burnt, would have prolonged her Son Meleager's Life. * Ovid. Metam. Lib. 11.

ALTILIUS, (Gabriel) born in the Kingdom of Naples, Præceptor to Ferdinand the younger King of Naples, and after Biſhop of Policaſtro, lived towards the End of the Fifteenth Century. He was one of the beſt Poets of his Time. There is a great deal of Delicacy and fine Turn in his Elegies: He had likewiſe a more than ordinary Talent for Heroick Verſe, as appears by his Poem on Iſabella of Aragon's Wedding. Julius Scaliger owns this a very good Epithalamium, but that it might have been better, if the Author could have check'd his Invention, and not have exhauſted himſelf upon the Subject. Paulus Jovius, who has given him a Character of Advantage, complains of his quitting the Muſes: However, 'twas a commendable Remove, for he changed his Studies to give himſelf entirely to the Holy Scriptures, and the Learning of his Profeſſion. He died in 1484, being above ſixty years of Age. * Paulus Jovius, in Elog. Jul. Scalig. Lib. Poet. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ALTIN, Altinum Regnum, a Kingdom in Aſia in Great Tartary, between the Springs of the Oby and the Irtis; reaches from the 102d Degree of Longitude to the 107th, and from the 56th Degree of Northern Latitude to the 60th. 'Tis inhabited by the Kalmuck Tartars: It takes its Name from the Town of Altin. * See Witſen's Maps.

ALTMUL, Alemannus, Almonus, a River in Germany: It riſes in the Marquiſate of Anſpach in Franconia, runs by the Towns of Papenheim and Aichſtet, croſſes a ſmall Part of Bavaria, and diſcharges itſelf into the Danube at Kelheim, about eight Leagues below Ingolſtadt. * Baudrand.

ALT-OFFEN, Buda Vetus, or Sicambria. 'Twas formerly a great Town, built by the Sicambri, ſettled in Lower Hungary by the Emperor Valentinian. 'Twas demoliſhed by Attila King of the Huns. The preſent Remains of it are a ſmall Village ſtanding on the Danube a little above Buda. Baudrand gueſſes that Alt-Offen was Herculia, an old Town in Pannonia.

* ALVA. (Duke of) See Alba.

ALYPIUS, (Falconius Probus) Brother to P. Claudius Hermogenianus Olybrius, was Præfect or Governor of Rome under the Emperor Theodoſius. This Baronius proves from Inſcriptions, and adds, that there are ſeveral Letters from Symmachus to this Alypius: He cites the Roman Martyrology to make it appear, that S. Almachius was killed by the Gladiators when Alypius was Governor of Rome. And laſtly, he gueſſes, 1*ſt*, That Alypius Governor of Egypt, with whom John the Anchorete held a Correſpondence, is the ſame with him in this Article. 2*dly*, That Alypius was converted by converſing with the Anchorete. But another learned Author conjectures, that the Martyr S. Almachius is but an imaginary Saint; and that the Title of Almanach has given him his Canonization. The Book that advances this Fancy is entituled, The Enthuſiam of the Church of Rome. He endeavours to ſupport his Conjecture by affirming, "That ſome ignorant "Monk of the Seventh or Eighth Century, perceiving at "the Top of the Kalendar S. Almanachum, written abbre-"viated according to the Cuſtom of that Age S. Alma-"chum, miſtook this Word, little uſed in his Time, for "the Name of ſome Saint, and giving it a Termination "in us, ſet him at New-year's-Day. Chance and Igno-"rance had no ſooner given this new Saint a Being, "but he was provided with Martyrologiſts, who report-"ed him killed by the Gladiators at Rome, for endea-"vouring to prevent their Fighting, and that this was "done under the Præfecture of Alypius; but no ancient "Author makes Mention of this holy Reſolution. Al-"cuinus is the firſt who takes notice of it, and that with "an Air of Doubting.

Notwithſtanding this Conjecture, 'tis certain Theodoret reckons this extraordinary Zeal to a Monk called Telemachus. And beſides, an Author ought to be very careful when he ventures to ſay, No body has related this or that.

AMARMOCHDI, Amarmochdum, a Town in Zanguebar in Africk. It ſtands in the Kingdom of Melinda, at the Head of the River Quilemanco, which diſembogues itſelf into the Æthiopick Ocean at Melinda. * Baudrand.

AMARUMAYA, Amarumaia, a River in Southern America. It riſes in Peru, near Cuſco, in the Country of the Amazons; and after having reached a great Length, diſcharges itſelf into the River of the Amazons a little below the Amage or Homage Iſlands. * Baudrand.

AMASEUS, (Romulus) a celebrated Greek and Latin Profeſſor at Bologna. Pope Paul III. entertain'd him in the Quality of Præceptor to his Nephew Alexander Farneze. Afterwards he was raiſed to more conſiderable Employments: He had a publick Character to the Emperor, to the Princes of the Empire, and Court of Poland. Under the Pontificate of Julius III. there was no Man of Learning at Rome that made a more ſhining Figure than Amaſeus. His Skill in the Greek Language was ſhown in his Verſion of Pauſanias, and the Expedition of Cyrus the Younger, written by Xenophon. He likewiſe wrote a Volume of Harangues, and Scholæ duæ de Ratione Inſtituendi. But theſe two Books, in which he endeavours to make out that Latin is a finer Language than Italian, are not printed. In his Compoſitions he endeavours ſtrongly for Perſpicuity and a beautiful Manner. He extended what he conceived too conciſely expreſſed, contracted what was overcharged with Words, and gave Light to obſcure Paſſages. But notwithſtanding his Learning and Exactneſs, Sylburgius thought it not unneceſſary to touch his Tranſlation of Pauſanias over again. * Thuan Lib. 21. Tiſſier dans ſes Addit. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

AMASTRIS, a Sea-Port Town in Paphlagonia, now called Tamaſtro: It ſtands upon the Black Sea, was formerly very populous, and managed a great Trade from the North with Aſia Minor. The Biſhop was Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Gangra. S. Hyacinthus the Martyr was born and ſuffered here in the Fourth Century. Palmas was Biſhop of this See in the Second Century. Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth wrote to the Chriſtians at this Town. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Baillet, Topog. des Saints.

AMASTRIS, Daughter to Oxathres, Darius's Brother, and Couſin-German to Statyra, Daughter of this Darius, and Wife to Alexander the Great. Having been bred at the Court together, they had a ſtrong Reciprocal Affection. When Alexander married Statyra, he diſpoſed of Amaſtris the ſame way to Craterus, one of his chief Favorites. They lived upon very good Terms till after Alexander's Death; when Craterus's Intereſt, or it may be his Fancy, diſpoſed him to marry Phila, Antipater's Daughter. Upon this new Engagement, Amaſtris, by Craterus's Conſent, married Dionyſius the Tyrant, (as they called him) of Heraclea, a Town in Pontus. His Princeſs being a vaſt Fortune, put him in a Condition to buy the Furniture of Dionyſius the Tyrant of Sicily. Thus making a great Figure, being high in Cash, and ſtanding well in the Affection of his Subjects, he enlarged his Dominions by Conqueſt, and ſent a ſtrong Reinforcement to Antigonus, during the War at Cyprus: In Acknowledgment of this Aſſiſtance, Antigonus married his Nephew Ptolemy, Governor of the Helleſpont, to one of Dionyſius's Daughters, of the firſt Venter. Dionyſius had three Children by Amaſtris, two Sons and a Daughter; the Daughter had her Mother's Name, and the Sons were Clearchus and Oxathres. Every thing went well, as long as Amaſtris had the Management: For Antigonus undertook the Protection of Heraclea and the young Princes; and when he reſigned that Poſt, Lyſimachus undertook it, and married Amaſtris, Dionyſius's Widow. He was very fond of this Lady, till he happen'd to fall in Love with Arſinoe, Ptolemeus Philadelphus's Daughter. This transferring his Affection occaſioned a Rupture between him and his Princeſs; and for this Reaſon Amaſtris took the ſole Government of Heraclea, till her Son Clearchus was of Age. This Prince and his Brother Oxathres were ſo barbarouſly wicked as to deſtroy their Mother, and that upon no better than frivolous Pretences. Lyſimachus, who then reigned in Macedonia, reſolved to puniſh this unnatural Villany. Being good at Diſſimulation, he concealed his Enterprize, and pretending the ſame Affection to Clearchus as formerly, he was received as a Friend into Heraclea. But 'twas not long before he put theſe two unnatural Princes to Death, ſeized all their Wealth, and left the Burghers of Heraclea a Free State. But their Liberty was but ſhort-lived: For Lyſimachus, upon his Return Home, gave ſuch a lively Deſcription of the good Condition in which Amaſtris had left Heraclea, that his Wife Arſinoe begged the Town of him. He refuſed her this Preſent at firſt; but Arſinoe being a Lady of Addreſs, and Lyſimachus growing more and more an obſequious Huſband, ſhe gained her Point, and ſent a Governor to Heraclea, who treated the Burghers very roughly. * Photius, Polyænus, Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

AMBER-GREESE, is of an Opaque Subſtance, and ſmells pleaſantly; the leaſt Heat will melt it: It has a ſovereign Vertue to raiſe the Spirits, to ſtrengthen the Stomach, and relieve the Brain. 'Tis found in ſeveral Parts of the Ocean upon the Coaſt of Muſcovy, and eſpecially on the Shoar of the Indian Ocean. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be a Mixture of Wax and Honey, made by the Bees, upon the Trees with which the Sea-Coaſt of Muſcovy are well furniſhed, or in the Clefts of the Rocks, which lie along the Beach of the Indian Sea: That this Compoſition baked by the Sun, and afterwards looſened either by the Force of the Wind, the Riſing of the Water, or its own Weight, falls into the Sea, where 'tis brought to Perfection. That which gives Credit to this Opinion, is, that by the Mixture of Wax and Honey, an Eſſence may be drawn with reſembling Qualities to Ambergreeſe; and which without doubt would be much better if it were made with Indian or Muſcovy Honey, where the Flowers are ſtronger ſcented. 'Tis farther obſerved, that ſometimes large broad Pieces of Ambergreeſe have been fiſhed up before they had reached their full Maturity; and that when broken, there were Streaks of Wax and Honey in the middle of them.

Yellow Amber, in Latin, Succinum, is always tranſparent, and not without great Difficulty brought to a State of Fuſion. The Oil drawn off from it has a ſtrong Scent, and is very ſerviceable in Convulſions and Apoplexies. This Amber is ſeldom found excepting in the Baltick, upon the Coaſt of Pruſſia. When the Wind blows from a proper Quarter, 'tis thrown upon the Shoar, whither the neighbouring People run to gather it in the midſt of a Storm. There are frequently within this Amber Leaves of Trees, Spiders, Flies, Piſmires, and other Inſects, which live only upon dry Land, which is ſomewhat ſurprizing to the Naturaliſts. Martial made an Epigram upon a Piſmire, tranſparently lodged in a Piece of Amber: It runs thus:

Dum Phaetonteâ formica vagatur in umbrâ,
Implicuit tenuem ſuccina gutta feram.
Sic modo quæ fuerat vitâ contempta manente,
Funeribus facta eſt nunc pretioſa ſuis.

The Philoſophers have been much embarraſſed in explaining this Phænomenon. Before the reporting a probable Conjecture, ſomething muſt be premiſed concerning the Formation of Yellow Amber. Thoſe who have travelled into Sweden report, that upon the Sea-Coaſts there are great Foreſts of Poplars and Willows, from which in the Summer-time, there runs a conſiderable Quantity of Gum and Roſin; from whence it's eaſy to conceive that part of this viſcous Matter ſticking upon the Branches, and covered with Snow in the Winter, the Rigour of the Seaſon muſt bring it to a hard Conſiſtence, and the bluſtering Winds break it from the Branches, and carry it into the Sea. Now the Sea being in a ſtrong Motion, and the Wind driving the Waves from Sweden to the Coaſt of Pruſſia, the Amber muſt by conſequence follow the Current, and fall into the Fiſhermens Hands. To make this Reaſoning bear, that Part of the Baltick, where there is moſt Amber found, muſt have a lower Situation than the Trees on the Coaſt of Sweden, which is true in Fact. And if the Sea was not very deep, they would find a great Quantity of Amber there, without the Help of a favourable Wind, which is now neceſſary to bring it to the Coaſts of Pruſſia. There are ſome Pieces of Amber taken up in other Parts of the Baltick, and ſometimes in the German Ocean, into which 'tis diſcharged: For the Sea being always agitated, ſome Quantities of this Subſtance may be driven to very diſtant Shoars, though this does not often happen.

Now Amber being formed in this manner, 'tis eaſy to give an Account how Flies, Ants, and other Inſects may be ſeen in the middle of it. For if it happens, that one of theſe little Animals, creeping upon the Branches of a Tree, meets with a Drop of this Roſin, which runs croſs the Bark, and is liquid enough to flow at firſt; if one of theſe little Animals happens to meet ſuch a croſs Adventure as ſhe travels along, ſhe is certainly entangled; and not being ſtrong enough to diſengage herſelf, ſhe is quickly overwhelmed and buried by other Drops, which follow the firſt, and ſpread round about it. The Property of Amber for drawing a Straw is ſufficiently known: But the Cauſe of this Attraction lay concealed at leaſt to the old Philoſophers. For to ſay that Amber pulls Straw to it by an occult Quality, is only a Confeſſion of one's Ignorance. Some Modern Philoſophers, not without good Probability, are of Opinion, that there is a ſubtil Matter lodged in the Pores of Amber, which when 'tis rubbed, ſallies out in a Circle, and being repelled by the ſolider Parts of the Air, it returns to its own Pores; and then thoſe light Bodies which lie in the way are drawn of courſe. But let this be as it will, we are to obſerve, that Amber has no particular Sympathy with Straw, more than with other light things; for when 'tis rubbed, it draws Paper, and ſmall Grains of Duſt, &c. with the ſame Strength: Beſides, this attractive Quality is not peculiar to Amber. Glaſs, Spaniſh Wax, Gum, Jett, and moſt Precious Stones, will do the ſame thing. To examine at length whether Yellow Amber is a ſort of Gum or Roſin, would be foreign to this Article: 'Tis enough to take notice, that it ſeems to be a ſort of Roſin, becauſe nothing but Fire will melt it; whereas Water has this Effect upon Gum. 'Tis reported notwithſtanding, that a learned Dutchman has found the Secret of reducing Amber to a ſoft Conſiſtence without Fire; and that being thus amalgemated, and brought to a Paſte, he can work it to what Figure he pleaſes: And that by this Invention, he has clapt an Embryo in the middle of a Maſs of Amber, and kept it in this Condition at Utrecht a great many Years. * Diſſertat. du Sieur Dennys, 1672.

AMBOYNA, a large Iſland in the Eaſt Indies, near Seran: 'Tis very fruitful in Cloves and Nutmegs: For gathering and trading in this Commodity the Engliſh had five Factories, the Town of Amboyna being the Chief. The Fort, tho' built at the Charge of the Engliſh, was in the Year 1622 in the Poſſeſſion of the Dutch, and garriſon'd with two hundred Men. This Place was thus fortify'd, to engroſs the Trade of Amboyna and the Neighbouring Iſlands. And to work the Engliſh from having a Share in this Branch of Commerce, they forg'd a Plot for a Pretence to deſtroy the Factory. I ſhall give a ſhort Account of the Falſhood and Barbarities of the Dutch Planters practis'd for this Purpoſe. In February 1622, ſeveral Japoneſe were put to the Torture upon Suſpicion of a Deſign of ſeizing the Caſtle; and upon Interrogatories put to them, whether the Engliſh were not concern'd in the Enterprize, the Extremity of the the Pain made them bend to falſe Evidence, and confeſs they were. Upon this, Beaumont, Johnſon, Clark, and ſeveral others were apprehended; and upon their denying the Charge, put to the Torture. The Manner of this unparallel'd Cruelty was as follows: They drew up the pretended Malefactor by the Hands to the Top of a large Door, where they faſten'd two Staples of Iron on each Side, his Hands being diſtended from each other as far as 'twas poſſible. After this they fix'd his Feet towards the Bottom of the Door, ſtretch'd them to the greateſt Diſtance, and made them faſt. The next Step in their Barbarity was their binding a Cloth ſtrait about his Neck and Face, that little or no Water might paſs; then they poured Water upon his Head till the Cloth was full, ſomewhat higher than the Mouth and Noſtrils: In this Condition there was no breathing without ſucking in the Water; which being continu'd to be poured ſlowy upon him, ſwell'd his Noſe, Ears, and Eyes, to a very painful Size; and at laſt threw him into a Swoon: And to prevent the Perſon's expiring and ſlipping through their Hands, they took him down, forc'd him to vomit up the Water; and as ſoon as he was a little recover'd, drew him up again, and repeated their Cruelty ſeveral times. Thus one John Clark was ſerv'd, 'till his Body was ſwell'd to three times the Bigneſs of his natural Proportion; his Cheeks were blown to great Bladders, and his Eyes ſtarted beyond his Forehead. This frightful Teſt making no Impreſſion upon his Conſtancy, they hoiſted him up again, and ſet lighted Candles to the Bottoms of his Feet, till the Blood drawn had put out four of them ſucceſſively apply'd. After this he was fir'd under the Armpits, 'till the Inſide might be ſeen; his Elbows and Palms of his Hands had the ſame Treatment: And being thus miſerably martyr'd, he was carry'd to a Dungeon, 'till Maggots crept out of his Body. Several others were brought to the Water-Rack; and if that prov'd too feeble, the Fire was either try'd or threaten'd. Thus theſe poor Engliſh, by the Rage of the Torture, were driven to confeſs a Plot they knew nothing of, and which indeed was no better than a Counterfeit Charge upon them. However, to carry on the barbarous Farce, ten Engliſh, ſix Japoneſe, and one Portugueze, were executed. At the Place of Execution, they all appeal'd to God Almighty, and declar'd themſelves innocent and wholly unconcern'd, with the higheſt Expreſſions of Solemnity. The Engliſh the Night before ask'd each other's Pardon for yielding to the Torture, and giving falſe Evidence. Part of this Narrative was brought into Europe by ſix of thoſe Perſons who were apprehended for the pretended Plot. The reſt of the Account is drawn up from the Report which the Dutch Eaſt-India Company deliver'd to the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company, in Defence of their Proceedings at Amboyna. The Hiſtory of the barbarous Cruelties and Maſſacres committed by the* Dutch in the Eaſt Indies. By R. Hall, B. D.

*AMBROSE. (Saint) To this Father's Life, in the firſt Volume of Morery, I ſhall add his Anſwer to Symmachus, concerning the Altar of Victory: But here 'twill be neceſſary to premiſe Symmachus's Addreſs for the Heathen Religion, and particularly for tolerating the Cuſtomary Ceremonies at this Altar, and for reſtoring the Revenue ſettled upon the Veſtal Virgins. This Symmachus, who addreſs'd the Emperors Valentinian, Theodoſius, and Arcadius, was a Nobleman and Governor of Rome.

May it pleaſe your Majeſties,

'AS ſoon as your Loyal Senate had the Satisfaction to 'ſee the Adminiſtration in acceptable Hands, the 'Laws executed upon Miſbehaviour, and the Blemiſhes 'of the latter Reigns wiped out; laying hold on the 'Opportunity of ſo happy a Juncture, they took the 'Liberty to break a melancholy Silence, and ſent me 'to repreſent their Grievances. This honourable Body 'was refus'd Acceſs to the late Emperor, becauſe ſome 'of the then ſcandalous Miniſtry knew, that being admitted with their Addreſs, they could not have fail'd 'of Juſtice. Having therefore a double Commiſſion, 'as Governor of your City, I ſhall report ſomewhat 'of the publick Affairs, and, as the Senate's Deputy, 'humbly lay their Requeſt at your Majeſties Feet. Now 'the Times are ſo happy, that Men don't think one 'thing and ſpeak another. To report clearly; endeavouring to force Inclination, turns but to indifferent 'Account; Diſſimulation is often the Conſequence of 'ſuch a Method; whereas the Prince is much better 'ſecur'd by Affection than Reſtraint: However, this 'acceptable Expedient was not always ſuggeſted to your 'Majeſty's Predeceſſors. The Selfiſhneſs of the Courtiers was ſometimes the Occaſion of unſerviceable Advice. Now what good Subject can endure theſe Miniſters, who preferr their private Intereſt and Quarrels 'to the Publick Advantage? The Senate has Reaſon to 'purſue thoſe with Cenſure and Reproach, who rather 'than be diſappointed in their Ambition, venture the 'Leſſening of their Prince. As for us, we make it our 'Buſineſs to guard your Honour and Adminiſtration; 'for which way can we make your Majeſty's Reign more 'glorious and commendable, than by appearing in Defence of the Cuſtoms of our Anceſtors, and the Laws 'of our Country, upon which the Fate of the Empire 'depends? For your Majeſty's Character will then appear moſt in Luſtre, when you are convinc'd that nothing is to be done contrary to ancient Uſage, and 'the Precedent of your Anceſtors. And here I ſhall 'crave Leave juſt to recollect the Condition of that Religion which has ſo long prov'd ſerviceable to the Commonwealth. Let the Emperors of both Perſuaſions 'and Sentiments be recollected, and your Majeſties will 'find that the laſt of them adher'd to the old Worſhip, 'and the other did not diſcharge it: If ancient Religion can't make a Precedent, let latter Connivance ſerve 'for this Purpoſe. Who can wiſh ſo well to the barbarous Nations, as not to requeſt the Altar of Victory? 'Let us guard againſt the future, and avoid the Preſages 'of Misfortune: Let the Honour of the Diſtinction 'remain at leaſt, tho' the Deity is not worſhip'd. Your 'Majeſties owe a great deal to Victory, and I hope your 'Debt will be increas'd: Let thoſe have an Averſion to 'this Power and Protection, who never receiv'd any 'Benefit by it. As for your Majeſties, we hope you 'won't deſert a Patronage that has given you ſo many 'Triumphs. All People addreſs to this Aſſiſtance, and 'therefore let no body deny the Worſhiping of that 'which every body wiſhes for. And if there was no 'unlucky Preſage in declining this Regard, the bare 'ornamenting the Senate would plead for it. We 'humbly intreat your Majeſties, that thoſe Cuſtoms we 'have been uſed to from our Infancy may be tranſmitted to our Deſcendants: Ancient Uſuage has ſtrong 'Charms in it. What was done in this Caſe by Conſtantius, of Immortal Memory, was of ſhort Continuance, 'and good Reaſon for it. Now all thoſe Precedents 'thus ſhort-liv'd, ſhould be carefully avoided. The Senate is ſolicitous to eternize your Memories and Reputation, and that future Ages may find nothing to 'correct in your Adminiſtration. Where ſhall we ſwear 'Allegiance to your Perſons, and Obedience to your 'Laws; and what Terror of Religion will there be to 'frighten Inſincerity, and ſecure the Truth of Teſtimony? 'Tis granted the Deity is Omnipreſent, and 'that there is no Shelter for Perfidiouſneſs: But notwithſtanding this, the Solemnities of Religion, and 'the Preſence as it were of the Immortal Powers, is a 'great Reſtraint upon Miſbehaviour. 'Tis this Altar 'which contributes to general Harmony and good 'Underſtanding, which creates Confidence and Truſt; 'neither is there any thing which gives more Weight 'to the Reſolutions of the Senate, than their doing 'nothing without firſt ſtaking down their Honours, 'and giving the Security of an Oath. Shall this Auguſt 'Place be prophan'd, and laid open to Perjury? And 'ſhall out noble Emperors, who are fenc'd by this ſolemn Engagement, approve ſo dangerous an Innovation? But it may be ſaid, Conſtantius, of Divine 'Memory, went thus far. However, let us rather imitate the reſt of that Prince's Conduct, who had never 'attempted any thing of this kind, had another been miſled before him. For the wrong Step of a Predeceſſor is often retriev'd by him who ſucceeds, and the 'Cenſure of a former Precedent produces Reformation. 'When the Practice was new and untry'd, invidious 'Meaſures brought Excuſe along with them: But if we 'ſhould imitate what we know is diſlik'd, that Plea for 'us can by no means be admitted: Let your Majeſties 'rather copy the more ſerviceable and agreeable Parts 'of Conſtantius's Original. This Prince left the Privileges of the Holy Virgins entire, furniſh'd Prieſts of 'noble

'noble Extraction, did not deny the cuſtomary Expence 'for Religion, was attended by the Senate in Cavalcade, 'paſs'd through all the Streets, view'd the holy Places 'without Diſlike, read the Inſcription of the Gods, 'examin'd the Antiquity of the Temples, and admir'd 'thoſe that founded and built them. Although he 'was of another Religion himſelf, he left the receiv'd 'Devotions to the Empire. Indeed, there are great 'Diverſities in theſe Matters, and almoſt every body 'has ſomething Particular, either in the Object or 'Manner of Adoration. The Deity has aſſign'd differ-'ent Guardians and Ways of Worſhip to Towns and 'Countries; and whole Nations, no leſs than particular 'Perſons, have their Titular Genii. Beſides, this adhe-'ring to Antiquity fortifies the Notion of the Gods Ex-'iſtence, and leads to the Knowledge of their Perfecti-'ons. For ſince Human Reaſoning is ſomewhat dark 'and perplex'd, which way can we be better convinc'd 'of the Being and Aſſiſtance of the Deities, than by 'ancient Records, and repeated Experiments of the 'Good they have done us? And if Length of Time 'gives any Authority to Religion, we ought to believe 'the joint Teſtimony of ſo many Ages, and follow our 'Fathers Conduct, who ſo happily follow'd their own." 'Let us imagine Rome a ſingle Perſon, and making your 'Majeſties the following Addreſs.

Moſt Noble Princes, and Fathers of your Country,

'I Beſeech you would regard my Age, to which the 'holy Rites have lengthen'd me, and give me Leave 'to practiſe the ancient Ceremonies. I don't requeſt 'the Privilege of an old Cuſtom, barely becauſe I am a 'Free City: No, this Way of Worſhip has made me give 'Law to Foreign Nations, and Miſtreſs of the World: 'Theſe holy Rites beat Hannibal from the Walls, and 'the Gauls from the Capitol. Has long Continuance 'made me ſo unfortunate as to be charg'd with Dotage? 'Granting ſomething of the Reaſonableneſs of Novel 'Inſtitutions; granting this, Reformation in old Age 'is not without Diſgrace; 'tis for the Guardian Gods 'we addreſs your Majeſties. Beſides, Religion, notwith-'ſtanding the Diverſity of the Manner, is every body's 'Concern. Now that which is thus the general Concern, 'ought in Equity to be reckon'd the ſame thing: All 'of us view the ſame Stars, the Heavens are common 'Benefit, and we are all lodg'd in the ſame individual 'World. Why then ſhould we diſagree about differ-'ent Enquiries and Notions concerning Truth? One 'Path will never lead us to ſo retir'd a Secret; but this 'Argument is fit for Men of Leiſure, and Philoſophers; 'Petitioning, and not Diſputing, is our preſent Buſi-'neſs. What great Service has the ſeizing the Reve-'nues of the Veſtal Virgins done your Majeſties Exche-'quer? Can that Favour, which the frugaleſt Emperors 'allow'd, be refus'd by the moſt Generous? Farther, 'their Office is no leſs Ornamental than their Dreſs. 'Tis an honourable Employment to ſpend their Youth 'in the Services of Sacrificing: They deſire therefore 'that the Nominal Privilege and Diſtinction may be 'continued; for ſince their Eſtates are ſeiz'd, 'tis to be 'hop'd their Poverty may ſecure their Character. To 'ſpeak clearly, the ſeizing their Revenues has rais'd their 'Reputation: Single Life, undertaken for the Publick 'Service, is the more valuable for being leſs conſider'd. 'However, far be it from your Majeſties to furniſh your 'Exchequer from ſuch a Fund; may Plundering the 'Enemy, and not Impoveriſhing the Prieſthood, augment 'your Revenues: Can any Gains make your Majeſties 'Satisfaction for invidious Acquiſitions? And ſince no 'body can charge you with Avarice, this Conſideration 'makes thoſe People more unfortunate, when ancient 'Benefactions are taken from them. To ſuffer thus un-'der Princes unblemiſh'd with Avarice, and who make 'no Invaſions upon Property, is a double Calamity. 'Seizure under ſuch Princes ſeems rather deſign'd to 'puniſh the Loſer, than gratify him that takes: The 'Publick Treaſury detains thoſe Farms which dying 'Perſons ſettled upon the holy Virgins and their Atten-'dance. Your Majeſties, the great Protectors of Juſtice, 'are requeſted, that the common Right of Legatees may 'not be deny'd the Religion of your Capital. Let your 'Subjects make their Wills without Apprehenſions of 'Diſappointment: Let them have the Satisfaction to 'believe their laſt Diſpoſitions will not be defeated, 'under Princes ſo free from Covetouſneſs. Let this 'Happineſs of Mankind be a Pleaſure to your Majeſties. 'Indeed this Caſe of the Veſtal Virgins has made dy-'ing People ſomewhat uneaſy. But can we ſuppoſe the 'Roman Religion ſhould be diſcourag'd by the Roman 'Conſtitution? What will the taking away theſe Eſtates 'be call'd, when there is neither Law nor Accidents to 'make a Forfeiture? People lately Enfranchiz'd, and 'even Slaves, enjoy what is left them by Laſt Wills and 'Teſtaments. None but the noble Virgins, the Mini-'ſters of Religion, and the Guardians of the Publick 'Safety, are thrown out of their Eſtates deſcended and 'ſettled upon them. What Satisfaction is it to re-'nounce the World, to dedicate their Perſons to the 'Publick, to draw down the Bleſſings of the immortal 'Gods, and procure the Eternity of the Empire; to 'aſſiſt your Arms and your Eagles with their holy Ap-'plications, to lend the Force of their Prayers for com-'mon Benefits, and yet to be ſtruck out of common 'Right? Is then the Condition of Slaves preferable 'upon the Compariſon? Is the Property of ſingle Per-'ſons of the loweſt Diſtinction ſecure, and ſhall the 'Publick Intereſt ſuffer, which 'tis never adviſable to 'diſoblige? Let no body imagine I am pleading the 'ſingle Cauſe of Religion: No, all the Misfortunes of 'the Empire are owing to Miſmanagements of this 'Kind. Our noble Anceſtors countenanc'd the Veſtal 'Virgins and the Miniſters of the Gods with moderate 'Revenues, and reaſonable Privileges. This Bounty 'continued undiminiſhed, till ſome mercenary Cour-'tiers ſuggeſted the Seizure, and turn'd the holy Re-'venues to mean and ſcandalous Uſes. And what was 'the Conſequence? Why, a General Famine follow'd, 'and the Huſbandman was diſappointed of his Harveſt. 'This was no Fault of the Soil, let us not charge 'the Stars with unfriendly Influences; the Corn was 'neither ſpoil'd by Mildew, nor over-top'd with Oats; 'twas Sacrilege which blaſted the Seaſons, and made 'Nature languiſh and wither. For when Religion was 'thus held to Short-Allowance, 'twas no more than 'reaſonable that Mankind ſhould ſtarve with it. In-'deed, if there is any Inſtance of ſuch a Calamity, 'we are willing the Famine ſhould be imputed to the 'Unfriendlineſs of the Year. The Air is unbenign, 'People live upon Browſe like Deer, and pure Neceſ-'ſity carries the Countrymen into the Woods for Acorns. 'When did any Misfortune of this Kind happen to the 'Provinces, when the Miniſters of Religion had Reſpect 'and Maintenance? When was the Oak ſhaken for 'Human Food? When did the Graſs and Plants 'periſh in the Roots? When did not the Plenty in one 'Country relieve the Diſtreſſes of another; when the 'holy Virgins had their Share in the Product of the 'Field? A handſome Subſiſtence for the Prieſts brought 'Plenty along with it, inſur'd the Fruitfulneſs of 'the Earth; and there was more of general Advan-'tage than Bounty in it. Is it not eaſy to collect the 'Cauſe of former Plenty from the preſent Famine? 'Tis 'poſſible ſome may object, that Publick Support is 'uſually deny'd to a Foreign Religion; but far be it 'from ſuch good Princes to imagine, that what has 'been ſettled by the Commonwealth upon Societies, 'ſhould belong to the Publick Treaſure. For ſince the 'Commonwealth conſiſts of Individuals, thoſe Settle-'ments granted from thence return to ſingle Property. 'Your Majeſties are Sovereign and Supreme; but not-'withſtanding this Prerogative, you protect every Per-'ſon in his own; and value Juſtice above Arbitrary 'Power. Be pleas'd therefore to recollect your Bounty, 'and whether theſe Eſtates, convey'd to new Grantees, 'can be look'd on as a Largeſs to the Publick? Thoſe 'Privileges and Emoluments, ſettled for the Honour 'of the City, are no longer in the Granters Power; 'and that which at firſt was a Bounty, becomes a Debt 'by Cuſtom and Time: And therefore thoſe who ſug-'geſt you will be conſtrued to give, unleſs you take 'away, do but perplex your Conſciences, and inject un-'reaſonable Scruples: 'Tis a more ſerviceable Conduct 'to get the Protection of all Religions, and eſpecially 'of that which was ſo beneficial to your Anceſtors. May 'your Majeſties have the Protection, and leave the 'Worſhip to us. We humbly deſire the Continuance 'of that Religion which preſerv'd your Fathers Em-'pire, and bleſs'd that fortunate Prince with Legitimate 'Iſſue.

'Iſſue. This Emperor, of Divine Memory, looks down 'upon us from the Sky, pities the Diſtreſs of the 'Prieſts, and reckons his own Adminiſtration cenſur'd 'by breaking in upon what he preſerv'd. Let your 'Brother, of Divine Memory, have Part of his Conduct 'rectify'd, and his Memory reliev'd, by reforming un-'ſerviceable Advice: Let that Act be cover'd which he 'did not know was ſo unacceptable to the Senate. 'Tis 'plain the Addreſs to him was deny'd, for fear the Senſe 'of the Publick ſhould come to his Notice; and thus, 'from the Judgment of the laſt Reign, your Majeſties 'may form your Reſolution, and not queſtion reverſing 'that Order, which want of Information occaſion'd.

S. Ambroſe's Letter to Valentinian the Younger.

Ambroſe, Biſhop. To the moſt Auguſt and Serene Emperor Valentinian.

'WHEN I underſtood the noble Symmachus, Go-'vernor of the Town, had addreſs'd your Majeſty, 'that the Altar of Victory, remov'd from the Senate-Houſe, 'might be ſet in its former Place; that your Majeſty 'deny'd this Pagan Requeſt; that tho' you had liv'd but 'a ſhort time, your Minority was unſurpriz'd, your Re-'ſolution well grown, and your Faith in full Maturity. 'When I receiv'd this acceptable News, I preſented a 'Petition, which tho' comprehending what was neceſ-'ſary, I deſired a Copy of the Governor's Speech. To 'this, I ſhall return an Anſwer, not that I diſtruſt your 'Majeſty's Chriſtianity, but only by way of Precaution; 'and that I am aſſur'd of Equity and Conſcience when 'this Paper is examin'd. All that I intreat is, That 'your Majeſty would regard the Weight of Things, more 'than the Embelliſhments of Style; for (as the Scripture 'informs us) Men of Learning and great Capacity have 'a Golden Tongue: This Luſtre is apt to dazzle the Sight, 'and gain the Fancy; but Gold, when handled and turn'd 'about, proves only bare Metal: 'Tis true, there's 'Beauty and Value, but nothing of Life or Nouriſh-'ment in it. I deſire your Majeſty would be pleas'd to 'examine the Heathen Religions; they pretend to ſome-'thing that is Great, and look rich upon the Superficies; 'but then the Inſide is coarſe, and barren of Truth and 'Significancy. They talk big of God Almighty, and 'creep to Stocks and Stones at the ſame time. The no-'ble Governor inſiſts upon three Points in his Harangue, 'which he ſuppoſes very conſiderable: That Rome may 'have her ancient Ceremonies reſtor'd; that the Privi-'leges of the Prieſts and Veſtals may be return'd; and 'that a Publick Famine has been conſequent to the with-'drawing this Revenue. To maintain his firſt Propoſi-'tion, he brings in Rome with a melancholy Requeſt 'for the Worſhip and Equipage of her old Religion. 'Theſe holy Miniſtrations, ſays ſhe, ſtopt the Conqueſt 'of Hannibal and the Gauls, and prevented them from 'carrying the City; and thus the Argument for re-'commending the Power of the pretended Deities is a 'Proof of their Impotence: For when Hannibal inſulted 'the Roman Ceremonies, and had their Gods againſt him 'in the Field, the Progreſs of his Victory went on not-'withſtanding, and came up to the Walls of the Town. 'Why were they ſo diſtruſtful as to ſuffer a Siege, when 'their Gods were all up in Arms for them? And to 'what Purpoſe ſhould I mention the Gauls, who preſs'd 'up to the Capitol, and would have deſtroy'd the poor 'Remains of the Government, had they not frighted a 'Gooſe to diſcover their Attack? You ſee what ſort of 'Guardians are lodg'd in the Roman Temples! Where 'was Jupiter at this deſperate Criſis? Or did he deliver 'his Oracle in a Gooſe? But what Neceſſity am I under 'to deny the Romans the Aſſiſtance of their Religion? 'For did not Hannibal worſhip the ſame Deities? Let 'them take their Choice therefore for the Force of their 'Protection: If this Religion conquer'd for the Romans, 'twas routed in the Carthaginians; and if the Carthagi-'nians triumph'd upon this Score, the Romans were not 'a Jott the better for it. Let's have no more therefore 'of this Remonſtrance of the People of Rome, 'tis made 'only to draw Diſlike upon your Majeſty's Adminiſtra-'tion: Beſides, 'tis miſtaken in Matters of Fact; for 'Rome has given no ſuch Inſtructions, ſhe ſpeaks to her 'Burghers in other Language. What makes you diſco-'lour me to no purpoſe with the Blood of innocent Cat-'tle? Military Succeſs and Trophies are not to be look'd 'for in the Lungs of a Sacrifice, but in the Skill and 'Reſolution of an Army: 'Twas Methods quite fo-'reign to theſe, that made me Miſtreſs of the World: 'Twas by fighting that the famous Camillus ſeiz'd the 'Enemies Standards, check'd the Career of their Victo-'ry, and beat them from the Tarpeian Fort; and thus 'Bravery defeated thoſe your Religion could do nothing 'with. What ſhould I mention Attilius Regulus, who 'made himſelf a Sacrifice, and reſign'd to Torture for 'his Country? Scipio Africanus fetch'd his Triumphs 'out of Hannibal's Army, and not from the Altars of 'the Capitol! What ſignifies your Recital of old Prece-'dents? I hate Nero's Cuſtoms, and thoſe who govern'd 'like him. What need I inſiſt upon Emperors of two 'Months ſtanding, and who began and ended their 'Reign almoſt at the ſame time? Is it ſo very unuſual a 'thing for barbarous Nations to make Incurſions? Was 'he a Chriſtian Emperor that was taken Priſoner by the 'Perſians? And was not the Altar of Victory in being at 'that time? And did Julian's Preſages of Conqueſt make 'his Expedition ſucceſsful? I am heartily ſorry for my Mi-'ſtakes; Recollection warms me with Remorſe, and ſtrikes 'Bluſhes into my Face: Let old Age be only aſham'd 'for being paſt mending; 'tis no Scandal to be convert-'ed with the reſt of the World, for no time is too late 'to grow wiſer; and Truth and Regularity are more 'commendable than gray Hairs: 'Tis no Diſadvantage 'to change for the better; Ignorance of God-Almighty 'was the only Thing I ſhar'd in common with the Bar-'barians. Your Sacrificing is nothing but Blood and 'Butchering: Why do you conſult a dead Beaſt, to 'know the Pleaſure of the Living God? Let the Sove-'reign Being that made me inſtruct me in holy Myſte-'ries, and not a Man who knows little of himſelf. 'Who can inform me better concerning God, than God 'himſelf? How can we give Credit to you in theſe Mat-'ters, when you confeſs yourſelves at a Loſs about the Ob-'ject of Worſhip? There is no travelling, ſaith the Go-'vernor, in a ſingle Path to ſo dark a Retirement: 'That which you are ignorant of, is communicated to 'us by Intelligence from Heaven; and what you reach 'after in uncertain Conjectures, is demonſtrated to us 'by infallible Truth, and Divine Revelation: Beſides, 'your Religion falls much ſhort of the Majeſty of ours: 'You requeſt the Emperors to take the Gods into their 'Favour; but we pray to Chriſt that the Emperors may 'be protected. You worſhip the Product of your own 'Art and Labour; but we reckon it a ſcandalous Fancy 'to think a God can be made. You won't believe Chriſt 'to be a God, becauſe you can't comprehend Death 'could happen to the Sovereign Being; but this Miſtake 'proceeds from want of Conſidering, that the Deity was 'untouch'd when Death took hold of his Human Nature. 'Twas a voluntary reſigning Life; he died only, that 'thoſe who believed in him might live for ever. Can 'any thing be more unaccountable than your Practice? 'You worſhip with Reaſons for Diſgrace, run counter to 'your own Principles, and diſregard your Characters of 'Honour. You believe your Deity a Log: What ſcan-'dalous Worſhip muſt it be under ſuch a Perſuaſion! 'You won't believe Chriſt could die! What an honour-'able Teſtimony is this from Infidelity!

'But the Statues of the Gods (continues the Governor) 'ſhould have their Altars; the Decorations of the Tem-'ples ſhould be reſtor'd: Let theſe things be requeſted 'from a Pagan Governor. A Chriſtian Emperor pays no 'Regard to any Altar, but that of our Saviour. How can 'they preſs a Chriſtian Prince to encourage their Sacri-'legious Devotions! Did ever any Heathen Emperor 'erect an Altar to our Saviour? While they ſolicit the 'reſtoring their Superſtition, they ſhould reflect upon 'their own Precedents: By this Recollection, they may 'eaſily underſtand how much Chriſtian Emperors are 'bound to regard their Religion, ſince Heathen Princes 'have been ſo careful of theirs. And ſince the Example 'has been ſet by the wrong Side, let the Reaſon of it be 'follow'd by the right. Farther, we glory in ſpending 'our Blood for our Belief; but theſe People are di-'ſturb'd by a little leſſening their Fortune. What we 'look upon as Marks of Conqueſt, they complain of as 'Injury and Diſadvantage. We Chriſtians never receiv'd 'a greater Favour from the Pagan Government, than 'when we were beaten, out-law'd, and carry'd to the 'Stake. Thus Faith reckons that a Reward, which is 'Puniſhment with Infidelity. You ſee our Courage 'and Conſtancy holds on thro' Injury, thro' Want and 'Torture: We rely wholly upon Principles and Con-'ſcience; but they do as good as confeſs thier Ceremo-'nies can't ſtand without Penſions and Eſtates. Pray 'let the Veſtal Virgins, ſays the Governor, be reſtor'd to 'their Privileges: Let thoſe make this Plea, who imagine 'no body will live ſingle for nothing: Let thoſe who deſ-'pair of Vertue, encourage by Rewards. And, after 'all, how many Virgins has this Encouragement pro-'duc'd? What flouriſhing is here about a little Single 'Life? Can't Nature be laid aſleep without all this De-'clamation? But how many have they thus ſolemnly pro-'feſs'd? But Seven Veſtals in the whole Town. This is 'all the Poſſe they can raiſe; the Richneſs of their Dreſs, 'their Purple, Pomp and Equipage, their tempting 'Privileges and Revenues, can't make them exceed this 'ſmall Number: Beſides, 'tis but a Temporary Re-'ſtraint; for when they are thirty ſeven Years old, they 'may quit their Retirement and marry. And now, I de-'ſire they would conſider our Practice, and judge upon 'the Compariſon: Here they may ſee vaſt Numbers un-'der this Reſerve, and almoſt whole Nations engaged to 'Single Life: Here they have no rich Dreſs to invite 'them, a coarſe Veil is more Security for their Honour. 'Here's no Pains taken, no Expence laid out to heighten 'their Beauty and recommend their Perſon; no Purple 'Dreſs, no Luxurious Eating, but frequent Faſting in-'ſtead on't: Here's nothing of Privilege and Profit, 'but all Circumſtances ſeemingly diſcouraging. How-'ever, thoſe who look deeper into the Matter, will find 'this Diſcipline ſerviceable to the Deſign, and that a 'retir'd Profeſſion is recommended by hard Uſage, and 'aſſiſted by Mortification. Mercenary Virginity ſigni-'fies little: To give it Value, it muſt come from Choice 'and Inclination. To be brib'd to Retirement for 'ſome Part of Life, looks like making a Penny of 'one's Perſon. The firſt Succeſſes of Chaſtity, are the 'Conqueſts of Avarice; for a mercenary Temper is a 'dangerous Temptation to Miſcarriage. However, let 'us allow the Encouragements of Bounty and Subſiſtence 'to Women of ſingle Life: I deſire to know, whether 'the Chriſtians are to have any of this Privilege? If ſo, 'what Fund or Exchequer can furniſh ſo vaſt an Expence? 'But if they inſiſt ſuch Revenues are only to be ſettled 'on the Veſtals; are they who challeng'd the whole Ad-'vantage for themſelves under Heathen Emperors, not 'aſham'd not to allow us a Share, when our Princes are 'Chriſtian? They complain likewiſe, that their Prieſts 'are not ſubſiſted with the Publick Treaſure: What 'Rhetorick and Remonſtrance have been ſpent upon this 'Head? On the other ſide, the Legiſlature has lately 'thrown us out of Legacies and Hereditary Eſtates; and 'yet there is no Complaint about the Matter: We don't 'think ourſelves injur'd, becauſe the Loſs ſits eaſy upon 'us. For Inſtance, if a Chriſtian Prieſt would have an 'Exemption from the Offices of the Ward or Pariſh; 'he is obliged to give up his Paternal Eſtate. Had the 'Pagans this Grievance, what a Noiſe would they make 'with it, and in what Tragical Strains would they re-'monſtrate? That a Prieſt ſhould purchaſe the Leiſure 'to execute his Office with the Loſs of his Patrimony; 'that he ſhould be thtown out of all his Fortune to ca-'pacitate him for Publick Service; that he ſhould be 'thus rewarded with Poverty, for ſpending his Time 'for the common Good: I deſire you would conſider 'Matters, and ſee the Comparative Hardſhips put upon 'us. The Under-Officers of the Temples have the Be-'nefit to ſtand in Wills and Teſtaments; neither falſe 'Religion, nor Meanneſs of Condition, nor Scandal 'in Life, is any Bar to a Legacy; none but the Clergy 'are made incapable of this common Right: Thoſe only 'who guard the Empire with their Prayers, and oblige 'the whole Community, can neither receive Legacies, 'nor Deeds of Gift; tho' from the moſt unexception-'able Perſons. Thus, when they can charge nothing 'upon Miſbehaviour, they ſuffer for their Profeſſion, 'and there is a Fine, as it were, ſet upon their Office. 'A Bequeſt left by a Chriſtian Widow to the Prieſts 'of a Heathen Temple, is good in Law; but if ſhe leaves 'it to our Saviour's Miniſtry, it can never be recover'd. I 'don't ſpeak this by way of Complaint, but to let them 'know we are ſenſible of the Partiality; and I had ra-'ther we ſhould ſuffer in our Pockets, than in Chriſtian 'Qualities. But here they ſuggeſt, that thoſe things 'which are either granted or deviſed to the Church, con-'tinue unſeized: I deſire they would tell us who has 'taken their Temples Benefactions from them, Hard-'ſhips the Chriſtians have formerly ſuffer'd; and if 'the Pagans were thus uſed, it would be nothing more 'than Reprizal; but now we have a great Clamour for 'Equity and Juſtice. But were theſe fine things thought 'on when the Chriſtians were Forfeited and Plundered? 'When they grudg'd them their Lives, and denied them 'the common Benefit of a Grave? How many of us were 'thrown into the Sea, and diſpatch'd by all Kinds of 'Torture? Their now condemning the Cruelties of their 'Anceſtors, is owing to the Conqueſts of Chriſtianity: 'But what Sign of Reformation is this, when they con-'demn their Practice, and yet plead for their Religious 'Eſtabliſhments. No body denies them the Furniture 'and Decorations bequeathed to their Temples or Augurs; 'the Lands were only taken away, becauſe what they 'challenge upon the Score of Religion, was not religi-'ouſly employed. Thoſe who inſiſt upon Chriſtian Pre-'cedents, ſhould be govern'd by Chriſtian Practice: Now 'the Church has no Fortune, but Truth and Ortho-'doxy: Theſe are her Revenues; the Eſtates of the 'Church are Proviſions for the Indigent. I deſire they 'would inform us, how many Captives the Temples 'have ranſom'd, what Diſtribution they have made to 'the Poor, and what Supports thoſe in Exile have re-'ceived from them? The Benefit of the Laws therefore 'is not loſt by converting their Lands to better Uſes. 'Farther, the noble Governor ſuggeſts the Seaſons have 'prov'd the Juſtice of the Prieſt's Claim, and a Fa-'mine has revenged the Sacrilege: Men are forc'd to 'live like Hogs upon Acorns. Prodigies of Calamities 'appear, which were never heard of when the Heathen 'Religion prevailed: As for Feeding upon Maſts, 'twas 'counted a Bounty from the Heavenly Powers; and it 'was the Acorns which made the Oak of Dodona wor-'ſhipped. Now, 'tis very unlikely the Gods ſhould 'puniſh in that Diet they uſed to reward: Beſides, 'what Equity is there in ſtarving the World, for the 'Misfortune of a few Prieſts? At this rate the Judgment 'would be exceſſive, and the Puniſhment ſtretch'd far-'ther than the Fault: Farther, their Temple-Privileges 'have been ſuppreſſed a great many Years through the 'whole Empire. Have the pretended Deities been 'aſleep all this time? And does it juſt now come into 'their Fancy to revenge the Affronts put upon them? 'But, granting the Gods made themſelves Reparation 'the laſt Year, what makes them now withdraw their 'Anger, and expoſe themſelves to Contempt? For now 'there is no need of trotting into the Woods for Enter-'tainment; the Harveſt and Vintage afford Plenty, and 'the Husbandman is anſwer'd to his Wiſh. Who can 'be ſo ignorant of the uſual Courſe of Things, as to be 'ſurpriz'd at unfriendly Seaſons? And yet 'tis well 'known, a great many Provinces receiv'd a very plen-'tiful Product, even the laſt Year; for did not the 'Gauls then grow rich by an extraordinary Crop? 'Great Quantities of Corn were exported from Pan-'nonia; and Rhetia was fruitful to Diſadvantage: The 'Barbarians grudg'd her Plenty; and thus the large Pro-'duct of the Earth brought Invaſion upon her. I am 'now to encounter the laſt and moſt conſiderable Pre-'tence: 'Tis ſuggeſted, your Majeſty is obliged to re-'ſtore thoſe Supports ſo ſerviceable to your Perſon and 'Empire: For, ſays the Governor, leave us the Wor-'ſhip, and take you the Benefit of our Religion: This 'is that, moſt Chriſtian Princes, which we can't endure; 'for thus they reproach us with their worſhipping their 'Gods under your Authority; for though they have 'none of your Command for this flaming Impiety, they 'interpret your Connivance to conſent. I deſire they 'would keep their Protection to themſelves, and let us 'ſee the Shelter of their Superſtition: For if their Dei-'ties can't aſſiſt thoſe that worſhip them, how is it like-'ly they ſhould do us any Good who deſpiſe them? But, 'continues the Governor, the Cuſtoms of our Ance-'ſtors muſt be maintained. Why ſo? Is not Improve-'ment the Conſequence of Time? Are not feeble Begin-'nings brought afterwards to Perfection? And don't 'Arts and Sciences refine upon Leiſure and Practice?

'If

'If old Cuſtoms are ſo unalterably Peoples Inclination, 'what made Rome change her Fancy, and go into ſo much 'new Faſhion? What makes them take Leave of their 'Shepherds Cottages, and affect Magnificence and Figure? 'To ſpeak cloſe to their Point, what makes them af-'fect the Ceremonies of conquered Countries, import 'ſo much new Religion, and worſhip the Gods they had 'taken Priſoners? To mention all their Foreign Dei-'ties, is needleſs upon this Occaſion. Among the reſt 'of their Pagan Miſtakes, they make Victory a Goddeſs, 'which has nothing of Power or Perſonal Subſiſtence. 'Victory is more a Gift than a Governeſs; and they 'may thank their Legions, not their Religion, for this 'Favour. She muſt needs be a wonderful Goddeſs, when 'ſhe is nothing but the Soldiers Merit, or the Chance of 'a Battle! The Altar of this pretended Deity they would 'have erected by the Parliament Houſe, that is, where 'a Majority of Chriſtians meet of courſe. Now, what 'is this challenging an Altar, but inſulting the Creed? 'Can it be borne, that a Heathen ſhould ſacrifice where 'a Chriſtian is obliged to be preſent? Yes, ſays the Go-'vernor, in Effect, let all the Company, though never 'ſo unwilling, have their Eyes diſturbed with the 'Smoak, their Ears grated with the Muſick, and their 'Smelling diſobliged by the Frankincenſe. In ſhort, 'let them run through all the Penance of the Sacrifice, 'be entertained with their Averſion, and perſecuted 'through moſt of their Senſes. They are not contented 'to have the Statues and Furniture of their Religion in 'the Baths, the Portico's, and Squares of the City. Muſt 'there be particular Diſadvantages in a common Aſſem-'bly, and muſt not all the honourable Members be made 'eaſy alike? Muſt the Chriſtian Senator be bound by 'Pagan Solemnities, and made Party to an unwarran-'table Religion? for if he diſcountenances their Swear-'ing at the Altar of Victory, he is charged with betray-'ing good Faith; and if he acquieſces, he conſents to an 'impious Engagement. But where, ſays the noble Sym-'machus, ſhall we give Security to the Conſtitution, and 'ſwear Allegiance to your Majeſty? Does then the Force 'of the Laws depend upon Pagan Ceremonies? Does 'this dangerous Superſtition, to ſpeak ſoftly, tye the 'Subject to the Prince, and bind the Conſcience not 'only of thoſe that are preſent, but of thoſe that are ab-'ſent? And which is more, your Majeſty muſt ſuffer in 'your Religion. Complying with this Requeſt, inferrs 'the Imputation of the Practice. This is in effect to 'make you ſwear at the Altar yourſelf: A Thing which 'Conſtantius, of illuſtrious Memory, did not think he could 'look on without ſomewhat of Apoſtaſy and Pollution. 'He ordered this Altar to be taken away, but did not 'order it to be replaced. There was Command in 'one Caſe, and nothing but Connivance in the other. 'If your Majeſty conſents to the Replacing this Altar, 'the alledging your not being there will be no ſuffi-'cient Excuſe; for Conſent affects us more than bare 'looking on. Your Majeſty's Edict in Favour of Sym-'machus's Addreſs, makes you preſent in your Mind, 'which is more than if you were ſo with your Body. 'Tis your Majeſty which convenes the Honourable 'Senate; 'tis by your Authority and for your Service 'they come together; 'tis to your Majeſty, and not to 'the Pagan Deities, they engage their Conſcience. 'Tis 'you they prefer to their neareſt Relations, but however 'not to their Religion. This Affection, as the Go-'vernor obſerves, is much better than abſolute Com-'mand. But all this muſt be only expected while Chri-'ſtianity is guarded, which guards your Empire and Au-'thority. Let not your Majeſty be diſturbed, as if the 'Publick might ſuffer by your Refuſal; let them not 'interpret any Accidents to the Diſcountenance of their 'Religion. Thoſe that have look'd into Hiſtory, and Hu-'man Affairs, perceive things have not always the ſame 'Succeſs, and that nothing is more common than Re-'verſe and Revolution. Who was more proſperous than 'Pompey the Great, or had more good Wiſhes and Pray-'ers from the Temples? But this General, after he 'carried his Conqueſt through a great Part of the World, 'and brought three Triumphs into Rome, was routed in 'the Field, purſued out of the Roman Territories, and 'murdered at laſt by an Ægyptian Eunuch. Who was 'more given to Sacrificing than Hamilcar the Cartha-'ginian General, who, all the time his Troops were en-'gaged, was devoutly buſy at the Altar? And when he 'found his Army was almoſt routed, he threw himſelf 'into the Holy Fire, to be revenged on the unſervicea-'ble Worſhip. And here I might mention Julian, 'who, by giving too much Credit to the Soothſayers, 'burnt his Fleet, and made his Retreat impracticable. 'Thus there's no Concluſion to be drawn from bare E-'vents; As for us, we promiſe nothing upon Futurity, 'nor give Occaſion to any Diſappointment. Thus I have 'replied to the Governor's Harangue, and here my De-'ſign has only been to confute his Addreſs, and not to 'expoſe his Religion. As for your Majeſty, I hope this 'Application will put you upon Precaution; for ſince 'the Governor argues from two former Reigns, that the 'Old Religion was practiſed by the firſt Prince, and to-'lerated by the latter; and here he deſires your Ma-'jeſty would wink where you can't comply: By his ar-'guing in this manner, your Majeſty may plainly collect 'the Regard you ought to have for your Religion; that 'you are not to follow a Pagan Precedent, nor reverſe 'the Edicts of your Brother, of pious Memory. For if 'they plead the bare Connivance of Chriſtian Emperors, 'and inſiſt on their not reverſing the Laws of Paganiſm; 'how much more is your Majeſty obliged to reſerve a 'Reſpect for your Brother Gratian's Government? In-'deed here tho' you diſlik'd, it would be expected you 'might diſſemble: But ſince this Conſtitution of his was 'juſt and commendable, your Religion and your Rela-'tion too are good Motives to maintain it." Ambr. Epiſt.

And here it may not be improper to add ſomething concerning S. Ambroſe: After his Father's Death, his Mother, his Siſter, and his elder Brother Satirus, removed with him to Rome. Marcellina was a Nun, and profeſſed by Pope Liberius. S. Ambroſe's Education form'd him to Learning. Being a Perſon of Quality, Anicius Probus, Præfectus Prætorio, and Symmachus above mentioned, made an Acquaintance with him. He pleaded for ſome time with ſuch Reputation in Probus's Court, that he choſe him for one of his Aſſiſtant Judges. This Anicius Probus afterwards made him Governor of Æmilia and Liguria, (now known by the Name of the Milaneze) the State of Genoa, Piedmont, the Duchies of Parma and Modena, with the Territories of Bologna and Romania. Upon the Death of the Biſhop of Milan, the Arians and the Catholicks endeavouring to chooſe one of their reſpe-ctive Parties, made the Election ſomewhat troubleſome. S. Ambroſe being Governor, thought himſelf obliged to go to the Church, and bring them to Temper. And here he harangued the People with ſo much Senſe and good Nature, that they immediately choſe him Biſhop. He endeavoured to decline the Choice, but all to no purpoſe. He was conſecrated on the 7th of September, in the Year 374. And Pope Damaſus recommended Simplicianus, a Prieſt of Character, to live with him. Secundianus and Palladius, two Arian Prieſts, were confu-ted and condemned in the Council of Aquileia by S. Am-broſe's Arguing and Intereſt. This Council was held in the Year 381. He denyed the Empreſs Juſtina a Church in Milan for the Uſe of the Arians, and defended the Conſubſtantiality of the Logos againſt thoſe Hereticks. He aſſiſted in ſeveral Councils at Rome, Aquileia, and elſewhere; and held one Synod at Milan, where Priſ-cillian, Jovinian, &c. were condemned. His Prudence and charitable Temper were extraordinary, being nei-ther paſſionate on the one ſide, nor over-complaiſant on the other. He refuſed going into the Intereſt of Maxi-mus, notwithſtanding this Uſurper promiſed to protect the Catholicks, and ſuppreſs the Arian Hereſy. When the Emperor Theodoſius was diſpoſed to grant the Jews a Synagogue, S. Ambroſe made a reſolute Remonſtrance againſt it. Paulinus, Prieſt of Milan, and not the Biſhop of Nola, wrote this Father's Life at S. Auſtin's Inſtance. 'Tis likewiſe written by Cardinal Baronius. Both theſe Lives were printed before his Works at Rome by Cardi-nal Montalto, afterwards Sixtus Quintus, and dedicated to Gregory XIII. The beſt Edition is that publiſhed at Paris by the Benedictines in 1691. It is two Volumes in Folio, with learned Annotations; with the Life of S. Am-broſe, extracted from his Works; and a judicious Critick upon the Writings of this Father. * Paulin. & Baron. in Vit. Ambroſ. Hieron. Catal. Theodoret, Dupin IV. Cent. &c.

AMBROSIAN (The) Office, a Liturgy uſed in the Church of Milan. 'Tis ſo called from S. Ambroſe, who was Biſhop there. Walafridus Strabo is of Opinion, that this this Liturgy was drawn up by S. Ambroſe, for the Uſe of his whole Dioceſe. But 'tis very probable, that both the Church of Milan and other Churches in Italy had particular Liturgical Offices, different from the Roman, and that before S. Ambroſe's Time. When the Popes brought the Roman Service into the Weſtern Churches, Milan fenced againſt the Innovation with S. Ambroſe's Authority: And from that Time their old Liturgy was called the Ambroſian Office. Before Charlemagne's Reign, every Cathedral had ſomething particular in Divine Service: And more than that, there was great Diverſity in Rome itſelf. For Abailardus obſerves, that none but the Church of Lateran in Rome kept the old Liturgick Office without ſome Alteration. * Hittorpius.

AMELOT, (De la Houſſaie) an Author living in the Eighteenth Century, very remarkable for his Attainments in State-Affairs. He has tranſlated ſeveral French and Italian Authors upon this Subject. The Hiſtory of the Council of Trent in Quarto, turned into French from Father Paul's Original, is Amelot's Performance. Balthazar Gratian, a Spaniſh Jeſuite's Book, called The Courtier, in which there are a great many Politick Maxims, and ſome dangerous ones too, is Amelot's Tranſlation. He likewiſe publiſh'd a Tranſlation of Tacitus's Annals, with Notes, Hiſtorical Remarks, and Reflexions on a great many Paſſages of this Hiſtorian. The greateſt part of theſe Notes are borrow'd from Spaniſh Authors. He publiſh'd a new Edition of Cardinal Oſſat's Letters, with Political Notes upon them. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Government of Venice, and a long Preface ſet before the Collection of the Treaties of Peace printed at Paris in Six Volumes in Quarto. He was a Perſon of great Penetration, and made very judicious Remarks upon Publick Affairs. He died in the Year 1708. * See his Works.

AMELSFELD. The Sclavonians call it Caſſowopolye, others call it Coſſowo, and Campo Merlino, Campus Caſſobus, Caſſovius, Merulæ Campus; a Country in European Turky. It lies in the Eaſtern Part of Boſnia, upon the Confines of Servia, near the River Sitza. 'Tis a large Champaign Country, and very fruitful. Priſtina, and ſeveral other Towns are in it: But 'tis chiefly remarkable for the ſignal Victory gained by Amurath I. againſt Lazarus Deſpot of Servia. In this Battle the Deſpot was taken Priſoner, and the Sultan either killed in the Fight, or ſoon after the Victory. * Maty, Dictionaire Geograph.

AMENECLES, a Corinthian Burgher: He was the firſt Grecian who invented the Building of Galleys with three Benches of Oars: For before this time, the Greeks made uſe of none but long Ships and Galleys with fifty Rowers. But after Amenecles's Improvement, they cruized upon the Seas with much more Eaſe and Expedition. Forty Years after Amenecles's Death, there was a Sea-Fight between the Corinthians and the Corcyreans. Thucidydes obſerves, that this was the firſt Sea-Engagement mentioned in Hiſtory. 'Twas two hundred and ſixty Years before the End of the Peloponneſian War, which falls in with the firſt of the 29th Olympiad. * Thucyd. Lib. 8. Marſham, Secul. XVII.

AMERICA, (The Iſles of) Inſulæ Americanæ. Under this Denomination we are only to underſtand thoſe ſituated about the American Continent, and not all thoſe in the oppoſite Hemiſphere. The chief Iſlands under this Diſtinction are Caliphornia in the South-Sea, La Mocha, La Chilue, La Madre di Dios, La Terre del Fogo, in the Magellanic Sea; the Great and Small Antilles, under which are comprehended the Lucayan Iſland, Bermudas, and Newfoundland. The Patagons in America are commonly ſeven Foot and a half high, and not ten Foot, as is related in the Firſt Volume of Morery. * Maty, Diction. Geograph.

AMERONG, (Godart Adrian) of the Family of Reed, originally of Weſtphalia: He was Governor of the Province of Utrecht in the Year 1643, and Preſident of the College of the Nobles. He ſpent moſt of his Time in Embaſſies, in which he acquitted himſelf to great Commendation. His firſt Embaſſy was to the Court of Denmark, in the Year 1656. He had a nice Juncture to manage; Free Paſſage through the Sound was abſolutely neceſſary for the Trade of the United Provinces. This Branch of Commerce was diſturbed by the Cruizing of the Swedes, who threaten'd to beſiege Dantzick. To ſtop the Roving of theſe Cruizers, and prevent the taking ſo conſiderable a Town, was very ſignificant Service. By the Succeſs of this firſt Negotiation, Monſieur d'Amerong let his Countrymen know what they might expect from him. For this Ambaſſador and Monſieur Van Beuning made a cloſe Confederacy between the United Provinces and Denmark. Upon this Alliance, Admiral Obdam wintered in the Port of Copenhagen. Thus the Commerce of the North was reſtored, and the Swedes diſappointed in the Siege of Dantzick. Frederick III. King of Denmark, was ſo ſatisfy'd with Monſieur d'Amerong's Conduct upon this Occaſion, that he made him a Knight of the Elephant.

But Monſieur d'Amerong's moſt Significant Embaſſy was that to the Princes of Germany in 1672. The Arms of France had carried their Conqueſts into the Heart of the United Provinces; Inteſtine Diviſions expoſing the Remainder to the ſame Misfortune: Neither was there any Likelihood of Reſtoring their Affairs; the States, being ſurprized by the Suddenneſs of the War, had no time for making Alliance. Monſieur d'Amerong was order'd to ſolicit the Princes of the Empire to ſtop the Courſe of the French, which otherwiſe might reach themſelves in the Conſequence. And here he manag'd with ſo much Conduct and Capacity, that the French King, diſturbed with the Succeſs of his Negotiation, burnt his Seats and Caſtles, for his refuſing to return into the Province of Utrecht at that Prince's Order. But Amerong preferr'd the Liberty of his Country to his private Intereſt. And thus refuſing to obey ſo diſſerviceable an Order, he brought the German Princes to his Point, procur'd the Aſſiſtances deſir'd, and obliged the French to quit their Conqueſts in the Low Countries. He had afterwards a Publick Character at the Courts of Saxony, Brandenburgh, Brunſwick, and Denmark, where he died, in October 1691. * Memoire Manuſcript.

AMESIUS, (William) an Engliſhman, and Divinity-Profeſſor at Franeker, lived in the Seventeenth Century. He concerned himſelf very much in the Controverſy with the Arminians, and wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt them. He is reckon'd a good Caſuiſt: He wrote a little Book in Twelves, entituled, Bellarminus Enervatus. Medulla Theologiæ was another Performance of this Author. He likewiſe wrote againſt the Socinians, againſt Metaphyſicks, and in Defence of Puritaniſm, &c. He died in the Year 1635.

* AMHARA. For Fifty ſix Provinces in Morery, Vol. I. read Thirty ſix.

AMILIA, (Michael) Arch-Prieſt in the Church of Pâmiers, and Great Vicar of M. Caulet Biſhop of this Dioceſe. He was a Perſon of great Probity and Underſtanding: He had a very good Talent for the Pulpit: And before he engaged with the Biſhop of Pâmiers, he had been employ'd a conſiderable time in the Dioceſe of Toulouſe in Quality of a Miſſionary. He had likewiſe a Genius for Poetry, and turned the Duties and Precepts of Chriſtianity into Verſe, adapted to the common Capacity. Theſe Verſes were printed, and ſet to Muſical Notes at the Charge of the Clergy of Pâmiers, and afterwards ſent to the Parochial Curates, to be diſtributed amongſt their Pariſhioners. Thus Father Amilia's Deſign was to teach the Principles of Religion in an agreeable manner, and to prevent Chriſtians entertaining themſelves with prophane Songs. * Memoires du Temps.

AMINIUS, (Rebius) a celebrated Roman Lawyer, and one that had raiſed a great Eſtate. In the Conſulſhip of Q. Voluſius and P. Scipio, his Age brought great Infirmity and painful Diſeaſes upon him; and not having Fortitude enough to bear up againſt the Shock, he order'd his Veins to be open'd; for he wanted Courage to wait for Nature's Diſcharge. 'Tis no great Wonder to find a Man of Luxury and Licentiouſneſs afraid of the common Methods of Death, which frequently make very rugged Approaches. * Tacit. Lib. 3. Annal. cap. 30.

AMIUAM, Amiuamia, one of the Iſlands called Majottes. It lies in the Æthiopick Ocean, between Zanguebar and the Iſland of Madagaſcar. It is about threeſcore Miles in Compaſs, well improv'd, and has a good Haven. * Baudrand.

* AMMIANUS, (Marcellinus) was bred to the Profeſſion of Arms: He went along with the General Urſicinus, when the Emperor Conſtantius ſent him into the Eaſt in the Year 350. He returned with Urſicinus into Italy in 354. He followed him afterwards into Meſopotamia, and ſerved under him till Urſicinus was laid aſide and diſgraced, in the Year 360. He marched with Julian lian in that Emperor's Expedition againſt the Perſians, lived at Antioch in the Reign of Valens, and at laſt ſettled at Rome, where he wrote his Hiſtory. 'Tis not certainly known when he died; but that he lived to the Year 390, appears from his XXVIth Book, where he mentions the Conſulſhip of Nectarius, who was Conſul that Year with Valentinian II. This Hiſtory, conſiſting of thirty one Books, begins with the Reign of Nerva, and is carried on to the Death of Valens. But the thirteen firſt Books are loſt, and even the nineteen remaining have ſuffer'd by Time, and the Negligence of Tranſcribers. And though his Style is ſomewhat rough, he clears a great many Paſſages in Antiquity; and the Reader may learn many things in him which are not to be met with elſewhere. He ſpeaks with Temper, and ſometimes with Commendation of the Chriſtian Religion, notwithſtanding he was a Heathen himſelf. But the Emperor Julian is the Hero in his Hiſtory. Gronovius's Edition is the beſt: 'Twas printed at Leyden with Remarks in 1693. * Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. Lib. 11. cap. 9. De Hiſtor. Græc. Lib. 11. cap. 18. La Mothe le Vayer, Jug. des Hiſt. Henric. & Adrian, Valeſ. &c.

AMNON, a Rabbi of Mentz, contemporary with Moſes Barnachman, lived about the Year 1242. He was condemned to die for Judaiſm at Mentz. The Jews report, the Biſhop of Mentz and the principal Burghers requiring him to turn Chriſtian, he deſired three Days to conſider: That he repented his having requeſted this Delay. When the Time given him was expired, the Biſhop ſent for him. Amnon, upon his Appearing, deſired they would cut out his Tongue, for his having deferred to ſanctify the Name of the Bleſſed God. That the Biſhop, inſtead of his Tongue, order'd his Fingers and his Toes to be cut off: That Amnon put them in Pickle, and the next New-Year's-Day he came to the Synagogue, and brought them with him: That having ſaid his Prayers there, he diſappeared, and three Days after was ſeen by a Jew in the Night. This Jew he order'd to ſend his Prayer to all the Synagogues of the Diſperſion. The Prayer begins thus; Grant Conſtancy and Reſolution to the Holineſs of this Day. Amnon's Order was obeyed, and the Jews ſay this Prayer upon every New-Year's-Day, and the Day of Expiation. This Account, with the Prayer, is inſerted in the Machazor, or Common-Prayer Book of the Jews. * The Hiſtory of the Jews, from our Saviour to this Time, by way of Continuation of Joſephus's Hiſtory, corrected and enlarged by M. Du Pin. Edit. Paris in 12*mo.* 1710. Tom. VII.

* AMONIUS, born at Alexandria in the Third Century. His Parents being Chriſtians, gave him a happy Education: And notwithſtanding Porphyry charges him with deſerting from Chriſtianity, Euſebius and S. Jerom are poſitive to the contrary. He was a very celebrated Philoſopher, and made it his Buſineſs to acquaint himſelf thoroughly with the Writings of Plato and Ariſtotle, and endeavour'd to reconcile the Principles of theſe two Philoſophers. S. Jerom puts him in the Liſt of Eccleſiaſtical Writers; and Euſebius takes particular Notice of one Book, entituled, The Conformity of Moſes with Jeſus Chriſt. But his principal Performance was his Diateſſeron or Monoteſſaron, that is, a Goſpel extracted from the Four, or a ſort of Harmony of the Four Evangeliſts. 'Tis upon this Book Euſebius formed his Canones Evangelici. Several Authors are of Opinion, that this Harmony is the ſame with that which goes under the Name of Tatian's; but this is not certain. That in the Bibliotheca Patrum, attributed to Amonius, is neither his nor Tatian's. S. Gregory Nyſſen, in his Treatiſe of the Soul, cites a Paſſage from Amonius, to explain the Union between the Soul and Body; and another from this Author and Numenius the Pythagorean, to prove the Soul's Immateriality. Some will have him Author of The ſhort Life of Ariſtotle, and of Commentaries upon this Philoſopher: But theſe belong to another Amonius, or rather Amonianus of Alexandria, a Peripatetick Philoſopher, living towards the End of the Fifth Century, and mention'd in Photius's Bibliotheca. * Hieron. in Catal. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 6. cap. 19. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 22. Porphyr. in Vit. Plotin. Cave, Hiſt. Litter. &c.

AMONIUS, (Andrew) born at Lucca in Italy: He travelled into England to make his Fortune in the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century; where, if his Life had held out to any conſiderable Length, he had certainly ſucceeded. His Genius lay moſt for the Belles Lettres and Latin Poetry. He held a great Epiſtolary Correſpondence with Eraſmus: And in ſome of his Epiſtles, he repents his having left Rome, and ſeems diſſatisfied with his Entertainment in England. Eraſmus ſent him ſome politick Maxims to advance his Fortune; tho' we have Reaſon to believe it was but in Jeſt. "Don't ſcruple, ſays he, concerning yourſelf in every body's Buſineſs: Juſtle every body, and pretend to ſomething extraordinary: Mortify as many as you can that ſtand in your way, and let your Friendſhip and Averſion be governed by your Intereſt: Give nothing, but where you expect more in Return: Be complaiſant to every body's Humour: Have two Strings to your Bow: Let the World know how many People court your Acquaintance: Give out you are going to leave the Place where you are, and make a Show of preparing for that purpoſe: And produce ſome Letters where you are invited to great Advantages elſewhere." At laſt his Fortune came forward at Henry VIII.'s Court, and this Prince gave him a Publick Character to Pope Leo X. He died at forty Years of Age, of the Sweating Sickneſs: And if he had lived, 'tis probable his Preferments had gone farther. He was in King Henry's Army at the Battle of the Spurs, and when Therouan and Tournay were taken. The Abridgment of Geſner's Bibliothec. gives the following Catalogue of his Poems: Scotici Conflictus Hiſtoria, Lib. 1. Bucolica, ſeu Eclogæ, Lib. 1. De Rebus Nihili, Lib. 1. Panegyricus quidam, Lib. 1. Epigrammata, Lib. 1. Poemata Diverſa, Lib. 1. * Eraſm. Lib. 8. Epiſt. 40. Epiſt. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

AMONTONS, (William) born in the Year 1663. His Father was an Advocate or Bariſter, who removed out of Normandy, and ſettled at Paris. His Son William happening to be deaf in a great meaſure, lived very retired. Being commonly alone, and giving himſelf wholly to contemplating Nature, he began to think of Improvements in Mechanicks and Machines. His firſt Attempt to find out a perpetual Motion was an impracticable Fancy. The while he was working upon this Project, he perceived the Neceſſity of finding out ſome Principles proper to the Subject; and that without going upon ſure Grounds, the Enquiry would come to nothing. This Conſideration put him upon ſtudying Geometry. Afterwards he improv'd himſelf in Drawing, Surveying, and Architecture, and was employed about ſeveral Publick Buildings: But 'twas not long before he advanced to higher Attainments; for having made himſelf a conſiderable Maſter in that Part of the Mechanicks which is required to the Conveniences of Life, he carried on his Diſquiſitions to find out the Laws of that noble Mechaniſm, which God has made uſe of in forming the World. Barometers, Thermometers, and Hygrometers, deſigned to ſhow the Variations of Natural Bodies, (till lately ſo very little known) are probably the moſt ſerviceable Inventions in Modern Philoſophy, for diſcovering the Powers of Matter and Motion. And tho' the Service is conſiderable, the Application is very nice. M. Amontons exerted his Thoughts this way; and in 1687, being then but twenty four Years of Age, he preſented the Academy of Sciences with a new kind of Hygrometer, very much approved. He propoſed ſeveral new Methods for making Barometers and Thermometers, and here he happen'd to light upon the ſame Thoughts with ſome Principal Members of the Royal Society at London. What next follows, the Reader may take for no more than an Exerciſe of Fancy, tho' a very ingenious Diverſion. 'Twas this: He invented a way of communicating Intelligence at a great Diſtance in a very little time. For Example, to bring News from Rome to Paris in three or four Hours, which People living between thoſe two Places ſhould know nothing of. This Undertaking, which looks ſo full of Paradox and Romance, was performed twice in a leſſer Remoteneſs before Perſons of the Firſt Quality. The Secret lies in planting ſeveral Perſons at a great many Places, as it were in a Row. Theſe Perſons being furniſhed with proper Glaſſes, and perceiving certain Signals or Marks at the Poſt before them, convey them to the next, and ſo on. Theſe different Marks ſerve inſtead of ſo many Letters in the Alphabet, which no body could decipher but thoſe of Paris and Rome. The Glaſſes ſtrengthening the Sight to an extraordinary degree, make the Diſtance of the Men poſted, which ought to be as few as 'tis poſſible: And the ſecond Poſt, tranſmitting the Signal or Marks to the third, as fast as he receives them from the first, the News is conveyed from Paris to Rome almost in as little time as such Signals could carry it from one End of Paris to another. In 1695, he printed a Book, and dedicated it to the Royal Academy of Sciences, entituled, Remarques & Experiences Physiques sur la Construction d'une Nouvelle Clepsydre, sur les Barometres, Thermometres, & Hygrometres. Notwithstanding Clepsydres, or Water Hour-Glasses, so much used by the Ancients, have been quite laid aside since the Invention of Clocks, much more exact and commodious: Notwithstanding this, M. Amontons took a great deal of Pains to make one of these Water Hour-Glasses, believing it might be very serviceable at Sea. For by the Manner 'twas contriv'd, the most violent Agitation of a Ship could not disconcert the Motion; whereas our Clocks with Wheels will certainly go wrong with such shaking. The Reader may see in M. Amontons's Book with how much Art and Curiosity his Clepsydra is contriv'd. The old Inventions of these Water-Clocks seem not to have reached the Secret. In 1699, he was admitted in the Royal Academy, when that Society receiv'd its new Regulation: There he laid before them his Discoveries from the Rubbing of Bodies, which has given a very serviceable Light to Mechanick Philosophy. His new Thermometer was his next Performance. After his Death, his Rectify'd Barometer appear'd, and another Barometer without Mercury to be used at Sea, with other new and curious Experiments upon the Weather-Glass, and the Nature of the Air. He had a very peculiar Talent for Experiments: His Thoughts were very happy and fine in the Idea, and furnished with a great many Remedies to remove Inconveniences which lay in the way of Invention: To which we may add, a singular Dexterity for Execution. He died in October 1705, being no more than two and forty Years old. The Publick has lost a great many serviceable Inventions by his Death; for he was working upon the Improvement of Printing, of Building Ships, and making a Plough. His Candor and Sincerity was no less commendable than his Understanding. But he was a Person who refused to recommend himself any other way than by his Performances, and would never make his Court but by his Merit; which considering the World, is not the likeliest way to advance a Man's Fortune. * Fontenelle Histoire de l'Acad. de Sciences, Ann. 1705.

*AMOS, the third of the Twelve small Prophets with the Latins, and the second with the Greeks, was no more than a plain Herdsman of Tecoa, a Town rebuilt by Rehoboam, six Miles South of Bethlehem, as S. Jerom informs us. Amos prophesy'd under the Reigns of Uzziah King of Judah, and Jeroboam II. King of Israel. He foretold the Captivity of the Israelites, and the Judgments that would happen to the Enemies of God's People. Amasiah, Priest of Bethel, procured his Death in the Year of the World 3219, and 785 before the Incarnation: It was about the time of the famous Earthquake, reckon'd to the five and twentieth Year of Uzziah, and the fortieth of Jeroboam. Amos's Prophecy is chiefly written against the Ten Tribes, whose Ruin and Captivity is predicted. However, at last he gives them some Hopes of being restored, which can mean nothing but the Reign of the Messiah. The Style of this Prophet has less Elevation than the rest, and he commonly makes use of Comparisons and Expressions suitable to his Education and Employment. He was put to Death at the Instigation of Amaziah the Priest, and not by any Order from the King of Judah. The Author of the Prophets Lives, reckon'd to S. Epiphanius, Clemens Alexandrinus, some modern Writers, and Simler among the rest, are of Opinion, that this Prophet is the same with Isaiah's Father. But S. Augustin, S. Jerom, S. Basil, Isidore Hispalensis, and several modern Writers, very reasonably reject this Opinion. For to speak to the Point, Isaiah was a Man of Quality of Jerusalem; whereas the Prophet Amos frankly confesses he was but a poor Herdsman. * Clemens Alexandrin. Lib. 1. Strom. Hieron. Comment. in Isaiah & Amos, Augustin. Lib. 18. de Civit. c. 29. Basil. in cap. 1. Isai. Huet. Demonstrat. Evangel. &c.

S. AMOUR, (William) Doctor and Professor of Divinity at Paris, living in the Thirteenth Century. He had a great Contest with the Dominicans in Defence of the University of Paris; but the Detail of this Affair is too long to be inserted. He died in the Year 1272. His Works were printed in 1632. The 1st is entituled, De Pharisæo & Publicano: The 2d, De Periculis Novissimorum Temporum: The 3d, Collectiones Scripturæ Sacræ. The Design of these Tracts is to expose those Monks and Fryars, who, under the Mask of Humility, Poverty, and Begging, cover their Ambition and Pride. These Men, notwithstanding their mortified Appearance, endeavour to top upon others, to throw off Restraint, and encroach upon the Rights of Parochial Priests and Bishops. He reprimands their Conduct from the Authority of Scripture, the Ordinary Gloss, the Canon Law, and several Fathers. He maintains, that voluntary Beggary is no Instance of Vertue; and that no body ought to relieve a Beggar that's able to work. He disproves some Part of the Charge the Dominicans had loaded him with, and foretells the Mischief these new Preachers would bring upon the Church. Thomas Aquinas wrote a little Tract against this Doctor, entituled, Adversus Impugnantes Religionem; and Bonaventure wrote another, De Paupertate Christi, & Apologia Pauperum. Those who make S. Amour an Heretick, exceed in this Censure. To disprove this Imputation, the Reader need only consult Gulielmus de Nangis, and other Writers of that Time. De Nangis reports, that S. Amour's Book was burnt at Anagnia, not upon the score of having any Heresy in it, but because it raised a Faction against the Religious. * Joannes S. Victor, ad Ann. 1254. Gulielm. de Nangis in Vita S. Lud. ad Ann. 1255. Du Chêne, Chron. de Norman. 1256. M. Du Pin, Eccleſiaſt. Library, Cent. XII.

S. AMOUR, (Lewis) Doctor in Divinity, of the Faculty of Paris, and one of the Sorbonne, was born in that Town, and Godson to Lewis XIII. He commenced Doctor in 1644, and soon after distinguished himself in the Business of the Five Propositions. He was one of the Doctors whom the Bishops, who desired these Five Propositions should be explained with some Distinctions, chose to represent them at Rome, under the Popedom of Innocent X. He solicited the Cause with great Vigour and Application; but failing of Success, he returned to France, and declared for M. Arnaud's Opinion, Doctor in the Faculty of Divinity at Paris; and upon his refusing to sign the Censure of this Doctor, he was expelled that Society. In 1642, he printed a Journal of what passed at Rome relating to the Five Propositions. He died in 1687. * Memoires du Temps, M. Du Pin, Table Universelle des Auteurs Ecclesiastiques.

AMOU, a River called Abiamou by the modern Geographers. The Arabians call it Gihon and Nebrer Balkh, because it runs by the Town of Balkh. 'Tis the same with Oxus and Bactrus: It rises in the Mountain Imaus, and runs from East to West. 'Tis true, near the Country of Ckhovarezm, the Stream winds very much towards the Spring-Head; but after a long Course, it turns about again and falls into the Caspian towards the West. This River is a sort of Barrier between the Eastern Turks and the Persians. * D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Orientale.

AMPHIDAMAS, a famous Burgher of Chalcis, and General of the Troops of that Territory, was slain in a Battle against the Erythræans. The most celebrated Poets of Erythræa came to Chalcis at his Funeral, and put in for the Prize or Plate. Plutarch reports, that Homer and Hesiod were two of the Competitors: That the Judges, not willing to pronounce upon the Performances of these two great Poets, proposed the deciding the Disputes by their solving Riddles: And Hesiod appearing most exact and nimble at this Business, carried the Prize, which was a Golden Trivet. * Plutarch. Conviv. Sept. Sapient. Symposiac. Lib. 5. Q. 2.

AMPHORA, an Earthen Vessel with two Handles, and used for a Dry and Liquid Measure: It held about thirty six Pints Paris Measure. Suetonius reports, that one who stood for the Office of Quæstor or Treasurer, drank an Amphora of Wine at a Dinner with the Emperor Tiberius. Ob epotam in convivio propinante se vini amphoram; The Amphora was kept as a Standard in the Capitol at Rome: For which Reason 'twas called Amphora Capitolina. 'Twas a Foot square in all the three Dimensions. As for the Man mentioned by Suetonius, who strained to drink himself Treasurer, he was much outdone by Alexander the Great. This Prince, after a hard Exercise at the Bottle, went immediately to another Company: At this Entertainment, the Number being twenty, he drank to each of them, and pledged them in their Turn. When this was done, he call'd for Hercules's Bowl, Bowl, which held ſix Quarts Engliſh. This fill'd to a Brimmer, he drank to Proteas a Macedonian, and pledg'd him in the ſame Quantity. But this Draught proved as fatal to him as Socrates's Hemlock, for he fell down immediately, and then was ſeiz'd with that violent Fever, which carried him off. And this, in all likelihood, was the Poiſon he is reported to have died of. * Sueton. in Tiber. Athenæus, Lib. 10. cap. 11. & Lib. 12. cap. 18. Diodor. Sicul. Lib. 71. Plutarch. in Alexand. Macrob. Saturnal. Lib. 5. cap. 21.

*AMPOULE, (The Holy) a Vial kept in the Church of S. Remigius at Rheims. Tradition goes, that a Pigeon brought it full of Balm from Heaven, when Clovis was Baptized by S. Remigius at Rheims in the Year 496. This Story is currently reported in S. Remigius's Life, attributed to Hincmarus, by the Author of S. Clotilda's Life, by Flodoardus and the Annals of S. Bertin: But there is nothing of it in the Hiſtory of Gregorius Turonenſis. On the contrary, this Hiſtorian informs us, that when Clovis came into the Church, and preſented himſelf for Baptiſm, every thing was prepared for that Sacrament. Beſides, the old Life of S. Remigius abridged by Fortunatus, who lived but forty Years after this Saint, ſaith nothing of the Ampoule. S. Remigius's Life, attributed to Hincmarus, was drawn from Memoirs of ſlender Credit, as appears from miſtaking the Time of Clovis's Baptiſm. For this Life reports, that Clovis was Baptized upon Eaſter-Eve; whereas Avitus, in a Letter to the ſame Clovis, informs it was upon Chriſtmas-Eve. This, with the Silence of Gregory of Tours, who ſeldom or never omitts any Miracle, is a ſtrong Preſumption that the Story of the Ampoule was unknown in his Time. Chiffletius wrote againſt the Tradition of the Ampoule, and Alexander Jeſunator wrote an Apologetick Tract in Defence of it. This laſt was printed in 1652. * Gregor. Turon. Hiſt. Francor. Lib. 2. cap. 31. Hincmar. Coronatione Caroli Calvi, Tom. 1. pag. 744. Aimoinus, Lib. 1. cap. 16. Flodoard. Hiſt. Rhemen. Lib. 1. cap. 13. Le Sueur. Hiſt. de l'Empire & de l'Egliſe, à l'an de J. C. 496.

AMROU (Ben Al-As) one of the greateſt Mahometan Generals in the Beginning of that falſe Religion: He carried his Conqueſts through Egypt, Nubia, and a great Part of Lybia: He built Foſthat, near the ancient Egyptian Babylon, and laid Siege to Jeruſalem, and took it. 'Tis true, being informed by a Grecian, that he that took Jeruſalem, muſt have but three Letters in his Name; and he having four, he procured the Caliph Omar to ſit down before the Place; and to this Prince Jeruſalem ſurrendred. Now, in Arabick, Omar has but three Letters, and Amrou four. He was choſen Referee, to decide the Competition between Moavie and Hali, for the Caliphat. This Choice proved lucky for Moavie; for this Amrou, who had the Reputation of a long Reach, managed his Fellow-Referee ſo dextrouſly, that he prevailed with him to conſent to the depoſing Hali, and immediately proclaimed Moavie, who was the firſt Caliph of the Family of the Ommiades. * D' Herbelot, Bibliothec. Oriental.

AMUR, or Amoer, Amura, a River of Great Tartary, in Aſia: It riſes near the Lake Baycal, in the Province of Dauria, in the 117th Degree of Longitude; parts this Province from the Mogul's Territories, runs by the Town of Albazin; and after having held a long Courſe through a Country not well known, falls into the Eaſtern Ocean, in the 55th Degree of Northern Latitude, and the 152d of Longitude. This River runs at leaſt a hundred and twenty Miles, and receiving a great many ſmaller ones in its Paſſage, muſt needs be very great. Father Avril, a Jeſuite, calls it Yamour, in a Book entitled, A Voyage from Moſcow to China. He tells us, that Pearls and Rubies are fiſhed there, as they are likewiſe in the Rivers Aurguna and Schingal, which fall into it: And, that at the Mouth of Yamour, there is a Foreſt of Ruſhes, ſo big that a Man can ſcarce Fathom one of them. This is without doubt the ſame River which Sanſon calls Ghamas in his great Map of Aſia. *

*ANABAPTIST. To what is mentioned of this Sect in the Firſt Volume and Supplement to Morery, we may obſerve, that we are not to reckon thoſe Ancient Biſhops and Churches Anabaptiſts of the modern Diſtinction, who Re-baptized thoſe who had been Baptized, or rather Waſhed by the Hereticks. This Re-baptization, as 'tis commonly call'd, anciently practiſed in the Eaſtern Churches, was confirmed in the Councils of Synnada and Iconium in the Third Century; and in a Council held in Africk under Agrippinus Biſhop of Carthage, a Decree paſs'd to the ſame Purpoſe. The ſame Uſage was conſtantly obſerved in Africk, from Agrippinus to S. Cyprian. In the Year 255, and 256, this Controverſy was warmly managed between Pope Stephen and S. Cyprian; which latter, with the African Biſhops, decreed the Re-baptizing thoſe who had been Baptized by Hereticks. Stephen's Reſolution was contradictory to theirs: He determined, that all Hereticks whatſoever, that return'd to the Church, ſhould be received only by Impoſition of Hands. Siquis à quacunque Hæreſi venerit ad vos, nihil innovetur, niſi quod traditum eſt, ut manus ei imponatur in pœnitentiam. Firmilian, Biſhop of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, ſtruck in with the African Biſhops, wrote to S. Cyprian againſt Stephen's Sentiment, and, amongſt other Topicks, argued from the Cuſtoms of his own Country, Cappadocia; and S. Cyprian at a Council held at Carthage, had the ſame Practice confirmed. The Eaſtern Churches were a conſiderable time divided upon the Queſtion, as Dionyſius Alexandrinus obſerves. Afterwards, the Catholick Church made a Diſtinction upon Hereſy. The Council of Nice ordered the Re-baptizing the Paulianiſts: S. Athanaſius ſeems to void the Baptiſm of all Hereticks: S. Baſil is of Opinion, that all Hereticks, not excepting the Encratites and Novatians, ought to be Re-baptized. However, he grants their Baptiſm was allowed in ſeveral Churches; and that where ſuch a Cuſtom is received, he is willing to hold Communion with them. S. Cyril and S. Epiphanius are by no means favourable to the Baptiſm of Hereticks. The firſt Council of Arles in the Weſt, held in the Year 314, came to a Deciſion upon the Queſtion, and decreed, that thoſe who were Baptized in the Name of the Trinity, ſhould not have that Sacrament repeated. S. Auſtin and the Weſtern Church govern'd themſelves by this Diſtinction. The Donatiſts kept to the ancient African Cuſtom, Re-baptizing not only Hereticks, but Schiſmaticks alſo, and even the Catholicks who came over to them. Optatus does not diſallow their Practice, with reſpect to Hereticks; but then he condemns their Conduct in Re-baptizing Schiſmaticks and Catholicks, who they look'd on as guilty of Schiſm. On the other ſide, S. Auſtin ſeems to maintain all Baptiſm given in the Name of the Trinity valid, whether performed by a lawful Miniſter, or not. The Eaſtern Churches, without making uſe of the Diſtinction ſettled by the Council of Arles and S. Auſtin, conſider Hereticks under three Diviſions: They order the Paulianiſts, Eunomians, Sabellians, and other old Hereticks, who did not adminiſter the Sacrament with three Immerſions, to be Baptized. The ſecond ſort of Hereticks were to be received with Anointing, or Chriſm, without new Baptiſm; that is to ſay, the Macedonians, the Novatians, the Teſſara Decatitæ, and the Apollinarians: And, thirdly, the Neſtorians, the Eutychians, the Severians, the Acephali, and the Monothelites, were only required to abjure their Hereſy. This threefold Diviſion is ſettled by the ſecond Council at Conſtantinople in Trullo. * Launoi, de Concilio Plenario. Du Pin, Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III. &c.

*ANACLETUS, the ſecond Succeſſor to Linus in the See of Rome. Some Authors call him Cletus. Thoſe Writers who make Cletus and Anacletus two Popes, are undoubtedly miſtaken: For all the Ancients who mention Cletus in the Liſt of the Popes, ſay nothing of Anacletus; and thoſe who put Anacletus there, omitt Cletus. The Author of the Poem againſt Marcion, reckoned to Tertullian, is the only Exception to this Obſervation. Anacletus ſucceeded Linus in the Year 77; and after his Death, the See was filled with Clemens, who wrote the two Epiſtles to the Corinthians. And this is all the Ancients inform us concerning Anacletus. 'Tis true, he's inſerted as a Martyr in the Martyrologies, and ſo are ſeveral other Biſhops of Rome of the higheſt Antiquity. However, S. Irenæus gives this Title to none but Teleſphorus, and 'tis not improbable that thoſe of the moſt ancient Popes of Rome might be reckoned Martyrs in the Martyrologies; becauſe they openly profeſſed Chriſtianity in the Capital of the Heathen Religion. Bucherius, in his Kalendar of the Popes, ranges Anacletus with thoſe Biſhops who did not ſuffer Martyrdom. In Pope Damaſus's Pontifical, he is reported to have finiſh'd a Church in Honour of S. Peter's Memory, which he began to build when only a Prieſt: And that during his Pontificate, he ordain'd three Deacons, five Prieſts, and ſix Biſhops; but but there's no depending on this Relation. The three Epiſtles which go under this Pope's Name, are no better than Iſidore Mercator's Forgery. * Iren. Lib. 3. cap. 3. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 3. Optat. Lib. 1. Auguſtin, Epiſt. 165. Bucherius's Catalogue: Two Catalogues publiſhed by Father Mabillon. Baron. ad An. 103, 106, 112. & Martyrol. 13. &c.

ANANIAS, Son of Nebedeus, ſucceeded Joſeph in the Jewiſh High-Prieſthood, was the ſixty eighth from Aaron in the Dignity, and the fifteenth from the Incarnation. Quadratus, Governor of Syria, ſent him Priſoner to Rome, to clear himſelf before the Emperor, from the Charge of a Practice for a Revolt. Here he defended himſelf ſo well, that he was acquitted. After his Return, he impriſoned S. Paul, and ordered him to be ſtruck on the Face, which occaſioned the Apoſtle's ſaying, God ſhall ſmite thee, thou Whited Wall. And here Dr. Hammond is of Opinion, that Ananias was not God's High-Prieſt, becauſe the Aaronical Line had been ſomewhat interrupted by the Romans; at leaſt as to the Succeſſion of the Eldeſt Branch: And that Ananias was only Naſi or Vicar to the High Prieſt. This Ananias proſecuted S. Paul before Felix, Feſtus, and King Agrippa. He kept his Poſt about ſeven Years, and was then turned out by the Prince laſt mentioned, who put Iſhmael Son of Phabeas in his room. He was killed ſoon after the Jews revolted from the Romans. * Acts xxiii. v. 3. Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 20. cap. 5. & de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 2. c. 31, 32. Hammond, Annot. in iii. Luke.

* ANASTASIUS, Emperor of Conſtantinople, in the Beginning of the Sixth Century. For this Prince's Life, the Reader ſhall be referred to Morery, Vol. I. In this Place I ſhall only take notice, that the Author of a Diſcourſe of Free-Thinking cites a Paſſage out of Victor Tunonenſis, with a Deſign (as far as it appears,) to ſhake the Authority of the New Teſtament. The Paſſage cited from the Learned Doctor Mills is this: In the Conſulſhip of Meſſalla, at the Command of the Emperor Anaſtaſius, the Holy Goſpels, written by Idiot Evangeliſts, were corrected and amended. This, by the way is the Free-Thinker's Tranſlation. Now to ſhew this Teſtimony does a Deiſt no Service, we may obſerve, that Meſſalla was Conſul in the Weſt An. Dom. 506. and that this ſmall Chronicle of Victor's, reaching but to a Dozen Pages, ends An. Dom. 566: By Conſequence this Remark might be nothing but an old Story of threeſcore Years ſtanding. The next Inference is, that Victor might not be ſo good a Voucher for the Relation as this Author would have it. His next Remark, ab Idiotis Evangeliſtis, which the Free-Thinker tranſlates by Idiot Evangeliſts, reflects that Character of Diſadvantage upon himſelf, which he ſeems willing to throw upon the Evangeliſts. For Ἰδιώτης, and Idiota, both in Greek and Latin, mean nothing more than a Perſon illiterate and unlearned.

And as to the Fact itſelf, Doctor Mills might have diſentangled his Scruple, had that been the worſt of his Diſeaſe; for this Learned Doctor, in his Prolegomena to the New Teſtament, tells us, That 'tis certain, as certain can be, that no ſuch altered Goſpels were ever made publick. What Tumults? What Tragedies would they have raiſed? They would have coſt that hated Emperor his Crown and his Life: The Fact would have been ſpoken of, and deteſted by all the Hiſtorians; and not be found only (as it is; for Iſidore in his Chronicon declares he took it from Victor) in one blind Paſſage of a puny Chronicle.

To this it may be ſubjoined, that 'tis plainly demonſtrable, that no ſuch Alterations in the Goſpels ever paſs'd upon the World, as this Writer would ſuggeſt. For this Point, there is evident Proof from the Greek and Latin Fathers of the Four firſt Centuries. In the Writings of theſe Learned Authors, there is ſcarcely a Verſe in the New Teſtament but what is cited in one Place or other: The Agreement of theſe ancient Quotations with the Manuſcripts now extant, is undeniable Proof, that the Copy continued in the ſame unaltered Condition as they were in before the Reign of Anaſtaſius. And to reinforce the Evidence, if need were, we might bring in the entire Commentaries of S. Auguſtin, S. Jerom. S. Chryſoſtom, S. Cyril, Theodoret, &c. all dead before the Beginning of the Sixth Century: And yet their Text of the New Teſtament is the ſame with the Modern: To which we may add their Expoſitions, for farther Demonſtration. For the Texts they explain could not be altered in their Books, without making new Commentaries to agree with them. And to this may be added the Latin, Italick, and S. Jerom's Verſions, beſides others in the Eaſt, and all before the Date of this pretended Alteration.

That this General Alteration is meer Whimſy at the beſt, may appear from the following Conſideration: For if this bold Undertaking was really executed, and the very Bibles of Victor and Iſidore (with all the reſt) ſo altered and interpolated, what could the Meaning of thoſe Men be to publiſh the Fact, and tranſmit it to Poſterity? Indeed, what Tranſcriber would not have ſuppreſs'd thoſe Paſſages in both the Chronicons? Suppoſe all the World had Inſincerity and Folly enough to comply with ſuch a Practice, yet one may fairly conclude they would not have taken Pains to convey ſo hideous a Character of themſelves to After-Ages; they ſhould not have recorded the Forgery: They wou'd not certainly have ſo far abuſed the Evangeliſts, whom they believed inſpired, nor ſo effectually have deſtroyed that Religion, which this pretended Correction deſigned to preſerve.

In the next place we may take notice, that this Free-Thinker has omitted a very ſignificant Word both in his Latin and Engliſh Tranſlation, and which both Doctor Mills and Victor had furniſhed him with. The Word left out is Conſtantinopoli: At Conſtantinople, ſays Victor, the Goſpels were amended. And was this a General Alteration? Did this Correction, ſuppoſing there was any ſuch, reach all over Chriſtendom? Wou'd Theodorick, then reigning in the Weſt, have ſubmitted to this Order of Anaſtaſius? Of Anaſtaſius, I ſay, an unpopular Prince, and who could ſcarcely command within his own Palace? Thus we ſee the Story ſhrinks into a narrow Compaſs, and is fix'd upon a very unpromiſing Emperor; it pretends no farther than the City of Conſtantinople. And as for the Perſon, 'tis hardly imaginable that either this Emperor, or any other Chriſtian, could entertain a Fancy ſo black in the Complexion, and ſo impoſſible to execute. Anaſtaſius, if he had common Senſe, muſt needs know, that ſuch a flagitious Attempt would make him ſtill more diſreliſh'd, and draw new Odium upon him.

Laſtly, the Riſe of this ſcandalous Miſtake may probably be accounted for from a Paſſage in Liberatus Diaconus, of the ſame Age and Country with Victor above mentioned: The Paſſage is in the XIXth Chapter of his Breviarium. Hoc tempore Macedonius Conſtantinopolitanus Epiſcopus ab Imperatore Anaſtaſio dicitur expulſus, tamquam Evangelia falſaſſet, & maxime illud Apoſtoli dictum, Qui apparuit in Carne, juſtificatus eſt in Spiritu. Hunc enim immutaſſe, ubi habet ΟΣ, id eſt Qui, monoſyllabum Græcum; litera mutata Ο in Θ vertiſſe, & feciſſe ΘΣ, id eſt, ut eſſet DEUS apparuit per carnem. Tamquam Neſtorianus ergo culpatus expellitur per Severum Monachum. In Engliſh thus: Macedonius, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was charged by the Emperor Anaſtaſius as a Falſary, that had alter'd and interpolated ſeveral Paſſages in the New Teſtament in the Copies uſed in that City; and particularly that in the 1 Tim. iii. 16. he had ordered ΘΣ to be written inſtead of ΟΣ: And for that Crime of Falſification, he was deprived and baniſhed.

That Macedonius might go thus far, as to the Text in Timothy, is not altogether improbable: Where the Copies had it ΟΣ, he might poſſibly ſtrike a Stroak within the Ο, and make it ΘΣ. That there are ſome Variations in the ancient Copies, is moſt certain: For Inſtance, there is one now in M. Colbert's Library, which reads it ΟΣ. And we may obſerve farther, that Macedonius was not the firſt in this Reading; for many Fathers before his Time had cited the Text ΘΣ, and expounded it accordingly. The Matter of Fact, as we may reaſonably conclude, is no more than this, that Anaſtaſius ordered the Copies to be amended, Tanquam ab Idiotis Librariis conſcripta, as written by ignorant Tranſcribers. Now the Emperor being an unacceptable Prince, the Story grew in the Telling: And thus Victor was led into a Miſtake, as if the Emperor had ordered the Originals to be reformed, Tanquam ab Idiotis Evangeliſtis compoſita. Neither does this Account ſeem leſs probable, by Victor's mentioning only Evangelia, the Goſpels: For the Epiſtle to Timothy is called Evangelia both in Liberatus, and Hincmar. Thus the Goſpels, in the common Phraſe of thoſe Times, took in the whole New Teſtament. To diſmiſs this Article, both theſe Stories are reported by no one Author: For Victor, who has inſerted the moſt ſcandalous Relation, ſays nothing about ΟΣ and ΘΣ: And Liberatus, who has given us the more inoffenſive Narrative, is ſilent about the other. * Philelευther. Lipſienſ.

* ANA-

*ANASTATIUS, the firſt Patriarch of Antioch. We have ſeveral Tracts which go under his Name, though the Criticks are not agreed about his being the Author. The chief and moſt unconteſted Treatiſe is that entituled, Ὁδηγὸς, or, a Guide to the true Way: 'Twas written againſt the Acephali. 'Tis extant in Greek, and tranſlated into Latin by Gretzer. The Bibliotheca Patrum has ſeveral Homilies attributed to Anaſtatius Sinaita. The Queſtions and Anſwers, carrying the Name of Anaſtatius Sinaita, can by no means belong to this Anaſtatius; becauſe the Author cites the Canons of the Council in Trullo, the Works of Maximus, Johannes Climachus, of Johannes Moſchus, Olympiadorus, and Nicephorus; and reckons ſeven hundred Years from Conſtantine the Great to his own Time. From whence 'tis evident, the Author of theſe Queſtions was a Greek of the Eleventh Century. Caniſius, Turrianus, and Combeſis, publiſhed theſe Tracts. Some Writers diſtinguiſh a Hermit of Mount Sinai and the Biſhop of Antioch into two Perſons, and will have the latter the Author of the Books above mentioned, and that the Biſhop lived to the Year 618. But there is no good Grounds for this Aſſertion. For 'tis much more probable that Anaſtatius, who had been a Monk of Mount Sinai, was afterwards choſen Patriarch of Antioch. * Evagr. Lib. 4. Hiſt. cap. 38, 39, 40. &c. Sigebert, cap. 42. de Vir. Illuſt. Gregor. Lib. 10. Epiſt. 22. Du Pin, Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VI.

* ANASTATIUS IV. did not raiſe the Structure of Maria Rotunda, formerly called the Pantheon, but only repaired that noble Building, and turned it into a Chriſtian Church. See Morery, Vol. I.

* ANATOLIUS, Biſhop of Laodicea in Syria, extracted from one of the beſt Families of Alexandria, living in the Third Century, was one of the moſt Learned Men of his Time. He founded a Philoſophick School at Alexandria, was preferred to the higheſt Poſts of Honour and Truſt in that Town, and acquitted himſelf with Reputation. In the Year 262, when the War between Æmilianus and the Emperor Gallienus broke out at Alexandria, Anatolius commanded in the Citadel which held for Æmilian. Now the Beſieged being ſtreightened for Proviſions, Anatolius acquainted Euſebius a Deacon of Alexandria with their Condition: This Deacon was in the Town, which had received Theodoſius, Gallienus's General: And being allowed to diſmiſs thoſe People unfit for Service out of the Citadel, the Chriſtians marched out in the firſt place, and afterwards all thoſe that had a mind to follow them. Thus the Garriſon, being almoſt evacuated, was eaſily taken by Theodoſius: This Deacon Euſebius was choſen Biſhop of Laodicea after Socrates. Anatolius travelling through Paleſtine about the ſame time, was entertained by Theoctenus Biſhop of Ceſarea, who conſecrated him for his Coadjutor, in Proſpect he might ſucceed him. But Anatolius in his Journey took to Antioch, to aſſiſt at the Council againſt Paulus Samoſatenus. Hapning to paſs by Laodicea at the time Euſebius died, he was detained here for their Biſhop in the Year 269. Euſebius Cæſarienſis reports the few Books he wrote were excellent in their kind. He left a Tract concerning the keeping Eaſter, and another de Arithmeticæ Inſtitutionibus, in ten Books. S. Jerom in his Catalogus gives Anatolius a great Character: Miræ Doctrinæ vir fuit in Arithmetica, Geometria, Aſtronomia, Grammatica, Rhetorica, Dialectica; cujus ingenii magnitudinem de volumine quod ſuper Paſcha compoſuit, & de decem Libris de Arithmeticæ inſtitutionibus, intelligere poſſumus. He flouriſhed form the third Year of the Emperor Probus, and the 278th of the Incarnation, till 282 or 283. The Year of his Death is not certainly known; but in the Greek Church he ſtands in the Martyrs Kalendar at the fourth of October. There is a Latin Tract of Eaſter of Anatolius's, done by Bucherius, in which there is a Paſſage of Anatolius cited by Euſebius. There is no Reaſon to queſtion this was a Book of conſiderable Antiquity, becauſe the Author obſerves, that the Aſiatick Cuſtom of keeping Eaſter on the fourteenth Day of the Moon in March, without regard to the Sunday, was lately aboliſhed in that Country. * Euſeb. in Chron. & Hiſt. Lib. 7. Cap. 26. Ado, Vienn. in Chron. Baron. A. C. 283. M. Du Pin, Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III.

ANATOMY, a Science which lets us into the Knowledge of Human Bodies by the Diſſection of Animals. Thoſe who wrote upon this Subject amongſt the Ancients are, Hippocrates, Democritus, Ariſtotle, Eraſiſtratus, Galen, Avicenna, Herophilus, and a great many others: Theſe Men were perfectly convinced of the Neceſſity of underſtanding Anatomy, and look'd upon it as the moſt conſiderable Branch of Learning in a Phyſician's Profeſſion: That without it, 'twas impoſſible to know the Uſe of the Parts in Human Bodies, and by conſequence the Cauſes of Diſeaſes. Notwithſtanding this, it has been extremely neglected for ſeveral Ages, and was revived no ſooner than the Sixteenth Century. Thoſe who have contributed moſt to the Recovery and Improvement in this Faculty are, Carpus, Sylvius, Veſalius, Fernelius, Columbus, Fallopius, Euſtachius, Frabicius de Aquapendente, Ambroſius Pareus, Andreas Laurentius, Caſſerius, Gaſpardus Bauhinus, Hoffmannus, Riolanus, &c. But thoſe who came after theſe laſt mentioned have exceeded their Predeceſſors, and made a great Diſcovery in Human Bodies: Aſellius diſcovered the Lacteal Veins in 1622. Harvey publiſhed his Circulation of the Blood, and wrote an excellent Tract De Generatione. Pecquet found out the Receptacle of the Chile, and the Ductus Thoracici, in 1651. Olaus Rudbeck a Swede, and Thomas Bartholine a Dane, diſcovered the Lymphatick Veſſels in 1651. In 1655, Wharton found out the Ductus Salivales, called Glandulæ Maxillares, for the Conveyance of the Saliva into the Mouth. And in 1661, Steno diſcovered the Ductus's of the Palate, the Noſtrils, and the Eyes. He likewiſe wrote upon the Muſcles, and other Anatomical Subjects, with great Succeſs. In 1642, Wirſungus diſcovered the Ductus Pancreatici. Willis, who wrote after theſe, has given the Anatomy of the Brain and Nerves, with much more Exactneſs than thoſe that went before him. Gliſſon wrote de Hepate, or the Liver. Graaf wrote de Succo Pancreatico, and the Parts for Generation in both Sexes. Lower wrote de Motu Cordis. Thruſton wrote de Reſpiratione: Peyer, of the Glands and Inteſtines: Drelincourt, of Conception, de Ovis Faminarum, de Placenta Uterina, de Membranis, de Fœtu, &c. Malpighius, who died firſt Phyſician to Pope Innocent XII. in 1694, is particularly famous: He has obliged the World with a great many new Diſcoveries in the Lungs, the Brain, the Livor, the Spleen, the Reins, the Glands, and the Lymphatick Veſſels. He has likewiſe publiſhed an excellent Anatomy of Plants, and made curious Obſervations upon Generation, upon Eggs, Silk-Worms, and other things relating to Natural Hiſtory. Grew has likewiſe written an Anatomy of Plants. 'Tis hoped M. du Vernei, a famous Anatomiſt at the Royal Garden of Paris, will ſhortly publiſh ſeveral learned and curious Treatiſes in Anatomy. * Furetiere, Diction. 2d Edit.

ANCHEDIVA, in Latin, Angadiva, or Angediva, a ſmall Iſland in the Indian Ocean: It lies upon the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Decan, about thirty ſix Miles from Goa to the South. The Portugueze had formerly a Fort in this Iſland, which is now demoliſh'd. * Baudrand.

* ANCILE. For, wherein Marcus overcame the Cimbri in Morery Vol. I. read Marius.

ANCILLON, (David) Miniſter of the Reformed at Metz, where he was born in 1617. The firſt part of his Education was in the Jeſuites College, which it ſeems was the only Place in that Town for learning the Belles Lettres. The Principals of that Society perceiving his promiſing Genius, endeavoured to gain him to their Religion. He removed to Geneva, and ſtudied Philoſophy and Divinity there. In 1641, he came to the Synod at Charenton, to be admitted Miniſter, and here his Capacity was much admired by his Examiners. The Aſſembly was ſo well ſatisfied with his Learning and Behaviour, that they preferr'd him to one of the moſt conſiderable Churches at their Diſpoſal; 'twas at Meaux. Here he exerciſed his Function till the Year 1653, and gave all imaginable Satisfaction. His Learning, his Elocution, and the Regularity of his Life, raiſed his Reputation to a great degree of Notice: And he was look'd on, even by the Roman Catholicks, as a Perſon of Diſtinction. After the Year above-mentioned, he returned into his own Country, where his Character runs ſtill higher, and here he continued to 1685, when the French King voided the Edict of Nantes. This Misfortune upon his Religion carried him firſt to Frankfort, and afterwards to Berlin, where being well received by the Elector of Brandenbourgh, he ſettled with his Family: And in 1692, he died in this Town, being ſeventy five Years of Age. His Father was an eminent Lawyer, and one of his An-ceſtors had been Preſident at Mortier, in one of the chief Sovereign Courts of France. This David publiſhed a Relation of the Conference between himſelf and Monſieur Bedatier, Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Suffragan to the Biſhop of Metz. As ſoon as Cardinal Richelieu's Controverſial Book, called The Method, came out, he wrote, as they ſay, a ſolid Anſwer. But underſtanding M. Martel, Profeſſor at Montauban, had publiſhed one already, he declined printing his own. However, ſome Sheets of it were afterwards publiſhed, that is, ſo much of it as contained an Anſwer to the Sixth Chapter of the Cardinal's Method. To ſpeak properly, 'twas rather an Apology for Luther, Zuinglius, Calvin, and Beza. He wrote alſo the Life of William Farrell, or, The Idea of a Faithful Miniſter of Chriſt. The famous Monſieur Conrart, one of his intimate Friends, approved this Performance, and made ſome Marginal Notes on it. But Ancillon not conſenting to have it publiſh'd, there was afterwards another ſurreptitious Copy, full of Faults, printed in Holland. He likewiſe wrote other Controverſial Tracts, in Anſwer to the Paſtorals, Circular Letters, and Methods, the Gallican Clergy publiſh'd for bringing over the Reformed to their Communion. Theſe Manuſcripts of M. Ancillon, ſent to Geneva to be printed, were ſomeway loſt in the Conveyance. * Diſcours ſur la Vie de M. Ancillon, Bayle Dictionaire Critique.

* ANCONA. Marca Anconitana, of which this is the Capital, is a Province belonging to the Popedom in Italy, lying between Mount Appennine and the Gulph of Venice. 'Tis about ſeventy two Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and fifty four from North to South. The Air is heavy and unhealthy, but the Soil is fruitful. There are a great number of Epiſcopal Sees in this Marquiſate, viz. Fermo, Lorretto, Recanati, Macerata, Jeſi, Tolentini, Aſcoli, Oſſimo, S. Severino, Monte Alto, Camerino, Ripatranſone, and Ancona the Capital.

ANCUD, Archipelagus Ancudianus, and Chiloenſis, Part of the Paciſick Sea, between the Coaſts of Ancud, Chili, and the Iſle of Chiloe. They call it Archipelago, becauſe 'tis crowded with a great many ſmall Iſlands. * Baudrand.

ANCUD, called alſo Agualay, a Province in Chili, in Southern America, lying between the Archipelago of Ancud to the Weſt, the Andes to the Eaſt, the Country of Oſſorno to the North, and the Magellanick Country to the South. The Spaniards have not yet ſettled any Plantations in Ancud. * Baudrand.

ANDESCHAN, the firſt Prieſt ſet up by Nimrod for worſhiping the Fire: For the Perſian Magi pretend this Prince, called a mighty Hunter in the Scripture, was of the Religion of Zoroaſtes; and that this Andeſchan diſputed with Abraham upon the Unity of the Deity, and afterwards adviſed Nimrod to throw the Patriarch into a fiery Furnace, to prove this Element had a Divine Being: But Abraham, being protected by God Almighty, ſtood the Teſt, and came out untouched. That which gave Riſe to this fabulous Report is a Paſſage in Geneſis, where Abraham is ſaid to come from Ur of the Caldeans. Now a great many of the Rabbins will have it, that Ur in this Place ſignifies Fire: Whereas almoſt all the Chriſtian Expoſitors take it, very reaſonably, for a Town. * D'Herbelot, Bibliothec. Orientale.

ANDIVALLO, (Campo de) Andevallenſis Ager, a ſmall Country in Andaluſia in Spain, upon the Frontiers of Portugal and Spaniſh Eſtremadura. The principal Towns in it are Cortegano and Puymago. * Baudrand.

ANDREJOF, a Town near the Boryſthenes, between Muſcovy and Poland, and a hundred and twenty Leagues from Warſaw. 'Tis a Place very well known, ſince the famous Treaty called Pacta Andrejovienſia between the Muſcovites and the Poles, concluded in the Reign of Stephen Battori. All the Sovereigns of Europe, who might have any Concern with theſe two Kingdoms, were invited to ſend Plenipotentiaries to this famous Congreſs. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

ANDREW. (S.) To what has been ſaid concerning this Apoſtle, in the Firſt Volume of Morery, may be added, that by ſome Writers in the Fifth Century he is ſaid to have preached the Goſpel in the Greater Aſia, particularly in Sogdiana: That from Aſia he travelled into Greece, preached in Epyrus, and diſputed with the Philoſophers at Argos. The latter Greek Authors pretend he founded a Church at Byzantium; and the Muſcovites report he ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Samaria. He is commonly painted faſten'd to two croſs Pieces of Wood, like a Roman Figure of Ten: This is commonly called the Saint Andrew's Croſs; but without any Foundation in Antiquity. The Circumſtances of his Martyrdom likewiſe in the Acts, publiſh'd under the Names of the Prieſts and Deacons of Achaia, are no better than Counterfeit in the Opinion of the Learned. Some Writers place his Martyrdom under Nero's Reign, and others report he ſuffer'd under Veſpaſian or Domitian. Paulinus relates, that in the Year 307, his Body, with S. Luke's, was carried to Conſtantinople, and that a great many Chriſtians living at diſtant Places took part of the Relicks. However, this ſeems not to have been known at Conſtantinople till the Reign of Juſtinian. For in the Year 550, when the Emperor built the Apoſtles Church, they diſcovered the Corpſe of S. Andrew, S. Luke, and S. Timothy. In the Thirteenth Century, 'tis believed the Apoſtle's Body was removed to Amalfi in the Kingdom of Naples: And yet, as others will have it, 'twas a long time before this at Milan, at Nola, and ſeveral other Places. Gregory the Great, as 'tis pretended, brought an Arm of this Apoſtle from Conſtantinople to Rome: And Gregory of Tours relates, that this Limb was to be ſeen at Agde in his Time. S. Andrew is inſerted in the moſt ancient Weſtern Martyrologies, and his Feſtival appointed for the 30th of November. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Lib. 3. cap. 1. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. 25. Philaſtr. Her. cap. 88. Paulin. Carm. 24. 26. Paulin. in Vit. Ambroſ. Gregor. Turonen. de Glor. Martyr. cap. 70, &c.

ANDREW, (Toby) Greek and Hiſtory Profeſſor at Groningen, was born at Braunſfeld, in the Earldom of Solms, in 1604. His Father was Miniſter of Solms-Braunſfels, and Inſpector, as they call him, of the Churches in this County: His Mother was Daughter to the famous Piſcator, Hebrew Profeſſor at Herborne in the County of Naſſau. In the Year 1634, he was invited to the Profeſſor's Chair at Groningen, for the Faculties above-mentioned. He managed this Poſt with Commendation till his Death, which happen'd October 1676. He was a great Friend to the Memory and Perſon of the famous Deſcartes; and 'twas by his Advice Claubergius was brought over to this Philoſopher. He wrote in Defence of Deſcartes againſt Revius, Profeſſor at Leyden: 'Tis entituled, Methodi Carteſiani Aſſertio oppoſita Jacobi Revii, &c. And the next Year he publiſhed the ſecond Part of his Anſwer. In 1653, he wrote againſt Regius, in Defence of Cartes's Remarks, upon a Paper pretending to explain the Nature of the Soul. * Vie des Profeſſeurs de Groningue, Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ANDREW, or Andreas, Captain of the Guards to Ptolomy Philadelphus King of Egypt, with the Aſſiſtance of Ariſteus, Zozibus, and Tarantinus, procured from this Prince the Liberty of a hundred and twenty thouſand Jews, and paid four hundred Talents of Silver for their Ranſom. Andreas and Ariſteus were ſent by this Ptolomy to Eleazer the Jewiſh High-Prieſt, to carry him a hundred Talents of Silver for the Expences of Sacrificing. They likewiſe brought ſeveral other conſiderable Preſents, with a Letter requeſting Eleazar to ſend ſome Men of Learning to the Court at Alexandria, for Tranſlating the Bible into Greek. This happen'd in the Year of the World 3710, and 281 before the Incarnation. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 12. cap. 2. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

* ANDREWS. (Lancelot) For the third Year of King Charles I. in Morery, Vol. I. read the firſt Year.

ANDRONICUS, Lieutenant-General of Antiochus Epiphanes's Forces in Judea, treacherouſly murder'd by the High-Prieſt Onias, in the Year of the World 3882. But Vengeance quickly overtook him; for the ſame Year he was executed by the King's Order in the ſame Place where Onias was maſſacred. * 2 Maccab. cap. iv.

ANDRONICUS, (Camaterus) Governor of Conſtantinople, and related to the Emperor Comnenius, lived in the Twelfth Century. He wrote a Book in Verſe againſt the Latins, touching the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt: 'Tis written in the Form of a Dialogue between the Emperor Manuel and the Roman Cardinals. This Book was anſwered by Veccus. Andronicus wrote another Book by way of Conference between the Emperor above mentioned, and Peter Patriarch of the Armenians; and a third of the two Natures in our Bleſſed Saviour. Theſe Tracts are ſaid to lie in Manuſcript in the Duke of of Bavaria's Library. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

* ANDRONICUS, (Livius) is reckon'd the firſt Latin Poet: His firſt Performance for the Stage was in the firſt Year of the 135th Olympiad, that is, the 514th of Rome, in the Conſulſhip of Claudius Cento, the Year after the firſt Punick War, and a Year before the Birth of Ennius. From this Period we muſt date the Riſe of the Latin Poetry, which though improving upon the Progreſs, was not brought to Perfection till more than two hundred Years after Andronicus. His Poems are called Tragedies and Comedies; but the Compoſition is very inartificial and rough-hewn. We have nothing of his Remains, excepting ſome Fragments printed at Lyons in 1603, and afterwards at Leyden in 1620, with Voſſius's Notes and Corrections. There is likewiſe annexed to this Impreſſion the Remains of ſome Tragedies and Comedies written by Nevius, Ennius, Pacuvius, Accius, and ſeveral other ancient Poets. * Cic. in Brut. & Tuſcul. Quæſt. 1. Sueton. Lib. de Illuſt. Grammat. Gellius, Noctes Atticæ, Lib. 17. cap. 21. Voſſius, de Poet. Latin. See Morery, Vol. I. under Livius.

ANDRONICUS, (Theſſalonicenſis) a learned Greek, who after the taking of Conſtantinople by the Turks in the Year 1453, travelled into Italy, taught the Greek Language at Rome, and was entertained in Cardinal Beſſarion's Family. From Rome he removed to Florence, where he held the Chair a great while with Reputation. From Florence he travelled to Paris, in the Reign of Lewis XI. where Hermonimus of Sparta was already ſettled. They were both Profeſſors of the Greek Language in this Town. We muſt diſtinguiſh this Andronicus from Andronicus Tranquillus a Dalmatian, who taught Greek at the Univerſity of Leipſick in the beginning of the Sixteenth Century. This Tranquillus was a good Orator; and in the Year 1518 printed a Speech at Augsburg, to animate the German Princes to a War againſt the Turk. There is likewiſe another Speech of his extant, and a Dialogue between Sylla, Ceſar, Pompey, and Minos. There was another Andronicus Callixtus, a Peripatetick Philoſopher, who lived in the Fifteenth Century, and wrote a Tract entituled, De Phyſica Scientia & Fortuna. Andronicus Theſſalonicenſis was reckon'd the beſt Greek Profeſſor next to Theodorus of Gaza: He had read all the Greek Authors, and was very well verſed in Ariſtotle's Philoſophy. * Naudeus, Paulus Jovius, in Eulog.

ANDUJAR, or Anduxar, in Latin Anduxaria, a Town in Spain, fortify'd with a good Caſtle: It ſtands in Andaluſia, upon the Guadalquivir, about ſix and thirty Miles above Corduba. 'Tis a conſiderable Town, and grown out of the Ruins of the Old Hiturgis or Hurgis, about three Miles diſtant. This Hiturgis was demoliſhed by Scipio, for going into the Intereſt of the Carthaginians. * Baudrand.

ANGELS. The Heathen Philoſophers, and eſpecially the Platoniſts, believed the Exiſtence of Immaterial Subſtances unimbody'd. Theſe Spitits, created by the Sovereign Being, had a Share of the Government of the World aſſigned them. They diſtinguiſhed them into Good and Evil Genii. The Jews own the Being of Angels and Devils. Even the Samaritans and Caraites ſeem thus far agreed. The Mahometans go into the ſame Opinion. That there are ſuch Beings, is evident from the Doctrine of our Saviour and his Apoſtles. Moſt of the old Fathers believed they were not without Vehicles, that is, Bodies of a fine Aerial Texture. The later Divines, purſuant to the Council of Lateran, make them all Spirit, without any Corporeal Appendages; and ſuppoſe them created before the Material World, or at leaſt at the ſame time. There has been a great many Diſputes and Varieties of Fancy concerning the Number, Order, Nature, and Powers of Angels; moſt of which Queſtions are not to be reſolved by Scripture or Tradition which ſignifies any thing. The Author of the Books De Hierarchia Cœleſti, who wrote at the latter end of the Fifth, or beginning of the Sixth Century, is the firſt who ventures to range the Angels into three Hierarchies and nine Orders. The Jews likewiſe diſtinguiſh them into ſeveral Orders, and ſet as it were a General at the Head of them. They call him Metatron, the ſame with the Chriſtian S. Michael. They likewiſe believe the Angels Guardians of Countries, and that they are Intelligences in the Stars, or at leaſt have the Direction of their Motion. The Modern Jews, in the fifth Article of their Creed, prohibit the Worſhiping of Angels, affirming, that they ought not to be worſhiped, nor applied to as Mediators or Interceſſors. Notwithſtanding this, the Jews have a great Veneration for Angels; and when they happen to be in Places of Danger, they call upon them as their Guardians. The Invocation is in this Form; Moſt Holy and Honourable Miniſters of God, protect me, protect me, aſſiſt me, aſſiſt me. Some devout Jews, who make this Prayer, warrant their Practice upon a Paſſage in the 91ſt Pſalm, For he ſhall give his Angels Charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy Ways. The Chriſtians are all agreed about the Being of Angels, that they are God's Miniſters, for the Aſſiſtance and Protection of Good People: That all the Angels were created in a State of Innocence and Perfection: That a great many of them, degenerating from their primitive Integrity, were thrown out of Heaven for their Pride, and condemned to Everlaſting Puniſhment: And that the reſt were confirmed in Grace, and fix'd immutably in a State of Happineſs: That theſe Happy Spirits are warmly penetrated with the Love of God, Goodneſs, and Truth: And that the Apoſtates, on the other ſide, hate the Sovereign Being, and love Miſchief and Lying. The Chriſtians call them Devils or Dæmons; and the Jews, Satans or Enemies, becauſe 'tis ſuppoſed they do all the Miſchief they can to Mankind. For inſtance, they ſuggeſt ill Thoughts, throw Objects of Temptation in the way, and puſh People upon Sin and Miſcarriage. 'Tis theſe Malevolent Spirits that made the Heathen deſert from the true God to Idolatry; that gave Oracular Reſponſes, and poſſeſs'd the Bodies of Men and Women. As to good Angels, 'tis generally believed their Commiſſions are always Benevolent, and their Miniſtry Friendly, excepting when they are order'd to puniſh wicked Men, and execute the Judgments of God. As for the Ancient Jews, there is no clear Inſtance of their worſhiping Angels in the Old Teſtament, but rather the contrary. But had they believed the Worſhip of theſe Superior Beings lawful, they had particular Motives for ſuch an Application; for Angels had appeared to the Patriarchs, deliver'd the Moſaick Laws, conducted them through the Wilderneſs, and Michael is ſaid to be their Prince, and to have the Guardianſhip of their Nation, Daniel x. and Daniel xii. 'Tis true, Abraham is ſaid to bow down before the Angels; but then 'tis plain by his Entertainment he took them for Men. Moſes and Joſhua are commanded to put off their Shoes, and told that the Place was Holy by the Angel that appeared. But Juſtin Martyr, Irenæus, and Tertullian, believed our Saviour appeared to Abraham under the Oak; which was likewiſe S. Athanaſius's Opinion. The Fathers generally believe 'twas our Saviour appeared to Joſhua, from Joſhua's adoring him: Therefore they obſerve that when Angels appeared, they refuſed Adoration, as the Angel that appeared to Manoa and S. John: Beſides, 'tis not the ſame thing to worſhip Viſible and Inviſible Angels. When they are Viſible, there is a Regard due to the Superiority of their Nature, to their Character and Meſſage; which Reaſons for Regard don't hold when they are unſeen. Farther, Origen tells Celſus, he ſlandered the Jews in ſaying they worſhiped Angels: That nothing is to be worſhiped but God Almighty: Neither are Prayers to be addreſs'd to any but the Sovereign Being: That the right way of Worſhiping God, is by directing our Devotions to him by Jeſus Chriſt, without Application to Angels: That if we are ſo happy as to have God's Favour, all the Angels and bleſſed Spirits will be our Friends, and pray for us without Application. There are ſeveral Texts in the Old and New Teſtament from whence we may conclude the Worſhiping Angels unlawful. (Exod. xx. 2, Deut. vi. v. 13. with reference to v. 4. 1 Sam. vii. v. 3. where the Word in the Septuagint is Δουλεύσατε, which overthrows the Diſtinction between Latria and Dulia, Luke iv. v. 8. Coloſſ. ii. with Theodoret's Comment. 1 Tim. ii. v. 5.) To mention ſome more of the Fathers, Irenæus (Lib. 2. cap. 57.) declares expreſly the Church did not work any Miracles by Invocation of Angels, or by any unlawful Curioſity. Theophilus Antiochenus gives the Reaſon why the Chriſtians could not adore the Emperor; 'twas becauſe his Majeſty was not God. The Council of Laodicea (Canon 35.) denounced an Anathema againſt thoſe that worſhiped Angels. But here 'tis pretended, that this Canon is only leveled againſt thoſe Hereticks who hold the Angels brought Salvation by delivering the Law, and worſhiped them excluſively of our Saviour. But that this is not the Meaning of the Council, may be made good, 1. By obſerving, that ſome Roman Catholicks have miſ-cited this Canon, and pretend the right Reading is Anguli, and not Angeli: But the Greek Original will by no means allow this Correction. 2. Thoſe who alledge that the Canon only condemns thoſe who worſhiped Angels excluſively of our Saviour, miſtake the Senſe of the Canon, as is apparent, 1. Becauſe the Council condemns Angel-Worſhip in general and comprehenſive Terms, without any Reſtraining Clauſe or Limitation: Whereas had they thought it lawful in any reſpect, ſuch a prudent Aſſembly, as we may reaſonably collect, would have diſtinguiſh'd the Caſe, remark'd the Fault, and pointed their Anathema only upon the Irregularities and Exceſſes of ſuch a Worſhip. 2. Tho' thoſe who are cenſured are ſaid to forſake the Church; yet this implies no more than that they held Private Conventicles, as the Canon intimates. For had they maintained the Angels brought Salvation by publiſhing the Law, had they look'd upon them as their proper and primary Mediators, had they neither prayed to our Saviour nor worſhiped him; they had been no Chriſtians: And if ſo, they were out of the Juriſdiction of the Council. For as S. Paul ſays, What have we to do with them without? 'Tis not the Cuſtom of the Church to excommunicate Jews, Pagans, or Apoſtates; for that would be to exclude thoſe from a Society that had gone off already; and beſides, her Power does not extend beyond the Pale of Chriſtendom. 'Tis plain therefore the Anathema of the Council is levelled againſt thoſe who had not wholly abandoned the Worſhip of our Saviour. What therefore could they be condemned for, but for worſhiping the Angels together with him, and making more Mediators than one? S. Athanaſius, in his Diſcourſe againſt the Arians, having proved that the Angels waited upon our Saviour, and worſhiped him; adds, they adored him not becauſe he was of a higher Order than themſelves, but becauſe he was a diſtinct and uncreated Nature. For if Dignity and Heighth of Station were a ſufficient Ground for Adoration, all Inferior Angels ſhould worſhip their Superiors: But 'tis not ſo, for Κτίσμα γὰρ κτίσματι οὐ προσκυνεῖ, One Creature is not to worſhip another. And after he has produced the Inſtance of S. Peter forbidding Cornelius to worſhip him, (Acts x) and the Angels forbidding S. John, (Rev. xix.) he concludes, that God alone is to be worſhiped. (Athanaſ. contra Arian. pag. 286, & 394.) Epiphanius reporting the Hereſy of thoſe who worſhiped the Bleſſed Virgin argues thus; Neither Elias, who was carried in a Fiery Chariot to Heaven, and is now living, nor S. John, who was particularly favoured by our Saviour, nor any of the Saints, is worſhiped. If God does not allow the Angels to be worſhiped, much leſs the Daughter of Anna and Joachim. (Epiphan. Hæreſ. 79.) And elſewhere he declares, that no created Being ought to be worſhiped and adored. To conclude, S. Auſtin is full for the ſame Doctrine. He remarks, that the Angel in the Revelations forbids the paying him any Worſhip; that he was the Apoſtle's Fellow-Servant, and that God was only to be worſhiped. (Auguſtin. de Doctrin. Chriſtian. Lib. 1. cap. 33.) That the Angels, thoſe moſt Excellent Miniſters of Heaven, deſire we ſhould join with them in the Worſhip of none but God. (Auguſtin. de vera Religione, cap. 55.) And in the ſame Book he has theſe Words; Eccleſia Catholica ſolum Deum puriſſimè atque caſtiſſimè colendum prædicat: nullam nobis adorandam creaturam inducens, cui ſervire jubeamur. (Ibid.) * Juſtin Martyr, Dialog. cum Tryph. pag. 283. Edit. Pariſ. Iren. Lib. 4. cap. 22. Tertull. Lib. adverſus Judæos, Athanaſ. Lib. 4. contra Arian. Origen. Lib. 1. pag. 20. Edit. Cantab. Lib. 5. pag. 234, &c. M. Du Pin, Continuation de l'Hiſtoire des Juifs, depuis J. C. juſqu' à preſent, corrigée & augmentée, à Paris 1710.

brought

ANGELI, (Peter) de Barges, a Village in the Duchy of Florence; ſtudied at Bologne, was Scholar to Hugo Buon Campagno, afterwards Pope Gregory XIII. He likewiſe ſtudied under the famous Andrew Alciat: And being particularly famous, Gulielmus Paulinus Biſhop of Montpelier, and Ambaſſador to the French King, made an Acquaintance with him, and carried him to France. During his Stay in this Country, he had the Honour to go a Hunting with King Henry II. And having obſerved the Manner of this Exerciſe, he afterwards wrote a Poem called Cynegetica. He was Profeſſor of Humanity at Piſa when Peter Strozzi beſieged that Place: And here he taught his Audience to fight as well as to talk; for putting himſelf at the Head of them, he defended the Place till the Duke of Florence ſent Troops enough to raiſe the Siege. Paulus Manutius and Thuanus report him an incomparable Poet, and that no Man of the Age had more Genius, Learning, or Elocution in Proſe and Poetry, than Peter Angeli. His Cynegetica, in the Opinion of Thuanus and Poſſevine, is an inimitable Performance. Notwithſtanding he wrote his Syryades when he was old, the Expreſſion has great Propriety, the Verſification is ſmooth and muſical, and there are a great many things beautifully deſcribed. He died at ſeventy eight Years of Age. * Teiſſier, Paul Manut. Lib. 4. Epiſt. Poſſevine, Biblioth. Lib. 17. cap. 25. &c.

ANGHIERA, in Latin Angleria, a Town in Italy, the Capital of the Earldom of Anghiera, in the Duchy of Milan, ſtands on the Weſt ſide of the Great Lake, near the Place where the River Teſin comes out of this Lake. 'Tis famous for being the Birth-place of the Galeazzo's Dukes of Milan. * Baudrand.

ANGHIERA, (The County of) Angleriæ Comitatus, a great Province in the Duchy of Milan, bounded on the North by the Swiſs Bailliages and the Valteline, on the Weſt by the Valley of Aouſt, on the South with the Territories of Vercelles and Novaro, and on the Eaſt by the Milaneze. The Eaſtern Part of it takes in the great Valley of Seſſia, and the Weſtern reaches as far as Lac Majeur. This Country was erected into an Earldom in 1397 by the Emperor Wenceſlaus, in Favour of John Galeazzo III. 'Tis very fruitful and populous. Beſides the Capital Anghiera, there are Arona, Vogogna, Domo d'Oſcella, and Margozzo in it. * Baudrand.

* ANGOLEME, a City in France, mentioned in Morery, Vol. I. 'Tis one of the ancienteſt Towns of the Kingdom, ſtrong by Situation, and well fortified. Thevet pretends 'twas built by Agellius Marus, Conſul of Rome, in the Time of Tarquinius Superbus: But this Romantick Account is ignorantly contrived; for not to mention there was no Conſul at Rome during the Government of the Kings, 'tis certain the Romans did not march into Gaul till a long while after this time. In the Sixteenth Century, Angoleme ſuffered very much by the Calviniſts. Theſe Hugonots ſurprized it in 1562; and ſoon after 'twas recovered by the Lord of Sanſac. In 1568, the Admiral Coligny, reinforced by the Earl of Montgomery, took it upon Articles. The Hugonot Soldiers treated the Burghers with great Barbarity, killed the Prieſts, raviſhed the Women, and cut them up that were with Child, broke down the Altars, plunder'd the Tombs, dug up the Bodies of the Counts of Angoleme, and treated them with great Inhumanity. The Cathedral of S. Peter, one of the beſt Churches in Aquitain, was demoliſhed, with a great many other Churches and Religious Houſes. Auſonius is ſaid to be the firſt Biſhop; but whether he died in the Third, or the Beginning of the Fourth Century, is uncertain. The Biſhop of Angoleme has the Title of the King's Arch-Chaplain in Aquitain, and is Baron de la Paine. The Town has a Mayor and Aldermen, who are Gentlemen by their Office.. * Gregor. Turonenſ. Lib. 2. Hiſt. Recherches des Antiquités de Angouleme, Du Chêne, Recherches des Antiquités de France.

ANGUIEN, a Title given to the Eldeſt Sons of the Princes of Condé. 'Twas under this Diſtinction that Lewis of Bourbon II. afterwards Prince of Condé, gained the Victory at Rocroy in 1664. and another at Nortlingen in 1645, after having taken Thionville, Philipsburgh, &c. *

ANICETUS, a Slave Enfranchized by Polemo King of Pontus, revolted from the Romans after the Death of this Prince, levied Forces, ſeized Trebiſond, burnt the Fleet which guarded the Coaſt, and made an Alliance with the Barbarians. His Pretence was to ſupport Vitellius againſt Veſpaſian. This Prince ordered an Army to march againſt Anicetus, under the Command of Virdius Geminus. This General forced him to abandon Pontus, and retire for Shelter to the King of the Sedochezi, who ſoon after deliver'd him up to the Romans, in the Year of our Lord 69. * Tacit. Lib. 3. cap. 47.

ANNAT, (Francis) Confeſſor to Lewis XIV. born at Roüvergue in February 1590. He enter'd himſelf a Jeſuite in 1607; and after a great many other Promotions, he was Provincial of that Society in France. During this Employment, Lewis XIV. made Choice of him for his Con-

Confeſſor, in which Office having continued ſixteen Years, his Age and Infirmities forced him to deſire a Diſcharge; which was not granted by the King without Regret. He has the Character of a Perſon of great Humility and Diſintereſtedneſs, and being very ſtrict in obſerving the Diſcipline of his Order. Beſides what he publiſhed in French, he wrote three Volumes in Quarto in Latin, printed at Paris by Gamoiſy in the Year 1666. The Firſt Volume treats de Scientia Media contra novos ejus Impugnatores, una cum Exercitatione Scholaſtica ſub Nomine Eugenii Philadelphi, & Appendice ad Gulielmum Camerarium. The Second Volume is entituled, Auguſtinus à Bajanis, hoc eſt Janſenianis vindicatus. The Third contains the following Tracts; Catholica Diſputatio de Eccleſia præſentis Temporis. De incoacta Libertate contra Novum Auguſtinum Iprenſis Epiſcopi, Vincentium Leonem, Apologiſtam Janſenii, & Commentatorum quinque Propoſitionum. Informatio de quinque Propoſitionibus ex Theologia Janſenii collectis, quas Epiſcopi Galliæ Romano Pontifici ad Cenſuram obtulerunt. Janſenius à Thomiſtis gratiæ per ſeipſam Efficacis defenſoribus condemnatus. Cavilli Janſenianorum contra latam in ipſos à Sede Apoſtolica ſententiam, ſeu Confutatio Libelli trium Columnarum. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

* ANN, (S.) Mother of the Bleſſed Virgin. To what is mentioned of her in Morery Vol. I. may be added, that the Time of her Death is uncertain, notwithſtanding the Reports of ſome modern Authors. The firſt Tract where ſhe is mentioned, entituled, De Nativitate Virginis, is cenſured by the Fathers as an Apocryphal and Fabulous Relation. The Greeks of the Sixth Century had a Feſtival for S. Ann, and the Emperor built a Church in Honour of her at Conſtantinople in the Year 550. But then 'twas not certain whether this S. Ann was the Bleſſed Virgin's Mother. In the Eighth Century, Juſtinian II. built another Church dedicated to the Memory of S. Ann, and at this time no body doubted its being the Bleſſed Virgin's Mother. The Feſtival was held on the 25th of July. This Religious Regard for S. Ann was not brought ſo early into the Weſtern Churches: However, the Greek Relations of S. Joachim and S. Ann reach'd thus far in the Reign of Charles the Great. But then neither of theſe two Saints had any Feſtival when S. Bernard was living. But being afterwards introduced, Pope Gregory XIII. publiſhed a Bull May 5, 1584; in which it was ordered to be kept on the 26th of July. 'Tis commonly believed her Corpſe was brought from Paleſtine to Conſtantinople about the Year 710, from whence, as 'tis pretended, her Head was ſent by Lewis of Blois in the beginning of the Thirteenth Century to Chartres, where this Relick is ſaid to be kept in the Cathedral. * Johan. Damaſ. Lib. 4. de Fide Orthodox. cap. 35. & Orat. 2. de Nativ. B. M. Gerſon. Serm. de Nat. B. M. Eckius, Serm. de S. Annæ, Baronius, in Annal. Riccioli, Chron. Reform. Lib. 8. cap. 19. n. 13. &c.

ANNA, (Comnena) Daughter to the Emperor Alexis Comnenus and Irene, was born in the Eleventh Century. She was a Princeſs of great Learning and Ingenuity. Beſides her Attainments in Hiſtory and the Belles Lettres, ſhe was a conſiderable Proficient in Philoſophy. She wrote the Hiſtory of her Father Alexis Comnenus's Reign in fifteen Books. Her Father was Crowned Emperor in 1081, and lived to 1118. This Princeſs, in the Preface of her Hiſtory, promiſes to ſtand clear of Flattery, and write nothing but plain Truth. Her Hiſtory notwithſtanding looks like a Panegyrick; neither will the Latin Authors allow that ſhe always founds herſelf upon Matter of Fact. Theſe Writers give Alexis the Character of a Tricking Inſincere Prince; and that his Reign has much more of Blemiſh than Commendation in it. It muſt be ſaid, his Jealouſy of the Expedition under Godfrey of Bologne did the French great Diſſervice in the Holy War. However, it may be beſt to compound this Matter, and conclude, that the Latin Writers fell ſhort in their Temper, and that Anna Comnena might be ſomewhat too laviſh or complaiſant in her Father's Commendation. Hoeſchelius publiſh'd the firſt Eight Books from the Library at Augsburgh. In the Year 1651, Nicolas Pouſſin tranſlated them into Latin, now extant in the Louvre Impreſſion. Du Chêne likewiſe printed it with learned Notes. Her Alexiades was afterwards tranſlated into French by Couſine: 'Tis written with great Art and Elocution, and may in ſome meaſure be compared with Quintus Curtius's Hiſtory. * Geſner, Poſſevin, Voſſius, Miræus, M. du Pin, Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

ANNIUS, (Gallus) one of Otho's Generals who commanded the Army order'd to march againſt Cecinna and Valens: He was a very brave Officer; but the Mutinies and Cowardice of his Men made his Courage and Conduct ſignify little. He and Spurinna had the Guard of a Bridge; and ſoon after, a Fall from his Horſe prevented his coming up at the Battle of Bebriacum. Tacitus does not relate what became of him under Vitellius, and therefore 'tis probable he was comprehended in the Pardons that Prince gave to Otho's Generals. * Tacit. Lib. 1. cap. 87.

ANNIUS, (Virianus) Son-in-Law to Corbulo, a famous Officer under Nero. Annius was ſent Hoſtage to Tiridates King of Armenia, to bring on an Interview between Corbulo and that Prince. Nero made him Conſul Anno Dom. 67. But before his Year was out, his Father-in Law Corbulo, notwithſtanding his great Services, was order'd to chooſe his Death; which Misfortune brought a Cloud upon Annius. * Dio, Lib. 63. Tacit. Lib. 4. Hiſt.

ANNONCIADA, a Society founded at Rome in the Year 1460, by Cardinal John Turrecremata, for the marrying poor Maids. It has been ſince erected into an Arch-confraternity, and is grown ſo rich by Contributions and Legacies, that this Society every Lady-day beſtows ſixty Roman Crowns, a Suit of White Serge, and a Florin for Slippers, to above four hundred Maids for their Portion. The Popes have ſo great a Regard for this Charitable Foundation, that they make a Cavalcade, attended with the Cardinals and Nobility, to diſtribute Tickets for theſe ſixty Crowns, &c. for thoſe who are to receive them. If any of theſe Maids are deſirous to be Nuns, they have each of them a hundred and twenty Crowns, which is double to the reſt, and are diſtinguiſhed by a Chaplet of Flowers on their Head. * Ritratto di Roma Moderna, & Euſevologio Romano de l'Abbé Piazza, Tratt. 6. cap. 35.

ANSEDONIA, Anſedonia in Latin, a Town in Italy within the Duchy of Florence, in the Territories of Siena, between the State of Preſidi and the Duchy of Caſtro. It ſtands upon a little Gulph formed at the Mouth of the River Peſcia in the Tuſcan Sea. Anſedonia ſtands upon the Ruins of Coſæ, formerly Capital of a great Earldom, and demoliſhed by Charlemagne. * Baudrand.

ANSELME, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In Morery Vol. I. the Greek Church is ſomewhat miſrepreſented; for they grant the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Father, but except againſt the Addition of the Filioque; this being a later Addition in the Creed, and not ſettled by a General Council.

ANSELME, a Monk of the Order of Diſcalceated Auguſtinians, born at Paris in the Seventeenth Century. Notwithſtanding his Conſtitution was ſlenderly put together, he enter'd early into this Society, and went through all the Diſcipline and Auſterities as long as he lived. He applied himſelf particularly to Moral Divinity and Hiſtory. In 1664, he publiſh'd his Book entituled, Le Palais de l'Honneur, ou les Genealogies Hiſtoriques des Illuſtres Maiſons de France, & de pluſieurs Nobles Familles de l'Europe. Here he gives the Genealogies of the Houſes of Lorrain, Savoy, and ſeveral others; deſcribes the Inſtitution of the Military Orders, and the Principal Offices of the French Crown. He likewiſe deſcribes the Ceremonies obſerv'd at the Coronation of the Kings and Queens of France, at their ſolemn Entries, at the Baptiſm of the King's Children, and at the Funeral Solemnities of the Kings and Princes. He died in January 1694, being ſixty nine Years of Age. The Second Edition of the Genealogical Hiſtory of France, and the Hiſtory of the Great Officers of the Crown, was printed in 1710, and conſiderably enlarged by M. du Fournie, Auditor of the Accompts, and very well verſed in Heraldry and Hiſtory, and who had Father Anſelme's Memoirs to aſſiſt him. * Journal de Savans de 1694, p. 157. Edit. de Holl. Memoires Hiſtoriques.

* ANTEAS. For Iſmena in Morery, Vol. I. read Iſmenius.

ANTENOR, Perſeus King of Macedonia's Ambaſſador to the Rhodians: His Buſineſs was to engage them for his Maſter againſt the Romans; but this was what he could not effect. He was afterwards Admiral of Perſeus's Fleet, and engaging Eumenes near the Iſle of Chio, defeated a Squadron of thirty five Ships, with Cavalry aboard for reinforcing King Attalus. Upon this Advantage, Antenor landed ſome of his Troops, and took moſt of the Enemy Priſoners who had eſcaped on Shoar. This happen'd about a hundred and ſixty eight Years before the Incarnation. * Polyb. Liv. Lib. 42. & 44.

ANTHYMUS, Biſhop of Nicomedia in Bythinia, ſuffer'd Martyrdom in the Diocleſian Perſecution. In the Year 303, February 23, he had the Mortification to ſee his Church pulled down by the Order of Diocleſian and Maximianus Galerius. The next Day, an Edict or Proclamation came out for Demoliſhing the Chriſtian Churches, and for puniſhing thoſe of that Religion. Biſhop Anthymus was beheaded, and a great many others ſuffered with him. His Feſtival is kept by the Latins on the 27th of April, and by the Greek Church on the 23d of September. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 8. cap. 4. & 6. Lactant. de Mort. Perſec.

ANTHOLOGION, an Eccleſiaſtick Book uſed by the Greek Church: 'Tis a Collection of the chief Offices in that Communion, and contains the Offices of our Saviour, the Bleſſed Virgin, and a great many Saints. There are likewiſe ſeveral Offices in common for the Prophets, Apoſtles, Marryrs, Patriarchs, and Confeſſors. Leo Allatius, in his Diſſertation de Libris Eccleſiaſticis Græcorum, ſays this Anthologion was compiled upon a mercenary View. His Reaſon for this Cenſure is, that excepting ſome Supplemental Paſſages, there's nothing more in it, than what may be met with in the Menæon and other Eccleſiaſtical Books of that Church. Beſides this Anthologion, Arcudius publiſh'd a new one, entituled, Anthologion Novum, printed in Quarto at Rome in 1598. His Deſign was to abridge the Old Anthologion, becauſe the Greek Prieſts and Monks, who were obliged to ſay the Breviary, could not carry it with them in their Journeys, upon the ſcore of its being too bulky; and here Allatius cenſures Arcudius, and charges him with changing the old Form, and inſerting a great many novel and ridiculous Additions. * Allatius, de Libr. Eccleſ. Græc. M. Simon.

* ANTHROPOPHAGI, or Cannibals. Some Writers carry this Practice as high as the Deluge, and make the Giants the firſt in this barbarous Cuſtom. 'Tis ſaid, that ſome Inhabitants in Paleſtine, of a prodigious Size, fed upon this deteſtable Diet. Hiſtorians report, that the Scythians and Sauromatæ were Cannibals; and Juvenal makes a frightful Deſcription of the Ombites and Tentirites, who after they had killed the Enemy, made a Meal of them. Livy reports, that Hannibal fed his Troops with Human Fleſh to make them more bold and intrepid. At preſent the Southern Part of Africk is moſt remarkable for theſe Cannibals. Veſpuſius relates, that he has ſeen naked Men and Women feed upon Human Bodies without Scruple or Averſion; that the Son would dine heartily upon his Father's Corpſe; and that their Reputation was raiſed proportionably to the Number of People they had eaten. * Relation Hiſtorique.

* ANTINOUS, born in Bythinia, and a Catamite to the Emperor Adrian. Dion Caſſius reports, that he ſacrificed himſelf for prolonging the Emperor's Life, which, as was pretended, required a voluntary Victim. When Adrian was at Alexandria, a Poet called Pancrates preſented him with the Flower Lotas, reſembling a Roſe: And having a mind to flatter the Emperor, he told him that Flower was lately produced from the Blood of a Lion his Majeſty had killed in Libya. Adrian being pleas'd with this fanciful Turn, order'd him as much Corn gratis as he had occaſion for out of the Magazine at Alexandria: And after this time all the Chaplets made of this Flower were called Antinoæ Coronæ. In ſhort, this Catamite's Memory had the Reſpect of all the Equipage of their pretended Deities. For Inſtance, he had Prieſts and Prophets aſſigned him: And to grace his Tomb, Oracular Reſponſes were given at it, and 'tis ſaid dictated by the Emperor himſelf. There were likewiſe pretended Miracles done, and nothing omitted to perpetuate the Worſhip of an infamous Wretch. He died Ann. Dom. 1032. Adrian ſtruck ſeveral Medals of Antinous, and placed his Statue amongſt the Emperors. We have three Medals of his remaining: The Reverſe of the firſt has the Repreſentation of a Temple the Emperor built for him upon the Nile, with theſe Words in Greek, ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΣ ΩΚΟΔΟΜΗΣΕΝ, Adrianus conſtruxit. And at the Foot of this Temple there is a Crocodile. Leonicus, in his Hiſtory, relates his having ſeen a Silver Medal of Antinous's at Venice, with theſe Words, ΑΝΤΙΝΟΟΣ ΗΡΟΣ: And on the Reverſe a Sheep with the Legend quite defaced. The third Medal of Antinous is a very youthful, beautiful Figure, with this Legend, ΟΣΤΙΛΙΟΣ ΜΑΡΚΕΛΛΟΣ Ο ΙΕΡΕΥΣ ΤΟΥ ΑΝΤΙΝΟΥ ΤΟΙΣ ΑΚΑΙΟΙΣ ΑΝΕΘΗΚΕ, Hoſtilius Marcellus Sacerdos Antinoi Achæis dicavit. The Reverſe has a Pegaſus mounted by Mercury, with his Wings and Wand. Amongſt the reſt of the Monumental Reſpects paid to Antinous, that remaining at Rome is the moſt remarkable. Within the Inſcription, Antinous is placed upon the ſame Throne or State with the Egyptian Deities: The Words are, ΑΝΤΙΝΟΣ, ΣΥΝ ΘΡΟΝΩ ΤΩΝ ΕΝ ΑΙΓΥΠΤΩ, ΘΕΩΝ Μ. ΦΟΥΛΠΙΟΣ ΑΠΟΛΛΩΝΙΟΣ ΠΡΟΦΗΤΗΣ. Moſt of the Figures of Antinous reſemble Bacchus. * Salmas, ad Solin. p. 975, & 976. Dio, Lib. 69. Spartian in Adrian. Origin. contra Celſ. Lib. 3. Clem. Alexandrin. Theodoret, Euſeb. &c.

ANTIPAS, a Diſciple of our Saviour, whom he calls His faithful Witneſs, ſuffer'd Martyrdom under Domitian. He was Biſhop of Pergamus, put into a Braſs Tun, and roaſted to Death. His Feſtival is kept on the 11th of April. * Apocalyps ii. v. 13. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

ANTIPATRIS, a City of Phœnicia. For Obadiah's feeding three Prophets, in Morery Vol. I. read his feeding one hundred Prophets by fifty in a Cave.

ANTIPATER (Boſtrenſis,) flouriſh'd towards the End of the Fifth Century. He wrote a Confutation of Euſebius's Apology for Eugenius, divided into ſeveral Diſcourſes. There is a Fragment of his cited in the Acts of the Second Council of Nice. Here he declares, that Euſebius was very well verſed in Hiſtorical Matters, but no exact Reporter, or rather no good Judge in Points of Controverſy and Belief. He blames him for defending Origen's Opinion concerning the Præexiſtence of Souls, and the Son's being ſubject to the Father in reſpect to his Godhead. * Secundum Concil. Nicæn. Act. iii. Tom. 7. Concil.

ANTIPHUS, and Antimenus, two Brothers, and Sons of Ganyctor of Naupactum, treacherouſly murder'd the Poet Heſiod in the Territory of the Locrians. They were puſhed upon this Aſſaſſination by a falſe Report of his having defamed their Siſter. To conceal the Murder, they threw his Corpſe into the Sea. But the Poet's Dog purſuing them with Hue and Cry, they were ſeized by the Locrians, who having a great Reſpect for Heſiod, threw them into the Sea, and pulled down their Houſe. * Plutarch, in Conviv. Sept. Sapient.

ANTIPODES. For One thouſand four hundred fifty two in Morery, Vol. I. read One thouſand four hundred ninety two.

ANTIPYRENIANS, a Ledge of the Pyrennean Mountains: It begins at the Valley of Capſiar, at the Head of the River Aude, and ſtretches from Weſt to Eaſt as far as the Lake de Salces upon the Coaſt of the Mediterranean; and thus it parts Rouſſillon from Languedoc. They call them the Antipyrenians, becauſe they are directly oppoſite to that Part of the Pyrenneans which lies between Rouſſillon and Catalonia. * Baudrand.

ANTITACTÆ, Hereticks ſo called, who notwithſtanding they maintain that God, who created the Univerſe, was Good and Juſt, yet they held that one of his Creatures had ſown Tares, made the Eſſence of Evil, and thrown the Infection upon Mankind. To this Heterodoxy they added, that the Commandments were deliver'd by Evil Principles or Beings. Therefore to revenge the Injury done to God, whom they call their Father, they practis'd the direct contrary to the Commandments. * Clemens Alexandrin. Lib. 3. Strom. M. du Pin, Eccleſ. Libr. of the three firſt Centuries.

* ANTONIA, Daughter to the Emperor Claudius, and married to Nero. Poppea Sabina miſreported her to Nero, as if ſhe had been falſe to his Bed. To make out this Charge, her Women were put to the Queſtion, went through the Torture, and vindicated their Empreſs. * Sueton. in Vit. Neron.

ANTONIA, formerly called Baris, a Hill of Jeruſalem upon which Herod the Great built the moſt regular and beſt fortified Tower that was ever ſeen, and called it Antonia, in Honour of his Patron the famous Marc Antony. This Mountain was ſeventy five Feet high, and inacceſſible on all ſides. Herod never ſhew'd more Magnificence than in this Structure. The Tower was faced with with white Marble from Top to Bottom, and ſo cloſely cemented, that the Joynings could not be diſcovered. This Advantage gave both Beauty and Strength to the Building; for the Superficies being thus ſmooth, and without Prominencies, 'twas impoſſible to climb it. 'Twas ſurrounded with a Wall four Foot and a half high, to make an Approach leſs practicable; and taking in the Circumference of the Wall, 'twas threeſcore Feet in Compaſs. To this Strength on the Outſide, there were ſo many Apartments within, Baths and large Rooms, that 'twas capable of receiving a great many People, and might well be taken for a large and noble Palace. The Offices were ſo commodious and handſomely contriv'd, that it look'd like a little Town. Its Circumference made the Figure of a Tower, and there were four other Towers at equal Diſtances from it; three of which were ſeventy five Feet high. But that which ſtood between the South and Eaſt Angle, was one hundred and five Feet high, and gave a Proſpect of all the Temple. As the Temple was a ſort of Citadel to the Town, ſo the Tower of Antonia was a Fort to the Temple; a Garriſon being placed there, to defend and command both the Town and Temple. The Dexterity of twenty Centinels, an Enſign, and a Trumpeter of Titus Veſpaſian's Army, performed that which a hundred thouſand Men could not have done by main Force. Theſe brave Men finding it impoſſible to take the Place by Aſſault, attempted it by Surprize, and in the Night-time: And raiſing ſomewhat of an Aſcent by the Rubbiſh of the Town-Walls, and aſſiſting each other in the Scalado, mounted the Top, and finding the Garriſon aſleep, cut them in Pieces; and then ſounding the Trumpet, and flouriſhing their Colours, gave the Signal of their Succeſs: Upon which all the Roman Troops came up; and Titus finding himſelf Maſter of this otherwiſe impregnable Place without loſing a Man, beſtowed a Week in demoliſhing it. Before Jeruſalem and this Place were laid in Rubbiſh, the High-Prieſt's Officiating Habit us'd to be kept here: And when he had Occaſion to make uſe of it, which was but once a Year, upon the 10th of September, the Romans deliver'd it, upon Condition it ſhould be return'd when the Feſtival was over. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 20.

* ANTHONY, (S.) the firſt that began the Monaſtick Order, was born in a Village call'd Coma, ſuppos'd to be in the Upper Egypt near Thebais: His Parents, who were Chriſtians of a wealthy and conſiderable Family, took great care to give him a Pious Education. As for furniſhing him with Learning, 'twas not thought neceſſary; for as Evagrius and S. Auguſtin report, he could not ſo much as read. However, S. Athanaſius, tho' he confeſſes he had not learn'd the Alphabet, relates notwithſtanding, that in his Youth he ſpent a great Part of his Time in Reading. He loſt his Father and his Mother at eighteen Years of Age: They left him and his Siſter a conſiderable Fortune. Soon after this, S. Anthony reſolving to quit the World, diſtributed his Eſtate amongſt his Neighbours, ſold his Furniture, gave the Money to the Poor, and retir'd into the Wilderneſs about the Year 270. He withdrew firſt to a Cell near his own Village, afterwards he ſhut himſelf up in a Sepulchre more remote; and at laſt paſs'd the Nile about the Year 285, and retir'd into the Ruins of an old Caſtle, where he liv'd twenty Years. About the Year 305, he was oblig'd to quit this Solitude, and undertake the Government of ſuch as reſign'd themſelves to his Conduct: And now the Number of thoſe who made Choice of this Monaſtick Life encreaſing, they began to build a great many Religious Houſes in the Deſarts. In the Year 311, while the Perſecution under Maximin laſted, he quitted his Retirement, to be in a better Condition for aſſiſting thoſe who ſuffer'd for the Chriſtian Religion. When this Perſecution ceaſed, he return'd to his Monaſtery, where working a great many Miracles, he drew a Crowd about him. Not liking to be thus Publick, he travell'd out of View and Converſation into the Mountains, and built a Cell in a little Monaſtery near the Mountain Calzira, a Day's Journey from the Red Sea. He liv'd a great while in this Solitude, but not without ſtepping out ſometimes to viſit his old Diſciples. In the Year 335, at the Inſtance of S. Athanaſius and other Catholick Biſhops, he took a Journey to Alexandria, in Defence of the Nicene Faith. He ſhew'd himſelf all along very zealous againſt the Hereticks, particularly againſt the Meletians and Arians. 'Tis ſaid his firſt Reſolution for Retirement was occaſion'd by hearing a Paſſage of the Goſpel read at Church, where our Saviour anſwer'd the rich young Man, If thou wilt be perfect, go and ſell what thou haſt and give to the Poor, and come and follow me, and thou ſhalt have Treaſure in Heaven. In his firſt Retirement, he ſpent his Time in Prayer and Meditation, was ſolicited with a great many Temptations, which he broke through by Auſterities and continual Labour. 'Tis ſaid in his ſecond Solitude he was roughly handled by Devils, who made themſelves viſible under many frightful Appearances, and gave him a great many Blows. After being ſufficiently refined and fortified by his third Retirement, he wrought a great many Miracles; and by his Example and Diſcourſes, animated the Monks to perſevere in the Diſcipline they had undertaken. He died in the 19th Year of Conſtantius's Reign, that is in the Year of our Lord 356, being a hundred and five Years old. He order'd his Corpſe to be privately buried in a Mountain where he had liv'd a Recluſe.

Notwithſtanding his Education was not ſpent in Study, he left ſeven Letters in the Coptic Language, directed to ſeveral Monaſteries: They were afterwards tranſlated into Greek; but now there is only a Latin Verſion extant. His Life mentions an Exhortation of his to his Monks; and the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians take Notice of ſome Letters written by him to the Emperor Conſtantine, in Favour of S. Athanaſius. Beſides this, ſome Writers make him the Author of a Rule, and a Sermon which poſſibly may be his; but the other Sermons, reckon'd to him in Trithemius's Time, are certainly ſpurious. S. Anthony's Memory had a great Regard paid it in the Fifth Century. The Abbot Euthimius began a Feſtival for him, and ſoon after the Greek Church follow'd the Precedent; but the Latin Church did not treat his Memory with this Regard till the ninth Century. 'Tis pretended his Corpſe, tho' privately bury'd by his Order, were afterwards diſcover'd and remov'd to Alexandria, and from thence to Conſtantinople, where a Church was built in Honour of him. Farther, ſome will have it his Body was remov'd from Conſtantinople to Vienne in Dauphiné, and a great many Churches in France and Germany pretend to his Relicks; but all this is very uncertain. S. Anthony's Life, written by S. Athanaſius, is ſtill extant. 'Tis certain by the Teſtimony of the Ancients, that S. Athanaſius wrote S. Anthony's Life: However, ſome queſtion the Genuinneſs of this Tract. But after all, their Conjectures for diſproving it are but ſlender; for ſince Father Bernard de Montfaucon has given us the Greek Original in his new Edition of S. Athanaſius's Works, there is little reaſon to believe it Counterfeit. * Athanaſ. vit. S. Ant. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Auguſtin, Lib. 8. Confeſſ. cap. 6. Cyril, in Vit. Euthym. Chriſt. Homil. in Math. Socrat. Lib. 4. Sozom. Lib. 2. & 3. Gregor. Nazian. Orat. 21, &c.

ANTHONY (de Butrio,) a Lawyer of Bologna, flouriſh'd towards the latter end of the Fourteenth Century, and the beginning of the next. He wrote a Commentary upon the Books of the five Decretals, printed at Venice in 1578; another Commentary upon the ſixth Decretal, printed at the ſame Place; a Repertory of the Canon and Civil Law, ſeveral times printed, and ſome Tracts upon the Civil Law. He died in the Year 1408, or as ſome will have it in 1417. * M. du Pin, Eccleſ. Librar. Cent. XIV.

ANTHONY (de Roſellis,) born at Arezzo in the Fifteenth Century: He was a Doctor of Law ſent to the Council of Baſil by Eugenius IV. and afterwards Secretary to the Emperor Frederick III. He wrote a conſiderable Book, entituled, De Monarchia, in which he diſcourſes concerning the Emperors and Popes reſpective Authorities; that is, whether the Pope has the two Swords. He likewiſe treats of the Authority of Councils in the Method of the Canoniſts. In ſhort, 'tis a complete Work, and decides abundance of Queſtions relating to the Barriers between the Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Juriſdiction. 'Twas printed twice at Venice, and is inſerted in the firſt Tome of Goldaſtus de Monarchia. * M. du Pin, Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. XV.

ANTONIUS (Lucius,) Governor of the Upper Germany under Domitian, being tired with the Cruelty and rallying Reproaches of that Prince, broke out to a Revolt, proclaim'd himſelf Emperor, and ſeiz'd the Publick Money for paying the Army. This Inſurrection made a great Noiſe at Rome, and Domitian with all the Senate march'd againſt him; but before they had mov'd very very far, they receiv'd the News that Antonius was routed and kill'd by L. Maximus, or, as Victor writes, by Appius Norbanus. Whilſt Maximus and Anthony were conteſting near the Rhine, the Germans, who march'd to reinforce the latter, came up to the Banks of the River; but found it ſo ſwell'd of a ſudden, that they could not paſs. * Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 67. Onuphr. Faſt.

ANTONIUS, (Marcus Julius) Son to the famous Marc Anthony and Fulvia, was receiv'd into Auguſtus's Favour, and preferr'd from one Publick Poſt to another, till at laſt he was Conſul in the Year of Rome 744. He married Marcella, Octavia the Emperor's Siſter's Daughter; and being thus near related to a Princeſs Auguſtus valued ſo much, he was the next Favourite to Agrippa, and the Empreſs Livia's Sons. Notwithſtanding all this Bounty and Promotion, he made his Patron a very unſuitable Return; he was one of the firſt that debauch'd Auguſtus's Daughter Julia. This, with the Suſpicion of his being concern'd in a Conſpiracy, occaſion'd his being ſentenc'd to Death. Some Hiſtorians report, that he kill'd himſelf to prevent the Infamy of the Execution. He had ſtudied under the Grammarian Craſſitius, and wrote an Heroick Poem in twelve Books, and ſome Diſcourſes in Proſe. 'Tis to this Antonius Horace addreſs'd the Second Ode of his Fourth Book. He left a Son deep in his Minority, call'd L. Julius Antonius: This Youth Auguſtus baniſh'd to Marſeilles, under the Pretence of promoting his Studies. When this young Gentleman died, the Emperor paid him a particular Regard, and got an Order of the Senate to lodge his Bones in the Vault of his Family; and thus, as far as it appears, there was an end of the Ancient and Powerful Family Antonia. * Velleius Paterculus, Tacit.

ANTONIUS, (Silo) a brave Roman Officer, Governor of Aſcalon, a Town of Idumæa, about ſixty four Miles from Jeruſalem. In the beginning of the Jewiſh War, he was attack'd by the Revolters, having a very ſlender Garriſon. This Diſadvantage did not in the leaſt ſink his Courage; he drew the ſmall Force he had out of the Place, expected the Enemy with great Reſolution, bore the Shock, hindered them from advancing to the Walls; and at laſt, being reinforc'd with ſome Cavalry, broke their Ranks, forc'd them to retire, and kill'd ten thouſand upon the Spot; amongſt which there were two very brave Officers, Silas a Babylonian and John of the Sect of the Eſſens. The Debris of the Enemies Army retir'd to Salis, a neighbouring Town. On the Roman ſide, there was not a Man kill'd, and very few wounded. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 3. cap. 2.

ANULINUS, (Annius) Conſul under Diocleſian in the Year 293, Governor of Rome in 306, and Proconſul of Africk in the Year 313, under the Emperor Conſtantine the Great. This Prince directed a Reſcript to him in favour of the Catholick Clergy, granting them an Exemption from all Secular Offices. The Hereticks, who had no Share in theſe Privileges, endeavour'd to diſappoint the Imperial Grant; but Conſtantine confirm'd it by a ſecond Reſcript the ſame Year. Anulinus had likewiſe Inſtructions to ſuppreſs the Donatiſts. * Codex, Theodoſ. Sozom. Lib. 1. cap. 9.

*ANZO, or Anzio Antium, a very ancient Town in Italy, and Capital of the Volſcian's Territories: 'Twas afterwards an Epiſcopal See, and demoliſh'd by the Saracens The Ruins of it are ſtill to be ſeen in Campagnia di Roma, near the Cape of Anzio, about ſixteen Miles from Velitri to the South: 'Twas famous for the Temple of Fortune, and the Birth of the Emperor Nero. Pope Innocent XII. began to repair the Haven of Anzo, but died before the Work could be finiſh'd, However, 'tis ſtill carry'd on by Clement XI. * Baudrand.

APELLES, a famous Painter, living about three hundred Years before the Incarnation. There were a great many Paintings of his drawn with all the Exactneſs, and finiſh'd with all the Heightnings imaginable. For the purpoſe, he drew a Fortune lying along with a Cornucopia in her Left Hand, and her Right Arm faſtened to a Wheel, to hint her Floating and Inconſtancy. A certain Painter, who grudg'd him his Reputation, turn'd Informer, and charg'd him with a Conſpiracy againſt King Ptolomy, that he had occaſion'd the Revolt of Tyre, and the Loſs of Peluſium. The King giving too much Credit to this Information, call'd him a Traitor and an Aſſaſſin, and had certainly cut off his Head, had not one of the Conſpirators clear'd him on the Rack. He drew the Portrait of Alexander like a Jupiter, with a Thunderbolt in his Hand: This was done with ſo much Life and Strength, that both the Prince and the Thunderbolt ſeem'd to launch out of the Canvaſs. His Victory, his Caſtor and Pollux, his Calumny, his Clytus, his Megabyzees, his Archelaus, and Philip, are much commended by the ancient Writers. He was a Perſon of great Induſtry and Application, which occaſion'd his ſaying, Nulla dies ſine linea. He wrote ſome Treatiſes upon the Art of Painting, but they are loſt. * Plin. Lib. 35. cap. 10. & Alib. Ælian. Hiſt. Var. Lib. 12. Valer. Maxim. Lib. 8. Strabo, Lib. 14.

APOCALYPSE, or the Revelation, the laſt Book in the New Teſtament, written by the Apoſtle S. John in the Iſle of Patmos. 'Tis a Prophetick Repreſentation of the State of the Church, from the Aſcenſion of our Bleſſed Saviour to the Day of Judgment. Several ancient Writers are not fully ſatisfy'd of this Book's being written by S. John; Caius, Contemporary with Pope Zephyrinus, throws it off to Cerinthus. Dionyſius Alexandrinus, in his Book de Promiſſionibus, cited by Euſebius, reports that ſeveral Perſons of Character, before his Time, rejected the Authority of the Apocalypſe, believing it neither written by S. John, nor any of the Apoſtles; but that Cerinthus had publiſh'd it under S. John's Name, to make his Whimſies paſs without Contradiction, and gain Credit for his Millenium. As for Dionyſius, he thinks it written by another John. The Eaſtern Church, if S. Hierom may be believ'd, did not take the Apocalypſe into the Canon; Euſebius and S. Epiphanius make much the ſame Report. The Apocalypſe is not in the Catalogue of Inſpir'd Writings drawn by the Council of Laodicea, nor in that mention'd by S. Gregory Nazianzen, S. Cyril of Jeruſalem, nor ſome other Greek Writers. Amphilochius obſerves, that ſome of the Greek Church did not reckon it among the Canonical Books. The Alogian Hereticks rejected it; but the Latin Church has always receiv'd it into the Canon, and as written by S. John. The Perſon 'tis made to, beſides the Name of John, has particular Marks to diſtinguiſh his Character. 'Tis ſaid, our Saviour ſent and ſignified this Revelation by his Angel unto his Servant John, who bare Record of the Word of God, and of the Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, and of all Things that he ſaw; which Circumſtances and Deſcription can agree to none but the Apoſtle S. John. This Book is directed to the Seven Churches in Aſia, of which this Apoſtle was Chief Governor: 'Tis likewiſe ſaid to be written in the Iſle of Patmos, whither this Apoſtle was baniſh'd, as Irenæus, Euſebius, and all the Ancients teſtify. Juſtin Martyr, Irenæus, Origen, Victorinus, and a great many other ancient Writers, are expreſs in reckoning this Book to the Apoſtle S. John. The Place where 'twas written, lets us into the Time when 'twas made. S. John was baniſh'd into the Iſle of Patmos in the Year 95, and return'd from thence in 97. The Apocalypſe muſt by Conſequence be written within theſe two Years.

There have been ſeveral Counterfeit Revelations: 'Tis poſſible the Apocalypſe of which Cains makes Cerinthus the Author, was either not written by S. John, or elſe ſcandalouſly interpolated. Clemens Alexandrinus, in his Hypotypoſis, mentions the Revelation of S. Peter, which Euſebius reckons amongſt Apocryphal or Counterfeit Books: However, 'twas not ſuppoſed written by any Hereticks; and therefore Sozomen obſerves that 'twas yearly read about Eaſter-time in the Churches of Paleſtine. To this we may add the Revelation of S. Paul, which, as Sozomen reports, was much eſteem'd by the Monks, and which the Cophti pretend to have amongſt them to this Day. There were likewiſe the Revelations of S. Thomas and S. Stephen; the Apocalypſe of Abraham forg'd by the Sethian Hereticks; and the Revelations of Seth and Ikaria, Noah's Wife, the Romance of the Gnoſticks: But Time has deſtroy'd all this Trumpery. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 3. cap. 25. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 39. M. du Pin. Diſſertation Preliminaire, Eccleſ. Library.

APOLLINARIS, (Claudius) Biſhop of Hierapolis in Phrygia, liv'd in the Second Century, in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, to whom he preſented an excellent Apology for the Chriſtians in the Year of our Lord 170. He likewiſe wrote five Books againſt the Heathen Religion, two againſt Judaiſm, two of Truth, and one againſt the Montaniſts. Theſe Books were extant in Photius's Time, who commends him for his Style. The Roman Martyrology pays him the Reſpect of a Saint.

* Euſeb.

* Euſeb. Hiſt. Lib. 4. cap. 26. Hieron. in Catal. cap. 26. Photius, Cod. 14, &c.

* APOLLODORUS, a famous Grammarian, born at Athens, liv'd in the hundred ſixty ninth Olympiad, in the Reign of Ptolomy Phyſcon or Evergetes King of Egypt. He was Scholar to Ariſtarchus the Grammarian, and Panætius the Philoſopher, as Suidas informs us. 'Tis this Apollodorus who drew the Pedigree of the Gods in his Bibliotheca. Of theſe Books there are three remaining, but Apollodorus wrote a great many more; for Harpocration cites the ſixth, Macrobius the fourteenth, and Stephanus or Hermolaus the ſeventeenth. Beſides this Work, he wrote a Chronicle, a Treatiſe of the famous Legiſlators, another of the Sects in Philoſophy, and ſeveral other Works cited by the Ancients. The three Books of his extant are but an Abridgment of a greater Work; but this Epitome, as imperfect as it is, is very ſerviceable to give Light to the old Mythology. He begins with Inachus, and comes down to Theſeus King of Athens: Thus this Hiſtory takes in ſix hundred and fifty Years, that is, from the Year 1858 to the Year 1233, before the Incarnation. * Macrob. Saturnal. Lib. 1. cap. 17. Aulus Gellius, Lib. 17. cap 4. Diogenes Laert. in Emped. &c. Voſſius de Hiſtor. Græc. Lib. 1. cap. 21, &c.

APOLLONIUS, born at Rhodes. His Poem upon the Expedition of the Argonauts, is according to Quintillian, written between the Extremities of a ſublime and creeping Style; and that he is very exact and uniform in keeping to this Mediocrity. And tho', according to Longinus, he maintains an Equality, and never flags in his Poem; yet he is far beneath the noble Flights and Deſcriptions in Homer. * Suidas in Apollon. Meurſius, Synt. de Apoll. Voſſ. de Hiſt. Græc. Lib. 1. cap. 16. & de Poet. cap. 8.

* APOLLONIUS (Tyaneus.) The Learned are divided in their Judgment upon the Character of this Man: Even in his Life-time, he had a great many that commended and diſcommended him; amongſt the latter, the Philoſophers Baſſus and Euphrates may be reckon'd. Lucian, in his Hiſtory of the famous Alexander Abonitichus, reports him one of Apollonius's Scholars: Damis, another bred under him, wrote his Life. 'Tis from this Author, and from ſome looſe and flying Reports, that Philoſtratus has drawn Apollonius's Life: He has ſtuff'd it beſides with a great many wonderful Performances, to furniſh an entertaining Romance. Eunapius ſeems ſomewhat ſtruck with this fabulous Performance. Philoſtratus ſays he) ſhould not have call'd his Book, The Life of Apollonius, but, The Deſcent of a God upon the Earth. Vopiſcus, upon the Credit of Philoſtratus, gives Apollonius a great Character. Dion Caſſius, who does not ſpeak ſo much to his Advantage, only relates that the Emperor Caracalla built him a Temple in the Quality of a Hero. Xiphiline, who abridg'd Dion Caſſius, reports that 'twas only upon the ſcore of his being a famous Impoſtor and Magician that this Emperor valued his Memory. In the Dioclefian Perſecution, Hierocles, a Pagan Philoſopher, and Governor of Alexandria, publiſh'd a Book againſt the Chriſtian Religion, entitled, Philalethes; in which he is ſo hardy as to draw a Parallel between Apollonius and our Bleſſed Saviour. This Book was confuted by Euſebius Cæſarienſis, who lops the Romantick Part of his Character, and ſinks him to the Size of a Philoſopher. Lactantius compares his Hiſtory to that of Apuleius. S. Jerom, in his Epiſtle to Paulinus and Pammachius, believes him a Magician. S. Chryſoſtom takes notice, that he had been look'd on as a Perſon that wrought a great many Miracles; but Time, and cloſer Enquiry, has diſcover'd that there was nothing but Fiction and Impoſture at the Bottom. Voluſianus is ſomewhat in doubt about this Matter, and deſires S. Auguſtin's Opinion of Apollonius and Apuleius. S. Auguſtin returns, that there was no one Circumſtance in the juggling of Apollonius and Apuleius to bring them up to a Parallel with the Miracles of our Bleſſed Saviour. And in another place this Father aſſerts, that their miraculous Performances have no Voucher of Credit to ſupport them. Photius, after ſome Commendation of Philoſtratus's Style, adds, that his Lives are ſtuff'd with Fiction and Whimſy, and, to ſpeak clearly, good for nothing. Sidonius Apollinaris, who knew nothing of Apollonius but by Philoſtratus's Report, commends his Philoſophy and Way of Living, but ſays nothing of his Miracles.

The Moderns have a mean Opinion both of Apollonius's Life and the whole Hiſtory of Philoſtratus. Ludovicus Vives, one of the firſt Criticks of this Period, ſays Philoſtratus has corrected Homer's fabulous Stories, by groſſer Fictions of his own. Joſeph Scaliger tells us Philoſtratus has neither Truth nor Probability in his Narratives; that he has gone beyond all the Bounds of Modeſty in reporting Apollonius's Miracles; and that his Hero was a great Cheat, and no better than a Mountebank that flouriſhes upon his Orvietan. Voſſius and Caſaubon treat Philoſtratus no better; and Lipſius obſerves him guilty of a great many Faults in the Roman Hiſtory. Baronius makes Apollonius a Wizard, and believed the Devil helped him to do ſtrange things. Le Sueur ſeems inclined to believe that all the miraculous Actions ſaid to be done by him were nothing but Philoſtratus's Inventions. M. de Tillemont, notwithſtanding he does not engage in a Critick upon Apollonius's Life, takes Notice however of ſeveral Anachroniſms and Miſtakes of Philoſtratus. M. Fleury looks upon Philoſtratus's Account of Apollonius as meerly fabulous. A late Anonymous Author of a Book, entituled, The Hiſtory of Apollonius Tyaneus convicted of Falſhood and Impoſture, proves; 1. That the Hiſtory of Apollonius has no credible Vouchers: 2. That Philoſtratus has written a Romance inſtead of a Hiſtory: 3. That the Miracles ſaid to be done by Apollonius have the Marks of Impoſture upon them; and that they may all be reſolved into Chance, Dexterity, or Knavery: 4. That the Doctrine of this Philoſopher is contrary in many things to thoſe Notions of Prudence and right Reaſon, which a Man may acquire by the Light of Nature, without farther Aſſiſtance. * Philoſtrat. in vit. Apollon. Tyan. Lactant. de Inſtit. Chriſt. Relig. Chryſoſt. Lib. 3. adverſ. Judeos, M. du Pin, &c.

* APOLLOS, or Apollo, a Jew. S. Jerom ſays he was Biſhop of Corinth, and believes he retired to Crete with Zenas the Lawyer. This Conjecture is drawn from S. Paul's recommending Zenas and Apollo to Titus Biſhop of Crete. Some of the Greeks report him to be the firſt Biſhop of Durazzo in Epyrus, and others make him the ſecond Biſhop of Colophon in Aſia. His Feſtival ſtands on the 8th of December; but the old Latin and Roman Martyrologies take no notice of him. * Acts, cap. xviii. 1 Cor. cap. 1. Hieron. Comment. ad Tit. Menolog. &c.

* APOTHEOSIS. 'Tis a Miſtake to ſuppoſe Auguſtus Cæſar was the firſt who order'd the Solemnity of an Apotheoſis. For long before his Time, the Greeks and Romans ranged the Inventors of the Creditable Arts and Sciences amongſt their Gods; and that Ceres, Bacchus and Vulcan, came by their Worſhip this way. They likewiſe deify'd the Founders of Cities and Generals, who had been famous for their Military Skill and Succeſs. Amongſt the Greeks, a dead Man could not be made a God, unleſs ſome Oracle had marked him for this Honour; nor at Rome without an Order from the Senate. When Alexander the Great had a mind Hepheſtion ſhould be owned for a God, one Philip, coming from Babylon, reported that the Oracle of Jupiter Hammon had promoted Hepheſtion to a Deity, and commanded Sacrificing to him. This News tranſported Alexander to that degree, that he cut the Throats of ten thouſand Victims, and ſacrificed himſelf in the firſt place. The Athenians carried their flattering Veneration beyond the reſt of their Countrymen. Theſe People were ſo forward, that they would not ſtay till their Great Men were dead, but ſacrificed and adored them living. Demetrius Poliorcetes was treated with this extravagant Honour, as Democares relates in the twentieth Book of his Hiſtory. Demetrius, ſays he, upon his Return from Leucade to Athens, was met by the Burghers in their Formalities: They had Chaplets of Flowers upon their Heads; they poured out Jars of Wine in a Sacrificing way, and had Muſick and Hymns ſung to him. The People proſtrating themſelves, cry'd out, Demetrius was the only true God. We ſalute you, ſay they, with Veneration, O Son of Venus! and the High and Mighty Neptune! and conjure you to ſettle us in Peace, for you are the only Sovereign Diſpoſer of that Bleſſing: As for the other Gods, they either ſleep over Buſineſs, or are deaf to Application. The Detail of this Diſtraction may be ſeen in Athenæus. Pythagoras, the firſt that took the Name of a Philoſopher, having lived twenty Years at Gotona, removed to Metapontum, and there died. The Metapontins, overſet with admiring his extraordinary Learning, conſecrated his Houſe to a Temple, and made a God of this Philoſopher. The whole Country of Greece appointed Sacrifices and Altars for Lyſander after his Death. And Duris obſerves, that he was the firſt Grecian who received Divine Honour, and had Hymns ſung to him: But then this muſt be underſtood during his Life; for long before Lyſander's Time, a great many others had Sacrifices, and other Marks of Divine Worſhip given them after their Death. This Cuſtom of Deifying famous Men was not the peculiar Superſtition of the Greeks and Romans; this Dotage is ſtill practis'd by ſeveral Idolatrous Nations, particularly the Chineſe, who offer Sacrifices to the Ghoſts of thoſe Perſons who have been remarkable for poliſhing Life, and furniſhing Conveniences. * Herodian, Lib. 4. cap. 2. Diodorus Sicul. Lib. 17. Juvenal. Sat. 6. Roſin. Antiquit. Rom. Lib. 3. &c.

* APOSTLES. To what is mention'd upon this Article in Morery's Supplement, it may not be improper to ſubjoin, in the firſt place, an Account of their ſeparating from each other, and travelling to diſtant Countries for Preaching the Goſpel; and in the ſecond place to add a Chronological Table of their Hiſtory, or the Apoſtolick Age.

The Travels of the Apoſtles, according to the received Opinion, for Preaching the Goſpel.

'TIS ſaid, that in the four and fortieth Year of the Incarnation, the Apoſtles made a Partition of the Provinces of the World, for the better Propagating the Chriſtian Religion. S. Peter made Choice of the Weſt, as 'tis ſuppoſed, and went to Rome. S. Andrew executed his Miſſion in Achaia, in Epire, Thrace, and Scythia, in Egypt, and Ethiopia. As to his founding the Churches of Byzantium and Nice in Bithynia, 'tis ſomewhat conteſted: For Pope Agapetus, in his Epiſtles read in the Fifth General Council, affirms that S. Peter was the firſt who Preached the Faith in theſe two Towns. S. James the Great was beheaded by Herod, to oblige the Jews. However, the Spaniards boaſt of this Apoſtle's making a Voyage to them: But this is exploded by the Learned as a Romance. S. James the Leſs was Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and never removed from thence. S. Jude, or Thaddeus, preached in Syria, Arabia, and Meſopotamia; and S. Simon performed the ſame Function in Meſopotamia and Syria. S. Thomas carried the Goſpel through Perſia to the Indies. He likewiſe Preached to the Ethiopians, which made S. Chryſoſtom ſay he had changed their Complexion, and made them Whites. S. Bartholomew carried his Commiſſion to the Greater Armenia, and made Converts in Lycaonia and Albania, and in India on this ſide the Ganges. S. John went into Aſia Minor, and the Eaſtern Parts of the Roman Empire. The Synodical Epiſtle of the Council of Epheſus to the Clergy at Conſtantinople, informs us that he lived at Epheſus with the Bleſſed Virgin; but more ancient Writers ſay nothing of this Matter. S. Paul Preached three Years at Epheſus, and may reaſonably be reckon'd the Founder of this Church; for S. John governed here only in the latter Part of his Life. The Biſhops of this Town ſtyle themſelves the Succeſſors and Diſciples of S. John. This Apoſtle likewiſe Preached to the Parthians. There is a Bible in Manuſcript in the Library of Geneva, where, before the Firſt Epiſtle of S. John, the Superſcription runs ad Parthos: But there is no great Reliance on this. S. Philip managed his Character with Succeſs in Scythia, and afterwards travelled into the Upper Aſia. S. Matthew made Ethiopia his Charge. S. Matthias Preached in Judea, and Part of Ethiopia. In all theſe Travels and Voyages of the Apoſtles, there is no mention of the new World America. Now if either the Apoſtles or their Diſciples had Preached the Goſpel there, ſome Writers would have given us an Account of it. On the contrary, the Hiſtorians who relate the Diſcovery of this Country by the Spaniards aſſure us, that they found no Signs of any Chriſtianity there: Whereas in the Eaſt-Indies, the Portugueze met with ſeveral Remains of this Holy Religion. * Godeau, Hiſt. de l'Egliſe, Liv. 1.

A Chronological Table of the Hiſtory of the Apoſtles, or the Apoſtolick Age, according to the received Opinion.

A. D.

33. To this Year the Acts of the Apoſtles, written by S. Luke, are to be referred, that is, from the 1ſt Chapter to the Martyrdom of S. Stephen, and to the end of the viiith Chapter. S. James the Leſs was Biſhop of Jeruſalem.

34. The Perſecution of the Chriſtians, which laſted above a Year: Saul being the chief Actor in theſe Diſturbances

Philip the Deacon, S. Peter and S. John, preach in Samaria.

35. S. Paul's Converſion: His Journey into Arabia: His Return to Damaſcus: S. Peter's Travels in Paleſtine.

36. S. Peter being returned to Jeruſalem, the Apoſtles decree the Admitting the Heathens to Baptiſm. S. James the Leſs continuing at Jeruſalem with S. John, the reſt of the Apoſtles went off to preach the Goſpel in diſtant Countries, after having made, as 'tis pretended, the Creed which goes under their Name, and after S. Matthew had written his Goſpel; the firſt of which Traditions is certainly falſe, and the other doubtful. This Year S. Peter founds the See at Antioch.

37. 'Tis ſaid S. James the Great went to Spain this Year: But this is no better than Mythology.

38. S. Paul, upon his Eſcape at Damaſcus, makes a Viſit to S. James the Leſs and S. Peter at Jeruſalem; from whence he goes to Cæſarea, and from thence to Tarſus in Cilicia.

39. S. Barnabas goes to Tarſus in queſt of S. Paul, and brings him to Antioch, where the Faithful are now called Chriſtians.

40. The Prophet Agabus being at Antioch, foretells a general Famine. Upon this the Diſciples make Contributions for the Saints in Judea, and convey them by the Hands of S. Paul and S. Barnabas.

41. Herod perſecutes the Chriſtians at Jeruſalem, and puts S. James the Great to Death, upon this Apoſtle's Return, as 'tis pretended, from Spain.

42. Herod impriſons S. Peter; who being enlarged by an Angel, went to Antioch, and from thence, as 'tis ſaid, to Rome. S. Paul and S. Barnabas leave Antioch, travel to Seleuſia, and from thence to Cyprus.

43. S. Peter, as 'tis pretended, arrives at Rome on the 18th of January, and erects his See there. S. Barnabas and S. Paul work Miracles in the Iſle of Cyprus.

44. S. Paul and S. Barnabas ſail to Pamphylia, and travel thence to Antioch in Piſydia.

45. S. Paul and S. Barnabas, chaſed out of Piſydia by the Jews, go to Iconium.

46. S. Paul and S. Barnabas retire to Lyſtra, and from thence paſs on to Derbe.

47. S. Paul and S. Barnabas, upon their Return to Lyſtra, are taken for Jupiter and Mercury. They retire to Derbe, return to Lyſtra and Iconium, and paſſing through Piſydia, come into Pamphylia.

48. S. Paul and S. Barnabas preach the Goſpel in Pamphylia and Arabia, and afterwards return to Antioch in Syria.

49. The Emperor baniſhing all the Jews by an Edict from Rome, S. Peter returns into Judea. Upon the Diſpute at Antioch touching the Neceſſity of Circumciſion, the firſt Council at Jeruſalem is convened, where 'tis decreed that the Gentil Chriſtians were not obliged to Circumciſion. S. Paul and S. Barnabas, who came to Jeruſalem upon this Occaſion, carry'd the Decree of the Council to Antioch; whither S. Peter following afterwards, S. Paul had ſome Conteſt with him.

50. S. Paul

The Chronological Table continued.

A. D.

50. S. Paul and S. Barnabas part to preach the Gospel in different Places. Dionysius the Areopagite is converted by S. Paul at Athens.
51. S. Paul goes from Athens to Corinth, and stays there a Year and a half.
52. S. Paul having stay'd at Corinth six Months of this Year, travels into Syria, with Aquila and Priscilla; and leaving them at Ephesus, goes alone to Cæsarea, from thence to Jerusalem, from thence to Antioch, and afterwards into Galatia and Phrygia.
53. & 54. S. Paul, upon his Return to Ephesus, preaches publickly there two Years.
55. S. Paul goes into Macedonia, and from thence into Greece. The Edict of the Emperor Claudius being recalled, S. Peter returns to Rome.
56. S. Paul passes through several Provinces and Islands, and comes to Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost; where being made Prisoner, he was first sent to Cæsarea, and then to Rome.
57. & 58. S. Paul having stay'd three Months in the Isle of Malta, is conveyed to Rome, and has a Sentinel assigned him for his Keeper.
59. & 60. After two Years Imprisonment, S. Paul being set at Liberty by the Emperor Nero, preached the Gospel in Spain and Gaul. And this Year S. Peter made several Voyages.
61. The Martyrdom of S. Barnabas in the Isle of Cyprus, and of S. Andrew in Achaia.
62. & 63. S. Mark suffers Martyrdom at Alexandria, S. James the Less at Jerusalem, S. Simon and S. Jude in Persia.
64. & 65. The Martyrdom of S. Matthias. Nero charges the Christians with the Burning of Rome.
66. S. Peter and S. Paul return to Rome.
67. S. Peter is crucify'd, and S. Paul beheaded by Nero's Order.
*70. The Town of Jerusalem is taken by Titus.
71. S. Bartholomew suffers Martyrdom in Persia.
*73. S. Thomas is put to Death by the Pagans at Meliapour in India.
*92. S. John is sent to Rome by the Proconsul of Ephesus: He is put into a Caldron of boiling Oil, and being taken out unhurt, is banished to the Isle of Patmos.
*94. S. John writes the Revelations in the Isle of Patmos.
*96. The Emperor Nerva releases S. John from his Banishment; upon which he returns to Ephesus.
*100. S. John dies at Ephesus, being ninety seven Years of Age. 'Tis not known what Year S. Matthew suffer'd Martyrdom in Ethiopia. * Riccioli, Chronol. Reform. Lib. 9. cap. 1.

APPIAN (The Way,) a great paved Road reaching from the Porta Capena at Rome as far as Brundusium. Appius Claudius the Censor made this Causey in the Year of Rome 441. Suetonius mentions the Forum Appium, which is not to be taken for a Market or Square in Rome, but for a little Town three Miles distant. 'Twas hither the Christians at Rome came to meet S. Paul when he was brought Prisoner from Judea. Modern Geographers make the little Town S. Donato the Old Appii Forum in the Country of the Volscians. * Horat. Lib. 1. Satyr. 5. Acts xxviii. Sueton. in vit. Tiberii.

APRONIUS, (Lucius) Proconsul of Africk under Tiberius, defeated Tacfarinas, who made Incursions into the Territories of his Government. The strict Discipline he kept contributed much to his Success against this Numidian. In the twenty eighth Year from the Incarnation, he was defeated by the Frisons; and in the Year 34, he commanded the Roman Troops in Lower Germany, his Son-in-Law Lentulus Getulicus being General in the Upper. This latter being charged with a Design of marrying his Daughter with Sejanus's Son, was protected by his Father-in-Law. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 3. cap. 20, & 21. Lib. 4. cap. 72. Lib. 6. cap. 30.

APROSIO, (Paul Augustine) an eminent Lawyer, born at Florence in the Seventeenth Century. He wrote a large Book in Morality, in which he represents a sort of a Battle; draws up the Cardinal Vertues against the opposite Vices, and routs the latter: 'Tis entituled, Strage de' Vitii Capitali Trionfati dalle virtù opposte. This Book was printed at Genoa in 1674, and dedicated to the Prince of Monaco. * Bayle Diction. Histor.

APSEUS, headed an Insurrection of the Palmyrenians, who in the Reign of Aurelian proclaimed one Achilleus Emperor, a Relation of Queen Zenobia. Upon the News of this Commotion, Aurelian marched directly to Palmyra, stormed the Town, and put all the Garrison and Burghers to the Sword, excepting the pretended Emperor, who was spared purely out of Contempt of his Person. * Zosimus, Lib. 1. Aurel. Victor.

APULEIUS, (Celsus) a Relation of the Emperor Augustus, and Consul with Sextus Pompeius, in the 14th Year of our Lord, which was the last of this Prince's Reign. 'Twas this Year that Augustus and Tiberius finish'd the List or Muster of the Inhabitants of Rome; the Number amounting to four Millions, one hundred thirty seven thousand Persons. * Dion. Cassius, Lib. 56. Sueton. in vit. August. & Tiber.

AQUALAQUE, Aqualaqua, a Town in Northern America in Florida, situate to the West of Carolina, or French Florida, near the great Lake Thomy. This Town gives the same Name to the neighbouring Territory. * Baudrand.

AQUILONDA, Aquilunda, a great Lake in Ethiopia: 'Tis situate at the Foot of the Mountains of the Sun, upon the Confines of the Kingdoms of Congo and Angola. This Lake has several small Islands, and a great many Rivers rise out of it: The most considerable of which are Barbela, Danda, and Coanza. * Baudrand.

AQUINUS, (Cornelius) Colonel of a Legion in the Reign of Galba: He served in Fonteius Capito's Army in Germany. Julius Valens, who had likewise the Command of a Legion, and this Aquinus, contrived the Murder of their General, and got it executed by one Chrispinus a Captain. Their Pretence was, that Fonteius was in a Practice to usurp the Empire. 'Twas thought notwithstanding, that the true Reason which pushed on these two Officers to assassinate Capito, was because they could not engage him in a Rebellion. However, Galba was either somewhat sleepy, or did not think it worth his while to examine this Mystery. * Tacit. Hist. Lib. 1. cap. 58. Lib. 3. cap. 62.

ARA, (The Cape of) Ara Caput, formerly Neptunium Promontorium. 'Tis the most Southern Cape of Arabia the Happy. This Cape, with the Coast of Ajan in Africk, makes the famous Streight in the Red Sea, commonly called the Streight of Babelmandel or Mecca. * Baudrand.

* ARABIA. Arabia the Happy, especially that Part where the Homerites or Sabeans lived, were converted to Christianity in the Fourth Century, when Constantius was Emperor; but the Missionaries were Arians. However, this Misfortune was retrieved in the following Century; and in the Year 522, the Country was almost all Catholick, when Dunaam a Jew made so many Martyrs at Nagrand. * Baillet, Topogr. des Saints.

L'ARACHE, Lina, Linos, a Town in the Kingdom of Fez, in the Province of Asgar, with a Haven, at the Mouth of the River Loucous in the Atlantick Ocean. 'Tis a strong Place, and has over and above a good Castle. The Spaniards took it in 1610; but 'twas retaken by the Emperor of Morocco in 1689.

ARAD, in Upper Hungary, upon the River Marisch, where the Turks built a Bridge for the Convenience of conveying Ammunitions and Provisions for the Towns in the Neighbourhood. In the Year 1685, the Imperialists took this Town by Assault, and burnt it, after having cut in pieces fifteen hundred of the Grand Seignior's Guard who retired hither. * Bourgon, Geographie Historique.

ARBELL, or Arbellis, a Town of the Upper Galilee, within the Tribe of Nepthali. There are frightful Caverns about this Place, which have always served for a Shelter for Thieves, or those Jews who retired from Persecution. This latter Case happen'd in the Time of Judas Maccabeus, when a great number of poor People, retiring hither to avoid the Ravages of Bacchides, and to stop his March, were forced by this General, and cut all in pieces. And in regard Men of the High-Way found so strong a Sanctuary here, it being difficult to climb the Ascent, Herod the Great stopt up some of the Caverns, and set ſet Fire to others. Joſephus informs us, that the Place was of very difficult Acceſs, becauſe the Defiles leading to it were very narrow, and the Caverns ſurrounded with pointed Rocks and Precipices, which made any Attempts either for mounting or coming down almoſt impracticable. This Hiſtorian adds, that Herod had large Trunks made, which he filled with Soldiers, and provided Iron Chains to let his Men down to the Mouth of the Caverns; and that his Soldiers were all armed with Halberds, to hook and kill thoſe that reſiſted. A great many were deſtroyed in this manner, and others of them taken and carried to Herod. But an old Man choſe rather to kill himſelf, his Wife and Children, than ſtoop to a Surrender, and live a Slave, tho' Herod gave a Sign for his Pardon. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 18. & Lib. 14. cap. 27. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

ARBETION, or Arbition, a Soldier of Fortune, who raiſed himſelf to the higheſt Poſts in the Army, and was afterwards Conſul in the Reign of Conſtantius, Anno Dom. 355. He was a Perſon of a turbulent and malicious Temper, and made it his Buſineſs to fall upon every body any thing remarkable for Merit. He had the Command of an Army againſt the Germans, who drew him into an Ambuſcade, and were notwithſtanding defeated by him in a ſett Battle. Not being able to endure the Reputation of Silvanus Son of Bonitus, a Gauliſh Officer, he procured him a General's Battoon in Gaul, on purpoſe to ruin him, which ſucceeded accordingly. In the Year 357, he was ſuſpected of rebellious Practices, and delated by the Count Veriſſimus; but he diſentangled himſelf by the Intereſt of the Court-Eunuchs. Two Years after, he behaved himſelf with great Injuſtice towards Urſicinus, charged with not doing his Duty when Amida was taken by the Perſians; the Cauſe being order'd to be try'd before Arbetion. In the Year 361, he was ſent General by Conſtantius againſt the Perſians, and afterwards againſt Julian the Apoſtate upon his Revolt. When this Prince came to the Empire, he made Arbetion one of his Court of Juſtice, ſettled at Calcedon for trying the Miniſtry of the late Emperor Conſtantius. He lived to Valens's Reign, and did him good Service againſt the Uſurper Procopius. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 15, 16, 20, 21, 26.

*ARCADIA, a Province in Peloponneſus. Lucian relates, the Arcadians believed themſelves older than the Moon, and for this Reaſon they refuſed to concern themſelves with Aſtronomy. Their King Pelaſgus taught them the Uſe of Acorns, for before they lived only upon Herbs and Roots. But Arcas, Son of Jupiter and Caliſto, according to Vigenerus, taught them Husbandry, and how to make Bread. The Arcadians, among other pretended Deities, had a great Veneration for Pan: Pan Deus Arcadiæ, as Virgil has it. Pliny reports, that they ſacrificed Men to Jupiter Lycius. Ariſtotle takes notice, that the Wine of Arcadia put in a Goat's Skin, and ſet near the Fire, calcines itſelf to Salt. Arcadia produced Aſſes of an extraordinary Size, which occaſion'd the Alluſion in Perſius:

Arcadiæ pecuaria rudere dicas.

This likewiſe gave Occaſion to Juvenal's Raillery, when the Parents of a dull Boy refuſed to gratify his Maſter for teaching him:

——— Culpa Magiſtri
Scilicet arguitur, quod læva in parte Mamillæ,
Nil ſalit Arcadico Juveni.

* Ariſtot. Lib. 4. Meteor. Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Perſ. Sat. 3. Juvenal, Sat. 7.

ARCH-DUCHY. The Province of Auſtria is the only Country in Europe which gives the Title of an Arch-Duchy: It belongs to the Emperor as Prince of the Houſe of Auſtria, who has likewiſe the Country of Tyrol, Stiria, Carinthia, and Carniola. Since the Year 1620, to go no higher, the Kingdom of Bohemia is Hereditary to this Family; and that of Hungary ſince 1687. * Bourgon. Geograph. Hiſtor. See Auſtria.

*ARCHILOCHUS, born at Paros, an Iſland of the Cyclades, a Greek Poet, and the firſt who wrote Jambicks, lived in the 29th Olympiad. According to Euſebius, Scaliger ſets his Birth to the 74th Olympiad, in the Reign of Manaſſes King of Judah, and Tullus Hoſtillius King of the Romans. He was ſlain in a Fight by one Callendas Corax of Naxos, who for this reaſon was forbid the Temple of Delphi by the Oracle. Suppoſing Archilochus was not the Inventor of Jambicks, 'tis certain he was one of the firſt and beſt diſtinguiſh'd in this kind of Poetry. Quintilian, who was a great Judge, commends him for the Strength of his Poems. His Thoughts (ſays he) are lively and ſparkling, and his Style well pointed and affecting. However, he is charged with too much Keenneſs of Satyr. Tully and Horace look upon all this Heat and Acrimony in Archilochus to be rather a tempeſtuous Effect of Paſſion, than any true Poetick Enthuſiaſm. * Cicer. 1 Tuſcul. Quintil. Lib. 10. cap. 1. Aulus Gell. Lib. 17. cap. 21.

ARCHIPELAGO (The) of the Molucca's, a great Part of the Indian Ocean in Aſia, reaching to the Molucca Iſlands. 'Tis ranged under five Diviſions, viz. the Archipelago of the Molucca's properly ſo called, the Archipelago of the Celebes, the Archipelago of Amboyna, the Archipelago of Maura, and the Archipelago of the Papous or Blacks. Emanuel de Fura, a Portugueze, gives a large Deſcription of them.

ARCHIPELAGO, (The Iſles of the) Archipelagi aut Maris Ægei Inſulæ; a great Cluſter of little Iſlands between Candia and the Coaſts of Morea, of Greece, of Macedon, Romania, and Natolia. They were formerly ranged under two Diviſions: Thoſe that lay together in a Circle were called Cyclades: They were ſituated in the middle of the Archipelago. The others, lying more diſtant and diſperſed, were nearer the Continent. The modern Geographers divide them into the Aſian Iſlands upon the Coaſt of Natolia, and thoſe of Europe which take in the reſt. The Turks are Maſters of them all, excepting ſome few inconſiderable ones in the Hands of the Venetians.

ARCHITECT. An Architect, ſays Vitruvius, deſcribing his Qualifications, ought to underſtand Deſigning and Geometry, and to have ſome Skill in Opticks, Arithmetick, and Hiſtory; to be well read in Philoſophy; to have made ſome Progreſs in Muſick, Phyſick, Law, and Aſtronomy. He ought to underſtand Drawing to make his Plan, and execute it with Advantage. Geometry is likewiſe a great Aſſiſtance to him, to teach him the Uſe of the Rule and Compaſſes, and that he may go on with Strength and Proportion. Arithmetick will teach him to calculate what the Building will coſt; Hiſtory furniſhes him with the Ornaments in Architecture; Philoſophy, he means Natural Philoſophy, is likewiſe ſerviceable. As for Muſick, he ought to be a Maſter in it, to underſtand how to fix his Brazen Veſſels, which they uſe to ſet in Rooms under the Theatre Stairs, that the Actors Voices might reach the Audience with Diſtinction and Agreeableneſs, with more or leſs Force, as the Occaſion requires. An Architect likewiſe ſhould know ſomething in Phyſick, that he may be able to diſtinguiſh the Qualities of the Air, and know what Places are fit to build in with reſpect to Health. Farther, he ſhould be ſomewhat of a Lawyer, to underſtand the Cuſtoms of Places, for the building his Walls, Eves, Dreins, and Houſes of Office, that he may'nt build himſelf to a Nuſance, and be liable to Indictments. And laſtly, Aſtronomy will help him to make Dials, by acquainting him with the exact Points and Quarters of Eaſt and Weſt, North and South, and of the Time of the Equinoxes and Solſtices. All this Learned Furniture Vitruvius requires of an able Architect.

There are three Parts in Architecture; the firſt lays down Rules for the building Publick and Private Structures; the ſecond gives Directions for Dialling and Clocks; and the third conſiſts in the making Machines for Building, Batteries, Bridges, and Fortifications.

Vitruvius is the oldeſt Architect who has any Writings remaining. He lived in the Time of Julius and Auguſtus Cæſar, and had examined all the ſtately Buildings in Greece and Italy. There were ſeveral other Learned Perſons who wrote excellently upon this Subject, as Fuſſius, Varro, Septimius, and Celſus. To which may be added, that Coſſutius, a Burgher of Rome, was ſent for by King Antiochus to finiſh the Temple of Jupiter Olympius at Athens.

The Original, Progreſs, and Declenſion, of Architecture in the Roman Empire.

Building was one of the firſt Arts put in Practice. The Neceſſity of Shelter from the Inclemencies of the Air, made Men very early in the Invention of Architecture.

tecture. The Romans were obliged to the Greeks for moſt of their Skill this way. Before their Improvements from Greece, their Buildings had nothing but Strength and Bulk to recommend them; for they underſtood no farther than the Tuſcan Order. In the Reign of Auguſtus, Architecture was at the Height, when every thing that was fine was ſo too. The Magnificence and Bounty of this Emperor gave the utmoſt Encouragement, and rais'd a great many beautiful Structures all over the Empire. Tiberius had neither the ſame Taſte nor Inclination for Productions of Art and Ingenuity. Nero, notwithſtanding the Predominancy of his Vices, had a ſtrong Fancy for Building: But here more Proviſion was made for Luxury and Diſſolution, than real Magnificence. Apollodorus was a celebrated Architect in the Reign of Trajan, and much eſteemed by that Emperor. 'Twas he that built the famous Trajan's Column, which is ſtill to be ſeen. Afterwards the Curioſities in Architecture dwindled. Alexander Severus, a Prince of a nice and pompous Genius, held it up for ſome time: But ſoon after it went leſs and leſs, ſunk with the Roman Empire, and fell to a clumſy and ignorant manner; in which Condition it continued for twelve hundred Years. The Ravages of the Viſigoths in the Fifth Century deſtroyed the moſt beautiful Remains of Antiquity. In the following Ages, Architecture grew heavy and ill contriv'd; for now the Deſigning Part was loſt, which gives all the Beauty to the Work. Now they knew nothing farther, than making a Houſe ſtrong. Charles the Great exerted himſelf for reviving Architecture: And upon Hugh Capet's coming to the Crown, the French diſtinguiſhed themſelves remarkably this way: His Son Robert carried on the Improvement; and upon the Progreſs of Time, the modern Gothick Architecture exceeded as much in Delicacy and Niceneſs, as the old Gothick manner had ſunk to a heavy and dry Contrivance. The Architects of the Thirteenth or Fourteenth Century, who underſtood any thing in Sculpture, ran out in Humour and Ornament ſomewhat too far.

There are no Greek Authors remaining upon this Art. Pliny the Younger, among the Latins, has diſcovered no ordinary Skill in Architecture; but there is never an ancient Author extant entire, excepting Vitruvius: And yet Vegetius informs us, there were ſeven hundred Architects at Rome in his time. Vitruvius has been commented upon by Philander and Daniel Barbaro, tranſlated into ſeveral Languages, particularly into French by Monſieur Perrault a Phyſician. The modern Writers are, Leo Baptiſta, Alberti, Serlio du Cerceau, Andre Palladio, Cataneo, Vignoles, Vincenzo Scamozzi, Philibert de Lormo, Bulau, Blondel, and many others of inferior Character, mentioned in Savot's Architecture. M. Chantelou has drawn a Parallel between the Ancient and Modern Architecture. Errard, Marlois, de Vilefritac, and a great many others, have written of Engineering and Fortification. Monſieur Dacier has publiſhed a Tract of the Building of Ships, Printed in Quarto at Paris in 1677. * Felibien, Principes des Arts, & Vies des Architectes.

* ARCHONTICI, a Branch of the Valentinians, and ſome of Marcus's Diſciples. They believed the firſt Woman was made by the Devil. They allowed the Reſurrection of the Soul, but denied that of the Body. Some of them were Libertines, and others affected an extraordinary Strictneſs. * Epiphan. Hær. 40. Auguſtin, Hær. 20, &c.

ARCH-THIEF, the Captain of a Company of Thieves among the Egyptians. Diodorus Siculus reports, that when any Man had a mind to enter himſelf upon the Thieves Muſter-Roll, he was to give in his Name to the Captain, promiſing at the ſame time to bring in all his Purchaſe with the utmoſt Fidelity. This Condition for fair Dealing in the Society was thrown in for publick Convenience: That when any thing was loſt, the Perſon damaged might write to the Captain, and here he was to tell Marks and Tokens, Time and Place, when his Effects were ſurprized. Upon this Information, he recover'd what he had loſt, excepting a fourth Part, which was to remain to the Thieves for their Diſcovery. To this, either the French or Dutch Supplementer adds, that ſomething of this kind is now practiſed at London. * Diodor. Sicul. Lib. V.

ARCTURUS, a Star in the Conſtellation of Archtophylax: The Word ſignifies a Bear's Tail, becauſe 'tis near it. It riſes the 1ſt of September, New Style, and ſets the 2d of May; and the common Opinion was, that it always brought Hail and Tempeſt along with it. The Poets feigned, that this Star in the Day-time was a Spy upon Mankind, and gave Intelligence to Jupiter of all the Perjury and Knavery committed in Commerce and Courts of Juſtice. Plautus, in the Prologue to his Rudens, hints ſomething of this.

* ARGADUS. Expunge this Article in Morery, Vol. I.

ARIARATHES VI. ſurnamed Philopater, King of Cappadocia, began his Reign with the famous Embaſſy he ſent to Rome for renewing the Alliance his Father had made with that Republick. The Belles Lettres and Philoſophy were much his Inclination, which drew a great number of learned Men into Cappadocia. Demetrius Soter, King of Syria, offer'd him his Siſter in Marriage; but he refuſed her for fear of diſobliging his Allies. Demetrius, by way of Revenge, ſupported the Intereſt of Orophernes, the pretended Son of Ariarathes V. With this Aſſiſtance, Orophernes diſpoſſeſs'd Ariarathes VI. Upon this Misfortune, he went to Rome to ſolicit for his Recovery: But the Romans would go no farther in the Matter, than to make him a Partner in the Government with Orophernes. But Attalus King of Pergamus reſtored him entirely, in the Year 157 before the Incarnation. Ariarathes afterwards joined his Arms with Alexander Balas, Ptolomy Philometer, and other Princes, againſt Demetrius Soter, who was routed and ſlain in the Battle. In the Romans War againſt Ariſtonicus, Natural Son to Eumenes King of Pergamus, Ariarathes took the Field for the Romans, and died in the Expedition, leaving ſix Children by his Queen Laodice: And the Romans, in Acknowledgment of the Father's Service, added Lycaonia and Cilicia to their Dominions. * Polyb. Strabo, Lib. 14. Juſtin. Lib. 37. cap. 1.

ARIARATHES VII. King of Cappadocia, Son of Ariarathes VI. and Laodice. This barbarous Princeſs, who had the Regency during her Childrens Minority, and afraid to loſe her Authority when they were of Age to govern, poiſon'd five of her ſix Sons. Upon this unnatural Murder, the People knock'd her on the head; and the youngeſt Son, who had been convey'd from his Mother's Ambition, reigned ſingle with the Name of Ariarathes VII. and married another Laodice, Siſter to Mithridates Eupator. He had two Sons by her, Ariarathes VIII. and Ariarathes IX. Hiſtorians ſay nothing of what Year he died; but Juſtin tells us he was deſtroy'd by Gordius, one of his Subjects, put upon this Practice by Mithridates: So that it's probable his Death happen'd the ſame Year that his Queen married Nicomedes. * Juſtin.

ARIARATHES X. King of Cappadocia, ſucceeded Ariobarzanes II. and was depoſed by Marc Anthony in favour of Sicinna, Son to Archelaus, High-Prieſt of Comana, in the Year 41 before the Incarnation. Ariarathes afterwards recover'd his Crown, and was diſpoſſeſs'd again by Antonius, who ſet Archelaus Sicinna's Brother in his place, in the 36th Year before the Incarnation. This Ariarathes was the third and laſt Prince of the ſecond Race of the Kings of Cappadocia. The Country was made a Roman Province after Archelaus's Death, who was the only Monarch of the third Race. * Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 48, & 49. Tacit. Annal. 2.

ARIOBARZANES II. King of Cappadocia, was unfortunately engaged in the Roman Civil Wars, which diſturbed the Eaſt after the Death of Julius Ceſar. Caſſius got him ſeiz'd, harraſs'd his Dominions, and ſoon after put him to Death, in the 42d Year before the Incarnation. Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 47.

* ARIOBARZANES, King of Armenia: He was a Prince of Reſolution, and a fine Perſon. The Armenians petition'd Auguſtus Ceſar, that he might be their King, Ann. Dom. 3. Caius Caligula, who was then in Aſia, conferred this Title upon him in the Emperor's Name. Ariobarzanes died after a ſeven Years Reign, leaving two Sons, whom his Subjects ſet aſide, and Crowned a Lady call'd Erato, whom they depos'd ſoon after. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 2.

ARIOBARZANES, Governor of Perſia under Darius Codomannus, repulſed Alexander at firſt, and hinder'd his March into that Country. But afterwards this Prince having got a Shepherd for his Guide, who underſtood the Ground, ſurprized Ariobarzanes, and routed him. After this Misfortune, he retreated to Perſepolis, the Capital of his Government, in order to defend it againſt the Macedonians: But finding the Gates ſhut againſt him, he was obliged to countermarch upon the Enemy, and give them Battle: And here, tho' he loſt his Life, he behaved himſelf very bravely. * Plutarch. Arrian. Q. Curt.

*ARISTOBULUS, deſcended from Aaron's Family, was a great Philoſopher. Ptolomy Evergetes made him Præceptor to his eldeſt Son Ptolomy Philometer, King of Egypt. He is commonly believed to have been one of the Tranſlators of the Septuagint. The Synagogue at Jeruſalem wrote him a handſome Letter. They acquaint him how merciful God had been to their Nation, in putting an end to Antiochus Epiphanes's Life, who had ſo cruelly diſtreſs'd them.: That now they were not only reſcued from the Tyranny of the Macedonians, but had likewiſe the Happineſs to diſcover the Holy Fire ſo long concealed. They deſire therefore that himſelf, and all the Jews in Egypt, would keep a Publick Thankſgiving, and celebrate the Feaſt of Tabernacles with all the Solemnity required. But here we are to obſerve, that there was a great deal of difference between the Feaſt of Tabernacles in September, and that appointed for the Month Caſleu or December. The firſt was the Feaſt of Tabernacles, inſtituted by Moſes, in Memory of the forty Years the People had lived in the Wilderneſs, having neither Houſes nor fix'd Abode, but lodging in Ambulatory Tents. The ſecond, kept in the Month Caſleu, the ninth Month of the Hebrews, was a Feſtival begun by Judas Maccabeus: 'Twas when he recover'd Jeruſalem, expelled the Heathen the Town, purify'd the Temple from the late Prophanations, pull'd down the Heathen Altar where they ſacrificed Swine, and ſet up another. 'Twas now that he order'd the Annual Solemnity called the Feaſt of the Dedication, that is of this Altar: 'Twas to be ſolemnly kept eight Days, beginning at the twentieth of the ninth Month Caſleu. This Feaſt is called the Dedication in S. John's Goſpel. Rupertus Serrarius and Mariana are of Opinion, that Judas the Eſſene, Author of the Second Book of the Maccabees, and a Perſon of great Character, wrote the Letter above mentioned, or gave the Minutes at leaſt. As for this Ariſtobulus, his Condition and Performances are not certainly known, though ſome pretend he was one of the Seventy two Interpreters: But this Opinion can't well be maintain'd without making him live to an improbable Age. All the Certainty is, that he lived in the 188th Year of the Greek Computation, in the Reign of Ptolomy Evergetes. As for a Jew's being Præceptor to a King of Egypt, there is nothing ſurprizing in that; for all the Macedonian Kings of Egypt ſince Philadelphus, who got the Bible tranſlated into Greek, entertained Jews at their Court to read and explain the Moſaick Law to them. * 2 Maccab. chap. i. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

*ARISTOTLE. To the Account already given of this Philoſopher in the Firſt Volume of this Work, may be added, his being a Perſon of great Penetration; that he went to the Bottom of his Subject, and then ſorted his Notions, and ranged them in a Method. For this Reaſon Galen commends Ariſtotle for being the firſt Philoſopher that had both thoroughly examined the Cauſes of all Beings, and gone fartheſt in explaining Particulars. Clemens Alexandrinus and Euſebius report, that Ariſtotle made an Acquaintance with a Jew at Athens, to let him into the Learning and Religion of the Egyptians. This ſaved him the Trouble of a Voyage into Egypt, which was then thought neceſſary to make a great Scholar. He ſtudied about fifteen Years under Plato, and then began to form a new Hypotheſis, and ſet up for himſelf. Plato grew chagrin at this Singularity, complain'd loudly of it, and charged his Scholar with Ingratitude and Revolt. After Plato's Death, which happen'd in the 108th Olympiad, three hundred and forty eight Years before the Incarnation, Ariſtotle left Athens, and travelled to Atarna, a Town in Myſia near the Helleſpont, where his old Friend Hermias was King. This Prince married Ariſtotle to his Siſter, and ſome ſay to his Daughter. The Philoſopher was ſo charmed with this Lady, that he offered Sacrifices to her. Three Years afterwards, Hermias being made Priſoner by Memnon, the King of Perſia's General, Ariſtotle retired to Mitylene, Capital of Lesbos, where he lived for ſome time. Philip King of Macedon being informed Ariſtotle's Reputation ran very high, engaged him for the Education of his Son Alexander, then fourteen Years of Age. And here Ariſtotle ſpent eight Years with his Pupil. During this time he taught him Rhetorick, Moral Philoſophy, Politicks, and, as Plutarch reports, a certain Philoſophical Syſtem which he taught no body elſe. Philip was ſo pleas'd with his Son's Improvement under Ariſtotle, that he erected Statues for him, and rebuilt Stagira, his Birth-place, which had been ruined by the late Wars. Ariſtotle afterwards loſt Alexander's Favour, by being too much in the Intereſt of his Kinſman Calliſthenes, who was thrown to the Lions by this Prince's Order. 'Twas for having hearken'd, as ſome ſaid, to Hermolaus's Conſpiracy againſt his Perſon. Ariſtotle was certainly ſuſpected for an Accomplice. However, there being no Evidence to prove the Fact, he had the Liberty to retire to Athens, where he open'd a Philoſophick School. He was very well received by the Magiſtracy: For upon his Account King Philip had beſtowed ſeveral Favours upon the Athenians. They made him a Preſent of the Lycæum, where he uſed to philoſophize upon the Walks, which made his Sect be called Peripateticks. 'Twas not long before this Place was conſiderably ſtock'd with Scholars. 'Twas about this time he wrote his moſt conſiderable Tracts; tho' Plutarch relates Ariſtotle had already written his Phyſicks, his Morals, his Metaphyſicks, and Rhetorick. This Author likewiſe reports, that Alexander wrote Ariſtotle a complaining Letter, charging him with leſſening the Value of his Books, by making them publick. Plutarch likewiſe informs us, that Ariſtotle being ruffled with Alexander's Suſpicion above-mention'd, and with the Preſents ſent by him to Xenocrates, went ſo far in his Diſguſt as to engage in Antipater's Attempt againſt this Prince. Ariſtotle's Friends are poſitive there was no Ground for this Imputation, or at leaſt it made no Impreſſion upon Alexander, who order'd him to write his Hiſtory of Animals: And to furniſh the Expence of this Undertaking, he ſent him eight hundred Talents, which (according to Budæus) make four hundred fourſcore and ten thouſand Crowns French. He likewiſe furniſh'd him with a great number of Sportſmen, and Fiſhers, who were to hunt, fiſh, and follow the Game by his Directions, and ſend him an Account from all Quarters for making Obſervations. Whilſt this Work was carrying on, one Eurymidon, a Prieſt of Ceres, charged Ariſtotle with Scepticiſm or Misbelief. Upon this he wrote a large Apology to the Magiſtracy: But being ſenſible the Athenians were extremely tender of Religion, and remembring how Socrates was uſed upon a reſembling Occaſion, he was ſo frighted with the Recollection, that he retired to Chalcis, a Town in Eubœa. 'Twas believed, that in caſe of an Extremity, he would rather have poiſon'd himſelf than fallen into his Enemy's Hands. S. Juſtin Martyr and S. Gregory Nazianzen report, that his not being able to ſolve the Flux and Reflux of the River Euripus, was the Death of him. Theſe Authorities gave Occaſion to the modern Fable, pretty much believ'd, that this Philoſopher threw himſelf into Euripus with theſe Words, Quoniam Ariſtoteles non capit Euripum, Euripus capiat Ariſtotelem.

Beſides his Books above mentioned, he wrote a Tract of Law, of Grammar, and the Art of Poetry. Diogenes Laertius makes him the Author of four hundred Tracts. He had a great Share in State Affairs and Court Intrigues during the Reigns of Philip and Alexander. His Philoſophy did not ſpoil his Temper, and make him rough and negligent in his Manner: He was a genteel Perſon in his Habit and Behaviour, and firm to Friendſhip; and being asked the Definition of a good Friend, his Anſwer was, that 'twas the ſame Soul lodged in two Bodies. Theophraſtus loved him entirely, and was his Succeſſor in the Lyceum. Ariſtotle truſted him with his Writings, with Orders not to publiſh them. Strabo, Lyco, Demetrius Phalereus, and Heraclides, ſucceeded Theophraſtus, who at his Death left Ariſtotle's Books to Neleus his Friend and Scholar. Ariſtotle's Philoſophy maintain'd a Reputation from Sylla the Dictator's time, to the middle of the Seventeenth Century, when Gaſſendus and Des Cartes inventing a new Syſtem, threw Ariſtotle quite out of Credit: But this is to be underſtood only of his Phyſicks and Metaphyſicks; for moſt of the reſt of his Tracts are admirable in their kind. * Diogenes Laert. in vit. Ariſtot. Plutarch. in Alex. & Sylla, Cicero, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. Ælian. Var. Hiſt. &c.

ARIUS,

ARIUS, King of Sparta, made an Alliance with Onias the Jewiſh High-Prieſt; and to make the Correſpondence more laſting, he acquainted him, that by inſpecting ſome Writings in the Archives, that the Jews and Lacedemonians were originally the ſame Family, and Deſcendents of Abraham; that ſince they were related, their Intereſt ought to be the ſame; that they were glad to hear the Jews were in a State of Repoſe, offer'd them their Service upon Occaſion, and deſired their reciprocal Friendſhip. * 1 Maccab. xii.

ARK. (Noah's) This remarkable Building was begun by Noah in the Year of the World 1557, and 2497 before the Incarnation. He was directed by God Almighty in all the three Dimenſions. Noah was five hundred Years old when he received this Command, and ſpent a hundred Years in building his Ark. 'Twas built, as 'tis commonly believed, in the Country of Eden, bordering upon Meſopotamia; and that this Patriarch employed a great number of Workmen through the whole Period. The Ark was three hundred Cubits in Length, fifty in Breadth, and thirty Cubits high. Moſt Interpreters agree, that this Cubit reſembled the Roman of a Foot and a half; and that it was by no means the Geometrick Cubit of ſix Feet. For according to this Meaſure, the Ark would have ſtretch'd to an Italian Mile, which exceeds all Probability. The Ark was contrived with three Floors; the firſt for Beaſts and Cattle; the ſecond for Fodder and Proviſions; and the third for the Birds and Noah's Family. It was not made like a Ship, but came nearer the Figure of a Square, growing gently narrower to the Top. There was a Door in the firſt Floor, and a great Window in the third, beſides a great many little ones to let in the Light upon all the Partitions. Some People pretend the Windows were Cryſtal or tranſparent Stone; but this ſeems no better than unproved Fancy. Noah without queſtion had great need of ſupernatural Light and Aſſiſtance to direct him in ſo wonderful an Undertaking; a Receptacle for ſo many ſorts of Creatures for no leſs than a whole Year. 'Tis ſomewhat difficult to conceive the Contrivance, and which way Infection was prevented, occaſioned by ill Smells coming from the Bottom of the Ark; how freſh Water was furniſhed for Drink, and how they had Air enough to breathe with any Freedom. Kircher makes the firſt Floor ten Cubits high, that is fifteen Feet. Here, ſays he, there was three hundred Apartments, Lodges or Dens, one hundred and fifty of each ſide, parted by a Gallery in the middle: And thus 'twas eaſy to lodge all ſorts of Beaſts and Reptiles, allowing a diſtinct Apartment for every kind. The ſecond Floor, which ſerved for a Magazine of Forrage, was four Cubits or ſix Feet high. The third, beſide Noah's Apartment and the Aviaries, had ſeveral Chambers and Granaries for part of the Proviſions. As to the Number of Animals which came into the Ark, Expoſitors are not perfectly agreed. The moſt probable Opinion is, that only two Pair of unclean Animals, and ſeven Pair of clean, were ordered to be received. And here we are to obſerve, that Noah did not travel all over the World to ſtock his Ark, as Philo Judeus would make us believe: For the Scripture expreſly tells us, they came to the Ark themſelves. This was either by particular Inſtinct, or Conveyance of the Angel. The Beaſts and Reptiles (as the French Supplementer ſuppoſes) came in at a Door, having firſt gone over a Bridge made on purpoſe, and faſten'd to the Ark; and that Noah and his Family went in the ſame way. The Birds flew in at the great Window in the third Floor. This however is no more than Conjecture, for the Scripture gives none of the Particulars. When the Deluge was over, the Ark reſted upon the Mountains of Armenia, called in the Language of the Country Meſeſouſar. The Chaldeans call them Kardu, and the Arabians, Karud. Noah and his Family went out of the Ark by God Almighty's Order, and at the ſame time all the Beaſts and Birds left it too. * Geneſ. vi. and vii. Kircher, Arca Noæ.

There is another Article in the French Supplement upon this Subject, different from the former, which it may not be improper to ſubjoin.

The Word ARK, in Hebrew Teba, is commonly taken for a Room or Apartment for the keeping Animals: The Septuagint tranſlate it Kibotos, the Latins, Arca. 'Twas made of Gophir Wood, a Wood never met with in the Bible excepting in this Place. The Septuagint term it by Square Wood or Planks; but other Interpreters take it for a particular ſort of Wood. Some believe it was Cedar, others Fir; ſome ſuppoſe it Cypreſs, others Box. As to the Dimenſions of the Ark, Origen fancy'd that the Cubit mentioned in Geneſis was ſix times as big as the Meaſure of that Name. But 'tis much more probable 'twas the common Egyptian Cubit, ſomewhat more than a Foot and a half, and about twenty of our Inches. By this Suppoſition, the Cavity or Area of the Ark, Abatement being made for the Sides and Floors, was a million ſeven hundred fourſcore and one thouſand three hundred ſeventy and ſeven Cubical Feet. Thus the Ark was forty two thouſand four hundred and thirteen Tuns, and ſingly bigger than forty of our Ships of a thouſand Tuns each. The Figure was ſomewhat of a ſquare, with the Height of thirty Cubits, and the Top ſenſibly ſloaping. The common Opinion is, that the Ground Floor lodged the Beaſts, the ſecond the Proviſions, and the third the Birds, with Noah and his Family. But M. Pelletier has given us a much more intelligible and commodious Deſcription of the Ark: He ſuppoſes three Stories in the Ark; and that underneath the Ground-Floor, or in the Hold, there was a Cavity or Ciſtern for Water: That the firſt Floor, ſeven Cubits high, lodged the Proviſions: That the ſecond Floor, eight Cubits high, kept the Beaſts and Reptiles; and that Noah and the Birds were lodged in the upper Story. According to this Author, the Hold and the Ground Floor were all Cavity, and reached the Length of the Ark without Diviſion: But the ſecond Story was contrived with large void Spaces in the Middle, which parted the Lodgments, ranged all along on both ſides to the Number of thirty ſix. In the middle of this open Space, he ſuppoſes there was Holes reaching to the lower Floor for the drawing up Hay and other Forrage; and that at the four Corners or Extremities, there were Pits contrived for drawing Water out of the Hold; and that over and above, there were Holes on the Sides of the Ark to throw out things offenſive. Pelletier makes a Stair-caſe at each End for going up to the third Story, where at one of the Ends he ſuppoſes an Apartment for Noah and his Family, and all along the Sides ſix and thirty Volaries or Cages for Birds, and eighteen Rooms for Granaries and other Proviſions. This Author ſets the Door of the Ark at one of the Ends, and the Window, according to him, was an open Space, with a Lattice a Cubit high before it: That this Window went round the Ark, and gave Light to the two upper Stories.

This Make and Contrivance of the Ark has ſeveral Conveniences not to be met with in other Hypotheſes: For, 1. There's Windows enough for the two upper Stories, which is wanting in the other Models. 2. The Beaſts are lodged in the ſecond Story above the Water, in light Partitions; whereas under the former Article, they are diſpos'd of in the Ground-Floor below the Water, and under the Hay and other Proviſions. 3. Noah and his Family have more convenient Apartments. 4. This Suppoſition furniſhes a Reſervatory for freſh Water, which is wanting in the other Draughts, in which 'tis ſuppoſed Noah was to take his Water from abroad. But M. Pelletier proves that this Water muſt be ſalt, and by conſequence there would be a Neceſſity for a Ciſtern of freſh Water. 5. All the offenſive things are eaſily diſcharged this way, and the Ark has Air enough to prevent Infection. And laſtly, by the Calculation of the Dimenſions he makes it appear, that the Ark thus contrived might eaſily hold all the Men, Beaſts and Birds, together with the Proviſions neceſſary for a Year's ſpending: And that the eight Perſons had Leiſure and Convenience enough to feed themſelves and the reſt in the Day-time. Buteo de Arca Noæ, M. le Pelletier, Arche de Noé.

ARK (The) of the Covenant, was a ſmall Cheſt or Coffer three Foot nine Inches long, two Foot three Inches broad, and two Foot three Inches high. The Decalogue, or two Tables of the Law, were laid up here: And, unleſs the Rabbins are miſtaken, thoſe that Moſes broke were put in with the other. That the Decalogue was all the Furniture when the Ark was brought into Solomon's Temple, ſeems plain from two Places of Scripture. (1 Kings, viii. 9. 2 Chron. v. 10.) 'Tis ſaid (Exod. xvi. and Numb. xvii.) that Aaron's Rod and the Pot of Manna were laid up before the Teſtimony. Now 'tis generally agreed that by the Teſtimony are meant the two

two Tables. Upon this a Controverſy has been ſtarted, whether the Rod and Manna were lodged within or without the Ark. But S. Paul puts an end to this Diſpute: He informs us, that within the Ark was the Golden Pot that had Manna and Aaron's Rod, and the Tables of the Covenant. As to the Book or Volume of the Moſaick Law, 'twas commanded to be put on the Side of the Ark. The Hebrew Word is Mitzzad. This Word ſome Expoſitors interpret the Outſide, and others the Inſide: The former ſeem beſt founded. For, 1. The ſame Word Mitzzad is uſed when the Philiſtines ſent back the Ark with an Offering of Gold and Jewels put in a Coffer by the Side of it. (1 Sam. vi. 8.) Now here 'tis certain Mitzzad muſt mean the Outſide. 2. The Ark had not Room enough to hold the whole Law of Moſes with the other things above mentioned. 3. The Deſign of lodging the Original of the Law in the Temple, was to keep it as an Authentick Record, for examining and correcting all Copies. To anſwer this End, it muſt be conveniently placed for Inſpection upon all Occaſions. Now had it been put within the Ark, and encloſed by the Cover of the Mercy-Seat, which was not to be ſtirred, coming at it had been impracticable. 4. When Hilkiah the High-Prieſt (Chron. xxii.) found the Volume of the Law in the Temple, there's no mention made of the Ark, neither does the Text ſuppoſe it taken from thence, but found elſewhere in the Temple. From all this, we may collect that the Book of the Law was not lodged within the Ark, but in a diſtinct Coffer by the Side on't. And thus Deuteronomy xxxi. and xxvi. is interpreted by the Chaldee Paraphraſe: And where we read, Put this Book of the Law in the Side of the Ark of the Covenant; he turns it thus, Take the Book of the Law, and place it in a Coffer on the right Side of the Covenant.

To proceed, the Mercy-Seat hung over the Ark, and cover'd it: 'Twas made of beaten Gold, of the Thickneſs of a Hand's Breadth, as the Rabbins pretend. There were two Cherubins of the ſame Metal placed at each End, their Wings expanded, and looking inwards towards each other. Thus the Mercy-Seat was ſurrounded, the Cherubins Wings meeting on each other. 'Twas here the Shechinah or Divine Preſence reſted, and was viſibly ſeen in the Appearance of a Cloud over it; and from hence Directions and Oracular Reſponſes were given. Upon this account God is ſaid in Scripture to dwell between the Cherubins, becauſe here the Communication between Heaven and Mankind was viſibly diſplay'd. Before this Mercy-Seat the High-Prieſt appeared once a Year, on the Day of Expiation, to make an Atonement for all the People; and therefore, had nothing of the firſt Temple, excepting the Ark, been wanting in the ſecond, this alone had been ſufficient Reaſon for the old Mens weeping, and for the Saying of Haggai, That the ſecond Temple was nothing in compariſon of the firſt. However, the Loſs was ſupply'd by another of the ſame Figure: For in the ſecond Temple there was an Ark of the ſame Shape and Dimenſions, lodged in the ſame Place. But notwithſtanding the Situation and Figure were the ſame, this latter had none of thoſe Glorious Remains and Appearances with the former: For here were no Tables of the Law, no Aaron's Rod, no Pot of Manna, no Shechinah, nor any Oracles deliver'd. So great a Difference there is between God's Appointment and Mens Imitation. The Ark in the Pentateuch had the Honour of the firſt Circumſtance; but that of the ſecond Temple could pretend no higher than the latter, the Deſign of it being only to repreſent the Moſaick Ark, on the great Day of Expiation, and to lodge the Holy Scriptures, that is, the Original of that Collection made after the Captivity by Ezra. In Imitation of this Ark, the modern Jews in their Synagogues have a Coffer of the ſame Form: Here they keep the Scriptures belonging to the Synagogue, take them out thence, and return them thither, with great Solemnity. Several Jewiſh Writers affirm there was no Ark in the ſecond Temple, and pretend that the Service of the Great Day of Expiation was performed before the Stone on which the Ark ſtood in the firſt Temple. But ſince under the ſecond Temple they made a new Altar of Incenſe, a new Shew-Bread Table, a new Candleſtick or Branch, inſtead of thoſe deſtroy'd by Nebuchadnezzar; ſince they thought all theſe neceſſary to their Temple-Worſhip, why ſhould they not think themſelves alſo obliged to make a new Ark? Farther, ſince the Holy of Holies, and the Veil drawn before it, were for lodging and keeping the Ark out of View, what occaſion was there for theſe in the ſecond Temple, unleſs the Ark had been there too? As to the firſt Ark made by Moſes, 'twas of Wood, but both Outſide and Inſide plated with Gold: 'Twas placed in the innermoſt or Chancel-part of the Temple, called the Holy of Holies. This moſt Holy Place, as 'tis ſometimes called, was made on purpoſe to lodge the Ark, and keep it out of ſight. This Apartment was ten Yards long, ten Yards broad, and the ſame Proportion in Height. The Ark was placed in the Middle, and (as the Rabbins pretend) upon a Stone, raiſed three Fingers breadth for a Pedeſtal. On the two Sides of it, two Cherubins fifteen Feet high were fix'd, at equal Diſtance between the Center of the Ark and each ſide of the Wall. Theſe Cherubins having their Wings expanded, with two of them they reached the Side-Walls, and with the other two met and touched each other over the middle of the Ark. But 'tis not with reſpect to theſe that God is ſaid to dwell between the Cherubins: The Place of the Shechinah relates only to the Cherubins above mention'd fix'd to the Mercy-Seat. That this was Matter of Fact, is evident; for moſt of thoſe Texts of Scripture, where God is ſaid to dwell between the Cherubins, were written before the building of Solomon's Temple. But before this Temple was built, there was none of theſe large Cherubins; they were only in the Temple, and not in the Tabernacle commanded in Exodus. Theſe Cherubins did not ſtand with their Faces outward, as they are commonly painted; their Faces look'd inward, in the Poſture of giving, and not for receiving Adoration, as ſome pretend. The Ark, while lodged in the Tabernacle, was carried by Staves on the Levites Shoulders. Theſe Staves were plated with Gold, and put through Golden Rings made for them: But then theſe Rings were not faſten'd to the Sides of the Ark, but at the two Ends of it. That this was their Situation, appears plainly by obſerving, that when the Ark was carried into Solomon's Temple, the Scriptures acquaint us, that the Staves being drawn out, reached downward towards the Holy Place: Whereas had they been on the Side of the Ark length-ways, they would, when drawn out, have reached towards the Side-Wall, and not downwards. The Rabbins are not agreed what became of the old Ark at the burning of the firſt Temple. Had it been carried to Babylon with the reſt of the conſecrated Plate, it would certainly have been returned, with the other Holy Veſſels reſtored by Cyrus to Jeruſalem. But that 'twas not thus recover'd, is generally agreed; from whence it follows 'twas deſtroy'd with the Temple. Neither was this a ſingle Calamity, for the Altar of Incenſe, the Shew-Bread Table, and the Golden Candleſtick, were all loſt when the Town and Temple were ſack'd. However, the Jews pretend the Ark was hid and ſecured by Jeremiah. But the common Opinion amongſt them is, that Joſiah, informed by Huldeah the Propheteſs of the Deſtruction of the Temple, order'd the Ark to be put in a Vault, which Solomon foreſeeing the Calamity made for this purpoſe; and that the Ark has lain concealed in this Place ever ſince, and will not be diſcover'd till the coming of the Meſſiah. But no more of theſe Rabbinical Whimſies. * Levit. xvi. 2. Levit. xvi. Lightfoot of the Temple, cap. 15. ſect. 4. Buxtorf, Synagoga Judaica, cap. 14. Exod. xxv. 1 Kings, viii. 1 Kings, vi. 2 Chron. iii. 10. 2 Chron. iii. 13. Exod. xxv. 13, 14, &c. and xxvii. 5. 1 Kings, viii. 8. 2 Chron. ix. Buxtorf de Arca, cap. 21, 22, &c.

ARKI, Archium, a Town in European Turky in Boſnia, ſtanding at the Mouth of the Boſna, where it runs into the Save. * Baudrand.

* ARLES, a great City in Provence in France. The Church of Arles was founded by Trophimus, as the Biſhops of this Province aſſure Pope Zoſimus in their Letter. Trophimus, ſay they, being ſent to Arles by the Holy See, was as it were the Spring of thoſe Streams which run through all France. But then the Time of this Miſſionary's coming is not generally agreed. Some are of Opinion, that this Trophimus is the Perſon mentioned in S. Paul's Epiſtles; and that by conſequence he was ſent into Gaul in the Apoſtles Time. However, Gregory of Tours, following the Writer of S. Saturninus's Life, mentioning the coming of this Biſhop in the Reign of Decius, with other Miſſionaries, puts Trophimus in the Number, and reports him diſpatched to Arles. Sulpicius Severus likewiſe aſſures us, that the Chriſtian Religion was not not preached on this ſide the Alps till a long time after the Apoſtles. By a Letter written to Pope Stephen, in S. Cyprian's Works, it appears there was a Church ſettled at Arles Ann. Dom. 254, and that the Biſhop Marcianus had joined the Novatian Party. And though ſome have doubted the Genuineneſs of this Letter, the moſt Learned Criticks, after a thorough Examination, reckon it to S. Cyprian. From whence it follows, that Trophimus muſt have appeared in Gaul, and founded a Church at Arles, ſome time before Decius's Reign. As for Gregory of Tours, he ſeems to fix his Miſſion to this Emperor's Reign, only becauſe S. Saturninus was ſent to Thoulouſe about this time.

Arles has been a conſiderable Town both upon the ſcore of the Privileges granted by Conſtantine the Great, and likewiſe becauſe it was the uſual Reſidence of the Præfectus Prætorio of Gaul: For theſe Reaſons, amongſt others, the Biſhop laid Claim to extraordinary Juriſdiction, and diſputed the Metropolical Right with the Biſhop of Vienne. This Controverſy was laid before the Council of Turin, held in the Year 397, where in the Second Canon 'tis decreed, that he that could prove his Town a Metropolis, ſhould be acknowledged Primate through all the Province, and have the Privilege of Conſecrations: And that in the mean time, for preſerving a good Correſpondence between the Claimants, they ſhould have the Juriſdiction of the Towns which lay neareſt to their reſpective Sees, together with the Power of Viſitation. This Temper was not put in Execution, the Biſhop of Arles puſhing to be declared Primate of Gallia Narbonenſis, and the Seven Provinces within that Compaſs. The Emperor Honorius, in the Year 418, directed an Edict to Petronius, in which Arles is declared Metropolis of the Seven Provinces: And Pope Zoſimus, in his firſt Epiſtle to the Biſhops of Gaul, grants the Biſhop of Arles the Primacy over the Seven Provinces. But Pope Boniface, in his third Epiſtle to Hilarius of Narbonne, complains that Patroclus Biſhop of Arles had made a Biſhop for the Church of Lodève within the Precinct above-mentioned; and thus Zoſimus's Deciſion was ſet aſide. 'Tis to this Diſpoſal of Boniface that Leo the Great refers in his eighty ninth Epiſtle, where he takes Notice that the Privilege granted by the Holy See to Patroclus was afterwards revoked by a more equitable Award.

This Diſpute was revived under Hilarius of Arles, who depoſed Projectus and Celidonius Biſhops of the Province of Narbonne, and conſecrated another Biſhop for the Dioceſe of the latter, pretending a Right, as Leo the Great reports, to conſecrate all the Biſhops of Gaul; that is, within the Seven Provinces of Narbonne. The Conteſt was brought before Leo the Great, who gave Sentence againſt Hilarius Biſhop of Arles, and procured an Order from the Emperor Valentinian for the Execution. But Ravennius, Hilarius's Succeſſor, not minding the Pope's Deciſion, conſecrated a Biſhop for the See of Vaiſon, in the Province of Vienne. The Archbiſhop of Vienne complained of theſe Proceedings to Leo the Great; and Ravennius being willing to refer the Matter to his Holineſs, Leo, by a definitive Sentence, gave the Metropolitan of Vienne four Sees for his Suffragans, viz. Valence, Tarantaiſe, Geneva, and Grenoble; and left the other Towns to the Juriſdiction and Diſpoſal of the Biſhop of Arles.

The Archbiſhop of this Town had likewiſe the Honour of being Vicar to the See of Rome. Pope Zoſimus annexed three Privileges to this Dignity: The firſt was, that the Biſhops of Gaul, who had a mind to go to Rome, ſhould be obliged to take Letters of Recommendation from him. Secondly, that he ſhould have the Privilege of conſecrating the Biſhops within the Precincts of Vienne and Narbonne. Thirdly, that he ſhould remain in the Poſſeſſion of the Pariſhes anciently belonging to his See, tho' lying out of his Province. Pope Symmachus, in his tenth Epiſtle to Cæſarius Biſhop of Arles, confirms this Vicarſhip to him, and grants him the Privilege of convening Councils for deciding Religious Controverſies ariſing in Gaul and Spain. The Powers of this Vicarſhip were farther enlarged by Pope Vigilius, who granted Auxianus Biſhop of Arles Juriſdiction over all the Churches in King Childebert's Dominions. Pope Pelagius ſtretched this Privilege over all Gaul, when Sabaudus was Archbiſhop of Arles, which was confirmed by Gregory the Great to Virgilius, who had likewiſe the Diſtinction of the Pall.

Councils of ARLES.

The firſt Council of Arles was convened in the Year 313, by the Emperor Conſtantine. 'Twas to decide a Controverſy between the African Biſhops, touching the Conſecration of Cecilian Biſhop of Carthage. It conſiſted of thirty three Weſtern Biſhops, and ſome Prieſts and Deacons. Marinus Biſhop of Arles preſided there. Pope Sylveſter likewiſe ſent S. Claudianus and Avitus Prieſts, Eugenius and Ciriacus Deacons, to repreſent him: But that Conſtantine the Emperor was preſent, is a plain Miſtake in ſome Writers. The Council acquitted Cecilian, and condemned his Proſecutors. There were twenty two Canons drawn up upon the Subject of Diſcipline; and at the cloſe, the Council wrote a Letter to Pope Sylveſter, to acquaint him with their Proceedings, and to deſire his publiſhing their Deciſions. Albaſpinæus Biſhop of Orleans has Notes upon ſeven of the Canons of this Council, which the Learned may conſult in Labbée and Coſſartius's Councils, or in the Works of this Prelate. The Emperor Conſtantius marching into Gaul to ſuppreſs Magnentius's Inſurrection, ſtaid at Arles from the 10th of October 353, till the beginning of the next Year. This Prince having declared himſelf of the Arian Perſuaſion, managed in Eccleſiaſtical Matters purſuant to what theſe Hereticks ſuggeſted. Vincentius Biſhop of Capua, in Company with Marcellus Biſhop of Campania, was ſent to the Emperor's Court by Pope Liberius, and carried Letters from fourſcore Biſhops of Egypt and the Eaſt concerning Athanaſius, then perſecuted by the Arians. The Pope deſired a Council might be held at Aquileia, as had been already agreed. Several Biſhops of Italy and Gaul, then at Arles, requeſted the ſame thing. Notwithſtanding this ſoliciting, the Emperor convened a Synod at Arles, where Biſhop Saturninus appeared at the Head of the Arians. S. Athanaſius was condemned here, the Popes Legates ſurprized or overreach'd, and Paulinus Biſhop of Treves baniſh'd, who mantained the Conſubſtantial Article with great Reſolution. Ravennius Archbiſhop of Arles, Succeſſor to Hilarius, in the Year 449 held two Councils here, which may be reckoned the ſecond and third; for that held by the Arians in 353 does not deſerve the Name of an Eccleſiaſtical Aſſembly. This ſecond Council of Arles was held in the Year 452; and here the Canons for Reformations of Manners and Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline were very Primitive and Significant. Sirmondus has publiſhed fifty ſix of theſe Canons. This Learned Author has publiſhed the third Council of Arles, convened by Ravennius in the Year 455. They met to take up the Differences between Theodorus Biſhop of Frejus, Valerian of Cemele, Maximus of Riez, and Fauſtus Abbot of Lerins, who broke in upon the Juriſdiction of theſe Prelates. Fauſtus was afterwards Biſhop of Riez, and in the Year 475 appeared at the fourth Council of Arles, convened by Archbiſhop Leontius againſt the Predeſtinarians, charged with ſome Manichean Opinions. One Lucidus a Prieſt was cenſur'd here for this Heterodoxy. But then we are to obſerve, that Lucidus ſubmitted to the Sentence, retracted his Opinion, and ſubſcribed a Confeſſion of Faith in Conformity to the Council's Deciſions. That this is Matter of Fact, appears not only from Fauſtus Rienſis's Tract of Grace and Free-Will, and a Letter he wrote to Lucidus; but likewiſe from Lucidus's Retractation, publiſhed in Caniſius's Lectiones Antiquæ. In the Year 524, Cæſarius Archbiſhop of Arles convening ſeventeen Biſhops for the Dedication of Great S. Mary's, held a Council on the 6th of June, where four Canons were paſſed upon the Regulation of Manners. The Council held there in 554, made ſeven for retrieving Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. The Synod conſiſted of nineteen Biſhops, Sabaudus Archbiſhop of Arles being Preſident. Charles the Great, to mention no more, ordered the convening of a Council at Arles in the Year 813. They made twenty ſix Canons upon the Heads of Diſcipline. * Paulin. Gregor. Turon. Hincmar. Baron. Annal. Sirmond & Labbée in Edit. Concil. Chorier Hiſt. de Dauph. &c.

* ARMENIA. About a hundred Years ſince Scha-Abas King of Perſia conquer'd the Country. Since this Conqueſt, the Armenians live diſpers'd in Perſia, Turky, and ſome Parts of Europe. Their principal Buſineſs is Merchandize. Cardinal Richelieu deſigned to ſettle them in France for promoting Trade: 'Twas with this View that he ordered ſeveral Books to be printed in the Armenian Language. Uskan or Oſcham, Biſhop of Uſchouanch, was at Amſterdam in 1664, where he printed ſeveral Armenian Books, and amongſt the reſt an Armenian Bible. He had Inſtructions from his Patriarch to this purpoſe; becauſe before this time there were none but Manuſcript Bibles in this Language, which made them very ſcarce, and conſequently very dear. From Amſterdam he travelled to Paris, where he procured a Licence from Seguier Chancellor of France, for printing Armenian Books; and from this time the Armenians have had a Preſs at Marſeilles, where they ſettled for Commerce. Father Simon, who was acquainted with this Armenian Biſhop, reports, that the Court of Rome was ſurpriz'd at the French King's granting the Armenians a Privilege for printing all ſorts of Books in their own Language; becauſe 'twas not impoſſible they might print ſome Books that maintained their Heterodoxies; but the French Government did not grant them this Privilege without Reſtraint and Limitation: And for farther Security, before their Books were put into the Preſs, they were examined by a Perſon ſent from Rome to Marſeilles for this purpoſe, who diſcourſed about this Matter with the Biſhop's Grand Vicar. But then this Caution occaſion'd ſeveral Alterations in their printed Copies, which they ſometimes complained of before the Council-Board.

As to their Religion, ſome Miſſionaries, tranſcribed by Brerewood, charge them with ſeveral Errors, of which they are not guilty. For Inſtance, 'tis not true that they deny the Real Preſence in the Holy Euchariſt; all the Diſpute between the Greeks and them, with reference to this Sacrament, is their not putting Water into the Wine, and conſecrating with Unleavened Bread, according to the Cuſtom of the Weſtern Church. Brerewood likewiſe blames the Armenians and Abyſſins, for refuſing to eat any of thoſe Birds or Beaſts which were reckoned unclean by the Moſaick Law. But that which has led People into this Miſtake, ſeems to be only this, that all the ſeveral Subdiviſions of Chriſtians in the Eaſt abſtain from eating Blood and things ſtrangled, and that without any Jewiſh Superſtition. There is much better Colour to cenſure the Armenians for their ſcrupulous obſerving ſeveral Faſts. This part of Diſcipline is ſo very frequent amongſt them, that to hear them diſcourſe of this Subject, a Stranger would imagine all their Religion conſiſted in Faſting. * M. Simon, Hiſtoire de la Créance & des Coûtumes des Nations du Levant.

ARNDTIUS, (John) has the Character among the Myſtical Proteſtants, of a Perſon of great Worth and Devotion, and one that had a ſingular Talent for promoting Spiritual Attainments: He was born at Ballenſtadt in the Duchy of Anhault in 1555. 'Tis ſaid that he had great Diſcoveries and Scenes of Glory opened to him on his Death-Bed. George Duke of Lunenberg preſented him to the Church of Zell, and made him Superintendant of all the Pariſhes in the Duchy of Lunenberg. Notwithſtanding the extraordinary Circumſtances at his Death, his Adverſaries charged him with Fanatical Enthuſiaſm; and becauſe he ſometimes wrote and diſcourſed with the Air of a Myſtick Divine, they made him little better than a Roſicruſian Viſionary. 'Tis true, Arndtius was very well acquainted with the Writings of Taulerus, Thomas à Kempis, S. Bernard, and other Authors of warm refined Devotion. They cenſure him farther for borrowing ſeveral Chapters from Weigelius: But then his Friends deny that he ever tranſcribed any unorthodox Tenets either from Weigelius, or any other Myſtical Divines. Lucas Oſiander, a Divine of Tubing, was one of Arndtius's chief Adverſaries. He publiſhed a Tract, entitled, Judicium Theologicum. 'Twas written againſt Arndtius's True Chriſtianity, written in High Dutch. Beſides this, Arndtius wrote three Books; the firſt called the Book of Scripture: The ſecond entitled, The Book of Life: The third, The Book of Conſcience. This Performance has been tranſlated into ſeveral Languages, particularly into Latin, at Lunenberg, Frankfort, and Leipſick. His firſt Book was turned into Engliſh, and printed in 1646. * Joannis Arndtii Theologi apud Germanos celeberrimi, ac ſuperintendentis quondam in ducatu Lunæburgico meritiſſimi, de vero Chriſtianiſmo, Libri quatuor, ob præſtantiam ſuam olim Latine redditi; nunc autem reviſi ac emendati cura & Studio Antonii Wilhelmi Boëmi. Accedit huic Editioni nova Præfatio de Vita & Scriptis Arndtianis. London, 8vo. 1708.

ARNO, Arnus, a River of Italy in Tuſcany. It riſes in the Apennine Mountains, in the Territory of Florence, near the Village Santa Maria della Gratia, fifteen Miles from the Head of the Tiber to the Weſt; from whence running South to Arezzo, and encreaſed by the Moraſs of Chiana, it winds Weſtward, and having received the Siena, croſſes and divides the City of Florence; and afterwards being more encreaſed by the Rivers Biſentio and Ombrona, and big enough for carrying Boats, it takes in the Piſa 'near Mont-Lupo, the Elza above S. Miniat, and the Rivers Era and Peſcia at Pont Era. From hence the Stream drives into the Town of Piſa, runs thro' the middle of it, and about eight Miles below falls into the Sea of Tuſcany, twelve Miles from Leghorn. * Jean. Antoine Magin. Cluverius, Deſcriptio Italiæ. Baudrand.

* ARNOBIUS (the Elder,) lived in the Third Century, and taught Rhetorick at Sicca, a Town in Numidia in Africk. His Compoſitions have the Turn of an Orator; but his Style is ſomewhat rough, his Periods ſomewhat unartificially managed, and the Phraſe and Terms ſometimes not exactly Latin. 'Tis pretty plain by his Writings, that he was not thoroughly acquainted with the Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion. He attacks the Pagans rather better than he defends his own Belief. No body has diſcovered the Folly and Impiety of the Heathen Worſhip, nor rallied with a better Grace, than this Author. He wrote a Book De Rhetorica Inſtitutione, which is loſt. The beſt Edition of his Works is that printed in Quarto at Leyden in 1657, with Elmenhorſtius, Canterus, Stewechius, and Heraldus's Notes. * Hieron. in Catal. Chron. & Ep. Bellarmin. Poſſevin. M. du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 3.

* ARNOBIUS (the Younger.) A Treatiſe of the two Subſtances, or two Natures of our Saviour, are reckoned to this Author. The Commentary upon the Pſalms, cited by Bede under the Name of Arnobius, is ſuppoſed to belong to him. This Expoſition is dedicated to Laurentius, or rather to Leontius, and Ruſticus; the firſt was Biſhop of Arles, and the other of Frejus: From this Dedication we may conclude the Author a Frenchman. Upon this Subject of Grace and Free-Will, he engages againſt S. Auſtin and his Party, and defends the Sentiment of the Maſſilienſes. By his Commentary upon the cvth Pſalm, it appears he was a Prieſt. Albertine, and ſome others cenſure him as a Pelagian; but they charge him too deep, for he was no more than a Semi-Pelagian. * Sixtus Sennenſis, Lib. 4. Biblioth. Bellarmin. Poſſevin. M. du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 5.

ARNOLD, (George) a Miniſter at Perleberg, gained great Reputation by his Church-Hiſtory, and that of Hereſies. He was at firſt Hiſtory-Profeſſor at Gieſſen: But his Conſcience being very nice and ſtrait-laced, hindred his conforming to the Cuſtomary Formalities in the Univerſities of Germany. To make himſelf eaſy, he reſign'd the Chair, and removed to Altſtedt, where he officiated as Chaplain in the Ducheſs Dowager Eiſenach's Family. From hence he was invited into the Territories of Brandenberg, where he was Inſpector of the Churches of Werben and Perleberg. He died in the Year 1714. As to his Character, he is reckoned a ſound Divine, and of a peaceable unprejudiced Temper. After Spener's Death, Arnold was reckon'd as Patriarch of the Pietiſts, as they call them. But in regard this Diſtinction is commonly given to thoſe who endeavour the reforming Abuſes crept into the Church, and declare againſt looſe Caſuiſtry, there is no reaſon to value him the leſs upon this ſcore. His Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory embarraſſed his Fortune, and procured him a great many Enemies: The Divines let looſe their Satyr upon him, and charged him with defending almoſt all the Hereſies that ever appeared. He replied with great Temper, and always preferred Argument to Reflexions. He wrote a great many Books, but moſt of them in High Dutch. His Hiſtory of Myſtical Divinity is almoſt the only Latin Tract publiſhed by him. * Journal Litter. Mai & Juin 1714.

ARNOLD, (Nicolas) Divinity-Profeſſor at Franeker, was born at Leſna in Poland in December 1618. He ſtudied the Belles Lettres in the College of Leſna, and, amongſt other Inſtructors he had Amos Comenius for his Tutor, who wrote his Janua Linguarum about that time. He afterwards ſtudied at Franeker, and from thence travelled to the Univerſities of Groningen, Leyden, and Utrecht. He was much eſteem'd by the Chancellor of Poland Stephen Corycinski, by the great Mareſchal of Sweden, John Oxenſteirn, by General Douglas, and the Elector of of Brandenberg; which laſt offer'd to make him one of his Court-Preachers. In 1646, he was ſent to Heydelberg, to engage Monſieur Spanheim the younger to accept the Divinity Profeſſor's Chair at Franeker; but here he did not ſucceed. Nicolas Arnold wrote ſeveral Books, viz. A Confutation of the Gacovian or Socinian Catechiſm; Anti-Bidellus; Anti-Echardus; a Book againſt Brevingius; an Apology for Ameſius againſt Erbermann, who defended Bellarmine; a Commentary on the Epiſtle to the Hebrews; Lux in Tenebris; ſeveral Tracts againſt Amos Comenius. * See his Funeral Oration by M. Marck, and Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ARNSPECK, a Town in Germany in the Duchy of Holſteyn, belonging to a Prince of the Family of Holſteyn. The eldeſt Branch of Arnſpeck is Joachim Erneſt, youngeſt Son of John, who was a Cadet of Chriſtian III. King of Denmark. This Erneſt had three Brothers, Alexander, who carried on the Branch of Sonderberg; Frederick, who began the Line of Nordberg; and Philip, Head of the Gluſpurg Branch. * Spener, Famil. Oldenbourgo-Dan.

* ARNULPH, Biſhop of Liſieux, in the Twelfth Century. He wrote ſeveral Tracts; amongſt others a Book of Epiſtles, and two Orations; one of them ſpoke at the Council of Tours, held in the Year 1163; and the other deliver'd in a Synod held for the Conſecration of a Biſhop; to which may be added ſome Poems. Odo Turnebus, Son of Adrian, printed theſe Tracts at Paris in 1585, under the Title of Epiſtolæ, Conciones & Epigrammata; now inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum. Afterwards Lucas Dacherius, in the ſecond Tome of his Spicilegium, publiſh'd another Piece of this Arnulph, entitled, De Schiſmate orto poſt Honorii II. diſceſſum, contra Girardum Epiſcopum Engoliſmenſem, Legate to Peter de Leon, who was Anti-Pope to Innocent II. and in the XIIIth Tome of the Spicilegium laſt mention'd, there's a Sermon of Arnulph's upon our Lady-day, and five Epiſtles. Theſe Letters are written with great Spirit and Elocution. There are likewiſe not a few remarkable Paſſages relating to Hiſtory, and the Diſcipline of that Age. The Subject of his Poems, tho' not material, are well formed upon the Rules of that Faculty, and beautiful enough in the Verſification. * Robert du Mont, Append. ad Sigebert. ad Ann. 1182. Hoveden, in Annal. Petrus Bleſſenſis. Sainte-Marthe Gall. Chriſt. Bellarmine. Poſſevine, &c.

* AROW, or Aarow, a Free Town, pleaſantly ſituated in the Canton of Berne in the Country of Argow, upon the River Aar, between Olten and Biberſtein. The Town is not very old: It is built in the ſame Place where the Fort Rora ſtood formerly. This Citadel being taken by the Counts of Hapsberg and Altenberg, 'tis generally believed that Arow was built there by them. Theſe Counts had been furniſhed with a conſiderable number of Troops from Arow, where they had ſufficient Proof of the Burghers Loyalty and Courage, particularly in the Battle of Sampſace in 1415. The Canton of Berne ſeiz'd Arow, with all the Territory of Argow and its Dependencies. The Town has a Senate to themſelves, which meets in the Citadel above mentioned. After the Conference at Bern held in 1528, where the Maſs and Uſe of Images were thrown off, and the Reformed Religion ſettled, the Burghers of Arow came into this Reformation, in which they ſtill continue. * Stumpf. Lib. 7. Gul. de Hapsberg.

ARPHAXAD, King of Media, was defeated by Nebuchadnezzar King of Aſſyria, who reigned at Nineve. This Nebuchadnezzar is the ſame with him mentioned in the Book of Judith. He is called by other Authors Saoſduchinus, and ſucceeded his Father Eſar Haddon in the 31ſt Year of Manaſſes. As for Arphaxad, 'tis ſomewhat difficult to know under what Name he goes in the Prophane Hiſtorians. Thoſe who fix the Chronology of Judith's Hiſtory, after the Return of the Jewiſh Captivity, are irrecoverably embarraſs'd about this Arphaxad; becauſe at this time there was no King of Media nor of Aſſyria, Nineve being now demoliſhed. But thoſe who ſet this Period before the Captivity, and aſſign the Battle to the Reign of Manaſſes, conclude probably enough that this Arphaxad is Dejocés, or at leaſt Phraortes his Son. For the Hiſtory of Judith informs us, that Arphaxad King of the Medes built the City of Ecbatane: Now this Town was built by Dejocés. The Greek Text does not ſay preciſely that Arphaxad built Ecbatane, only that he fortified and enlarged it; which may agree well enough with Phraortes, or Phraartes, Dejocé's Son. * Uſſer. Scaliger. Petavius. Riccioli, &c.

ARRACAN, Arracanum, a Town in the Eaſt-Indies beyond the Ganges, near the Town of Bengal, ſtands upon the River Martaban, a hundred and forty Miles diſtant from Catigan, and at the ſame Remove from Pegu. 'Tis fortified with a conſiderable Caſtle.

The Kingdom of Arracan, Arracanum regnum, is ſo called from the Capital Arracan. 'Twas formerly governed by a native King; then the Realm fell to the King of Pegu; after ſome time the Government reverted, and at preſent the King of Ava is their Sovereign. This Country is bounded on the North with the Kingdoms of Cacomay and Tapoura; to the Eaſt with the Territories of Caverane and Brema; to the South with the Kingdom of Pegu; and to the Weſt with the Gulph of Bengal. Beſides Arracan the Capital, the other conſiderable Towns in this Kingdom are Sora, Sandar, and Cadüaſlan. * Vincent, Le Blanc.

ARRAGIAN, a Town in the Province of Khuſiſtan or Suſiana. 'Tis about a Day's Journey from the Sea, and the Neighbourhood is very fruitful in Dates and Olives. Ulug Beg and Naſſiredding aſſign it 86 Degrees and 30 Minutes Longitude, and 35 Degrees 30 Minutes Northern Latitude. It lies in the fourth Climate. * Herbelot, Bibliothec. Orientale.

ARRUNTIUS, Conſul in the 732d Year of Rome. He was a celebrated Author, and wrote ſeveral Geographical Tracts. He was likewiſe a very wealthy Perſon; and being proſecuted by Satrius Secundus, and order'd to be try'd before the Emperor Tiberius, he grew ſo very ſplenetick upon this Uſage, that notwithſtanding the Diſſuaſives of his Friends, he open'd a Vein, and bled to Death. This happen'd in the Conſulſhip of Cneius Aſſerrovius and Pontius. * Tacit. Lib. 6. Annal. cap. 47, 48.

ARSAME, Arſama, a Caſtle in Adiabene, a Province in Arabia. 'Twas hither that Abia the Arabian King retreated after his being defeated by Izates King of the Adiabenians; and here he killed himſelf for fear of falling into the Conqueror's Hands. * Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 20. cap. 2.

ARSAMES, a Perſian of Quality, Son to Ariamnes, of the Family of Achemenes, was Hyſtaſpes's Father, and Grandfather to Darius, who ſucceeded Cambyſes in the Kingdom of Perſia. * Marſham, Canon. Chron.

There was another Arſames, Son of Artaxerxes, aſſaſſinated by his Brother Ochus. * Plutarch.

ARSENIUS, a Deacon of the Church of Rome. 'Tis ſaid the Emperor Arcadius, after his Father Theodoſius's Death, being informed of the Place of Arſenius's Retirement, ſent an Officer with a Letter to him, in which this Prince owned his Miſconduct and Ingratitude, and order'd him a conſiderable Preſent, which Arſenius refuſed. He was ſo entirely diſengaged from Intereſt, that when a Will of one of his Relations was brought, in which the Teſtator's Eſtate was wholly left to him, he asked the Perſon how long his Kinſman had been dead? The Anſwer was but a few Months: Upon which he reply'd, I have been a good while longer dead myſelf than this comes to; which way then can I be his Heir? Upon the Incurſion of the Barbarians, he was forced to quit the Deſart of Sethè, ſome little time before the Goths ſack'd Rome. This occaſion'd his ſaying the World had loſt Rome, and the Monk Sethè. When the Enemy retired; he returned to his Solitude: And thus removing from one Retirement to another, he died at Stroma or Troê near Memphis in the ninety fifth Year of his Age, Anno Domini 445. S. Jerom calls him, not without Reaſon, one of the chief Supporters of the Anchoretick Life. * Hieron. de Viris illuſt. Apophthegmata Patrum apud Cotelerium, Metaphraſtes, &c. The Greeks keep this Feſtival on the 8th of May, and the Latins on the 19th of July. * Baillet vies des Saints.

ARSENIUS, Archbiſhop of Monombaſia or Malvaſia in the Morea, lived in the Sixteenth Century, and was reckon'd a Learned Perſon in the Belles Lettres. He held a cloſe Correſpondence with Pope Paul III. and wrote him ſeveral fine Letters: In one of which he complains that the Greek Nation was but ſlenderly regarded by the Church of Rome. However, he reconciled himſelf to the Pope, which gave the Greek Church ſuch Diſguſt, that Pachomus Patriarch of Conſtantinople excommunicated him. The Greeks likewiſe reported him Broukolakas, kolakas, that is, that the Devil hovered about his Careass, and animated it. A Collection of his Apothegms was printed at Rome in Greek; and his Scholia upon seven of Euripides's Tragedies was printed at Venice in 1534. 'Twas dedicated to Pope Paul III. * Crusius, Turco-Græcia, Bayle Diction. Histor.

* ARSINOE, Daughter to Ptolomeus Lagus. After the Death of her Husband Lysimachus, her Brother Ptolomy Ceraunus prevailed with her to marry him. To pay him a particular Respect at his Entry into the Town of Cassandrea, she order'd her Sons, two beautiful Princes, the one sixteen, and the other thirteen Years old, to meet him with Garlands. Ptolomy Ceraunus, to conceal his barbarous Design, embraced them with an Air of Tenderness and Affection: But as soon as he had marched up to the Town-Gate, he seized the Citadel, and gave Orders for the murdering the two young Princes, who, when the Scene opened, ran for Shelter to their Mother, and were stabbed in her Arms. Arsinoe seeing her Children thus barbarously assassinated, tore her Cloaths and Hair, and was banished into the Island Samothracia. * Justin, Lib. 17. & 24. Pausanias, Eusеb. Chron, &c.

ARSINOE, youngest Daughter to Ptolomy Auletes King of Egypt. When the Egyptians prepared to attack Julius Cæsar, who had possessed himself of the young King of Egypt, Arsinoe slipping privately out of the Palace, went to the Egyptian Army, and commanded there jointly with Achillas, and a Misunderstanding quickly happening between this Lady and Achillas, each of them pushing for the sole Command, she got this General killed by the Eunuch Ganymedes. But Cæsar having given the young Prince his Liberty, Arsinoe was obliged to resign the Government to her Brother. After the Romans Victory in Egypt, and young Ptolomy's Death, Cæsar, in Complaisance to Cleopatra, the eldest Sister, forced Arsinoe to quit Egypt. And here Appian the Historian relates, that Megabyses, Diana's Priest at Ephesus, received this Princess, and treated her like a Queen. This Civility had like to have cost him his Life; for when Mark Antony, to oblige Cleopatra, put Arsinoe to Death at Miletum, he order'd Megabyses to be seized for entertaining Arsinoe; but Cleopatra, at the Instance of the Ephesians, discharged him. * Appian de Bello Civil. Cæsar in Bello Civil. Hirtius de Bello Alexandrin.

ART, a Collection of Rules, Inventions, and Experiments, the observing which gives Success to Undertakings, and makes them serviceable and delightful. Philosophers define Art somewhat closer and clearer; they call it a Habit, which makes a Man work with greater Ease and Certainty. Arts are commonly distinguished into those called Liberal or Creditable, and Mechanick. The first sort, for Instance, are Poetry, Painting, Musick, Military Skill, Architecture, and Navigation. Mechanick Arts lie most in Limbs and Drudging, and where the Body is more employed than the Mind.

Tzetres tells us, that in Noah's Time one Vulcan, an Egyptian, found out Fire, and invented the Arts where this Element is employ'd: And that the Greek Poets, travelling into Egypt for Education, brought home these Improvements, and gave the Credit of the Invention to their own Nation. However, 'tis not to be doubted but Noah understood Mechanicks, which brought forward the Conveniences of Life: Neither is it unlikely that Part of Husbandry relating to Vineyards was his Invention. 'Tis certain that several Arts and Sciences were struck out before the Deluge. Now Noah, who lived a great while before the Flood, and built the Ark by God Almighty's Order, must necessarily be furnished with a great part of the Mechanick Skill then practised. * Danet, &c.

ARTAXERXES, (Longimanus) so called by reason of the more than ordinary Length of his Hands; for it seems upon his standing upright, he could touch his Knees with them. He succeeded his Father Xerxes. He was but the third Brother: But the eldest Darius being falsly charged with murdering his Father, Artaxerxes believing too fast, rush'd into his Brother's Apartment, and dispatch'd him with the Assistance of the Guards. The next Heir to the Crown was Hystaspes, Xerxes's second Son; but he being absent in Bactria, Artabanes, Captain of the Guards, seized the Opportunity, and set Artaxerxes on the Throne. 'Twas this Artabanus who misreported Darius, surprized Artaxerxes's Understanding, and made him murder his Brother. But all this Pretence of Affection was only to make a Fool of Artaxerxes, and let him wear the Crown a little, till he could transplant it into his own Family. Whilst this Plot was upon the Anvil, Artaxerxes got Notice of it, broke the Attempt, and executed Artabanus. This Artaxerxes is called Ahasuerus in Scripture, and was the same who had Esther for his Queen. It must be confessed that Archbishop Usher and Joseph Scaliger are of a different Opinion. Usher affirms Darius Hystaspes was the King who married Ester: That Atossa was Vashti, and Artystona Esther. But this does by no means agree with what Historians have written of these Ladies and Artaxerxes: For Herodotus plainly relates, that Artystona was Cyrus's Daughter, and by consequence could not be Esther: That Atossa had four Sons by Darius, besides Daughters, all born before he was King, and therefore could not be that Queen Vashti who was divorced from her Husband the third Year of his Reign. Farther, Atossa is said to have had such a perpetual Ascendant over Darius, that at the Close of his Life he was prevailed with, by her soliciting, to settle the Crown upon her Son Xerxes, to the disinheriting all his elder Sons by a former Lady.

Scaliger's Opinion is, that Xerxes was Ahasuerus, and Hamestris his Queen the Esther of the Holy Scriptures: He argues from the Similitude of the Names, Hamestris and Esther. But tho' this is his principal Topick, no good Inference can be drawn from thence. Besides, the Characters of these Princesses was very unresembling; for Hamestris was a licentious Lady, and false to Xerxes's Bed. Besides, Herodotus informs us, that Xerxes had a Son by Hamestris old enough for Marriage in the seventh Year of his Reign; and therefore 'tis impossible Esther could be his Mother: For Esther was not married to Ahasuerus till the seventh Year of his Reign; neither could she be his Mistress more than two Years before: And for this the Reader need only consult the Book of Esther. To this we may add, that Artaxerxes, the third Son of Hamestris, being a Man grown at his Father's Death, (which happen'd in the 21st Year of his Reign) he must by consequence have been born before the sixth Year of Xerxes's Reign. From all these Considerations 'tis sufficiently evident, that notwithstanding the Resemblance of their Names, Hamestris and Esther can't be the same Person. As to the King, Queen Esther's Husband, there's no Objections that carry any Colour against his being Artaxerxes Longimanus. The best Evidence for this Matter are the Septuagint, the Apocryphal Additions to the Book of Esther, and Josephus. Now all these agree Esther was married to Artaxerxes Longimanus; and there are several Circumstances, both in the Canonical and Apocryphal Esther, which cannot be applied to Artaxerxes Mnemon. Sulpitius Severus, and many other both ancient and modern Writers, are of the same Opinion. And farther, the extraordinary Favour Artaxerxes Longimanus shewed the Jews beyond any of his Predecessors, is, humanly speaking, most probably to be reckon'd to Esther's Soliciting and Ascendant. That Artaxerxes Longimanus was particularly kind to the Jews, appears by sending Ezra first, and afterwards Nehemiah, for retrieving their Affairs in Church and State, and restoring them to Repose and Prosperity.

As to Artaxerxes's Reign, he began it in the first Year of the 79th Olympiad. His first Enterprize was the giving the Bactrians Battle, and defeating them. He received Themistocles into his Protection, and entertained him at his Court. He made War upon the Greeks, but not always with Success. The Persian Fleet was defeated near Cyprus by Conon the Athenian Admiral. This happen'd in the third Year of the 79th Olympiad. In the seventh Year of his Reign, he sent Ezra with a great Retinue of his Countrymen into Judea, to restore their Commonwealth. And in the twentieth Year he sent Nehemiah with a Commission into Judea, to rebuild Jerusalem, and to rescue the Jews from the Insults and Disturbances they received from the Samaritans, and other neighbouring Nations. Upon the Revolt in Egypt, this Prince sent Achemenides his General against them. The Egyptians address'd the Athenians for Assistance. By this Reinforcement, Achemenides was three Years after signally defeated. To give his Enemies Diversion, Artaxerxes brought the Lacedemonians into a Confederacy against the Athenians, who not long after were beaten out of Egypt. However, Artaxerxes and this Republick patch'd up a Peace; and when the War was ready to break break out again, Artaxerxes died in the 46th Year of his Reign, and 359th before the Incarnation. He is said to be the fineſt Perſon of the Age he lived in, and that he governed with great Juſtice and Clemency. * Uſher. in Annal. Vet. Teſt. Herodotus, Lib. 3, & Lib. 7. Eſther. Strabo, Lib. 15. Diodor. Sicul. Lib. 11. Juſtin, Lib. 3. Plutarch, in Artaxerxe Mnemone. Scaliger, de Emendat. Temp. Lib. 6. Herodot. Lib. 9. Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 11. cap. 6. Ezra, cap. 6. Plutarch, in Artaxerxe. Diodor. Sicul. Lib. 15.

*ARTAXERXES III. called Ochus, ſucceeded his Father Artaxerxes Mnemon. Sulpitius Severus is of Opinion, that this Prince was the Nebuchadonoſor mention'd in the Book of Judith. He grounds his Opinion upon a Suppoſition that Bagoas, his Chief Miniſter, is the ſame with Vagao or Bagoas in the Book of Judith. But this is a Miſtake; for Bagoas, in the xiith Chapter of Judith, was no more than one of Holophernes's Valets de Chambre: Beſides, from what has been already obſerved under Arphaxad, 'tis evident that Nebuchadonoſor mentioned in Judith, can't poſſibly be Artaxerxes Ochus, becauſe this Arphaxad, defeated by Nebuchadonoſor lived before Cyrus, the firſt great King of the Perſian Monarchy. * Judith. M. du Pin, His Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Holy Scripture, Tom. 1.

*ARTEMIDORUS, of Epheſus, wrote a Book of Chiromancy and Oneirocriticks, and lived in the Reign of Antoninus Pius. Notwithſtanding his Oneirocriticks are ſtuff'd with a great deal of Trifling and Conjecture, yet there's a handſome Appearance of Learning and Entertaining Remarks in it. And of this the Reader may have ſeveral Inſtances in the xxviiith and lxvith Chapters of his firſt Book: He beſtowed a great deal of Pains upon this whimſical Subject: He bought all the Authors who wrote upon the Explaining Dreams, and, which is more, ſpent a great many Years in Travel to pick up Stories, and collect Memoirs upon the Events of Dreaming. His Work is divided into five Books; the three firſt are dedicated to Caſſius Maximus, which it may be ſhould be Claudius Maximus, and the other two to his Son. Aldus Manutius printed this Book in Greek at Venice in 1518. Cornarius tranſlated it into Latin, and printed it at Baſil Anno Dom. 1519. And in 1603 'twas publiſh'd in Greek and Latin, with Notes, at Paris. * Lucian, Philopatr. Geſner, Voſſius, &c.

ARTEMISIUM, a Temple in Italy, in the Foreſt of Aricia. 'Twas built upon the following Accident: Pylades and Oreſtes having got aſhoar after a Wreck, were juſt ready to be ſacrificed by the People of the Country: But being Men remarkable for Reſolution as well as Friendſhip, they killed thoſe who had them in Cuſtody, gave King Thoas the ſame Treatment, and carried off Diana's Prieſteſs and her Goddeſs Priſoners. After this Adventure they arrived in Italy, and built Diana a Temple, which from her was called Artemiſium, and here they ſacrificed Slaves to their pretended Deity. * Danet.

ARTEMISIUM, a Promontory in Eubœa mentioned by Suidas, and by Demoſthenes in his Oration for Cteſiphon. 'Tis likewiſe a Lake near Aricia, conſecrated to Diana: The Latins call it Nemorenſe. 'Tis for this reaſon Suetonius, in Caligula's Life, ſtyles the Prieſt of this Country Nemorenſis Rex. * Sueton. in Vit. Calig. cap. 35.

ARTEMISIUM, a Promontory in that Part of Spain called Hiſpania Tarragonenſis, now commonly known by the Name of Capo Martio. 'Tis Part of the Promontory Punta del Imperador in the Kingdom of Valencia. * Baudrand.

ARTEMITA, or Arthemita, a Town in Aſia, diſtant from Seleucia about five hundred Furlongs to the Eaſt. There is likewiſe an Iſland of this Name over againſt the Mouth of the River Acheloüs. Strabo calls it Artemia; 'tis thought to be the ſame Place now called Van, a ſtrong Town in the Turkiſh Dominions near the Lake Arciſſa. * Strab. Lib. 15.

ARTEMIUS, General of Conſtantius's Forces in Egypt, Ann. Dom. 357. This General, tho' no Arian, had Orders to apprehend S. Athanaſius. He made a Search for him in the Monaſteries of Thebaïs; but was diſcouraged from any farther Purſuit by his Noſe Bleeding with unuſual Symptoms, while he was in a Church of one of theſe Monaſteries. This Account we have from the Writer of S. Pachomius's Life. After the Death of the Emperor Conſtantius, Artemius was proſecuted by ſome Pagans of Alexandria for breaking the Figures of their pretended Gods, and for aſſiſting George the Arian Biſhop of Alexandria with a Military Force, to plunder the Heathen Temples of their Wealth and Ornaments. This was a high Charge in the Reign of Julian the Apoſtate. This Prince, provoked with the Affront to his Religion, ordered Artemius to be brought to Antioch, and beheaded him there, Ann. Dom. 362. He had ſo great an Intereſt in Alexandria, that Julian, in a jeſting way, uſed to call him King of Alexandria. He has the Honour of a Martyr in the Greek and Latin Churches, and his Feſtival ſtands on the 20th of October. * Athanaſ. Epiſt. ad ſolitar. Vit. Pachomii. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 20. Julian Epiſt. 10, &c.

*ARTEMON or Artemas, lived ſome time after the Heretick Theodotus, and maintained the ſame Hetorodoxy concerning our Bleſſed Saviour; and tho' his Diſciples are commonly reckoned to a particular Sect, 'tis moſt probable they were the ſame with the Theodoſians. Theſe Hereticks lopt and interpolated the Holy Scriptures in the Copies they made uſe of. Some of them threw the Law and Prophets out of the Canon. When they were preſſed with a Paſſage of Scripture, they uſed to fence againſt the Force of it with little Logical Diſtinctions. They made Geometry, Philoſophy, and Phyſick, more their Study than the Holy Scriptures. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 5. cap. 26. Baron. A. C. 296. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library.

*ARTHUR, (King) ſucceeded his Father Uther Pendragon, Ann. Dom. 508. Jeffery of Monmouth dilates very much upon the Bravery and Succeſſes of this Prince; and Polydore Virgil relates his Memory was very freſh, and wonderfully magnify'd in his Time: That he defeated three Saxon Generals, conquered Scotland, with the neighbouring Iſlands, routed the Romans under their General Lucius near Paris, over-run Gaul, and killed ſeveral Giants with his own Hand. After Succeſs in ſo many glorious Adventures, and deſigning to march onward, and ſit down before Rome, he was called home by the Sedition of his Subjects. Upon his Arrival in Britain, he fought his Nephew Mordred, who had ſeized the Government in his Abſence; where, tho' he had the good Fortune to diſpatch this Uſurper, he was mortally wounded himſelf. Theſe Flouriſhes, with a great deal more upon the Extent of his Dominions, reported by Jeffery of Monmouth, are no better than Romance. King Arthur was ſo far from ſtretching his Dominions into Foreign Countries, that he fell much ſhort of being Monarch of England, as appears by the ſeveral Saxon Kingdoms which grew up in his Reign.

The Achievements of this Prince are ſo enormouſly magnified by the Britiſh Hiſtory, that upon the Revival of Learning, the very Being of his Perſon was called in queſtion. However, Leland has proved to Satisfaction there was ſuch a Perſon, from the Caire-Arture in Wales, from Arthur's Gate in Montgomery, and particularly from the abundant Teſtimony he brings from his Coffin in Lead found at Glaſſenbury, in Henry II.'s Time. The Coffin has an Inſcription, where the Figure of the Letters appears very rough and unartificial, and the Titles very ſhort and modeſt, which argue the Truth and Antiquity of the Inſcription, which is as follows:

Hic jacet Sepultus inclitus Rex Arturius in Inſula Avalonia.

The Form of the Letters as they ſtand may be ſeen in Cambden. * Uſher, Britan. Eccleſ. Antiquit. Pag. 250. Polydor. Virgil. Anglic. Hiſt. Lib. 3. Spelman, Council. Tom. 1. & in Init. Leland Aſſert. Arthur. Cambden Britan. p. 228. Nennius, Hiſt. cap. 62. See Collier's Church Hiſt. Vol. I.

ARTOCIUS, King of the Iberians, reſolved to make War againſt Pompey in favour of Mithridates. To cover his Deſign, he ſent Ambaſſadors to this Roman General to treat an Accommodation: But the Bottom of the Buſineſs was, to find Means to ſurprize him. Pompey being aware of this Double-dealing, was before-hand with Artocius, march'd into his Country, preſſed forward as far as Acropolis in the narrow Paſſages of Mount Caucaſus, and ſeized all the Towns and Paſſes on this ſide the River Cyrnus. Pompey carrying his Conqueſt with ſo ſpeedy a Motion, King Artocius thought fit to retire beyond the River laſt-mentioned. But Pompey made no halt in his Succeſs, paſſed the Cyrnus, purſued Artocius, and drove him beyond the River Pelorus: And by farther Advantages, forc'd him to deliver his Son as Hoſtage for procuring a Peace. This happen'd ſixty five Years before the Incarnation. * Plutarch. in vit. Pomp. Dion. Cassius. Lib. 37. Orosius, Lib. 6.

ARTORIUS, a Roman Gentleman, who, at the Siege of Jerusalem, having rashly thrown himself into a Porch of the Temple, and perceiving it next to impossible to get out; neither could he secure himself there, the Temple being then on Fire: To disengage himself from this Distress, he made an Offer to Lucius his Friend posted near him: He promis'd, that if upon his throwing himself down from the Portico, Lucius would catch him in his Arms, he would make him his Heir, and give him his whole Estate. Lucius clos'd with this Proposal, ran to a proper Nearness, and preserv'd Artorius's Life; but the Weight of his Friend's Body, encreas'd by the Force of the Descent, fell so hard upon him, that he died immediately. * Josephus de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 6. cap. 19.

ARTOMAGAN, or Oramagan, Artomagana, Oramagana: 'Tis one of the Ladrones in the Eastern Ocean: It stands near the Middle of the rest, and 'tis remarkable for the Spaniards steering their Course by it when they sail from Mexico to the Philippines. 'Tis govern'd by the Natives. * Baudrand.

* ARVA, a little Town in Hungary, otherwise call'd Arouva. 'Tis the Capital of the Earldom of Arva in Upper Hungary, near the Frontiers of Poland, by the River Vag: It stands near the Carpathian Mountains, about twenty four Miles from Bistricz. The Castle stands upon an Eminence, where Count Teckley's Father died when the Town was besieg'd by the Imperialists, and from whence he contriv'd his Son's Escape in Disguise of a Peasant. The Earldom of Arva is a small Extent of Country in Upper Hungary. Most of it has a Mountainous Situation. Besides the Capital Arva, there is another Town call'd Likawa within the Territory.

ARVERT, a Town of France in Xaintoigne, near the Coast, over against the Isle of Oleron. The Place lies between the Savion and Gironne, which form a little Peninsula, call'd The Forest of Arvert. * Maty, Diction. Geograph.

ARVICITO, Arvicitum, a Town in the Farther Calabria in the Kingdom of Naples. It stands upon the Eastern Coast between Cape Stilo and the little Town of Castel-Vetere. Some Geographers make the old Town Consilinum and Arvicito the same, and others take it for Cassano. * See Cassano.

ARUNTIUS, (Patroculus.) Having cast a Horse in Brass of a very handsome Figure, and an extraordinary Size, made a Present of it to Æmilius Censorinus, Tyrant of Egesta in Sicily: The Design was to throw Malefactors into it. Censorinus made Aruntius feel the Experiment, and threw him first into his own torturing Engine. * Plutarch, in Parall.

ARYENIS, Daughter of Haliattes King of the Lydians, and married to Astyages, Son of Cyaxares King of the Medes. This Lady had a great Share in mediating a Peace between the Lydians and Medes. The War between these two Nations had been carry'd on with great Roughness and Obstinacy for five Years: The Ground of the Quarrel was, the Lydians entertaining the Scythian Troops, and suffering them to take Shelter in their Country. * Herodot. Lib. 1.

ARZENZA, or Cherveste, Genusus Flavius, a River in European Turky; it runs through Albania, and falls into the Gulph of Venice between Durazzo and Pirgo. Some Geographers take this River for the Old Panyasus, which others will have modern Spinarza. * Baudrand.

AS, an old Copper Coin of the Romans, and which had no Mark for Money till the Reign of Servius Tullus: It always held to the Weight of a Pound, till the second Punick War, when they began to coin a Pound of Copper into Six Asses, each weighing two Ounces, as Pliny reports: And because the Weight of an As has vary'd upon Time, therefore Writers, for Distinction-sake, call the Twelve-Ounce As, As Grave, which is not the same with Rude, as Budæus suppos'd; for Rude is contradistinguish'd to Signatum, or Metal coined; whereas Grave respects only the Weight.

'Tis somewhat difficult to know precisely when the Romans began to make use of Silver-Money. Pliny tells us, 'twas five Years before the first Punick War; and Varro carries it as high as Servius Tullus. An As, according to the Value of French Money, comes to Nine Pence Farthing Tournoise. An As is likewise taken for a Whole, usually divided into twelve Parts; and here the Parts are call'd Ounces. This Division is us'd to ascertain the Proportion in Legacies, and Testamentary Devises. This Remark will assist the Reader in the understanding Latin Authors: For Instance, Hæres ex Asse, is he that has the whole Estate given him by Will; Hæres ex Besse, is he that has two-Thirds; Hæres ex Semisse, has Half-bequeath'd him; Hæres ex Dodrante, may claim three Parts in four.

For the better understanding the Particulars, I shall subjoin the following TABLE.

As, call'd likewise Libra, and Pondo, makes twelve Ounces.	A Whole, divided commonly into twelve Parts.
Deunx, eleven Ounces; so call'd, because it wants an Ounce of a Pound.	Eleven Twelfths.
Decunx, ten Ounces; as much as to say, Decem Unciæ.	Ten Twelfths, or five sixth Parts.
Dodrans, nine Ounces; because it wants a Quarter.	Nine Twelfths, or three Quarters.
Besses, or Bessis, eight Ounces; because it wants a Triens, as Varro has it.	Eight Twelfths, or two Thirds.
Septunx, Septem Unciæ, seven Ounces.	Seven Twelfths.
Semissis, or Semi-Assis, six Ounces.	Half a Pound, or six Twelfths.
Quincunx, five Ounces.	Five Twelfths.
Triens, four Ounces; that is to say, the third Part of an As.	Four Twelfths, or a Third.
Sextans, two Ounces.	A Sixth.
Sescunx, or Sesqui Unciæ, an Ounce and a half.	An Eighth.
Uncia, an Ounce.	A Twelfth.

* Plin. Nat. Hist. Danet.

ASAGRES, Asagræ. So the Saracens in Spain were call'd. Peter of Arragon having Abaracinus Prisoner in the Year 1284, put an end to the Government of these Infidels. * Calvis in Chron.

* ASAPH, Son of Barachias, of the Family of Levi, was a great Master in Musick, and assisted in the Choir in David's Time. His Name stands at the beginning of twelve Psalms, of which he is conjectur'd the Author: But then it must be observ'd, that some of this Number suppose the Jews under the Babylonish Captivity. From whence it follows, that these Psalms must either be written by a Prophetick Spirit, or that Asaph liv'd some Ages after David; or lastly, that these Psalms must be reckon'd to some of Asaph's Posterity. * Kimchi in Præfat. Psalm. M. Du Pin, Prelimin. Dissertation on the Bible.

ASAPPES, Asappi. So the Turks call their Auxiliaries. The principal Strength of the Turkish Forces consists in Janizaries, and Spahi's; the first making their Infantry, and the latter their Cavalry: Besides these, the Sultan levies other Troops on the Christians in his Dominions; these they call Asappes, and make use of them to stand the first Shock of the Battle; that when the Enemy's Swords are a little blunted, the Janizaries and Spahi's may come powdering on, and gain a more easy Victory. * Geo. Hornius, Orbis Politici, pag. 32, & 33.

ASAR-ADDON, or Esar-Addon, Son of Sennacherib King of Nineveh, succeeded his Father in the 688th Year before the Incarnation: 'Twas after his Brothers had made way for him by their Parricide. Asar-Addon united the Kingdoms of Nineveh and Babylon in the 67th Year of Nabonassar's Æra, and 680 before the Incarnation. He dispatched Tartan or Tartanes, one of Sennacherib's Generals, against the Syrians. Tartan sat down before Asoth, and took it, as we may learn from the xxth Chapter of Isaiah, where, by way of Abbreviation, the King of Syria is called Sargon. This Asar-Addon sent Colonies from Babylon, from Cuthah, from Ava,

Ava, Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and planted them in Samaria and its Dependencies. He made himself Master of all Syria, took King Manasses Prisoner, and had him brought in Chains to Babylon. But this Jewish Prince was released some little time after, and recover'd his Crown. Asar-Addon reigned thirteen Years. His next Successor was Saoduchinos, who held the Government of Nineveh and Babylon twenty Years; and after him Chiniladinus reigned twenty Years. * Joseph. Antiq. Lib. 10. Usher, Annal. &c.

ASBESTES, Stones in the Kingdom of Tangut, in the Southern Parts of Great Tartary. The Soil produces these Stones. Upon the top of these Stones there grows a Plant, or rather the Fibres of the Stone, which resemble Grass or Flax. This seeming Plant, when thrown into the Fire, turns Red, as if 'twas penetrated with this Element: But upon taking out, it recovers its former Grey or Ash Colour, and has not the least Mark of being burnt upon it. When 'tis put in the Water, 'tis perfectly dissolved, and turned to Dirt. And here it must be observed, that these Stones have not the same Appearances with the Minerals, which the Greeks call Exanthemata: They are only little Threads or Stripes which grow out of the Substance of the Stone. The Stone is called Asbestes or Incombustible, because the Fibres springing from it suffer nothing by the Fire, and serve to supply your unextinguishable Lamps. These Fibres rubb'd in the Hand, resemble other Plants; and when well pulverized, serve to make Paper: And whatever is written upon this Paper, if you throw it into the Fire, the Characters are burnt out, and the Paper recovers its first Whiteness for the former use. 'Tis said, that Linen made of the Threads of Asbestes are Proof against a strong Fire. Pliny mentions an Indian Flax called Asbestes. 'Tis supposed the Romans wrapt their Corpse in this Flax when they burnt them, to keep the Ashes of the Dead unmix'd with the Fuel. But Pliny assures us, the Indians would not suffer it to be transported, but kept it for their Kings upon the score of its Rarity. Strabo and Plutarch report, that there was a Resembling Cloth made of the Stone Amianthos, which they had the Secret of Spinning. * Kircher de la Chine.

ASBIN, Asbinium Regnum, a Kingdom in Africk, situate in that Part of Guinea called the Golden Coast. 'Tis so small, that neither Sanson nor a great many others have put it in their Maps. * Baudrand, Dapper, ASCALAPHUS, Son of the Nymph Georgyra and the River Acheron, prevented Proserpine's returning from the Shades Below. The Case was thus: After Proserpine had been carried off by Pluto, Ceres prevailed with Jupiter that her Daughter should be ransomed, provided she had eat nothing since her coming to Hades. And here Ascalaphus betrayed her, and depos'd that she had pluckt a Pomgranate, and eaten seven Grains of the Fruit. This Evidence made her Discharge impracticable. Proserpine resented this ill Office so much, that she threw some of the Water of Phlegeton upon Ascalaphus's Face, and turned him into an Owl. * Ovid. Metam. Lib. 5.

ASCETÆ, a Name given to those who practised extraordinary Severities, and carried the Exercises of Discipline and Vertue higher than others. In this Sense the Pharisees, and especially the Jewish Essenes, may pass for Ascetæ; and the Stoicks, to give them their due, were a sort of Ascetæ among the Philosophers. As to the Christians, those who baulked the common Satisfactions of Life, and went particular Lengths in Self-denial, came under this Distinction. Some are of Opinion, they wore a particular Habit, like the Pagan Philosophers; and that Tertullian refers to this Custom in his Book de Pallio. But this is a Mistake: The Ascetæ distinguished themselves by their Manners, not by their Habit, from other People. Thus the ancient Fathers call those who abstained from Flesh and Wine. Afterwards those Monks were called Ascetæ, who retired into the Desarts, and spent their Time in Meditation, Reading, Fasting, and other Austerities. This Name has likewise been given to Nuns. The Monasteries were called Asceteria, which was more particularly given to those Religious Houses where there were Nuns; and Acolythi appointed for burying the Dead. Foundations for this purpose were settled by the Emperor Anastasius, and confirmed by Justinian. In these latter Centuries, the Greek Monks are commonly called Ascetæ. * Justinian. Novell. M. du Pin New Eccles. Library.

ASCHARIOUN, or Aschariens. So the Turks call the Disciples of Aschari, a famous Mussulman Doctor. To understand their Doctrine more fully, we must examine the Bottom it rests upon. Now in the second Chapter of the Alcoran there are these Words; God will make you give an Account of all Overt Actions, and Secret Thoughts; for God pardons and punishes whom he pleases; and all this upon the score of his Omnipotence, and because he has no other Rule for Governing but his Pleasure. 'Tis observed that the Mussulmans were terribly frighted when this Verse was published; and many of them have affirmed, that the Authority of this Verse has been superseded by another hereafter mentioned. But Mahometan Authors of the best Credit affirm this Text stands unrepealed: Their Reason is, that the Reversing a Passage in the Alcoran by another which comes after, holds only in Laws and Statutes, and not in plain Narratives or Explanations of Things. Now the Verse in question being only a Declaration of the Manner how God Almighty acts, and not implying any sort of Law or Precept, cannot be revoked by a subsequent Text. The first Mussulmans finding themselves much embarrass'd with this Passage, went to Abou Becar and Omar, to desire them to wait upon their great Prophet for farther Satisfaction. Abou Becar and Omar undertook the Commission, and put the Question thus: If God requires we should give an Account of all our Thoughts, some of which we are not Masters of, either as to their Rising or Force: If so, what Hope is there of our being saved? All that we can do in this Case is not to practise the ill things suggested. To this Mahomet answers, You have heard without question that the Israelites, after Moses had acquainted them with God Almighty's Pleasure, told him, "We have heard what you say, but are resolved not to "practise any thing commanded." You know likewise how many Calamities pursued this People for their Disobedience, and therefore tell the rest of the Mussulmans, "We have "heard God Almighty's Commands, and shall govern "ourselves accordingly." This cunning Turn, as he might fancy it, was no better than slipping over the Difficulty. However, the Consciences of his new Proselytes being somewhat more at ease by this Answer, Mahomet, to discharge any remaining Scruples, and make them perfectly undisturbed, publish'd the following Verse as Part of his Alcoran; God requires no Impossibilities from any Man, and will neither punish nor reward him any farther than for those Instances of Duty or Disobedience which were in his Power.

This is the Passage by which they pretend the former is recalled; notwithstanding the Ascharians rely equally upon both, as to their Sentiment, concerning Liberty and Merit: And in these Points they are directly opposite to the Motazales. The Ascharians Opinion is this, that God is a General and Universal Agent: That in consequence of this, he must be the Author and Cause of all the Actions of Men; but Men being free to act or not to act, they are in a Capacity to merit or deserve Blame, accordingly as they manage their Will, and behave themselves in those Instances which are commanded or forbidden. Now the Words to Gain or Acquire, used in this last Passage of the Alcoran, is defined by the Ascharians, an Action designed to procure some Advantage, or to Avoid some Evil. Now because such an Action can't be attributed to the Creator, who can neither receive Profit nor Hurt, it must by consequence belong only to Men; from whence it follows, that they are entirely at Liberty, and Masters of what they do. From this Reasoning the Inference is, that our Actions are really produced by the First Being; but that the Instances to which they are applied, either by conforming or disconforming to Duty and Law, are purely from ourselves. This is the general Opinion of the Mahometans, the Motazales excepted. Houssain Vaez explaining these two Passages, affirms that the first Verse commands us impracticable things beyond all Strength and Proportion; and when such impossible Duties are declared, they appear very frightful: But then the second Passage reassures us, giving us to understand, that we are only bound to believe God in his Revelations and Prophets, without excluding or setting aside any part of Divine Inspiration; solemnly protesting our Resolution to obey his Commandments, and asking Pardon for all Sins of Omission and Inadvertency: And lastly, to beg of him, that he will not impute any thing to us, which does not lie within our Power; as it follows in the same Chapter of the Alcoran. This Passage ſage brought Aſchari to a poſitive Reſolution, that God might juſtly charge us with things which were not in our Power to do or let alone. As to Mahomet's ſaying that the Jews, when they heard the Law of God, declared they would not obey it, this is nothing but groſs Ignorance or Abuſe: For the Scripture informs us, that the Jews promiſed to obey it. Upon the whole we may obſerve, that theſe perplex'd Queſtions concerning the Divine Concourſe, the Permiſſion of Evil, the Doctrine of Predeſtination, the Impotence of Human Nature for the Practice of Vertue, and the Condition of Free-Will, are diſputed among the Mahometans no leſs than with the Chriſtians; which ſhows the Difficulty of diſentangling the Subject; and that Charity ſhould not ſuffer by different Opinions in theſe Matters. * D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Orientale.

ASCHBARAT, a Town in Turky, lying fartheſt into the Country of the Getæ. Tamerlane built a Citadel there to bridle the Burghers. It ſtands upon the River Sihon or Jaxartes, a Month's March from the Town of Samarcand. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

ASCHTIKHAN, a Town in the Trans Oxan Province, which according to ſome Geographers is within the Dependencies of Samarcand, tho' others aſſign it a ſeparate Juriſdiction. It ſtands thirty Miles from Kuſchania, and forty eight from Samarcand. The Soil is rich, and the Country pleaſant, upon the ſcore of its being ſo much improved with Gardens. 'Tis fortified with a Caſtle, and ornamented with a great many Publick Buildings. It has eighty Degrees Longitude, and thirty nine fifty five Minutes Northern Latitude. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

ASCLEPIADES, a Novatian Biſhop of the Fourth Century. Atticus Biſhop of Conſtantinople told him in Converſation, that tho' he commended Novatian, he could by no means approve his Followers. Aſclepiades deſiring him to explain this Paradox, Atticus reply'd, Novatian refus'd his Communion only to thoſe who were guilty of Idolatry in times of Perſecution; I ſhould have done the ſame thing myſelf: But I can by no means endure the Novatians, who excommunicate the Laity for little Failings. To this Aſclepiades return'd, That Adultery was not the only Mortal Sin for which the Church finally depoſed the Clergy: And that when Sins of an Enormous Guilt were committed, the Novatians excommunicated the Laicks without Readmiſſion, und left them only to God's Mercy. * Socrat. Hiſt. Eccleſ.

ASCLEPIODOTUS, (Caſſius) of Nice in Bithynia, an Acquaintance of Barea Soranus, who was unjuſtly condemned upon a Capital Indictment in Nero's Reign. He was preſſed to give Evidence againſt Soranus, but choſe rather to loſe his Eſtate and ſuffer Baniſhment, than betray his Friend, and forfeit the Character of an honeſt Man. This Conſtancy was the more remarkable, becauſe P. Egnatius Celer, a Grecian of Berytus, and a Stoick Philoſopher, another of Soranus's Friends, yielded to the Force of a Bribe, gave his grave Outſide the Lye, and ſcandalouſly appeared in Court againſt his Friend. But this Misbehaviour met ſhortly with a ſuitable Return: For in the next Reigns, Authority and Intereſt being quite altered, Aſclepiodotus was recalled by Galba, and Egnatius baniſh'd by Veſpaſian. * Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 62.

ASCOLUS, Biſhop of Theſſalonica, was born in Cappadocia, and lived retired in a Cell ſeveral Years. He was choſen Biſhop of Theſſalonica Anno Domini 372, and brought his Church to communicate with S. Athanaſius, whom his Predeceſſor Heramius had refuſed. Pope Damaſus made him Vicar of the Holy See in the Eaſtern Part of Illyricum, in Macedonia, and Achaia. The Emperor Theodoſius the Great was baptized by him Anno Dom. 380. The next Year Aſcolus repreſented ſome of the Weſtern Biſhops at the General Council of Conſtantinople. Two Years after he was preſent in the Synod at Rome, where he diſcourſed with S. Ambroſe. He died in the Year 383, and was ſucceeded by Anyſius. * Baſil, Ep. 338, 339. Ambroſ. Ep. 15. Athanaſ. Apolog. Damaſ. Epiſt. ad Aſcol. Concil. Tom. 4. Socrat. Lib. 5. cap. 6.

ASCOYTIA, Aſcotia, a Town in Spain in the Province of Guipuſcoa, upon the River Urrola, between the Towns Placenca and Toloſa. Ignatius Loyola, Founder of the Jeſuites Society, was born here in the Year 1491. * Baudrand.

ASIATICUS, (Valerius) born at Vienne, had a great Intereſt in Gaul upon the ſcore of his Wealth and Relations. He was a ſubrogated Conſul, or Conſul for the latter part of the Year, under Caligula. This Emperor having debauched his Wife, abuſed him with the Diſgrace at a publick Entertainment. Aſiaticus, to revenge himſelf, went into Chæreas's Aſſaſſination-Plot; and when, upon the Death of Caligula, the Burghers and Soldiery began to riſe, and cry out for Satisfaction, Aſiaticus checked the Tumult by his Reſolution, loudly declaring he would have killed the Tyrant himſelf. Upon this Turn of Humour, his Name was put up for Emperor; but Claudius carried the Election; and Aſiaticus, who was Conſul under him Anno Dom. 46, was deſtroy'd the next Year by Meſſalina's Contrivance. His great Eſtate, and particularly the noble Gardens of Lucullus, of which he was Owner, were the Occaſion of his Death. The Pretence to take him off, was his attempting to raiſe the German Legions in Gaul upon the Government: And tho' he cleared himſelf of this Article, to the Satisfaction of the Emperor and Meſſalina herſelf; yet when the Court were going to declare him not guilty, Vitellius, who pretended to plead for him, deſired he might have the Favour to chooſe the Manner of his Death: Upon which the Sentence was, that he might have the Liberty to open his Veins. * Tacit. Annal. 11. cap. 1, 2. Joſeph.

ASIATICUS, (Valerius) Son to him in the laſt Article, commanded the Forces in Gaul under Nero, and Anno Dom. 68, joined Vindex, when he revolted from this Prince. The next Year, when Otho was Emperor, he was one of the firſt that deſerted him, and went over to Vitellius, who it ſeems had promiſed him his Daughter. He was nominated Conſul when Vitellius was ſlain. * Tacit. Hiſt. Lib. 1, 2.

ASIATICUS, a Player and Slave, Enfranchiſed by Vitellius, who was ſolicited by ſome Officers in the Army to make this Favourite a Gentleman. The Prince, to check this fulſom Flattery, refus'd to hear on't: But afterwards, by an Inconſtancy pretty natural to him, he made him a Cavalier at a private Entertainment, gave him the Privilege of wearing a Ring, and other Marks of Diſtinction. Aſiaticus, thus creeping into Favour and Intereſt, had a great Share in the Diſorders of this Reign. * Sueton. in Vitell. Tacit. Hiſt. Lib. 2. cap. 57.

* ASIA.

The Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Diviſion of the ROMAN ASIA.

ASIA was a particular Dioceſe of the Roman Empire, in which there was a Proconſular Province called Aſia. Of this Precinct, Epheſus was not only the Metropolis, but the Capital of the whole Dioceſe. The Proconſul who reſided here had Juriſdiction as far as the Helleſpont and the neighbouring Iſlands. The other Provinces were under a Vicarius or Deputy-Governor. Theſe Provinces were, Pamphylia, Lydia, Caria, Lycia, Lycaonia, Piſidia, and Phrygia; afterwards ſubdivided into two Partitions, Salutaris, and Pacatiana. Pamphylia was likewiſe divided into two Provinces. When the Notitia of the Empire was drawn, there were twelve Provinces in the Dioceſe of Aſia. The Liſt and Metropolis's belonging to them are as follow:

Aſia,	Epheſus.
The Helleſpont,	Cyzicum.
Phrygia Pacatiana,	Laodicea.
Phrygia Salutaris,	Sinnada.
Lydia,	Sardis.
Caria,	Aphrodiſium.
Lycia,	Myra.
1. Pamphylia,	Perga.
2. Pamphylia,	Side.
Piſidia,	Antioch in Piſidia.
Lycaonia,	Iconium.
Iſlands in which there are two Metropolis's,	Rhodes and Mitilene in the Iſle of Lesbos.

The Eccleſiaſtical Diviſion of Aſia is formed upon the Civil. At firſt, the Biſhop of Epheſus was the Chief Prelate in the Dioceſe of Aſia. The Second Canon in the Council of Conſtantinople goes upon this ancient Privilege. At the Council of Epheſus, the Biſhop of the Town appeared as Head of the Dioceſe. This Superiority ſeems to have been agreed to by all the Biſhops of Aſia:

Asia: But afterwards the Patriarch of Constantinople ſtretched his Juriſdiction into the Dioceſes of Asia, of Thrace, and Pontus. For after having gained an equal Ground, or at leaſt the next Rank to the See of Rome, the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, being raiſed to this Eminence by the ſecond General Council held there, carried his Juriſdiction by degrees into the Dioceſes above mentioned; and at laſt had all this Extent of Country confirmed to him by the Council of Chalcedon. And here we are to obſerve, that the Eccleſiaſtical Metropoles were generally the ſame with the Civil.

The Modern Diviſion of ASIA.

Modern Geographers divide Aſia by the principal Empires comprehended in it, which are, Tartary, China, India, Perſia, Arabia, Aſiatick Turky, (which takes in Diarbecar, Syria, Paleſtine, Natolia, Armenia, and Georgia,) Muſcovy in Aſia, the Iſlands of Japan, the Philippines, the Molucca's, the Iſlands of Sonda, Ceylon, the Maldivian Iſlands, Cyprus, the Iſlands of the Archipelago on the Coaſt of Aſia; Tartary properly ſo called, and Deſart Tartary, towards the North; the Kingdoms of Niuche, of Tangut, of Thibet, Zagathai, of the Country of Usbeck, in the Southern Parts. Beyond the Ganges, and the Gulph of Bengal, are the Kingdoms of Azen, of Ava, of Siam, &c. On this ſide of the Ganges, in the Gulph laſt mentioned, lies the Moguls, the Kingdoms of Golconda, Decan, &c. As for the Condition and Government of this Part of the World, and the Manners and Religion of the Inhabitants, the Reader is referred to the Articles of the reſpective Countries.

The moſt Conſiderable Towns in ASIA.

Achem, in the Iſland of Sumatra.
Aden, in Arabia the Happy.
Agra, in India under the Mogul.
Aleppo, in Syria.
Amaſia, in Natolia.
Amedevat, in India under the Mogul.
Angoury, in Natolia.
Anthakia, in Syria.
Aſtracan, in that Part of Tartary belonging to the Czar of Muſcovy.
Bagdet, in Jerack.
Balſora, in Arabia Deſerta.
Bantam, in the Iſland of Java.
Batavia, in the Iſle of Java.
Borneo, in an Iſland of the ſame Name.
Burſa, in Natolia.
Calicut, in India on this ſide the Ganges.
Cambaia, in India Proper.
Candea, in the Iſle of Ceylon.
Canton, in China.
Casbin, in Perſia.
Chio, in the Archipelago.
Cogni, in Natolia.
Damaſcus or Scham, in Syria.
Delli, or Chajean-Abad, in the Mogul's India.
Erzerum, in Armenia.
Famaguſta, in Cyprus.
Goa, in India on this ſide the Ganges.
Hiſpahan, in Perſia.
Hieruſalem, in the Holy Land.
Jedo, in Japan.
Lahor, in India.
Mecao, in China.
Mecaſſar, in the Celibbe Iſland.
Malaca, in India beyond the Ganges.
Manille, in the Philippine Iſlands.
Mattaran, in the Iſle of Java.
Meaco, in Japan.
Mecca, in Arabia Petrea.
Mocha, in Arabia the Happy.
Nangaſachi, in Japan.
Nanquin, in China.
Odiaa, or Siam, in India beyond the Ganges.
Pequin, in China.
Samarcand, in Zagatayan Tartary.
Schiras, in Perſia.
Smyrna, in Natolia.
Surat, in India Proper, or India which lies between the Indus and the Ganges.
Tauris, in Perſia.
Trebizonde, in Natolia.

* Strabo, Lib. 1, 2. Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Lib. 5, 6. Pomponius Mela, Lib. 1. Ortelius. Cluverius. Sanſon. Du Val. Baudrand, Merula.

ASKEM-KALESI, or the Camp of Askem, Caſtrum Askem, a decayed Town in Aſia, with a Haven, about a Day and a half from Miletum. Some Authors will have it the ſame with Old Hallicarnaſſus, the ancient Seat of the Kings of Caria. Their Reaſon for this Conjecture is, becauſe there is a great deal of Marble and ancient Monuments ſtill to be ſeen here. By inſpecting the Inſcriptions upon theſe old Remains, Spon believed them the Ruins of Jaſi or Jaſſi. There's ſome Part of a Marble Theatre to be ſeen here, which, as appears by the Greek Inſcription, was built in Honour of Bacchus, by one Zopater, Son of Epicrates. * Jacques Spon. Itinerar. Græc. Ricaut.

ASMONEUS, or Aſſamoneus, left his Name upon the Aſſamonean Family. He was Simon's Father, and Mattathias's Grandfather, of the Branch of Joarib. His Family was not only Conſiderable by Ancient Nobility, and the Dignity of the High Prieſthood annex'd, but likewiſe for a great many brave Performances. Mattathias and his Sons made themſelves beloved at Home, feared Abroad, and admired by all the World. They did great Service to the Jewiſh Commonwealth, reſcued them from the Tyranny of the Macedonians, and made them triumph over other unfriendly Neighbours, who had reſolved their Ruin. His Family held the Government a hundred and twenty ſix Years. Antigonus, the laſt that wore the Crown, was beheaded; and upon his Death the Scepter departed from Judah, and fell into Herod's Hand, who was a Foreigner. The laſt of this Family who officiated as High-Prieſt was Ariſtobulus, Mariamne's Brother. Herod got this young Nobleman drowned in a Canal at Jericho, being then but eighteen Years old. This happen'd thirty Years before the Incarnation. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 12. cap. 8.

ASMOUG, a Devil's Name, according to the Magi or Zoroaſtrians: He is one of the chief Agents of Athermen, Prince of the Black Society, and the Cauſe of all the Miſchief in the World: For Zoroaſtres, as his Followers pretend, ſuppoſe two contrary independent Principles; that one of them is the Cauſe of Good, and the other of Evil. As for Aſmoug, the Buſineſs in his Commiſſion is to make Miſunderſtandings in Families, to raiſe litigious Diſputes amongſt Neighbours, and chafe Princes into a War with each other. * Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

ASOPUS, a River in Achaia, and an Arm of the Cephiſus, which riſing from Mount Cytheron, runs through the Territory, and by the Town of Thebes, by Platea, and Tanagra, and falls into the Sea between the Towns Oropus and Synoſura. 'Tis now called Aſopo, and falls into the Streight of Negropont over againſt Oropo. * Strabo, Lib. 8. Pauſanias, Lib. 2.

ASSAFF, Son of Barachias, according to the Tradition of the Levantines, was Solomon's firſt Miniſter of State. His Capacity for this Function was remarkably ſhown during the Time that Solomon had loſt that myſterious Ring, which, according to the fabulous Tradition, inſtructed him in Conduct and Learning, and made him ſo much wiſer and more knowing than other Men. The ſame Tradition reports, that this Miniſter found out a wonderful, and altogether undiſcovered Secret of converſing with God; by vertue of which, he reached the greateſt Perfection that Mortals were ever Maſters of. For this Reaſon the Muſſelmans make him their Model for Life and Politicks. * Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

ASSASINUS, or the Prince of the Aſſaſides, or Aſſaſſins, called the Old Man of the Mountain. He lived in a Caſtle between Antioch and Damaſcus, where he educated young People to all ſorts of Pleaſure and Luxury, making them believe that when they died they ſhould be entertained in the ſame manner, provided they obey'd his Orders without Reſerve. This Promiſe of an Epicurean Paradiſe, made them go boldly upon any Enterprize; ſo that when he had a mind to have any Kings and Princes aſſaſſinated, he had nothing to do but to give them the Signal. Theſe Aſſaſſins ſpread themſelves afterwards all over the Levant. The Sieur de Joinville, who attended S. Lewis in all his Expeditions, and wrote his Life, calls them Beduins: But Volateran and Paulus Æmilius call them Aſſaſſins. They were ſo abſolutely reſigned to their Prince's Commands, that they made it a Part of Religion to obey him in every thing. So that when he had doomed any body to die, they immediately went upon the Execution. * Joinville dans l'Hiſt. de S. Loüis. See Aſſaſinians in Morery, Vol. I.

* ASSUR, the ſecond Son of Shem. The Scripture informs us, that Nimrod Son of Cuſh, Grandſon of Ham, and Great Grandſon of Noah, erected a Kingdom at Babylon, at Erech, at Achad and Calneah in the Land of Shinar; and that Aſſur went out of the ſame Country into Aſſyria, and built Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Reſen. Aſſur was Shem's Son, and left his Name upon Aſſyria, afterwards conquer'd by Nimrod. Gen. cap. x. Joſeph. Antiq. Jud. Lib. 1. Herodot. Lib. 1. Riccioli, Bochart, Phaleg. Lib. 2.

ASSYRIA, a Part of Aſia, which according to Ptolomy is bounded on the Eaſt by Media, on the Weſt by Meſopotamia, on the North by Part of Armenia, and on the South by Suſiana. The Provinces within it are Adiabene, Apolloniata, Arbelita, Arapachita, Carachena, Chalonitis, the Country of the Garameans, and Scitticena. The principal old Towns were, Cteſiphon, Nineveh, Scittica, Arrapa, Sambata, Garama, and Arbela.

At preſent this Country is divided between the Turk and the Perſian. The Grand Seignior's Share being the leaſt, goes by the Name of Arzerum, and takes in Beglerbei, and the Eaſtern Part of Mozuca beyond the Tigris. The other Diviſion, poſſeſs'd by the Perſian, is thrown into ſeveral Perſian Provinces. Mozul and Schiahraſur are the principal Towns. * Ptolomy, Plin. Lib. 5. cap. 12. Strabo, and the modern Geographers.

The True Hiſtory of the ASSYRIAN Empire.

The Aſſyrians, deſcended from Aſſur, Noah's Grandſon, planted this Country. Some time after, Nimrod, Ham's Grandſon, a Perſon of an ambitious Temper, conquer'd the firſt Planters. After his Death, his Dominions were ſubdivided into ſeveral little Kingdoms; inſomuch that in Abraham's Time we read of ſeveral Kings, and that it may be in no great Extent of Country. Their Names are, Amraphel King of Shinar, Arioch King of Elaſar, Chederlaomer King of Elam, and Tidal King of Nations. Some Writers make Belus the firſt King of the Aſſyrians; but all Authors generally agree that Ninus was the firſt Monarch who brought this Empire to a flouriſhing Condition. Julius Africanus and Euſebius reckon ſeven Chaldean and ſix Arabian Kings before Belus, their Reigns amounting to ſix hundred ſixty five Years. According to this Computation, the Aſſyrian Empire ſhould be ſtretched to a very long Period, if to theſe Princes above mentioned the other Kings who ſucceeded Ninus, and reigned fourteen hundred Years, were put into the Reckoning. But Herodotus allows but five hundred and twenty Years to the Aſſyrian Empire, and one hundred and fifty to that of the Medes. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus and Appian are of Herodotus's Opinion as to the Duration of the Aſſyrian Empire; but a great many other Authors follow Cteſias's Account. But at preſent the moſt Learned Chronologers make great Abatements in the Antiquity of the Aſſyrian Empire, and are ſufficiently aſſured that Cteſias's long Liſt is purely imaginary. They begin the Aſſyrian Empire with Ninus, and reckon his coming to the Crown to the Year 1174 before the Incarnation, and the three thouſand five hundred and fortieth of the Julian Period. This Ninus reigned fifty two Years, and was ſucceeded by Semiramis, who enlarged and ornamented Babylon, the Seat of her Reſidence. This Princeſs govern'd two and forty Years: Her Son Ninias Zames was the next, and reigned eight and thirty Years. After him there was a long Succeſſion to Sardanapalus; but the Hiſtory of theſe Princes is little known, excepting what is mentioned in Holy Scripture. Nineveh was the Seat of theſe Princes, where Phul, Tiglag Philazer, Salmannazar, and Sennacharib reign'd. But then the Aſſyrian Empire was parted into two Diviſions by the Kings who ſettled at Babylon: The firſt of which was Nabonnaſſar, who began to govern in the Reign of Tiglag Philazer, ſeven hundred forty ſeven Years before the Incarnation. The Empire thus divided, had two independent Kings at Babylon and Nineveh. Aſar-Haddon, Son of Sennacharib, reunited the Kingdoms of Nineveh and Babylon, and was ſucceeded by Saoſduchinos. Chilinadinus follow'd next, and then came Sardanapalus the laſt King of Nineveh. During this time, the Empire of the Medes grew up, begun by Dejoces, who was ſucceeded firſt by Phraortes, and then by Cyaxares. Nabopallaſſer mounted the Throne at Babylon, and was ſucceeded by Nebuchadnezzar: This laſt Prince, reinforced by Cyaxares, ſat down before Nineveh, and took it in the hundred and fiftieth Year of Nabonaſſar's Æra, five hundred and ninety ſix before the Incarnation, and in the 4119th Year of the Julian Period. Sardanapalus, the laſt Aſſyrian King, called Sarac by Alexander Polyhiſtor, amaſſed all his Treaſure and rich Furniture, and burnt himſelf with it in the Palace. The Deſtruction of Nineveh had been foretold by the Prophets Nahum and Zephaniah, which made Tobit adviſe his Son to remove thence. This Son Tobias lived to ſee the Prediction made good: For after he had withdrawn to Ectabane, he received the News ſome time before his Death, that Nineveh was taken and demoliſhed by Nebuchadnezzar and Ahaſuerus, the ſame with Cyaxares.

To proceed; In the Kingdom of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar was ſucceeded by his Son Evilmerodach, in the 187th Year of Nabonaſſar's Æra: And here Beroſus, Megaſthenes, and Ptolomy's Canon, agree with the Second Book of Kings. Evilmerodach, after having reigned two Years, was ſlain by Neriglaſſor, his Siſter's Husband, who reigned four Years. Laboroſoarchodus his Son ſucceeded him: But before three quarters of the Year came about, he was aſſaſſinated by ſeveral Babylonian Lords, who ſet Nabonides in his Place. This Nabonides, alias Darius Medus, called Labinetus by Herodotus, reigned ſeventeen Years: After which Period, Cyrus took Babylon, made Nabonides Priſoner, and put an end to his Government. Some of the Learned are of Opinion, that this Nabonides is the ſame with Belſhaſſer mentioned in Daniel: But 'tis more probable Belſhaſſer is the ſame with Evilmerodach. For Daniel foretold the Ruin of this Prince, which agrees with Evilmerodach's Fate, who was ſlain by Neriglaſſor. As to the Objection that may be raiſed from this Prophet's ſaying his Kingdom ſhould be given to the Medes and Perſians, it may be anſwer'd, he does not predict this Revolution ſhould immediately happen after Belſhaſſer's Death: The Prophecy is ſufficiently ſecured, if this Event came to paſs at ſome Years diſtance. But let this be as it will, the Aſſyrian Monarchy kept up at Nineveh and Babylon ſix hundred and thirty ſix Years from Ninus, ended with this Nabonides, five hundred and thirty eight Years before the Incarnation, and in the 4176th Year of the Julian Period. * D. Bernard de Montfaucon, dans la verité de l'Hiſt. de Judith, M. du Pin, Biblioth. des Hiſtor. Profan. Tom. II. Edit. de Paris in 8*vo*.

* ASTAROTH, an Idol of the Philiſtines. 'Tis probable 'twas made for the Worſhip of the Moon, which the Eaſtern People paid a Religious Reſpect to under ſeveral Names. The Iſraelites call'd her the Queen of Heaven. Amongſt the Egyptians ſhe was Iſis; the Arabians called her Alitta; the Aſſyrians, Mylitta; the Perſians, Methra; and the Greeks, Diana. Baal and Aſtaroth are almoſt always mentioned together in Scripture, and reported the Gods of the Sidonians. * Ælian. Tertullian, in Apologet. Cicer. de Natur. Deor. Lib. 3. Strabo.

* AST, Aſti, Aſta, Aſta Pompeia, a ſtrong Town in Piedmont, and well fortified: 'Tis parted as it were into five Diviſions, the City, the Suburbs, the Citadel, the Caſtle, and S. Peter's Fort. 'Tis the Capital of the neighbouring Country called Aſtezan. 'Twas formerly a Republick, but afterwards brought under the Juriſdiction of the Viconti, Dukes of Milan: And after having continued Parcel of that Duchy, 'twas granted by the Emperor to the Dukes of Savoy. * Magin. Bourgon. Geograph. Hiſt.

ASTERIUS, a Roman Nobleman and a Chriſtian. When the Martyr Marinus was beheaded at Caſarea in Paleſtine, under the Emperor Galienus, Aſterius took care of the Body, and bury'd it. Euſebius gives this Noble Roman a great Character, and reports that he had heard of wonderful things performed by him; that he worked a Miracle at Paneada to undeceive the Pagans, who believed the Victim thrown into the Springs of Jordan, upon an Anniverſary Feſtival, ſunk, and was never ſeen after. This they took for an Argument of the Power of the Idol, and the Truth of their Religion. Aſterius, or Aſtyrius, being preſent at this ſuperſtitious Ceremony, pray'd that God would diſcover the Impoſture. Immediately diately after this Application, the Sacrifice which disappeared came up, and swam upon the Surface. * Euseb. Hist. Eccles. cap. 15, 16, 17.

ASTEZAN, Astensis Comitatus, or the Earldom of Ast. 'Tis bounded on the West by Piedmont, of which 'tis Parcel, and surrounded on the other side by the Duchy of Montferrat, and has within it the Marquisate of Ceva. Besides the Capital Ast, there are three other considerable Towns in it, viz. Verrüe, Quierasque, and Coni.

ASTINGI, an obscure sort of People, who marched into Dacia, and offer'd their Assistance to the Romans, upon Condition they would assign them some Plantation to subsist on. This Overture was refused at first; but afterwards the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus agreed to their Proposal, Anno Dom. 170. They performed their Articles, and proved good Auxiliaries. * Dion Cassius, Lib. 61.

ASTROLOGY, (Judiciary) an Art by which Rules are given for foretelling Futurity, by consulting the Stars. Those who profess this Mystery, assert that all the Stars are no other than so many different Characters, which, according to their various Conjunctions, spell out Prognosticks; and that the Firmament is as a large Volume, where those that have the Skill to read it, may discover all future Events: For Instance, when a War is like to be favourable or unfortunate, when a Kingdom is menaced with Plague or Famine, when any private Person is to meet with good or bad Fortune, your Astrologer can read these distant Events in the Sky, and foretel the Time when they will happen. The Chaldeans were the first in this Art. Some Men pretending to Learning in this Nation, changed their Profession of Astronomy into Astrology: For finding there was little Money to be got by studying the Motion and Revolution of the Stars, they try'd to make their own Fortune, by telling other Peoples. This Astrological Learning spread in Process of Time into Egypt and Greece, and was afterwards taken up almost all the World over. This Imposture found a more easy Passage, by being countenanced by Great Men and Princes, who made use of it sometimes for Reasons of State; 'Twas also recommended by the Pagan Priests to support their false Religion. Historians likewise spoke honourably of this Profession, reporting extraordinary Predictions, to make their Manner more agreeable and entertaining. But those who have any Talent for good Reasoning, disprove the Authority of these Predictions to a Demonstration. Not to dilate upon their Arguments, we need only observe, that the Stars or Constellations have no Force or Furniture excepting Light and Motion, which are by no means capable of producing the Effects attributed to them. Their Occult Influences are imaginary Qualities, and no better than a Shelter to cover Ignorance and Superstition. As for History, and the answering Matter of Fact, they are either Misreports, or the Results of Chance. The Twins Jacob and Esau, saith S. Austin, were born under the same Constellation, and yet their Temper, their Way of Living, the Accidents, or prosperous Part of their Lives, were very different. If Horoscopes, as Tully observes, had any Bottom to rely on, all those who were born at the same time with Scipio Africanus, would have been bless'd with the same Degree of Generosity and Reputation. And from hence it would likewise follow, that all those who fell at the Battle of Cannæ, were born under the same Constellation: And therefore a modern Author had some Reason to say, that the lighting a Flambeau in the Chamber where a Woman lies in, would have more Effect upon the Child's Body, than the Planets of Mars or Saturn. As for some Philosophers and Physicians, who look upon the Dog Star as a malignant Constellation, this is nothing but popular Mistake, and going too fast into the Belief of Stories. For the Dog standing on the South side of the Equator, the Impression ought to be strongest, where he is most perpendicular: And yet those Days we call the Dog Days, are the Winter Season in that Country; insomuch that those People have more Reason to think the Dog a cold Star, than we have to believe it a hot one. As to the Names put upon the Constellations, as the Ram, the Bull, &c. these are nothing but the Ramblings or Diversions of Fancy, or at most the Mark of some Relation to the Season of the Year. For Instance, the Constellation of Libra is so called, because the Sun seems then to hold the Scales even, and makes Day and Night of the same Length. So another Constellation is called Cancer, because at that Solstice the Sun goes backward like a Crab. Upon this Consideration one Schiler, a celebrated Author, has taken the Liberty to change the Figure and Name of all the Constellations, and thinks his Authority for this as good as the Ancients. Thus he has rubbed out the Colours and Features of the Ram, and painted S. Peter with his Name upon it: Perseus is turned into S. Paul, and the great Bear into S. Michael, &c. 'Tis true, the Astrologers boast the Hitting and Success of their Predictions; but this is nothing but pure Chance, where the Stars are not all concern'd. If there's any thing of Truth and Reality in the Astrologers Mystery, what can be the Reason they know nothing about themselves? Zoroastres was one of the first in the Prognosticating Business: But he who pretended to know every thing that would happen to his Neighbours, could forsee nothing of his own Fate, and that himself should be killed in the War with Ninus. Astrology, as has been already observed, began with the Chaldeans, and from thence it has been brought to us by the Writings of the Arabians. The Burghers of Rome were so possess'd with this Delusion, that the Astrologers were entertained there, notwithstanding the Emperor's Edicts to banish them: And 'tis certain Astrology, notwithstanding 'tis all Cheat, had a great Ascendant on the World. Neither have the Christians stood clear of this Superstition. One Goad, an Englishman, wrote two Tracts upon this Subject, in which he pretends to predict Inundations, and explain abundance of things in Natural Philosophy, by studying the Stars. He endeavours to account for the Diversity of the same Seasons from the different Situation of the Planets, from their retrogade Motions, and the Number of fix'd Stars in each Constellation, &c. In the Time of Katharine de Medicis, Queen Dowager of France, Astrology had so much Credit, that nothing of Consequence could be done without consulting a Figure-flinger. Thus their Predictions made the greatest part of the Discourse in Henry IV.'s Court: But now the French Nation is cured of this Infirmity. People are sufficiently convinced that Astrology has not so much as any probable Principle to support it: And that to speak plainly, it is a most ridiculous Imposture. * S. Augustin, Lib. 5. de Civit. Dei. cap. 4. Cicer. Lib. 2. de Divinat. Aulus Gellius, Lib. 14. cap. 1. Gadroise, Discours de l'Influence des Astres.

ASTROLOGER, (An) to speak properly, is one who professes predicting Events by erecting Schemes, and calculating Nativities. The common People are apt to make no Distinction between Astrologers and Astronomers, tho' the latter go little farther in their Enquiry than Speculation. That which has kept up the Reputation of Astrologers so long, is Peoples forgetting their Mistakes and false Prophecies, and being struck with Admiration when things casually happen'd as they had been foretold. 'Tis said, the famous Astrologer Cardan having assigned his Death to the Preciseness of a Day, chose rather to starve himself, and confirm his Prediction, than that the Credit of Astrology should suffer. Thus he preferred Death to the living beyond the Time of his Prognostication. Picus Count of Mirandula, Sextus ab Heminga, Alexander ab Angelis, Father Mersennus, &c. have attack'd the Astrologers with great Earnestness and Force. On the other side, Ptolomy, Cardan, Jonctin, Jean de Mont-Royal, are the great Champions for this Profession.

ASTRONOMY: A Science which examines the Nature of the Sky and the Stars, and more particularly their Motion. The Ethiopians are said to be the first in this Invention, the Situation of their Climate affording more than ordinary Convenience for Contemplations of this kind: For here the Air is always clear and undisturb'd; and besides, the Constitution of the People is said to have particular Advantages for Ingenuity and strong Thinking. They pursued these Astronomical Researches with great Application, calculated the Motion of each Star and Constellation, and distinguished the Year into Months and Seasons, measuring the Year by the Revolution of the Sun to the same Point, and the Months by that of the Moon. And over and above, having divided the Course of the Sun into twelve Parts, represented each Constellation under which the Sun pass'd by the Figure of some Animal. The Diversity of their Religion is said to spring from these Emblems: Thus those who admired the Qualities of the Ram-Constellation, worshiped the Ram, and so on.

The

The Chaldeans made this Science ſo much their Inclination, that they would make the World believe it begun with them. As for the Greeks, they learnt it of Orpheus: This Hero gave them ſome unperfect Notions of this Skill, diguiſed under Myſtery and Religious Ceremonies. His Harp, with which he celebrated his Orgyes, and play'd his Devotional Hymns, had ſeven Strings, to repreſent as 'tis ſaid, the ſeven Planets: For this reaſon the Greeks hung it up in the Sky, and called a Conſtellation by that Name. Orpheus is likewiſe painted ſitting upon a Harp, ſurrounded with abundance of Animals. which are ſuppoſed to be Figures of the Stars.

In the time of Atreus and Thyeſtes, the Greeks were pretty knowing in Aſtronomy: And thoſe of Argos having voted the Command in an Expedition to the beſt Aſtronomer, Thyeſtes explained the Qualities and Phænomena of the Ram, which gave Occaſion to the Fable of his having gained the Golden Fleece. But Atreus diſcovering the Sun's Motions to be contrary to that of the Primum Mobile, was preferred to his Rival. Bellerophon is ſaid to have raiſed his Reputation the ſame way. They won't believe he mounted a Pegaſus or Flying Horſe; but that his Mind and Ingenuity ſoared to the Skies, and made a great Diſcovery amongſt the Stars. The Mythology concerning Phrixus the Son of Athamas has the ſame Interpretation, where he is ſaid to travel in the Air on a Golden Ram. Dædalus and his Son Icarus, were likewiſe learned Aſtronomers; and the latter, poſſibly for going out of his Depth in this Science, gave Occaſion to the Poets ſaying that his Wings were melted. And 'tis likewiſe ſaid, Paſiphaë having heard her Father hold learnedly forth upon the Bull in the Sky, and other Conſtellations, might fall in Love with his Notions.

Some Perſons are reported to be ſmitten with one part of this Science by way of Preference to the reſt: Some have ſpent their time in obſerving the Appearances and Motion of the Moon, others the Revolution of the Sun, or ſome other Planet. Of this ſort we may reckon Phaëton and Endymion: The firſt of theſe died before he could reach thro' his Profeſſion; and the other went ſo far in his Improvements, that he is ſaid to entertain himſelf with his Enquiries, and make the Moon his Miſtreſs. Thus Æneas is ſaid to be Venus's Son, and Minos Jupiter's. Æſcalaphus had Mars for his Father, and Autolicus Mercury: And all this, becauſe they were born under theſe Planets, and had ſomething of their Aſcendant in their Make and Temper. For Inſtance, Æneas was Handſome, Æſcalaphus Brave, and Autolicus a Diver and Pick-pocket. 'Tis farther alledged, that Jupiter never laid his Father Saturn in Chains, nor threw him down to Hell, as the ignorant People were made to believe; but that this Fable was grafted upon the ſlow Motion of the Planet Saturn; and the Depth of the Sky, or the vaſt Diſtance of this Planet, was taken for the Pit Below. And what the Poets have reported of the Debauches of Mars and Venus, and the Manner of their being diſcovered, may be accounted for by the frequent Conjunction of theſe two Planets. 'Tis ſaid Lycurgus, the famous Lacedemonian Legiſlator, formed his Commonwealth upon the Poſitions and Appearances of the Stars: Thus he ordered his Men not to fight the Enemy till the Moon was at the full; becauſe he thought their Limbs then beſt at Command, and their Conſtitutions more alert. Aſtronomy was cultivated by all the Greeks, excepting the Arcadians, who were ſuch Sots, as to fancy themſelves older than the Moon. * Danet.

* ASTURIES, or Les Aſturias, as the Spaniards call them; a Province in Spain, between Gallicia and Biſcay. 'Twas formerly larger than at preſent, and reached as far as the Mountains of Leon. 'Tis divided into Aſturia de Oviedo, and Aſturia de Santillana, confining upon Biſcay. In the Year of our Lord 713, King Roderick being defeated by the Moors and Saracens, and almoſt all the Gothick Nobility cut in Pieces, the remainder retired into Aſturia; which Province, with Cantabria in Hiſpania Tarraconenſis, were the only Countries in Spain which lay covered from Inſult and Ravage. About that time Pelagius, of the Gothick Royal Family, provoked by having his Daughter abus'd by a Saracen Governor, making his Eſcape to the Mountains of Aſturia, animated the Goths to try their Fortune for Liberty and Revenge: And thus having levied an Army of the remainder, routed the Enemy, cut twenty five thouſand of them in Pieces, and in the Year 717 founded a new Kingdom in Aſturia. His Son Favita reigned after him. Ordonius, one of his Succeſſors, removed from Aſturia, Anno Dom. 920, and made Leon the Royal Seat: They took the Title of Kings of Leon and Aſturia, and their Succeſſion held to Ferdinand I. Anno Domini 1039. * Strabo, Lib. 1. Plin. Lib. 3. cap. 3. Lib. 4. cap. 20. Mariana, Hiſt. Lib. 7. Merula, Deſcr. Hiſt. &c.

* ASTYAGES, Son of Cyaxares, and Grandſon to Phraortes, &c. Xenophon in his Cyropædia makes a different Report of this Hiſtory from Herodotus and Juſtin. For Inſtance, Cambyſes, Cyrus's Father, ſaith he, was ſo far from a mean Extraction, that he was Son to a Perſian King. And as to Cyrus, he was nobly educated and always had a good Underſtanding with Aſtyages his Grandfather, and Cyaxares his Uncle by the Mother's ſide. * Herodot. Clio, or Lib. 1. Xenophon, Inſtitut. Cyr. Lib. 1. Juſtin, Lib. 1.

ASTYMIDES, a Rhodian, had twice a Publick Character from that City to Rome, in the Years 160 and 166 before the Incarnation. The Rhodians had ſuffered conſiderably for favouring Perſeus King of Macedonia, ſince their ſending the firſt Embaſſy: This made them more ſubmiſſive in their ſecond. Thus Aſtymides throwing what had given the Romans Diſguſt upon ſome private Rhodians, who had been puniſhed for their Miſbehaviour, by applying to Excuſes, and by his Intereſt with T. Gracchus, he got the Confederacy between the Rhodians and the Romans renewed. * Polyb.

ASUAN, Aſſuana, a Town in Egypt, in the Upper or Southern Part called Sahid, upon the right ſide of the Nile. 'Tis the Frontier-Town of the Turkiſh Empire, on the Confines of Nubia. The Arabians call it Uſuam. 'Tis ſomewhat more than fifty Miles above Aſna. Some Geographers take it for the old Meta Compſo, Taconſon, or Tachempſo, a Town in the Upper Egypt near Syene; and others take it for Syene itſelf. See Syene. * Golius.

* ATHANASIUS, (Saint) Patriarch of Alexandria, an Egyptian by Birth, and probably an Alexandrian, tho' the Year when he was born is ſomewhat difficult to determine. We can prove no farther than his being made a Biſhop in the latter end of the Year 325, or the beginning of 326. 'Tis very probable he was then at leaſt thirty Years old; becauſe the moſt favourable Canons require that Age for the Epiſcopal Character. Rufinus reports, that Athanaſius, when but a Child, baptized his Play-fellows. This Story is likewiſe mentioned by Sozomen, who took it from Rufinus; but here we are to obſerve, that Socrates charges Rufinus with Injudiciouſneſs, and taking up Stories without ſufficient Authority. For this Reaſon he tells us, he was obliged to write the firſt and ſecond Book of his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory over again; becauſe, upon farther Enquiry, he found his depending upon Rufinus's Narratives had miſled him. And therefore when Socrates reports this Matter from Rufinus, he omitts the Story about his Baptiſm. He tells us, that Athanaſius, when a Child, repreſented ſome Religious Ceremonies with his Play-fellows: 'Twas ſomething of the Conſecration of a Biſhop. That Alexander, Biſhop of Alexandria, happening to paſs by, took Notice of the Sport. That when Athanaſius was grown up to a proper Age, he ordained him Deacon, and took him with him to the Council of Nice. But as for that part of the Story of Athanaſius's pouring Water upon the Children with him, and going through Forms of Baptiſm, and that the Diverſion was allowed for a proper Sacrament by Alexander the Biſhop, Socrates has not a Word of all this, which is a good Argument he believed nothing about it. For where Rufinus deſerves Credit, he makes no ſcruple to tranſlate his Narratives.

To return; 'tis certain Athanaſius attended Alexander to the Council of Nice, where, notwithſtanding he was no more than a Deacon, he is ſaid to have managed the Controverſy againſt Arius; which was the main ground of thoſe Hereticks Averſion. At his return to Alexandria, Alexander having named him for his Succeſſor, and being afraid he might be put in his Place, he went off to a Retirement. But being ſoon diſcovered, he was forced to preſide in that See. The Arians did their utmoſt againſt his Election, and their Diſguſt ſtill went higher, Anno Dom. 331, when Athanaſius refuſed to communicate with Arius. They joined the Melitians, in hopes to ruin him. They charged him at firſt with Diſaffection to the Government, and Encroachment upon the Imperial Authority, and that he had laid a Duty upon Linnen for the

the Church of Alexandria. He diſpatch'd two Prieſts, Alyppius and Macarius, to Conſtantinople, to clear him of this Charge. Theſe Eccleſiaſticks appeared before Conſtantine the Great, and gave him Satisfaction. Being thus defeated, they brought in a new Impeachment upon two Articles; one was, that his Prieſt Macarius, making a Viſit to Iſchyras, a Prieſt of Mareotis, had broken a Chalice, thrown away the conſecrated Bread and Wine, and pull'd down a Church: The other was, that he had murder'd Arſenius, a Melitian Biſhop of Hypſile in Thebais. But after all, Arſenius was found to be alive; and Conſtantine the Emperor being informed of this foul Play, ordered the Proſecution to ceaſe, and wrote a friendly Letter to Athanaſius: But his Enemies renew'd their Attack at Court, and the Emperor being tired with their Importunity, ordered the convening a Council at Cæſarea in Paleſtine. But here S. Athanaſius refuſed to appear, becauſe the leading Biſhops were his ſworn Enemies. Upon this, Conſtantine ſummon'd another Council to Tyre, Anno Dom. 335, where Athanaſius had Orders to appear: And here his Enemies were in the utmoſt Confuſion by his producing Arſenius alive and well. This Point miſcarrying, the Biſhops inſiſted only upon Macarius's breaking the Chalice; and having ſent to Mareotis for Information, they depoſed S. Athanaſius, and forbid him living at Conſtantinople. But this Evidence from Mareotis was altogether a Miſtake; for Iſchyras was no Prieſt, and by conſequence could have no conſecrated Furniture. This Charge being a Temporal Caſe, Athanaſius appealed from the Council to the Emperor Conſtantine, who order'd the Biſhops who had condemn'd him to appear at his Court. Theſe Prelates ſent Commiſſioners thither, who depoſed, Athanaſius had threaten'd to ſtop the tranſporting Corn from Alexandria to Conſtantinople. Upon this, the Emperor, without hearing his Defence, baniſhed him to Treves. After Conſtantine the Great's Death, his three Sons Emperors, Conſtantine, Conſtantius, and Conſtans, gave all the Biſhops Leave to return to their Sees. And now S. Athanaſius, after two Years Baniſhment, came home to Alexandria, with Conſtantine's Letters for his Security. He was no ſooner returned, but his Enemies revived their Proſecutions at Conſtantius's Court; and a Council being held at Alexandria, he was acquitted of the Charge, Anno Domini 339 or 340. On the other ſide, Euſebius of Nicomedia, and the other Arian Biſhops, having a great Intereſt in this Reign, elected Piſtus Biſhop of Alexandria, and got him conſecrated by Secundus Biſhop of Ptolemais. But this Piſtus not being owned, they drew a Council together at Antioch in the Year 341, where they ordained Gregory a Cappadocian Biſhop of Alexandria. He arrived here at Eaſter, ſeized the Churches, and began with Outrage and Sacrilege. S. Athanaſius retir'd to Rome, and was well received by Pope Julius, who wrote to the Euſebians to come to a Synod at Rome, which would meet in January 342. S. Athanaſius was acquitted by this Council, where none of his Enemies appeared. However, the Eaſtern Arian Biſhops complained to Pope Julius for receiving Athanaſius to Communion. This holy Prelate ſtaid three Years in Rome, and was then ſummon'd to Milan to appear before the Emperor Conſtans. This Prince wrote to his Brother Conſtantius, and propoſed the calling a Council of the Eaſtern and Weſtern Biſhops for trying Athanaſius's Cauſe. This Council met at Sardica, Anno Domini 347. But the Eaſtern Prelates going off to Philippopolis, the Weſterns, after having examined the Articles againſt Athanaſius, acquitted him; upon which he recover'd his See, at the Inſtance of the Emperor Conſtans. In his Journey to Alexandria, he was received to Communion by ſixteen Paleſtine Biſhops, met in Council at Jeruſalem; Maximus, Biſhop of this City, being one of the Number. He was afterwards confirmed in his See by a Council at Alexandria: But after the Death of the Emperor Conſtans, his Enemies revived their Calumnies, and prevailed with Conſtantius to baniſh him from Alexandria. And now S. Athanaſius found it neceſſary to retire into a Deſart and abſcond. The Arians put one George in his Place, who held the See till Conſtantius's Death. After this Emperor's Deceaſe, Julian giving the Exil'd Biſhops Leave to return, and George happening to be killed in a popular Tumult, Anno Dom. 360, S. Athanaſius returned to Alexandria, and was ſettled in his See. And now he called a Council, to decide upon the Manner of receiving thoſe Arians who deſired to return to the Catholick Church, and to make up ſome Differences and Miſunderſtandings in the Church of Antioch. But here his Repoſe was but ſhort; for the Pagans having done him ill Offices with Julian, this Emperor diſpatch'd an Order to expel him Alexandria. S. Athanaſius went off and kept private, till Jovian came to the Empire, which happen'd June 16, Anno Dom. 363. Upon this new Reign, he returned to Alexandria, where he held a Synod of Egyptian and Libyan Biſhops, who ſent an Addreſs to the Emperor Jovian, in which they propoſed the Nicene Confeſſion of Faith for the Standard of Orthodoxy, and condemned thoſe that denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt. Upon this Occaſion, S. Athanaſius went to wait upon Jovian at Antioch, where the Arians who came to inform againſt him were ill received. But the next Reign grew rough and troubleſome in the Eaſt: For the Emperor Valens being baptized by Eudoxius, the Arian Biſhop of Conſtantinople, Anno Dom. 367, publiſhed a Proclamation, ſetting forth, that all the Biſhops depoſed in Conſtantius's Reign, ſhould be thrown out of their Sees. S. Athanaſius, to eſcape the Outrage of this Execution, retired into the Country, and abſconded among the Tombs for about four Months, when Valens found himſelf obliged to recall him. He had afterwards ſome Diſpute with a Governor of Libya, who was excommunicated by him. At laſt, after all theſe Traverſes and Perſecutions, he died upon his See, May 2, Anno Dom. 373, having been Biſhop of Alexandria ſix and forty Years.

None of the Fathers have a higher Character or a better eſtabliſhed Reputation than S. Athanaſius. His Writings were ſo much valued, that the Abbot of Como uſed to ſay, That when any body found any part of his Works, he ought to tranſcribe it upon his Cloaths, if he had no Paper about him. S. Gregory Nazianzen begins the Panegyrick upon this famous Archbiſhop with this Sentence, that Commending S. Athanaſius, is commending Vertue itſelf. The Subject of his Works are, A Defence of the Trinity and the Incarnation, particularly the Conſubſtantiality of the Son of God. He likewiſe wrote two Apologies to the Emperor Conſtantius, ſeveral Letters, S. Anthony's and S. Syncletica's Life, ſeveral Tracts againſt the Arians, againſt the Melitians, Apollinarians, and Macedonians; for in the Council held under him at Alexandria, Anno Dom. 362, he aſſerted the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt.

We have ſeveral Editions of this Holy Prelate. Comeline's, printed in 1600, is a good one; and that of Paris of 1627, with Nannius's Corrections, is ſtill better: 'Tis publiſh'd in Two Volumes, Folio, Greek and Latin: But the laſt Edition, publiſhed by the Benedictines, exceeds all the reſt. Godfrey Hermant, Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Canon of Beauvais, has written an excellent Life of S. Athanaſius in French.

Dom Bernard de Montfaucon, who publiſhed the laſt Edition of S. Athanaſius's Works, has, 1. corrected the Greek Texts by ſeveral Manuſcripts. 2. He has made a new Tranſlation. 3. He has placed S. Athanaſius's Works in a Chronological Order, and diſtinguiſhed thoſe unqueſtionably Genuine, from the reſt either doubtful or ſpurious: The firſt are thrown into the firſt Tome, divided into Two Volumes: The ſecond ſort are printed in the laſt. 4. He has printed ſeveral Pieces of this Father not publiſhed before. 5. He has added a new Life of S. Athanaſius; and at the Head of each Book he has prefix'd curious Remarks; and has ſince publiſhed a new Collection of the Works of the Fathers, in which he has inſerted ſome Opuſcula reckon'd to Athanaſius.

This Work won't allow the running a Critick upon all S. Athanaſius's Writings: For this Subject, the Reader may conſult thoſe learned Gentlemen Hermant and Tillemont, Dom Bernard de Montfaucon, and particularly M. Du Pin, who has made Judicious Remarks upon the Works of this Father. However, it may not be amiſs to take Notice, that the Creed that goes under his Name is none of his. But tho' the Learned are agreed in this Point, they differ in their Opinions about the Author. Some of them believe it drawn by ſome Frenchmen: Father Queſnell aſſigns it to Vigilius Tapſenſis; and the Abbot Antelmis to Vincentius Lyrinenſis.

S. Athanaſius wrote with great Perſpicuity, and a noble unaffected Manner. There is a great deal of Force and Cloſeneſs in his Reaſonings, and he gives a perſuaſive Turn to what he delivers: He is exact in his Narratives, and argues in his Controverſial Tracts with great Vigour and Strength: He always ſuits his Diſcourſe to his Subject, and to the Perſons addreſs'd, and manages with great Conduct and Diſcretion. His Doctrine is nicely Catholick; and his Opinion is not only Orthodox, but his Expreſſions are likewiſe clear and full for that purpoſe. * S. Athanaſ. Apol. ad Solit. vit. Agent. Gregory Nazianz. Orat. 21. Hieron. in Catal. cap. 27. Epiſt. 7. &c. Hilar. Socrat. Theodoret, Cyril Alexandrin. Sulpitius Severus, Photius, Cod. 32, & alib. Bellarmine de Script. Eccleſ. Baronius in Annal. Hermant vie de Sainte Athanaſe, Tillemont Mem. Eccleſ. Dom Bernard de Montfaucon's new Edit. of S. Athanaſius's Works, M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV.

* ATHENAGORAS, a Chriſtian Philoſopher living in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, preſented his Apology to this Emperor and his Son Commodus. This young Prince was taken into the Partnerſhip of the Empire Anno Domini 176; from whence we may inferr, this Addreſs was preſented between the Year 176 and 179, in which Marcus Aurelius died. Neither Euſebius, S. Jerom, nor Photius, had ſeen Athenagoras's Apology: But Methodius cites it, as appears by a Paſſage reported by Epiphanius upon Origen's Hereſy, as he calls it. This Tract of Athenagoras, and that of the Reſurrection, are publiſhed in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and at the End of S. Juſtin Martyr's Works. * Bellarmine de Script. Eccleſ. Poſſevin in Apparat. Tillemont Memoires pour l'Hiſt. Eccleſ. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, &c.

* ATHENS.

A Chronological Account of the Kings of ATHENS.

For the Kings before Mneſthus or Mneſteus, the Reader is referred to Morery, Vol. I.

A M.		Kings	Before Chriſt.	Reigned Yrs.
2806	11	Mneſtheus,	1229	23
2823	12	Demophoon,	1206	33
2856	13	Oxynthas,	1173	12
2868	14	Aphidas,	1162	1
2869	15	Thymœtes,	1161	8
2877	16	Melanthus,	1153	37
2915	17	Codrus.	1116	21

A Chronological Succeſſion of the Perpetual Archontes.

A.M.		Kings.	Before Chriſt.	Archontes govern'd.
2936	1	Medon,	1095	20
2956	2	Acaſtus,	1075	36
2992	3	Archippus,	1039	19
3011	4	Theriſippus,	1020	41
3052	5	Phorbas,	979	31
3083	6	Megacles,	948	30
3113	7	Diognetus,	918	28
3141	8	Pherecles,	890	19
3161	9	Ariphron,	871	30
3190	10	Theſpieus,	841	37
3227	11	Agameſtor,	804	26
3253	12	Eſchilus,	778	22
3275	13	Alcmæon.	756	2
				341

The Archontes for Ten Years:

Olympiads.	Years.		Before Chriſt.
VI	3	Charops,	754	10
IX	1	Eſimedes,	744	10
XI	3	Clidicus,	734	10
XIV	1	Hippomenes,	724	10
XVI	3	Leocrates,	714	10
XIX	1	Apſander,	704	10
XXI	3	Erixyas.	694	10
				70

The Annual Archontes, ſome of which are unknown.

Olympiads.	Years		Before Chriſt.
XXIV	1	Creon,	684
	2	Unknown,	683
	3	Lyſias,	682
	4	Tleſias,	681
XXV	1	Unknown,	680
		Unknown for eight years.
XXVII	2	Leoſtratus,	671
	3	Unknown,	670
	4	Piſiſtrates,	669

Olympiads.	Years.		Before Chriſt.
XXVIII	1	Autoſthenes,	668
		Unknown for three years.
XXIX	1	Miltiades,	664
		Unknown for four years.
XXX	2	Miltiades II.	659
		Unknown for thirteen years.
XXXIII	4	Dropides or Dropilus, M.A.	645
		Unknown for four years.
XXXV	1	Damaſias,	640
		Unknown for three years.
XXXVI	1	Epenetus,	636
		Unknown for eleven years.
XXXIX	1	Draco,	624
		Unknown for eight years.
XLI	2	Honiochides,	615
		Unknown for nine years.
XLIII	4	Ariſtocles, M.A.	605
		Unknown for four years.
XLV	1	Megacles,	600
	2	Philombrotus,	599
	3	Solon,	598
	4	Dropides II.	597
XLVI	1	Eucrates,	596
		Unknown for one year.
	3	Critias, M. A.	594
		Unknown for two years.
XLVII	2	Cimon, M. A.	591
	3	Damaſias II.	590
	4	Unknown.
XLVIII	1	Phœnippus,	588
		Unknown for ten years.
L	4	Archeſtratides,	577
		Unknown for ſix years.
LII	3	Ariſtomenes,	570
		Unknown for ſeven years.
LIV	3	Hippoclides,	562
	4	Comias, M. A.	561
LV	1	Hegeſiſtratus,	560
		Unknown for three years.
LVI	1	Euthydemus, M. A.	556
		Unknown for ſeven years.
LVIII	1	Erxilicles,	548
		Unknown for eleven years.
LXI	1	Alceus, M. A.	536
		Unknown for two years.
	4	Thericles,	533
LXII	1	Heraclides,	532
		Unknown for ſeven years.
LXIV	1	Miltiades II.	524
		Unknown for eleven years.
LXVII	1	Ciſthenes,	512
		Unknown for three years.
LXVIII	1	Iſagoras,	508
		Unknown for three years.
LXIX	1	Aceſtorides,	504
		Unknown for three years.
LXX	1	Myrus,	500
		Unknown for three years.
LXXI	1	Hipparchus,	496
LXXI	2	Pythocritus, M. A.	495
	3	Lacratides,	494
	4	Themiſtocles,	493
LXXII	1	Diognetus,	492
	2	Phenippus II. M. A.	491
	3	Ariſtides, M. A.	490
	4	Hybrilides,	489
LXXIII	1	Anchiſes,	488
	2	Philippus,	487
	3	Philocrates,	486
	4	Phedo,	485
LXXIV	1	Leoſtrateus,	484
	2	Nicodemus,	483
	3	Aphepſion,	482
	4	Callias, according to the M.A. or rather one unknown,	481
LXXV	1	Calliades,	480
	2	Xantippus,	479
	3	Timoſthenes,	478
	4	Adimantus,	477
LXXVI	1	Phedo II.	476
	2	Dromoclides,	475
	3	Aceſtorides,	474
	4	Menon,	473

Olym-

Olympiads.	Years.		Before Christ.
LXXVII	1	Chares,	472
	2	Praxierges,	471
	3	Demotion, according to M.A. Apheſion. Theagenides according to M.A.
	4	Phedo II	469
LXXVIII	1	Theagenides,	468
	2	Lyſiſtrates,	467
	3	Lyſanias,	466
	4	Lyſitheus,	465
LXXIX	1	Archidemides,	464
	2	Hepolemus,	463
	3	Conon,	462
	4	Euthippus,	461
LXXX	1	Phraſiclides,	460
	2	Philocles,	459
	3	Bion,	458
	4	Mneſithides,	457
LXXXI	1	Callias,	456
	2	Soſiſtrates,	455
	3	Ariſto,	454
	4	Lyſicrate,	453
LXXXII	1	Chrephanes,	452
	2	Antidotris,	451
	3	Euthydemus,	450
	4	Pediæus,	449
LXXXIII	1	Philiocus,	448
	2	Timarchides,	447
	3	Callimachus,	446
	4	Lyſimachides,	445
LXXXIV	1	Praxiteles,	444
	2	Lyſanias II.	443
	3	Diphilus, M. A.	442
	4	Timocles,	441
LXXXV	1	Myrichides,	440
	2	Glaucides,	439
	3	Theodorus,	438
	4	Eythymenes,	437
LXXXVI	1	Nauſimacus,	436
	2	Antilochides,	435
	3	Chares,	434
	4	Apſeudes,	433
LXXXVII	1	Pythodorus,	432
	2	Euthydem II.	431
	3	Apollodorus,	430
	4	Epaminondas,	429
LXXXVIII	1	Diotimus,	428
	2	Euclides,	427
	3	Euthydemus,	426
	4	Stratocles,	425
LXXXIX	1	Iſarcus,	424
	2	Aminias,	423
	3	Alceus,	422
	4	Ariſto,	421
XC	1	Ariſtophilus, M. A.	420
	2	Archias,	419
	3	Antipho,	418
	4	Euphemus,	417
XCI	1	Ariſtomneſtus,	416
	2	Chabrias,	415
	3	Piſander,	414
	4	Cleocritus,	413
XCII	1	Callias II.	412
	2	Theopompus,	411
	3	Glaucipus,	410
	4	Diocles,	409
XCIII	1	Euctemon, M. A.	408
	2	Antigenes, M. A.	407
	3	Callias III. M. A.	406
	4	Alexias,	405
XCIV	1	Pythodorus II.	404
	2	Euclides II. Thirty Tyrants at Athens.	403
	3	Micon, M. A.	402
	4	Exenetus. The End of the Thirty Tyrants,	401
XCV	1	Laches,	400
	2	Ariſtocrates,	399
	3	Ithycles,	398
	4	Lyſiades,	397
XCVI	1	Phormio,	396
	2	Diophantus,	395
	3	Eubulides,	394
	4	Demoſtrates,	393
XCVII.	1	Philocles,	393
	2	Nichotelet,	392
	3	Demoſthenes,	391
	4	Antigater,	390
XCVIII	1	Pyrrhion,	389
	2	Theodotus,	388
	3	Miſtichodes,	387
	4	Dexytheus,	386
XCIX	1	Diotrephes,	385
	2	Phaneſtratus,	384
	3	Menander,	383
	4	Demophilus,	382
C	1	Pytheas, M. A.	381
	2	Nicon	380
	3	Nauſicrates,	379
	4	Callias IV. M. A.	378
CI	1	Cariander,	377
	2	Hippodamus,	376
	3	Socratides,	375
	4	Aſteus,	374
CII	1	Alciſthenes,	373
	2	Phraſiclides,	372
	3	Dyſſmethus	371
	4	Lyſiſtratus,	370
CIII	1	Nauſigenes,	369
	2	Polyzelus,	368
	3	Cephiſodorus,	367
	4	Chion,	366
CIV	1	Timocrates,	365
	2	Chariclides,	364
	3	Molon,	363
	4	Nicophemus, or Agathocles, according to Diodorus,	362
CV	1	Callimedes,	361
	2	Euchariſtes,	360
	3	Cephiſodotus, M. A.	359
	4	Agathocles, M. A.	358
CVI	1	Epinices,	357
	2	Calliſtratus,	356
	3	Diotimus,	355
	4	Eudemus,	354
CVII	1	Ariſtodemus,	353
	2	Theſſalus,	352
	3	Apollodorus,	351
	4	Callimacus,	350
CVIII	1	Theophilus,	349
	2	Themiſtocles,	348
	3	Archias,	347
	4	Eubulus,	346
CIX	1	Lyciſcus or Ariſtobulus,	345
	2	Pythodorus,	344
	3	Soſigenes,	343
	4	Nicomacus,	342
CX	1	Theophraſtus,	341
	2	Lyſimachides,	340
	3	Charondas,	339
	4	Phrynicus,	338
CXI	1	Pithodorus,	337
	2	Evenetus,	336
	3	Cteſicles,	335
	4	Nicocrates,	334
CXII	1	Nicetes,	333
	2	Ariſtophanes,	332
	3	Ariſtophon,	331
	4	Cephiſophon,	330
CXIII	1	Euthycritus,	329
	2	Chremes,	328
	3	Anticles,	327
	4	Soſicles,	326
CXIV	1	Hegeſias,	325
	2	Cephiſodorus,	324
	3	Philocles,	323
	4	Apollodorus,	322
CXV	1	Archippus,	321
	2	Apollodorus,	320
	3	Phocion,	319
	4	Demogenes,	318
CXVI	1	Democlide,	317
	2	Praxibulus,	316
	3	Nicodorus,	315
	4	Theophraſtus,	314
CXVII	1	Polemon,	313

Olympiads.	Years.		Before Christ.
CXVII	2	Simonides,	311
	3	Hieromnemon,	310
	4	Demetrius,	309
CXVIII	1	Charinus,	308
	2	Anaxicrates,	307
	3	Cerebus, or Zenias,	306
	4	Zenippus,	305
CXIX	1	Pherecles,	304
	2	Leostratus,	303
	3	Nicoles,	302
	4	Calliarcus,	301
CXX	1	Hegemacus,	300
	2	Euctemon,	299
	3	Mnesidemus,	298
	4	Antiphates,	297
CXXI	1	Nicias	296
	2	Nicostratus,	295
	3	Olympiodorus,	294
	4	Philippus, or Diphilus,	293
		Unknown for one year.
CXXII	2	Gorgias,	291
	3	Anaxicrates,	290
	4	Democles,	289
		Unknown for five years.	284
CXXIV	2	Pytharates,	283
		Unknown for 17 years.

As far as Diognetus, an Annual Archont in the fourth Year of the 128th Olympiad, two hundred and sixty five Years before our Saviour's Incarnation. Under this Diognetus the Arundel Marbles end their Account. * This Chronological Table of the Kings and Archontes of Athens is corrected by the Arundel Marbles, and by the exact Chronological Table of M. Du Pin, dans sa Biblioth. des Aut. Profanes, Tom. II. M. A. in the List stands for the Arundel Marbles.

ATHENION, Favourite to Ptolomy Evergetes, King of Egypt, was sent to Onias II. surnamed the Covetous, Son of Simon the Just, Nephew and Successor to Eleazer, and then Jewish High-Priest. His Message was to demand the Payment of twenty Silver Talents due to his Master for Tribute. This Imposition, as Athenion set forth, was paid yearly by the Jews to Ptolomy Evergetes, in Consideration of the Cession of Right Antiochus the Great had made to this Prince when he marry'd his Daughter Cleopatra; assigning at the same time the Provinces of Lower Syria, Phœnicia, Judea, Samaria, and half the Tribute of these Provinces, for her Fortune: At which time the principal Inhabitants agreed to this Grant and Assignment, and brought their Proportions to the Exchequers of these two Princes. This High-Priest it seems was very much in Arrear for this Tax. Athenion threaten'd to levy the Money by Military Execution, unless speedy Payment was made. Onias was so wretchedly subdued by his Avarice, that neither the Love of his Country, nor the Fear of being plunder'd by an Army, could make any Impression upon him. However, his Nephew Joseph, upon giving Satisfaction, as 'twas supposed, got his Uncle's Pardon of Ptolomy. * Joseph. Antiquit. Lib. 12. cap. 3, 4.

*ATHLETÆ, Combatants. The Names of the Greek Athletæ were as follow: Παλαισταὶ, Wrestlers; Δρομεῖς, Racers; Πυκταὶ, Boxers; Δισκοβόλοι, Players at Quoits; Ἅλτικοι, Leapers; Τυμνασταὶ, Fencers, or Masters of the Exercises, so called, as Xenophon relates, because they exercised naked. From hence the Places for Teaching were called Gymnasia: They were large Courts, built at great Expence. The Masters, with several Assistants, exercised the young People with a great deal of Form and Regimen, both in respect to Business and Diet. Some People were so fond of Improvements this way, that they spent their whole Life in it, and professed the Business of Athletæ. By this Discipline, and plentiful Eating, they work'd up their Bodies to a surprizing degree of Bulk and Strength: But as to the Furniture of their Mind, they were little better than Brutes: They were fit neither for War, nor any other Employment which put them out of their Road, and obliged them to retrench in their customary Sleep and Feeding. And, as Aristotle observes, such an Alteration would be apt to throw them into dangerous Distempers: But, as we have observed, their Strength was Gygantick. 'Tis reported of Milo Crotoniates, that he knock'd down a Bull at one Blow with his Fist, and, which was more, eat up all the Beef the same day. After all, 'tis true they deny'd their Appetite in several Instances; and the first Athletæ, as S. Chrysostom and Budeus relate, lived very temperately, and stood off from any sort of Indulgence which might weaken their Constitution. Thus we are informed by S. Paul, that those who strive for the Mastery, are temperate in all things. The Lacedemonians practised some rough Exercises of the Athletæ. They bred up their Children in the Country to all sorts of robust Diversions to improve their Strength, and make them bear the Fatigues of War the better. See Olympia, and Plays of the Cirque. Morery Vol. II. and Olympionicæ, Supplement Vol. III. * 1 Corinth. cap. 9. Fleury, Mœurs des Israelites, Antiquit. Græc. & Rom. &c.

ATHOS, a Mountain in Macedonia, belonging to the Grand Seignior. It shoots into the Archipelago, and forms a Peninsula between the Gulphs Contessa and Mont Sancto. 'Tis about thirty Miles in Circuit, and the Top of it so high, that the Region for Clouds and other Meteors are below it. At present, 'tis inhabited by none but Colciers, or Greek Monks, of S. Basil's Order. There are above five thousand Religious living in separate Cells like Hermits. The two principal Monasteries, Catapedos and Hagia-Laura, are stock'd with above six hundred Monks. Some of these Monasteries are fortify'd, to cover them from the Insults of Pyrates. These Monks till the Ground, and subsist themselves upon their Labour. They are likewise educated to Learning and Religious Exercises; and 'tis from hence the Bishops within the Patriarchate of Constantinople are chosen. * Guillet. Lacedemone Ancienne & Nouvelle. Johannes Comnenus's Description of Mount Athos, publish'd by Dom Bernard de Montfaucon, Anno Dom. 1708.

ATILIUS, Son of a Slave enfranchised, having a mind to make himself popular, built an Amphitheater near Fidenæ: But the Foundation being not well laid, nor the Timbers carefully work'd in, this vast Building giving way, tumbled, and destroyed a vast Number of People. 'Tis said there were fifty thousand killed and wounded by this Misfortune. Atilius was immediately banish'd, and an Act passed by the Senate prohibiting all Persons building any Places for Publick Spectacles, without taking all imaginable Precaution about the Ground and Materials. This Accident happen'd in the Consulship of M. Licinnius and L. Calpurnius, in the thirteenth Year of Tiberius's Reign. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 4. cap. 62, 63.

ATLANTIDES, a People living near Mount Atlas in Africk. They are mentioned with great Commendation by old Writers upon the score of their Piety and Hospitality to Strangers. They worshipped Uranus, that is, the Sky, as the Sovereign Deity, and pretend he was formerly one of their Monarchs. He had several Wives, as their Story goes, and five and forty Children by them: And that Titea, one of these Ladies, was Mother to the Titans. * Diodor. Sicul. Lib. 3, 4. Euseb. Prepar. Evang. Lib. 2.

ATLANTICK (Ocean, The) Oceanus Atlanticus, Occidentalis, Hesperius, Mare Magnum. This Sea is so called from Mount Atlas in Africk. Geographers are not agreed about the Extent: Some will have it reach no farther than those Seas upon the Western Coast of Spain and Africk, from Cape Finistere to that of Sierra Leona, and the Seas as far as the Canaries and Cape Verd. Others understand by the Atlantick, or Western Ocean, all that vast Sea between the Western Coasts of Europe and Africk, and the Eastern of America, from the Northern Ocean to the Equinoctial Line, where the Ethiopian Sea begins. * See Baudrand.

ATLANTICKS, Atlanticæ, the Name of two Islands, called the Fortunate Islands by the Ancients: They are parted from each other by an Arm of the Sea, somewhat more than a hundred Miles distant from Libya. They have seldom any Rain; and when they have it, 'tis gentle and refreshing. The Winds bring the Dew along with them, and are never boisterous or troublesome. The Soil, without Ploughing or Compost, produces a plentiful Crop, and excellent Fruit both for Support and Pleasure: And the Inhabitants being thus well provided for, live much at their Ease, without working. The Air is clear and temperate, and the Alterations of the four Seasons almost imperceptible. There are only two sorts of Winds from the Continent which can disturb them, them, and these lose their Force before they reach the Islands. As for the Winds from the Sea, they bring their Rain, and are altogether refreshing. 'Tis here that Homer, Horace, and the other Poets, place the Elyzian Fields, Campi Elysii, Beatorum Domicilia. Pliny seems to take them for the Hesperides. 'Tis possible, says the Dutch Supplementer, they may be Hispaniola and Cuba in the West-Indies. * Plin. Lib. 6. cap. 31. Ortelius.

* ATOSSA, Cyrus's Daughter, King of Persia, and Sister to Cambyses and Smerdis, was marry'd for some time to the Counterfeit Smerdis who usurp'd the Crown: But the Imposture being discover'd, and the Magician killed by seven Persian Princes concerting the Enterprize, Darius, Son of Hystaspes, was proclaimed King, and married Atossa the fourth Year of the 64th Olympiad. She had Artabarzanes and Xerxes by this Prince. The latter, tho' the younger, succeeded his Father Darius: The Reason of this Preference was, because Artabarzanes the Eldest was born before Darius was King. * Herodot. Lib. 3, 4.

ATRA, a Town in Mesopotamia, famous for holding out against several Sieges. The Place was neither large nor beautiful, but built upon the Point of a Mountain, surrounded with good Walls, populous, and very rich. Their Wealth was drawn chiefly from the Offerings made to the Sun, which was worshipped there. The main Strength of the Town lay in the Barrenness of the neighbouring Country, where there was neither Wood, Grass, nor scarcely any Water; and the Air over and above excessively hot. Trajan, Anno Domini 117, sat down before this Place, and was forced to raise the Siege. The Emperor Severus had no better Success in the Year 199; and afterwards the King of Persia had the same Fortune, and was glad to draw off from the Besieged, Anno Dom. 228. * Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 25. Dion. Cassius, Lib. 68. & 75. Herodian, Lib. 3. & 6.

ATRI, Atria, Hadria, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples in the Farther Abruzzo, with a Bishoprick Suffragan to the Archbishop of Chieti, but exempt from his Jurisdiction. It gives the Title of Duke to the House of Aquaviva. The See is united to that of Penna, from whence 'tis distant ten Miles, fifteen from Chieti, and four from the Adriatick Sea. The Emperor Adrian took his Name from this Town.

ATRIBUNIE, (l') Atribunia, a River in the Isle of S. Domingo, one of the Antilles. It runs to the Western Part of the Isle, and falls into the Sea over against the Isle of Cuba. The French have some Plantations near this River. * Baudrand.

ATRONGUS, a Shepherd of an extraordinary Bulk and Strength: He was so hardy as to quit the Business he was bred to, and set up for Pastor Populorum. His Ambition carried him so far as to seize the Crown of Judea, and assume the Regal Style, while Archelaus was at Rome to solicite for that Dignity. He was pushed upon this Enterprize by four of his Brothers, as big and as bold as himself. They each of them raised a Company, treated the Romans with great Barbarity, especially the King's Troops, and those that held for Archelaus. They maltreated the first for the Oppressions they had brought upon the Country, and the latter because they hated Herod the Great, then lately dead. Atrongus defeated the Roman Forces several times; but at last Gratus, Governor of Syria, coming up to quash the Insurrection, laid an Ambuscade, took one of Atrongus's Brothers, and had him executed. After this Loss, Atrongus's Affairs went backward, especially when his second Brother was seized by Ptolomy, whom Herod had made Governor of the Country. At last this pretended Prince fell into Archelaus's Hands, who clapt an Iron Crown upon his Head, mounted him upon an Ass, made him travel in this Equipage of Contempt the Length of his Dominious, and then put him to Death. The last of his surviving Brothers finding himself left alone, and not daring to show his Head, died for want of Maintenance. * Joseph. Antiquit. Lib. 17. cap. 12.

ATSIN, Atchain, Axime, Aximum, a strong Castle of the same Name with the Country, upon the Coast of Guinea in Africk. The Castle stands at the Mouth of the River Mancu, fifteen Miles from the Cape of Three Points. It belongs to the Dutch. * Baudrand.

ATTALIA, a Maritime Town of Pamphylia in Asia the Less, now called Satalia, or Satalyah by the Turks. 'Twas built by King Attalus, and formerly an Archiepiscopal See, and Capital of the Province. It stands upon the Sea of Pamphylia, near the Gulph which takes its Name from this Town. 'Tis well fortified with a Castle: 'Tis the Residence of the Governor of the Province. 'Tis somewhat distant from the Old Attalia, of which nothing remains but the Ruins. 'Twas taken by Lewis the Younger, Anno Dom. 1548. S. Paul preached the Gospel here, in the sixteenth Year after our Lord's Passion, and the sixth of Claudius's Reign. * Acts xiv. Baudrand.

* ATTALUS, King of Pergamos: His Will run thus; POPULUS ROMANUS MEORUM HÆRES ESTO. The Romans took these Words in a very large Sense, construing them to a Device of the whole Kingdom; whereas in common Construction, and Attalus's Intendment, they meant no more than the Furniture of the Palace.

ATTALUS, born in Pergamus in Asia, was one of the first Martyrs that suffer'd at Lyons in Gaul, in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius. He behaved himself with great Resolution at his Death, and was esteemed as it were the Pillar and Support of the Church at Lyons. His Festival stands, with the other Martyrs of that Town, on the second of June. * Euseb. Hist. Eccles. Lib. 5. init.

ATTILA, King of the Huns, called Flagellum Dei, or the Scourge of God, lived in the First Century. He poured a vast Force into Thrace, and having harrass'd this Country, Anno Dom. 441, he ravaged the Eastern Part of the Empire, and forced the Emperor Theodosius the Younger to pay him Contributions. Three Years afterwards he killed his Brother Bleda, for usurping the Crown, and over-ran the Provinces of Mœsia, Macedonia, and Thessaly, as far as Thermopylæ. From hence he advanced to the Danube and the Rhine. In the Year 450, and 451, he marched through Pannonia and Germany, and enter'd Gaul with a vast Army, upon Pretence of attacking the Visigoths in Aquitain. Paris, as Historians report, was preserved from his Attempt by the Prayers of S. Genevieve, and Troyes by the Bishop S. Lupus. The great Battle which happen'd soon afterwards between Attila and the Christian Confederates, was not fought in the Plains of Châlons in Champagne, but in that of Sologne near Orleans. For the Learned are now agreed, that the Word in Campis Catalaunicis is wrong transcribed, and that the right Reading is in Campis Secalaunicis. Notwithstanding Attila lost two hundred thousand Men Anno Dom. 451, he marched into Italy next Year, enter'd Friuli, sack'd Aquileia, and several other Towns, and had advanced up to Rome, if Leo the Great had not met him, and prevailed for the stopping his March. 'Tis reported, that his Officers being surprized that the Rhetorick of a Priest unarm'd should alter his Resolution, he told them, that he saw a Person in Sacerdotal Robes, by Pope Leo's Side, who threaten'd to kill him, unless he comply'd. This barbarous Prince, tho' of very small Stature, had so fierce a Look, and so haughty a Motion, that the boldest Enemy was almost frighted to see him. Besides, he was a Prince of Conduct and Cunning, practis'd upon the Passions of his Army, and knew how to make a serviceable Impression. He made his Troops believe something of supernatural Assistance attended him. He persuaded them he had found Mars's Hanger, which was worshipped by the Huns. Now these Barbarians believed that whoever was Master of this Sword, would be Emperor of the World. Attila's Titles in his Letters and Proclamations were these; Attila the Son of Bendimus, Grandson of Great Nimrod, bred at Engaddi, by the Grace of God, King of the Huns, Medes, Goths, and Dacians, the Terror of the Universe, and the Scourge of God. Attila Filius Bendemi, Nepos magni Nembroth, nutritus in Engaddi, Dei Gratia Rex Hunnorum, Medorum, Gothorum, Dacorum, metus Orbis, & flagellum Dei. He had the Vanity to say the Stars tumbled before him, the Earth shook, and that he was a Hammer to bruise and batter the World. Stellas pro se cadere, Terram tremere, se malleum esse Universi Orbis. * Prosper. Cassiodor. Isidor. in Chron. Jornandes de Origine Gothorum, Gregor. Touron. Lib. 2. cap. 7. Paul. Diaconus, Lib. 5. Sidonius Apollinaris, Ep. 15. Lib. 8.

ATTOCK, Attochium, a great Town in Asia: It stands at the Mouth of the River Send, where it falls into the Indus. Attock, the Capital of a Kingdom of the same ſame Name, is one of the ſtrongeſt Places the Mogul is Maſter of; and for better Security, no Stranger is allow'd to come there without Leave. * Baudrand.

ATTOCK, (The Kingdom of) Attochium Regnum, a Province of Aſia within the Mogul's Empire: 'Tis ſituate upon the Confines of Great Tartary, near the Head of the River Indus, between the Provinces of Kachemire, Penback, Multan, Hajacan, and Cabul. 'Tis about two hundred and forty Miles long, and one hundred and twenty broad. Several Rivers run through it, of which the Send and the Indus are the chief. Attock and Puckow are the moſt conſiderable Towns in it. * Baudrand.

ATTUNDE, or Oſtund, Aſtundia, Oſtandia, one of the three Diviſions of the Province of Upland in Sweden. It lies along the Baltick, and reaches from Stockholm to Upſal. 'Tis ſubdivided into eight little Governments. * Baudrand.

* AVA, or the Kingdom of Ava, a Country in India beyond the Ganges, formerly governed by a powerful native Prince, but now Parcel of the Dominions of the King of Pegu. It has a Capital of the ſame Name. It lies between the Kingdoms of Siam to the South, of Tonquin and China to the Eaſt, and Great Tartary to the North. 'Tis about a thouſand Miles in Length, and three hundred and forty in Breadth. The moſt conſiderable Towns in it are, Ava, Boldia, Caſſubi, Melintay, Prom, Tolema, Totay, Tranſiana, &c. This Country has the Convenience of a great many fine Rivers, riſing all from the great Lake Chiamai, croſſing the Kingdom from North to South: They flow the Country like the Nile, enrich the Soil, and make the Produce of the Year very plentiful in Rice, Millet, and Fruit. 'Tis well ſtock'd with Elephants, Camels, Horſes, Sheep, Civet-Cats, Martins, and Ermins. There are Mines of Iron, Lead, and Copper, and 'tis ſaid of Gold and Silver too. A great many Rubies, Sapphyrs, Emeralds, and other Precious Stones, are dug out of the Rocks. * Jarric. Lib. 6. Barboſa, Sanſon, Baudrand.

AVANCE, (The Cape of) or Cape Forward in Engliſh, Promontorium Extenſum, a Cape in the Magellan Streights in Southern America: It ſtands upon the Southern Coaſt, and ſtretches fartheſt into the Streight. There is ſtill to be ſeen the Ruins of S. Philip's Town, built by the Spaniards to command the Paſſage. * Baudrand.

* AVANCHES, Avanticum, or Aventicum, a Swiſs Town in the Canton of Bern, and Country of Vaux. The Burghers call it Wiliſpurg: 'Twas formerly the Capital of the Helvetians. Theſe People ſet Fire to it upon their going off to Gallia Celtica: But when Julius Cæſar forced them to return home, they rebuilt ſome Part of it. The Emperor Veſpaſian reſtored it to its beſt Condition, and called it Colonia Flavia. * Cluverius, Antiq. Germa. Sanſon, &c.

AUBAIN: So the French call a Foreigner Unnaturalized. The Eſtates of theſe Foreigners eſcheat all to the Crown. An Aubain may diſpoſe of his Goods by Deed of Gift; but can't diſpoſe of them by his Will. In France, the Children of Foreigners born in France inherit, their Birth being equivalent to a Patent for Naturalization. Nicodius derives this Word from Alibinatus, and Cujacius from Advena. Theſe Aubains are ſo called in the Capitulars of Charles the Great. Du Cange brings the Word from Albanus, a Name given to the Scotch or Iriſh who uſed formerly to travel into Foreign Countries, and ſettle there. They were called Aubains in France, that is, Albani, from Albania. This Name was afterwards given to all ſort of Strangers. Theſe Aubains in France are incapable of any Poſt in the Civil Liſt, or of Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, unleſs Naturalized by Patent. The Iſſue of a Frenchman, who ſettles and marries in a Foreign Country, are not reckon'd Aubains when they return into France. An Ambaſſador who dies in France, without being Naturalized, does not leave his Effects under the Diſadvantage of an Aubain. The Swiſs, the Iriſh, Scotch, the Portugueze, thoſe of Cambray and Avignon, are not reputed Aubains in France. * Du Cange. Bacquet.

AUBAINS, in Latin Caduca Bona, or Forfeitures or Eſcheats to the Exchequer. The Laws de Bonis Caducis were made in Auguſtus's Reign, the Publick Treaſure being then brought very low by the Civil Wars. The Acts relating to this Matter conſiſt of ſeveral Branches: 1. That no Perſon who liv'd ſingle ſhould be capable of a Legacy, unleſs he married at the time aſſigned by the Law: If not, whatever was bequeathed to him, was forfeited to the Exchequer. 2. Thoſe who had no Iſſue, loſt the Moiety of their Legacies. This the Law calls Pœna Orbitatis. 3. Whatever was bequeathed in a Will to any Perſon who happen'd to die ſurviving the Teſtator, or immediately after his Deceaſe before the opening of the Will, eſcheated to the Exchequer. 4. Every Heir who neglected revenging the Death of the Anceſtor, or Relation he claimed under, loſt the deſcending Eſtate, which in this caſe fell to the Crown. * Digeſt. Cod. Theod. & Juſtinian.

AUBAREDE, (John Michael de Aſtorg) Canon Regular, Arch-Deacon of the Church of Pamiers, and Vicar-General of the Dioceſe when the See was void. This Eccleſiaſtick had a great Share in the Traverſes of the Biſhop of Pamiers in the Diſpute about the Regale. He was born at the Caſtle of Aubarede in the Dioceſe of Tarbes, and extracted from a very conſiderable Family. The Biſhop of Pamiers being dead, the Chapter, Auguſt the 9th, 1680, pitch'd upon Aubarede and one Father Bernard for their Vicars-General. Their firſt Buſineſs was paſſing an Ordonance for confirming the Diſcipline ſettled by the late Biſhop. The Regaliſts, after the Death of this Prelate, were ſo hardy as to attempt being at Divine Service, tho' they lay under an Excommunication. Upon this, the Chapter deputed Aubarede to his Kinſman the Archbiſhop of Toulouſe, to give him an Account who were choſen Vicars-General, and entreat him to order the Matter ſo, that the Regaliſts might ſatisfy themſelves by receiving the Revenues of the Chapter, and not diſturb the Holy Solemnities by appearing at them. The Archbiſhop gave Father Aubarede a Letter, in which the Regaliſts were adviſed not to go to Church with the Chapter. But this Prelate changing his Mind ſoon after, the Regaliſts came to Church the 18th of Auguſt the ſame Year, which obliged Aubarede to revive the Decrees of the late Biſhop of Pamiers, and excommunicate ſome of them. This Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure drew a Proſecution upon Aubarede, and brought a great deal of Trouble and hard Uſage upon him. In ſhort, M. de Châteauneuf, Secretary of State, order'd him to be apprehended, and his Papers ſeized. At firſt they made him Offers of Preferment, and promis'd him a Biſhoprick; and when theſe Careſſes would not work him to the Court Meaſures, they proceeded to threaten him. But neither Favour nor Menacing made any Impreſſion. He profeſſed a profound Regard for the King, and that he was ready to obey him in every thing, where his Duty to God would give him leave. This being look'd on as an unſatisfactory Anſwer, he was put in a Cart, and carried to Paris, having ſuffered very much in the Journey. From thence he was conveyed to the Caſtle of Caen, and had rough Entertainment in the Priſon for ſix Years together. And upon his being diſcharged, was confined in the Priory of the Canons Regular called Le Pleſſis, in the Dioceſe of Bayeux. He held firm to his Principles to the laſt, and died in 1692, being fifty three Years old. * Memoire Manuſcrit.

AUBERY, (Lewis) a celebrated and voluminous Author of the Seventeenth Century. His Genius lay particularly for an Hiſtorian: He wrote a General Hiſtory of the Cardinals, and dedicated the firſt Tome of it, in Quarto, to Cardinal Richelieu. He begins at the Pontificate with Leo IX. who lived in the Eleventh Century. Afterwards he publiſh'd four Volumes more, and dedicated them to Cardinal Mazarine, who gave him a Penſion of four hundred Livres for Encouragement. In carrying on this Work, he was furniſhed with a great many Narratives, Funeral Orations, Genealogical Memoirs, and other Pamphlets both in Print and Manuſcript. Theſe Supplies Naudeus and Puteanus brought him by the Cardinal's Order. After this, he ſtudied Italian, Spaniſh, and Engliſh, ſo far as to qualify him for reading Books in thoſe Languages. In 1649, he publiſh'd an Hiſtorical Tract of the Pre-eminence of the French Kings, with reſpect to the Emperor and King of Spain. This Book he dedicated to the Chancellor Seguier. In the firſt Part, he relates the Attempt made by Philip II. at Venice, Rome, and the Council of Trent. He pretends to ſhew that the Kings of France have always had the Precedency of the Kings of Spain. This he endeavours to prove by their Title of Moſt Chriſtian, by that of Eldeſt Son of the Church, and by that of King of Kings, Kings, which Matthew Paris gives them. He reinforces his Proof by ſome peculiar Advantages at their Coronation, (I ſuppoſe he means the Holy Ampoule) and laſtly, by three Diſtinctions, which in his Opinion are the greateſt Embelliſhments of a Crown: Theſe are Maſculine Succeſſion, Abſolute Authority, and Independence on all other Mortals. The ſecond Part examines the Emperor's Pretenſions, and maintains that Charles V. and Francis I. were treated upon the Level by Paul III. And for Proof of the Pope's conſidering them under this Equality, he appeals to his Holineſs's Bull for convening the Council of Trent. Farther, he pretends to ſhew the King of France an Emperor within his Dominions, and that Pepin had the Imperial Style, as appears by an old Medal. He argues the Emperor is far from being Abſolute in Germany, and that he has no manner of Authority in France, as appears by an Interview between the Emperor Charles IV. and the French King Charles V. which latter would allow him no Mark of Sovereignty, not ſo much as a White Palfrey, or any Imperial Diſtinctions: And that Francis I. treated Charles V. when he paſſed through France in the ſame manner. In fine, he pretends Antiquity ought to decide the Preference; that the Title of Emperor of Germany is not above eight hundred Years ſtanding; that according to Eginardus, 'twas little valued by Charles the Great, who was King of France a great while before he was Emperor: And to conclude this Performance, he aſſerts that Thuringia and other Provinces were the Conqueſt and unalienable Inheritance of the Kings of France; from whence he infers them Emperors of Germany. In 1660, he publiſhed the moſt conſiderable Book written by him: 'Tis the Hiſtory of Cardinal Richelieu in Folio, which takes in the moſt important Occurrences in the Reign of Lewis XIII. There are two other Volumes printed with it, of Letters, Diſpatches, Inſtructions and Memoirs, for Vouchers to the Hiſtory. In 1673, he publiſhed a Book of the Dignity of a Cardinal, and dedicated it to the Duke of Mazarine. Two Years forward he printed a Tract upon the Subject of the Regale, which he had drawn up ſome Years before for M. de Lamoignon, the King's Advocate-General. This Book is divided into four Parts: The firſt treats of the Ancient Method of making Biſhops; and here he takes Occaſion to ſpeak of the Pragmatick Sanction and the Concordate. The ſecond goes upon the Original and Progreſs of the Regale. The third Part endeavours to prove this Claim was ſubmitted to by all the French Provinces. And the fourth ſtretches the Regale upon the Abbeys. His laſt Book is the Hiſtory of Cardinals, moſtly extracted from the Regiſters of Parliament. He had taken a great deal of Pains amongſt them with M. Lamoignon. And after the Death of this Magiſtrate, he carried on the Search with great Application: The Deſign was very ſignificant for clearing ſeveral Paſſages in the French Hiſtory, and ſetting the Dates of Occurrences right, where the beſt French Authors had miſs'd the Point. This Collection of Records he was ready to publiſh; but an Accident happening to him by a Fall off a Bridge, he was unfit for Buſineſs, and died within two Months after, (January 1695,) at ſeventy eight Years of Age. * Journal des Savans, Tom. xxiii. pag. 185.

* AUBESPINE. (Gabriel de l') He aſſiſted at the laſt Seſſion of the Council of Trent; and at his Return to Paris, tho' but twenty Years of Age, was made a Counſellor of the Parliament, and ſoon after Maſter of Requeſts. He was ſent afterwards Ambaſſador into England, returned to France upon the Death of Henry III. and followed Henry IV.'s Fortune. He was employed in ſeveral Negotiations, and had a Publick Character in Italy for ſettling the Affair of the Marquiſate of Saluzzes. At his Return, he was made Chancellor of the King's Orders, and afterwards Counſellor of State: He ſucceeded John de l'Aubeſpine his Kinſman in the Biſhoprick of Orleans Anno Domini 1604, and died at Grenoble in Auguſt 1639. The Publick is obliged to this Prelate for being the firſt in giving an exact Plan of the Ancient Diſcipline of the Church, with reference to the Circumſtances and Solemnity of Penance, the Holy Euchariſt, and other Primitive Rites. Of this the Reader may be ſatisfied, by conſulting his Obſervationes Eccleſiaſtica, written in Latin; his French Book of the Ancient Polity of the Church, relating to the Euchariſt, &c. * Du Sauſſay, & Symphorien Guyon, Hiſtoire d'Orleance, Sainte Marthe, Gallia Chriſtiana, Tom. ii. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* AUBIGNE, (Theodore Agrippa de) Admiral of Guienne and Bretagne, diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Pen, no leſs than his Sword, there being few Productions of the Mind more ingenious than the two Satyrs called La Confeſſion de Sancy, and Le Baron de Feneſte, of which he is ſaid to be the Author. He likewiſe wrote a Hiſtory of France, beginning at the Year 1500, and reaching to 1613. And here he ſhows a warm Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion profeſſed by him.

* AUCHE, Auſc, or Aux. Beſides what is mentioned of this Place in the firſt Volume of Morery, we may obſerve, that the Archbiſhoprick is one of the richeſt Eccleſiaſtical Promotions in France. The Suffragans to this Archiepiſcopal See are, Dax or Acks, Lectour, Comminges, Conſerans, Aire, Baſas, Oleron, Leſcar, and Bayonne. Latin Authors have ſeveral Names for this Town, as Auſcii, Eluſaberris, Auguſta Auſciorum, and Auſciorum Civitas. 'Twas formerly a Roman Colony. There are ſtill ſeveral ancient Remains of the Greatneſs of the Counts of Armagnac. The Cathedral is one of the beſt in France, and ſuppoſed to be built by Clovis the Great. The Chapter conſiſts of fifteen Dignitaries and twenty Canons, amongſt which there are five Secular Men who have a Stall in the Choir, and a Dividend in the Revenues. The Perſons are, the Count d'Armagnac, the Barons de Montant, de Pardaillan, de Monteſquiou, and d'Iſſe. * Cæſar Lib. 3. de Bello Gallico, Plin. lib. 4. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 15. De Marca Hiſt. de Bearn. Sainte Marthe, Gall. Chriſt.

* AUDEUS, an Arch-Heretick living in the fourth Century. He was baniſhed into Scythia by the Emperor Conſtantius, where, as S. Epiphanius reports, he converted a great many Heathens. Theodoret informs us, that his Followers gave Abſolution without impoſing Canonical Satisfaction: And that when the Penitents were reconciled, they only obliged them to paſs between the Canonical and Apocryphal Books. They lived a retired Life, and abſented themſelves from the Publick Churches, becauſe Men of licentious Lives were admitted there. Audeus died among the Goths ſome time after the Year 370. His Sect was governed by ſeveral Biſhops conſtituted by him; particularly by Euranus of Meſopotamia, much eſteemed by that Party, and by Sylvanus a Goth proſelyted by him. But theſe two Biſhops and ſome others dying before the Year 377, moſt of the Party deſerted them. Upon this, the ſmall Remainder ſettled in two Villages near Antioch. Thoſe who in the Year 392 had been expelled Gothland by Athanaricus, came and joined them; and ſo did the reſt diſpers'd in the Monaſteries of Mount Taurus, in Arabia and Paleſtine. They lived in their Monaſteries, and in Cottages near great Towns; but would never come to Divine Service with the Catholicks. S. Epiphanius commends them for unblemiſhed Living, and the Diſcipline in their Monaſteries. But Theodoret aſſures us, there was a great deal of Immorality amongſt them. This Hereſy, Name and all, ſunk in the time of Facundus, who lived in the Fifth Century. S. Auſtin by Miſtake calls them Vadians, and reports, thoſe of them in Egypt communicated with the Catholicks.

Petavius pretends, S. Auguſtin and Theodoret miſtook the Sentiment of the Audeans, and what Epiphanius had reported of them: For this Father, ſays he, charges them with no other Hetorodoxy, than their believing the Reſemblance between Man and God lay in the Corporeal Figure. But to take the Matter right, the Text in Epiphanius does not carry this Senſe; for this Father declares expreſly, that the Audeans had made no Alteration in the Doctrine of the Church; which would not be true if they had been Anthropomorphites. * Epiphan. Her. 70. S. Auguſtin, Her. 50. Theodoret, Lib. 4. Her. Fab. cap. 9. Facundus, Lib. 8. cap. 7. Petavius Dogmat. Theol. Tom. i. Lib. 2. cap. 1.

* AVEIRO, Aveirum, Lavara, a Town in Portugal, in the Province of Beira; gives the Title of a Duke, and ſtands upon a Lake, made by the River Vouga, a League above its falling into the Ocean. The Lake or Canal made by this River, makes a good Haven: The Town has a fine Bridge, and ſtands eighteen Miles from Porto, and twenty ſeven from Coimbra. * Ferdinand Alvarez. Sevo. Baudrand.

* AUGE,

* AUGE, the Country of Auge or Ouche, Augia, Algia; a ſmall Extent of Ground in Lower Normandy, reaching from the Sea-Coaſt to the North as far as Séez to the South, between the Lieuvin and the Beſſin. The Towns within this Precinct are Séez, Argentan, Falvite, Hieſmes, Pont-l'Eveque, and S. Sauveur upon Dive. This ſmall Country affords very good Paſture, and large well-fed Beef.

AUGILA, a ſmall African Country in Barbary; it lies in the Weſtern Part of the Deſart of Barca, at the Foot of the Mountains Meotes to the South. * Baudrand.

AUGILLI, a People of Cyrene in Africk, who worſhiped no other Deity but the Manes, or Human Ghoſts: Theſe they invoked to proſper their Affairs; and ſitting on the Graves, ſwore by them. * L'Abbé, Danet.

AUGST, Auguſta Rauracorum, a Town in Switzerland, ſtanding upon a Hill near the Rhine; 'tis in the Canton of Baſil, and about nine Miles from that Capital. 'Twas formerly an Epiſcopal See, and of a conſiderable Bigneſs, and now the Declenſion of it has enrich'd Baſil. * Baudrand.

AUGURY; an Art for predicting Futurity. Varro makes four ſorts of Divination, drawn from the four Elements, that is, Pyromancy, Aeromancy, Hydromancy, Geomancy. Thoſe who profeſſed this Buſineſs, had different Names, according to the Subject they worked upon. The Incantatores or Enchantors perform'd their Feats by Jargon and hard Words. The Arioli worked by abominable Devotions and Sacrifices. The Aruſpices pretended to tell lucky Hours, and inſpected the Inwards of the Sacrifices: Thus they both foretold what would, and what had happened. The Pythians predicted Futurity by the Afflation of a Pythonick Spirit, injected by Apollo: This Diſtinction of Augury was moſtly the Talent of Women, who profeſſed ſingle Life. Voltivoli was the Name of thoſe, who to change any Body's Conſtitution or Complexion, made the Figure of the Perſon in Wax, or any other ſoft manageable Matter. The Deſign was, that the Man or Woman repreſented, might undergo the Fortune of the Figure. Virgil and Ovid take Notice of this ſort of Witchery, and that the Miſchief failed when the Practicers confeſſed themſelves guilty. The Imaginarii made little Idols, where the Devil preſided and gave Reſponſes. The Conjectores interpreted Dreams, and pretended to look deep into Events. Chiromantici were thoſe who told Fortunes by Palmeſtry, or examining the Lines in the Hand. Specularii, who applied to a Looking-Glaſs, or other poliſhed Superficies, to peep for prognoſticating Objects. Mathematici, or Judicial Aſtrologers, who reached future Events by the Motion and Conjunction of the Stars. Genethliaci, or thoſe who calculate Nativities, by erecting a Scheme, with the Hour and Minute of any ones Birth. Saltatores, or Jumpers, who prognoſticate good or bad Succeſs, by the Leaping or ſudden Starts of Men or Beaſts. Sortilegi, were Men of Myſtery, who conſulted the Oracles with Scrolls or Lots. Augures, drew their Conjectures from the Flight or Singing of Birds: By their Flight, they underſtood the particular Motion of their Feet, as well as of their Wings. Thus Auſpicium is the obſerving how the Birds flew, in what Manner they lighted, and how they hopt.

Thunder, Lightning, and Thunderbolts, made part of the Myſtery of Divination: Thus thoſe Places which had been ſtruck with a Bolt from the Sky, had an Altar erected upon them, with a little Chappel open at Top called Puteal. The Place Thunder-ſtruck was conſecrated by ſacrificing a Sheep called Bidental; neither was it lawful to go upon it. They likewiſe called Places ſtruck and blaſted with Lightning, Loca Obſtita. The Augurs diſtinguiſhed the Thunder into Bruta Fulmina, that is, Claps which ſignified nothing; and Fulmina Fatidica, which made a prognoſticating Noiſe, and let the Augurs into the Knowledge of what would happen. There was likewiſe another Diviſion of this Meteor, as Fulmen dejiciens, battering or over-turning Thunder; Fulmen Tranſfigens, penetrating or tranfixing Thunder; Fulmen Corripiens, a ſudden unexpected Thunder; and Fulmen Infigens, Thunder that fell ſharp, and ſtruck upon a Point. The Dignity of this Profeſſion was very great amongſt the Romans; and thoſe who had the higheſt Poſts in the Government, thought it an Honour to be admitted into the Augurs College. Their Kings and Emperors pretended to Skill this way, as not thinking it below their Quality. The Senators at Rome were Maſters of this Myſtery, and had Authority to interpret the Marks of Augury: And the General of the Army, whether Proconſul or Pretor, had the ſame Privilege in the Field. If the Lieutenant-General routed the Enemy, the General under whoſe Auſpicia the Battle was fought, had the Honour of the Triumph. Notwithſtanding the Magiſtracy concerned themſelves with the Augurs in this Faculty, there was ſome Difference in the Management: The Augurs were obliged to make their Obſervations; but the Magiſtracy did it only when they had a mind to it. The Augurs proclaimed the Publick Meetings after they had been appointed; but the Magiſtracy only gave Notice when they were to meet. Three Augurs were required to practiſe their Skill, for giving the People Notice when 'twas proper to make By Laws in the Curiæ or reſpective Warts: But one Magiſtrate, if he had conſulted the Sky or the Birds, was enough to bar the Meeting of the Aſſembly.

There are ſeveral other ſorts of Divination, as, 1. Necromancy, which implies an Application to the Devil for calling up the Dead: Thus the Witch of Endor made Samuel, or the Devil in his Shape, appear to Saul. 2. Anthropomancy pretends to reach into what will come to paſs, by inſpecting the Entrails of a dead Child, or ſome other Perſon. 3. Lecanomancy, that is, telling of Fortunes by looking into a Baſon full of Water, where the Perſons to be conſulted come up. Some Expoſitors are of Opinion, that Joſeph made uſe of his Silver Cup in this manner. The Hebrew Word Nachaſch is commonly taken in Scripture in an ill Senſe, as the Word Augurari is in Latin: But Grotius thinks the Word may mean no prohibited Practice in this 44th Chapter of Geneſis; and that Joſeph, by way of Preparation to interpret Dreams, poured Wine of this Cup in Sacrifice to God Almighty. Thus the Verſe where 'tis ſaid, the Cup in which my Lord divines, does not neceſſarily inferr Magick, or unwarrantable Divination; but that the Cup being full of Wine, Water, or ſome other Liquor, was then ſpilt by way of Prognoſtication. Julius Cyrenius mentions a Divining Cup uſed by the Aſſyrians, Chaldeans, and Egyptians. They filled it with Water, and then threw in a thin Plate of Silver, or ſome Precious Stones, with certain Characters graved upon them; then they pronounced ſome Forms of Conjuration. The Devil being thus addreſs'd, whiſtled his Anſwer from the Bottom of the Baſon. Pliny mentions ſome myſterious Feats performed this way. 4. Gaſtrinomancy divines by a large Glaſs ſet round with lighted Torches, into which they throw a Piece of Money. 5. Catoptromancy is performed by throwing a Looking-Glaſs into a Baſon full of Water, and then making an Infant, or a Woman that has not gone nine Months with Child, look upon it. 6. Onycomancy is the making uſe of the Thumb-Nail, or Hand of a young Child, covered with Suet or Oil, to make him ſee what they have a mind to, after having firſt ſet his Face to the Sun. 7. Belomancy, a way of Divining by Arrows: The manner of performing this Ceremony was different, eſpecially among the Eaſtern People: Thus we are informed by the Learned Pocock, in his Eſſay on the Arabian Hiſtory. And here we ſhan't detain the Reader with what he reports concerning notch'd Arrows, eleven of which, and ſometimes more, were thrown into a little Sack, and ſoon after drawn out, for reſolving the Caſe or Queſtion: We ſhall only take Notice of a certain way of conſulting Lots, called Alazlum by the Arabians. The Ceremonial of the Myſtery is as follows: "When "any body has a mind to travel or to marry, or has "any other conſiderable Project in his Head, 'tis cu-"ſtomary for him to apply to the Myſtery of three Ar-"rows, put into a Veſſel: Upon the firſt, they write, "God has commanded me. Upon the ſecond, God has for-"bid me. But upon the third, nothing at all. Now if "they happen to draw the Affirmative Arrow, they im-"mediately ſet themſelves about the Execution of their "Deſign, with as much Confidence as if they had ex-"preſs Order from God Almighty. If they draw the "prohibiting Arrow, they drop the Buſineſs, and think "no more about it. But in caſe they drew the third "Arrow, which had nothing writ upon it, they put it "in again, and repeated the Augury, till they had drawn "an Arrow which either commanded or forbid the En-"terprize. We meet with ſomething of this in the "Prophet Ezekiel, (cap. xxi. v. 21, 22,) with reſpect "to Nebuchadnezzar. The King of Babylon, ſays the "Prophet,

" Prophet, ſtood at the Parting of the Way, at the Head of " two Ways: He has put Arrows into a Quiver, to inform " him which Route he is to take: He conſulted with Images, " he look'd in the Liver: At his Right Hand was the Di- " vination for Jeruſalem, or, as the Vulgate has it, The " Lot is fallen upon Jeruſalem, which has made him march " on the Right-Hand Road, &c. And in the 23d Verſe it " is added, The conſulting this Oracle ſhall be look'd on as " a deluſive Application by the Children of Iſrael, &c. " Thus the Scripture ſpeaks plain of Belomancy, and " S. Jerom explains the Paſſage as follows: This King " (ſaith he) will plant himſelf between the two Ways, " will conſult the Oracle according to the Cuſtom of his " Country: He will put Arrows into a Quiver, write " different Words upon them, ſhuffle them together, " and by the Mark of the Arrow firſt drawn, conclude " what Town he's firſt to beſiege. The Reader may " conſult this Father's Commentary upon the fourth " Chapter of Hoſea, where he calls thoſe things Rods or " Staffs, which are tranſlated Arrows in this Place."

Notwithſtanding the Pagan Augury was made up of Tricking and Superſtition, it muſt notwithſtanding be confeſſed, that Providence has thrown a preſaging Force into ſome Bodies: Thus Swallows, Halcyons, Sea-Mews, &c. foretell the Seaſons and Qualities of the Weather: And we are aſſured from the Scripture, as well as Prophane Hiſtory, that God has thought fit to impart Secrets and diſtant Events in Dreams. Thus the Quality and Attainments of Men are ſometimes preſaged in their Infancy: For Inſtance, when Bees happen to ſit upon their Lips, and make Honey there, it pre-acquaints the World the Child will prove a charming Speaker, which happen'd accordingly in the Caſe of Plato and S. Ambroſe. And the Piſmires being very buſy in putting Grains of Corn in Midas's Mouth, while he lay in the Cradle, ſeem to foretell he would be very rich. The Curioſity and violent Fancy the Pagans had to look into Futurity, made them give Credit to Oracular Reſponſes, and Reports of Devils, and to take thoſe things for Marks of Prediction where there was no Connexion between Cauſe and Effect. The Aſſyrians, having a vaſt Champagne Country for Obſervation, ſet up for Aſtrologers. The Chaldeans and Egyptians followed them in this Extravagance: The Cilicians, Pamphylians, and Piſidians, rely'd ſtrongly upon the Noiſe and Flying of Birds. Greece had their Pythians or Prieſteſſes inſpired by Apollo, together with their old Prophetick Women of Dodona: And Egypt had the famous Oracle of Jupiter Hammon. The Romans were particularly ſmitten with Augury: They followed Romulus's Fancy, who would not undertake the Building of Rome, till the Vultures were conſulted. Hetruria or Tuſcany was famous for Pretenſions this way. The Sibyls Books among the Romans had People aſſigned to interpret them. And Dreams had likewiſe Men profeſſed to expound them.

The moſt remarkable Inſtances for ſupporting the Credit of Augury, in the Greek and Roman Hiſtory, are as follow: Tarquinius Priſcus having a mind to augment the Cavalry of Romulus's Eſtabliſhment, was diſſuaded from the Attempt by the Augur Ætius Nævius. King Tarquin, ſomewhat diſguſted with the Diſſuaſive, asked the Augur, if another thing which he had in his Fancy could take Effect? Ætius reply'd, as eaſily as he could wiſh. Upon this, Tarquin thinking to ſurprize him, bid him, in a jeſting way, take a Razor and cut a Whetſtone in Pieces. Upon this, Ætius falls to work, and ſlices the Whetſtone in Pieces before Tarquin's Face. This wonderful Performance, ſays Valerius Maximus, ſhews how great a Maſter he was in Augury.

Tiberius Gracchus going about an untried and dangerous Undertaking, went abroad in the Morning to ſee what Humour the Birds were in: And here their Singing and Motion preſaged ill Luck. At the ſtepping out of his Houſe, he had a rough Fall at the Door, which broke the Skin of one of his Toes. Before he had moved many Paces forward, three Crows dropt a Piece of a Tile before him, and foreboded his Misfortune, by croaking in a very ſtrong, unmuſical manner. However, he ſlighted all theſe Warnings, and moved on to the Capitol, where the Chief Prieſt Scipio Naſica broke off a Piece of a Bench, and knock'd him down with it.

Appius Claudius being ready to engage the Enemy's Fleet in the firſt Punick War, conſulted the Augurs, according to Cuſtom: But the Fortune-Teller who fed Prognoſticating Poultry, obſerved the Chickens would neither come out of their Coop, nor eat: Upon this, Claudius falling into ſomewhat of a Paſſion, order'd them to be thrown into the Sea: If they won't eat, ſays he, let them ſee if they can drink. However, as they ſay, he paid dear for making ſo bold with them. L. Junius, Claudius's Collegue or Fellow-Conſul, having the ſame mean Opinion of unfortunate Indications, loſt his Fleet in a Storm: The firſt of theſe Chief Magiſtrates were tried for their Lives, and caſt by the Commons, and the other ſtabbed himſelf to prevent the Shame of an Execution.

The High-Prieſt Metellus going to his Country-Seat at Tuſculum, met two Crows, who croſs'd the Way upon him ſo often, and grew ſo troubleſome, that he was forced to turn back, and go again to Rome; and the Night following Veſta's Temple fell on Fire. Upon receiving News of this Accident, Metellus threw himſelf into the Flames, and ſaved the Figure of Pallas.

Tully had his Death foretold by a reſembling Notice in the Suburbs of Gayeta: He ſaw a Crow pluck off the Pin of a Dial, and immediately after laid hold of the Bottom of his Coat, and tried to ſtop him with her Bill; till one of his Slaves brought him word, the Soldiers ſent by Marc Anthony to kill him were juſt in ſight When Brutus was drawing his Army into the Field againſt Octavius Cæſar and Marc Anthony, two Eagles, one from Cæſar's Camp, and the other from Brutus's, encounter'd each other in the Air; and after a long Skirmiſh, that which came from Brutus's Quarter was wounded. Alexander the Great having a Fancy to build a Town in Egypt, Dinocrates, a celebrated Architect, drew the Plan, and mark'd out the Compaſs of the Walls. For this Purpoſe he made uſe of Barley-Meal inſtead of Chalk. Whilſt this was doing, a Flock of Birds flew from a neighbouring Lake, and eat up the Meal. From whence the Egyptian Prieſts drew a lucky Preſage, and declared the Town in time would be able to maintain a great many Strangers. An Eagle happening to light upon a Palace where King Dejotarus intended to lodge, he would by no means go into it; for this Prince was exceſſively given to the Belief of Augury: And we may ſuppoſe he thought he had Reaſon for his Reliance; for the Night following, the Houſe fell flat to the Ground. Now granting theſe Inſtances Matter of Fact, they may all be no more than the Reſult of Chance: For as to the Buſineſs of Augury, 'twas ſo trifling and unſupported, that Tully could not help ſaying, that he wonder'd how two Sooth-ſayers could meet without ſmiling upon each other. * Varro, Cicer. de Divinat. Valer. Maxim. Plutarch in vit. Cicer. Florus, &c.

AUGURELLUS, (Johannes Aurelius) a Latin Poet of Rimini, lived in the beginning of the Sixteenth Century. He was called, The little Man with the great Genius; tho' the Reaſon of this Diſtinction is not ſo very clear. His Odes, Elegies, and Jambicks, are extant: But as to his Lyrical Performances, he was not very happy in them: For this ſort of Poetry requires a lively Imagination, a great deal of Force, nice Thought, a noble and ſublime Manner, an eaſy Turn of Expreſſion, and a polite Air, well furniſh'd with Pleaſantry and Entertainment: But it ſeems Augurellus had ſcarcely ſo much as one of theſe Qualities. But being ſtrongly engaged in queſt of the Philoſophers Stone, he made a Poem upon this Subject: And here his Fancy being unuſually warm'd, he ſucceeded tolerably well. * Paulus Jovius, Elog. Num. 68. Lorenzo Graſſo de Poet. Græc. pag. 80. Julius Scaliger, Hypercritic. Lib. 6. Poetic. pag. 78. Baillet Jugemens des Savans, Tom. vii.

AUGUSTALES, and Sodales Auguſtales, a College of Prieſts founded in Honour of Auguſtus, deify'd by the Romans. The Emperor Tiberius begun this Society, and called them Auguſtales: Their Buſineſs was to offer Sacrifices to Auguſtus in his Temple. This idolatrous Flattery was not only practis'd at Rome, but in ſeveral Gauliſh Provinces, particularly at Lyons, where this Emperor had a magnificent Temple, built at the Charge of twelve great Towns. Each Province had a Statue erected with particular Devices, to acquaint Poſterity they had all contributed to the Building and Decoration of the Temple. Neither was this fulſome Flattery particular to Auguſtus's Memory; for ſucceeding Emperors had the ſame Reſpect paid them. Theſe Prieſts were diſtinguiſhed by the Names of the Princes they belong'd to. Thus for Inſtance we meet with the Flavii, Adrianales, Ælii, Antonini, &c. That which gave a particular Luſtre to theſe Religious Colleges, was the Emperors entring themſelves into the Fraternity at their firſt coming to the Crown. The Cuſtom began with Tiberius, who regiſter'd himſelf amongſt the Auguſtales, and brought Druſus, Germanicus, and Claudius, into this Society. Nero and the ſucceeding Emperors follow'd this Precedent. * L'Abbée, Danet, Sueton.

* S. AUGUSTIN, (Aurelius) Son of Patricius and Monica, was born November 13, Anno Dom. 354. His Father was a Pagan, not converted till the latter end of his Life: But his Mother being a Chriſtian, took ſuitable Care of his Education, and prepared him for a Catechumen. Thus he was ſo far ſatisfied in the Chriſtian Religion, that falling ſick, he earneſtly deſired Baptiſm; but the Diſtemper going off, this Sacrament was deferred. He was bred at the Schools of Tagaſta, Madaura, and Carthage; at which laſt Town he ſtudied Rhetorick with great Application and Improvement: But here he happen'd to grow ſomewhat licentious, and entertain'd a Woman without Matrimony, by whom he had a Son Adeodatus. This Child, who was a Prodigy of Senſe, died baptized at ſixteen Years of Age. And now S. Auſtin finding little Reliſh in Heathen Eloquence, applied himſelf to the Study of the Scriptures. He ſpent ſome part of his Time notwithſtanding upon Ariſtotle's Categories, and other Branches of Philoſophical Learning; and in theſe Reſearches the Strength of his Genius carried him through, without the Aſſiſtance of a Maſter. At twenty Years of Age he returned to Tagaſta, where he taught Grammar, and pleaded: And here Alipius was one of his Scholars. Upon the Death of a Friend much valued, he grew uneaſy at the Place, left Tagaſta, and taught Rhetorick at Carthage, Anno Dom. 379. He was now two and twenty Years of Age, and managed his Employment with Reputation. Tho' he abhorred Magick, he was not without a Fancy for Judicial Aſtrology. And having formerly fallen into unhappy Company, he continued entangled in the Manichean Hereſy: But the Immorality of this Sect, the Ignorance and faint Arguings of Fauſtus, their celebrated Champion, began to undeceive him. The Misbehaviour of his Scholars at Carthage made him reſolve upon a Voyage to Rome: Here he fell dangerouſly ſick at a Manichean's Houſe. Upon his Recovery, he profeſſed Rhetorick, and raiſed a School: But moſt of his Scholars taking their Leave without paying their Maſter, he look'd out for another Settlement. At this time the Burghers of Milan deſired Symmachus, Governor of Rome, to ſend them a Rhetorick Maſter, who pitch'd upon S. Auguſtin. Being at Milan, S. Ambroſe's Sermons work'd upon him, brought him to a Reſolution to quit the Manichean Sect, and enter himſelf a Catechumen in the Catholick Church. Plato's Writings were not unſerviceable to him in his Search after Truth. His converſing with Simplicianus and Pontitianus brought him more forward, and the reading S. Paul's Epiſtles gave him entire Satisfaction, in the thirty ſecond Year of his Age. His Mother Monica was now come after him to Milan: Her Prayers and Tears contributed to his Converſion. S. Auguſtin kept on his Rhetorick Lectures till the Vacation 386. After his Baptiſm, he threw up his Employment, reſolved to return home, and came to Oſtia in order to embarque: Here he loſt his Mother, and after her Death lived ſome time at Rome, and then went aboard for Africk, in the Year 388. At his coming on Shoar, he ſtopt at Carthage, lodged at one Innocent a Magiſtrate's Houſe, who was miraculouſly cured of a Fiſtula while S. Auguſtin ſtaid with him. From hence he went to Tagaſta, where he ſold his Eſtate, and gave it to the Poor, and lived three Years in a ſort of Religious Society with ſome of his Friends. Their Buſineſs was Faſting, Prayer, ſtudying the Scriptures, and writing godly and ſerviceable Books.

S. Auguſtin coming to Hippo to convert a Man of Quality, Valerius Biſhop of the Town propoſed the chooſing a Prieſt for that Cathedral. S. Auguſtin coming into the Church by chance, the People pitch'd upon him, and Valerius ordain'd him, though againſt his Will. This happen'd in the Year 391. Upon this, S. Auguſtin retired, to prepare himſelf for the Exerciſe of his Function. Valerius, who deſigned him for the Pulpit, gave him leave to preach when he was preſent, which was diſpenſing with the Cuſtom of the African Church. 'Twas now that S. Auguſtin ſettled a Monaſtery at Hippo, or a Society, who lived in common without any Claim or Property. S. Auguſtin, Anno Dom. 393, aſſiſted in a Provincial Council at Hippo, where he explained the Creed to ſo much Satisfaction, that the Biſhops, having a great Value for his Learning, deſigned him an higher Character. But Valerius being afraid of loſing a Perſon ſo neceſſary for the Government of his Dioceſe, reſolved to make him his Coadjutor, and got him conſecrated by Megalius Biſhop of Calama, Anno Dom. 395. S. Auguſtin had much ado to reconcile himſelf to his Ordination, tho' at that time, as he afterwards declared, he was ignorant his Promotion croſſed upon the Diſcipline of the Church, and particularly upon the Council of Nice, which forbids the conſecrating two Biſhops for one City. But having thus received the Character, he ſettled a Monaſtery of Clergy in the Epiſcopal Houſe, and lived himſelf under the Regulation: He managed with great Zeal and Application in all the Parts of his Function, ſpent his Time in writing againſt Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, inſtructing the People from the Pulpit, relieving the Poor, appearing at ſeveral Councils, and drawing his Pen at laſt againſt the Pelagians. The great Service the Church received by him, his excellent Writings, and exemplary Life, gave him a juſt Title to all the Commendation he has received from ſucceeding Ages.

S. Auſtuſtin's Works make ſeveral Tomes, of which there are a great many Editions. The Account here mentioned ſhall be taken from the Benedictine Edition, divided into Eleven Tomes. The 1ſt contains his Writings before he was a Prieſt, with his Retractations and Confeſſions, which are a ſort of Preface to his Works. The 2d comprehends his Epiſtles, which not only diſcover the Temper and Character of this Saint, but likewiſe furniſh conſiderable Learning upon the Heads of Doctrine, Diſcipline and Morality: They are ranged under four Diviſions. The 3d takes in his Tracts upon the Holy Scripture: The 4th his Enarrations, and Expoſition upon the Pſalms: The 5th gives us his Sermons: The 6th his Dogmatick Performances upon ſeveral Points of Morality and Diſcipline. His Books de Civitate Dei make the 7th Tome: His Books againſt the Hereticks are the 8th, excepting what relates to the Donatiſts and Pelagians. His 9th Tome encounters the Donatiſts; and his 10th the Pelagians. The laſt Tome contains S. Auguſtin's Life, extracted moſtly from his Works, with a very large and ſerviceable Index.

The moſt conſiderable Works in his Firſt Tome are, 1. his two Books of Retractations, which are a ſort of Critick upon the reſt written by him. Here he gives us the Title and the firſt Words, makes his Catalogue according to the Order of Time, and tells us upon what Occaſion and Deſign the reſpective Tracts were written: He mentions the Subject, and explains the Paſſages he thought obſcurely delivered, ſoftens thoſe which required it, and gives a good Conſtruction to ſuch Paſſages which might poſſibly be taken in an ill one. He corrects himſelf where he thought the Truth was miſt, and very ingenuouſly owns the Errors he had fallen into. The Preface to this Work diſcovers an honeſt and an humble Mind: He lets us know his Deſign is to review his Works with the Strictneſs of a Cenſor, and to expoſe his Faults himſelf: That in this he was governed by the Apoſtle's Advice, where we are told, that if we would judge ourſelves, we ſhould not be judged: And that he was almoſt frightned with the following Sentence, That 'tis hard for thoſe to avoid Sin who talk much: That 'twas not the Bulk and Number of his Writings which made him afraid; for a Man can't properly be ſaid to talk or write too much, when his Diſcourſe is ſpent upon neceſſary Subjects; but he thought he had reaſon to be apprehenſive of a great many miſtaken and inſignificant Paſſages in his Works: That ſince he did not think himſelf infallible now he was old, 'twas next to impoſſible he ſhould not fall into a great deal of Error and Miſcarriage when he was young; eſpecially conſidering his Circumſtances obliged him to Diſputes and frequent Diſcourſe: That he was therefore reſolved to examine his Performance, and paſs Sentence upon himſelf, to prevent the ſevere Part of what might be otherwiſe pronounced at the Great Day. 2. His Confeſſions, divided into thirteen Books, of which the firſt ten make the Hiſtory of his Life, and the laſt three are Remarks on the Beginning of Geneſis. The other Books within this Tome are upon Philoſophical

Sub-

Subjects, to which are to be added his Soliloquies; three Books de Libero Arbitrio; two upon Geneſis againſt the Manicheans; a Book de Moribus Eccleſiæ, another de Moribus Manichæorum, and the laſt de Vera Religione. Theſe were all written before he was ordained Prieſt. The Second Tome contains his Letters: Here the Reader will find a great many Queſtions relating to Religion handſomely explained, and the Caſes reſolved with great Perſpicuity and Judgment. And here in his Diſpute with S. Jerom concerning the different Conduct of S. Peter and S. Paul, he manages the Argument with great Civility and Temper. To his Commentaries upon the Scripture in the Third Tome, his Tracts de Doctrina Chriſtiana are prefix'd: And here he lays down a great many excellent Rules for interpreting Scripture. His Commentary upon the Pſalms, which furniſhes the Fourth Tome, goes but little upon the Letter: 'Tis an Allegorical Expoſition, intermix'd with Controverſy and Moral Reflexions. His Sermons, printed in the Fifth Tome, are either Homilies upon the Scripture, or Diſcourſes upon the Feſtivals: They are not ſtudied Speeches, nor drawn up in the Forms of an Orator; but familiar Diſcourſes, deliver'd without much Preparation: They are almoſt all of them ſhort, without ſtretching upon the Subject, or much Proportion in the Parts. His Sixth Tome conſiſts moſtly in Moral Tracts: For Inſtance, thoſe de Virginitate, de bono Conjugii, Contra Mendacium, &c. His Performance de Civitate Dei making the Seventh Tome, is divided into two and twenty Books: The firſt five are ſpent in confuting the Pagan Pretence, that the Worſhip of their pretended Deities was neceſſary to the Happineſs of Mankind, and that all the Misfortunes which had lately happen'd came from the Neglect of their Religion. The five following diſpute againſt thoſe who don't ſtick to own Calamities are common to all Ages. But notwithſtanding this Conceſſion, the Worſhip of the Pagan Deities, as they pretend, is beneficial to thoſe in the other World. His Eighth Tome, tho' principally levelled againſt the Manicheans, confutes the Arians in his Books de Trinitate: And in this Diviſion he attacks the Pagans, Jews, and almoſt all Sects and Hereſies. S. Auguſtin, when firſt a Biſhop, ſpent moſt of his Force againſt the Donatiſts; for at that time they had almoſt over-run half the Church in Africk. For this Purpoſe the Ninth Tome beſtows a great deal of Argument upon them; of which the principal Tracts are the ſeven Books de Baptiſmo, the Books againſt Petilian, &c. In his laſt Tomes he encounters the Pelagians, diſputes about the Points of Grace, Free-Will, and other reſembling Subjects. S. Jerom, who began to write againſt the Pelagians, gave over when he underſtood S. Auguſtin had undertaken the Controverſy. The Weſtern Church, and particularly the See of Rome, made S. Auguſtin the Standard in theſe Diſputes, excepting (as Pope Celeſtine I. ſays) what he had determined upon ſome deep and difficult Queſtions. Towards the End of his Life he wrote againſt the Semi-Pelagians, in his Book de Correptione & Gratia; and in another de Predeſtinatione Sanctorum. Proſper maintained his Sentiment in Gaul, and Fulgentius was afterwards govern'd by his Divinity. Innocent I. in his Anſwer to a Synodical Epiſtle of the Council of Milevis, where S. Auguſtin was Secretary, acquaints them, that the Doctrine there maintain'd, and the Arguments urged, were, without farther Reinforcement, ſufficient to ſuppreſs the Pelagian Heterodoxy. Proſper relates, that Boniface I. frequently conſulted S. Auguſtin: To which may be added, Celeſtine I. defended his Sentiment againſt ſome Gauliſh Biſhops. But after all this Commendation, the Reader may take Notice S. Auguſtin was not free from Singularity. The Learned and Judicious M. Du Pin obſerves, "that this "Father ſtarts ſeveral Queſtions never thought on be"fore, and reſolves many of them purely upon the "Strength of his own Reaſoning: He often leaves the "Notions of his Predeceſſors, to follow a PATH "WHOLLY NEW; and that both in expounding "Scripture, and Theological Queſtions. That with re"ſpect to Divinity, what Cicero ſaid of himſelf, may be "apply'd to him, that he was MAGNUS OPINI"ATOR. He framed, if we may ſo ſay, a Body of "Divinity for all the Latin Fathers that came after him. "They have not only made uſe of his Principles, but "often copy'd his Argument and Expreſſion." (Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.) To add ſomething farther by way of Character, S. Auguſtin had a comprehenſive Genius, and great Penetration. He ſeems to have had a Metaphyſical Head, not untinctur'd with Logick: His Method was to lay down Principles, and draw a great many Conſequences from them: And thus the Propoſitions in his Reaſoning have great Coherence and Dependence upon each other. He has argued more upon the Myſteries of Chriſtianity than any other Father before him, and debates ſeveral Queſtions altogether new. He was no great Linguiſt, nor much verſed in Eccleſiaſtical Authors. Notwithſtanding his teaching Rhetorick, he either neglected the Uſe of it, or was no great Maſter himſelf. He is ſo far ſhort of a noble Manner, that his Diction is not always proper: His Phraſe is ſometimes barbarous, and Points and Gingles are not unfrequent with him. He repeats very much, and comes over and over with the ſame Argument; hangs a great while upon a Thought, gives it a great many Turns, and runs out into Common-placing. His Authority was very great, as has been obſerved in ſucceeding Ages. In the Twelfth Century, when Peter Lombard made an Abridgment of Divinity, his Sentences are little more than a Collection from S. Auguſtin. And notwithſtanding Thomas Aquinas and the other School-Men have taken up a different Method, they generally follow S. Auguſtin's Principles, and found their Reſolutions upon them.

His Corpſe, after ſeveral Removes, is ſaid to be lodged at Pavia in Lombardy: The Place is S. Peter's Monaſtery, then Part of the Suburbs, but afterwards within the Circuit of the Walls: But there is no Certainty about the Place. This Church of S. Peter at preſent conſiſts of Canons Regular, founded in 1220, and of Hermits of S. Auguſtin's Rule. The Abbey-Church lying in common between thoſe two Societies, both of them would make us believe that S. Auguſtin's Body is lodged in a Brick Coffin in a Vault under the great Altar: But this is but Conjecture; for 'tis not certainly known in what Part of the Church his Corpſe is depoſited.

Thoſe Monaſtick Communities who profeſs the following his Rule, tho' with very different Diſcipline, call themſelves of this Saint's Order: Thus all the Canons Regular go under this Diſtinction; and to give them their due, their way of Living is the neareſt Reſemblance. The Mendicants, called Auguſtinians, pretend to an Order founded by S. Auguſtin; but then their Rule is falſly attributed to this Father. The Auguſtinians in France, called the Petits Peres, or Little Fathers, brag of a Religious Deſcent from S. Auguſtin, and pretend to live up to his Inſtitution.

We have ſeveral Editions of S. Auguſtin's Works. Auguſtin Dodo, a Canon of Baſil, is the firſt who made a Collection of this Father's Tracts, in order to range them to Advantage. He was working upon the Arguments or Contents to be ſet at the Head of the reſpective Diſcourſes, when the Plague carried him off in 1501. Amerbachius, who had begun an Impreſſion, went on with it: It appeared in 1506. 'Tis printed in a Gothick Letter. Froben publiſh'd another Edition at Baſil in 1529. The next Impreſſion was publiſhed by Guillard and Cevallon at Paris. Afterwards the Divines of Louvain made a new Search for S. Auguſtin's Works, and put them in better Order: And 'tis to their Pains we are obliged for the Editions by Plantin, Anno Dom. 1577; for that at Paris called du Grand Navire in 1586; for that at Cologn, Lyons, Venice, &c. Afterwards a Tract of S. Auguſtin, entituled, De Geſtis Pelagii, was found in S. Bartholomew's Abbey in Fiezole in Tuſcany: 'Twas publiſhed at Augsburg Anno Dom. 1615. This Diſcovery made the Learned examine the Libraries for more new Tracts of this Father. Thus, upon a thorough Search, the Doctors of Louvain furniſhed a hundred and twenty three Sermons. In 1617, Claudius Minardus printed another Tract, entituled, Contra Julianum Hæreticum Pelagianum, Operis perfecti, ſive Reſponſionis Poſtremæ, Lib. 6. Michael Paludanus, an Auguſtinian, reprinted this Book at Louvain in 1641. In 1630, Sirmondus publiſhed forty Sermons of S. Auguſtin; Sermones Novi XL. de Variis Argumentis. In 1644, Johannes Baptiſta Marus printed ſix Sermons from Manuſcripts in the Vatican, and the Library of the Barbarini. In 1534, Gulielmus Camerarius publiſhed a Tract, de Septem Viris, & de Septem donis Spiritus Sancti. Hieronimus Vignierus, an Oratorian, printed a Supplement of the Works of this Father, in two Volumes in Folio, at Paris, Anno Dom. 1654. And here the Treatiſes above-mentioned are all inſerted. Laſtly, the Benedictines dictines of S. Germains de Pres, toward the latter end of the Seventeenth Century, have furnish'd an Edition much larger and more correct than any publish'd before. S. Augustin's Books de Civitate Dei, were printed at Friburg A. D. 1494. * Aug. Confession. Retractat. & alib. Possidius, in Vit. S Aug. Prosper. Orosius, Bellarmin. de Script. Eccl. Doctor. Lovanien. in Præfat. ad Oper. S. Augustin. Godeau in S. Augustin's Life; M Pin, New Eccles. Library, Cent. V. See English Morery, Vol. I. and Supplement.

* AUGUSTIN, or Austin the Monk, Archbishop of Canterbury. For a Supplement to what is already said of him in English, Morery Vol. I. see Collier's Church History, Vol. I.

* AUGUSTINUS, (Antonius) Archbishop of Tarragon in Spain, a Person of extraordinary Learning, and no less remarkable for his Conduct and Piety; few or none deserving a greater Reputation for Integrity, Constancy and Greatness of Mind, than this illustrious Prelate. His Life was every way regular and unblemished, and his Charity so liberal and extensive, that he did not leave Money enough behind him to bury him suitable to his Quality. His Genius was noble, and his Judgment solid. He was so knowing and industrious, that no Undertaking was too hard for him. He was well versed in the most recondite Parts of Learning and Antiquity; furnished himself to a very unusual degree, and in this sort of Wealth was one of the richest Men living. Paulus Manutius, in one of his Letters, addresses him thus: You distinguish yourself so much in the Polite Part of Learning, that granting I may be reckoned something in respect to other People, yet I am nothing at all when compared to you. However Father Paul, in his History of the Council of Trent, ventures to say, that he was not thoroughly acquainted with Ecclesiastical History. Vossius, who makes no Abatement upon his Character, reports him one of the greatest Men living, and that his Notes upon Festus have abundance of Learning in them. His Notes upon Varro are likewise much esteemed. His most considerable Performance upon the Canon Law, is his Corrections of Gratian's Decretum, or de Emendatione Gratiani. 'Tis a Work of prodigious Pains, finished with great Exactness and very serviceable. The best Edition is that published at Paris by Baluzius in 1672. * Paul. Manut. Epist. Lib. 1. Epist. 6, 8, 9. Pignorius, Covarruvias, Onuphrius, Gruter, Turnebus, Baronius, Scaliger, &c. See Antonius Augustinus in Morery Vol. I.

AUGUSTINUS, (Patricius) of the Family of the Picolomini, Bishop of Pienza, lived in the Fifteenth Century. He wrote the Life of Fabian Bence; and a Relation of the Reception of the Emperor Frederick III. by Pope Paul II. He was Master of the Ceremonies, and drew a Ceremonial of the Church of Rome, which afterward Christopher Marcellus, elected Archbishop of Corfu, pretended written by himself, and publish'd it under his own Name in the Pontificate of Leo X. * Mabillon, Musæum Italicum, M. du Pin New Eccles. Hist. Cent. XIV. There was another Patricius Augustinus Canon of Siena, and Secretary to Francis Picolomini Cardinal of Siena. This Augustinus wrote a History of the Councils of Basil and Florence, and a Narrative of what passed at the Dyet of Ratisbon in the Popedom of Paul II.

* AVICENNA, an Arabian Physician and Philosopher, lived in the Ninth Century. This Chronological Period is sufficient to confute the Mistakes of those who make Avicenna Scholar to Averroes of Corduba; for Averroes was not living till about the middle of the Twelfth Century. Avicenna was so unusually furnished with Memory and Parts, that he understood all the Alcoran, and a great deal of other Learning, before he was ten Years old. His Father afterwards placed him with a celebrated Gardener. This Præceptor, notwithstanding his unpromising Employment, understood Astronomy, Geometry, the Indian Arithmetick, and other Parts of the Mathematicks, practised among the Musselmans. Little Avicenna quickly ran through all his Master's Learning. Soon after this, a famous Philosopher called Aba-Abdalla coming to Bochara, Avicenna's Father entertained him to instruct his Son. This Philosopher taught Avicenna Logick, and here he out-ran his Master's Lectures, studied Books of Philosophy without Assistance, and read the Commentators upon them. He made himself Master of Euclid's Elements purely by the Strength of his own Parts and Industry: For his Master helped him no farther than by teaching him five or six of the first Propositions. From hence he went to Ptolomy's Almagest; and now his Master Abdalla took leave of him, as not being capable of teaching him any farther. His last Study was Physick, in which Faculty he practised and wrote. He likewise qualify'd himself for Publick Business, and was Vizir to Sultan Cabouse in Giorgian, having been his Physician some time before. There are several Editions of his Works translated into Latin. * Nicolas Massa in vita Avicennæ, Scaliger in Theophrast. Castellan. in Vit. Medic. Baillet, Enfans devenus celebres par leurs études, Edit. de Paris in 12*mo.*

* AVIENUS, For in the Reign of Festus and Gratianus in Morery Vol. I. read Theodosius and Gratianus.

AVIS, Ahmed-Ben-Avise, or Veis, succeeded his Brother Houssain, Son of Scheikh-Avis. This Fortune happened as follows: In the Year of the Hegyra 784, and of the Incarnation 1382, the Sultan Houssain sent his General Adel-Aga to besiege some Forts in the Territory of Rei: And thus having sent off the greatest Part of his Forces, his Brother Ahmed, under the Pretence of some Dissatisfaction, retired from Tabriz, where the Court was, to the Town of Ardibil. The Sultan being advised of his withdrawing, sent an Express after him to command him back; but this Prince, who had great Projects in his Head, refused to obey the Order, and levied what Troops he could to surprize his Brother, who was in a manner unprovided in his Capital at Tabriz. Thus Houssain being in no Condition to face his Brother Ahmed, endeavoured to abscond; but it was not long before he fell into Ahmed's Hands, who took his Life. And now having dispatch'd his Brother, he set up for Sultan. But Bajazet, another Brother of his, astonished at so unnatural a Murder, went off immediately and cast himself upon Adel-Aga's Honour, who commanded the Army. This General immediately owned him for his lawful Sultan, and marched against Ahmed, who not having Force sufficient to fight him, took his Turn in running away, and retreated to Marvand. Adel-Aga in the mean time pressing the Pursuit, and almost coming up with the Enemy, the General Officers mutinied against him in favour of Ahmed, insomuch that he was forced to countermarch with his new Sultan to the Town of Sultania. Ahmed receiving Advice of what had passed, threw himself into Tauris, then left without a Garrison: But he was no sooner come hither, than News was brought him that Scheikh-Ali and Pir-Ali were marching to besiege him. Ahmed, who was a bold Man, drew out of Tauris and offer'd them Battle. The two Armies being in sight of each other near a Place called Hest-Roud, or the Seven Rivers, in the Persian Language, Omer-Kipchaki, who had a command in Ahmed's Army, quitted his Post, and deserted to Scheikh-Ali. This unexpected Turn lost him the Victory he reckoned upon: So that now he had no other Expedient than to retire immediately to the Town of Nakhschivan, to join Cara Mohammed the Turcoman, first Prince of the Family commonly called the Black Sheep.

This Turcoman restored Ahmed's Affairs; for having reinforced him with five thousand Horse, commanded by himself, they both marched against the Enemy, gave them an entire Defeat, and killed Scheikh-Ali and Pir-Ali in the Battle. After this Victory, Ahmed marched triumphantly to Tauris: But here he was not long undisturbed, for Adel-Aga maintained himself still in Sultania with the Sultan Bajazet. However, Ahmed disentangled this Difficulty luckily enough: But then Tamerlane, after his Conquest of Persia, in the 795th Year of the Hegyra, pressed forward and besieged Bagdet: Ahmed rightly concluding he was in no Condition to fight the Enemy, sent off his Baggage beyond the Tigris, and throwing himself and his Forces into this River, swam through, and left the Town to the Conqueror's Discretion. A Party of Tartars pursued him warmly to the Plains of Kerbela; but after several Skirmishes, when Ahmed by his Conduct and Valour had got clear of them, they countermarched to Bagdet to join the main Army. Ahmed having thus escaped being taken by Tamerlane, retired with Cara-Joseph the Turcoman into the Dominions of Emanuel, Emperor of Constantinople: But finding himself unsafe with this Prince, he went into Egypt, and put himself under the Protection of Farages, Souldan of the Mamalucks. This Prince being afraid of Tamerlane, and resolving to keep fair with him, gave him Notice of the Arrival of these two Guests. Upon this, Tamerlane writes to Farages, giving him to understand, that if he was willing to make any Proof of his Friendship, ſhip, he ſhould ſend him Sultan Ahmed under a ſtrong Guard, and keep the Turcoman Priſoner. The Souldan of Egypt being loth to break all the Laws of Hoſpitality, and yet deſirous to give ſome Satisfaction to Tamerlane, clapt a Guard upon both of them, but without barring them the Liberty of ſeeing each other. Being in this Condition, they formed a cloſe Alliance, and obliged themſelves to a firm Adherence to the Souldan, and to afford a reciprocal Aſſiſtance againſt all other Princes as ſoon as they could recover their Liberty. They continued in this Confinement till Tamerlane's Death, which happen'd in the eight hundred and ſeventh Year of the Hegyra, Anno Dom. 1404. Upon the News of this great Prince's Death, the Souldan of Egypt careſſed his Priſoners, and gave them their Liberty; but Cara Joſeph, as ſoon as he had travelled out of Egypt, put himſelf at the Head of his Turcomans, and ſeized a great Part of Meſopotamia. This Incurſion being made in favour of Sultan Ahmed, the Souldan of Egypt complained loudly to him of it; and not receiving any Satisfaction, broke with him. Ahmed, notwithſtanding the Loſs of ſo powerful an Ally, kept up his Spirits, and went on with Buſineſs: But wanting Force, he applied to Stratagem, and putting himſelf and ſome of his Followers in the Habit of Peaſants, he got into Bagdet undiſcovered: And here he was ſo lucky as to raiſe a great Mutiny againſt the Governor who commanded for Omer Mirza, to whom Tamerlane had given the Town. This Governor being expelled by the Burghers, Ahmed appeared immediately, and was declared Sultan. About the latter end of the eight hundred and eighth Year of the Hegyra, while Aboubeker Mirza, Tamerlane's Grandſon, was buſy in beſieging Iſpahan, the Emir Ibrahim marched from the Province of Schirvan, part of Media, and ſeized Tauris. Ahmed immediately left Bagdet, and marched his Army towards the Enemy. Emir Ibrahim not thinking it adviſable to fight him, retreated to Schirvan; and now Tauris being open, Sultan Ahmed enter'd it, and being tranſported to ſee himſelf reſtored to his former Pretenſions, gave into all ſorts of Liberty and Diverſion.

The Emir Ibrahim, after he had made himſelf Maſter of Iſpahan, quickly diſturbed Ahmed in his Entertainments. He ſoon forced him to quit Tauris, and retire with Precipitation to Bagdet. During theſe Traverſes, Cara Joſeph the Turcoman making his Advantage of the Claſhing between theſe two Princes, and being provided with freſh diſciplin'd Troops, fell upon the Province of Adherbigian, and made himſelf Maſter of the Whole in two or three Years. Ahmed reſenting this Conqueſt, reſolved at laſt to attack the Turcoman, and recover a Country from him, which he look'd upon as the Patrimony of his Anceſtors. To execute this Deſign, he ſeized the Juncture when the Turcoman was warmly engaged in a War with Cara Othman in Armenia the Great. And here his firſt Attempt ſucceeded; for in the 813th Year of the Hegyra, he ſurprized Tauris without meeting any Reſiſtance. As ſoon as Cara Joſeph underſtood how Sultan Ahmed had ſerv'd him, he advanced towards him with a good Army. On the other ſide, Ahmed marched againſt Cara Joſeph with all his Force: And thus a bloody Battle enſued between the two Princes ſix Miles from Tauris. The Turcoman won the Field, and his Victory was ſo complete, that the Sultan had much ado to get off, and abſcond in a Garden; where, after having lain concealed for ſome time, he was diſcovered, and put into the Hands of his Conqueror. The Turcoman reproach'd him for his Perfidiouſneſs, tho' leading to the Practice himſelf; but left him his Life and his Title. However, he govern'd his Dominions, and order'd him not to attempt any thing againſt his Sovereignty. But ſoon after the principal Nobility of Iraque, diſguſted with the Sultan, adviſed Cara Joſeph to diſpatch him: Their Pretence was, this Prince's turbulent Humour would embroil the Publick Affairs, and recommence the War, which would finiſh the Ruin of the Country. The Turcoman follow'd their Advice, and order'd the Execution of Ahmed and his Children, in the ſame 813th Year of the Hegyra, which makes Anno Domini 1410. And thus ended the Family of Haſſan Buzruk, ſurnamed Ilekhani, Scheikh Avis's Father. Thus ended this Family, which had raiſed itſelf to a Sovereign and Illuſtrious Greatneſs; and that of the Black Sheep, called in Turkiſh, Caracoinlu, took its place. * D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Orientale.

* AVITUS, (Alcimus) Son of the Senator Iſychius, and Brother to Apollinaris Biſhop of Valencia, was made Archbiſhop of Vienne in the beginning of the Sixth Century. He maintained an intimate Correſpondence with Clovis, the firſt Chriſtian King of France, and was inſtrumental in his Converſion. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Zeal againſt the Arians, had ſeveral Conferences with Gondebald, an Arian King of the Burgundians, and converted his Son Sigiſmond. He had been ſomewhat embroil'd with this young Prince, for excommunicating his Treaſurer Stephen for his Licentiouſneſs. This Cenſure paſſing in the Council of Lyons, Avitus, with the reſt of the Biſhops, was baniſhed; but afterwards being recalled, he was well received by this Prince, and recover'd him from his Hereſy. This Avitus perſuaded him to retire to the Monaſtery of Agaunum, to do Penance there for putting his Son Sigeric to Death. He wrote in Defence of Pope Symmachus. 'Tis ſuppoſed he was the firſt that ſubſcribed at the Council of Orleans, Anno Domini 506; and that inſtead of Aventinus Divenſis Metropolis, it ſhould be read Avitus Viennenſis Metropolis. Beſides his Works mentioned in Morery Vol. I. Dacherius in his fifth Tome of his Spicelegium has given us the Title of eight Homilies unmention'd before, together with Avitus's Conference with the Arian Biſhops before King Gondebald. There are likewiſe eighty ſeven Epiſtles of his upon the Subject of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. His Poem in Commendation of Virginity, addreſs'd to his Siſter Fuſcina, begins thus:

Suſcipe complectens Chriſto digniſſima Virgo,
Alcimus iſta tibi, quæ mittit munera Frater, &c.

Avitus's Style is ſomewhat dark and perplex'd: He is ingenious enough in his Points, but had little of true Elevation. He was tolerably knowing, and remarkable for Integrity and Courage. * Gregor. Turon. Lib. 2. Hiſt. Franc. cap. 23. Iſidor. de Vir. Illuſt. cap. 13. Ado Vienn. in Chron. Honoriius Auguſto dunenſis. de Lumin. Eccleſ. Libel. 3. Baronius. Bellarm. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. VI.

AULIQUE, or Council Aulique, a Sovereign Court in the Empire of Germany. The Juriſdiction of it is general, reaches all over the Country; and the laſt Appeal for ending Suits is made thither by all the Subjects of the Empire. This Court was erected by the Emperor, who nominates all the Officers belonging to it: However, the Elector of Mentz has the Privilege of a Viſitor. This Court conſiſts of a Roman Catholick Preſident, a Vice-Chancellor preſented by the Elector of Mentz, and eighteen Aſſeſſors or Judges; nine of them Roman-Catholicks, and nine Proteſtants. They ſit upon two diſtinct Benches, one of which belongs to the Noblemen, and the other to the Lawyers. They hold their Meetings near the Emperor's Reſidence, which makes them call it the Emperor's Juſtice. This Council has a concurrent Juriſdiction with the Imperial Chamber at Spire: For here Prevention, or being firſt ſeized of a Cauſe, gives a Right to try it. His Imperial Majeſty himſelf can't break into this Privilege, nor ſtop the Proceſs, nor award the trying any Cauſe before himſelf, when the Suit is commenced in either of theſe Courts. No Cauſe, we are to obſerve, can be thus removed, without the Conſent of the States of the Empire. However, in many Caſes the Court does not proceed to Judgment without pre-acquainting the Emperor. The Language of the Court is, Fiat Votum ad Cæſarem, that is, a Report of the Proceedings is to be made to the Emperor in the Council of State. The Power of this Aulique Court determines with the Emperor's Death. On the contrary, the Imperial Chamber at Spire continues its Authority, and repreſents not only the dead Emperor, but the whole Body of the Empire, which is ſuppos'd Immortal. * Heiſſ. Traité Hiſtor. de l'Empire.

AULNAY, Alnia, a Town in France in Poitou, upon the Confines of Xaintonge, four Leagues from S. John d'Angeli to the Eaſt, and about eight from Niort to the South. Aulnay is ſuppoſed to be the Aune Donacum of the Ancients. * Baudrand.

AULOT, Aulotum, a Town in Catalonia: It ſtands within the Precinct of Campredon, upon the River Fluvia, to the North of Vic. Aulot was formerly a Biſhop's See.

AURAT, in Latin Auratus, was much eſteemed in the Reigns of Francis I. Henry II. Francis II. Charles IX. and Henry III. He had the Reputation of an excellent Critick, and performed very well in Poetry himſelf. His Latin Works are Poems in five Books, three Books of Epigrams, one of Anagrams, one of Funeral Poems and Epitaphs, two Books of Odes, two of Epithalamiums, one of Miſcellany Poetry, Euripides's Hippolitus and Phocilides tranſlated into Verſe, the Arguments or Contents of the Pſalms in Diſtichs. Theſe were all thrown into a Collection, and publiſhed in Quarto at Baſil. The Compoſitions in his old Age wanted the Force and Beauty in ſome of his former Poems: But as long as his Conſtitution laſted, no body of that Age was a better Lyrick Poet, or came nearer the Manner of Pindar and Horace. Aurat began, or revived at leaſt, the Fancy of Anagrams. Theſe Amuſements look a little lively at firſt; but thoſe who think there is any Myſtery in the Tranſpoſition of a few Letters, are much miſtaken. * Sainte-Marthe in Eulog. Doct. Gallorum, Lib. 3. Papyrius Maſſonus in Eulog. Aurat. La Croix du Maine. Joſ. Scaliger in Scaligeran. pag. 21. &c.

* AURELIAN, Lucius Domitius Aurelianus. 'Tis reported, that in the War againſt the Sarmatæ, Aurelian with his own Hand killed eight and forty Men in one Day; and that in ſeveral Battles he had killed above nine hundred and fifty. To congratulate his Valour in performing thus far, a Military Dance at Rome made the Entertainment for ſeveral Days; where Boys and Girls who made the Ball ſung the following Verſes alternatively:

Mille, mille, mille, decollavimus,
Unus homo mille decollavimus,
Mille vivat, qui mille occidit,
Tantum vini habet nemo,
Quantum fudit ſanguinis.

Mille Sarmatas, mille Francos,
Semel & ſemel occidimus,
Mille Perſas quærimus.

* Vopiſcus in vit. Aurelian, cap. 6. Eutrop. Lib. 7.

* AURELIUS, born either in Italy or Gaul, travelled into Africk, and was made Deacon in the Church of Carthage, and afterwards Biſhop of that See, Anno Dom. 395. He was a Friend of S. Auguſtin, and managed his Affairs by this Father's Direction. He convened a Council at Hippo, Anno Dom. 393, in which he preſided. This Council, which conſiſted of all the African Biſhops, paſs'd ſeveral Canons for Diſcipline S. Auguſtin, then but a Prieſt, appeared as Valerius's Aſſiſtant, and made a Speech againſt the Donatiſts. Aurelius held ſeveral other Councils at Carthage for reconciling the Donatiſts and Catholicks. He likewiſe aſſiſted at the Conference of Carthage, held in the Year 411, and was the firſt Prelate named for Arguing againſt the Donatiſts. Afterwards he attacked the Pelagians, and cenſured Celeſtius in a Council at Carthage, Anno Dom 412, and condemned Pelagius in another Council four Years forward. He juſtified theſe Cenſures in the Report he made of them by his Commiſſioners to the Popes Innocent and Zoſimus, and to the Emperor Honorius at Ravenna, and afterwards confirmed them in a Council held Anno Dom. 419. The Year when he died is not known; but his Feſtival ſtands on the 12th of July in the old Kalendar of the Church of Carthage. * S. Auguſtin's Works, African Councils, Acta Collat. Carthag. S Auguſtin's Life in the Benedictine Edition, M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

* AURENG-ZEB, ſecond Son of Cha-Gehan, Great Mogul, impriſon'd his Father, and ſeiz'd the Throne in 1660. He was a very warlike Prince, and conquer'd the Kingdoms of Decan, Viſapour, Golconda, and Carnate. 'Twas his Cuſtom to lodge himſelf in the Center of his Army, being afraid his Sons might treat him as he had done his Father. He had four Sons, Chah-Alem, Akbar, Azemdara, and Cambax. Chah-Akbar try'd to make an Inſurrection; but not ſucceeding in the Attempt, he retired into Perſia, and died there. Chah-Alem was Governor of Indoſtan, and the two other Brothers were with Aureng-Zeb in Decan near the Fortreſs of Abadanagar. Here Aureng Zeb fell ſick in February 1707. And now his two Sons Azemdara and Cambax began to quarrel, and make a Mutiny in the Camp; and their Men coming to Blows, there was about twenty killed upon the Spot. Aureng Zeb commanded the Grand Vizir Aſſend-Chan to quiet the Tumult, and order'd Azemdara to go and take Poſſeſſion of the Kingdoms of Decan, Aurengabad, Branpour, Baddar, and other Countries as far as the River Naarbada. Cambax had likewiſe Order to take Poſſeſſion of the Kingdoms of Golconda and the Territory of Carnate. Both theſe Princes obeyed their reſpective Orders: Cambax made himſelf Maſter of the Kingdom of Viſapour, and drew an Army together of thirty thouſand Men. Azemdara receiving Advice of his Father's being at the Point of Death, countermarched his Forces. Aureng-Zeb died the 4th of March following, being near a hundred Years old. He declared his eldeſt Son Chah-Alem King of Indoſtan. The Day after his Death Azemdara reach'd the Court, was recognized King by the Grand Vizir and the Officers of the Army, and proclaimed by the Name of Mahomet Azem-Chah. Here he coined Money, was very liberal in his Bounty to the Generals and Military Men, and order'd ſome of his Troops to march up to the Frontiers of Indoſtan. The General Chiriquilis-Cham, Father-in-Law to Prince Cambax, retiring with his Troops, Azemdara order'd his General Dulficar-Cham to purſue him. Dulficar-Cham came up with the Enemy, and gave them Battle, but was routed. Chah-Alem having brought the Governors and Officers into his Intereſt, and particularly the Raſpouts, the Patans, and other People, marched to Delis; and being well received here, he ſeated himſelf upon the Throne made by his Grandfather Cha-Gehan. He had Iſſue four Sons, ſo far advanced in Life, that they had Sons and Grandſons. His ſecond Son Haſſa-Meddin moved from Bengal with a great Army to reinforce his Father, ſeized Agra, and put the Governor to Death, for ſtopping ſome Letters written from Cha-Alem's Court. Prince Cambax likewiſe prepared himſelf for the War upon his receiving Chah-Alem's Letter, who promiſed to be a Father to him, and maintain him in the Diviſion of the Empire left him by Aureng-Zeb. Upon this Aſſurance Prince Cambax got himſelf crown'd King of Viſapour, and detached his Son with eighteen thouſand Horſe to ſeize the Kingdom of Golconda; which the Governor Rouſtan-deli-chan put into his Hands, with five and twenty Sacks of Roupies, which amount to twelve hundred and ſixty thouſand Crowns. Prince Cambax beſtowed the Fortreſs of Pampanacia, with all its Dependencies, upon Prince Gehan-Ghir; which obliged him to that degree, that he ſent him a Body of ten thouſand Men; and a great many Heads of Clans called Marrats came likewiſe to his Aſſiſtance. In the mean time Azemdara marched againſt Chah-Alem with a hundred and fifty thouſand Men well appointed. He came up to Aurengabad in April, where after having made a halt for a Week, and leaving the Women, the Baggage, and the Grand ſuperannuated Vizir, held on his March. Chah-Alem detached his two Sons, Haſſan Meddin and Maſhoudi, with the Main of the Army againſt him, ſtaying at Agra himſelf. Theſe two young Princes advanced to the River Naarbada, where they covered themſelves with a Retrenchment eighteen Miles in Length. Azemdara, who was but ſix and thirty Miles diſtant, came up with them; but having viewed their Retrenchments, and being apprized of the Superiority of their Forces, durſt not paſs the River, but wrote to the Vizir and others of his Party to ſend him a Reinforcement. The two Princes on the other ſide being unwilling to draw the War out in Length, quitted their Retrenchments, and marched into the Plain: And now Azemdara paſſed the River. Upon the 19th of June, the two Armies were drawn up in Battalia; but that day there happen'd only ſome little Skirmiſhes between them. Upon the 20th, they cannonaded each other, but without much Loſs. Towards the Evening Sultan Bedarbeck, Azemdara's eldeſt Son, attacked a Body of Cavalry commanded by the Sultan Mahmed-Guery, Prince Haſſan Meddin's Son. This Mahmed-Guery, after an obſtinate Fight, made Bedarbeck's Troops give way. This Prince, now deſperate, ſpurred his Elephant againſt Mahmed-Guery, and ran him through the Body with his Half-Pike. Mahmed-Guery, tho' mortally wounded, advanced upon Prince Bedarbeck, and driving his Lance through him, they both fell together. Sultan Valatabar, Azemdara's ſecond Son, attack'd Sultan Iſcandar, Sultan Maſhoudi's ſhoudi's Son; but receiving a Thruſt in the Throat, died that Evening. Azemdara, enraged at the Loſs of theſe two Sons, whom he paſſionately loved, animated his Generals to a Revenge, who promiſed not to deſert him. The next Morning, by break of Day, he found himſelf encloſed by the Enemy: But his Courage not ſinking with this Diſadvantage, he charged ſo warmly, that he had gain'd the Victory, if his Troops had fought in due Order. And notwithſtanding threeſcore thouſand of his Men were cut off in a little time, the Fight laſted eight Hours. Upon his Endeavour to rally his Troops, Sultan Razinſecader, one of Chah-Alem's Sons, powdred upon him with fifteen thouſand Horſe, and a thouſand Camels, each of them armed with crooked Scythes. This Prince, after the firſt Fire, fell on with his Sabre in his Hand, and made a great Slaughter. Azemdara was flank'd on the other ſide by Sultan Maſhoudi; ſo that now of the hundred and fifty thouſand he brought into the Field, there was but a thouſand Horſe remaining. Upon this, he quitted his Elephant, and mounted a Horſe to carry him off. His Horſe being killed, he defended himſelf with his Sword in one Hand, and a Ponyard in the other, and killed above twenty Men that attempted to ſeize him. At laſt, ſeeing Sultan Maſhoudi come up, who cryed, Take him, he ſtabbed himſelf with his Ponyard, to prevent falling into the Enemy's Hands. And thus himſelf and all his Troops being loſt, Sultan Chah-Alem remains Maſter of the Empire. * Bernier & Tavernier Voyages des Indies. Memoires du Tems.

AURICHYSAR, Aurichyſara, a Town in European Turky in Bulgaria, upon the Frontiers of Romania: 'Tis ſuppos'd the Oxylitgum of the Ancients. * Baudr.

AURIGNY, Oriniacum, Auriniaca, a ſmall Iſland belonging to the Duchy of Normandy. The Engliſh call it Orny. It belongs to the King of England, but has but one Town in it: 'Tis ſurrounded with Rocks, and is ſituated nine Miles from Cape de la Hogue, and eighteen from Guernſey.

AUROGALLUS, (Matthew) a Man of Learning of the Sixteenth Century, was born in Bohemia, and profeſſed three Languages in the Univerſity of Wittemberg. His Works are, Compendium Hebrææ Chaldæaque Grammatices, printed at Wittemberg and Baſil: De Hebræis Urbium, Regionum, Populorum, Fluminum, Montium, & aliorum Locorum, Nominibus: Liber è veteri Inſtrumento congeſtus, printed likewiſe in Octavo at the Places above-mentioned. He died in the Year 1543, and was a great Aſſiſtant to Luther in his Tranſlation of the Bible. * Epitom. Biblioth. Geſneri. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

AURSPERG, Aruſperga, a Town in Germany in the Arch-Duchy of Auſtria. 'Tis in the Earldom of Windiſh, upon the Confines of Carniola, and ſtands upon a Hill at the Head of the Gurck. Some Geographers take it for the Old Arupium or Arupenum Caſtrum. * Baudr.

AURTEMIUS, or Aktemius, General of the Roman Troops in Egypt, had an Information preferred againſt him before the Emperor Julian, for giving George Biſhop of Alexandria a ſtrong Guard for demoliſhing the Pagan Temples in that Town. He had Orders from the Court to make Search for S. Athanaſius, but made nothing on't. After the Death of Conſtantius, he came to Antioch by Julian's Order, in the Beginning of July, Ann. Dom. 362. This Prince turned him out of his Poſt, ſeized his Eſtate, and ſoon after beheaded him, for his having a hand in deſtroying the Idols above-mentioned: And thus he had the Honour of a Martyr. * Theodoret Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 3. cap. 18. Julian. Epiſt. 10. Athanaſ. Apolog. & Epiſt. ad Solit. Hermant. Vie de S. Athanaſ. Baillet Vies des Saints, 20th of Octob.

AUSBURG, (The Biſhoprick of) Auguſtanus Epiſcopatus, a ſmall German Territory in Swabia, belonging to the Biſhop of Ausburg. The Natives call it Das Biſthum von Ausburg. It ſtretches along the River Leck, ten German Miles from North to South; but 'tis very narrow in divers Places from Eaſt to Weſt, and lies all in a manner between the Rivers Leck and Wertach, from their Head to the Place where they meet. This See has likewiſe ſome Dependencies upon the Danube, between Ulm and Donawert, as Dilinguen, with the neighbouring Precinct. This Dilinguen is the Biſhop's Seat; 'twas granted to the See in 1260 by Harman, the laſt Earl, who was likewiſe Biſhop of Ausburg.

AUSPICIUM, that Part of Augury which drew Obſervation from the Noiſe and Flying of Birds. Pliny reckons the Preſages of good or ill Fortune by this way to Tireſias of Thebes. Clemens Alexandrinus makes the Phrygians the firſt in this Superſtition. The Birds moſt depended on for this Purpoſe, were the Raven, the Crow, the Owl, the Eagle, the Vultur, and the Kite. See Augury.

AUSTERVIK, a ſmall German Town in Lower-Saxony in the Principality of Halberſtadt, upon the little River Ols, belongs to the Elector of Brandenburg at preſent: 'Twas formerly the Seat of the Biſhops of Halberſtadt, from whence 'tis diſtant three German Miles, and as much from Brunſwick. This Town was called Selingſtadt. Charles the Great founded a Biſhop's See here, afterwards removed to Halberſtadt, and at laſt turned into a Secular Principality by the Proteſtants. * Heiſſ. Baudrand. Bourcon. Geograph. Hiſt.

AUSTRIA, a Country in Germany, and an Arch-Duchy: 'Tis the Upper Pannonia of the Ancients.

The Genealogy and Succeſſion of the Houſe of Auſtria.

I. Rodolphus, Earl of Hapsburg and Emperor, had two Wives, Anne, Daughter to Albert Count of Hocberg, who died Anno Dom. 1281; and Agnes Daughter to Otho Count of Burgundy, who left him no Iſſue: But by the firſt Venter he had Albertus, who ſucceeded him; Rodolphus, who died in the Cradle; Hermannus, drowned in the Rhine at eighteen Years of Age, Anno Dom 1282, having been contracted to a Daughter of Edward I. King of England; Frederick and Charles, who died young; Rodolphus, Duke of Swabia, and Landgrave of Alſatia, called by ſome the King of Bohemia: He died Anno Dom. 1308. leaving Iſſue Agnes, Daughter to Otocharus King of Bohemia, and one Son, that is, John Duke of Swabia, who after he had killed his Uncle the Emperor Albert, took the Habit of the Hermits of S. Auguſtins at Piſa, did Penance, and died there Anno Dom. 1313. Rodolphus's Daughters were, Jutta, married to Wenceſlaus VI. King of Bohemia, and dying Anno Dom. 1297: Clementia, married to Charles Martel King of Hungary and Naples, and Duke of Anjou; She died Anno Dom. 1301: Matilda or Maud, married to Lewis the Severe, Elector Palatine: ſhe died Anno Dom. 1304: Margaret, married to Theodoric Earl of Cleves: Agnes, married to Albert II. Elector and Duke of Saxony; ſhe died Anno Dom. 1327: Hedwidge, Wife to Otho Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg: Katharine, married to Otho Duke of Bavaria and King of Hungary; ſhe died Anno Dom. 1285. Rodolphus's youngeſt Daughter was Euphemia, a Nun.

II. Albert I. Duke of Auſtria, and afterwards Emperor, was ſlain Anno Dom. 1308. (See Albert.) He married the Daughter of Menard Duke of Carinthia, and Earl of Gorits; ſhe died An. Dom. 1312. Their Iſſue were Frederick, who comes next in the Succeſſion; Rodolphus, called the Debonaire, who was King of Bohemia, and died An. Dom. 1308. He had no Iſſue neither by his firſt Lady Blanch, Daughter to Philip III. King of France; nor by his ſecond, Daughter to Premiſlaus King of Bohemia. Leopold, ſurnamed the Glorious, comes next; he died An. Dom. 1327. He married Katharine, Daughter to Amadeus V. Earl of Savoy, by whom he had Katharine, married to Enguerran Earl of Coucy: Agnes, married to Boleſlaus Duke of Sileſia. Otho, ſurnamed the Hardy or the Pleaſant, fourth Son of Albert, died Anno Dom. 1338 or 1340. He married Elizabeth, Stephen Duke of Bavaria's Daughter; and afterwards Anne of Luxemberg, Daughter to John King of Bohemia. By the firſt Venter he had Frederick, dying An. Dom. 1344, at eleven Years of Age; and Elizabeth, contracted to Edward III. King of England: She died notwithſtanding unmarried, Anno Dom. 1346. By the ſecond Venter he had Leopold, who died in the Year 1345. Henry the Peaceable, Albert's fifth Son, bred an Eccleſiaſtick, was firſt a Canon, and afterwards Coadjutor of Mentz. At laſt he married and died An. Dom. 1327. He had no Iſſue by Elizabeth, Daughter to Robert Count Palatine of the Rhine, nor by his ſecond Wife Elizabeth, the Earl of Wirtzburg's Daughter. Albert, of the ſame Name with his Father, was this Emperor's ſixth Son. He'll ſtand at the Head of the Line after his Brother Frederick. Albert I's Daughters were: Agnes, married to Andrew III. King of Hungary; ſhe died a Nun An. Dom. 1363: Elizabeth, married to Frederick III. Duke of Lorrain, died in 1352: Anne, married to Herman II. Marquis of Brandenburg, and afterwards wards to Henry VI. Duke of Vratiſlaw. Katharine, contracted to the Emperor Henry VII. and afterwards married to Charles Duke of Calabria, ſhe died in the Year 1322. The laſt was Gute or Good, married to Lewis Earl of Oetingen; ſhe died in the Year 1329.

III. Frederick Duke of Auſtria, called the Fair, was choſen Emperor by ſome of the Electors An. Dom. 1314. (See Frederick.) He died in the Year 1330. He married Iſabel, Daughter to James King of Arragon, who died in Priſon. His ſecond Empreſs was Cunegunda, of the Houſe of Bavaria, Daughter to the Emperor Lewis: This Lady cry'd her Eyes out for the Loſs of her Huſband. By the firſt Marriage he had Elizabeth, engaged to Charles IV. Emperor, or, as others relate, to John of Luxemberg King of Bohemia; ſhe died before Marriage in 1334: And Anne, who married Lewis the Roman, Son to the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria; and after his Death, her ſecond Huſband was John or Henry Earl of Gorits. Frederick, by his ſecond Empreſs, had two Sons, Frederick and Leopold, who died Infants; and a Daughter Elizabeth, married to Gonthia Earl of Schwartzenbourg.

III. Albert II. called the Wiſe, ſucceeded his Brothers. (See Albert.) He died in 1358. By his Wife Jane, Daughter and Heireſs to Ulrick Count of Ferrette, he had Rodolphus, who comes next in the Succeſſion: Albert, to be mentioned after Rodolphus: Leopold, who comes after his Brother Frederick, called the Splendid, killed in Hunting by the Baron of Potendorf in 1362. Agnes, married to Henry II. Duke of Sileſia; ſhe died in the Year 1365: Margaret, married to Otho Marquis of Brandenburg of the Houſe of Bavaria; and Katharine, a Nun at Vienne.

IV. Rodolphus II. called the Ingenious, ſucceeded his Father: He married Katharine, the Emperor Charles IV's Daughter; and after her Death Margaret Counteſs of Tirol, who died in 1373. This Prince attended the Emperor his Father-in-Law into Italy, and died at Milan in 1360. He was two and twenty Years of Age. 'Twas ſuſpected he was poiſoned: He left no Iſſue.

IV. Albert III. ſurnamed the Aſtrologer, ſucceeded his Brother. (See Albert.) He died in 1395. In 1366, he married Elizabeth, Daughter to the Emperor Charles IV. She died in 1373. Afterwards he married Beatrix, Daughter to Frederick III. Burgrave of Nuremberg: By this Marriage he had Albert IV. who appears next.

V. Albert IV. called the Patient, died in 1404. (See Albert.) By his Wife Jane, Daughter to Albert of Bavaria, Earl of Holland, he had Albert V. who comes next; and Margaret or Anne, married in 1412 to Henry the Rich, Duke of Bavaria; ſhe died in the Year 1447. His ſecond Wife Maud, Lewis Duke of Bavaria's Daughter, left him no Iſſue.

VI. Albert V. Emperor, died in 1439. (See Albert.) By his Wife Elizabeth of Luxemburg, the Emperor Sigiſmond's Daughter, he had George, who died an Infant: Ladiſlaus, who comes next: Elizabeth, Wife to Caſimir the Great, King of Poland; and Anne, married to William III. Duke of Saxony; ſhe died in the Year 1461.

VII. Ladiſlaus of Auſtria, born in 1440. After his Father's Death, he was King of Hungary. (See Ladiſlaus V.) He died in 1457, being juſt upon his Marriage with Magdalen of France, Daughter to King Charles VII. And thus the Territories of the Houſe of Auſtria deſcended upon his Couſins.

IV. Leopold of Auſtria, IId of that Name, was the third Son of Albert II. ſurnamed the Brave Man at Arms. He had ſome Diſpute with his Brother Albert III. about his own Share of Inheritance; after whoſe Death he got the Lordſhip of Veldkirch, the Earldom of Hehenberg, and Marca Treviſana. Having commenced a War againſt the Swiſſers, who, as he pretended, were in Rebellion againſt him, he fought them at Sempach near Lucerne, and was killed there, July 9, 1386. He was married to Viridis, Daughter to Bernabon Count of Milan, by whom he had William, called the Ambitious, who, though married twice, died without Iſſue; Frederick, who follows; Leopold the Fat or the Proud, who attack'd the Swiſs a ſecond time at Sempach, and was beaten there; He died Anno Dom. 1411, without having any Iſſue by Katharine, Daughter to Philip the Hardy Duke of Burgundy; Erneſt, afterwards mention'd; Agnes, married to Boleſlaus Duke of Sileſia; Elizabeth, contracted to Henry Duke of Gorits; but died before Marriage; and Katharine, married to Conrade Count of Hardeck, and Burgrave of Magdeburgh.

V. Frederick of Auſtria, IIId of that Name, eldeſt Son to Leopold, had a great Share in procuring Pope John XXII's Eſcape from Conſtance at the time of the Council, Anno Dom. 1415. And by engaging in this Matter, he drew the Diſfavour of Sigiſmond upon him, who got him excommunicated in the XXVII. Seſſion of this Council. The Swiſs made their Advantage of the Juncture, ſeized great Part of his Dominions, and particularly the Earldom of Hapsburg. This Prince died in 1439. He married Elizabeth, Daughter to the Emperor Robert, by whom he had no Iſſue. His ſecond Ducheſs was Anne, Daughter to Frederick Duke of Brunſwick, by whom, beſides four Children who died Infants, he had Sigiſmond, who follows.

VI. Sigiſmond of Auſtria, Count of Tirol, called the Simple, born in 1426, and died in 1496. He was contracted to Radegunda, Daughter of Charles VII. of France. But this Princeſs dying before her Marriage, he afterwards married Eleonora, Daughter to James I. King of Scotland, by whom he had a Son, who died an Infant. After this Lady's Death, which happen'd in the Year 1440, Sigiſmond her Huſband married Katharine, Daughter to Albert Duke of Saxony; but had no Iſſue by her.

V. Erneſt I. called the Iron, was the fourth Son of Duke Leopold: He was Duke of Stiria and Carinthia, left off the Eccleſiaſtick Reſtraint he was bred to, and married in 1428. His firſt Ducheſs Margaret, Daughter to Barnimus III. Duke of Pomerania and Stetin, died without Children. His ſecond Wife Zimburga, Daughter to Ziemovite Duke of Maſſovia, dying in 1429, left him ten Children, of which Erneſt, Rodolphus, Leopold, Alexandrina, and Anne, died Infants; the other five were Frederick, who follows; Albert, called the Prodigal, or the Debonaire, who had a great Conteſt with his Brother Frederick. The Difference was taken up at Fribourg, where, to perpetuate the Memory of the Accommodation, he founded a fine Univerſity in 1450. He died in 1463, without leaving Iſſue by Maud, Daughter to Lewis Count Palatine of the Rhine: Margaret, married in 1431 to Frederick II. Elector of Saxony, dying in 1586. Katharine, married in 1445 to Charles Marquis of Baden; and Elizabeth, to Hugh Count of Wordenburgh.

VI. Frederick IV. called the Peaceable, born An. Dom. 1415. was choſen Emperor in 1440, and died in 1493. (See Frederick.) In 1453, he married Eleonora, Daughter to Edward, and Siſter to Alphonſus V. Kings of Portugal. By this Empreſs he had Chriſtopher, who died within a few Months after his Birth; Maximilian, who comes next; John, who died an Infant; Hellen, who died young in 1461; and Cunigunda, born in 1465, and in 1487 married Albert Duke of Bavaria; after whoſe Death ſhe turned Nun, and died in 1520.

VII. Maximilian I. was the firſt Arch-Duke of Auſtria, a Title given him by the Emperor his Father at his Marriage; he was born in 1459, elected Emperor in 1486, and died in 1519. (See Maximilian.) This Prince in 1477 married the richeſt Heireſs in Europe, viz. Mary, Daughter to Charles the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy; ſhe died in 1482. In 1494, Maximilian married Blanch-Mary, Daughter to Galeazzo Maria Duke of Milan, by whom he had no Iſſue. By his firſt Marriage he had Francis, who died an Infant; Philip, who comes next; and Margaret, born in 1480, contracted firſt to Charles VIII. of France, and afterwards to John Prince of Spain, Son to King Ferdinand the Catholick, and married to Philibert II. Duke of Savoy; ſhe died in 1530. (See Margaret.) The Emperor Maximilian had two natural Children, viz. George Biſhop of Brixen, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Valencia in Spain, and at laſt Biſhop of Liege: Frederick Maximilian, call'd Amberg, General of the Foot under Charles V. who died at Milan in 1553.

VIII. Philip I. call'd the Fair, Arch-Duke of Auſtria, afterwards King of Spain, born in 1478, and died in 1506. In 1496, he married Jane of Arragon, Daughter and Heir to Ferdinand V. ſurnamed the Catholick King of Arragon, Granada and Sicily; and Iſabella Queen of Caſtile and Leon: This Match rais'd the Houſe of Auſtria to the Grandeur it has ſince appear'd in, and gave Occaſion to the following Diſtich:

Bella gerant fortes: Tu, felix Auſtria, Nube;
Nam quæ Mars Aliis, dat tibi Regna Venus.

The

The Iſſue by this Marriage were, Charles, Head of the Spaniſh Branch; Ferdinand, Head of the German Branch; Eleonora, married in 1519 to Emanuel King of Portugal, and in 1530 to Francis I. King of France; ſhe died in Spain in 1558; Iſabella, married in 1515 to Chriſtian King of Denmark; ſhe died at Ghent in 1525: Mary, married in 1525 to Lewis II. King of Hungary and Bohemia; ſhe died Governeſs of the Low Countries in 1528. And laſtly, Katharine, contracted to Frederick II. Duke and Elector of Saxony, and married in 1525 to John III. King of Portugal, who parted with her; ſhe died in 1571.

The Houſe of Auſtria of the Spaniſh Line, where the Male Line failed in 1700.

IX. Charles V. born in 1500, died in 1558: He took Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of Spain in 1517, and was elected Emperor in 1519. (See Charles V.) He married Iſabella, Daughter to Emanuel King of Portugal, by whom he had Philip II. who comes next; Ferdinand, who died young; Mary, married in 1548 to the Emperor Maximilian II. ſhe died in 1603; and Jane, who in 1553 married John II. King of Portugal, and died in 1578. In 1522, he had by Margaret Vangeſt, one of his Wenches, Margaret of Auſtria, married in 1535 to Alexander de Medicis; after whoſe Death ſhe married Octavius Farneſe, Duke of Parma. The Emperor, when a Widower, had John of Auſtria, born in 1547. (See Don John.)

X. Philip II. born in 1527, died in 1598. (See Philip.) In 1543, he married Mary, Daughter to John III. King of Portugal: This Queen dying, he married Mary, Daughter to Henry VIII. King of England. This Queen died in 1558. His third Wife was Elizabeth of France, Daughter to King Henry II. ſhe was married in 1559, and died in 1568. His fourth Queen was Anne, Daughter to the Emperor Maximilian II. to whom he was married ten Years. By the firſt Venter he had Charles, call'd Don Carlos, born in 1545. (See Don Carlos, or Charles.) By the ſecond Marriage he had no Children: By his third Queen, he had Iſabella Clara Eugenia, born in 1566, and in 1599 married to Albert, Arch-Duke of Auſtria; ſhe died Governor of the Low Countries in 1573. Katharine, another Daughter of Philip, by Elizabeth of France, was born in 1567, and married in 1585 to Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy. By his fourth Queen he had Philip III. who follows, and four Sons more, who all died Infants or Minors.

XI. Philip III. born in 1578, died in 1621. In 1599, he married Margaret of Auſtria, Daughter to Charles Duke of Gratz; ſhe died in 1611. By this Marriage he had Philip Dominick Victor, who follows; Charles, born in 1607; Ferdinand, Cardinal Deacon, Archbiſhop of Toledo, and Governor of the Low Countries; he was born in 1609, and died at Bruſſels in 1641; Anne-Mary-Mauricia, born A D. 1661, and married to Lewis XIII. King of France in 1615. She died in January 1666: Mary Anne, born in 1606, and married in 1631 to the Emperor Ferdinand; ſhe died May 1646.

XII. Philip IV. ſurnamed Dominick Victor, born in 1605, and died September 1665. In 1615, he married Elizabeth, Daughter to King Henry IV. of France: This Queen dying in 1644, he married Mary-Anne of Auſtria in 1649; ſhe was the Emperor Ferdinand III's Daughter, and died in April 1696. By the firſt Marriage, he had Balthaſar-Charles-Dominick-Philip-Victor-Luke, born in 1630, and dying in 1646; and contracted to Mary-Anne of Auſtria, to whom his Father was afterwards married. Maria Tereſa, born in September 1638, and married in 1660 to Lewis le Grand, King of France; ſhe died in July 1683. By the ſecond Venter he had Charles II. who follows; and Margaret Tereſa, born July 1651, and married to the Emperor Leopold in 1666; ſhe died in March 1673. Philip IV. had likewiſe a Natural Son by a Player; his Name was Don John of Auſtria, born in 1629; he was Grand Prior of Caſtille, General of his Father's Forces, and died September 1679.

XIII. Charles II. King of Spain, born November 1661. In 1679, he married Maria Maria-Louiſa of Orleans, Daughter to Philip of France, Duke of Orleans, and Brother to Lewis le Grand the French King. This Queen dying in February 1689, Charles the next Year married Mary-Anne of Newbourg, Daughter to Philip-William, Duke of Newbourg, and afterwards Elector Palatine. Charles dying without Iſſue in 1700, the eldeſt Branch of the Male Line of Auſtria was extinguiſhed.

The German Branch of the Houſe of Auſtria.

IX. Ferdinand I. Emperor, ſecond Son of Philip I. Arch-Duke of Auſtria, was born in 1503; his Brother Charles V. got him choſen King of the Romans in 1531, and reſigned the Empire to him in 1556; he died in 1564. By his Empreſs Anne, Daughter to Ladiſlaus King of Hungary and Bohemia, he had Maximilian II. who follows: Ferdinand Duke of Tirol, Marquis of Burgaw, born in 1529, and died in 1595. He married Philippa, Daughter to Francis Welſter of Ausburg; who dying in 1580, in 1590 he married Anne-Katharine, William Duke of Mantua's Daughter, who died in 1620. By the firſt Venter he had Andrew, Cardinal Biſhop of Conſtance and Brixen, and Governor of the Low Countries; he died in 1600, being forty Years of Age. Ferdinand Duke of Tirol, by his ſecond Marriage, had Anne of Auſtria, married in 1611 to the Emperor Matthias; and another Anne Mary, a Nun. The other Children of the Emperor Ferdinand were, Charles, Arch-Duke of Gratz, afterwards mention'd; Elizabeth, born in 1526, and married in 1543 to Sigiſmond Auguſtus King of Poland; Anne, born in 1528, and in 1546 married to Albert Duke of Bavaria; Mary, born in 1530, and married to William Duke of Juliers in 1546; Magdalen, born in 1532, and a Nun at Vienna; Katharine, born in 1533, married firſt to Francis Duke of Mantua, afterwards to Sigiſmond Auguſtus King of Poland, who had married her Siſter Elizabeth; Eleonora, born in 1534, and married in 1561 to William Duke of Mantua; Barbara, born in 1539, and married in 1569 to Alphonſus II. Duke of Ferrara; Hellena a Nun; and Jane, born in 1547, and married in 1565 to Francis de Medicis, Great Duke of Tuſcany.

X. Maximilian II. Emperor, born in 1527, elected King of the Romans in 1562, died October 12, 1576. He married his Couſin Mary of Auſtria, Daughter to the Emperor Charles V. by whom he had Rodolphus II. who follows; Erneſt, Governor of the Low Countries, born in 1553, and dying in 1595; Matthias, mention'd after his Brother; Maximilian, Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, choſen King of Poland in 1587, and died in 1618; Albert, Prince of the Low Countries, born in 1597; he married Iſabella Clara Eugenia, Daughter to Philip II. King of Spain. To qualify himſelf for Marriage, he laid down his Cardinal's Cap, and died without Iſſue in 1621; (See Albert.) Anne, born in 1549, and married in 1570 to Philip II. King of Spain; Elizabeth, born in 1554, and married in 1570 to Charles IX. King of France; and Margaret, born in 1567, who died a Nun in 1633.

XI. Rodolphus II. born in 1552, was Emperor after his Father, and unmarried, died in January 1612.

XI. Matthias, born in 1557; he was firſt King of Hungary and Bohemia, and Emperor after his Father's Deceaſe: He died in 1619 without Iſſue, by Anne of Auſtria, Daughter to the Arch-Duke Ferdinand.

X. Charles II. of Auſtria, youngeſt Son of the Emperor Ferdinand II. was born in 1540. He had Stiria, Carinthia, and Carniola ſettled upon him, and reſided at Gratz; he died in Auguſt 1590, having had ſeveral Children by Mary Albert, ſecond Duke of Bavaria's Daughter, married to him in 1570. His Children, beſides thoſe who died Infants, or Minors were, Ferdinand II. who follows; Maximilian-Erneſt, Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, born in 1583; Leopold, who ſtands at the Head of the Branch of Inſpruck; Charles, born after his Father's Death in 1590; he was Maſter of the Teutonick Order, and Biſhop of Breſlaw, and died December 1624; Anne, born in 1573, and in 1592 married to Sigiſmond III. King of Poland; Mary Chriſtina, born in 1574, and married in 1595 to Sigiſmond Bathori, Prince of Tranſylvania: This Princeſs being parted from her Huſband, died a Nun in 1621: Eleonora, born in 1582, died a Nun in 1620; Margaret, born in 1582, married Philip III. King of Spain in 1599; Conſtantia, born in 1588, and in 1605 married to Sigiſmond III. King of Poland; and Mary Magdalen, born in 1589, and in 1608 married to Coſmo III. Great Duke of Tuſcany.

XI. Ferdinand II. Emperor, born in 1578, was adopted by the Emperor Matthias, who got him elected King of Bohemia in 1617, and King of Hungary in 1618. He was choſen Emperor in 1619, and died in February 1637.

In 1600, he married Mary-Anne, Daughter to William Duke of Bavaria. This Princeſs dying in 1616, he married Eleonora de Gonzaga, Daughter to Vincent I. Duke of Mantua, by whom he had no Iſſue. By the firſt Venter he had Ferdinand III. who follows; Leopold William, born in 1614; he was Biſhop of Paſſaw, of Strasburgh, Halberſtadt, Olmutz and Breſlaw, Maſter of the Teutonick Order, Abbot of Mourbatch, Governor of the Low Countries from 1647 to 1656, and died in November 1662: Mary Anne, born in 1610, and married in 1635 to her Uncle Maximilian, Elector of Bavaria; and Cecilia Renata, born in 1611, and in 1637 married to Ladiſlaus King of Poland.

XII. Ferdinand III. Emperor, born in 1608, died in 1657. In 1631 he married Mary-Anne of Auſtria, Daughter to Philip III. King of Spain. His ſecond Princeſs was Maria Leopoldina, Daughter to the Arch-Duke Leopold. His third Match was with Eleonora de Gonzaga, Charles II. Duke of Mantua's Daughter. By the firſt Match he had Ferdinand-Francis, born September 1633, King of Bohemia in 1646, of Hungary in 1647, King of the Romans in 1653, and died in July 1654: Leopold Ignatius who follows; Mary-Anne, born in 1634, and married in 1646 to Philip Balthaſar, Infant of Spain: This Prince dying before the Conſummation of the Marriage, ſhe married his Father Philip IV. King of Spain in 1649. The Emperor Ferdinand, by his ſecond Marriage, had Ferdinand-Charles-Joſeph, born in 1649; he was Biſhop of Paſſaw and Breſlaw, Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, and died January 1664. This Emperor's Children, by the third Venter were, Eleonora Maria, born in 1653, and married firſt to Michael Wieſnoviski, King of Poland, and afterwards in 1678 to Charles Leopold Duke of Lorrain; and Anna Joſepha, born in 1654, married in 1678 to John William Prince of Newburgh, and afterwards Elector Palatine.

XIII. Leopold I. His other Names were Ignatius-Francis-Balthaſar-Joſeph-Felician; he was born June 9, 1640, elected King of Hungary and Bohemia in 1655, and Emperor in 1658. He died May 5, 1705. (See Leopold.) His firſt Empreſs was Margareta Tereſa of Auſtria, Daughter to Philip IV. King of Spain: This Empreſs dying in 1673, he married Claudia Felicitas of Auſtria, Ferdinand Charles Arch-Duke of Gratz's Daughter; and loſing this Empreſs in 1676, he married in the following December Eleonora-Magdalen-Tereſa, Daughter to Philip-William Duke of Newburgh, afterwards Elector Palatine. By the firſt Venter, the Emperor had Maria-Antonietta-Joſepha, born in 1669, and in 1685 married to Maximilian Emanuel, Elector of Bavaria. The Emperor, by his ſecond Marriage, had four Children, who died Infants. His Iſſue by the third Marriage are, Joſeph-Jacob-Ignatius, who follows; Charles-Francis-Joſeph, &c. Arch-Duke, born October 1, 1685; Maria-Anna-Joſepha, &c. born September 1683, and married in July 1708 to John V. King of Portugal.

XIV. Joſeph XV. Emperor of his Family, born July 26, 1678; declar'd King of Hungary in 1687, and King of the Romans in January 1690. In 1699, he married Wilhelmina Amelia, Daughter to John Frederick of Brunſwick, Duke of Hanover, and Benedictina-Philippa-Henrietta Counteſs Palatine. By this Empreſs he had Maria-Joſepha, born December 1699; and Maria-Amelia, born in 1701. This Emperor died Auguſt 6, 1711.

XV. Charles VI. Sixteenth Emperor of his Family, mounted the Imperial Throne after the Death of his Elder Brother Joſeph, who died without Iſſue Male. Charles was elected Emperor at Frankfort October 1, 1711, and in 1707 he married the Princeſs Elizabetha-Chriſtiana of Wolfembuttel, who quitted the Lutheran Religion, and turn'd Roman Catholick.

* AUTOCEPHALI. At firſt Metropolitans were Autocephali, or Independent. In Proceſs of Time, the Biſhops of the great Cities of the Empire challenged a Right over the Provinces within their reſpective Dioceſes; their Claim was to ordain Metropolitans, to convene a Synod of the Dioceſe, and to have a general Superintendency over all the Provinces within that Precinct. Such were the Privileges and Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Rome in the Dioceſe of the Vicariat of Rome, or the Suburbicary Provinces: The Biſhop of Alexandria had the ſame Juriſdiction in the Provinces of Egypt, Libya, and Thebais; and the Biſhop of Antioch's Pretenſions were the ſame within that large Precinct called the Eaſtern Dioceſe. The Biſhop of Epheſus ſeems to have had ſomething of the ſame Pre-eminence and Juriſdiction in the Aſian Dioceſe; and ſo had the Biſhop of Cæſarea in Cappadocia in the Dioceſe of Pontus. Afterwards the Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople ſtretch'd his Juriſdiction upon Thrace, and the two Dioceſes laſt mentioned. However, ſeveral Churches in the Eaſt and Weſt remained Autocephali ſtill; that is, independent as to the Ordination of Biſhops of any Patriarch or Exarch. In the Weſt, the Biſhop of Carthage was independent of the other Patriarchs, and Primate of the African Dioceſes. The Biſhop of Milan at firſt was Head of the Vicariat of Italy, and not ordained by the Biſhop of Rome. In Gaul and Spain, 'twas not the Cuſtom for the Metropolitans to receive their Ordinations from the Biſhops of Rome. The Metropolitan of Cyprus enjoined the ſame Independent Privilege; which was confirmed by the General Council of Epheſus: 'Twas in Oppoſition to the Pretenſions of the Biſhop of Antioch. * Concil. Epheſ. Act VII. Concil. in Trullo. Canon. XXXIX. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latin. M. Du Pin de Antiqua Eccleſiæ Diſciplina.

AUTOLEON. When the Gotomatæ had a War with the Locrians, 'twas the Cuſtom of theſe latter to leave a void Place in their Army for Ajax Locrenſis, as if he had been alive among them. Autoleon, General of the Grotoniatæ, obſerving this void Space, charged furiouſly into it; upon which he receiv'd a Wound in the Breaſt by a Spectre in Ajax's Shape: The Wound grew worſe and worſe, till upon his conſulting the Oracle, he got himſelf carry'd into an Iſland in the the Euxine Sea, call'd Achillea; and here, after having ſatisfy'd Ajax's Manes and ſome other Heroes, was perfectly cured. Photius ex Conone, Pauſan. Lib. 3.

AUTUM, Autumnus, the third Seaſon of the Year. Some derive it from Augeo, quòd frugibus Annum augeat. Heſiod in his Theogonia makes the Seaſons Daughters to Jupiter and Themis, and gives us but three, no more than Orpheus had done before him. Phidias, the famous Statuary, follow'd this Diviſion, and cut only three Figures of theſe Goddeſſes. The Egyptians likewiſe made no more than Spring, Summer, and Autumn, aſſigning each four Months, and repreſenting them by a Roſe, an Ear of Corn, an Apple, or a Grape. Nonnus, in the end of the Eleventh Book of his Dionyſiaca, ſplits the Year into four Seaſons. Lindwood has a Diſtich to mark the four Seaſons of the Year.

Dat Clemens Hyemem, dat Petrus Ver, Cathedratus
Æſtuat Urbanus, Autumnat Bartholomæus.

* Hoffman. Lexicon. Univerſ.

AUXILIUS, an Author of the Ninth Century, ordain'd Prieſt by Pope Formoſus; he maintain'd the Validity of this Pope's Ordinations in two Tracts upon this Subject. The firſt is only a Collection of Eccleſiaſtical Precedents and Authorities from the Fathers, to prove a Biſhop depriv'd of his See might be promoted to the ſame Functions in another Church, and that Ordinations made by Uncanonical Biſhops are Valid. His ſecond Performance, written by way of Queſtion and Anſwer, replies to the Objections rais'd to prove Pope Formoſus's Ordinations Invalid. Theſe two Tracts Morinus has inſerted in his Book de Ordinationibus. Auxilius ſhews a great deal of Learning, conſidering the Age he liv'd in, and writes with great Plainneſs and Reſolution. * Sigebert de Script. Eccleſ. Cap. 12. Morin. de Ordinationibus. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IX.

AXERAFA, a little Country in Andaluſia in Spain, it makes one Quarter of the Territory of Seville. 'Tis ſo call'd from an Arabian Word, which ſignifies the Inheritance of Olives; 'tis thirty Miles long, and eighteen broad, and in Circuit about threeſcore. The chief Town in it is Triana, to which may be added Haznacacar, Alcala-de-Rio, and about fifteen Caſtles and other Villages. * Roderico Cara.

AYAN, the Coaſt of Ayan, Azania Regio, a great Country in Africk in the Upper Æthiopia, ſtretching from the Equinoctial Line to the twelfth Degree of Southern Latitude. It has about nine hundred Miles Length upon the Ocean, or Sea of Zanguebar, and two hundred and twenty upon the Streights of Babel-Mandel, or the Arabian Sea. The Length of it grows leſs and leſs from the North to the Line, where 'tis not above an hundred and eighty Miles broad. 'Tis bounded with the Kingdom of Dangali on the North, with the Streight of Babel Mandel on the Eaſt, with the Sea of Zanguebar to the South, and on the Weſt with Abyſſinia, from which 'tis parted by a long Chain of Mountains. The Country produces good Store of Millet, Barley, Fruit and Paſture. They are well ſtock'd with Horſes, Cows, and Sheep; Honey, Wax, Frankincenſe, Pepper, Ivory, Gold; and a great many Slaves are exported from hence. The Natives are tauny, excepting ſome Blacks towards the Line; they are moſtly Mahometans. The Coaſt of Ayan is divided into four Governments; the Kingdoms of Adel, of Adea, of Mandagono, and Brava.

and

AYMARANES, a People of Southern America in Peru, within the Government of Lima. They ſpread a great way in the Country towards Cuſco, and the River Apurima. The Aymaran Language is much uſed in Peru. 'Tis likewiſe ſpoken by the Cauches, Canas, Caranguas, Collas, and Collaguas. * Baudrand.

AYOTECOS, Ayoteci, Mountains ſo call'd upon the ſcore of their extraordinary Height. They are ſituated in the Province of Claſcala near the Pacifick Sea. * Baudrand.

AYTON, and Aiton, Aitona, a ſmall Town of Greece in Livadia, about fifteen Miles from the Dardanells of Lepanto to the North. The Town is a Biſhop's See, and Suffragan to Lepanto: 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Calydon of the Ancients. * Baudrand.

AYUTLA, a River in Southern America; it runs through the Audience of Guatimala, near the Frontiers of Soconuſco, and falls into the Pacifick Sea. * Baudrand.

AZARIAS. The firſt of this Name was the fourteenth High-Prieſt. He ſucceeded his Father Ahimaas, and at his Death left that Poſt to his Son Joram. 'Tis hard to determine how many Years he was High-Prieſt; ſome Authors give him eighteen Years, that is, from the Year of the World 3095. Theſe Chronologers ſuppoſe his Son Johanan ſucceeded him; but between theſe two High-Prieſts Joſephus throws in Joram, Iſus, Axioram, Phidias, Sudeas, and Julus, who ſucceeded in a direct Line to each other. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 10. Cap. 11. Tirin. Chronolog. Cap. 42.

The ſecond Azarias was Johanan's Son. Joſephus calls this Azarias Eurick. This High-Prieſt aſſerted God Almighty's Honour with great Reſolution, and ſupported his Character very worthily. 'Twas in his time that King Uzziah came in the Sacerdotal Robes upon a Feſtival, and ruſh'd into the Temple to offer Incenſe upon the Golden Altar. Azarias, attended with eighty Prieſts, immediately follow'd him, made him ſenſible he was about an unlawful Miniſtration, admoniſh'd him to put off his Religious Habit, to leave the Cenſer behind him and go out of the Temple; and that in caſe he refus'd to comply, he would draw the Vengeance of God upon him for ſo great a Sacrilege. Uzziah being a haughty Prince, and graſping at Spiritual Juriſdiction, deſpiſed the Remonſtrances of the High-Prieſt, and was immediately ſtruck with Leproſy: Upon this, the Prieſts drove him out of the Temple; and being no longer fit to govern upon the ſcore of his Diſeaſe, he was oblig'd to retire and live privately. * 2 Chron. xxvi.

III. Azarias was likewiſe a High-Prieſt, and ſucceeded his Father Hilkiah ſix hundred and twenty five Years before the Incarnation. Seraiah his Son was the next in this Dignity. Joſephus calls him Sereas. * 1 Chron. vi. 14. Tirin. Chronolog. Sacr.

IV. Azarias was the High-Prieſt Zadoc's Son; but did not ſucceed him in that Office. * 1 Kings iv.

V. Azarias was Nathan's Son, and Captain of King Solomon's Guards. * 1 Kings 4.

VI. Azarias, the ſixth of this Name, who was likewiſe call'd Uzziah, was Son to Amaziah King of Judah: This Azarias was but ſixteen Years old at his Acceſſion to the Crown: 'Twas in the Year before the Incarnation 826, when his Father was ſlain by the Conſpirators at Lakiſh. This young Prince began his Reign with a great deal of Enterprize and Succeſs: He was a good Juſticer, and brave in his Perſon. The firſt Proof of his Military Qualifications was made upon the Philiſtines: He took three conſiderable Towns from them, Garth, Jabneh, and Aſhdod. He demoliſh'd the Walls of theſe Towns, built Citadels, and put Garriſons in them. The Arabians of the Country of Gurbaal, and the Mahunims, were defeated by him. The Ammonites came to Submiſſion and paid Tribute, and he carry'd his Conqueſts to the Frontiers of Egypt. After having thus diſtinguiſh'd himſelf, and diſabled his Enemies, he put Jeruſalem in a Condition of Strength, and rebuilt the Walls, demoliſh'd to the Length of three hundred Cubits by Joaſh King of Iſrael. He likewiſe built ſeveral Towers or Obſervatories an hundred and fifty Cubits high within the Town, ſeveral Forts without the Walls, furniſh'd the City with Conduits, and made a great many fine Gardens and Vineyards. This Prince, that he might be always in a Condition to defend his Kingdom, kept up an Army of three hundred ſeventy thouſand diſciplin'd Soldiers, well Arm'd and Officer'd. In ſhort, as long as he ſerv'd God Almighty, Succeſs attended him in every Undertaking; but at laſt, being elated by Proſperity, and uſurping the High-Prieſt's Office, he was ſtruck with Leproſy, as has been already obſerv'd. He reign'd fifty two Years; during which time a great many memorable Occurrences came up. In his fifth Year the Olympiads began. In his ninth, Sardanapalus King of Aſſyria loſt his Kingdom by the Revolt of Fulbelocus and Arbaces, two of his Generals. In his ſecond or third Year, Hoſea began his Prophecy; and in the fifth and ſixth, Joel and Jonah executed the ſame Function: Amos appear'd with that Commiſſion in his twenty third Year, and Iſaiah in his twenty fifth. 'Twas this Year King Azarias was puniſh'd with Leproſy, which Diſeaſe continued upon him to his Death, that is, twenty ſeven Years. * 1 Kings xv. 2 Chron. xxvi. Tirin. Chronol. Sacr.

* AZAZEL. Bochart believes Azazel an Arabian Word, which ſignifies Going off or Departure. Dr. Spencer believes it a Devil; and that when the Goat was ſent to Azazel, the Meaning is, 'twas left to the Diſpoſal of that Evil Spirit. The Caballiſts and Julian the Apoſtate are of Spencer's Opinion; neither does Origen differ much from it. Monſieur Le Clerc thinks Azazel ſignifies a Precipice; but theſe are all unſupported Conjectures: The moſt probable Opinion is that which derives the Word from Hez a Goat, and Azal which ſignifies is gone. When the High-Prieſt came into the Sanctuary upon the great Day of Expiation, he brought two Goats to the Door of the Tabernacle, and here a Lot was drawn for determining which was to be ſacrificed, and which let looſe. He put his Hands upon the Head of the latter, and pray'd that the Puniſhment they had deſerv'd for their Miſbehaviour, might fall upon this Goat. After this Prayer, a Prieſt, as ſome Interpreters will have it, carried the Goat into a Deſart, and diſtant Place, threw him down from an Eminence, and ſo left him. * Levit. xvi. Bochart. Hierozoicon. Spencer de Leg. Hebr. Ritualibus. Diſſert. de Capro emiſſ. &c.

AZELBOURG, Azelburgum, formerly called Auguſta Acilia. It belong'd to the Vindelicii. 'Tis now ſunk to a Village. It ſtands in Bavaria upon the Danube, near Straubing. * Baudrand.

AZOTUS, called Aſa by Joſephus, a Town in the Tribe of Judah, at the Foot of a Mountain, famous for the Defeat and Death of Judas Maccabeus. This Judas, with a Handful of Men, charged a numerous Army under the Command of Bacchides, and fought a whole day with extraordinary Courage: And perceiving Bacchides in the Right Wing at the Head of his Troops, he pick'd out the beſt of his own Men, and attacked him with ſo much Vigour and Bravery, that he broke the Enemy's Battalions, made them retire with Precipitation, and purſued them to the Top of the Mountain Aſa. Bacchides's Left Wing concluding rightly that the Maccabees Courage exceeded his Conduct, and that he had ventur'd too far, powder'd immediately upon him, and perfectly enclos'd his Men. The Jewiſh General finding it impoſſible to get clear of the Enemy, made a bold Stand, and did a great deal of Execution: But being charged on every ſide, and tired with Fighting and Slaughter, he fainted with Wearineſs, and died upon the Spot. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 12. cap. 19. 1 Maccab. ix.

AZUA, a Town in America: 'Tis in the Antilles, upon the Southern Coaſt of the Iſland of S. Domingo. It had a good Haven, and well frequented with Merchants. * Baudrand.

AZUMAR, Septem Ara, Azumara, a Town in the Kingdom of Portugal in the Province of Alentejo, between the Towns of Portalegre and Elvas.

BA-

B.

BABEL. The Holy Scripture declares expreſly againſt Caſaubon's Opinion, who fancies that the Diverſity of Languages was only the Effect, not the Cauſe of the Peoples parting from each other. However, S. Gregory Nyſſen gives Countenance to this Expoſition. The greateſt Part of old Writers reckon the Number of the Languages from the Heads of Families deſcended from Noah's Sons. Theſe the Hebrew Text and the Vulgate compute at ſeventy, and the Septuagint at ſeventy two. Other Expoſitors leſſen the Number very much, and reduce them to ſix or ſeven Original Languages.

Nimrod, Ham's Grandſon, and Noah's Great Grandſon, projected the Building the Tower of Babel, not only for perpetuating his Memory, but for a Shelter in caſe another Deluge ſhould happen. For this Purpoſe he made Choice of a Champagne Situation in the Land of Shinar, afterwards called Chaldea. According to Archbiſhop Uſher, this Building was begun in 1757, one hundred and one Years after the Flood, and two thouſand two hundred forty ſeven before the Chriſtian Computation. The Scripture informs us it was in the Time of Phaleg, ſo called upon the ſcore of the Diviſion of the Nations. If the Computation is to begin at his Birth, it will fall upon the hundred and firſt Year, according to the Hebrew Original; which ſeems too ſhort a Period for increaſing Mankind for this purpoſe. 'Tis more probable this Undertaking was begun about the middle of Phaleg's Life, that is, about two hundred Years after the Flood. The Materials for this prodigious Building was Brick, with Bitumen for Mortar. Tho' the Figure of this Tower can't certainly be determin'd, 'tis generally believed 'twas round. When 'twas carried up to a very conſiderable Height, God miraculouſly confounded their Language, to ſtop their going on; and for this Reaſon the Tower was called Babel, that is, Confuſion. The Greek and Latin Poets having an imperfect Tradition of this Event, patch'd the Hiſtory with Romance. They would make us believe that the Giants attempting to ſcale the Sky, and dethrone the Gods, threw ſeveral Mountains upon each other; that Jupiter launch'd his Thunder upon this bold Enterprize, broke down all the Stories of Mountains, and bury'd them under the Ruins. Now it's not very difficult to recover the Truth out of this Fiction. For the purpoſe, Nimrod and his Subjects being Men of a vaſt Bulk, are repreſented by the Poets as Giants: The Tower, of an extraordinary Breadth and Heighth, are Pelion and Oſſa in Mythology; which, to make the Deſign practicable, are piled upon one another.

'Tis pretended the Ruins of this famous Tower are ſtill to be ſeen about three quarters of a Mile from Euphrates to the Eaſt. The Bottom is almoſt ſquare, and about eleven hundred and fifty Paces in Compaſs. 'Tis much of a Pyramidal Figure, grows leſs and leſs in the Height, and ſhoots up into a Point. Theſe Ruins are moſt Brick not burnt, but dried in the Sun; the Cement is Mortar, mix'd with ſmall broken Reeds, to bind the Building, and make it incorporate. However, in ſome Places, where the Building required moſt Strength, burnt Bricks are made uſe of, bound in with Bitumen, as Pietro della Valla reports. This Gentleman drew the Northern and Southern Proſpect of theſe Ruins; and at his Return to Rome, made a Preſent of his Drawings to Father Kircher, who got them graved. But after all, 'tis very queſtionable whether theſe are the Ruins of the Tower of Babel. Thoſe who declare for the Affirmative, go upon the following Reaſons: Firſt, That 'tis the general Tradition of the Country, where they call this great Heap of Bricks Babel. Secondly, They argue from the Situation, that theſe Ruins are in the Plain of Shinar, where the old Tower was built. Thirdly, That the Holy Scripture aſſures us, that this Building was made with Brick, cemented by Bitumen. Now theſe are the Materials of the Ruins ſtill remaining. * Kircher. Turris Babel, Lib. 2.

BABELOT, Chaplain to the Duke de Montpenſier, in the Reign of Charles IX. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Cruelty to an extraordinary degree; and had it not been for this Quality, it's probable we had heard nothing of him. He was a Franciſcan; and upon the breaking out of the Civil Wars, quitted the Cloiſter for the Camp. His exceſſive Averſion to the Calviniſts, put him upon this Adventure. His Practice was extremely foreign to his Character and Profeſſion: For inſtead of uſing his Intereſt to ſave the Lives of thoſe who fell into Montpenſier's Hands, he ſolicited violently for Executions, and would not endure a ſingle Man ſhould be pardon'd. This Thirſt for the Blood of the Calviniſts encreas'd upon him towards the latter end of the War; inſomuch that his barbarous Temper made him a Mark to the Enemy. Thus when the Prince of Condé's Forces underſtood that Babelot had uncautiouſly thrown himſelf into Champigny, a Town of Poitou, belonging to the Duke of Montpenſier, they immediately marched thither, made a furious Aſſault, and carried the Place. The Satisfaction they had in being poſſeſs'd of a Perſon ſo remarkably hated, enclined them to pardon the Burghers, and diſcharge all their Revenge upon Babelot. They hanged him upon a Gibbet of unuſual Height: And tho' he had ſome Time to prepare for Death, 'twas thought the Reſpite was only to give them Leiſure to reproach him for his Cruelty. The Duke de Montpenſier, who had a Kindneſs for Babelot, went deep in his Revenge when he light upon any of the Hugonots. Theſe Reprizals made the War very rough for ſeveral Weeks, inſomuch that neither Party would give Quarter to each other. Briſac's Troops cut the Garriſon of Mirebeau in Pieces, notwithſtanding they had capitulated in Form; and d'Andelot treated that of S. Florent in the ſame manner. * Varillas Hiſtoire de Charles IX. Brantome Memoires, Tom. III.

BABENHAUSEN, a Town in Suabia upon the River Guntz, between the River Burgaw and that of Memmingen. Some Geographers take this Town for that called Fabiana Caſtra, which others will have the Town of Burgaw. * Matty. Diction.

* BABYLAS, Biſhop of Antioch, ſucceeded Zebinus in the Year 238, and governed this See thirteen Years. 'Tis certain he died for maintaining the Creed: But Authors are not agreed about the Time and Manner of his Martyrdom. Euſebius and S. Jerom report, that upon his profeſſing himſelf a Chriſtian in the Reign of Decius, he was put in Priſon and died there. S. Chryſoſtom, who makes a Panegyrick upon this Saint, relates him brought out of the Priſon and executed. S. Epiphanius, Sozomen, and Theodoret, only mention him a Martyr, and aſſign his Sufferings to Decius's Reign. But Philoſtorgius, the Acts of the Martyrdom of S. Babylas, the Alexandrian Chronicle, and the greateſt part of the modern Greeks, put his Martyrdom to the Reign of Carinus and Numerianus, and relate him beheaded. This has made ſome Writers imagine there were two Babylas's; but this Conjecture has no Bottom. 'Tis more probable that this Biſhop of Antioch died in Decius's Perſecution, Anno Dom. 250, or 251. S. Chryſoſtom reports, that this Saint drove an Emperor out of the Church, and put him under Penance, for executing a King's Son then Hoſtage. Some Writers will have it, that this Emperor was Philip, who is ſuppoſed to have been a Chriſtian. Euſebius, in the VIth Book of his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, tells us that a Biſhop would not ſuffer him to come into his Church, till he had paſſed through a Courſe of Diſcipline for his Miſbehaviour. But S. Chryſoſtom neither mentions the Emperor's Name, nor Euſebius the Biſhop's. The Circumſtances both of the Hiſtory and Time reſtrain the two Relations to a ſingle Inſtance; that the Emperor was Philip, who put young Gordian to Death; and that S. Babylas had barr'd him the Church, and put him under Diſcipline. But the Subſtance of this Story ſeems not well atteſted: There is Reaſon to queſtion the Emperor Philip's being a Chriſtian; and if he was ſo, there's no Probability he ever declared himſelf of that Religion, and much much leſs of his doing Penance. S. Babylas's Relicks had a great Regard paid them at Antioch, where two Churches were built in Honour of his Memory; the one beyond the River Orontes, mentioned by S. Chryſoſtom; and the other built by Gallus, over againſt the Temple of Daphné. 'Tis ſaid, that as ſoon as S. Babylas's Relicks were brought hither, Apollo's Oracle was ſtruck mute: And that when the Emperor Julian came to Antioch, Anno Dom. 362, and open'd the Temple of Daphné, he could receive no Oracular Reponſes till Babylas's Relicks were removed, and lodged in the old Church. But let this be as it will, 'tis certain the Temple of Daphné was ſoon after thrown down by an Earthquake: And this Accident the Chriſtians believed the Effect of S. Babylas's Prayers. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 6. cap. 29. & 34. Chryſoſt. Orat. de Sanct. Babyla. Orat. contra Gentiles. Homil. de Laudib. Sancti Pauli. Epiphan. Philoſtorg. Sozomen. Lib. 5. cap. 19, 20. Theodoret Hiſt. Lib. 3. cap. 10. 16. & 19. Evagr. Lib. 1. cap. 16. Cronic. Paſchal. M. Du Pin, three firſt Cent.

*BACCHYLIDES, the laſt of the nine Lyrick Poets in Time, but not in Value. He wrote with great Decency and Reſerve, and is one of thoſe Horace propoſed for his Imitation. Ammianus Marcellinus informs us, that the Emperor Julian was particularly pleaſed with the Writings of this Poet. Thoſe who write Notes upon Pindar report, that Hiero King of Sicily preferred Bacchylides to Pindar.

BACHA, Paſcha, or Baſſa, an honourable Diſtinction in the Grand Seignior's Court. Thoſe of this Title are commonly Governors of Towns and Provinces. Bacha, or Baſſaw of the Sea, is the ſame with our Admiral, and commands the Turkiſh Fleet. We are to obſerve, that in the Ottoman Empire the Baſſaws can't make their Wealth or their Titles deſcend upon their Children: The Diſtinction drops at their Death; and as for their Wealth, the Grand Seignior is ſole Heir. The Pages or Favourites at Court are preferred to this Dignity, no other Turks being capable of ſuch Promotion. The Baſſaw's Children can pretend no higher than the Command of a Ship, tho' the Poſt of Grand Vizir is often beſtowed upon their Fathers. * Tavernier, Relation du Serail. Rycaut of the Turkiſh Empire.

BACHARA, a Town in Great Tartary in Aſia. 'Tis ſituated in Usbeck, upon a River which falls into the Caſpian. * Matty. Diction.

BACHILLUS, a Biſhop of Corinth, in the Second Century. He wrote a Letter in the Name of the Biſhops of Achaia concerning the keeping of Eaſter, occaſion'd by the Diſpute between Pope Victor and the Aſian Prelates. When Bachillus wrote, the Churches of Achaia kept Eaſter upon the Sunday, agreeably to the Cuſtom of Alexandria and Rome. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 5. cap. 23. Hieron. in Catal. de Script. Eccl. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. II.

BADONVEILLER, a conſiderable Town in the Duchy of Lorrain, ſtands between Baccarat and Salm, nine Miles from the firſt, and fifteen from the latter. * Matty. Diction.

BADIVEISS, or Badenweiſs, near Muldaw; 'tis one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Bohemia, and the biggeſt in the Circle of Bethyn. 'Twas always firm to the Houſe of Auſtria during the Civil Commotions.

BAECA, or Baeza, a Town in Southern America, Capital of Los Quixos, a Province of Peru; 'tis between the Towns of Queita and Sevilla del Oro. * Matty. Diction.

BAFFO, Paphos Nova, Neapaphos, a Town in the Iſle of Cyprus; it ſtands upon the Weſtern Coaſt, and has a Caſtle and a Haven near the Cape Cruſoco over againſt the Iſlands of Mullis: 'Tis a Biſhop's See, Suffragan to the Biſhop of Nicoſia; it ſtands ſeven Miles from the Ruins of the Old Paphos. The Cape of Baffo, formerly Drepannum Promontorium, and now Capo-Bianco, lies to the South of the Town Baffo.

BAGA, a Town in Catalonia in Spain, ſtands near the Head of the River Lobregat, between the Towns of Urgel and Vich. * Matty. Diction.

BAGAUDE, a Name of one of the Gates of Paris, formerly call'd Bauda, or Porta Bauderii; but the right Name is Porta Bagauda, or Porta Bagaudarum. To let the Reader into this Etymology, we muſt obſerve that the Legion Julius Cæſar left in a Fort upon the River Marne, to bridle the Pariſians, was call'd Legio Alaudarum. The Legion had this Name becauſe they had a Lark upon their Helmets. This Word Alaudarum was afterwards, by the Corruption of Language, chang'd to Bagaudarum. Theſe Troops entering into an Alliance with the Gauls, increas'd to the Number of a diſtinct Nation, call'd Bagaudæ: They grew ſo powerful afterwards, as to make themſelves Maſters of the Province about Paris, where their Fort was built. Two of their Chiefs, Amandus and Julianus, preſum'd ſo far towards the latter end of the Third Century, as to get themſelves proclaim'd Emperors. This Inſurrection oblig'd the Emperor Maximilian to march into Gaul Ann. Dom. 285. This Prince defeated the Rebels, raz'd their Fort, and left nothing but the Ditches remaining. Notwithſtanding this Demolition, this Part of the Pariſian Precinct was called Regio vel Patria Baugaudarum, as long as the Romans had any Footing in the Country. By the Name of Bagaudæ, thoſe Peaſants and Slaves were diſtinguiſhed who made an Inſurrection in Armorica, and drew almoſt all the Gauliſh Provinces on this ſide the Loire into a Revolt, Anno Dom. 435. They were headed by Tibatro, who was afterwards ſeized with the other principal Rebels by Aëtius's Troops, commanded by Litorius. Two or three Years forward, the Bagaudæ of Spain, in the Neighbourhood of Tarragon, roſe upon the Government, and were defeated by the Romans and Viſigoths. * Eutrop. Lib. 9. Oroſ. Lib. 7. Iſidore in Chron. De Tillemont Hiſtoire des Empereurs, &c.

BAGDAD, (The Beglerbeg of) Part of Turky in Aſia, and one of the great Governments of that Empire, ſo called from Bagdad, the chief Town. It takes in Part of the Province of Yerach. There are ten Singiacks or Subordinate Governors within it. * Baudrand.

BAGIAT, a ſmall Country between Æthiopia and Nubia, to the Weſt of the Red Sea. The Inhabitants are very bold and enterprizing, and make frequent Incurſions upon their Neighbours. At Grand Caire they call them Fonges, and the Baſſaw of Girge is oftentimes obliged to ſend Troops to ſuppreſs them. Pliny mentions Bagada as lying between the Arabians and Ethiopians. * D'Herbelot Bibliotheque Orientale.

BAGNI d'Aſinello, in Latin Aquæ Viterbienſes, Baths near the Town of Viterbo in the Patrimony of S. Peter in Italy. Some Geographers will have it that a Tuſcan Town called Fanum Voltumnæ was the Place where the Baths of Aſinello are. * Matty. Diction.

BAGNOLI, or Bagnioli, (Julius Cæſar) left ſeveral Italian Poems, and died very wealthy and diſtinguiſhed in 1600. He was a Perſon of a very nice Judgment, and performed as well in Poetry as any one of that Age. His Failing was, his being too hard to pleaſe himſelf in his Compoſitions. He filed and poliſhed till he wore off the Strength of the Metal. He knew how to draw the Out-lines exactly, and give a ſtrong Colouring; but held his Pencil too long, and was over anxious in the finiſhing Part. His Pieces moſt valued are the Tragedy of the Arragonians, and the Judgment or Deciſion of Paris upon Mount Ida. Theſe Performances would be without Exception, had they not been over-laboured, and too much Care taken about them. There ſeems too much Luſtre and Glittering; the Lights appear ſtrong every where, without leaving any Room for Shadows. * Janus Nycius Erythræus, Pinac. 1. Imag. Illuſt. cap. 45. Baillet Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poëtes Modernes, Tom. 8.

BAGOAS-CARUS: He had the laſt Part of his Name from the particular Affection Herod the Great had for him. He is ſaid to have been one of the handſomeſt Perſons living. His Maſter's Favour made little Impreſſion upon him. He hated that Prince ſo much for the Cruelty of his Adminiſtration, that he went into a Conſpiracy with ſome of the Phariſees to deſtroy Herod, and put the Crown upon Pheroras's Head: But this Attempt being diſcovered, he was executed with the reſt of the Accomplices. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 17. cap. 3.

*BAHUS, a Fort in Norway, built by Haquin IV. King of Norway, Anno Dom. 1309. The Caſtle ſtands upon a Rock, ſurrounded with Water from the River Trolhet. The Town of Malſtrand, near the Fort Bahus, is very conſiderable for Herring-Fiſhing: 'Twas deliver'd to the Swedes by the Treaty concluded at Fontainebleau in France Anno Dom. 1679. The Government of Bahus is a Province of Norway, and the leaſt of the five Diviſions. 'Tis the moſt Southern Government, and lies between the Channel of Denmark or Cattegat to the Weſt, Weſtrogothland to the Eaſt, and the Government of Aggerhus to the North; it reaches a hundred Miles from North to South; but the Breadth is not above thirty Miles, and in ſome Places not fifteen. It formerly belong'd to the King of Denmark; but in 1658, 'twas yielded to the Swedes. 'Tis divided into the Inland towards the South, and Rycliden to the North. The moſt conſiderable Places are, the Fortreſs of Bahus, which is the Capital, Malſtrand, Oldewall, and Kewgell. * Sanſon, Audefret, Geograph.

BAILLET, (Adrian) born at Neuville, near Beauvais, Ann. Dom. 1649. In 1676 he receiv'd Orders, and officiated in a Pariſh for ſome time in 1680: He was Library-Keeper to M. de Lamoignon, then Advocate-General, and afterwards Preſident à Mortier, in the Parliament of Paris: He died at Paris in January 1706. Baillet was a Perſon of prodigious Reading and Induſtry. One would wonder his Reading could be ſo great, conſidering how much he wrote. His Performance, call'd Jugemens des Scavans, is a fair Proof how much he made himſelf Maſter of Authors of all Kinds and Profeſſions. His firſt Volume is a ſort of Preliminary Diſcourſe upon the whole Work: Here he lays down Rules for making a Judgment upon Books, and Authors; and points at the Prejudices the Reader ſhould avoid when he makes his Deciſion. The three following Volumes are ſpent upon the Qualities, Excellencies, and Defects, relating to Printers, Criticks, Dictionary-makers, Tranſlators, French, Latin, &c. Theſe three Volumes appear'd in 1685. He afterwards publiſh'd five Volumes upon the Poets, and had continued this Work upon other Authors, purſuant to the Plan he had drawn in 1694, had not his Progreſs been ſtopt. His Satyres Perſonnelles, being a Reply to Menagius's Anti-Baillet, Les Auteurs déguiſés, Les Enfans devenus celebres par les études, are of the ſame Kind, and detach'd, as it were, from his main Body. In 1691, he publiſh'd Des Cartes's Life, which he afterwards abridg'd. When ſome Accidents made him deſpair of going on with this great Work, he fell upon other Studies in Morality, and Church-Hiſtory. His firſt Performance in this way is a Book entituled, Devotion à la Sainte Vierge. This Book, where he treats of the Worſhip due to the Bleſſed Virgin, was printed in 1693. The ſame Year he printed a Book entituled, Conduite des Ames, or the Conduct of the Conſcience; and laſtly, he wrote the Lives of the Saints, in four Volumes in Folio, with a very learned Preliminary Diſcourſe upon that Subject. He is the firſt Author of the Lives of the Saints for the whole Year, where he has carry'd the Argument to a due Length, thrown out all fabulous Interpolations, falſe Miracles, and ſpurious Hiſtory. Here the Reader will meet with the Saints of the Old, as well as the New Teſtament, with the Moveable Feſtivals; together with the Times and Places when, and where, theſe holy Men lived. * Journal des Savans. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Libr. XVII Cent.

BAILLIAGE, in Latin, Balliavatus, a Lower and Subaltern Juriſdiction, whoſe Decrees may be revers'd by Preſidials and Parliaments. Theſe Bailliages having a certain limited Precincts in Provinces, are ſome time ſubdivided into them. For Inſtance,

The Bailliage of Locarne, a ſmall Country in Italy, formerly Part of the Duchy of Milan, and in 1512 yielded to the Swiſs Cantons, who have remained Maſters of it ever ſince. 'Tis one of the four Bailliages of Italy; 'tis ſituated at the Foot of the Alps, bounded by the Great Lake to the Eaſt, and with the Duchy of Milan to the South and Weſt. The chief Town is Locrane.

The Bailliage of Lougan is another of the four Bailliages of Italy, belonging to the Duchy of Milan, at preſent poſſeſs'd by the Swiſs Cantons, to whom they were ſurrendered in 1512. This Bailliage has its Name from the moſt conſiderable Town in it, and lies between the Bailliages of Locarne and Mandris.

BAIS, a Town of Zanguebar, upon the Coaſt between the Towns of Sofala and Monbaza; 'tis reckon'd one of the moſt populous and beſt traded Towns on this Coaſt. * D Herbelot Biblioth. Orientale.

BAKAR. The Kingdom of Bakar, or Bakich, a Province of Aſia within the Mogul's Empire: 'Tis bounded on the North by the Province of Jamba, on the Weſt with that of Delli, and on the South with that of Samball. It has the Ganges on the Eaſt, which parts it from the Province of Patria. 'Tis about a hundred and eighty Miles in Length, and ſeventy five in Breadth. Bicanar is the Capital. * Matty. Diction.

* BALAAM, Son of Beor; he lived, as the Scripture informs, at Pethor, a Town of Syria, upon the Euphrates. The Jewiſh Tradition, in S. Jerom's time, makes Balaam a Buzite, Son of Milcah, and the ſame with Elihu mention'd in Job. The Fathers are not agreed in their Judgment concerning Balaam. Origen, Cyril of Alexandria, and S. Ambroſe, are of Philo-Judæus's Opinion, who makes him an Idolater and a Magician; and the Scripture informs us, he us'd to practiſe Enchantments: He offer'd his Sacrifices upon High Places; and S. Peter gives him the Character of an ill Man. However, ſome of the ancient Jews and Commentators believe him a true Prophet; that he worſhipped and conſulted the true God, who inſpir'd him with what he deliver'd to the King of Moab. Maimonides believes that the Dialogue between him and the Aſs was only ſeen in his Imagination. S. Gregory Nyſſen likewiſe ſeems to think the Aſs pronounc'd no diſtinct Articulate Words, but only bray'd in the Noiſe of her Kind; and that Balaam being a great Maſter in Augury underſtood her Language. But moſt Expoſitors believe ſhe ſpoke diſtinctly, and the Scripture is plain in the Old Teſtament for this Interpretation; and S. Peter, in his ſecond Epiſtle, ſays poſitively, The Dumb Aſs, ſpeaking with Man's Voice, forbad the Madneſs of the Prophet. * See the Commentators upon Deuteronomy and Numbers.

BALAGANSKOY, a Muſcovite Town in Siberia, a Town in Great Tartary. It ſtands upon the River Angara, which may be reckon'd one of the Springs of the Jeneſey, in the 114th Degree of Longitude, and the 59th of Latitude. * See Witzen's Maps.

* BALAGUER, ſtands nine Miles from Lerida, and thirty ſix from Manreſa in Catalonia.

BALALVANO, a Mountain in the Middle of the Iſle of Sumatra in Aſia: 'Tis a terrible Vulcano, and diſcharges Flame and great Pieces of Rocks into the Air. * Matty. Diction.

BALAMBUAN, an Indian Kingdom, in the Eaſtern Part of the Iſland of Java, lying upon an Arm of the Sea of the ſame Name, and over againſt the Iſland Bali. 'Tis bounded on the North with the Kingdom of Panarvea; and the Capital has the Name of the Country.

BALBAK, an Iſland in the Indian Sea, about a Day's Sail from Ceylon. * De Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

BALBUENA, (Bernard de) a very good Spaniſh Poet, though not much known; he printed an Heroick Poem at Madrid in 1624, entituled, El Bernardo ô Victoria de Ronces Valles; Paſtorals, in ten Eclogues, call'd, The Golden Age in Eriphile's Grove; and another Book in Verſe and Proſe, under the Title of the Grandeur of Mexico. Nicolas Antonio reports, by way of Character, that if his Bernardo were throughly examin'd, the Reader would find a great deal of Cadence and Majeſty in his Verſification, rich Invention, entertaining Variety, Propriety of Expreſſion, and all theſe Qualities in a very uncommon Degree. His Compariſons are well drawn, his Deſcriptions beautiful and affecting, his Geography and Aſtronomy exact, his Images are natural and ſtrong; ſo that in ſhort, he may may be ſaid to have far excell'd all the Spaniſh Poets in Luſtre and lively Repreſentation. * Lopez. de Vega, Laurel. de Apol. Nicolas Antonio, Biblioth. Hiſpan. Scriptor, Tom. 1. pag. 122, &c. Baillet Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poëtes Modernes, Tom. 8.

* BALBUS. To the Account in Morery, Vol. I. may be ſubjoin'd, that Balbus found himſelf much embarraſs'd during the Civil War between Cæſar and Pompey: He had been much oblig'd to both of them. However, his Inclination ſeems moſt to have lain towards Cæſar; but ſo gently, as not to go farther than the Endeavour of an Accommodation. Velleius Paterculus cenſures Balbus for going from Pompey's Camp to diſcourſe the Conſul Lentulus, who ſeem'd to lie neuter for the beſt Bargain. This Step, ſays this Hiſtorian, open'd Balbus's Way (though a Spaniard) to the Poſt of Conſul and High-Prieſt. Thus Pliny obſerves, that Balbus was the firſt Foreigner that was made Conſul; but as for the Honour of a Triumph, mention'd by Paterculus, Pliny affirms 'twas another Cornelius Balbus this Man's Nephew, who was the firſt Stranger on whom that Honour was conferr'd. Theſe two Cornelius Balbus's were ſo wealthy, that the Uncle at his Death left every

Roman

Roman Citizen twenty five Drachmæ, or Denarii, for a Legacy; and the Nephew built a Town at Cales. The Uncle wrote the Hiſtory of Julius Cæſar, by way of Diary; and 'twas he, without queſtion, who entertain'd a cloſe Friendſhip with Pomponius Atticus. Lucius Licilius Balbus, bred under Mucius Scævola, and Præceptor to the famous Servius Sulpitius; was an eminent Lawyer, and flouriſhed about the Year of Rome 670. Cicero reports, that Sulpitius exceeded his Maſter, being equal to him in Judgment, and livelier in Diſpatch. We have loſt Balbus's Writings, for which we may poſſibly thank his Scholar Sulpitius, who inſerted the greateſt Part of them in his own. The Reader ſhould take care not to fall into Glandorpius's Miſtake, who makes this Balbus the ſame with Quintus Lucilius Balbus, a Stoick Philoſopher, and one of thoſe who manages the Conference in Tully de Natura Deorum. Publius Octavius Balbus was cotemporary with Tully, who commends him for his Attainments in the Law, for his ſprightly Genius and Probity, and for ſeveral other valuable Qualities. Tully gives no leſs Commendation to Lucius Octavius Balbus, who liv'd at the ſame time. One of theſe two Octavius Balbus's, is certainly the Perſon mention'd by Valerius Maximus, who got out at a Back-Door and eſcaped the Fury of the Triumviri; but upon his being inform'd they were executing his Son in the Houſe, return'd home and was kill'd amongſt them. * Cicer. in Bruto, pro Cornelio Balbo. Velleius Paterculus. Plin. Lib. 7. cap. 43. Strabo, Lib. 3.

BALCH, Balchum, a Town in the Kingdom of Perſia, in the Middle of the Province of Khoraſan, to which 'tis the Capital: It ſtands in a fine Plain upon the River Dehaſh, which falls into the Gihon, thirty ſix Miles below Balch. Some Geographers take this Town for the Cariaſpa, Zariaſpa, or Bactra of the Ancients. * Abulfeda & Golius.

BALCHUSEN, formerly called Belgica, a Town in the Duchy of Juliers, within the Circle of Weſtphalia; it ſtands at the Head of the little River Balke, which after nine Miles Courſe falls into the Rhine, having paſs'd through Cologne. * Matty. Diction.

BALDUS, (James) a German Jeſuite, born at Enſighen in 1603: He taught Rhetorick, and afterwards preached with Applauſe in the Duke of Bavaria's Court. His Poems, which are of different Kinds, gained him a great Reputation; He died at Newburgh in Auguſt 1668. This Author is reckoned a Poet of the firſt Claſs in the Age he lived. His chief Performances are, 1. Homer's Batrachomuomachia, in Latin Verſe: 'Tis an Heroick Poem in ſix Books, with Latin Notes, upon the Pleaſantry of Homer's Invention; together with Moral Reflexions, to make it ſerviceable for Conduct. 2. The Hecatomb, or an Extraordinary Ode, touching the Vanity of the World; it conſiſts of a hundred Latin Strophes, and as many Stanzas in High-Dutch. 3. The Temple of Honour, built by the Romans, ſet open by the Vertue and Courage of Ferdinand III. 4. Agathyrſes, a Conſolatory Ode for Lean People; written in High-Dutch. 5. The Glory of Phyſick, in twenty two Satyrs; with a Panegyrick upon Gruffneſs, or the Art of Looking Fierce and Formidable; and the Antagathyrſes againſt Lean Folks. 6. Four Books of Lyrick Poetry, and a fifth of Epodes. 7. Nine Books of Sylvæ, or Miſcellanies. 8. Several Heroick Poems upon Births and Weddings. 9. A Collection of Parthenian Odes, in Honour of the Bleſſed Virgin. 10. The Victorious Uriana; or, The Combats of a Chriſtian Soul, againſt the Charms and Allurements of the Five Senſes: 'Tis written in Elegiacks. 11. The Tragedy of Jephta. 12. Poeſis Oſcia, or Drama Georgicum, in old Latin Verſes, by way of Imitation of the Atellanæ: And here, the Subject is the Miſeries of War, and the Bleſſings of Peace. Pope Alexander VII. was ſo pleaſed with his Urania, that he ſent him a Gold Medal. There is a great deal of Fire and extraordinary Thought in Baldus's Compoſitions. He has imitated Pindar very well, and that in his Abruptneſs and Incoherences, no leſs than the reſt: His Poems were printed in Quarto at Cologne. * Nathan. Sotwell, in Biblioth. Societ. Jeſu. Claud. Van-Stileſen. Stilius Galvid. Baillet Jugemens des Savans, Tom. 5.

BALI, Balga, an Iſland in the Indian Sea, to the Eaſt of Bava; from which 'tis parted by the Streight of Balambuan: 'Tis not above a hundred and twenty Miles in Compaſs, but very populous; for there's never a Man ſcarcely without ſeveral Wives, and a numerous Iſſue. The Soil being fruitful, the Iſland is able to maintain ſix hundred thouſand People. The Men are Blacks, with frizzled Hair. The Country produces a great deal of Rice, which the People are not allow'd to export; but the Fruit they value moſt is the Cocoa's: The Meat is extremely pleaſant, and they draw an Oil from it very ſerviceable for Health: Their Horſes are but ſmall, and very like thoſe in France. The wealthy People are carried upon their Slaves Shoulders, or in Chaizes drawn by Buffles. They have whole Foreſts of Orange-Trees, Citron-Trees, and Pomgranat-Trees; and a great deal of Cotton, which they manufacture and export. They have no Trade by Sea, excepting their Cotton-Cloth, which they carry to Java in little Barks call'd Paraoes. However, they have a good Haven for Ships to put in at, which paſs from the Continent to the Molucca's, to Banda, Ambo, Maccardo, Tincor and Solor; for here the Foreign Merchants come to a Mooring, and take in Refreſhments, becauſe they have Proviſions ſo very cheap. Theſe Iſlanders continue an ill Cuſtom, very common among the Bramines upon the Coaſt of Coromandel: 'Tis this; when the Huſband dies, all his Wives, if he is a Polygamiſt, are obliged to go in to the other World after him: They throw themſelves with the Corpſe into the Funeral Fire, made of Oil, Gum, and other Combuſtible Matter. If a Woman happens to refuſe being burnt to keep her Huſband Company, ſhe is look'd upon as a moſt deſpicable Wretch, and that for her Life-time: But thoſe who throw themſelves with Pleaſure and Ambition into the Flames, are publickly own'd for brave and heroick Women, and deſerve to live always with their Huſbands in the other World. 'Tis ſaid, this Cuſtom was begun by a King of Bali, with a Deſign to prevent the Falſeneſs and Miſbehaviour of the Women; who, when they grew weary of their Huſbands, uſed to apply to Poiſon, and other Inſtances of foul Play to diſpatch them. Thus the Prince, loſing a great many of his Subjects, began this barbarous Cuſtom to countermine the Women, and keep them in Awe. * Mandeſlo, Voyages des Indes.

BALLIN, (Claud) a Goldſmith, born at Paris, carried his Art to the higheſt Improvement; there being very few things either Ancient or Modern which came up to his Hand: He had a nice Judgment to imitate what was fine in old Work, and an admirable inventing Genius to add new Curioſities and Beauty. He began with Drawing, copied ſome of the beſt of Pouſine's Pictures, ſtudied and wrought in the Academies held in private Houſes; for at this time of Day the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture, and the Royal Manufacture at the Gobelins, were not ſet up. At the ſame time he work'd in Goldſmiths Buſineſs; in which he was quickly ſo great a Maſter, that at nineteen Years of Age he made four Silver Baſons, in which the four Ages of the World were repreſented. This Subject furniſhing beautiful Ideas, and giving Scope to a rich Imagination, were extremely admired, and bought by Cardinal Richelieu. Sarraſin, an excellent Graver, ſurprized at the Talent of young Ballin, got him to grave ſeveral Baſs-Reliefs in Silver, and amongſt the reſt Pharoah's Dreams. He enamell'd upon Gold the firſt Sword, and the firſt Gorget worn by King Lewis XIV. There is enchaced Plate of his working in ſeveral Churches at Paris, and at S. Dennis and Pontoiſe, and all done with inimitable Niceneſs. He made a Gold Looking-Glaſs-Frame of forty Marks Weight for Queen Anne of Auſtria, ſtill to be ſeen at Verſailles. It were to be wiſh'd, that a great deal of other enchaced Plate made for Lewis XIV. by Monſieur Colbert's Order, was ſtill in being. There were ſeveral Tables ſo admirably graved and emboſſed, that though the Metal was Maſſy Silver, it ſcarcely amounted to the tenth Part of the Value. Among theſe were large Stands, eight or nine Foot high, for Flambeaux, great Tubs for Orange-Trees, Ciſterns, Candleſticks, Looking-Glaſs-Frames; all of them done with ſo much Judgment, Beauty and Magnificence, that poſſibly they might fairly be reckoned one of thoſe Curioſities in France which beſt diſcover'd the Greatneſs of the Prince for whom they were made. They were afterwards melted for the Service of the War; and thus ſome of the fineſt Ornaments of the XVIIth Century were deſtroyed, and which would have borne Compariſon with the beſt of Antiquity, or the following Ages: But the King was willing to part with this magnificent Furniture, niture, and ſacrifice all to the Publick Occaſions, and to diſpoſe his Subjects to follow his Example in melting their Plate. The Sieur de Launay, a Perſon who underſtood Deſigning admirably well, took Draughts of a great Part of this curious Plate before 'twas melted; which has ſomewhat leſſen'd the Misfortune. Ballin never ſtirred out of Paris; from whence the French conclude there is no Neceſſity for Travel into Italy to excell in the Finiſhings of Art. He died in 1678, being ſixty three Years old. * Perrault, les Hommes Illuſtres, qui ont paru en France.

BALSTAL, or Baliſtel, a Town in Swiſſerland in the Canton of Soloturne nine Miles from Olten to the Weſt. Balſtal is well furniſhed with Iron Mines. * Matty. Diction.

BALUZIUS, (Stephanus) born at Toul, an eminent Writer of the Sevententh Century. He has been very ſerviceable to the Commonwealth of Learning by his curious Search after Manuſcripts, which he afterwards publiſhed, with very learned Notes upon them. His Studies ran moſtly upon Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity. In 1651, he printed a Book entituled, Antifrizonius, being Remarks upon a Piece printed by M. Frizon, a Sorbonne Doctor, and called Gallia Purpurata. In 1656, he came to Paris, at the Inſtance of M. de Marca, Archbiſhop of Thouloufe, who entertained him in his Family. After the Death of this famous Prelate, M. Colbert made him his Library Keeper. And here the Improvements and Diſpoſition of this Noble Library, is not a little owing to Baluzius's Care and Underſtanding. In 1670, he was made Canon-Law Profeſſor in the Royal College of France; a Preferment lately founded by the King on Baluzius's Account. He publiſhed ſeveral Editions of de Marca's Book de Concordia Sacerdotii & Imperii, with the Life of this Learned Archbiſhop. He has likewiſe added a Supplement and Annotations to the fifth Book. 'Tis to Baluzius the Church and Kingdom of France are obliged for the fine Edition of the Capitulars of the French Kings, ranged in Chronological Order; to which he has added the Collections of Angeſiſus and Benedictus Diaconus, with Notes upon them; they are two Volumes in Folio, printed at Paris in 1677. Farther, in 1682 he publiſhed the Epiſtles of Innocent III. in two Volumes Folio. He attempted a new Collection of the Councils, by way of Supplement to Labbé. The firſt Volume, printed in 1683, reaches to the General Council of Chalcedon: The laſt Work, in Folio, publiſhed by Baluzius, is that entituled Marca Hiſpanica, or the Boundaries of Spain; 'tis a Poſthumous Work of M. de Marca, and takes in the Hiſtory of Catalonia, Rouſſillon, and the neighbouring Country. The Lives of the Popes of Avignon, or the Hiſtory of the Popes who reſided in France, from the Year 1300 to 1376, makes two Volumes in Quarto, publiſhed by Baluzius in 1693. He likewiſe obliged the Publick with a great many Authors in Octavo, viz. Salvian, and Vincentius Lirinenſis, Lupus Ferrarienſis, fourteen Homilies of Cæſarius Arelatenſis, Concilia Galliæ Narbonenſis, Regino, Antonius Auguſtinus de Emendatione Gratiani, Marſius Mercator, &c. To theſe may be added four Volumes in Octavo, entituled, Miſcellanea, and M. de Marca's Opuſcula. He was uncommonly knowing in Manuſcripts, and Prints of all kinds. He wrote handſomely in Latin, was very well verſed in the Fathers, and in Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Hiſtory, both Ancient and Modern. Beſides all this Learning, his Temper is remarkably obliging and benevolent, and he's very communicative of his Manuſcripts and Notions. His Genealogical Hiſtory of the Houſe of Auvergne, printed in two Volumes in Folio in 1708, drew Diſfavour upon him. * Journal des Sçavans de Paris, M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

BAMBA, a Province of Southern America, in the Kingdom of Popaian. It belongs to the Spaniards, who have ſeveral Towns in that Country. * Laët.

BAMBOURG, Pambourg, or Painbourg, a German Town in the Circle of Bavaria. 'Tis within the Government of Burchauſen, upon the River Achza, a few Leagues from the Lake Chiemzee to the North. * Matty. Diction.

BANK, in Latin Syrtis, a great Shoal of Sand in the Sea, where Ships are oftentimes ſwallowed and loſt. The Mariners ſet up Marks to diſcover them. The Bank of Acadia in Northern America ſtretches a great way from Eaſt to Weſt all along the Southern Coaſt of Acadia, from which 'tis conſiderably diſtant. Bank, or Doggers-Bank, a long Shoal of Sand between England to the Weſt, and the United Provinces and Jutland to the Eaſt: It ſtretches about a hundred and fifty Miles. Bank de la Caſſe lies in the Mediterranean Sea, turns like a Vortex or Inſuck, and ſwallows up every thing that comes near it: 'Tis about threeſcore Miles from the Coaſt of Sardinia to the Weſt, and ſtretches towards Majorca and Minorca. Thus Part of it lies in the Gulph of Lyons; but no Map takes notice of it. The Great Bank, or Syrtis Maxima, in Northern America lies towards the Eaſtern Coaſt of Newfoundland, about one hundred and fifty Miles from Cape Raſe to the Eaſt. The Engliſh call it Main-Bank: It reaches from North to South four hundred fourſcore Miles in Length, taken all together; but it does not hinder the Seamens Fiſhing for above three hundred Miles. The greateſt Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt does not exceed one hundred and twenty Miles. A great many Places in this Bank are very remarkable for Cod-fiſhing. Bank Jacquet in America, towards the Eaſt of the Great Bank; the Engliſh call it Falſe Bank: It reaches conſiderably from North to South, but the Breadth is not much. Here likewiſe they fiſh for Cod. The Bank of Pearls in Southern America, and in the Atlantick Ocean on the Coaſt of the Country of Carracas near Rencheria, between Rio de la Hacha, and Cape de la Vela. There is another Bank of Pearls in America, in the Atlantick Ocean, upon the Coaſt of Venezuela, three Leagues from the Iſland Margerita: There is good Pearl-fiſhing about this Bank. S. George's Bank in Northern America; it lies between New England to the Weſt, and Cape Sable upon the Coaſt of Acadia to the Eaſt: 'Tis otherwiſe called the Engliſh Bank. Bank de Bimini in Northern America, near Bimini, one of the Lucaian Iſlands, upon the Eaſtern Coaſt of Bahama by Florida.

BANDER, Bandera, a Town within the Mogul's Empire, in the Kingdom of Bengal, at the Eaſtern Mouth of the Ganges, about forty Leagues from the Town of Chatigan to the Weſt. * Sanſon, Baudrand, Diction. Geograph. Edit. Paris Fol. 1702.

BANEUS an Eſſen, who retiring into the Deſarts of Judea, put himſelf under extraordinary Diſcipline: His Cloaths were the Barks of Trees, his Diet only Herbs, and raw Roots, and he ſlept upon nothing but a Heap of Stones. He plunged himſelf ſeveral times within the four and twenty Hours in cold Water, to make him Maſter of his Senſes. Joſephus, who gives this Account, lived three Years with him under the ſame Auſterities. * Joſephus, in the Beginning of his own Life.

BANGIUS, (Thomas) born in the Year 1600, and Divinity Profeſſor at Copenhagen. His Writings are, Vindiciæ Locorum Geneſeos. Fontium Iſraëlis Trias, Jona, Michea, Ruth. Exercitatio Glottologica de Arte Linguarum. Exercitationes octo Litterariæ Antiquitatis. Hermes & Pan Hebraicus, quo vivum abſoluti Hebraici Lexicographi exemplum proponitur. Phoſphorus Inſcriptionis Hieroſymbolicæ, quo Stellæburgum Regium Hafnienſe illuſtratur. Tropæum proter Angelicum, quo ex Scriptis Pontificiorum oſtenditur veram eſſe Lectionem ipſum conteret tibi caput, & ſoli Chriſto convenire. Exercitatio Elenchtica de Nephelimis, Gigantibus vulgo dictis, Oppoſita Jacobo Boulducco. Oliva Sacræ Pacis Repurgata. 'Tis an Harangue which ſhews the Author was no Reconciler in Matters of Religion. Cœlum Orientis & Priſci Mundi. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

* BAR-LE-DUC, upon the River Ornain, in Latin Barro-Ducum. There are four Territories or Juriſdictions within this Duchy, viz. Bar, S. Michael, Clermont, and Baſſigny. The Dependencies within the Juriſdiction of Bar are the Town of Bar, the Capital of the Duchy; Baron; Louppi, Luppium; Pierre-Frite, Petra-Fina; Sonilly, Solliacum. 2. The Towns within the Juriſdiction of S. Michael are, Lachaucée, Calciata; Conflans, Confluens; Dun, Dunum; Fouge, Fagum; Long-Wy, Longus-Vicus; Mandres aux quatre Tours, Mandræ quatuor Turres; S. Michael, S. Michaelis Municipium; Pont à Mouſſon. 3. The Juriſdiction of Clermont takes in Clermont in Argonne, Clarus Mons in ſaltu Argonnæ; Varenne, Varennæ; Vienne le Château, Vienna Caſtellum. 4. The Territory of Baſſigny comprehends Bourmont, Burronis Mons; Chatillon, Caſtellio; Conflans aux Baſſeigny, Confluentes in Baſſeinio vel Baſſineiaco; la Marche, Marckia; la Motte, Mota. To theſe Juriſdictions the Dukes of Lorrain have added Haton Chatel, Hattoni Caſtrum; Jamets, Jameſium; and Aſpremont, Aſper-Mons.

BARABA or Barabinsko, a little Town belonging to the Muſcovites in Great Tartary. Mr. Witzen's Map of this this Country places Baraba in the 96th Degree of Longitude, and the 61ſt of Latitude, and ſituate in that Part of Tartary comprehended under Siberia. This Geographer, at ſome Leagues diſtance from this Town, places the great Lake of Baraba or Yamiſo, which being ſwelled by a great many Rivers, falls firſt into the River Latzick, and then into the Irtis. And laſtly, according to him, to the North of Baraba, the Deſart of Barabinskoy lies, which is a very large Foreſt between the Oby and the Irtis.

BARANGUERLIS, in Latin Stagnum Magnum, Teneſæ Sinus, Sirbonis Palus, a great Lake in Egypt upon the Frontiers of Paleſtine, near the Red Sea, into which it falls. 'Twas formerly a hundred and twenty Miles long; but 'tis now much leſs, and fills up by little and little: There is no Haven, or any Road for Ships where it falls into the Sea, nor all along the Coaſt near this Lake; for which Reaſon the Seamen avoid ſailing by it. This Lake is five and twenty Miles from Suez.

BARANIA, a great River in Northern America; it riſes near Mexico, and croſſes the Provinces of Mecoacan and Gadalajara; from thence it runs into the Province Xaliſco, and falls into the Pacifick Sea. Sanſon in his large Maps calls it Eſquitland. * Maty, Diction.

BARANIWAR, a Town in Lower Hungary. It ſtands about two Leagues from Darda to the North, within the Earldom of Baraniwar, where 'tis the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

BARATO, Porto-Barato, Baratus Portus, Populonium Novum; a Town with a good Haven in the Principality of Piombino in Tuſcany; it ſtands about two Leagues from the Town of Piombino to the Weſt. 'Twas built upon the Ruins of Populonium, a Biſhop's See, which is now removed to Maſſa. * Maty. Diction.

BARBADILLO, (Alphonſo Hieronimo de Salas) born at Madrid, made a Figure in the Court of Spain at the latter End of Philip III. and the Beginning of Philip IV.'s Reign. 'Twas within this Period that the Spaniſh Language was moſt improved and in vogue. Salas, who had a beautiful Genius, with a good Share of Knowledge and Elocution, kept up the Reputation of the Spaniſh Tongue. Beſides his Collection of Caſtillian Rhimes, he wrote ſome Heroick Poems upon Religious Subjects, and a great many Comedies. 'Tis chiefly in theſe laſt Performances that he has ſhewn the Force of his Genius, and how great a Maſter he was to expoſe the reigning Vices of his Country: And here his Satyr is managed with a great deal of Judgment, nice Application, and Breeding. His Style is clear, lively, and entertaining. He died in 1630. * Nichol. Anton. Biblioth. Script. Hiſpan. Tom. 1. p. 22. Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes modernes, Tom. 8.

BARBARY, (The Sea of) is ſometimes taken for all that Part of the Mediterranean which runs by the Coaſts of the Kingdoms of Tunis, Algier, and Fez; and reaches to the Iſlands of Sicily and Sardinia: But ſometimes 'tis taken in a reſtrained Senſe, and means no more than that Part of the Streights upon the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Algier and Fez. * Maty. Diction.

BARBARY, or the Shallows of Barbary, in Latin Syrtis Magna, or Major; frightful Rocks in the Gulph of Sidra, between the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Tunis, and that of Tripoli. Sometimes the whole Gulph of Sidra goes under this Denomination. * Maty, Diction.

BARBARO, (Francis) a noble Venetian, living in the Fifteenth Century. He was not only a Perſon of conſiderable Learning, but a great Stateſman, as appeared by his Management of Publick Employments, and particularly when he was Governor of Breſcia. His Vigilance, Courage and Addreſs, in defending this Town againſt the Duke of Milan, was very remarkable. The famous Piſinino commanded the Duke of Milan's Army; and Barbaro had both Enemy's without and within the Walls to ſtruggle with. The Town was unfortunately divided into two Factions, headed by the Avogadri, and Martinenghes. Theſe, by his Dexterity and Elocution, he got reconciled, and prevailed with them to act in concert for the common Advantage. The Length of the Siege occaſioned a Famine in the Town; and the Famine brought on the Plague: But notwithſtanding the Difficulty of the Juncture, he held out three Years againſt the Enemy, and forc'd them at laſt to raiſe the Siege: This happen'd in the Year 1439. * Bayle Diction. Hiſt.

BARBATH, a Town in Arabia the Happy, called alſo Marbath. It ſtands in the little Province Schagr or Hadhramuth, which is the Adramytenum of the Ancients. The Town is the Capital of the Country, and ſtands over-againſt the Iſland Zocatora in the Æthiopian Ocean to the South. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orientale.

BARBY, (The Earldom of) a ſmall Country in Germany in the Upper-Saxony, about the River Elb. The Town Barby is the only conſiderable Place in it. The Country was made an Earldom by the Emperor Maximilian I. in the Year 1510. The Family on which 'twas ſettled being extinct in 1659, the Earldom was convey'd to the Dukes of Saxony-Weiſſenfels, excepting ſome Lands reunited to the Duchy of Magdeburg, of which they held in Chief: To this Exception muſt be added the Lordſhip of Water-Newbourg, which the Elector of Saxony granted to Prince Anhalt-Deſſaw. * Maty, Dict.

* BARCA or Barce, a large Country in Africk: This Country, which to ſpeak properly is no better than a barren uninhabited Deſart, produces abundance of Lions, and the Sands are full of Serpents, Baſiliſks, and other venomous Creatures. The Turks are Maſters of this Wilderneſs.

* BARCELONA, (The Earldom of) Charles the Great having taken Barcelona from the Moors, fix'd a Governor there with the Title of an Earl. The Succeſſors of this Governor gained the Fee-ſimple of the Precinct, and enlarged it; inſomuch that in Proceſs of Time it took in the Earldoms of Baſalu, Cerdagne, Rouſſillon, Empuria, and Urgel; but all theſe Territories were afterwards reunited to the Kingdom of Arragon by the Marriage of Raymond V. Count of Barcelona, with Petronilla, Daughter and ſole Heir of Ramires II. King of Arragon, Anno Dom. 1137. See the Town of Barcelona in Morery Vol. I.

* BARDESANES, an Aſſyrian Arch-heretick, lived at Edeſſa in Meſopotamia, in the Second Century. He invented a great many Generations of Æons: And notwithſtanding he owned the Canon of the Old and New Teſtament, he ſtretch'd over the juſt number of inſpired Writings, and paid the ſame Regard to ſeveral Apocryphal Books. His Compoſitions have a great deal of Spirit and Learning in them. 'Tis ſaid Abgarus King of Edeſſa took him into a cloſe Friendſhip. His principal Performances are two Books tranſlated from Syriac into Greek; one of them encounters Marcion, and other Hereticks; and the other diſcourſes upon Fate. This laſt was addreſſed to Antoninus, whom S. Jerom takes for the Emperor Marcus Antoninus. But there is no Probability that a Book written in Syriac ſhould be dedicated to a Roman Emperor; neither does Euſebius affirm that this Antoninus was an Emperor. Bardeſanes wrote this Tract, at the Inſtance of his Friends, by way of Dialogue. Euſebius has inſerted a long and curious Fragment of it in the VIth Book of his Præparatio Evangelica: It gives us a lively Deſcription of the Behaviour of the Chriſtians, in contradiſtinction to other People. Epiphanius ſuppoſes Bardeſanes a Catholick for ſome time; but Euſebius, whoſe Authority is more to be rely'd on, always mentions him as an Heterodox Chriſtian. Epiphanius relates that Apollonius of Chalcedon, Philoſophy-Præceptor to Marcus Aurelius, and one of the moſt celebrated Stoicks of his time, did his utmoſt to make Bardeſanes an Apoſtate; and that this Chriſtian threw off his Importunities, and wrote ſeveral Tracts to defend his Religion. S. Jerom obſerves, that this Book concerning Fate was written againſt Abydas, an Aſtronomer. His Son Hermonius wrote ſeveral Books, confuted by S. Ephraim of Edeſſa. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 4. Cap. ult. & Præparat. Evangel. lib. 6. Hieron. in Catal. Lib. 33. Epiphan. Hær. 56. Auguſtin. de Hær. Cap. 35. Baron. A. C. 175.

* BARDESANES of Babylon, lived in the Third Century. He wrote a Book of the Indian Gymnoſophiſts. He divides theſe Philoſophers into two Fraternities, the Bramins and the Samaneans: He commends them both very much for their Auſterities. This Self-Denial, it muſt be confeſs'd, was very remarkable; for they provided themſelves no other Diet but the Fruit of the Trees growing upon the Ganges; and if any body gave them a little Rice or Meal, they look'd no farther. Their pretended Sanctity is ſo much admired, that the King of the Country makes them Viſits, and proſtrates himſelf before them; being fully perſuaded that the Repoſe of his Kingdom depends entirely upon their Prayers. * Porphyr. Lib. 4. de Abſtin. Hieron. Lib. 2. adverſus Jovinian. Voſſius de Hiſtor. Græc. Lib. 3.

BARDO, a magnificent Palace, ſtanding in a fruitful Plain, about a League from Tunis. Muley-Haſcem, King of this Town, built it, and 'twas afterwards ornamented by Mourat-Bey. The Marble Pillars, Gildings, Paintings, Apartments, and Furniture, were all extremely magnificent. The Gardens planted with Orange-Trees, paliſado'd with Pomegranates and Jeſſamin, the ſhady Walks, the Diſpoſition of the Graſs-Plots, the Canals and Fountains, made it the moſt delicious Spot in Africk. But the Civil Wars have ſince deſtroyed all this Ornament and Expence, and ſcarcely left ſo much as the Advantages of Nature. Amouda, Son and ſole Heir of this Mourat, left this Houſe by his Will to his three Sons in common. His Deſign was, that the Pleaſure which would call them thither, might keep them well affected to each other. Hiſtoire des dernieres Révolutions de Tunis.

BARDT, (The Lordſhip of) Part of the Hither Pomerania in Germany. This Country lies between the Duchy of Mecklenberg, the Earldom of Gutzco, the Iſle of Rugen, and the Baltick. 'Tis about thirty Miles long, and four and twenty broad, has the Title of a Duchy, and was yielded to the Swedes by the Weſtphalian Treaty. Bardt, Stralſund, and Damgarten, are the principal Towns, the firſt of which is the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

BAREDGE, (The Valley of) a ſmall Country in Gaſcony, within the Earldom of Bigorre, at the Foot of the Pyrenæan Mountains. This Valley, tho' of ſmall Extent, is famous for its Medicinal Waters. This Bleſſing of Nature draws a great many infirm People thither from all Parts of France and Spain. * De Marca, Baudrand.

BARFLEUR, a good Town in the Dioceſe of Conſtance in Normandy: It ſtands upon the Cape Wick, five Miles from Cherbourg to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

BARIQUICEMETO, a Country in Southern America: 'Tis Part of the Southern Government of Venezuola, lying along the River Bariquicemeto, which falls into the Oronoko upon the Confines of New Andaluſia. * Maty, Diction.

BARLÆUS, (Jaſper) a Latin Orator and Poet, born at Antwerp in 1584. He was a Dutch Miniſter before the Synod at Dort: But being a Remonſtrant, he fell under the Diſadvantages of that Party, and was turned out of his Employment. There are ſeveral Poems of his extant, viz. three Books of the Heroick Kind, two of Epigrams, and one of Miſcellanies: Which laſt conſiſts of Scazons, Jambicks, Epigrams, Ecloges, Ænigma's, &c. Barlæus was pretty lucky in all theſe Diſtinctions of Poetry; but his Style is more lofty than correct, and his Thoughts have more of the Sublime than Method in them. * Olaus Borrichius Diſſert. 5. de Poet. Lat. p. 140. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor. Baillet Jugemens des Scavans ſur les Poëtes Modernes, Tom. 8.

BARLAAM, a Monk of S. Baſil's Order. The Greek Emperor Andronicus the Younger, Anno Domini 1339, ſent him Ambaſſador to Philip King of France, and Robert King of Sicily, to ſolicit for Succours againſt the Mahometans: But having no Proſpect of ſucceeding in his Negotiation, without a Coalition between the Greek and Latin Churches, he had Inſtructions to treat this Accommodation. Theſe two Princes gave him Letters to Pope Bennet XII. to whom he propoſed the meeting of a General Council for the Purpoſe above-mentioned; deſiring a Reinforcement might be ſent the Greek Emperor in the mean time. The Pope's Anſwer was, That the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt was a Queſtion already decided, and that 'twas to no Purpoſe to call a Council for that Matter. And as for the Succours ſolicited, they refuſed giving Satisfaction, unleſs the Greek Church would come to in earneſt. Barlaam, at his Return to Conſtantinople, had a great Conteſt with the Monks called Heſycaſtæ or Quietiſts, who were charged with reviving the Meſſalian Heterodoxy. Theſe Monks pretended to ſee the Light which appeared upon Mount Tabor at our Saviour's Transfiguration: They aſſerted this Light uncreated and incorruptible, tho' not Part of the Divine Eſſence. They maintained the ſame Singularity with reference to other Glorious and Supernatural Appearances; and that neither the Saints nor Angels ſaw the Divine Eſſence, their Capacity and Privilege reaching no farther than getting a View of this uncreated Light, which they called the Operation of God. Barlaam delated Palamas, and his Diſciples of this Sect, to the Emperor, and to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople; upon which a Council was called in that City Anno Dom. 1340. Here Barlaam attack'd the Palamites, and did his Part; but his Sentiment was over-ruled either by Noiſe or Intereſt. This Deciſion was confirmed in a ſecond Council, where Barlaam's Doctrine and Perſon were both cenſured. The Palamites growing elated and troubleſome upon theſe Determinations, made it their Buſineſs to part Men from their Wives, and give them the Monaſtick Tonſure: And, in ſhort, diſturbed the Repoſe of Conſtantinople pretty remarkably; inſomuch that John the Patriarch ſummon'd Palamas to a Council, and got him and his Followers condemn'd. However, after John's Death, Palamas got Iſidore his Friend elected Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who had formerly been depoſed from his See. The oppoſite Party ſtruggled againſt the Election; and ten Biſhops meeting at Conſtantinople in 1347, pronounced a Sentence of Deprivation againſt him and Palamas: But notwithſtanding this Effort, Iſidore continued upon the See of Conſtantinople. His Succeſſor Calixtus convened a Fifth Council at Conſtantinople, where the Emperors Cantacuzenus and John Palæologus were preſent: And here Palamas's Doctrine paſſed, and Barlaam and his Party were condemned. After this publick Cenſure in the Eaſt, Barlaam retired into the Weſt, went over to the Latin Church, and was made Biſhop of Gieraci in Calabria. Before his going off into the Weſt, he wrote a Tract againſt the Pope's Supremacy, and the Doctrine of the Latins concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. But after his laſt Settlement, he maintained the oppoſite ſide of theſe two Queſtions in his Letters to the Greeks. * Nicephorus, Gregoras, Johannes Cantacuzenus, M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIV.

BARLET, Barolum, Barulum, and Baretum in Strabo, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples within Puglia, in the Province of Bari, upon the Gulph of Venice. 'Tis conſiderably large, and one of the four Towns they call the Four Caſtles of Italy. 'Tis the Reſidence of the Archbiſhop of Nazareth. In the Middle of the great Square, there is a Braſs Statue of a King in Armour ten Foot high. The Burghers are poſitive 'twas made for the Emperor Heraclius. The Town, formerly beſieged by the Gauls, was ſo preſſed with Famine, that the Garriſon were forced to pull the Leather off their Shields, to put them in the Pot, and make Diet of them. * Baudrand, Diction. Geogr.

* BARNABAS, (S.) a Jew of the Tribe of Levi, born in the Iſle of Cyprus: He had his Education, as 'tis ſuppoſed, at Jeruſalem, and ſtudied under Gamaliel with S. Paul. Some of the Ancients make him one of the Seventy two Diſciples of our Saviour: But by S. Luke's Account of him, 'tis probable he had no Correſpondence with the Apoſtles till after our Saviour's Paſſion. But let that be as it will, 'tis certain that from this Time he ſignalized himſelf in Preaching the Goſpel, and deſerved the Character of an Apoſtle. We know nothing of his Life, except what S. Luke gives us in the Acts, viz. that he ſold his Eſtate, and laid the Purchaſe-Money at the Apoſtles Feet: That S. Paul coming up to Jeruſalem three Years after his turning Chriſtian, S. Barnabas preſented him to the Apoſtles, and vouched the Sincerity of his Converſion: That S. Barnabas was ſent to Antioch to confirm the new Converts; that from thence he went to Tarſus in Cilicia in queſt of S. Paul, whom he conveyed to Antioch, where they lived together a whole Year: That he was pitch'd upon by S. Paul to carry Contributions to Jeruſalem: That at his Return, he and S. Paul were declared Apoſtles of the Gentiles: That they travelled into ſeveral Countries, and preached the Goſpel; that they parted, becauſe S. Paul was not willing to take Mark along with him; and that S. Barnabas ſailed with this Diſciple to Cyprus. Thus far the Hiſtory of the Acts reaches. But as for other Circumſtances of S. Barnabas's Life, or the Time, Place, and Manner of his Death, we have nothing certain about them. The Greeks however will have it that he was martyr'd by the Jews at Salamis, a Town in Cyprus. S. Jerom informs us, he wrote a very edifying Letter, tho' not of Canonical Authority. This Epiſtle is frequently cited by Clemens Alexandrinus, Tertullian, and Origen. 'Twas firſt publiſhed in Greek by Dacherius, Anno Dom. 1645. It has been ſince printed by

Iſaac

Isaac Vossius and Cotelerius. There is an old Latin Version which has some Chapters in the Beginning, not extant in the Greek. The Criticks are divided in their Judgments about this Epistle. They all agree 'tis no Part of the Canon, and some of them are of the Opinion 'tis a spurious Production: However, the Fathers seem to believe it written by S. Barnabas; and the contrary Reasons to prove it none of his, are by no means cogent. * Clemens Alexandrin. Stromat. Lib. 2. Origen, Lib. 1. contra Celsum. Peri Archon, Lib. 1. Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. 1. Hieron in Catal. Script. Chrysost. Homil. in Act.

BARNEVELT, or John Olden-Barnevelt. To the Article in the first Volume of Morery may be added, that his second Son William, Lord of Stautenberg, engaged in a Plot to assassinate the Prince of Orange, notwithstanding his eldest Brother Renatus, Lord Groenevelt, dissuaded him from it. The Design being discovered, Stautenberg made his Escape into Brabant: But Groenevelt, who intended to go off into England, was seized and beheaded in 1622. Tho' after all, this Gentleman's Crime was no more than concealing his Brother's Enterprize. Cornelius Vandermisle, who married their Sister, a Person of Birth, and who had been Ambassador at the French Court and at Venice, was banished to Gorée, and died there in 1642. * Grotius Hist. Belg. Leuthichius, Lib. 5. Thuldenus, Hist. nostr. Temp. Lib. 1. &c.

BARONI, (Leonora) an Italian Lady, living in the Seventeenth Century, and one of the finest Voices of the Age: She was born at Mantua, and admired to that degree, that a great many of the Wits wrote Panegyricks in Verse upon her. There is a Volume upon this Subject curiously performed in Latin, Greek, French, Italian, and Spanish Poetry: 'Tis printed at Rome, with the Title of Applausi Poëtici alle Glorie della Signora Leonora Baroni. Those who are desirous to be more particularly informed, may consult a Discourse upon Italian Musick, printed with Malherbe's Life, and some other Tracts at Paris in 1672. * Bayle Diction. Hist. 2d Edit. at Rotterdam, 1702.

*BARONIUS, (Cæsar) born at Sora, an Episcopal See in Terra di Lavoro, in the Kingdom of Naples. His Father's Name was Camillo Baronio, and his Mother's Porcia Febonia, who took great Care of his Education. Pope Clement VIII. made him first his Confessor, then Apostolick Protonotary, and afterwards Cardinal in 1596. He was likewise Library-Keeper in the Vatican.

At thirty Years of Age he began his Annals, upon Onuphrius Panvinius's refusing to engage upon that Subject. He was more than thirty Years in preparing Materials, and finishing this Work. In 1586, he gave a Specimen of his Ecclesiastical Learning, and publish'd his Notes upon the Roman Martyrology. Soon after, his First Tome of his Ecclesiastical Annals appeared, which takes in the first hundred Years after the Incarnation. There is an Apparatus touching Ecclesiastical Annals prefix'd to it. This Tome is dedicated to Sixtus V. The Second Tome, dedicated to the same Pope, goes the Length of two hundred and five Years. The Third, address'd to Philip II. comprehends the fifty Years next ensuing. The Fourth, dedicated to Clement VIII. contains the History only of four and thirty Years, and ends Anno Dom. 395. The Fifth reaches to the Year 440. 'Tis dedicated to the same Pope; and so is the Sixth, which breaks off at 518. The Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth, appeared soon after, and reach to the Year 842. The last of these three Tomes are dedicated to Henry IV. of France. The Tenth, dedicated to Rodolphus II. begins at the Year 843, and ends Anno Dom. 1000. The Eleventh, dedicated to Sigismond III. King of Poland, and printed in 1605, carries on the History to 1099. The Twelfth, published in the Pontificate of Paul V. Anno Dom. 1607, breaks off at the Year 1198. And thus the Twelve Tomes give us the History of the Twelve first Centuries.

This History, written by way of Annals Year by Year, parted and detached, as it were, from each other, are all along mark'd by the Years of the Popes, Emperors, and Consuls. Every Year furnishes the Historical Occurrences relating to the Eastern and Western Churches; inserts the Succession of the Popes, Patriarchs, Emperors, and Kings; reports the Acts of the Councils, the Epistles of the Popes, the Laws of the Emperors where the Church is concerned, the Persecutions, Martyrs, Saints, Ecclesiastical Writers; together with the Heresies as they came up, and those who maintained them: And, in a word, 'tis a Recital of all Passages and Events which relate to Church-History.

The Design of this Work, as he declares himself in his Preface, is to confute the Magdeburgenses, and to oppose a Counter-Narrative in Defence of the Church of Rome. He is so frank as to say, that till his Time Ecclesiastical Historians had neither been full nor exact. For Instance, he charges Eusebius with Partiality to the Arians, and that he wrote Constantine's Life with too much Courtship to recommend himself to Constantius. He pretends Evidence, that some Catholick Truths have suffer'd in the Hands of Socrates and Sozomen, whom he makes Novatians; that Matter of Fact is too much epitomized and perplexed by Orosius and Sulpitius Severus; and that most Ecclesiastical Historians have intermix'd their Narratives with fabulous Reports, which shake the Authority of what is genuine and true.

'Twere to be wished Baronius had only been a Reporter, and not dipt in Controversy and Party-Interest. However, it must be confessed that his Work, considering the vast Compass, is well digested, full of great Reading, wrote with Care; and, where he discovers no Bias of Inclination, commendably exact, considering he was as it were the first in so extensive an Undertaking. 'Tis true, there have been a great many Faults in Chronology and History remark'd, and a great deal of Matter of Fact discovered, of which he seems to have known nothing. It has been proved, he has made use of spurious Authorities, reported Fables for Truth; and that he is mistaken in a great many Passages. But not to swell the Number of his Errors with Holstenius, who said he was ready to shew eight thousand Mistakes in Baronius's Annals; tho' it must be granted, he has a great many Oversights and Misrepresentations; it can't be deny'd but that he has given the World a very serviceable Work. We may observe farther, that he is much more exact in Latin, than in Greek History: For to speak clearly, he was but a very indifferent Grecian. As for his Style, his Phraseology is neither exact, nor his Manner noble. However, Perspicuity and Method must not be deny'd him.

After this mix'd, and I think impartial Character, 'tis not necessary to report the different Judgments of Protestant and Roman-Catholick Writers upon his Annals. 'Tis not improbable but that he may be charged too deep by some of the first, and over-flourished by the latter. He has had a great many Adversaries and Criticks on one side, and a great many Admirers and Champions on the other. He has been continu'd, abridg'd, transcrib'd, and translated. Isaac Casaubon was one of the first who wrote against him: He begins his Exercitations with the Annals; but goes no farther than the 34th Year after the Incarnation: By consequence, his Censure turns more upon Controversy and Exposition of Scripture, than the Subject of History. These Exercitations, publish'd in 1614, were answered by a Jesuite, under the Name of Eudæmon Johannes, who printed his Defence of Baronius's Annals three Years forward at Cologne. The same Year Julius Cæsar Bulinger, a Jesuite, wrote a Discourse in French against these Exercitations. The next who appears within the Lists was Richard Montague, afterwards Bishop of Norwich. This Learned Divine attack'd the French Defence, and made Animadversions both upon Baronius's Annals and Casaubon's Exercitations. Ottius comes next, who undertakes the examining Baronius's Annals Year by Year: But his Performance goes no farther than the Year 300; and besides, he dwells more upon Polemical Questions, than things relating to History. Augustinius Redingus, a German Benedictine Abbot, wrote a Book against this Examen of Ottius. He treats the same Questions; but his Method is negligent and broken. His Book was printed in 1680. Magendius comes into the Contest after Ottius: The Anti-Baronius of this Author furnishes but a small Volume; 'tis an Abridgment of Casaubon's Animadversions, with some of Blondell's Remarks on the Beginning of Baronius's Annals, together with some Annotations of his own. Lastly, the Learned Father Pagi, a Franciscan, has publish'd an Historical Chronological Critick upon Baronius's Annals: And here, without concerning himself with Controversy, he marks the Faults or Omissions in every Year of this Annalist. The first Volume of this Work, which takes in Remarks upon the first three Centuries, was published at Paris in 1689. And those which follow, have since been printed printed at Geneva. By the Help of this Work, and ſeveral other Hiſtories and Remarks upon Eccleſiaſtical Learning, publiſh'd ſince the Edition of Baronius's Annals, there's Matter now furniſh'd to make a complete Hiſtory of the Church unblemiſh'd with thoſe Miſtakes in the Performance of this Cardinal, who in a great meaſure has either been tranſcribed or abridged by thoſe who have wrote upon this Subject after him. Amongſt the Abridgers, Spondanus, Biſhop of Pamiers, who has likewiſe continued the Hiſtory, and John Gabriel Biſciola, a Jeſuite, are reckon'd the beſt: To which we may add Aurelius Peruſinus, a Prieſt of the Oratory, who has made a ſmall Epitome of this Work. As for Abraham Bzovius, a Polander, of the Order of the Friars Predicants, and Odericus Raynaldus, Prieſt of the Oratory, their Continuations publiſh'd in ſeveral Volumes are much below the Cardinal's Performance. Part of his Hiſtory has been tranſlated into Italian by Francis Panigarolus, Biſhop of Aſti; into French by Claud Durant, Joſeph de la Blance, and Arthur Thomas; into High-Dutch by Mark Fugier, Baron of Kirchburch; and into Poliſh by Staniſlaus Carnkovius, Archbiſhop of Gneſna.

Baronius's Annals were printed at Rome firſt, and afterwards at Antwerp by Plantin: Theſe are the beſt Editions. His Martyrology, with Notes, was printed at Rome twice; and afterwards once at Antwerp, and at Paris.

Baronius made a ſort of a Paræneſis or Exhortation to the Republick of Venice, upon the Subject of their Controverſy with Pope Paul V. He likewiſe entangled himſelf with the King of Spain: 'Twas by inſerting in the XIth Tome of his Annals, a Diſſertation upon the Monarchy of Sicily, againſt the King of Spain's Uſurpation. This Treatiſe was ſuppreſſed by Philip III.'s Proclamation, publiſhed October 30, 1610; and Cardinal Aſcanio Colonna got it cenſur'd. This Tract of Baronius was printed by itſelf at Paris in 1609, and at Leyden in 1619; but 'twas never after inſerted in his Annals printed in any Part of the King of Spain's Dominions. * Bellarmin. Spondan. Rynaldi. Gallonius, Caniſius, Janus Niſius Erythræus. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Libr. XVII. Cent. &c.

BARONIUS, (Dominic) a Prieſt and Preacher at Florence, in the XVIth Century; wrote with a great deal of Zeal againſt the Church of Rome, and fell in with the Sentiments of the Vaudoiſe in Piedmont: But he loſt his Reputation at laſt, by maintaining that in Times of Perſecution 'twas not neceſſary to make any outward Profeſſion of Orthodoxy. Celſus Martininguez, a Miniſter of the Italian Church at Geneva, wrote againſt him upon that Subject; and the Controverſy was carried on to Anſwers and Replies between them. This Baronius drew up a Maſs, or Communion-Office, from his own Notions: 'Twas deſign'd for a Reconciling Service; but the Proteſtants not thinking it ſufficiently purg'd from Popery, refus'd to come into the Accommodation. * Peter Giles's Eccl. Hiſt. of the Vaudoiſe Churches. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

BARRACONDA, a Town in Nigritia in Africk, ſituate upon an Arm of the Niger, call'd Gambea, over againſt the Town of Caſan.

BARREAUX, (The Fort of) a ſtrong Place in Dauphiné; it ſtands upon the River Iſére, upon the Frontiers of Savoy, between Grenoble and Chamberry, about eight Leagues from the firſt, three from the laſt, and two from Montmellian. The Duke of Savoy built this Fort in 1594. The Court of France receiving Advice of this new Fortification, took it ill that the Conſtable les Diguieres, Governor of the Province, and then at Grenoble, ſat ſtill without diſturbing the Building. The Conſtable wrote back to the Court, deſir'd them to have Patience, and they ſhould ſee the Duke of Savoy built that Fort for the King. In ſhort, 'twas no ſooner finiſh'd, but the Conſtable made himſelf Maſter of it; his Pretence was, it ſtood upon French Ground; and upon this Title the Kings of France have kept it ever ſince. * Hiſtoire du Connétable de les Dignieres.

BARREZ. The Carmelites were formerly call'd Freres Barrez; becauſe their Habit was Party-colour'd, with white and black: This is ſtill to be ſeen in ſome old Paintings at the Cloiſter of their Convent at Maubert in Paris. The Occaſion of this Habit was as follows: The Saracens, upon making themſelves Maſters of the Holy-Land, forbid theſe Religious wearing their Capouches, or any other Part of their Habit White; becauſe this Colour amongſt them was a Mark of Nobility: Upon this, the Carmelites were forc'd to comply with the Cuſtom of the Eaſtern People, and wear party-colour'd Cloth; and when they remov'd into the Weſt with this Habit they were call'd Barry Friar. This happen'd in the Pontificate of Honorius IV. Anno Dom. 1285; but afterwards theſe Religious wore their firſt Colour. * Trithem. de Laudibus Carmelet, Lib. 6. Dominicus Macer.

*BARTAS, (William Saluſt du) a French Poet: His moſt conſiderable Performance is, His firſt Week, or the Creation of the World: His next beſt is his Judith. Here he has aim'd at the Sublime; but the Poetick Fire has ſome Smoak in it, and oftentimes he wanted Strength to carry the Elevation farther than Bombaſt. The famous Ronſart, upon his reading Du Bartas's Creation, was ſo tranſported with the Poem, that he preſented him with a Gold Pen, and told him, with a Compliment in a Jingle, that he had done more in his Week than Ronſart had perform'd in his whole Life. But after all, Du Bartas had not a Genius exactly turn'd for Parnaſſus; he writes more like an Hiſtorian than a Poet. His Narration has taken too much Truth and Method from the Beginning of Geneſis: He ſeems defective in the three main Requiſites of his Faculty. For the Purpoſe, his Invention is dry and barren; he does not ſet Flowers enough upon his Ground, nor embroider his Hiſtory with Fiction. Now to go altogether upon Matter of Fact, is a Breach upon the Rules of Poetry, and falls ſhort of the Surprize and entertaining Amuſements expected. 2*dly*, His Method or Diſpoſition is not Artificial; he travels too much in the high Road, without obſerving what Ariſtotle and other great Maſters have written upon this Subject. 3*dly*. He fails in his Elocution; his Phraſeology is often improper, and his Metaphors ſtiff and foreign. He calls the Sun the Duke of Candles, and the Winds, Æolus's Poſtillions. Beſides, Du Bartas's Week is probably no Original; it looks like an Imitation of George Piſides's Hexaemeron, a Deacon of Conſtantinople. Notwithſtanding theſe Abatements, Du Bartas's Poems have met with the Fortune of the beſt Productions; that is, they have been tranſlated, imitated, and Notes and Animadverſions have been written upon them. Thus much for the Poet; and as for the Man, Du Bartas is ſaid to have had a modeſt Opinion of himſelf, and that he was a Perſon of Probity and unexceptionable Behaviour.

BARTENLAND, or the Country of Barten, a Province in Ducal Pruſſia; it lies between Natangia, Warmia, Galindia, Gudavia and Nadravia. The principal Towns in this Country are Barten, Allerberg, Schippenpel, Joanesberg, Argensberg, and Bartenſtein. * Maty, Diction.

BARTHOLOMEW de Braganza, ſo called becauſe deſcended from the noble Family of Braganza: He was born at Vicenza, and received the Habit of the Friars Predicants from S. Dominick himſelf. His remarkable Piety and Zeal preferr'd him to ſucceed S. Dominick in the Office of Maſter of the Sacred Palace. He has the Character of a truly Apoſtolick Perſon; he is ſaid to have travell'd all over Lombardy, and converted a great many Libertines and Heterodox People. Pope Innocent IV. nominated him for the See of Nimeſia in the Iſle of Cyprus, under the Archbiſhop of Nicoſia. In the Year 1248, this Pope ſent him Legate to S. Lewis King of France, then in Syria. This Prince much edified by Father Bartholomew's Inſtructions, took him into the cloſeſt Confidence, and ſometimes made him his Confeſſor. After ſix Years ſpent in Syria, he came home with S. Lewis into France. Afterwards Pope Alexander IV. made him Biſhop of Vicenza, where he was born; and here he was remarkable for all the valuable Qualities requir'd in his Character. He met with a great deal of rough Uſage from one Ecclin: This Man, who uſurp'd the Government of Vicenza, drove Braganza from his See, and made his Return impracticable as long as he lived; but Father Bartholomew ſurviving this untoward Man, came back to his Church. The People received him with all imaginable Marks of Regard, and put the Civil Government into his Hands; ſo that now he was Prince as well as Biſhop of Vicenza. Some Years forward he was ſent Legate firſt into England, and afterwards to the French Court.

Court. S. Lewis careſs'd him extremely, made him a Preſent of our Saviour's Crown of Thorns, which S. Bartholomew put into the Dominicans Convent, founded by himſelf at Vicenza: He died in the Year 1268. His Works are, Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture, and upon the Book de Cæleſti Hierarchia, which goes under the Name of S. Dennis the Areopagite. To theſe may be added two Volumes of Sermons, and ſome Opuſcula. * Ughel. Ital. Sac. Tom. 5. Spondan. Auctuar. Chron. ad Annal. Baron. Vinc. Font. Theat. Dominic. &c.

* BARTHOLUS. For great F. in Morery Vol. I. upon the Works of this Author, inſert ff. which means the Digeſts.

BARUCH, a Prophet, Son of Neriah of noble Deſcent, and Secretary to the Prophet Jeremy: There is no Hebrew Copy of Baruch now extant. There are two Syriack Verſions; but the Greek Text ſeems to have the moſt Antiquity. Baruch's Prophecy is no Part of the Jews Canon, neither is it in the Catalogue of Inſpired Writings given us by Origen, by Melito Biſhop of Sardis, by S. Hilary, by Gregory Nazianzen, by S. Jerom and Ruffinus; but 'tis pretended that the Council of Laodicea, S. Cyril of Jeruſalem, S. Athanaſius, and Epiphanius, have taken it into the Canon, and ſubjoin'd it to Jeremy's Prophecy. But to this 'tis anſwer'd, that Origen obſerves, that Jeremy with the Lamentations and his Epiſtle make but one Book; that Epiſtle therefore muſt be contained within that Book: It is ſo, and makes the xxixth Chapter of his Propheſy. Thus S. Athanaſius, S. Cyril of Jeruſalem, and the Council of Laodicea, have added Baruch, and made but one Book of them all. The Reaſon moſt probably for adding Baruch's Name was, becauſe he was Jeremy's Diſciple and Secretary; becauſe he ſuffer'd the ſame Perſecution with Jeremy; becauſe he publiſhed the ſame Words and Prophecies that Jeremy requir'd him to write; and thus a great Part of the Book may be reckon'd to both of them. And for this Reaſon, as 'tis highly probable, the Fathers that follow'd Origen, ſubjoin'd Baruch at the end of the Prophet Jeremy; by which 'tis plain, they meant no more than what was inſerted concerning Baruch in Jeremy's Prophecy. Had their Meaning been otherwiſe, they muſt have ſwell'd their Number of Canonical Books; whereas they never exceed the Number of twenty two. Upon theſe Conſiderations Cardinal Bellarmine frankly confeſſes, That neither any ancient Council, Pope or Father, in giving a Liſt of the Canon, had made any particular mention of this Baruch by himſelf. Now this Confeſſion would go upon a Miſtake, if either the Council of Laodicea, or S. Athanaſius, or S. Cyril, had meant any more by the mentioning of Baruck than thoſe Paſſages of him inſerted in the Book of Jeremy, and written in the Hebrew Language. And thus the Council of Laodicea's forbidding the reading none but Canonical Books in the Church, and their mentioning Baruch in the Number, may be accounted for. * Cyril. Hieroſol. Catecheſ. ad Illuminat. Athanaſ. Epiſt. Paſchal. Concil. Laodicen. Bellarm. de Verbo Dei, Lib. 1. cap. 18. Hieron. Præfat. in Jerem. Uſſer. in Annal. Vet. Teſt. Coſin. Scholaſtical Hiſt. of the Canon of the Holy Scriptures. M. Du Pin. Diſſertat. Prelim. ſur la Bible.

* BARWICK. For Edward II. in Morery Vol. I. read Edward IV.

BARZANA, (Alphonſus de) born at Corduba in Spain, and died Ann. Dom. 1598. He preach'd Chriſtianity in Peru twenty three Years; he is commonly call'd the Apoſtle of Tucuman, and is reported to have work'd a great many Miracles. * Alegambe, pag. 17.

BARZILLAI, a Jew of Aaron's Family, who marrying one of Barzillai's Daughters, took his Father-in-Law's Name. The Names of his Deſcendents not being entred upon the publick Regiſter, they were in no Condition to prove their Genealogy at their Return from Babylon; and for this Reaſon they were excluded from the Sacerdotal Office. * Nehemiah, cap. vii. v. 63, and 64.

BASAN, or Baſhan, Part of Paleſtine, between Jordan and the Sea of Galilee: 'Twas a very fruitful Spot of Ground. Moſes conquer'd it from King Og, and ſettled it upon the Half-Tribe of Manaſſes: 'Twas afterwards called Trachonites. * Numbers, Deut. &c.

BASCARA, a Town in that Part of Africk called Auſath by the Arabians. The Country, reckoning from the Weſt, reaches from Mauritania to Africa properly ſo call'd. The Soil about this Town affords a plentiful Product in Corn and Fruit, and particularly Dates of the beſt Kind: It belongs to the Country of Biledulgerid which is the Numidia of the Ancients. * D' Herbelot. Biblioth. Orientale.

* BASCI. For Pope Clement XIV. in Morery Vol. I. read Pope Clement VII.

* S. BASIL the Great, born at Cæſarea in Cappadocia A. D. 328; his Father's Name was Baſilius, and his Mother's Emmelia. He ſtudied firſt at Cæſarea in Paleſtine; from thence he travell'd to Conſtantinople to improve himſelf under the famous Rhetorician Libanius. From hence he removed to Athens, where he finiſhed his Education. Here he made an Acquaintance with S. Gregory Nazianzen. After having ſpent ſome time at Athens, he return'd home A. D. 355, and ſet up a Rhetorick Lecture there. Some time after, he travelled into Syria, Egypt, and Libya, to make a Viſit to the famous Monaſteries in thoſe Countries. He was ſo charm'd with the Manner of Living in theſe Retirements, that he reſolved to follow the Example. Thus when he came off his Travels, notwithſtanding his being ordained Reader, he withdrew to a Solitude in Pontus near S. Macrina's Monaſtery, and practiſed the Monaſtick Auſterities. His Brothers, Peter and Naucratius, and a great many other Friends, came thither to him, and lived under the ſame Diſcipline. He drew up a Rule for them; and thus we may reckon him the firſt Introducer of the Monaſtick Life in Pontus and Cappadocia. S. Baſil renounced the Communion of his Biſhop Dianius, becauſe he had ſigned the Confeſſion of Faith at Rimini; and refuſed to communicate with him, till this Biſhop declar'd upon his Death-Bed that he had always believed the Nicene Faith, and was ſurprized into a Subſcription at the Council of Rimini. Euſebius, who in the Year 362 ſucceeded Dianius, ordain'd S. Baſil a Prieſt; who ſoon after falling into ſome Miſunderſtanding with his Biſhop, went off to a Retirement. However, about three Years after they were reconciled; and now S. Baſil's Reputation ran ſo high, that upon Euſebius's Death he was choſen Biſhop of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, A. D. 369, or 370. 'Twas not without Difficulty that he accepted this Preferment. His Repoſe was very ſhort, a Perſecution by the Emperor Valens being quickly drawn upon him: This Prince at firſt ſent Modeſtus his Præfectus Prætorio to perſuade him to communicate with Eudoxius, and come into the Arian Belief; but S. Baſil was not to be gained by the Arguments offered. The Emperor Valens himſelf afterwards made him two Viſits at Cæſarea, but could make no Impreſſion upon his Conſtancy: Upon this his Majeſty growing angry, reſolv'd to expel him the See. 'Tis ſaid, when he gave Order for this purpoſe, his Son fell ſick: This Accident made Valens ſtop his Order, and ſend for S. Baſil. Soon after the Biſhop appear'd, the young Prince was almoſt recover'd; but the Emperor not coming up to S. Baſil's Terms, and ordering his Son to be baptized by the Arians, the young Prince relapſed and died. After his Death, Valens reſolved again to baniſh S. Baſil; but his Pen thrice breaking in his Hand when he was ſigning the Order, made him ceaſe his Rigour: But for the Truth of this Story, I dare be no Voucher. As for Modeſtus, being recover'd by this Saint's Prayers, he became his Friend. S. Baſil, now undiſturb'd, laid out himſelf to effect a Coalition between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches, then divided between Meletius and Paulinus, who both claimed the See of Antioch. The Weſtern Church own'd Paulinus for the Canonical Catholick Biſhop, and refuſed communicating with Meletius, who notwithſtanding was acknowledg'd by the Eaſterns. S. Baſil did his utmoſt to bring this Matter to an Accommodation, and to put an end to the Diſpute between the Eaſt and Weſt touching the three Hypoſtaſes. The Eaſterns took the Term Hypoſtaſis for a Perſon, and by conſequence aſſerted three Hypoſtaſes in the Deity. The Latins, on the contrary, believing Hypoſtaſis, Nature, and Eſſence to mean the ſame thing, made it a Piece of Hetorodoxy to affirm three Hypoſtaſes in God Almighty. But notwithſtanding S. Baſil's Effort, the Conteſt remain'd unreconcil'd till about nine Months after his Death; S. Baſil was likewiſe ſomewhat embroiled about the Partition of the Province of Cappadocia, which the Emperor had divided into two. Anthymus Biſhop of Tyana, the Metropolis of the new Province, attempted the ſtretching his Dioceſe beyond the Limits thought reaſonable ſonable by S. Baſil. The main of the Conteſt was, for the Juriſdiction of a Town call'd Zazima. S. Baſil, to ſecure it for himſelf, founded a Biſhop's See there, and gave it to his Friend S. Gregory Nazianzen; but Anthymus being already poſſeſs'd, S. Gregory, who loved Quietneſs, ſeem'd to drop his Claim, and retired. S Baſil was blamed by Theodotus of Nicopolis, and other Catholick Biſhops, for communicating with Euſtathius of Sebaſtia. And here, to juſtify his Conduct, he prevailed with that Biſhop to ſign a Catholick Confeſſion of Faith, agreeable to that of the Council of Nice: But ſome time afterwards, Euſtathius declared openly againſt S. Baſil's Sentiment, joined the Eudoxians, oppoſed the Council of Nice, and denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt. Upon this, S. Baſil renounced his Friendſhip, took Theodotus and other Catholick Biſhops by the Hand, and wrote ſeveral Letters againſt Euſtathius. He wrote likewiſe againſt Apollinarius, and had a Share in all the Controverſies of his Time. He died January 1, A. D. 378, or 379. The Greeks ſet his Feſtival to this Day; but the Latins place it on that of his Conſecration.

The beſt Editions of this Father, are thoſe printed at Paris in three Volumes in Folio, Greek and Latin, A. D. 1618, and 1638. The Firſt Volume takes in his Homilies in the following Order: Homiliæ IX. In Hexaëmeron. XXII. In quoſdam Pſalmos. Diverſæ, Numero XXXI. There are likewiſe here two Books of Baptiſm, Commentaries on the ſixteen firſt Chapters of Iſaiah, and a Tract de Virginitate: Theſe ſome of the Learned believe none of S. Baſil's. The Second Volume furniſhes five Books againſt Eunomius; the Diſcourſe de Spiritu Sancto to Amphilochius; his Aſceticks, his Moral Diſcourſes, and ſeveral Epiſtles. This Second Volume has twenty four Sermons upon Moral Subjects, collected by Simeon Logotheta, which are none of S. Baſil's: To which we may add a Panegyrick upon a Monaſtick Life, and two or three other Tracts, which don't belong to this Saint. The Third contains a great many excellent Epiſtles of S. Baſil, upon the Heads of Doctrine, Diſcipline, Morality, and the Occurrences of his own time. The Bibliotheca Patrum likewiſe affords us ſome Tracts under S. Baſil's Name, viz. three Liturgies, one Greek and Latin, the ſecond Latin, and the third tranſlated out of Arabick by Victorius Scialagh, a Maronite. Cotelerius has likewiſe given us a Diſcourſe reckoned to S. Baſil upon the VIth of the Proverbs, Verſe 9. How long wilt thou ſleep, O Sluggard? When wilt thou ariſe out of thy Sleep? It muſt be ſaid this Diſcourſe is not unworthy S. Baſil. This Father likewiſe wrote Commentaries upon the whole Bible, moſt of which are not extant.

None of the Greek Fathers write with more Elocution, Learning, and prudent Reſerve, than S. Baſil: His Diction is correct and ſignificant, his Expreſſion lofty, and his Style, take it altogether, polite and perſuaſive. Eraſmus, who was a good Judge, makes no ſcruple to preferr him to the beſt Orators of Ancient Greece, and even to Demoſthenes himſelf. His Commentaries upon the Scripture are very natural and inſtructive; his Panegyricks are admirable; his Reaſoning is Logical and ſtrong; and his Learning uncommon in his Controverſial Tracts: His Moral Diſcourſes are moving and inſtructive; and his Epiſtles diſcover how knowing he was in the Diſcipline of the Church, and how prudent in the Management. He had made a great Progreſs in Heathen Learning, and was Maſter of every thing that was fine in the Poets, Hiſtorians, and Orators; and all this Learning was intermix'd and ballaſted with ſolid Piety. He was affable and ſmooth tempered to every body, charitable to the Poor, and ſympathizing at the Misfortunes of others. As to his Perſon, and Manner of living, S. Gregory Nazianzen informs us, he was of a pale Complexion, wore his Beard long, and was reſerved in his Converſation: His Temper ſeem'd melancholy and retired; and he was obſerved to be ſomewhat particular in his Habit and Diet. A great many Perſons of Character and Piety have written Encomiums upon S. Baſil. Ephrem, Amphilochius; S. Gregory Nyſſen, and S. Gregory Nazianzen, delivered a Panegyrick upon him; and the laſt wrote twelve Epigrams, as he calls them, for his Epitaph. Helladius was his Succeſſor in the See of Cæſarea: And John Damaſcen reports, that this Prelate wrote S. Baſil's Life, which is not come down to us. * Hieron. in Chron. & in Catal. cap. 116. Gregor. Nazianzen, Epiſt. 38. Orat. de Laudib. Baſil. &c. Theodoret. Hiſt. Lib. 4. cap. 19. Socrat. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Sozomen, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Baronius, &c.

BASILIUS of Ancyra, a Prieſt and Martyr. This holy Martyr is not the ſame with Baſilius Biſhop of Ancyra: He all along maintained the Nicene Faith againſt the Arians; and 'tis ſaid, he defended it in a Council of two hundered and fifty Biſhops convened in Paleſtine, which is ſuppoſed to be the Council of Jeruſalem, held A. D. 335. He was proſecuted in Conſtantius's Reign, and forbidden to meet in any Church Aſſembly. In the Emperor Julian's Reign, he publickly exhorted the Chriſtians to Firmneſs and Conſtancy; and having one Day declaimed boldly againſt the Pagan Sacrifices, he was ſeized, and brought before the Governor Saturninus. He boldly owned his Religion, and Saturninus delated him to the Emperor Julian: This Prince coming to Ancyra, ſent for Baſilius, who reproached him for his Apoſtaſy. This Freedom provoking Julian, he ordered the Count Fromentinus to ſee ſeven Pieces of his Fleſh pulled out every day. Baſilius's Courage not giving way to this Rigour, Fromentinus ordered his Body to be prick'd with hot Irons ſharp at the Point. This Torture put an end to his Life, A. D. 362. * Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. 21. Sozomen, Lib. 5. Ruinart, Acta Martyr, &c. Tillemont, Tom. 7. des Memoires Eccleſ. Baillet Vies des Saincts.

BASIL of Acride, Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica, in the Twelfth Century, being ſolicited by Pope Adrian IV. to reconcile himſelf to the Church of Rome, wrote a Letter by way of Anſwer, to prove the Greeks were no Schiſmatical Church, and that the Pope has no Juriſdiction or Superiority over them. * M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

BASILISCUS. There are two Martyrs of this Name in the Martyrology; one of them a Soldier, and the other Biſhop of Comana; and they both ſuffered in the Beginning of the Fourth Century. The Memory of the firſt ſtands upon very queſtionable Records; but the Martyrdom of the ſecond is poſitively affirmed by Palladius, in his Life of S. Chryſoſtom. This Author reports, that Baſiliſcus, who ſuffered Martyrdom at Nicomedia, in the Reign of Maximin, appeared to S. Chryſoſtom in his Exile, and that there was a Church near Comana dedicated to the Honour of this Saint. * Pallad. in Vit. Chryſoſt. Sozomen, Lib. 8. cap. 28. Theodor. lib. 5. c. 34.

BASNAGE, (Benjamin) was born An. Dom. 1580. His Father being a Proteſtant, was forced to quit France, and retire for Shelter into England. He preached ſeveral Years in a Church at Norwich; and upon his Return home, was choſen Paſtor of Carrentan in Lower Normandy. His Son ſucceeded him in this Pariſh; from whence he was afterwards called to a Congregation at Roan. But notwithſtanding he had the Licence of a National Synod for this Remove, he refuſed to quit his Flock, and accept the Preferment. He was a Perſon of a diſtinguiſh'd Character, and one of the top Champions for maintaining the Liberties (as they call them) of the Reformed Churches. He was Preſident of the Hugonotick Aſſembly, held at Rochelle, A.D. 1622. And here, as the Dutch Supplementer reports, he had a great Share in the vigorous Reſolutions then taken. By theſe vigorous Reſolutions, he means open Revolt and Riſing upon the Government. For the Aſſembly, it ſeems, came to this Concluſion, that 'twas neceſſary to run to Arms in their own Defence: For now the King had taken a Reſolution to march at the Head of fifty thouſand Men, to cruſh thoſe who refuſed to ſubmitt to his Appointments. He ſigned the Inſtrument of their Defence in quality of joint Moderator; and to make this extraordinary Expedient carry home, they ſent him to England to ſolicit for Auxiliaries. And here the Dutch Supplementer pretends King James I. diſappointed them, and failed in his Promiſe. Upon this, Baſnage travelled into Scotland: And here he endeavoured to awaken the Zeal and warm the Charity of his Friends, for the Aſſiſtance of thoſe who ſuffered in France, and by the Succeſſes of King Lewis XIII. were brought to the laſt Extremity. An Accommodation being afterwards made, Baſnage returned into France, and aſſiſted as Deputy for Normandy at the National Synod, held at Charenton, A. D. 1623. The Court thinking he went too far in his reforming Zeal, the King, by an Order of Council, forbid him the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, and the Liberty of appearing at the National Synod, A. D. 1631. But the Synod beginning their

their Seſſion with warm Remonſtrances upon this Article, the Court gave way; upon which Baſnage appear'd amongſt them, and had a great Weight in the Deciſions of the Aſſembly. The Infractions upon the Edict of Nantes were not the only Misfortunes which diſturbed Baſnage; the Proteſtants themſelves began to diſagree in their Sentiments, and draw off into Parties. The Tenet of Univerſal Grace, advanced by Amiraldus, and the new Method of reconciling God's Decrees with the Liberty of the Will, maintained by M. Teſtard, raiſed Peoples Paſſions, and brought on Diſputes, likely to prove dangerous to the common Intereſt. In the managing this Controverſy, thoſe who were at the Head of Buſineſs declared for Moderation, received the Explanations of thoſe who were charged with going too far, and ordered that theſe Queſtions, too big for Human Underſtandings, ſhould be no farther argued. Notwithſtanding theſe Traverſes, and Avocations, Baſnage found Leiſure to combat the Controverſial Writers and Miſſionaries of the Church of Rome. To this purpoſe he publiſhed a Treatiſe concerning the Church. He died at ſeventy two Years of Age, leaving Iſſue two Sons, of which the eldeſt, Anthony, was Paſtor of Bayeux. This Anthony's eldeſt Son, Samuel Baſnage de Flotmanville, ſucceeded his Father in his Congregation at Bayeux; but was forced to leave France in 1685, and retire to Zutphen. This Samuel wrote Exercitations on Baronius: He begins where Caſaubon ended, with a Deſign to go through the whole Work: But upon Recollection that Criticiſm and Quarreling from one end to the other would make his Performance leſs agreeable, and that Father Pagi had gone thorough before him, he reſolved to alter his Scheme, and write Eccleſiaſtical Annals: That this Form would afford frequent Occaſion to diſcover Baronius's Miſtakes, and give the World right Information. A Work of this kind, as the Dutch Supplementer continues, is ſo much the more neceſſary for the Reformed, becauſe none of that Perſuaſion have gone upon this Subject ſince the Magdeburgenſes. As for Le Sueur, who wrote in French, he has not cited his Authorities, nor finiſhed his Undertaking. Beſides, the Criticks have lately diſcovered a great Number of new Records for the clearing Church-Hiſtory: That theſe Diſcoveries being publiſhed in ſeparate diſtinct Tracts, the throwing the Hiſtory contained in them into a Body, would be ſerviceable for Strength and Connexion: M. Flotmanville has performed as far as three Volumes in Folio, which came down to the Reign of Phocas. And 'tis expected the reſt of his Annals will be ſhortly publiſhed, being already finiſhed as far as the Fourteenth Century. * Annales Politico-Eccleſiaſtici. Ann. 1706. Three Vol. Folio.

BASNAGE, (James) eldeſt Son to Henry, (ſee Morery's Engliſh Supplement) was born A. D. 1653, and was Paſtor of the Reformed Church at Roan. He wrote an Examen upon the Methods directed by the Aſſembly of the Gallican Clergy for ſhortning Controverſy, and reconciling People to the Church of Rome. In this Tract he threw in ſome Remarks on Father Simon's Critical Hiſtory then newly publiſh'd, which afterwards drew a Storm upon him. The Edict of Nantes being ſuppreſſed, he found himſelf obliged to leave France, and withdraw to Rotterdam, where he exerciſed his Miniſtry till his Remove to the Hague, A. D. 1710. His principal Performance is his Church-Hiſtory. He likewiſe wrote a Hiſtory of the Bible in Folio, with ſhort Annals from the Creation to the End of the Apoſtolick Age. To which may be added his Hiſtory of the Jews, two Volumes of Sermons, &c.

BASNAGE, (Henry) Sieur de Beauval, ſecond Son of Henry Baſnage, born at Roan, A. D. 1656. was bred to his Father's Profeſſion, and pleaded at the Bar with Reputation. He publiſh'd, when but young, a little Tract about Toleration of Religions. 'Tis ſaid to be written with a great deal of Spirit and Politeneſs. In 1687, he retired into Holland, where M. Bayle being diſabled by ill Health to go on with his Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, deſired M. Baſnage to ſupply his place. And though 'twas ſomewhat a bold Undertaking to venture after M. Bayle, who had acquitted himſelf with Reputation, he engaged notwithſtanding, and has written the Hiſtory of the Works of the Learned about twenty two Years. He was frequently interrupted in this Work by the Conteſt that happen'd between him and M. Jurieu. The Diſpute began by ſome Extracts Baſnage had taken from M. de Meaux's Avertiſſemens: Theſe it ſeems diſguſted Jurieu, who had no Temper where he thought himſelf diſobliged. He fancying he had Reputation enough to cruſh an Author who had juſt appeared in the World, fell on with great Roughneſs. But M. de Beauval not only returned him an Anſwer, but delated his Doctrine to a Synod. Two of Jurieu's Sermons, in which he defended the Lawfulneſs of hating our Neighbour, by the Example of the Prophets, gave an Occaſion to the Publiſhing M. de Beauval's Animadverſions againſt this Caſuiſtry, ſo contrary to the Doctrine of the Goſpel. Laſtly, M. Beauval undertook a Review of Furetiere's Univerſal Dictionary; and here he made ſeveral conſiderable Additions, corrected a great many Definitions ill formed in the firſt Edition, and diſcovered the Niceneſs of his Taſte, by his Choice of Citations from the beſt Authors. People were ſurprized to ſee Father Simon challenge this Work as his own. M. de Beauval complained publickly of the Injuſtice. 'Tis obſervable, that the Additions pretended to be added related only to the Caraites, or ſome other Sectaries, which were foreign to the Deſign of that Dictionary; and that Father Simon had thrown them into his own Edition, to ſhew his Rabbinical Learning, or to repeat ſomething he had written elſewhere. To conclude, M. Baſnage died in March 1710. And ſince Books were ſo much his Inclination, he would needs be carried into his Study, and expire there.

BASRA, a Town belonging to the Kingdom of Fez in Barbary. 'Tis ſituate in the Province Habata upon the Confines of Aſgara. * Maty, Diction.

BASSIGNI, or le Baſſigni, in Latin, Baſſiniacus Ager, a Country of France in Champagne, bordering upon Burgundy and Barrois, near the Head of the Marne and the Meuſe, on the ſide of Lorrain. Langres or Chaumont is the Capital: The other Towns are, Bar-ſur-Aube, Audelot, Clermont, Montigni-le-Roy, and Nogent-le-Roy: They are all part of Champagne. * Sanſon.

BASSUS, ſurnamed Lucilius, ſucceeded Cerealis Vetilianus in the Government of Judea. The Faction of the revolting Jews not being wholly deſtroy'd at the ſacking of Jeruſalem, ſeveral Parties of them retired to Forts in the Country, and ſtood upon their Defence. To finiſh theſe Remains of the War, Baſſus beſieged them in the Caſtle, and Places of Strength to which they had retired. He began his firſt Attack upon the Citadel of Herodion, which after a little battering ſurrendred. His next Enterprize was the Fort of Maccheronte upon the River Jordan. This being a Place of the laſt Importance, upon the ſcore of its Situation, and the Works with which 'twas fortified, he thought it neceſſary to ſit down before it; for unleſs 'twas reduced, the Repoſe of the Country could not be well ſecured. On the other ſide, there was a very ſtrong Garriſon in the Place; the Men were diſciplin'd and brave, and reſolved to fight it out, and ſtand the laſt Extremities rather than capitulate. They were farther animated to ſo obſtinate a Defence by their Reliance upon the Conduct and Courage of their Governor Eleazer. This Man had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf at the Siege of Jeruſalem, and gain'd the Reputation of a great Officer: And now his Courage came up to Expectation; he made frequent Sallies upon the Romans, repulſed them oftentimes in their Attacks with conſiderable Loſs: And 'twas obſerved, he was always at the Head of his Troops while the Action laſted, and in the Rear when they made their Retreat. However, having ſomewhat more Fire than Guard, his Raſhneſs undid him; for appearing one day at the Foot of the Wall, jeſting at the Romans, and inſulting them with ill Language, one Rufus, an Egyptian Centinel of a Gigantick Strength, ſprung out from his Company, truſs'd him upon his Shoulders, and carried him into the Roman Camp. Baſſus immediately ordered him to be ſtript, and ſeverely whipt in ſight of the Garriſon. This melancholy Spectacle put the Garriſon into a great Conſternation, eſpecially when they ſaw Baſſus had erected a Croſs to crucify their Governor. Upon this they offered to ſurrender the Place, provided Eleazer might be diſcharged without ſuffering any farther. They fancied as long as this brave Perſon was living, they need not deſpair of reſtoring their Affairs. In ſhort, Eleazer had his Liberty, and the Romans entred Maccheronte; but at the ſame time they ſet Fire to the Baſſe-Ville, and put all the People to the Sword. It ſeems they were neither comprehended in the Capitulation, nor had any Notice of the Treaty. All the Women and Children were laid in Irons, and made Slaves. As for the Garriſon of Maccheronte, they went off to the Foreſt of Cards. This Retreat notwithſtanding did not prevent their falling into the ſame Misfortune with their Friends, whom they had ſo ſcandalouſly deſerted. Baſſus purſued, and having come up with them, order'd his Cavalry to ſurround the Wood, and the Foot to cut it down. Theſe unfortunate Men perceiving there was no Hopes of Eſcape, reſolved to ſell their Lives dear, and made a deſperate Charge upon the Enemy; but they were ſo vigorouſly received, that they could neither open a Paſſage, nor maintain their Ground: However, the whole Body, which made three thouſand, died fighting to a Man; and, which is ſomewhat ſurprizing, the Romans loſt but twelve Men in the Action. Baſſus had but a ſhort Enjoyment of his Victory: He died ſoon after in his Government, and was ſucceeded by Flavius Silva. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 7. Cap. 20, &c.

in

BATHASECK, a Town in Lower Hungary. Wiſchert ſets this Town in the Earldom of Tolna, upon the Sarwitze, a League and a half from its falling into the Danube; but Baudrand makes it the ſame with Batha, or Batka, places it upon the Danube, within the Earldom of Batha, makes it an Epiſcopal See under the Archbiſhop of Coloxa, and pretends 'tis the ſame with Bathantii, an old Town in Lower Pannonia. * Maty, Diction.

BATHOS, a Valley in Macedonia, near the River Alpheus, where the Giants fought the Gods. Pauſanias relates, that 'twas the Cuſtom when they ſacrific'd there, to make artificial Thunder and Lightning, to imitate the flaſhing and formidable Noiſe in this extraordinary Action. * Pauſanias in Arcadic.

BATRACHOMYOMACHIA, a ſmall Greek Poem, deſcribing the Fight between the Frogs and the Mice, and reckon'd to Homer. Statius believed this great Poet the Author; his Reaſon is, that there is ſcarce any extraordinary Perſon in this Faculty who has not thrown out ſome little entertaining Amuſement firſt; and for this he makes Virgil's Culex an Inſtance. Sed & Culicem legimus, & Batrachomyomachiam etiam agnoſcimus. Nec quiſquam eſt illuſtrium Poëtarum, qui non aliquid operibus ſuis ſtylo remiſſiore præluſerit. However, ſeveral Writers ſeem not to believe this Poem one of Homer's Productions, and ſeem to give good Reaſons for their Opinions. Perrault, who wrote the Parallel of the Ancients and Moderns, and always gives the Preference to the laſt, has publiſhed a Tranſlation of the Batrachomyomachia in French Verſe. * Statius Præfat. Sylvarum ad Stellum. Henrique Stephan. Schediaſmatum, Lib. 6. cap. 22. Petrus Nunneſius, Commentar. ad Phrynici Dictiones Atticas. Gaſpar. Barthius, Animadverſiones in Stat. 1. pag. 5.

BATTI, a General of the Tartars, made a formidable Incurſion into Ruſſia; and after having conquer'd the Country, made the Inhabitants paſs their time very ill: This happen'd A. D. 1224. The Ruſſians were forc'd to live under this Oppreſſion, till Baſilius, Great Duke of Muſcovy, expell'd the Tartars, and reſtor'd his Countrymen to their ancient Liberties. This Deliverance happened A. D. 1500. * Herbertſtenius, Petrus Peræus, Rerum Muſcov. Georg. Hornius Orbis Imper. pag. 375.

BATTO, Son of Changi King of the Tartars, and Brother of Ochtai. He ſucceeded his Father in the Crown, and claiming a Right to the Northern Countries, made himſelf Maſter of Muſcovy, Ruſſia, Poland, Sileſia, and ravag'd all theſe Countries in a terrible manner; and at laſt fighting General Henry near Lignitz, he gave him an entire Defeat, and killed Poppo, Great Maſter of the Cruſade-Knights A. D. 1242. For a Proof of this great Victory, he ſent off nine Sackfulls of Ears cut off from the Enemy he had deſtroy'd. * Bonfin. Dec. 2. Lib. 7. Cromer. Lib. 8.

* BAVARIA. For Maximilian's being General of the Popiſh League in 1609, Morery Vol. I. read One thouſand ſix hundred and nineteen.

BAUDOSA, a ſort of Muſical Inſtrument with a great many Strings, mention'd by Aymerius de Peyrato in the Life of Charlemagne: 'Tis in a Manuſcript in the French King's Library, Number 1343. In this Life there are ſome Latin Rhimes, which in a very particular Style deſcribe a Conſort of Muſical Inſtruments. Some of the Verſes are theſe:

Quidam Baudoſam concordabant,
Plurimas Chordas cumulantes.
Quidam triplices cornu tonabant,
Quædam fauramina inclaudentes;
Quidam choros conſonantes,
Duplicem chordam perſtridentes.
Quidam taborellis ruſticabant,
Greſſum ſonum præmittentes.
Quidam cabreta vaſconiſabant,
Levis Pedibus perſaltantes.
Quidam Lyram & tibiam properabant;
Alios tactu præcedentes.
Quidam Harpam altè pulſabant,
Prolixas Virgulas ſic gerentes.
Quidam rebecam arcuabant,
Muliebrem vocem confingentes, &c.

* Du Cange Gloſſar.

*BAUDOUIN, or Baldwin (Francis) a Lawyer. To the reſt of his Works muſt be added his Preface and Notes upon Optatus, upon the Collatio Carthaginenſis, or the Conference between the Catholicks and Donatiſts at Carthage; his Preface and Notes upon Victor's Hiſtory of the Vandals; his three Defences againſt Calvin and Beza; an Information written in French for reforming the Church, with an Apology in Anſwer to a Perſon who wrote againſt this Reformation, under the Name of a French Prince. Baldwin wrote with great Eaſe, Correctneſs, and Elegancy. He was not only a very learned Lawyer, but a good Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorian. See Baldwin, Engliſh Morery Vol. I.

BAUDRAND, (Michael Anthony) Prior of Rouvres and Neumarche, was born at Paris A. D. 1633. His Father, Stephen Baudrand, was Lord of Combe, and had ſeveral conſiderable Employments in the Civil Liſt. Michael Baudrand publiſh'd his Great Latin Geographical Dictionary A. D. 1682. He wrote Notes upon Papyrius Maſſonus's Book of the Rivers of France; he likewiſe wrote a Tract of the Preſent State of the Latin Church, not yet printed. At laſt, at the Inſtance of his Friends, he undertook the making an Univerſal Geographical Dictionary in French, where he treats only of Modern Geography: This Book was printed in 1705, five Years after the Author's Death. 'Tis a large and ſerviceable Work; but not altogether without Miſtake. * Præfat. du Diction. Geograph. François de Baudrand.

BAYKAL, (the Lake of) in Great Tartary in Aſia. M. Witzen, in his new Map of the Countries of Aſia and Europe, places it between the 112th and 117th Degree of Longitude, and between the 58th and 59th of Latitude. 'Tis about twenty Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, and ſeven or eight from North to South, being ſurrounded with very high Mountains; 'tis frequently ruffled with contrary Winds, which makes the Paſſage troubleſome. The Muſcovites croſs it in their Voyage from Toboles to Peking. They ſail up the River Angara till they come to this Lake, which after they have paſs'd over, they travel by Land upon Horſes or Dromedaries ſold them by the Tartars. * Pere Avril, Voyages de divers Etats d'Europe & d'Aſie, &c.

BAYLE, (Peter) Philoſophy and Hiſtory Profeſſor of the Reformed Religion, and famous for his Writings publiſh'd about the end of the Seventeenth Century: He was born at Carlat, a ſmall Town in the County of Foix, A. D. 1647: His Father was a Miniſter there, and his Mother was deſcended from an ancient Gentleman's Family call'd Du Caſſe. He had from his Childhood a ſtrong Inclination for Learning, and particularly for the Belles Lettres. His Fancy lay ſtrongly for reading Plutarch and Mountaigne's Eſſays: This laſt he has imitated in his Style, and borrow'd too many of his Sentiments. Notwithſtanding his being bred a Calviniſt, he turn'd Roman Catholick at twenty two Years of Age. It ſeems his reading Controverſial Books, and the Pretence of a living infallible Judge, had ſurpriz'd his Underſtanding; but 'twas not above a Year and a half before he return'd to the Proteſtant Communion. The exceſſive Veneration which he ſaw given to Saints, Angels and Images, made him quite weary of the Roman Catholick Religion. After his turning Proteſtant, the French King's Edict publiſhed againſt Relapſers in 1674, forced him to to quit France and retire to Geneva in 1675. He ventured back into France, came to Paris, and kept Correſpondence with Men of Letters. About half a Year after, the Philoſophy-Profeſſor's Place falling vacant at Sedan, M. Bayle diſputed for it, and carried it; but in July 1681, he loſt his Employment by an Order of the Privy-Council; by vertue of which the Univerſity of Sedan was ſuppreſs'd. This Accident obliged him to take Shelter in Holland, where he was choſen Philoſophy and Hiſtory-Profeſſor at Rotterdam in March 1684: He began les Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, which were well received. This Work was continued till March 1687 excluſively, when falling into a Diſtemper, he was forced to break off. Some time after he recovered his Health, but had not much Quietneſs along with it. About this time there was a Satyrical Book againſt the Reformed, printed under the Title of l'Avis aux Refugiés. This Book, which runs ſtrong for Arbitrary Power, was charged upon Bayle, and that with Truth enough, notwithſtanding he diſown'd it. Thus the Apologies he made upon this Subject being not regarded, he was turned out of his Profeſſor's Poſt. And now, having Leiſure, he undertook the writing his Hiſtorical and Critical Dictionary: The firſt Edition of which was publiſhed in 1696; and the ſecond, enlarged to more than a Third, in 1702. His Repreſentation of the Manicheans Opinion concerning the Origin of Evil, and more particularly his bold Reaſoning upon that Subject, has made him ſuſpected for little better than a Sceptick. He offer'd at a Defence in ſeveral Writings, and particularly in a Book entituled, Les Entretiens de Maxime & de Themiſte, not publiſh'd till 1707. He died December 28, 1706, juſt after he had deliver'd a Copy of this Defence to the Printer. This Author's Works are, Lettre à M. L. A. D. C. Docteur de Sorbonne, où l'on fait voir par pluſieurs raiſons tirées de la Philoſophie & de la Théologie; That Comets are no Preſages of Misfortune, &c. Les Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres. La Critique generale de l'Hiſtoire du Calviniſme du P. Maimbourg. Nouvelles Lettres de l'Auteur de la Critique generale du Calviniſme de M. Maimbourg en 1685. Réponſe de l'Auteur des Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres à l'Avis, qui lui à été donné ſur ce qu'il a dit en faveur du P. Malebranche, touchant les plaiſirs des Sens, &c. in 12mo. Ce que c'eſt que la France toute Catholique ſous le Régne de Louis le Grand, 12mo. 1686. Un Commentaire Philoſophique ſur ces Paroles de l'Evangile, contrains les d'entrer. Réponſe d'un nouveau Converti à la Lettre d'un Refugié, pour ſervir d'Addition au Livre de Dom. Denys de Sante-Marthe, intitulé, Réponſe aux Plaintes des Proteſtans, in 12mo. 1689. La Cabale chimerique, & la Chimere de la Cabale de Rotterdam, imprimées en 1691. Son Dictionaire Critique. Les Réponſes au Queſtions d'un Provincial, 5 Vol. in 12*mo.* upon ſeveral diſtinct Subjects, which he could not put into his Dictionary; and a Book entituled, Janua Cœlorum Reſerata. Nouvelle Avis au petit Auteur des petits Livrets, &c. in 1692. Réponſe pour M. Bayle à M. le Clerc, &c. in 1706. Addition aux Penſées ſur les Cométes. He left ſeveral other Tracts ſtill in Manuſcript, as, Leçons d'Hiſtoire & de Philoſophie. Un Abregé des Vies des Hommes Illuſtres de Plutarque. Un Diſcourſe ſur la Vie du Grand Guſtave. La Continuation de la Critique du Calviniſme. Un Dictionaire Mythologique, des Lettres, &c. Bayle was a good Philoſopher, and particularly eminent in Metaphyſicks. But in ſome of his Articles in his Hiſtorical Dictionary, he has taken unwarrantable Liberties, and too viſibly attack'd the main Principles of Religion. As to his Learning and Genius, he was no ordinary Perſon. Notwithſtanding his unhappy Management in ſome few Inſtances, he was certainly a Man of Wit, Style, and great Reading. * Memoires du Temps.

BAZMAN and Cobad, were two Men of Character for Valour, and particularly for the famous Duel they fought in ſight of the Perſian and Turkiſh Armies. The Fate of theſe two Nations lay upon the Succeſs of the two Combatants. Bazman was a Turk, one of Aſraſiab King of Turkeſtan's Subjects. This Prince had paſſed the Gihon with a formidable Army to invade Perſia. Cobad was a Perſian, and fought for Naudhar, one of the laſt Kings of the firſt Perſian Dynaſty. Before the Combat, 'twas agreed that on which ſide ſoever the Victory fell, it ſhould accrue to the Nation the Conqueror belong'd to. Theſe Articles were accordingly kept, and Cobad having knock'd down and kill'd Bazman, the King of Turkeſtan paſſed the Gihon, and gave the Perſian no more Diſturbance. * D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Orientale.

BAZUNA, a populous Town upon the Æthiopick Ocean, ſituate between the Coaſt of the Cafres and the Sea of Zanguebar, about ſix Days Journey from the Town Camua, which belongs to the Cafres. The People of Bazuna, as they ſay, live upon nothing but Snakes and Frogs. We may obſerve by the way, that Cafre in Arabick ſignifies a Man of no Religion, and particularly him that is no Muſſelman. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

BEARD. To give the Reader ſome Account of the Cuſtom of Countries and Times upon this Article: The Greeks always wore their Beards long; and Athenæus obſerves, that Alexander was the firſt who, to follow the Perſian Faſhion, ſhaved his Beard. 'Twas a long time before there was either Shaving or Cutting of Hair at Rome. Livy ſeems to ſay, that 'twas the Faſhion in the 369th Year from the Building of the City. For ſpeaking of Manlius Capitolinus, who was taken Priſoner, he informs us, "That moſt of the People regretting his "Misfortune, put on Mourning, and let their Beard "and their Hair grow." As much as to ſay, that when they were out of Mourning, they cut their Hair and ſhaved. Notwithſtanding Varro ſays poſitively, that the firſt Barbers came out of Sicily in the Year of Rome 454, and that one Ticinius Menas brought them thither. From this time 'twas the Cuſtom for young Men to ſhave and cut their Hair from one and twenty to nine and forty Years old: But after this laſt Period, as Pliny reports, they were not allowed this Faſhion. Scipio Africanus made no uſe of a Razor till he was forty. Nero and Caligula began to ſhave at twenty, or one and twenty; but Auguſtus deferr'd it till twenty five. The Day they were firſt ſhaved was a ſort of Feſtival, accompany'd with ſome Circumſtances of Solemnity: They took care to put the Hair of their Beard into a little Box of Gold or Silver, which they preſented to ſome Idol. For Inſtance, Nero offer'd his Beard to Jupiter Capitolinus, as Suetonius relates. Adrian dropt his Predeceſſor's Cuſtom, and was the firſt Emperor, according to Xiphilin, who wore a long Beard. From this Reign, till after Conſtantine, moſt of the Emperors were unſhaven, excepting ſome Princes remarkable for Effeminacy, ſuch as Caracalla and Heliogabalus. After Conſtantine, long Beards went out again, till the Emperor Heraclius, who wore the Hair of his Face long. The Greek Emperors followed the Cuſtom of their Country, and made no uſe of a Razor. The Goths and Franks wore no Hair on their Face, but a ſingle Muſtache. Clodion order'd the French to wear the Hair of their Heads long, and let their Beards grow, to diſtinguiſh them from the Romans. This Cuſtom laſted upon the Country till King Lewis the Younger. The Lombards wore long Beards, and 'tis ſuppoſed they took their Name from their Faſhion. Diodorus Siculus and Tacitus report, that the ancient Germans ſhaved their Face. Otho I. began the Cuſtom of wearing long Beards in Germany; but Frederick I. revived the Uſe of the Razor. The old Philoſophers let their Beards grow very long without Clipping or Shaving. The Prieſts of the Moſaick Law wore Beards; which Cuſtom has continued upon the Jews ever ſince. There is a Canon of a Council held at Carthage, which forbids the Clergy wearing their Hair or their Beards long. Thus the Canon ſpeaks, if the Text is not corrupted, Clericus nec Comam nutriat, nec Barbam. But this is a Queſtion; for in another Reading it runs, Nec Barbam tondeat. S. Epiphanius makes the Meſſalians ſhaving their Faces a Crime. Gregory VII. affirms, all the Weſtern Clergy have ſhaved ever ſince the Beginning of Chriſtianity. This Cuſtom was likewiſe followed by the Monks. At preſent the Weſtern Nations ſhave; but the Greeks and moſt of the Levantines wear their Beards long. * Hiſtoires Grecques & Romaines.

* BECANUS, (Martin) a Jeſuite; in his Anſwer to a Book entituled, Tortura Torti, he countenances the Doctrine for aſſaſſinating Princes upon ſome Occaſions: For this his Book, he was condemned by the Inquiſition and the Sorbonne. He has likewiſe attempted to confute Antonius de Dominis his Books de Republica Eccleſiaſtica. This Performance makes four Books. * Alegambe, Biblioth. Script. S. J. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg.

BECH, or Becz, a ſmall Town in Upper Hungary, near the Mouth of the Theyſſe. The Place is remarkable for Prince Eugene of Savoy's Victory againſt the Turks A. D. 1697. * Bourgon. Geogr. Hiſtor.

BECSANGIL, a Province belonging to the Turk in Aſia, formerly called Bithynia. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Black Sea, on the Weſt by the Sea of Marmora, on the South by the Sea of Natolia properly ſo called, and on the Eaſt by the Province of Bolli. It makes Part of the Government of the Beglerbeg of Natolia, and has been three hundred Years in the Turks Poſſeſſion. The principal Towns are Biurſes the Capital, Iſnich, Comidia, and Scutari. * Leunclavius.

* BECKET, (Thomas) Archbiſhop of Canterbury. For a Supplement to this Prelate's Life, mentioned in Morery Vol. I. ſee Collier's Church-Hiſtory, Vol. I.

* BEDE, (Venerable) an Engliſh Prieſt, born Anno Dom. 672. He made an early and a very conſiderable Progreſs in Learning, and proved one of the moſt celebrated Authors of his Age. He practiſed the Monaſtick Auſterities, and was a great Admirer of Diſcipline, but very humble, ſmooth temper'd, and uncenſuring. Pope Sergius I. invited him to Rome, to aſſiſt him with his Directions; but Bede excus'd himſelf, and ſtay'd at home. At the Inſtance of his Convent at Yarrow, he wrote Commentaries upon the Scripture. He wrote likewiſe the Hiſtory of the Six Ages, a Martyrology, and ſeveral other Works. He died upon Aſcenſion-Day, A. D. 735, or, as others will have it, 734. Baronius endeavours to prove he lived till 776, and by this Account makes him at leaſt a hundred and ſix Years old. But here the Cardinal is plainly miſtaken; for Venerable Bede tells us he was ordained Prieſt at thirty Years of Age; and by his Epitaph, it appears he had this Character only three and thirty Years. He likewiſe informs us, that he finiſhed his Hiſtory when he was nine and fifty Years of Age: And Cutbert, one of his Diſciples, who was with him when he died, ſets his Death preciſely to the Year 735. Beſides this, Boniface Archbiſhop of Mentz, who ſuffered Martyrdom in the Year 754, mentions Bede as a Perſon then dead. Bede's Works are printed in Eight Volumes at Baſil and Cologn. The two firſt Tomes go upon the Subject of Arts and Sciences: The third comprehends his Hiſtory, with the Lives of a great many Saints, moſt of which are none of his, no more than the Martyrology and ſome other little Tracts in this Collection. The fourth Tome gives us his Commentaries upon the Old Teſtament: His fifth his Commentaries upon the Goſpels, the Acts, the Canonical Epiſtles, and the Apocalyps. The ſixth Tome furniſhes a Commentary upon S. Paul's Epiſtles, which does not belong to Bede, but to Florus, a Deacon of Lyons, as Mabillon has obſerved in the firſt Tome of his Analecta. The ſeventh Tome contains ſeveral Homilies: And the laſt has ſeveral Tracts omitted in the former. Sir James Ware printed ſome other Tracts and Epiſtles of Bede at Dublin A. D. 1664. Lucas Dacherius, in the tenth Tome of his Spicelegium, inſerts a Martyrology in Verſe under Bede's Name, which ſeems written by an Author of that Age. Bede's Style is clear and pretty natural, but neither nice Latin, raiſed, nor poliſhed. He ſeems to have written with a great deal of Eaſe, but without much Art of Reflexion. His Reading was at leaſt equal to his Judgment; he collected what lay in his way, without being much ſolicitous for beautiful Paſſages: His Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture are no more than Extracts from the Fathers, part of whoſe Works upon this Subject he has collected and tack'd together. He took care to mark the Authors where he borrowed, by ſetting the firſt Letter of their Name upon the Margin. But theſe References are loſt by the Negligence of the Tranſcribers. His Hiſtory is exact enough as to Matter of Fact: And Malmsbury, after having given him an extraordinary Commendation for his Piety and Learning, laments the Loſs of his Induſtry and Abilities in the Ages following. He tells us Hiſtory ſlept, and all Notice of Publick Tranſactions were in a manner bury'd ſince his time. What he has written upon the Argument of Secular Learning, is neither deep, nor nicely finiſh'd: However, he knew a great deal for the Age he lived in. He has been cenſured by ſome Writers for changing the received Computation of the Creation of the World, and preferring the Chronology of the Hebrew Text to that of the Septuagint, then commonly the Calculation rely'd on. * Honorius Auguſtodun. Lib. 4. de Lumin. Eccleſ. Sigebert. Script. Eccleſ Cap. 68. Malmsburienſ. de Geſtis Regum Angl. Lib. 1. Cap. 3. Matthew Weſtm. Baronius. Collier's Church-Hiſtory, Vol. I. &c.

BEDELL, (William) Biſhop of Kilmore in Ireland, was born at Blacknottey in Eſſex Anno Dom. 1570. He received his Education at Cambridge; and when King James I. ſent Sir Henry Wotton Ambaſſador to Venice, Bedell went Chaplain with him. During his Stay at Venice, eight Years, he made an intimate Acquaintance with Father Paul. When he returned into England, the famous Antonius de Dominis, Archbiſhop of Spalato, came along with him. He likewiſe brought over ſeveral of Father Paul's Manuſcripts, and amongſt the reſt the Hiſtory of the Council of Trent. He tranſlated the Hiſtory of the Interdict of Venice into Latin, and that of the Inquiſition, both given him by Father Paul: They are dedicated to the King. He likewiſe tranſlated the two laſt Books of the Hiſtory of the Council. After ſome Preferments in England, he was made Principal of Trinity College in Dublin. Two Years after he was promoted to the Biſhopricks of Kilmore and Ardagh, in the Province of Ulſter. He found theſe two Dioceſes in ſome Diſorder, which he endeavoured to reform. He began with Pluralities of Benefices; and to ſet an Example, reſigned the See of Ardagh, and kept nothing but the Biſhoprick of Kilmore. He made ſeveral Regulations for Reſidence, was very zealous in converting Roman-Catholicks; and believing nothing would contribute more to that purpoſe than a Tranſlation of the Scripture into the Iriſh Language, he got it undertaken. This Buſineſs met with a great many Difficulties: He ſhew'd how ſtrongly he was enclin'd to procure a Coalition between the Lutherans and the Calviniſts. He by no means approved thoſe Controverſial Writers who let looſe their Satyr againſt Popery. He did not believe ſuch paſſionate Methods at all proper to undeceive People, and bring them off their Miſtakes. On the other ſide, his Conduct was ſmooth, charitable, and benevolent. This obliging Behaviour proved a Protection to him in the Iriſh Rebellion, A. D. 1641. His Houſe, which was a fort of Sanctuary to a great many People, was unmoleſted for two Months; and when the Iriſh Rebels threaten'd his Gueſts with Violence, 'twas with a Reſervation of Favour to himſelf: They order'd him to ſend them the People at his Houſe, and that otherwiſe he would be ſeized himſelf: But he choſe rather to expoſe himſelf to the Rebels Diſcretion, than turn thoſe out who had come to him for Shelter. This bold Generoſity made him and two of his Sons the Enemy's Priſoners, who with the reſt of his Houſe were carry'd to the Caſtle of Lockwater. Here they gave him the Liberty to preach in the Priſon; and in a ſhort time himſelf and his two Sons were diſcharged, by way of Exchange. He ſurvived his Enlargement but a few days, being ſeventy two Years of Age at his Death. The Iriſh Roman-Catholicks, who are ſeldom very fond of the Engliſh Proteſtants, admired his Candor and gentle Application, and paid him a particular Reſpect when he was bury'd. He was a Prelate of unblemiſh'd Regularity, and conſiderable Learning. * Burnet's Life of Biſhop Bedell, &c.

BEEL-PHEGOR, or Bel-Peor. The Moabites ſacrificed to Beel-Phegor or Baal-Peor, as we may learn from the xxvth of Numbers, where 'tis ſaid, The Daughters of Moab called the People to the Sacrifices of their Gods, and the People did eat and bow down to their Gods. And in the cvith Pſalm we read, They joined themſelves to Baal-Peor, and eat the Offerings of the Dead. By the Offerings of the Dead, ſome underſtand their ſacrificing to Baal-Peor, who was a pretended God, without Life or Power. Others, by this Expreſſion, underſtand Funeral Ceremonies and the Religious Worſhip the Moabites paid to Perſons deceaſed. Selden pretends that Baal-Peor was the God or Sovereign of the Dead, and the ſame with the Greeks Pluto: And that the Sacrifices cuſtomarily offered for pacifying the Manes or departed Spirits, are the Offerings of the Dead mentioned in this Text. Father Auguſtin Calmet, a Benedictine, fancies Phegor may be the ſame with Adonis or Oſiris, whoſe Feſtivals were kept with Funeral Solemnities, with Tears, Lamentation, and other Marks of Melancholy and Regret: And that Moſes's forbidding the Iſraelites to ſhave or ſlaſh their Fleſh for the Dead, was done by way of Precaution againſt the Worſhip of Baal-Peor. This Conjecture has an Air of Probability; for 'tis certain Adonis's Memory had ſomething of this Reſpect paid it: However, 'tis poſſible theſe pretended Deities might be different, tho' their Worſhip was the ſame: For 'tis plain the Iſraelites did not call Adonis

Peor,

Peor, but Thammus: For in the viiith of Ezekiel, where the Vulgate has it Plangentes Adonidem; 'tis Thammus in the Hebrew. This Benedictine has another Conjecture upon Baal-Peor, and pretends him the ſame with the Egyptian Orus, Son to Iſis. * Voſſius de Idololat. Lib. 2. cap. 7. Selden, de Diis Syris. Auguſtin Calmet, Diſſertation upon Numbers. See Baal.

BEEMSTER, a flat Country in North-Holland; 'twas formerly a Lake; but the Dutch Induſtry have drained it to firm Land. * Maty, Diction.

BEGAT, (John) Counſellor, or Member in the Parliament of Dijon, was ſent Commiſſioner to Charles IX. A. D. 1563, to remonſtrate againſt the Edict that Prince had granted the Proteſtants for the Exerciſe of their Religion. The Eſtates of Burgundy reſolv'd, notwithſtanding this Edict, to diſturb the Hugonot Meetings: And to prevent this Conduct giving Diſguſt at Court, they ſent Begat with the Repreſentation of their Reaſons, who harangued boldly upon the Argument. Two Years after, he publiſhed an Apology, where he endeavours to prove from ſeveral Topicks, that two Religions ought not to be tolerated in a Realm; that ſuch Relaxations are offenſive to God Almighty, and inconſiſtent with the Publick Repoſe. The Calviniſts appeared in Print againſt Begat; and here 'tis ſomewhat remarkable, that the Province of Burgundy not only refuſed to govern themſelves by the King's Edict; but in a Meeting of the Eſtates, took the Freedom to come to a Reſolution that they would not obey it. * Thuan. Lib. 36. ad Ann. 1564.

BEHM, (John) a Divine, was born in 1578, and died in 1648: He publiſh'd a Chronology from the Creation of the World to the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, by Titus Veſpaſian. This Work has been well receiv'd: He explains ſeveral Places of Scripture, and confutes Beroaldus, and Funcius. * Voſſius de Scient. Mathemat. Henningus Witte in Memor. Theol. pag. 694.

BELATUCADRUS, an Idol formerly worſhipped in England. The following Inſcription, upon an old Stone, was to be ſeen in Sir Thomas Dykes's Houſe in Cumberland; Deo Sancto. Belatucadrus Aurelius Diatova Aram ex voto poſuit. L. L. M. M. There is another Inſcription not to be met with in Gruter, which Camden has given us: 'Tis this, Deo Belatucadro, Lib. Votum fecit Iorus. Selden, in his Book de Diis Syris, takes Belatucadrus for the ſame with Belenus and Abellion, Names given to the Sun by thoſe Pagans who worſhipped it. And Voſſius, in his Book de Idololatria, is of the ſame Opinion. * Voſſius de Orig. & Progreſ. Idol. Lib. 2. cap. 17.

BELEM, a Town of Eſtramadura in Portugal, ſtands upon the Taio, a League and a half below Lisbon: 'Tis remarkable for the Tower, well furniſhed with Cannon, with a good Fort on the other ſide of the River, to ſecure the Paſſage to Lisbon. The Kings and Queens of Portugal are buried here in the Hieronymites Church. * Maty, Diction.

BELGIOIOSA, in Latin Belgioſium, a Town and Caſtle in the Duchy of Milan, and within the Territory of Pavia; it belongs to the Counts de Barbioni, and ſtands near the Po, about five Miles from Pavia to the Eaſt.

* BELISARIUS, a ſucceſsful General of Juſtinian's Army. To the Article in Morery Vol. I. may be added, that the Figure of Beliſarius is to be ſeen upon ſome of the Emperor Juſtinian's Medals. Petrus Gillius gives the following Deſcription of it: On the one ſide, there's the Emperor Juſtinian receiving Beliſarius in a Triumphant Habit, for his Victory againſt the Goths: And on the Reverſe, there's the Figure of Beliſarius with theſe Words, Beliſarius Gloria Romanorum. The Place where the Emperor received Beliſarius, was in the Porch of the Palace of Conſtantinople. Here this General preſented Juſtinian with a great deal of rich Plunder. The Gothiſh and Vandalick Kings are likewiſe repreſented, together with the Realms he had conquered: And here, as Procopius reports, the Empreſs Theodora, the Senate, and all the Court, made Part of the Solemnity. The Medals which repreſent this magnificent Appearance, are moſt commonly Gold or Silver. * Du Frene, Diſſert. de Inferioris Ævi Numiſmat.

* BELLARMINE, (Robert) Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Capua: His chief Performance is his Book of Controverſy, in four Tomes in Folio. To give the Reader ſomewhat of his Manner; he writes with great Method and Perſpicuity. Upon every Queſtion, he reports the Errors of the Hereticks, (as he calls them) and the Opinions of the Catholick Divines. In the next place, he lays down the Doctrine of the Church of Rome in a few Words, or at leaſt his own Sentiment. Then he comes to ſupport and prove his Tenets; and laſtly, mentions the Objections, to which he always gives an Anſwer. He draws his Proofs from the Holy Scripture, from the Decrees of Councils, from the Teſtimony of the Fathers, from Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians, from the Practice of the Church, and the common Opinion of Divines. As for Inference and Reaſoning from the thing, he does not often make uſe of it: He ſeldom wanders from his Subject, or omits any ſerviceable Authorities. He gives the Objections in their full Force, and is very brief in his Anſwers: His Style is clear and connected. And as on the one ſide he does not ſeem to aim at Language, Ornament and Elocution; ſo on the other ſide, his Manner is not ſo dry, barbarous and perplex'd, as we meet with in ſeveral of the Schoolmen. He had read a great many of the Proteſtants Books, and reports their Opinions fairly. And tho' he makes no ſcruple to cenſure them, yet he does not run out into Invectives and paſſionate Indecencies, like ſome little Controverſial Writers, whoſe Learning and Abilities hold no Proportion with their Zeal. 'Tis to be wiſh'd, continues the Paris Supplementer, that he had ſtood clear of Prepoſſeſſion, and more carefully diſtinguiſhed the Doctrine of the Church from the Opinions of the Italian Divines. It can't be denied, but that his Controverſial Writings are ſome of the beſt of their kind which even the Proteſtants themſelves are not backward to acknowledge. What he wrote concerning the Pope's Authority, with reference both to his Spiritual and Temporal Juriſdiction, has met with more than Proteſtant Adverſaries. The Roman Catholicks themſelves have declared againſt it; it won't paſs in France, being looked on as an Innovation upon the ancient Belief of that Kingdom, and contrary to the Principles upon which the Liberties of the Gallican Church, and the Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown are founded. His Devotional Tracts, particularly that dedicated to the Biſhop of Fiano, affords a great deal of ſignificant Inſtruction for a Prelate's Conduct. * M. Du Pin. New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. Tom. I.

BELLS. The firſt Uſe of Bells is commonly reckoned to Paulinus, Biſhop of Nola in Italy. Thus they were called Campanæ, from the Province Campania; and Nolæ, from the Name of the Town: But notwithſtanding this Tradition, Quintilian mentions Bells by the ſame Name; and 'tis certain Bells and Hand-Bells are ſtill of greater Antiquity. The Jewiſh High-Prieſt had little Gold Bells at the Bottom of his Coat, to give the People Notice when he came into the Sanctuary. Proſerpine's Prieſt at Athens rang a Bell to call the People to the Sacrifice. The Perſians, Greeks and Romans, likewiſe made uſe of Bells to bring the People together upon ſeveral Occaſions. Cybele's Prieſts made uſe of them in their Myſteries; and from the earlieſt Antiquity, they hung Bells about the Necks of Mules, and other Animals. Beggars furniſh'd themſelves with them to move Compaſſion in thoſe that paſſed by. In ſhort, they ſerved for ſeveral Purpoſes; but they were not made uſe of to call People to Church till Paulinus's Time, who was the firſt in this Cuſtom. Afterwards, moſt of the Weſtern Churches had Bells; but they were ſeldom ſeen in the Greek Churches, theſe Chriſtians making uſe of a Piece of Wood called a Symander: 'Twas a narrow Plank, fourteen Foot long, upon which they ſtruck with two little Mallets. However, ſome of the Greek Churches had formerly Bells, as we may learn from George Pachimeres, and Michael Pſellus; but after the taking of Conſtantinople, the Sultans prohibited the Uſe of Bells. However, in ſome Places of the Ottoman Empire, where the Chriſtians live diſtant from the Turks, they have Bells in their Churches.

In the Church of Rome, there is a Ceremony called the Benediction of Bells: At this Solemnity they waſh them without and within, ſay a Form of Prayer for that Purpoſe, and give them a Name. 'Tis ſuppoſed that this Cuſtom of Bleſſing Bells was begun by Pope John XII. in the Year 972; but it muſt be more ancient than the Xth Century, ſince Alcuinus, who lived in the Reign of

Charles

Charles the Great, mentions it as a Ceremony then practiſed. In England, Turketull, the famous Abbot of Croyland, who died towards the latter end of the Xth Century, led the way in this Fancy, by caſting a great Bell which he called Guthlack. The Deſign of the Benediction of Bells, was to make them a ſort of Defenſative againſt Lightning and Tempeſt, which borders upon Superſtition; but then on the other ſide, thoſe who make theſe Ceremonies a Profanation of the Sacrament of Baptiſm, exceed in their Exceptions, and carry their Charge too far. Matthew Paris relates, 'twas formerly forbidden to ring the Bells during the time of a ſolemn Mourning, which is the Reaſon the Bells are not rung in the Roman Communion on Good Friday. * Magius, de Tintinnabulis. Allatius, de Templis Græcorum. Dandini's Voyage to Mount Libanus. See Collier's Church Hiſtory Vol. I.

BELL-ISLE, an Iſland belonging to France upon the Coaſt of Bretagne: The Haven is ſecured by a good Citadel, and the reſt of the Iſland by Rocks inacceſſible: The Soil is good both for Corn and Paſture. Charles IX. erected it into a Marquiſate, A. D. 1593, and gave it to the Count de Retz; whereas it formerly belong'd to the Abby Holy-Croſs Quimper. The Engliſh and Dutch Fleets appearing before it A. D. 1703, the Curé, or Parſon of the Town, ordered the Women to put on Men's Cloaths; and thus making their Force look more conſiderable, the Enemy deſpaired of making a Deſcent, and ſheered off without doing Buſineſs. * Sanſon, Baudrand, Bourgon, Geograph. Hiſtor.

BELL-ISLE, the Iſle Formoſa, or Pacanda, in the Indian Ocean to the Eaſt of China, and about twenty five Leagues from the Province of Foquien: 'Tis about ſixty Leagues from North to South, and twenty from Eaſt to Weſt: 'Tis a plentiful populous Country. There are Mines of Gold and Silver in it: They have Wild Horſes, with Brow-Antlers like Stags, and are excellent Meat. There are a great many Towns in it. The Portugueze were formerly Maſters there, and built the Forts Farbrous, Quilan, and Tamſui. The Dutch took this Iſland from them in 1635, and built the Fort Zealand near the Town of Taivan, about a Mile from the Continent; but in the Year 1661, they were diſlodged by Coxcima, a famous Buccanier of China.

BELLOI, (Peter) Advocate-General to the Parliament of Thoulouſe, was born at Montauban, and deſcended from a Gentleman's Family originally ſeated in Bretagne. After having pleaded four or five Years at the Bar at Thoulouſe, he was made a Counſellor or Member of the Preſidial Court there. Notwithſtanding his being a Roman Catholick, his Regard for his Prince and Country brought a Storm upon him; his declaring againſt the League made the Heads of that Party his Enemy. King Henry III. to gratify the Guiſes, put him in Priſon A. D. 1587. Theſe Noblemen charged him with being an Incendiary and a Heretick; and the Year before they had prevailed with the Biſhop to preferr an Information againſt him, making him to be the Author of a Book for which one Breton, who wrote it, had been lately hang'd, as Thuanus reports. Belloy publiſhed a Diſcourſe againſt the League, entituled, Apologie Catholique contre les Libelles, Declarations, Avis, & Conſultations faites, écrites, & publiées par les Liguez, Perturbateurs du Royaume de France, qui ſe ſont élevez depuis le decès de feu Monſeigneur Frére unique du Roi, par E. D. L. F. B. This Book, publiſhed in 1585, was afterwards tranſlated into Latin. The Leaguers called it a Defamatory Libel, and ſat hard upon Belloy: However, he made his Eſcape out of Priſon and got to S. Dennis, where de Vic, Governor for the King, gave him a friendly Reception, and preſented him to his Majeſty; who being now better informed of his Loyalty and Merit, made him Advocate-General to the Parliament of Thoulouſe. He was a Lawyer of Character and Learning, and had publiſhed ſeveral Books mentioned by La Croix du Maine. * Mornai, Memoires. Thuan. &c.

* BELLONA, the Goddeſs of War, Virgil repreſents her with a Whip in her Hand, and her Cloaths rent in a Skirmiſh.

Et ſciſſâ gaudens vadit Diſcordia pallâ,
Quam cum ſanguineo ſequitur Bellona flagello.

She had a Temple at Rome in the ninth Ward of the Town, in the Circus Flaminius. In this Temple, the Senate gave Publick Audience to Ambaſſadors, when they did not think it proper to bring them them farther into the Town. There was a Pillar in this Temple called Bellica, over which the Conſuls or Heralds threw a Launce as far as they could, as if they had thrown it into the Enemy's Country for a Declaration of War. Pauſus was a Counter-Deity to Bellona: This Idol preſided over Repoſe, and kept things quiet, which was contrary to Bellona's Buſineſs: Her Prieſts, called Bellonarii, uſed to make Inciſions in their Fleſh, to prepare them for the Gift of Prophecy. This Sanguinary Devotion is thus deſcribed by Tibullus;

Hæc ubi Bellonæ motu eſt agitata, nec acrem,
Flammam; non amens verbera torta timet:
Ipſa hipenne ſuos cædit violenta lacertos,
Sanguineque effuſo ſpargit inepta Deam:
Statque latus Præfixa veru, ſtat ſaucia pectus;
Et canit eventus, quos Dea magna movet.

* Turnebus, Adverſar. Lib. 15. cap. 21.

BELOGROD, Bialogrod, Moncaſtro, a Town in European Turky in Beſſarabia, upon the Neiſter: The Walachians call it Moncaſtro, which ſignifies a White Caſtle; it ſtands upon the Confines of Moldavia, and the Ukraine, near the Black Sea. * Leunclavius.

BELVEDERE, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples, in the Hither Calabria, fifteen Miles from S. Marco to the North-Weſt; 'tis commonly taken for the Old Blanda belonging to the Brutians. There was another Town called Belvedere in Sicily, near Syracuſe; but it is now ſwallowed up by an Earthquake. * Maty, Diction.

BELZELINGEN, a ſtrong Town in Switzerland in the Canton of Uri, a Mile and a half from Altorf. Here the People of this Canton meet to chooſe their Magiſtracy, and ſettle their Publick Affairs. * Bourgon, Geogr. Hiſt.

BELZKO, a Town belonging to the Kingdom of Poland in Red Ruſſia, the Capital of the Palatinate of the ſame Name: The Houſes are all Timber. It ſtands in a Marſh between Leopold and Zamoski, five Poliſh Miles from the River Bugg. The Palatinate of Belzko lies between the Palatinate of Leopold, the Country of Chelm, and Volhinia: 'Tis divided into four Precincts, Belzko, Busko, Grodla, and Grabau. * Starovolski. See Bielski, Morery Vol. I.

* BEMBO. (Peter) Amongſt his Performances in Italian, his Poem upon the Death of his Brother Charles is one of the beſt. Indeed nothing can be more beautiful, nice and moving than this. Julius Scaliger cenſures him for Affectation, and that he was too fond of imitating Tully, even in Verſe. He obſerves his being ſo exceſſively ſolicitous about Diction and Phraſeology has made him ridiculous: He likewiſe blames this Poet for his bold Expreſſion in calling our Saviour a Hero.

* BENEVENTUM, a Town in Italy. To what has been already ſaid upon this Article, we may obſerve, that near this Town, in the Territory of Roſito, Charles Duke of Anjou, and King of Naples, routed and killed Mainfroy, who had ſeized this Kingdom, A. D. 1266. This Town was formerly the Capital of a large Duchy; but the Spaniards Encroachments have leſſened it very much, ſo that now there is not above twelve Villages or Caſtles in the Neighbourhood, which ſtill belong to the See of Rome.

BENJAMIN, a Hermit of the Fourth Century, living in the Reign of Valentinian and Valens: He was bleſſed with a Supernatural Gift of Healing; for by Prayer, the Touch of his Hand, or a little Oil, he cured a great many Diſtempers. At laſt he was ſeized with a Dropſy, which ſwelled his Body to that Degree that he could not get out of the Door of his Cell. During his Sickneſs, which was eight Months in diſpatching him, he cured all ſorts of Patients that came to him. As for his own Diſtemper, he was eaſy under it: He deſiſired thoſe who came to him for Recovery to pray for his Soul: For as for my Body, ſays he, don't concern yourſelves about it, for it ſignified nothing to me when 'twas at the beſt: Quod etiam cum ſanum eſſet, nihil profuit mihi. * Hiſtor. Tripartit, Lib. 8. cap. 1.

BENIGUALID, a Country in the Province of Fez, in Barbary: 'Tis ſurrounded with Mountains very difficult difficult to paſs. For this Reaſon the Inhabitants pay the Emperor of Fez but a ſlender Conſideration for the Liberty of Trading. They have about ſixty Villages, and are able to muſter ſix thouſand Men upon occaſion. 'Tis ſaid their Country is a Sanctuary for Criminals, who retire thither; and that this Privilege is confirmed to them at the Beginning of every Reign. * Sanſon, Baudrand.

* BENIN, a Kingdom of Africk in Guinea, upon the Ocean, ſo named from the Capital: 'Tis reckoned one hundred and fifty Leagues in Length upon the Coaſt. The Air and the Soil are good, and the Inhabitants more civil to Strangers than the reſt of the Negroes: The Kingdom of Oveiro lies within the Realm of Benin, and holds of it.

* BENNET II. lived in the Seventh Century. Conſtantine Pogonatus granted this Pope the Privilege mentioned in Morery, Vol. I. The Volcano of Veſuvius was remarkable before his time; the firſt Eruption happening A. D. 79: And 'twas Pliny the Elder who loſt his Life by his Curioſity about this Accident.

BENNET (S.) was one of the firſt that introduced the Monaſtick Life in the Weſt. He was born in the Territory of Nurſia, Parcel of the Duchy of Spoleto, A. D. 480. He was educated at Rome; from whence, when about ſeventeen Years old, he retired to the Deſart of Sublaco, forty Miles from Rome: Here he ſpent three Years in a diſmal Cavern, where no body knew where he was, excepting S. Romanus, who let him down a little Bread with a String. Afterwards, being diſcovered by the Monks of a neighbouring Monaſtery, they choſe him for their Abbot: But their Manner of living not ſuiting S. Bennet's Notions, he withdrew to a Solitude, where a great many People came to him, and put themſelves under his Government: And thus in a ſhort time he built twelve Monaſteries thereabouts. In the Year 529, he made another Remove to Mount Caſſin, where, with Apollo's Temple, there were ſome Remains of Idolatry. S. Bennet converted theſe People, broke Apollo's Statue, and built two Chappels upon the Mountain. Afterwards he built the famous Monaſtery of Mount Caſſin, and furniſhed it with a numerous Fraternity: 'Twas here he drew up his Rule, and founded a Monaſtick Order, which in a little time ſpread all over Europe. He died, according to Mabillon, March 1. A. D. 543. But Father Pagi makes him live a Year longer. Gregory the Great gives the Preference to S. Bennet's Rule, and ſays it was Sermone luculentam, Diſcretione præcipuam. This Pope wrote his Life; 'tis inſerted in the ſecond Book of his Dialogues. Paulus Diaconus likewiſe, to reckon no more, mentions him in his Hiſtory of the Lombards.

No Religious Order has been more remarkable for Extent, for Wealth, and conſiderable Men, than S. Bennet's: It has laſted above thirteen hundred Years, and been ſeveral times reformed, to anſwer the Founder's Intention, and bring it poſſibly ſomewhat beyond the Original Inſtitution. The Cluniacenſes were formed upon this Plan. The Congregation of S. Maur in France, begun in the Year 1621, goes upon this View of refining and guarding Diſcipline. Theſe Religious have been, and ſtill are, very ſerviceable to the Commonwealth of Learning. There are a great many other Branches of this Order. The moſt conſiderable among theſe may be reckoned the Orders of Camaldoli and Valombre, the Carthuſians, the Ciſtertians, thoſe of Grammont, the Celeſtines, the Humiliati, the Sylveſtrians, &c. Within the Benedictine Liſt there are reckoned forty Popes, two hundred Cardinals, fifty Patriarchs, ſixteen hundred Archbiſhops, four thouſand ſix hundred Biſhops, four Emperors, twelve Empreſſes, ſix and forty Kings, one and forty Queens, and three thouſand ſix hundred Canonized Saints. The French Supplementer does not pretend to vouch this Computation; he owns that a great many judicious Writers, beſides Baronius, have blamed thoſe Authors, who, out of a Partiality to their Order, have, without the leaſt Colour, dragged in the moſt remarkable Perſons for Sanctity in all Ages. Trithemius has gone into this Romantick Multiplication, and regiſtred a great many for Benedictines, who lived before S. Bennet. * Trithem. de Vir. Illuſt. Bened. Hugo Mainard. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Lib. Cent. VI. &c.

BENNET (S.) Abbot of S. Auguſtin's Canterbury, an Engliſhman, deſcended from a noble and wealthy Family. He was born in the Year 628, bred to the Profeſſion of Arms, in which he managed to Commendation, and was an Officer in King Oſwy's Troops. At five and twenty Years of Age, he took leave of the Court, and made a Voyage to Rome. At his Return, he ſpent his Time wholly in ſtudying the Scriptures, and Exerciſes of Piety. About five or ſix Years forward, he travelled to Rome again, with Alfred, King Oſwy's Son. Afterwards he retired to the Monaſtery of Lerins, and was profeſſed there. Having ſpent two Years in this Retirement, he attended Theodorus, nominated to the See of Canterbury, into England. Upon his Arrival here, he was made Abbot of S. Auguſtin's, Canterbury. In the Year 671, he made another Journey to Rome; and at his coming away, brought ſeveral Liturgick Books along with him. After Cenwaloh's Death, King of the Weſt Saxons, at whoſe Court Bennet had paſſed ſome of his Time; after this Prince's Death, I ſay, he went into Northumberland, and founded the Monaſtery of Wirmouth in the Biſhoprick of Durham. He likewiſe built the Monaſtery of Yarrow, ſix Miles from Wirmouth. He made a fifth Voyage to Rome, and viſited a great many Monaſteries in Italy, to learn their Cuſtoms and Diſcipline. He reſign'd the Abbey of Yarrow to S. Geolfroy, and that of Wirmouth to S. Eſtervint, and apply'd himſelf chiefly to procure a Magnificence in External Worſhip, and make the Ceremonies in the Engliſh Church more pompous and affecting. As he came home through France, he brought Glaziers, Painters, and other Artificers, for the Ornamenting of Churches. He brought likewiſe a great many Books, Pictures, and Relicts from Rome. He ſet up the Gregorian way of Singing, and the Ceremonies of the Church of Rome. Having gone a great Length in Buſineſs of this kind, he fell into a Palſy, and died in January 690, or as others will have it, in 703. He wrote a Tract about the Manner of keeping Feſtivals, and Exhortations to the Monks, and ſome other Pieces of a reſembling Nature. * Bede, Hiſtoria Abbatii Wirmouth. Pits, de Script. Angl. Mabillon, in Act. SS. Ord. S. Benedict. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

BENZELIUS, (Ericus) Doctor of Divinity, Archbiſhop of Upſal in Sweden, and Vice-Chancellor of that Univerſity, was raiſed purely by his Merit. He publiſhed ſeveral Diſſertations upon the Lives of the Patriarchs, and other Parts of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. He likewiſe wrote ſeveral Tracts in Divinity, and tranſlated the Bible into the Swediſh Language. Before his Promotion to the See of Upſal, he had been Hiſtory and Divinity Profeſſor in the Univerſity, and Biſhop of Stregnes. He died in 1709, being threeſcore and ſeven Years of Age. * Journal des Scavans, February 1710. Supplement to the Acta Lipſiaca, Tom. III.

BERAULT, (Nicolas) in Latin Beraldus, a Perſon of Learning in the Sixteenth Century. He wrote Notes upon Pliny, and in his Preface complains heartily of the Abuſes of the Preſs: He likewiſe publiſhed a Book, entituled, Dialogus quo Rationes explicantur quibus dicendi extempore facultas parari poteſt, deque ipſa dicendi extempore facultate. De juriſprudentia vetere ac novitia, oratio; cum Erudita ad antiquorum Lectionem ac Studium Exhortatione. Notes upon Politian's Ruſticus, and Nutricia: Though 'tis not certain whether he is Author of the laſt Piece or not. Beraldus was a Frenchman, lived at Orleans, and was Tutor to the Admiral Coligni. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

* BERENGARIUS, Archdeacon of Angiers, lived in the Eleventh Century. For Bernard, in Morery Vol. I. read Bertram: There are extant of his Writings a Letter to Aſcelinus, one to Abbot Richard, three Confeſſions of Faith, part of his Tracts againſt his ſecond Confeſſion of Faith; and Mabillon has ſeen a Manuſcript Treatiſe againſt the third: The reſt of his Works are loſt. * Mabillon, Analecta. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Cent. XI. See Collier's Church Hiſtory, Vol. I.

BERENICIUS, was taken Notice of in Holland about the Year 1670, and made a ſurprizing Appearance. He was very ready at talking extempore upon a Subject, and would repeat what he had only heard once in proper and well dreſt Verſe. He would ſometimes divert himſelf with tranſlating Dutch Gazettes into Greek and Latin Verſe; which he performed with extraordinary Expedition. His Faculty was tried in a Dutch Epigram, which he immediately tranſlated into Latin, and in a few Minutes after into Greek. He ſpoke ſeveral Languages, with the ſame Eaſe with that his Mother learnt him: For inſtance, French, Engliſh, and Italian. 'Tis ſaid that a Scholar of the firſt Claſs durſt not venture to engage with him in Latin; and as for Greek, one would have thought it had been his Mother-Tongue. Beſides this, he diſcourſed judiciouſly upon all old Greek and Latin Authors, diſtinguiſhed critically between genuine and ſpurious Books, and criticized with Judgment upon Expreſſion: He had Horace, Virgil, a great Part of Tully, and both the Plinies by heart. He underſtood Homer and Ariſtophanes. But whence this Berenicius came, was altogether unknown, neither would he diſcover it to any body: He got his Living by ſweeping Chimnies, whetting Knives, and other reſembling Employments. He loved Drinking, and at laſt he was found dead in a Marſh. Some People fancied him a Profeſſor of ſome learned Faculty in France; others took him for a Jeſuit, or a Perſon of ſome Religious Order. But let this be as it will, 'tis taken for granted he is the Author of a Book, entituled, Georgarchontomachiæ ſive Expugnatæ Meſſopolis, Libri duo. * Borremanſius, in Var. Lect. Cap. 6. p. 59, &c.

BERETIN, (Peter) of Cortona in Tuſcany, bred under Sachetti at Rome, was a Painter of a very agreeable Manner. His Imagination was rich, and he performed with great Eaſe and Ornament. His Talent lay moſtly for Hiſtory-Painting; his Fancy was ſo lively and ſtarting, that he would not give himſelf time to do his beſt upon a Portrait. And though his Out-Lines were ſhort of Exactneſs, neither did he come up to the Graces of Raphael and Corregio; yet there was an agreeable Greatneſs in his Pencil: The Ornaments of his Pieces were nobly imagined; he drew Landſkip very well, and underſtood Painting in Fresko better than any that had work'd before him. As to his Moral Character, his Temper was ſmooth and benign, his Converſation entertaining, his Life unblemiſhed, his Diſpoſition charitable and friendly; and he either ſpoke well, or nothing of every body. He died at ſixty Years of Age in 1669. * De Piles, Abrège de la Vie des Peintres.

BERGAMASQUE, in Latin Bergamenſe Territorium, a Province of Lombardy, belonging to the Republick of Venice: 'Twas formerly Parcel of the Duchy of Milan: But ſince the Year 1428, the Venetians have been Maſters of it. 'Tis bounded on the North and Eaſt by the Territories of Breſcia and the Valteline, and by the Duchy of Milan to the Weſt and South. The Country is very populous and fruitful, and Bergamo is the Capital.

BERGAS, a Town of European Turky in Romania, at the Foot of the Mountain Baziliſſa or Argentaro, near the River Lariſſa: 'Tis an Archbiſhop's See, and ſtands between Adrianople and Araclea.

BERGSTET, (Le) Urbes Montanæ; a ſmall Country in the Kingdom of Hungary within the Earldom of Biſtricz in Upper Hungary, lying along the River Gran on the one ſide, and a Ledge of Mountains on the other. The Towns of Chremnitz, Newall, Konisberg, Boſhants, Liebeten, Tiln, Schemnitz, lie within it, together with ſome other Villages, which are only remarkable for Silver Mines.

BERGSTRASSE, (Le) Strada Montana, a Precinct in the Lower Palatinate, between Heidelberg and Darmſtadt, upon the Road to Frankfort: Here ſtand the ſmall Towns of Starkenbourg, Hoppenheim, Peintzheim and Morlebach, belonging to the Electorate of Mentz. In the Year 1463, Dieterius Iſembourg, Elector of Mentz, being embroiled with the Houſe of Naſſau, mortgaged theſe Places to the Elector Palatine. But at the Peace of Munſter, John Philip de Schonburn, Elector of Mentz, paid off the Mortgage and re-enter'd upon the Country.

BERIGARDUS, (Claudius) a celebrated Philoſopher in the Seventeenth Century, born at Moulins: His Reputation ran ſo high at the Univerſity of Paris, that the Great Duke of Florence invited him to Piſa. Here he was Philoſophy Profeſſor twelve Years: From hence he was called off to Padua for the ſame Profeſſion. In 1643, he printed a Book at Udina, where he endeavours to make the Marks of Truth uncertain, and ſet up for Pyrrhoniſm: 'Tis entituled, Circulus Piſanus. Notwithſtanding the Singularity of this Book, 'tis ſaid to have had the Licence or Approbation of the Holy Office. He had printed another Book at Florence An. Dom. 1632, which by the Title ſeems to go upon a reſembling Subject; 'tis called, Dubitationes, Gall. Galilæi Linæi. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor

BERLEBOURG, a large Town in the lower Part of the Circle of the Upper Rhine, ſtands within the Earldom of Witgenſtein in Wetteravia, upon the River Edar, four Leagues from Dillenberg to the North. Berlebourg has a fine Caſtle, where the Counts of Witgenſtein-Berlebourg have their Reſidence. * Maty, Diction.

BERNARD, or Bern-Hart, Archbiſhop of Vienne in Dauphiné, born in the Year 778, and deſcended from a noble Family in Dauphiné. This Gentleman was bred under an Eccleſiaſtick of Character, but his Parents obliged him to a Military Profeſſion: After his Father's Death, he laid down his Sword, and founded the Monaſtery of Ambournay in Breſcia. He had an Inclination to turn Religious; but being married, that Retirement was impracticable. However, he prevailed with his Wife for a Separation, then entred himſelf a Monk in his Abby, where he was afterwards choſen Abbot. Three Years forward, he was elected Archbiſhop of Vienne, A.D. 810, and had an expreſs Command from Pope Leo III. to accept the Promotion. He made Agobard Coadjutor to Leidred Archbiſhop of Lyons, and was one of thoſe Prelates who depoſed the Emperor Lewis the Debonnaire. When this Prince was reſtored, Agobard and Bernard were proſecuted at a publick Meeting held at Stramiac in the Lionnoiſe. Both theſe Prelates appeared there, and were ſuffered to retire into Italy. He died in the Year 842. Either the French or Dutch Supplementer make this Bernard a Saint: But which way a Biſhop, who had been inſtrumental in depoſing his Prince, can be fairly canonized, is farther than I can diſcover. * Ado, in Chronic. Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Baluz, in Not. Agobard. Mabillon, IX Sæcul. Baillet Vies des Saints.

* BERNARD, (S.) Abbot of Clairevaux, and called by ſome the Thaumaturgus of the Weſt, upon the ſcore of his Miracles: He is ſaid to have given publick Proof of this ſupernatural Gift in a great many Inſtances. After having founded one hundred and threeſcore Monaſteries, he died A. D. 1153, being ſixty three Years of Age. John Picard, a Canon Regular of S. Victor at Paris, publiſhed S. Bernard's Epiſtles with Notes. Mabillon, a Religious of the Congregation of S. Maur, publiſhed S. Bernard's Books in Octavo A. D. 1667, and in 1690 in Folio: The laſt Edition is the moſt correct, and furniſhes ſeveral Pieces not publiſhed before. S. Bernard's Style is unredundant, lively and noble: His Thoughts are ſublime, and his Expreſſion polite and entertaining. He has Unction, Delicacy, and Strength: He is moving to Vehemence, but gracious withall. His Reaſoning gains upon the Mind ſometimes by gentle Inſinuations, and ſometimes by irreſiſtible Force. His Exhortations ſtrike home; his Admonitions are grave and ſolemn: His Reprimands, though temper'd with Sweetneſs, excite Remorſe. He has the Secret of Commending without Flattery, and deals plainly without giving Offence. His Learning did not run out into Curioſity and inſignificant Speculation, but lay moſtly in Subjects ſerviceable to Chriſtian Purpoſes. No Eccleſiaſtical Writer ſeems to have been better acquainted with the Scriptures than this Saint. S. Ambroſe and S. Auguſtin were the Fathers he propoſed for his Imitation. He was no Stranger to the Canons and Diſcipline of the Church; but laid himſelf moſtly out upon Moral and Spiritual Improvements: His Writings are ſententious and ſparkling, and carry a great deal of Senſe in a few Words: His Allegories are entertaining, and well imagined: He treats Doctrinal Points like the ancient Chriſtian Writers, and not in the Method of Scholaſtick Divines; for which Reaſon he has the Honour to be called the laſt of the Fathers. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Lib. XII. Cent.

BERNARDINE of Siena, deſcended from the Family of the Albizeſchi, was born in the latter End of the Fourteenth Century. He was a celebrated Franciſcan, and Canonized by Pope Nicolas V. in 1450. Father John de la Haye printed his Works at Paris in two Tomes in Folio, A. D. 1636. * Bellarmine, de Script. Eccleſ. Spondan, M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, XV. Cent.

BERNE-CASTEL, in Latin Tabernæ Moſellaniæ, a German Town in the Electorate of Treves; it ſtands upon the Moſelle, bordering upon the Earldom of Spanheim. At preſent it is but a ſmall Town, but 'twas formerly an Imperial City, and conſiderable. 'Tis twenty Miles above Treves, and Head of a Bailliage. * Bourgon, Geogr. Hiſtor.

BERNIER, (Francis) Doctor of Phyſick, of the Faculty of Montpelier. His Travels through Indoſtan, and the Kingdom of Cachemire, &c. have been ſeveral times printed, printed, and are generally valued. He publiſhed a French Abridgment of Gaſſendus's Philoſophy. He wrote two Defences of this learned Philoſopher's Hypotheſis of Atoms, and a Vacuum, againſt John Baptiſt Morinus, a Phyſician and Mathematick-Profeſſor at Paris. One of theſe Defences, printed at Paris A. D. 1651, is entituled Anatomia Ridiculi Muris: The other, printed three Years after, is Favilla Ridiculi Muris.

BERNOUILLI, (James) born at Baſil A. D. 1634: His Father Nicolas Bernoulli, was a Perſon of Character for Learning. James's Genius lay ſtrongly both for Poetry and Mathematicks, Parts of Learning ſeldom found to any conſiderable Degree in one Perſon. He learned Mathematicks without the Aſſiſtance of a Maſter: He applied himſelf to the New Philoſophy, and was a great Admirer of Des Cartes and Malbranche. The Mathematick Profeſſor's Place being void at Baſil in 1687, he was brought to the Chair by the general Conſent of the Magiſtracy: One of his principal Performances is, an excellent Tract of the Arithmetick of Infinites; in which he lays open the moſt profound recondite Secrets of that Science: He died in the Year 1705. The Acta Lipſiaca, and the Journal des Sçavans, mention two other of his learned Performances. The firſt is, Obſervations upon a Comet; the other, upon the Gravitation of the Air. * Le Journal des Sçavans de Paris 1706, February 8. Hiſtoire de l'Academie Royale des Sciences, imprimée à Paris en 1708.

BERTAUT, (John) was Contemporary with Ronſard and Deſportes: He admired theſe two Poets, but refined upon them both. He writes with more Perſpicuity than the firſt, with more Force than the ſecond, and with more Wit and Politeneſs than both of them. The Gentlemen of Port-Royal had ſuch an Eſteem for ſome of his Compoſitions, that they inſerted the following Verſes in their Commentary upon Job.

Felicité paſſée
Qui ne peut revenir,
Tourment de ma Penſée,
Que n' ai-je, en te perdant, perdu le ſouvenir?
Helas! il ne me reſte
De mes contentemens,
Qu'un ſouvenir funeſte,
Qui me les convertit à tout heure en tourment.
Le ſort plein d'injuſtice,
M'ayant enfin rendu,
Ce reſte un pur Supplice,
Je ſerois plus heureux ſi j'avois plus perdu.

* Sammarthani Fratres, in Gall. Chriſt. Tom. 3. Boileau, Deſpreaux, dans l'Art. Poet. Chant. 1. Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes Modernes, Tom. 8.

BERTOLSGADEN, a German Town in Upper Bavaria: It lies within the Territories of the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, upon the Little River Acha: The Prévo, or Mayor of the Town is Lord of the Soil, and an Eccleſiaſtical Prince holding of the Empire. He has likewiſe the Juriſdiction of a ſmall Neighbourhood, called the Mayoralty of Bertolſgaden. The Town is nine Miles from Saltzburg, and furniſhes the adjacent Country with Salt. The Prévot of Bertolſgaden holds immediately of the Pope. * Bourgon, Geograph. Hiſtor. Baudrand.

*BERYTUS, a Town of Phœnicia upon the Mediterranean, between Tripoli and Sidon: The ancient Burghers pretended their Town was built by Saturn: The famous Sanchoniathan was born here. Berytus was afterwards called Felix Julia, upon the ſettling of a Roman Colony there, in the Reign of Auguſtus. The Town was conſiderable in the Fifth Century; for in the Sixth Action of the Council of Chalcedon, the Biſhop of Berytus is ſtyled a Metropolitan. * Gulielm. Tyr.

BESSE, a Town in Upper Hungary, upon the River Couze. Near this Place there is a Bottomleſs Lake, called Lacus Pavinus; and when a Stone is thrown ſtrongly into it, there comes up a miſty Exhalation, which diſcharges in Thunder and Lightning. * Bourgon, Geogr. Hiſtor.

BESSIN, (Le) Bajocenſis Tractus, a Country in Lower Normandy in France, near Bayeux the Capital: It reaches the Channel to the North, is bounded with the Country of Auge to the Eaſt, with the Cotantin to the Weſt, and with the Avranchin to the South. 'Tis divided into two Parts, that is, the Upper Beſſin, which lies along the River Orne; and the Lower Beſſin, upon the River Vire. The principal Towns are Bayeux, Cayen, S. Lo, and Vire. See Bayeux in Morery Vol. I.

*BETHEL, Simon, in his Dictionary of the Bible, obſerves, that moſt Writers miſtake the Town of Bethel within the Tribe of Benjamin, formerly called Luz, for another Town of the ſame Name within the Tribe of Ephraim, near Sichem, hard by the Temple of Baal and Samaria. At this laſt, Jeroboam ſet up one of his Golden Calves, which made the Prophet Hoſea call it Beth-Haven, which is the Houſe of Idolatry.

BETHESDA, a Pool mentioned by S. John, ch. v. In this Pond the Entrails of the Sacrifice were waſhed, and not only of the Sheep as ſome Authors believe, but other Animals. Theophylact believes the Healing Vertue in theſe Waters came from the Entrails of the Sacrifices waſh'd there. To fortify this Notion, 'tis to be obſerv'd, that all Diſeaſes were not cured here, but only the Blind, the Halt, the Withered, and, it may be, the Paralytical. That at Feſtival Solemnities, a vaſt Number of Cattle were killed: For Inſtance, at the Paſſover, when Ceſtius was Governor, in Nero's Reign, Two hundred fifty five thouſand Beaſts were killed for Sacrificing. 'Tis not improbable that ſo much warm Blood might impregnate the Water with a Medicinal Quality; and when any body went down firſt to ſtir the Water, the groſſer Parts of the Blood, which ſunk to the Bottom, were forced upwards, and made a ſtronger Infuſion. Upon this Suppoſition, he that is called an Angel, muſt be only a Meſſenger or Officer, who was put in on purpoſe to ruffle the Waters, and prepare it for the Patient. * Hammond, Annot. S. John, Chap. v.

BETHON, a Town of Judea, which revolted from Alexander Jannæus, and called in Demetrius Eucerus, King of Syria, to their Aſſiſtance. When Demetrius's Forces were withdrawn, Alexander took the Town by Aſſault, laid all the Burghers in Irons, and ſent them Priſoners to Jeruſalem, in the eighty fourth Year before the Incarnation. To take a deeper Revenge for their Rebellion; one Day, when he treated his Concubines in a Place of a large Proſpect, he crucified eight hundred of them: And to make the Puniſhment more pungent, he let them ſee their Wives and Childrens Throats cut before they expired: This Inhumanity gave him the Name of Thracidas. * Joſeph, Antiquit. Lib. 13. cap. 22.

BETH-SUR, or Bethſura, a Town in the Northern Frontier of the Tribe of Judah, ſix Miles from Jeruſalem: 'Tis mentioned in the xvth of Joſhua, and 'twas afterwards rebuilt, enlarged and ornamented, by Rheoboam King of Judah: 'Twas reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt Places of Judea in the Time of Judas Maccabeus, who beat the Macedonians ſeveral times here. His firſt Succeſs was in the 161ſt Year before the Incarnation, when Lyſias marching into Judea with an Army of ſixty thouſand Foot and five thouſand Horſe, ſet down before Beth ſur, battered it with his Rams, and preſſed the Siege very hard; but Judas Maccabeus coming ſeaſonably up with a Body of ten thouſand, forced Lyſias to decamp and quit the Enterprize. 'Tis true, the next Year Antiochus Eupator took it: This Siege brought on the famous Battle between that Prince and Judas Maccabeus, where his Brother Eleazer was ſurprizingly adventrous. This Officer ſeeing one of the Elephant's larger and more richly accoutred than the reſt, cut thro' the Enemy's Troops to make his way to him; and creeping under his Belly, killed him, and was cruſhed to death himſelf with the Elephant's Weight. Judas conſidering the Enemy's Army was much ſuperior to his own, thought it moſt prudential to draw off, to counter-march to Jeruſalem, and carry on the Siege of the Fort. Antiochus who was a hundred thouſand Foot, twenty thouſand Horſe, and thirty two Elephants, detached half his Forces to Jeruſalem, and carried on the Siege of Beth-ſur with the reſt. The Beſieged having no Proſpect of Relief, and diſtreſſed for want of Proviſions, ſurrendred upon Articles to carry off their Arms and Baggage; but the King broke the Articles upon his entring the Town; he ſtripped the Garriſon, and turn'd them out. This Place continued in the Enemy's Hands till Simon, Jonathan's Brother, ſet down before it, and preſſed the Siege ſo cloſely, that the Garriſon was forced to capitulate. * 1 Maccab. vi. 1 Maccab. xi. Simon Diction. de la Bible.

BEVAGNA, a Town within the Patrimony of S. Peter in Italy: 'Tis within the Duchy of Spoleto; it ſtands in a fruitful and pleaſant Vale, between the Towns Aſſiſa and Todi. * Maty, Diction.

BEYERNE, a great Town upon the Danube, belonging to the Earldom of Furſtenburg in Suabia: 'Tis four Leagues diſtant from Dutlingen, and about five from Uberlingen. 'Tis commonly taken for the old Town of Vindelicia, called Bragodurum, Brigodurum, and Brigobanna. * Maty, Diction.

* BEZA, (Theodore de) Miniſter of Geneva, made a great Figure amongſt the Reformed there, and in France; and was the Religious Head of the Party for above forty Years: He was born at Vezelai, in the Duchy of Burgundy: He was bred to Learning, and promiſed great Improvements, both from Genius and Application. He went through Poetry, Rhetorick, Logick, and Philoſophy; and from thence advanced to the Study of the Law, which his Relations deſigned for his Profeſſion. But having no Inclination for this Faculty, his Uncle Nicolas Beza deſigned him for an Eccleſiaſtick, and had already made ſome Proviſion for him in the Church; but this Gentleman dying, left Beza more at Liberty, and afterwards brought him to a new Thought. However, it ſeems for ſome time he was a Roman Catholick Eccleſiaſtick; but had the Misfortune to tarniſh his Character by Licentious Poems and Practice. Having reſolved to quit France, he parted with his Priory of Longjumeau, and retired to Geneva in November 1548. His intimate Friend, John Giſpin, who wrote the Proteſtant Martyrology, went along with him. In 1563, he ſucceeded Calvin at Geneva. Beza, as the French Supplementer reports, had worne out his ſmooth genteel Humour: He was now grown rough and paſſionate, and failed in Decency even to Princes. Anthony of Bourbon, King of Navarre, inviting him to Nerac, Beza hoped to have made him his Convert: But this Prince turning Roman Catholick, Beza let looſe his Satyr upon him, treated him with Contempt; and in one of his Epiſtles to Calvin, calls him the Julian of the Age. And with much the ſame Ceremony he calls Mary, Queen of England, Medea, in a Letter of his to Buchanan. Beza is charged with tampering with Renaude, and exciting him to the Conſpiracy at Amboiſe A. D. 1560, to have ſolicited Poltrot to aſſaſſinate the Duke of Guiſe, A.D. 1563, and to have blown up the French to Rebellion and Carnage during the Civil War. He endeavoured to purge himſelf from theſe Imputations; but a great many People thought him ſhort in his Juſtification. In 1571, he was Preſident at a Synod held at Rochelle, and was likewiſe called in to ſeveral Conferences at Bern, and elſewhere; and was look'd on as a Perſon of the greateſt Abilities and Reputation of all the Proteſtant Miniſters of France, Swiſſerland, and the Low-Countries. Beſides his Works mentioned in Morery Vol. I. he wrote, 1. A Latin Tranſlation of the Pſalms, in different ſorts of Verſes. 2. The Canticles, in Lyrick Verſe. 3. Sylvæ. 4. Epigrams. 5. Elegies. 6. Portraits, or Tabulæ. 7. Epitaphs. 8. Emblems. 9. Cato the Cenſor, which he called the Chriſtian. Beza was a good Poet; but the Licentiouſneſs of his Muſe is a Tache upon his Reputation. Jurieu takes a great deal of Pains to wipe off this Stain, and brighten Beza's Character: He endeavorus to ſalve the Appearances, by ſaying they were only Sallies of Youth. But this Defence ſeems not to reach home, becauſe all theſe Libertine Compoſitions were reprinted in a beautiful Character by the Stephens's, Proteſtant Printers: That Beza was upon the Spot, when this Edition came from the Preſs A. D. 1597, and that he was now no leſs than ſeventy eight Years of Age. Beſides, Janus Gruterus, and George Sigiſmonde de Zaſtriſell, Proteſtant Printers, were the firſt who publiſhed theſe Poems. However, it muſt be allowed, that ſeveral of Beza's Performances in Latin Poetry are ſolemn and well managed: Amongſt theſe, his Cato the Cenſor, and his Paraphraſe upon the Canticles, may be reckoned. He was eighty two Years of Age when he gave over making Latin Verſes; and his laſt Poem is a ſort of Panegyrick upon King Henry IV. Beza, at Calvin's Inſtance, finiſhed Marot's French Tranſlation of the Pſalms; but there is a conſiderable Difference between theſe two Poets; Beza falls much below Marot both for Verſification and repreſenting the Senſe of the Scripture. This, as the Dutch Gentleman obſerves, is the French Supplementer's Account. * Antoine la Fay, de vita & Obit. Theod. Bezæ. Thuan. Hiſtor. la Croix du Maine, Biblioth. Franc. Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes Modernes. Collier's Church Hiſt. Vol. II.

BEZOARD, or Bezar, a Medicinal Stone, and an excellent Counter-Poiſon, found in the Dung of an Animal call'd Pazan. This Animal is a ſort of a Goat with ſhort Hair, almoſt like thoſe of a Stag. The Oriental Bezar, reckon'd the beſt, comes from the Indies, particularly from the Kingdoms of Golconda and Cananor. In Perſia and the Indies, 'tis very common to find the Bezar Stone in Goats Stomachs. The Figure of the Stone is different, ſome are round, others oblong, and others reſemble a Pigeon's Egg, or a Kidney: The Colour is likewiſe different; ſome of them are black, ſome aſh-coloured, ſome yellowiſh, and ſome draw towards a green; but the common Colour is a dark grey. They are made up of ſeveral Coats or Covers, like Onions; theſe Covers or diſtinct Skins lie one upon another; they are ſmooth and ſhining, the ſecond more than the firſt; and ſo improving by degrees, till you come to the innermoſt. In the middle of theſe Stones there is a little Cavity, with a ſmall Quantity of Powder in it, of the ſame Nature with the Stone, or ſome little wrapt Straw, or Seed, from whence the Stone is produced. Farther, the Bigneſs of the Bezars is likewiſe different: Some don't weigh above a Dram, others weigh twelve or fifteen times as much. To prove them, they muſt be rubbed in Lime ſteep'd in Water: If they are good, they will turn yellowiſh. Another way of examining them, is, firſt to rub Paper with Chalk, and then to fret theſe Stones with the Paper: If they are good, they will tinge the Paper with green Spots. The Weſtern Bezoar, or that of Peru, is quite different: 'Tis found in a great many Beaſts particular to that Country. In ſome of them, 'tis the bigneſs of a Hazle Nut, in others the bigneſs of a Walnut; and in ſome, as big as a Hen's Egg. Sometimes three or four of them are found in the ſame Stomach. The Creatures in which this Stone is found in Peru, are thoſe called Guanacos, Jacos, Vicunnas, Taraguas; the Taraguas afford the beſt. 'Tis ſaid there are Bezoar Stones in Perſia found in the Body of an Ape; that they are ſo ſtrong in the Operation, that two Grains of them have the ſame Effect with the common Doſe of the reſt. The Abbot of Choiſi, in his Relation of the Kingdom of Siam, reports, that the Bezoar Stone is found in a Hedgehog's, an Ape's, a Goat's, and ſometimes in a Cow's Stomach; and ſays, the Hedgehog's is the beſt. The greateſt Part of Bezoar Stones, which are ſo plentiful, are only Compoſitions made with the Magiſtery of Rice, Scordium, and other reſembling Plants, proper to make the Patient ſweat. * Garſias ab Horto.

* BIAFARA, a Town in Africk; a Kingdom of this Name ſtands in Guinea. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Kingdom of Zanfara, Part of the Negro's Country; on the Eaſt by the Kingdom of Medra, on the Weſt by that of Benin, and on the South by the Kingdom of Gaboa. The Country takes its Name from the Capital; the reſt of the Towns are little conſiderable: 'Tis otherwiſe called the Kingdom of Gouffode. The Inhabitants are Blacks, Savage, and Idolaters. The Climate lying under the Line, and remote from the Sea, is exceſſively hot.

BIALEGRODKO, a Town of Poland in the Lower Volhinia, upon the River Irpien, about ſix Leagues from the Town of Kiovia to the South-Weſt: 'Tis fortified with a good Caſtle, and belongs to the Muſcovites. * Maty, Diction.

BIANCHINI, (Francis) born at Verona, Chamberlain to the Pope, and a Lay-Brother of the Congregation ſettled for reforming the Roman Kalendar: He publiſhed two Diſſertations A. D. 1703; one upon the Kalendar and Cycle of Julius Cæſar, and another upon the Paſchal Canon of S. Hypolitus: Theſe are learned Performances. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library.

BIBARS, fourth Sultan of the firſt Dynaſty of the Mamalukes, called Baharites, was Alaeddin-al-Bundokdar's Slave: 'Tis ſaid he was at the Head of the Conſpiracy againſt Cotuz his Predeceſſor; and that 'twas he that kill'd him A. D. 1259. Bibars being recogniz'd lawful Sultan, march'd to Grand Caire, where the Gates were opened to him. The next Year, he gained three ſignal Victories againſt the Tartars, who had taken Aleppo by Storm, and put the greateſt Part of the Burghers to the Sword.

At

At the ſame time Bibars owned one Ahmed, whom the ſtrolling Arabians had conveyed to Caire: They pretended he was Son to Caliph Dhaher-Billah, who had retir'd into Arabia: Theſe Muſſelmans had been three Years and a half without any one at the Head of Religion; but now Ahmed, countenanc'd by Bibars, who call'd him Moſtanſer Billah, was own'd for Caliph. From this time the Caliphs, quite ſtripp'd of their Temporal Juriſdiction, were reduc'd to their Spiritual Authority, and had no other Buſineſs but the Management of a Religious Character; for neither Bibars, nor his Succeſſors, aſſigned them any Dominions or Civil Government. Bibars carried his Caliph, little regarded at Grand Caire, to Damaſcus; from whence he ſent him under a good Guard to Bagdet, to put him in Poſſeſſion of the Seat of his Anceſtors; but the Tartars meeting with him, killed him in his March. In the 661ſt Year of the Hegyra, that is, A. D. 1262, Bibars made himſelf Maſter of the ſtrong Caſtle of Crak; but the Expedient was Treacherous and Diſhonourable. Two Years after he took Cæſarea in Paleſtine from the Franks: The next Year he beſieged Ptolemais without effect; but had the Town and Caſtle of Safette ſurrender'd to him upon Articles. From hence he march'd into Armenia, took the Towns of Sis and Ajas, and ruin'd all Haithan's Country, then King of Armenia; but the Tartars coming up as Auxiliaries to this Prince, forc'd Bibars to quit Armenia and Natolia. In the 666th Year of the Hegyra, he took Jaſa or Joppa, and ſoon after Antioch, where he demoliſh'd the beſt Churches, and carry'd the moſt Part of the Burghers into Captivity. The next Year, he took Aleppo from the Tartars, and left few of the Inhabitants alive. A. D. 1269, he ſat down before Ptolemais a ſecond time; and though he could not carry the Town, he very much diſtreſs'd the Country. He had the Caſtle of Maſſiat ſurrender'd to him by the Templars; the Town of Accheron, and the Caſtle of Curdes, fell into his Hands the ſame way. And now being advertiz'd the Tartars were coming up to reinforce the Franks, he wheel'd off towards Aleppo, from thence counter-march'd to Egypt, and from thence back again into Syria; and all theſe Expeditions were made in one Campaign, A. D. 1271. The next Year, he forc'd the Tartars to raiſe the Siege of Bira, a ſtrong Town in Meſopotamia; after which, he mov'd back into Egypt. In 1273, he enter'd the Neighbourhood of Sis in Armenia, and plundred all the Country. The next Year, beſides a ſucceſsful Expedition againſt the Tartars, he ſent an Army into Nubia, which brought off a great deal of Plunder, and deſtroy'd all that offer'd at Reſiſtance. In the Year 1275, Bibars engag'd the Tartars in Natolia, where there happen'd a great many Battles. But at laſt, finding himſelf not equal to the Enemy, he retir'd to Emeſſa, and died there. A little before his Death, there happen'd to be a total Eclipſe of the Moon: The Aſtrologers gave out, it prognoſticated the Death of ſome Prince. The Sultan being deſirous to get clear of the Preſage, invited a Prince of the Family of the Jobites, call'd Malek al Caher, to an Entertainment, and here he contriv'd him a Draught of poiſon'd Wine; and to prevent Suſpicion, when Malek had taken it off, Bibars drank out of the ſame Cup fill'd from a different Flaſk; but, it ſeems, there was Poiſon enough left about the Cup to diſpatch Bibars: And thus theſe two Princes died together at Dinner. However, ſome Authors give a fairer Account, and report Bibars died of a Dyſentery, brought upon him by fording the Euphrates when he went to fight the Tartars: He reigned ſeventeen Years, and ſome Months. D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.*

* BIBLIS, a celebrated Martyr at Lyons, in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus: She had the Misfortune to diſclaim Chriſtianity when firſt brought to the Teſt: The Pagans finding her wanting in Reſolution, concluded if ſhe was once more brought to the Torture, ſhe would make a Diſcovery of all the Crimes charg'd upon the Chriſtians; but now, by the Grace of God, recollecting herſelf, ſhe conſider'd ſeriouſly the Torments of Hell. This Thought awaken'd her Conſcience and her Courage; ſo that now, inſtead of turning falſe Evidence againſt the Chriſtians, ſhe avow'd their Innocence. How, ſays ſhe, is it poſſible, the Chriſtians ſhould eat Children, when they are not ſo much as allowed to taſte a Drop of Blood? Upon this ſhe declar'd herſelf a Chriſtian, and had the Honour of Martyrdom with the reſt. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 5. cap. 1. Baillet, Vies des Saincles.

BIEDA, a Town within the Pope's Dominions in Italy: It ſtands upon the River Bieda, at equal Diſtance between Toſcanelli and Satri. * Maty, Diction.

BIELLOIS, in Latin Bugellenſis Præfectura, a little Country in Piedmont: It has been Parcel of the Duke of Savoy's Dominions ever ſince the Year 1379. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Alps, on the Weſt by the Duchy of Aouſte, on the Eaſt by the Vercellois, and the little Precinct of Maſſeran, and on the South by the Canavoiſe. The Inhabitants call it le Bielleſe, from the Town Bielle the Capital. The Country formerly only took in twenty five Villages or Caſtles; but in the new Partition of the Provinces of Piedmont, there are forty two within the Diviſion. We are to obſerve that this Country is no Part of the Vercellois, as is ſufficiently made out by the Deſcriptions Auguſtin de la Chieſe, Biſhop of Saluſſes, and Guichenon, have given out of Piedmont; notwithſtanding Gruter, Maginus, and others, who drew Maps, have made it Part of the Vercelloiſe.

BIES-BOS, or Bis-Bos, a great Marſh or Gulph in the United Provinces: It lies in South-Holland, between Dort and Gertruydenburg: 'Twas formerly a populous Country; but November 18, 1421, the Wahal and the Meuſe happening to break their Dykes in the Night, laid it all under Water, ſwallow'd up ſeventy two Villages, deſtroy'd a hundred thouſand People, and a prodigious Number of Cattle. 'Tis ſaid there was nothing ſaved but a Cat, and a Child in the Cradle: That the Cat jumping from one end to the other, trimm'd the Cradle, and preſerv'd the Child.

BIGUBA, a Kingdom of Nigritia in Africk; it lies along the River Niger, where it begins to part in two Streams. Biguba is bounded on the North by the Kingdom of Mandinga, on the South by that of Melli, on the Weſt by the Kingdom of Gambea, on the North by that of Tombat. Cantory upon the Niger is the Capital: And moſt Maps mark the whole Kingdom by this Name. * Maty, Diction.

BIKEND, a Town beyond the River Oxus, a Day's Journey from Boklara. It has a ſtrong Wall, and a fair Moſque, with a ſtately Portico, ornamented with Gold and Azure: The Situation of it is not exactly agreed on; but ſome Geographers give it 39 or 40 Degrees of Northern Latitude. * D' Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

BILLAINE, (Lewis) a Bookſeller in Paris, living about the middle of the XVIIth Century, and one of the moſt knowing in that Buſineſs. He underſtood ſix Languages beſides his own; Latin, Greek, Italian, Spaniſh, High-Dutch, and Low-Dutch. * Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Imprimeurs, Art. 25.

* BIOPHIO. For Northern America in Morery Vol. I. read Southern America.

BISALTÆ, Scythians, who, according to Servius, upon Virgil, uſed to live in their Expeditions upon Mares Blood daſh'd with Milk;

> Biſaltæ qui more ſolent, acerque Gelonus,
> Cum fugit in Rhodopen, aut in deſerta Getarum,
> Et lac concretum cum ſanguine potat equino.
>
> * Virgil. Georg. Lib. 3.

BISCHE, a Town, with a ſtrong Caſtle which commands it: It ſtands upon the River Small, within the County of Biſche, between the Towns of Deux-Ponts, and Hagenaw. 'Tis the Capital of the Earldom of Biſche, which is bounded on the Weſt by the County of Sarwerden, with Alſatia to the South, and the Duchy of Deux Ponts to the Eaſt. This Earldom or County at preſent has nothing conſiderable in it, excepting the Town of Biſche; but formerly it took in a great Part of the Duchy of Deux Ponts, and belong'd to the Counts of Hanaw. The Dukes of Lorrain are now the Maſters, it having been annexed to their Territories for ſome Ages. * Maty, Diction.

BISCOHOF-ZELL, a Swiſs Town ſituate upon the River Sitter, between Apenzell and Conſtance. Biſcohof-Zell belongs to the Biſhop of Conſtance, who has a ſort of Sheriff there: He reſides in the Caſtle, and collects half the Fines and Amerciaments. The Town likewiſe is a ſort of Dependency upon the Swiſs Cantons, being obliged to furniſh a certain Quota of Troops in time of War. But notwithſtanding theſe two Maſters, Biſcohof-Zell is in a manner Miſtreſs of herſelf: For the Burghers chooſe their own Magiſtrates, diſpoſe of the Tolls and Cuſtoms, and are the Sovereign Judges in all Cauſes relating to Property or Offence againſt the State. * Maty, Diction.

BISERTA, Vecchia, and Raſamilara, a Town in Barbary: It lies upon the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Tunis, between Biſerta and Taberca. The Place, tho' thinly inhabited, has a very good Haven. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the ancient Hippo Diarrytos. * Maty, Diction.

BITCHU, or Bitcon, a Town in the Iſle of Niphon, the biggeſt Iſland in Japan. 'Tis the Capital of a ſmall Kingdom of that Name, and ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Gulph of Meaco. * Maty, Diction.

BLANC, (Le) born in Dauphiné, and lived in the Seventeenth Century. He made the Belles Lettres, Hiſtory, and Medals, his Study. He was order'd by King Lewis XIV. to write a General Hiſtory of the French Coins, from the Beginning of that Monarchy to the preſent Times. This Performance was publiſh'd in 1690. He publiſhed another Diſſertation upon ſome Coins of Charlemagne, of Lewis the Debonaire, of Lotharius, and their Succeſſors, minted at Rome; which is a Proof theſe Princes were Sovereigns of that Town. Le Blanc was pitched upon by the Court to write Hiſtory; but he died ſuddenly at Verſailles in 1698. * Memoires du Temps.

BLANCAT, (Le Sieur de Saint) a Latin French Poet living in the Reign of Lewis XIII. His Sylvia in Quarto were publiſhed at Thoulouſe A. D. 1635; together with what he wrote upon the Hiſtory of France. He likewiſe wrote a Poem upon the Birth of the Dauphin, afterwards Lewis XIV. This Poet ſtraining above his Strength for the Sublime, falls into the Extreme of Fuſtian and Galimatias. He miſtakes Rumbling for Rapture, and Sound for Senſe. To give an Inſtance; he makes the Dauphin in Swaddling Bands roar much louder than a Town Bull.

Ille ore horrendum lituis reſpondet aperto,
Obſcuratque tubas vagitu, & tympana terret.

Bold ſtunning Noiſe from Infant Lungs there comes;
He drowns the Trumpets, and he frights the Drums.

But here Blancat ſeems to have forgot that Hercules ſtrangled a Pair of Dragons in his Cradle without half this Bellowing. * Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poetes Modernes, Tom. 8.

BLANKENBOURG, a Town fortify'd with a Caſtle, within the Earldom of Reinſtein in Lower Saxony, ſix Leagues from Halberſtadt to the South. 'Tis the Head of a ſmall, barren, and mountainous County. It has been for ſome time reunited to the Duchy of Brunſwick, of which 'twas holden in Chief. * Maty, Diction.

BLASCUS. (Nonius) The falſe Print of a hundred Paces, rectified under Caledonia.

BLEICHERODE, a good Town in the Circle of Upper Saxony: It lies within the Earldom of Hohentine in Thuringia, between the Towns of Northauſen and Mulhauſen, three Leagues from the firſt, and five from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

BOAGRIO, a Brook in Greece, ſometimes almoſt dry, and ſometimes ſwelled to two Miles broad. 'Tis upon the Confines of Theſſaly and Achaia, and falls into the Gulph of Zeiton over againſt the Weſtern Point of the Iſle of Negropont. * Maty, Diction.

BOCHART, (Matthew) Couſin to the Learned Samuel Bochart, was a French Miniſter at Alençon. He was a Perſon of Learning, and wrote ſeveral Books. His moſt conſiderable Performances are his Diſcourſes againſt Reliques and the Sacrifice of the Maſs. He likewiſe publiſhed a Dialogue to diſentangle the French Proteſtants from the Miſſionaries Objections, who charged them with what had paſſed at the National Synod at Charenton in favour of the tolerating Lutheraniſm. The Elector Palatine reading this Dialogue, laid it before the Princes of the Augsburg Confeſſion at the Dyet of Frankfort, hoping it might ſuggeſt ſufficient Motives for reconciling the two Proteſtant Churches. The Author receiving Advice of this good News, wrote a Latin Book called Dialiacticon, and addreſs'd it to the Prince above mention'd. 'Twas printed at Sedan in 1662. It goes upon a Reconciling Project of the Lutherans and Calviniſts. * Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

BOGDOI, a People of Great Tartary. The Chineſe call them the Eaſtern Tartars, and the Moguls give them the Name of Nuchi. They are bounded with the Mogul's Dominions on the Weſt, with China on the South, and the Indian Ocean on the Eaſt. Father Avril affirms, that the Language and Letters of theſe Tartars reſemble thoſe of the Perſians; but that they write from Top to Bottom like the Chineſe. In this Country, according to him, the Diutchari or Diourſchi Tartars live. Theſe are the Clans that conquer'd China, and reign there. M. Witzen, in his Maps, marks them Caucjari, and plants them North of the River Quantung. Pere Avril, Voyage à la Coine.

BOGOTA, a Town in that Part of Southern America called Terra Firma: 'Tis in the Southern Part of the Kingdom of New Granada. Santa Fé de Bogota is the Capital of the Country. * Maty, Diction.

BOGRAS, a Town belonging to the Turk in Aſia: It ſtands within the Beglerbeg of Aleppo in Syria, about ſix Leagues from Alexandretta to the North-Weſt. This Place was formerly a noted Paſſage through Mount Amanus to go from Cilicia to Syria. * Maty, Diction.

* BOHEMIA.

The Circles of Bohemia properly ſo called.

Bechimsko, Boleſlausko, Caurzimsko, Chrudimsko, Czaſlanusko, Hadreskos, de Konigſgratz, Litomiersko, or de Leutmeritz, Pilſenska, Podbrosko, Pragensko, Batchſenko, Rakovinsko, Slanska, or de Stancy, Ulſawsko, and Ziatecko.

The Chief Towns in the Kingdom of Bohemia.

Breſlaw in Sileſia, Brin in Moravia, Eger in Bohemia Proper, Gros-Glogaw in Sileſia, Olmutz in Moravia, Pilſen in Bohemia Proper; Prague, Capital of the Kingdom in Bohemia Proper.

The Chief Towns in Bohemia Proper.

Budovus, Egra, Glatz, Conigſgratz, Letomerits, Loker, or Elnbogen, Pilſen, and Prague. There are other conſiderable Towns in Bohemia oftentimes omitted by Authors in their Account of this Country; as, Auſſi, Auſtia; Bohmisbroda, and Deutſchenbron, in Latin Brodagemina, Bohemica, and Teutonica; Cuttenberg, Cutna; Clataw, Glotavia; Jaromirz, Zaromiria; Litomiſſel, Lecotomeſium; Satz, Saleſium; Tabor, Taborium, or Taboria; Tachaw, Bern, Verona; Commitaw, Saut, and Commodu; Launy, Launa; Lymburg, Limburgum; Moſta, Mutha; Pardubitz, Pardubitia; Teyne, Tetina; Trebonia, and ſome others.

BOJITES, (The) reſtored the Kingdom of Perſia about the Year 932. After the Califs, who were Saracen Princes, had conquer'd Perſia, their Authority began quickly to decline; the Sultans or Governors of Provinces revolted, and ſet up for themſelves. The Chief in theſe Inſurrections were Bojas's Sons. His Family was ſuppoſed deſcended from the ancient Kings of Perſia, and by conſequence from Darius Hyſtaſpes. This Bojas had three Sons, Alis, Haſen, and Achmed, who had all been bred Soldiers. Alis took the Field with a Troop of Highwaymen; and after ſeveral Proofs of extraordinary Courage, joined Martowyges King of Aſſyria: But finding his Forces daily increaſe, he took Leave of Martowyges, ſeized Perſia and the neighbouring Provinces; and having made a Partition of them between himſelf and his two Brothers, had his new Kingdom confirmed to him by the Calif Muktaſibille. The Bojites, thus poſſeſs'd of Perſia, raiſed their Family and the Nation to a great Pitch of Reputation, and made the old Perſian Luſtre break out, which had been eclipſed for a great many Ages. Alis had the Surname of Amaduddaulues, that is, King of Kings; and his Poſterity held the Crown of Perſia a hundred and twenty ſeven Years, that is, to Anno Dom. 1055, when the Selgiugides, deſcended from the Turks, took their Place. * Georg. Hornius, Orbis Imper. p. 418. Joachimus Fellerius, who wrote Notes upon this Author, ſays the Bojites were likewiſe call'd Pujans. See Perſia.

BOILEAU, (James) Doctor in Divinity of the Sorbonne, was born in 1635. M. de Gondrin, Archbiſhop of Sens, made him Dean of this Church. He wrote ſeveral curious Works with the following Titles: Eclairciſſement, ciſſement, or the Explanation of a Paſſage in S. Auſtin cited in the little Prpetuity of Faith: A Latin Book entituled, Marcellus Ancyranus ad Decretalem ſuper Specula de Magiſtris: 'Tis to ſhew that the Profeſſors of Divinity in Univerſities are not comprehended in this Decretal. De Antiquo Jure Presbyterorum in Regimine Eccleſiaſtico. Here he endeavours to make it appear that Prieſts in the Primitive Church had a Share with the Biſhops in governing the Dioceſes. In 1676, he publiſhed a French Treatiſe, to prove that in the Sacrament of Penance, Contrition is neceſſary for the Remiſſion of Sins. His moſt conſiderable Work is his Book in Quarto, De Antiquis & Majoribus Epiſcoporum Cauſis, Printed at Lyons in 1671. Ten Years forward he publiſhed a Tract, De Sanguine Corporis Chriſti poſt Reſurrectionem, upon the 146th Epiſtle of S. Auguſtin, againſt M. Allix; in which he endeavours to prove S. Auguſtin never queſtion'd our Saviour's Glorify'd Body having Blood in it. In 1686, M. Boileau publiſh'd Ratram or Bertram upon the Euchariſt, with a French Tranſlation, a Preface, and Remarks. [But here he is complained of for not always tranſlating exactly fair.] In 1712, he publiſhed a Latin Edition of Bertram, with learned Notes, an Hiſtorical Preface in Latin, with a Refutation of what Father Harduin, a Jeſuite, had aſſerted againſt Bertram in his Book de Sacramento Altaris. In 1691, he printed a little French Treatiſe touching the Impediments of Marriage, where he maintains Launoy's Opinion againſt Galeſius and Gerbais. The next I ſhall mention is entituled, Colloquium Criticum de Sphalmatis Virorum in Re Literaria Illuſtrium. Here he diſcovers ſeveral Faults into which Men of Character for Learning have fallen, and reſtores ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers. In 1700, he printed a Book at Paris, entituled, Hiſtoria Flagellantium, ſive de Recto vel Perverſo Flagrorum uſu apud Chriſtianos. And here he blames the Practice of Voluntary Diſcipline. To theſe Works may be added a French Tranſlation of Grenade, concerning the Duty and Converſation of Biſhops. There are more Prints of this Author mentioned in the French Supplement. * Journal des Savans de Paris, M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

BOILEAU, (Nicolas) Sieur Deſpreaux, a Member of the French Academy, Brother to him laſt mentioned, and born at Paris in 1636. He ſtudied firſt at the College of Beauvais, where he diſcovered an extraordinary Talent for Poetry. He was ſcarcely eighteen Years old, when he wrote an Ode upon the War likely to break out between the Engliſh and the French. This Poetick Exerciſe, after correcting ſome few Paſſages, is inſerted by him in the laſt Edition of his Works. When he had gone through his Courſe of Philoſophy, his Parents engaged him to the Law, in which Faculty he made ſo conſiderable a Progreſs, that he was called to the Bar much younger than is uſual. He was well qualified for Pleading in every reſpect, excepting his Inclination. He reſolved therefore to try another Profeſſion, and fancying the Sorbonne a ſort of Antipodes to the Long Robe, he began a Courſe of Divinity there: But he was quickly tired with their Lectures, managed after the dry manner of the School-Men. He fancied he had only changed one ſort of Chicane for another. And now quitting the Sorbonne, he reſigned himſelf entirely to his Fancy for the Belles Lettres, and particularly for Poetry: And being diſguſted at the ill Taſte People generally had for this ſort of Writing, and that very indifferent Authors were cried up, he wrote ſome Satyrs upon this Subject. This Performance, tho' it got him abundance of Enemies among the ill Poets, raiſed him very much in the Eſteem of Men of Judgment. People were ſtrangely pleas'd with this firſt Improvement of Satyr. 'Twas unuſual Entertainment to find the Harmony of Verſification, correct Diction, and Sobriety of Expreſſion, in theſe Compoſitions: For till this time the French Satyr was unmuſical, and over-run with Indecency. However, this Freedom, as 'twas reckon'd, made a great Ferment in the French Parnaſſus; and he was loudly complain'd of for naming the Authors he reflected upon. This Cenſure occaſion'd the Writing his ninth Satyr, together with a Diſcourſe upon this ſort of Poetry. Here he advances ſeveral Reaſons to juſtify his Conduct, and reinforces them with the Authorities of Latin and French Poets who wrote this way. M. Boileau wrote a little Tract entituled, A Dialogue of the Dead: The Deſign of it is to expoſe ſome Plays and Romances then much valued. Chapelaine's Pucelle was particularly rallied; neither was the Grand Cyrus and Clelia, Mademoiſelle de Scudery's Romances, paſſed without Cenſure. But the Regard he had for this Gentlewoman, and ſome Perſons of Diſtinction, prevented his publiſhing this Dialogue. Boileau wrote two Epiſtles to the French King; one in 1669, where he runs a Panegyrick upon his Majeſty for the Peace lately concluded with Spain, and for making ſo noble a Proviſion for the Wealth, Improvement and Repoſe of his Subjects: The other in 1672, occaſion'd by the ſurprizing Conqueſts the French King had made that Year in Holland. Here he dilates upon the Hiſtory of the Campagne, and makes a pompous Deſcription of the French Army's paſſing the Rhine. About this time he wrote l'Arrêt Burleſque, or the Ridicul'd Decree, in favour of Ariſtotle, againſt the New Philoſophy. This Piece of Drollery had a conſiderable Effect, and made the Univerſity drop their Petition they were going to preſent to the Parliament. Soon after, M. Deſpreaux wrote a very ingenious Poem called Lutrin: And here the Richneſs of his Invention, and the Beauty of his Genius, are particularly diſcover'd. For to draw ſo great a Variety of Incidents from a barren Subject, and put them in ſo ſhining a Dreſs, requires a Fund of Senſe and fine Fancy more than ordinary. Beſides, which is a farther Commendation, this Poem is not without a Mixture of Satyr, curiouſly managed. From whence we may collect, this Gentleman had the Inſtruction of his Readers, as well as their Diverſion, in his View. In this Edition of his Works, printed in 1674, he added his Art of Poetry, and a Tract of the Sublime, tranſlated from Longinus. When this Book had the Royal Privilege for the Impreſſion, the King threw in a very honourable Sentence for the Author: 'Twas, that by giving this Paſport, the Publick might receive the ſame Satisfaction by reading his Works, that his Majeſty had done before. The King likewiſe encouraged him with a Penſion; and in 1677, his Majeſty pitched upon him and M. Racine to write the Hiſtory of his Reign. For this, both of them had an Annual Aſſignment, beſides a conſiderable Sum in hand. M. Deſpreaux was made a Member of the French Academy, and of that for Inſcriptions, in 1684. He had a ſhare in the famous Diſpute, Whether the Preference was to be given to the Ancient or Modern Writers? 'Twas occaſion'd by a Poem entituled, Le Siècle de Loüis le Grand, or the Age of Lewis the Great, publiſh'd in 1687 by Perrault. This Conteſt was debated in ſeveral Pieces both in Proſe and Verſe, which the two Parties drew out againſt each other. Boileau's Pindarick Ode upon the taking Namur, his Reflexions upon Longinus, and ſome Epigrams, are owing to this Diſpute. Some Years after, Perrault and Deſpreaux were reconciled, and kept a friendly Correſpondence. Boileau wrote a Poem upon the Love of God, dedicated to the Abbot Renaudot, and a Satyr upon Falſe Honour, with a Deſcription of that which is True. The laſt Edition of his Works, publiſhed by himſelf, was printed in 1701. This, which he calls his Favourite Edition, is enlarged with a new Preface, with ſeveral Pieces printed by themſelves before, and ſome hitherto unpubliſh'd. In 1707, this laſt Edition was reprinted at Amſterdam, where, at the Bottom of the Pages, the Editors have inſerted ſome Paſſages of Latin Poets imitated by the Author. Boileau, not pleas'd with this Fancy, deſign'd to expoſe it in a Satyr; but ſome Difficulties intervening, this Thought dropt. However, this Satyr, called Satyre ſur l'Equivoque, being finiſhed, 'twas printed at Amſterdam with the reſt of his Works after his Death. He lived ſeventy four Years and ſome Months, and died in March 1711. * Des Maizeaux, Vie de M. Boileau Deſpreaux. M. de Boze, Eloge de M. Boileau. Journal des Sçavans, Tom. 53. pag. 350.

BOISE, (Gerrard du) Prieſt of the Congregation of the Oratory, and born at Orleans in the Seventeenth Century. His Genius lay ſtrongly for Hiſtory and Criticiſm; M. de Harlai, Archbiſhop of Paris, made Choice of him to write the Hiſtory of his Church: He printed a Volume on this Subject, carried on to the Eleventh Century. The ſecond Tome, which he left in Manuſcript at his Death, goes to the Fifteenth Century. Father la Ripe has Orders to reviſe it, and put it to the Preſs. Father Du Boiſe died at Paris July 1696. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

BOI-

BOISOTT, (John Baptiſt) born at Beſançon in 1638, and extracted from an ancient and conſiderable Family, originally of Dijon: The Deſcent has furniſhed ſeveral great Men for the Cabinet, the Field, and the Long Robe. He began his Education with the Study of Humanity, of the Civil and Canon Law. He made the Tour of France, and Italy, and ſpent three Years in his Travels: And here he was a nice Obſerver of the Curioſities of Nature and Improvements of Art. He look'd into the Manners and Inclinations of the Country; into the Views of the Publick Miniſtry, and the Intereſt of Sovereign Princes. He had the Countenance of Cardinal Azzolini, who preſented him to Chriſtina Queen of Sweden. His Eminence was willing to fix him in the Family of this Princeſs, deſigning afterwards to make him a Biſhop: But Boiſott could by no means reconcile himſelf to the Hurry and Attendance of a Court Life: Liberty, Retirement, and Leiſure for Study, was his Inclination. At his leaving Rome, he had a Recommendation from the Pope, the Queen of Sweden, and the Cardinal laſt mentioned, which procured him two Priories in the Franche Comté. At his coming home, the Clergy choſe him to repreſent them in the Aſſembly of the States of the Province. During this Commiſſion, he made an Acquaintance with the Comte of S. Amour, Heir of the Family of Granvelle. This Nobleman ſold him Cardinal Granvell's Library. This Purchaſe was a great Treaſure. There were two very great Stateſmen of this Name, one was firſt Miniſter to the Emperor Charles V. and the other to King Philip II. He undertook to range theſe Manuſcripts in the Order of Time: They were Memoirs of all the Treaties made in the Reigns of theſe two Princes, abundance of Original Letters of Popes, of all the Sovereigns of Europe, and Miniſters of State, written in Latin, French, Spaniſh, and Italian: But the greateſt Part of theſe Letters being in Cyphers, and the Pages ſhuffled and diſordered, 'twas no ſmall Difficulty to reach their Meaning, and ſet them to right: However, Time and Pains made him Maſter of the Secret; he found a Key to the Cyphers, work'd up and bound above a hundred curious Volumes; and made Extracts and Indexes to command the Contents at his Pleaſure. M. Leibnitz had great Aſſiſtances from Boiſott for his Collection of the Treaties of Princes, which he publiſhed under the Name of Codex Diplomaticus. The Biſhop of Niſmes was likewiſe furniſhed by him for his Hiſtory of Cardinal Ximenes. M. Peliſſon deſired him to lodge all the Papers relating to Religion by themſelves. The Hint was obſerved, and thus we have Pope Pius IV's Brief for Communion under both Kinds. Boiſott was a great Medaliſt, and had a curious Collection of Medals, fine Paintings, Gravings in Onyx's, and other Stones, together with Antique Marbles, and Inſcriptions in Braſs. And for other Parts of Learning, he underſtood Hebrew, read the Greek and Latin Fathers, the Councils and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians. The Franche-Comté being yielded to the French King by the Treaty of Nimeguen, this Prince made him Abbot of Beſançon. He kept Correſpondence with Perſons of Character for Learning and Merit in moſt Parts of Europe. He anſwered all their Letters either in Latin or in their own Language. After his laſt Preferment, he took Prieſt's Orders. M. Peliſſon invited him to Court, where he was well received by the King, and all the Miniſtry. Being afterwards engaged in a Suit, where he thought the Honour of his Family concerned, he went to Dijon, and pleaded his own Cauſe without the Aſſiſtance of a Lawyer: And here he argued with ſo much Force and Capacity, that he not only gained the Trial, but the Eſteem of the Court into the Bargain. During the general Scarcity of Proviſions in 1694, he ſtript himſelf almoſt of Neceſſaries, to relieve the Indigent, inſomuch that he was forced to borrow twenty Piſtoles to ſubſiſt his Family: He died in December this Year. In his Will, he left the Benedictines of his Abbey ſome of his Paintings, his Buſts, his Braſs Medals, his Manuſcripts and Library, with a Fund of two thouſand Crowns; the Intereſt of which was to be employ'd in augmenting the Library, on Condition it ſhould be ſet open twice a Week. 'Tis to be hoped the Benedictines of S. Vincent will publiſh a Collection of all theſe Papers and Curioſities. The Abbot Boiſott has nothing printed excepting ſome Letters in the Journal des Sçavans. Thoſe who examined his Papers, diſcovered a Project or Heads of a Hiſtory Cardinal Granvelle intended to write; and where he deſigned to lay open the Myſtery of the Reign and Conduct of Philip II. * Journal des Sçavans, Tom. 23. pag. 383.

BOKHAH, a Town in Africk upon the Coaſt of Sofala. 'Tis the moſt Southern of all the Coaſt. * D' Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

* BOLLANDUS, (John) born in the latter end of the Sixteenth Century: His Lives of the Saints, carried on no farther than the Beginning of the Month of March, were after his Death continued to May, by Papebrothius and Henſchenius. This large Collection may be compared to a Net thrown into the Sea, which catches all ſorts of Fiſh; for this Collection takes in all ſorts of Acts and Lives of Saints, good, bad, and indifferent; true, doubtful, and falſe. Father Bollandus ſeem'd moſt inclined to prove his common Traditions; Henſchenius and Papebrochius appear leſs diffident, and take the Liberty, unleſs they had his Commiſſion, to make Remarks and Corrections upon him. * Alegamb, in Biblioth. Script. Societ. Jeſu. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belgic. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

BOLLI, a Town of Natolia, belonging to the Turk; it ſtands upon a ſmall River which falls into the Black Sea near Samaſtro. * Maty, Diction.

BOLLI, a Country in Aſia within the Grand Seignior's Dominions, and makes Part of Natolia Proper. It is bounded on the Weſt by Becſangil, on the South by Chioutaye and Chiangare, on the Eaſt by Amaſia, and on the North by the Black Sea. It anſwers to the two ſmall Countries of the Ancients, called Paphlagonia Proper, and Honorias. The chief Towns are Penderachi, Samaſtro, and Sinopi, Capital of the Country, all three upon the Coaſt; to which may be added Bolly, an Inland Town, mentioned in the foregoing Article. * Maty, Diction.

BOMBI, a large Town of Congo in Æthiopia. 'Tis within the Duchy of Bamba, and is governed by a Lord of a particular Family, who carries the Title of Marquis, and holds of the Duke of Bamba. * Maty, Diction.

* BONA, (John) Cardinal. 'Twas not his Eminence that was choſen Pope upon the Death of Clement IX, but Cardinal Altieri, who took the Title of Clement X. Bona held a Correſpondence with moſt of the learned Men of Europe. His Book de Divina Pſalmodia, treats of all the Parts, which relate to Divine Service, and his Book de Rebus Liturgicis mentions and explains the Rites, Prayers and Ceremonies of the Maſs, and exhauſts that Subject. His other Performances are Devotional Books, very ſerviceable for thoſe who aim at uncommon Attainments. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. XVII.

* BONAVENTURE. (Cardinal) Luther, notwithſtanding the Diſtance of his Sentiments, owned Bonaventure for an excellent Perſon. His Words are, Bonaventura Præſtantiſſimus Vir; and one Halenſis uſed to ſay, that Adam had not ſinned in Fryer Bonaventure; In Fratre Bonaventura Adam peccaſſe non videtur. Gerſon recommends the Reading Bonaventura's Works to the Monks, giving them to underſtand, no Catholick Doctors Writings are more ſerviceable to inform the Head, and warm the Heart. The greateſt Part of his Works go upon Myſtical Divinity; they are printed in eight Volumes in Folio at Rome in 1588. The two firſt are Commentaries upon the Scripture; the third, Sermons; the fourth and fifth, Commentaries upon the Maſter of the Sentences; the ſixth and ſeventh, Moral Tracts; the eighth, Opuſcula, giving Rules for a Monaſtick Life. 'Tis ſaid, Bonaventure began the Cuſtom of ſaying a Prayer to the Bleſſed Virgin after the Compline. * Surius his Life of Bonaventure. Spondanus. Bellarmin. de Script. Eccleſ. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

* BONCONVENTO, a ſmall Town in Tuſcany. The Emperor Henry VII. of the Houſe of Luxembourg, died here; but not poiſoned, ſays Baudrand, by a Monk, as ſome People, either miſinformed, or mal-intention'd, have written, without examining thoſe Hiſtorians who lived at the Time, and proved the contrary. * Leander, Albert.

BONET, (Theophilus) a celebrated Phyſician, born at Geneva, A. D. 1621. He ſtudied with great Application, and drew Extracts from all the conſiderable Authors of his Faculty upon the Practice of Phyſick. He made Obſervations upon the Progreſs and Variation of Diſeaſes, ſtudied the Courſe of Nature, and the Cauſes of of Diſtempers. This made him knowing in the Diagnoſtick Part, and ſucceſsful in his Preſcriptions. He did not begin to write till the latter end of his Time, when his Deafneſs made him unfit to viſit his Patients: 'Twas then for about ten or twelve Years, that he had Leiſure to review, and make a Collection of his Papers, and draw his long Experience into Form and Method. His Writings diſcover a great deal of Learning, Judgment, and Penetration. His firſt Performance in Print is entituled Pharos Medicorum, in Octavo. His Motive for writing his Book was the frequent Miſtakes the Generality of Phyſicians fall into both in Books and Practice. Several eminent Men, as Septalius, Rhodius, Ballonius, &c. had lamented this Misfortune before him, and done their utmoſt to diſcover thoſe Rocks, upon which the greateſt Part of this Faculty have ſplit. Theophilus Bonet thought the Abridging what had been written, ranging of it under Heads, and ſupplying the Deficiencies might be of Service to the Publick. This Book growing ſcarce, he publiſhed a ſecond Edition, and enlarged it to double the Bulk with new Obſervations, expunged ſome Faults, and called it Labyrinthus Medicus extricatus, &c. in Quarto. In 1682 there came out a third Edition in Folio, entituled Mercurius Compitalitius, &c. The Author's Deſign in this Work is ſomewhat different from that in the two former Editions; 'tis to direct the Reader's Conduct in the Cure of Diſtempers, according to the different Complication of Cauſes; and to ſhew the Neceſſity of altering the general Rules of Practice, by the Circumſtances of the Patient. This Edition was tranſlated into Engliſh in 1684, where the Tranſlators in their Preface give a great Character of Bonet's Deſign and happy Execution.

And ſince the Intention of Phyſick is to reſtore or preſerve Health, 'tis abſolutely neceſſary for this Purpoſe to know the Conſtitution of Human Bodies when thrown into Diſorder: This is the way to reach the Symptoms, and preſcribe the Remedy; for Information in theſe Branches of the Profeſſion, he wrote his Sepulcretum, or Anatomia Practica, in two Volumes, Folio: Printed firſt at Geneva, in 1679. And here, by his Reaſoning upon Diſſections, he diſcovers the hidden Cauſes of abundance of Maladies, and points at the Seat of the Diſtemper. Before he publiſhed this Work, he let go a Specimen of a few Sheets, to give him the Opinion of the Learned: He received a great many Letters, prefix'd to his firſt Tome, in which he was ſtrongly ſollicited to print ſo very uſeful an Undertaking. Bonet is the only Phyſician who has publiſhed a Book of this Nature. The Performance is equally ſerviceable, both to diſcover the true Cauſes of Diſtempers, and to remove them. M. Bonet afterwards publiſhed two Volumes in Folio, entituled Medicina Septentrionalis collatitia, &c. They furniſh ſeveral uncommon and ſignificant Caſes in Theory and Practice, drawn from celebrated Authors, and happening in the Northern Parts of Europe. To theſe he has added his own Reaſoning and Experience.

The laſt and moſt conſiderable of his Works appeared in 1691: 'Tis his Polyalthes, or Theſaurus Medicinæ Practicæ, &c. in three Volumes, Folio. 'Tis a judicious Collection of all that has been written upon the Practice of Phyſick: And to proceed in the better Method, he makes John Johnſon's Practice his Text: To this, by way of Commentary, he draws off the Spirit of Ancient and Modern Phyſicians, reports the beſt of what they have written, with reſpect to the Cauſes, Symptoms and Cure of Diſeaſes. To this he has ſubjoined the beſt Chymical and Galenical Remedies, and enriched the whole with Notes of his own, to enlarge the Text where 'twas too ſhort, to explain the obſcure Paſſages, to ſupply what was deficient, and correct the Authors who had miſſed their Way. Theſe Works contain a plain and methodical Abridgment of the beſt of what was written to the Author's Time upon the Practice of Phyſick: And one may in ſome meaſure call them a complete Library for the Faculty. For ſince the publiſhing theſe Books, all the Authors from whence they were extracted, are ſunk in their Credit, and not much enquired for. The Reader who deſires to be farther informed, may conſult the Acta Lipſiaca, and the Journal des Sçavans of Paris and Holland. M. Bonet died of a Dropſy in March 1689, being ſixty nine Years of Age.

BONFRERIUS, (James) has written very ſerviceable Prolegomena upon the Scripture, and prefix'd them to his Pentateuch. He likewiſe publiſhed an Onomaſticon of the Places and Towns in the Bible, written by Euſebius, and tranſlated by S. Jerom; to which this Father has added learned Notes, which has made it a very ſerviceable Performance, for letting the Reader into the Geography of the Scripture. His Commentary upon the Pentateuch was printed at Antwerp in 1625, and his Onomaſticon with his Commentaries upon Joſhua, Judges, and Ruth, at Paris in 1631. He died at Tournay A.D. 1643, ſeventy Years old.

* BONNER, (Edmund) Biſhop of London. For a ſupplemental Account, to Morery Vol. I. concerning this Prelate. See Collier's Church-Hiſtory, Vol. II.

* BONZI, Pagan Prieſts of Japan. There was one Combadaxi of this Fraternity, now much admired by the Japoneſe. It ſeems, he taught them Letters and Learning about eight hundred Years ſince. This Bonzi, when very old, built a magnificent Temple, and pretending himſelf weary of the World, gave out he would retire to a Vault there, where he intended to ſtay ten thouſand Millions of Years: That at the Expiration of this Term, he told them upon the Faith of a Prophet, that an incomparable Doctor would appear in China, and that himſelf would return to the World again at that time. This viſionary Story is an Article of Faith with the Japoneſe, who firmly believe Combadaxi is ſtill living, and that he only ſleeps, or lives quiet, till the Period comes up: Therefore, upon the Anniverſary of his Retirement into this Cavern, they have a Feſtival for him, and invocate him in their Devotions. * Gaſper Viſelius, Lib. 3. Epiſt. Japon. Petr. Matheus, Voſſius, de Idololat. Lib. 1. cap. 25.

BONZI, (Peter de) Cardinal, Arch-biſhop of Narbonne, Great Almoner to the Queen of France, and Commander of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, was born at Florence in 1631: His Father was Francis, Comte de Bonzi, a Senator, and his Mother was Chriſtina Riani. Cardinal Mazarine had a great Eſteem for him, and made him his Confident. He treated with the French King for concluding the Marriage between Mademoiſelle d' Orleance with the Prince of Tuſcany, and his Majeſty made him his Ambaſſador Extraordinary at the Great Duke's Court, for conveying this Princeſs to Florence: He was now Biſhop of Beziers. His next Employment was an Embaſſy to Venice: His Inſtructions were to procure a Paſſage through the Territories of this Republick for the King's Troops, deſigned for Hungary. This was a nice Negotiation, but the Biſhop of Bezier's Conduct got over the Difficulty, and brought the Senate to Conſent. And now his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty gave him a Publick Character to the Court of Poland; 'twas to diſſuade King Caſimir from reſigning the Crown. At his coming off this Embaſſy, he was made a Cardinal: And now the King ſent him again to Poland to appear at the Election of a new King. The Conteſt was very ſtrong for a Polander diſenclined to the Intereſt of France; but the Cardinal by his Vigilance and Capacity, broke the diſaffected Party, and got Michael Wiſnoviſchi elected, a Nobleman, accceptable both to Poland and France. This Cardinal appeared at the Election of three Popes, Innocent XI. Alexander VIII. and Innocent XII. and always maintained himſelf in the Eſteem of the King and Conclave. He contributed very liberally to the Building of the Seminary at Narbonne, which is one of the fineſt in all France: He likewiſe founded a little Seminary for the poor Eccleſiaſticks in his Dioceſe, and ſet up a very magnificent Altar in his Cathedral: He died at Montpelier in July 1703, ſeventy three Years old. He had been Preſident of the States General of the Province for thirty Years. His Death was generally regretted, not excepting the New Convents, as the French Supplementer calls them. * Memoires du Tems.

BOOT, or Booth, (Richard) a Phyſician. He wrote a Natural Hiſtory of the Kingdom of Ireland: The Engliſh Original is tranſlated into French. The Book affords a great many curious Remarks upon the Country, with reference to Metals, Minerals, and Plants, with a ſhort Diſſertation upon the Havens, which he reports to be naturally the beſt in Europe. He likewiſe deſcribes the Temper and Quality of the Natives; relates them good-natured, firm to the Religion once received, brave in the Field, and not heavy for Arts and Sciences; but that the publick Commotions which have diſturbed Great Britain for more than a Century check'd theſe good Qualities, and hinder'd them from ſhining out. He gives ſeveral Inſtances for Proof of this Remark; and particularly mentions the famous Mr. Boyle, Preſident of the Royal Society, and James Uſher, Archbiſhop of Armach. Cardinal Richelieu reckon'd this Prelate amongſt the Learned of the firſt Claſs: His Eminence uſed to ſay, He did not know above three Men that were thorough Scholars, and they were, Hugo Grotius in Holland, Jerom Bignon or Bignonius in France, and James Uſher in Ireland. Boot or Booth appeared very judicious in his Relations, and there are few Undertakings of this kind better performed.

BOSSU, (James le) in Latin Boſſulus, Doctor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Paris, Monk of S. Dennis, and one of the moſt flaming League-Preachers, both before and after the Death of Henry III. He threw his Rebellion plentifully about the Pulpit at Nantes, and not contented to declaim without Temper or Manners againſt Henry III. and Henry IV. he publiſhed a Dialogue at Nantes between a Catholick and a Politick, where he aſſerts Sedition and Revolt, and carries it to the moſt outragious Extremities. Firſt he maintains, that Henry III. was worſe, and more an Atheiſt than Judas. 2*ly*, That James Clement acted by Divine Inſpiration when he ſtabbed that Prince. 3*ly*, That no body ought to pray for the Repoſe of his Soul. 4*ly*, That his Tyranny being ſo notorious, 'twas lawful for any one to kill him. He railed furiouſly againſt the Parliament of Paris, then at Tours, and againſt all the Roman Catholicks who continued Loyal to Henry IV. He held, that the Catholicks holding Correſpondence with Hereticks, incurred Excommunication ipſo facto: That Hereſy was worſe than Paganiſm, and that Paganiſm being downright Atheiſm, Hereſy ought to be called Atheiſm: Thus he makes it a Sin of the deepeſt Guilt, that 'twas poſſible for the worſt Men to commit; and that all Hereticks ought to be avoided like the Plague. This Father, notwithſtanding his treaſonable Extravagance, had ſomething of Learning in him, for he was Divinity-Lecturer to the Benedictins, and one of the Congregation de Auxiliis under Pope Paul V. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

BOSSU, (Renatus le) a Canon-Regular of S. Auguſtins, publiſhed a Tract in ſix Books upon Heroick Poetry, in 1675. 'Tis one of the moſt conſiderable Performances upon this Subject. His Diſpoſition and Method is natural and clear: He examines his Matter with Exactneſs, and diſcourſes with great Judgment upon every thing relating to an Epick Poem. He did not engage, as he declares, in this Undertaking, to form a Poet upon the modern Plan, but only to lay down ſome ſolid Principles for explaining Virgil's Æneis. To ſucceed in this Attempt, he pretends, a Man is not to go upon any late Models, or regard any thing delivered upon this Subject by Modern Authors. This being his Sentiment, he concerns himſelf only to examine Homer's Conduct, and the Rules laid down by Ariſtotle and Horace. Theſe Authors he interprets one by another, and Virgil, by all three of them, as having the ſame Genius, and the ſame Idea of Heroick Poetry with the reſt. There has been lately a new Edition of Boſſu at the Hague, with his Life at the Head of it; 'tis reckoned much the beſt. * Ren. le Boſſu, cap. 1. du Livre 1. du Poëme Epiq. Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes, de l'Art Poëtique, Tom. 5.

BOSSUET, (James Benignus) Biſhop of Meaux, was born at Dijon, Septemb. 1627. He was deſcended from a good Family, which had borne ſome of the beſt Offices in the Parliament. This Prelate, when young, apply'd himſelf cloſely to the Study of the Scripture and Eccleſiaſtical Learning. He was employ'd to inſtruct the Proteſtants, whoſe good Opinion he gained by his Modeſty and obliging Behaviour. He had no ordinary Talent for the Pulpit. The Queen-Mother, Ann of Auſtria, was ſo much ſatisfied with his Diſcourſes, that ſhe recommended him to the King in 1665. He was Inſtrumental in bringing Mareſchal Turenne over to the Roman Catholick Communion in 1669. He was made Biſhop of Condom, and took the Oath of Allegiance required from that Character: At the ſame Time he was made Preceptor to the Dauphin. To this young Prince he dedicated his Diſcourſes upon Univerſal Hiſtory, printed in 1681. This Book is not only an Introduction to Hiſtory; but likewiſe a Collection of the Evidence for the Chriſtian Religion, with Remarks of the Church's Continuance through ſo many Empires. Being obliged to attend the Dauphin upon the ſcore of his Employment, he reſigned the Biſhoprick of Condom, not thinking it lawful to keep that Biſhoprick without Reſidence. When the Dauphin's Education was finiſhed, and the Biſhop at Liberty, the King nominated him to the See of Meaux in 1681; and in 1697 he was made Privy Counſellor, and the next Year Chief Almoner to the Ducheſs of Burgundy.

The Controverſial Pieces of M. Boſſuet ſerved his Reputation more than his Sermons. He entred the Liſts againſt the French Proteſtants, and his firſt Eſſay was entituled A Refutation of the Catechiſm of Paul Ferri, Miniſter of the P. R. R. at Metz.: This Performance, it ſeems, ſhook the Proteſtant Intereſt in that Town, and gained a great many to the Communion of the Church of Rome. This Prelate ſpent the reſt of his Time in Polemical Diſcourſes; where it muſt be ſaid he generally makes the moſt of his Cauſe, and manages with great Decency and Temper. To this Purpoſe, in 1671, he publiſhed his Expoſition of the Doctrine of the Catholick Church, &c. written ſome Years before for Mareſchal Turenne's Inſtruction. This Book had not only the Approbation of the French Biſhops, but of the Cardinals, and Pope Innocent XI. The General Aſſembly of the Clergy of France approved the Biſhop of Condom's Expoſition, and recommended it for gaining the Proteſtants. It ſeems it work'd ſo much upon the Proteſtant Party, that almoſt all Perſons of Diſtinction of that Perſuaſion deſired to be reconciled by M. Boſſuet.

One of the moſt conſiderable Inſtances of this kind was Mademoiſelle de Duras, Niece to Mareſchal de Turenne: The Expoſition of the Doctrine, &c. having made an Impreſſion upon this Lady, ſhe deſired, to finiſh her Conviction, that the Author would have a Conference at her Houſe with M. Claude, Miniſter of Charenton: He complied readily with the Motion. This Conference was held in March 1678: They argued upon the Authority of the Church, propoſed by this Lady, who was gained by M. de Meaux. Afterwards the Biſhop, at her Requeſt, printed the Diſpute, and as the French Supplementer reports, diſentangled the Truth from the Perplexities Claude had thrown upon it; and that the Biſhop ſtop'd his Mouth, by declaring if he would engage in the Controverſy again, he would force him to own the Neceſſity of the Church's Authority, or make him relapſe into inextricable Difficulties.

To confirm the new Roman Catholicks in the Change they had made, he publiſhed his Tract of Communion in both kinds, A. D. 1682. A Diſcourſe upon this Head was in Anſwer to thoſe who complained themſelves deprived of the Sacramental-Cup. His Paſtoral Letter to the New Roman Catholicks, appeared in 1686. The great Numbers of Proteſtants which gave up their Perſuaſion at the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, put M. de Meaux upon giving a finiſhing Stroke, as he believed, and occaſioned his printing his Hiſtory of the Diſagreement of the Proteſtant Churches. This Book, ſays the French Supplementer, ſilenced even the obſtinate: Jurieu, Burnet, Baſnage, appeared againſt this Book, and ſome others of M. de Meaux's; but as this Supplementer will have it, all to no purpoſe. This Biſhop wrote a Defence of his Hiſtory of the Diſagreements, &c. He likewiſe publiſhed an Explication of the Apocalyps, in Anſwer to Jurieu's Viſionary Diſcourſe upon the pretended Accompliſhment of the Prophecies. He wrote ſix Advertiſements to the Proteſtants, againſt Jurieu's Paſtoral Letters, diſperſed in France: And here he endeavours to prove this Miniſter countenances Socinianiſm, and gives a Blow to Chriſtianity itſelf. M. de Meaux Catechiſm, his Explanation of the Maſs, his Prieres Eccleſiaſtiques, and his Letter touching the Adoration of the Croſs, had a conſiderable Effect upon thoſe called the New Converts.

A Book pretending to explain the Maxims of the Saints, in reference to the Inward or Spiritual Life, gave M. de Meaux's Pen more Employment. He wrote ſeveral Pieces and Anſwers upon this Subject; and at laſt brought his Adverſary to reſign to the Pope's Deciſion. Theſe Diſcourſes were levelled againſt Quietiſm, and make ſeveral Volumes.

The Aſſemblies of the Clergy in 1682, and in 1700, made uſe of his Pen for drawing up ſome of their moſt material Reſolutions, with relation to the Moral Parts of Chriſtianity. His Funeral Orations upon the Death of the Queen-Mother of France, in 1667; of the Queen of England, in 1669; of Madam the Ducheſs of Orleans, in 1670; of the French Queen, in 1683; of the Princeſs Palatin latine, in 1685; of the Chancellor le Tellier, in 1686; and of the Prince of Condé, in 1687; were much admired. Notwithſtanding his Time was taken up with Controverſy and Publick Buſineſs, M. de Meaux did not forget the taking Care of his Dioceſe. He made frequent Viſitations, preached in his Cathedral, and publiſhed Synodal Statutes, and other Conſtitutions for Diſcipline. He was indefatigable in his Study, and at the latter End of his Time wrote againſt Richard Simon's Verſion of the New Teſtament. In his two Tomes of Inſtructions upon this Tranſlation, he writes with the ſame Spirit, Smartneſs and Learning, which appears in the reſt of his Works. He died at Paris in April 1704, ſeventy ſix Years of Age * Memoires Hiſtoriques.

BOST, or Buſt, a Town in the Province of Segeſtan or Siſtan in Perſia, ſtanding upon a River which falls into the Indus: This Town is about fourteen Days Journey of a Caravan from Gaznah. * D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Orientale.

BOUCHER, (John) a Pariſian, Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Parſon of S. Bennet's at Paris, in the time of the League was a Trumpet of Sedition, and one of the moſt flaming Incendiaries amongſt the Rebels: 'Twas he that gave Order to ring the Tocſin in his Church, September 2, 1587, which raiſed the Mob, and occaſioned ſome Barbarities, which drew a Blemiſh upon the Reign of Henry III. Succeſs in this Diſorder increaſed his Confidence, and emboldened him to preach ſcandalouſly the next day, againſt the King and his Council. Hiſtorians obſerve, that the languid Adminiſtration of this Prince encouraged the Rebels: Boucher proſtituted his Pen, as well as his Lungs, to the Service of the Revolt: And amongſt other venomous things, publiſhed a Pamphlet to juſtify the Depoſition of Henry III. This, beſides the Treaſon of the Matter, is an infamous Satyr in the Manner. There's pretty ſtrong Preſumptions that he was one of James Clement's Accomplices. Upon the Death of this Prince, Boucher grew bolder, if 'twas poſſible; for Henry IV. being a Huguenot, he had a better Colour, as ſome pretended, to preach Reſiſtance againſt him. When Henry IV. declared himſelf a Roman Catholick, this Pretence was out of Doors: However, Boucher held to his firſt Sentiment, debauched the Pulpit with Treaſon, and publiſhed nine Sermons, dedicated to the Cardinal Placencia; in which he affirms the Abjuration of the Bearnois was but a Feint, and that his Abſolution was a mere Nullity. However, in ſpight of his Sermons and Libels, the Pariſians recognized Henry IV. and the next day after this City ſubmitted, his Sermons were publickly burnt. Boucher, notwithſtanding, held firm to the Rebellion, kept with the Leaguers, and went off into the Low Countries with the Spaniſh Garriſon which the League had brought into Paris. This happened in the Year 1594. He ſettled at Tournay, and died Dean of that Chapter fifty Years after; but, as they ſay, quite altered in his Humour, and grew as warm a Frenchman in Flanders, as he had been a furious Spaniard in France. Upon the News that he was coming to Rome, Cardinal Oſſat intreated the Pope to impriſon him, and repreſented his Mutiny and Miſbehaviour in ſtrong Language. Nothing can be more wretched than the Complaint he made to the Duke of Maine, upon the Occaſion of the Execution of thoſe treaſonable Malefactors that had hanged Preſident Briſſon, a Loyal Gentleman. Boucher was ſo ſcandalous as to call theſe Traytors Martyrs for Jeſus Chriſt. * Thuanus, Hiſt. Lib 87. 95. 107. Maimbourg, Hiſtory of the League. Mezeray, Abregé Chronolog. Cardinal Oſſat's Letters.

BOUETTE, de Blemur, (Jacoba) born in 1618, and deſcended from a noble Family: She was bred a Nun, and made Prioreſs of the Royal Abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen. Afterwards the Ducheſs of Mecklenburg deſir'd her Aunt the Abbeſs, that ſhe might be remov'd to Chatillon, where this Lady had founded a Houſe for Benedictine Nuns. Bouette reſign'd to the Motion; and notwithſtanding ſhe had been a Prioreſs before, was ſo humble as to ſink to a Novice at ſixty Years old. In this Station ſhe publiſh'd ſeveral Tracts, viz. The Greatneſs of the Bleſſed Virgin, The Life of Father Fourier de Metincourt, The Exerciſes of Death, and the Lives of the Saints, in two great Volumes. * Journal des Sçavans, Tom. 24. pag 445.

BOUG, or Bugg, a River in Poland: It riſes in the Palatinate of Leopold, or Lemburg, and falls into the Viſtula below the Town of Novodvour: The Stream is blackiſh like the Torrent of the Alps. There is another River in the Ukraine, called Bouk; but pronounc'd the ſame way with the other. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

BOUHOURS, (Dominick) a Jeſuite, born at Paris in the Seventeenth Century, and one of the greateſt Maſters of the French Language. Having finiſh'd his Education in the Univerſity, he was Tutor to two young Princes of the Houſe of Longueville. The Duke of Longueville, their Father, choſe to die in his Arms; and the Relation of his pious Behaviour at his Death was the firſt thing Bouhours publiſh'd; his next was Les Entretiens d'Ariſte & d'Eugene. This Performance had a Luſtre at the firſt View; but M. Daucourt, a Member of the French Academy, ran a Critick upon it, in a Diſcourſe, entituled, Sentimens de Cleanthe ſur les Entretiens d'Ariſte: This was look'd upon as a Maſter-Piece, both for Judgment and Politeneſs. Theſe Animadmerſions, though they might diſcover ſome Miſtakes in Bouhours, made his Book more enquir'd after. However, the Entretiens d'Ariſte were ſeldom read without the Sentimens de Cleanthe. And Mr. Colbert, who was entertain'd with the firſt, was perfectly charm'd with the latter. This Miniſter of State made Father Bouhours Tutor to his Son the Marquis de Seignelay. Bouhours printed ſeveral other Tracts; the chief of which are, Remarques & ſes Doutes ſur la Langue Françoiſe; Dialogues ſur la Maniere de bien penſer dans les Ouvrages d'Eſprit; Hiſtoire du Grand-Maître d'Aubuſſon: La Vie de Saint Ignace; la vie de Saint François Xavier; Celle de Madame de Bellefonds: To which may be added, his Tranſlation of ſeveral Devotional Books, and of the New Teſtament. His Doubts upon the French Language, are one of his beſt Performances. Bouhours had ſome Diſputes with ſeveral Authors, and amongſt the reſt with the learned Menagius: He died at Paris in 1702, in the 75th Year of his Age. * Baillet Jugemens des Scavans. ſur les Grammairiens. Memoires de Trevoux Août 1702.

BOULLIAUD, (Iſhmael) born at Loudun in 1605: His Parents being French Proteſtants, bred him in their own Religion, which he quitted for the Roman Catholick at twenty one Years of Age; and four Years after he took Prieſt's Orders. He ſtudied the Belles Lettres at Loudun, Philoſophy at Paris, and the Law at Poictiers. Afterwards he ſtudied Mathematicks, Divinity, and Hiſtory, with great Application: And for Evidence of his Proficiency, he publiſh'd a Tract in Octavo, De Natura Lucis, M. de la Chambre, & M. Petit, Two Phyſicians, had battled each other in Print ſeveral times upon this Subject, which occaſion'd M. Boulliaud's ſaying, he was ſurpriz'd they were ſo hardy to diſcourſe about Light, without underſtanding Opticks. The next Year, which was 1669, he publiſh'd a Book at Amſterdam in Quarto, entituled, Philolaüs, or de Vero Syſtemate Mundi; and to ſhew himſelf more than only a Maſter in Mathematicks, he wrote a Diſſertation upon S. Benignus, printed by Gramoiſi: 'Tis a Critick upon the Chronicon of S. Benignus of Dijon, inſerted in the firſt Tome of Dacherius's Spicilegium. Here he diſcovers the Contradictions in the Author of this Chronicon, and that all that is related there concerning S. Benignus, is either falſe or uncertain. In 1664 Boulliaud tranſlated Theo Smyrnenſis, a Platonick Philoſopher, into Latin, and wrote Notes upon the Author. The next Year he publiſh'd a Folio, called Aſtrologia Philolaica, Opus novum, in quo Motus Planetarum per novam & veram Hypotheſin demonſtrantur, cum Tabulis facillimis. In 1669, he wrote a Tract in Defence of the Portugueze Churches: The Occaſion was this; After the Kingdom had thrown off the Spaniſh Yoke, many of the Sees were vacant, becauſe the Pope refuſed granting his Bulls to King John IV.'s Nomination. In this Book, Boulliaud endeavours to prove that the Popes, the Kings of Spain and Portugal's reſpective Privileges in promoting Biſhops are founded upon the expreſs or tacit Conſent of the Clergy and People. Upon the Suppoſal that this Propoſition is prov'd, he proceeds thus: After King John IV. had for eight Years together apply'd to Pope Urban VIII. and Pope Innocent X. to grant their Bulls to the Biſhops nominated by him; after he had addreſs'd their Holineſſes thus long to no purpoſe, he might fairly get them conſecrated by the Metropolitans. And as the Pope's have formerly claim'd a Right to fill the vacant Sees upon the ſcore of the Negligence of thoſe Princes who fail'd in their Nomination; by Parity of Reaſon, the ſame Negligence of the Popes will give his Portugueze Majeſty a Right to make a Proviſion. But here he throws in a Reſerve of Reſpect for his Holineſs; intimating withal, that the Biſhops conſecrated by their Metropolitans would be oblig'd to apply to the Pope for his Confirmation, and to get his Bulls. In 1651, Boulliaud wrote a Tract in the Name of John IV. King of Portugal, to deſire the French Clergy's Advice upon the Juncture, and that they would uſe their Intereſt for his Majeſty at the Court of Rome. And here the Author laments the miſerable Condition of the Portugueze Churches, and complains in very ſtrong Language of the Pope's Stiffneſs, and his deſerting the Portugueze when they had moſt Need of him, in favour of the ambitious Pretenſes of the King of Spain, who made uſe of all politick and violent Expedients to repeat his Uſurpation of a Crown which had been fairly taken from him. Farther, he argues from Precedents, that when Princes happen to have Rival Claims upon Towns or Provinces, it was not cuſtomary for the Holy See to examine the Title, but to own thoſe for Sovereigns who were in Poſſeſſion. Theſe Reaſons, how plauſible ſoever ſome of them might be in the Opinion of the Learned, made no Impreſſion upon the Spaniſh Court: And, which was a particular Misfortune upon Boulliaud, his Performance was ill receiv'd by thoſe he endeavour'd to defend, and his Sentiments condemn'd by the Inquiſition. At the end of theſe two Pieces, printed at Strasburg in 1656, a Diſſertation was added, de Populis Fundis, occaſion'd by a Remark of Rigaltius, Counſellor, or Member of the Parliament of Metz. This Diſſertation argues upon the Queſtion of the old Roman Law, mention'd by Tully in his Oration pro Cornelio Balbo. According to this celebrated Orator, to gain the Privilege of Populus Fundus, a Nation ought to diſclaim their own Laws, and ſubmitt to thoſe of the Romans. This Renunciation was to be made by the whole Community; but when a ſingle Perſon was to be made Civis Romanus, or naturaliz'd, he was oblig'd to no more than to renounce all Relation to the Town where he lived, and get himſelf regiſtred among the Burghers of Rome. Boulliaud tranſlated Ducas's Greek Hiſtory into Latin, with Notes upon it. By the way, this Hiſtorian wrote the Occurrences which happen'd in the Reigns of John Manuel, of John and Conſtantine Palæologus, till the taking of Conſtantinople, and the Ruin of the Greek Empire. In 1657, Boulliaud printed a Quarto at Paris, de Lineis Spiralibus. After having read Archimedes upon this Subject, and not being aſſur'd he had reach'd the Thought of this great Mathematician, he made new Demonſtrations both for his own Satisfaction and for the Relief of the Reader, who might believe Archimedes went too much about, and was ſomewhat obſcure in his Management. In 1663, he publiſh'd Ptolomy's Greek Tract, with a Latin Verſion in Quarto, de Judicandi Facultate, & Animæ Principatu. Soon after he publiſh'd a Folio, entituled, Iſmaelis Bullialdi Opus novum ad Arithmeticam infinitorum, Libris ſex comprehenſum, in quo plura, à nullis hactenus edita, demonſtrantur.

ſame

He wrote likewiſe another Tract upon the Jewiſh Paſſover; and here it may not be improper to inform the Reader ſomewhat farther upon this Matter: In the Years 1661 and 1662, M. Toinard had made it his Buſineſs to diſentangle the laſt Paſſover mention'd in the Goſpels; and by examining the Meaning of Making ready the Paſſover, he concluded our Bleſſed Saviour did not keep this Feſtival. He likewiſe was of Opinion, that our Saviour dying upon Friday in the thirty third Year of the Incarnation, and that the Paſchal Moon of this Year not being in Conjunction with the Sun till Thurſday Afternoon, falling upon the 19th of March, it could not be ſeen in Judea upon the Evening of this Day. Its firſt Appearance was next day, which was Friday: From whence Toinard concludes, that ſince an Account of the New Moon's Appearing was to be brought to Jeruſalem to the Court called Beth-Din, or the Houſe of Judgment, by thoſe that had ſeen it in the Country, that this Account could not be given ſooner than Saturday Morning following, which was the 21ſt of March. From hence his next Inference is, that the firſt Day of the Jew's firſt Month called Niſan began in this 33d Year, no ſooner than Sun-ſetting on Friday, being the 20th of March; and by conſequence, that Friday the 3d of April, on which our Bleſſed Saviour died, was the 14th of Niſan, and not the 15th, which was appointed by the Moſaick Law to keep the Paſſover. Toinard made this Diſcovery by peruſing the Talmud, and ſeveral Rabbinical Writings, particularly a Book called Codex Peſachim, and another called Roſchaſchana, where the Ceremonies of the Paſſover are mentioned at large, and likewiſe the Form of the Jews Year while the Temple of Jeruſalem was ſtanding. Having acquainted a great many of his Friends with his Diſquiſition, they approved his Syſtem which he had ſet up, againſt the Opinion of the Moſaick Paſſover being kept by our Bleſſed Saviour at the Inſtitution of the Holy Euchariſt. M. Toinard, to confirm him farther in his Sentiment, wrote to Boulliaud, who return'd him Anſwer, that the New Moon of the 19th of March, in the 33d Year of the Incarnation, could not be perceiv'd in Judea in the Evening of this Day; and therefore he thought the Opinion of thoſe Writers probable, who reckon'd the Death of our Bleſſed Saviour to the 3d of April; adding withal, that this Computation was not altogether unembarraſs'd. The Difficulty, according to him, was this, that this Computation muſt ſuppoſe that our Bleſſed Saviour celebrated the Moſaick Paſſover a day before the Jews kept theirs. Now, ſays Boulliaud, 'tis not very eaſy to account for this Difference of Time, unleſs we ſuppoſe the Jews failed in their Kalendar. Toinard came afterwards to Paris, and had ſeveral Conferences upon this Queſtion with Boulliaud; and here his Reaſons that our Saviour did not keep the Jewiſh Paſſover the Evening before his Death, were ſo convincing to Boulliaud, that he reſolved not to print his Latin Tract he had made upon the Paſſover. The learned Dr. Hammond's Opinion upon this Subject is as follows: He obſerves upon the Words, where the Diſciples aſk our Bleſſed Saviour, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou eat the Paſſover? (Mark xiv. v. 12.) Upon theſe Words he obſerves, that 'twas cuſtomary among the Jews to make Preparation for the Paſſover the Night and Morning before they kept it; that is, they cleaned the Houſe, and removed all Leavened Bread; then they laid the Cloth, dreſs'd the Meat; but did not eat the Paſſover till the Evening, which began the day following: But our Saviour Chriſt being to be ſacrific'd himſelf before the next Evening, reſolv'd to anticipate the Time, and keep it ſooner. This, ſays the Learned Grotius, is the Meaning of, My time is at hand: (Matt. xxvi. v. 18.) And thus we are to underſtand ποιῶ, I keep the Paſſover; that is, in regard my Death is ſo nearly approaching, I will keep it preſently; and thus the Learned Annotator interprets S. Luke, where our Saviour ſays, I have earneſtly deſir'd to eat this Paſſover with you before I ſuffer: (Luk. xxii. v. 15.) But then, as the Doctor continues, the Paſchal Lamb was not eaten at this Paſſover. This he proves, by obſerving the Lamb was to be killed by the Levites, and ſacrific'd in the Temple, (2 Chron. xxv. v. 6. Deut. xvi. 2, 6.) and that not till the fourteenth Day at Even; that is, not till the Beginning of the fifteenth Day. And that the Jews practis'd accordingly, appears by the Account the Jewiſh Prieſts gave in to Ceſtius the Roman Governor, who, by receiving the Number of the Lambs ſacrific'd at the Paſſover, calculated the Number of the Jews in Jeruſalem at that Feſtival. To fortify this Reaſoning, the learned Hammond obſerves, that our Bleſſed Saviour does not make uſe of the Word θύω in any of the Goſpels, but only I keep ποιῶ, I keep, or celebrate; and φάγω, I eat it. But then there was another Paſſover which was not ſacrific'd, but eaten as a Memorial of their Servitude in Egypt, and Deliverance from thence: And as an Emblem of this, there was nothing but Unleavened Bread, and bitter Herbs requir'd. The Doctor takes Notice farther, that in S. John xiii. v. 1. the time mentioned for the Supper is ſaid to be before the Feaſt of the Paſſover: Upon which 'tis added, that Jeſus knew that his Hour was come, that he ſhould paſs out of the World to the Father; that is, that he who was our Paſſover ſhould be ſacrific'd; intimating, that Part of the Paſchal Solemnity was now kept, becauſe he knew he ſhould not live long enough to eat the Lamb with them. This Commemorative Paſſover, thoſe that could not come up to Jeruſalem to ſacrifice, uſed to obſerve at home: And thus our Bleſſed Saviour's Death drawing ſo near, as to prevent the more ſolemn Celebration by killing and ſacrificing the Lamb, he was pleas'd to commemorate the Feſtival in this manner the Night before the Lamb was appointed to be eaten.

Feſtival

To return to M. Boulliaud, who, beſides his learned Productions in Print, kept a Correſpondence with Perſons diſtinguiſh'd for Learning; amongſt theſe we may reckon Grotius, Blondell, Launoy, Menagius, Toinard, Bigotius, &c. He likewiſe travell'd into Italy, Germany, Poland, and the Levant. The Queen Louiſa Maria de Gonzaga, invited him to her Court, where he was honourably receiv'd, and conſiderably preſented. John Caſimir, King of Poland, made him his Agent in the United Provinces during the War between Sweden and Poland. This Publick Character ſhews he was no mere Scholar, but underſtood Buſineſs as well as Books. He died in the Abbey of S. Victors at Paris, November 1694. * Journal des Sçavans, Tome 23. pag. 126. Hammond Annot. upon Mark, 14. c.

BOUK, or Bog, a River in Poland, called Hypanis by Herodotus, Pliny, and other ancient Authors: It riſes in Podolia, and divides that Province from Volhinia; and after having paſſed by Chmielnick, Braclaw, and ſome other Towns, and cut the Palatinate of Braclaw in two, falls into the Nieper or Boryſthenes, and then into the Black Sea. Its Courſe is about two hundred Miles from Eaſt to Weſt. * Baudrand.

*BOULONOIS, (Le) called Bolognese by the Italians, a Province of Lombardy within S. Peter's Patrimony: 'Twas formerly Part of Romagnia, and has its Name from Bologna the Capital. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Duchy of Ferrara, on the Eaſt by Romagnia, on the Weſt by the Duchy of Modena, and on the South by Tuſcany; from which 'tis parted by the Apennine Hills. The Country is very pleaſant, rich in its Product, and well water'd on all ſides: However, there is never a conſiderable Town in it but the Capital, which is commonly govern'd by a Cardinal Legate. The Places moſt remarkable in the Boulonois, next the Capital, are Caſtel-Bolognes, Bentivoglio, and the Palace of Poſſi. This Country was granted to the Church by King Pepin and his Son Charlemagne. * Sanſon, Baudrand.

BOUQUIN, (Peter) a Carmelite, took his Degree of Doctor of Divinity at Bourges in 1539: He was Prior of a Convent in this Town, and might have reach'd the top Preferments of his Order, if he had not choſen to have thrown off his Frock, and retire to the Proteſtants in Germany. He went to Baſil in 1541, and after ſome ſtay travell'd on to Wittenburg, where Luther and Melanchthon gave him a friendly Reception: And now intending to go farther into Pomerania, Melanchthon prevail'd with him to fix at Strasburg, where, ſince Calvin's going off to Geneva, they wanted ſome body for the Chair. Bouquin read Lectures on the Epiſtle to the Galatians in the College of Strasburg; ſome time after he return'd to France, where having a Brother Doctor in Divinity, and no Enemy to the Proteſtants, he lodged with him at Bourges. Bouquin, perſuaded by his Brother that there was ſome Hopes of Reforming the Gallican Church, read Publick Letters upon the Hebrew Grammar firſt, and afterwards upon the Holy Scriptures. This he undertook without the Conſideration of a Salary; but after he had waited upon Marguerite de Valoiſe, and preſented her with a Book of his own, concerning the Neceſſity and Manner of reading the Holy Scriptures, this Princeſs order'd him a Penſion, and, with the Conſent of the Archbiſhop, procur'd him a Pulpit in the great Church of Bourges. This Encouragement and Buſineſs held after the Death of this Lady; for Michel de l'Hopital, Chancellor to another Marguerite de Valoiſe, who had the ſame Sentiments with the firſt, was willing to ſupport Peter Bouquin. But this Protection it ſeems prov'd too weak at laſt; and thus finding himſelf expos'd to Danger, and in no likelihood of being ſerviceable to Religion, he quitted his Employment. However this Reſignation did not ſatisfy his Enemies, nor cover him from Proſecution. He was forc'd to plead his Cauſe before the Parliament of Paris, and afterwards before the Archbiſhop of Bourges, and all this not without Danger of loſing his Life: And thus finding himſelf unſafe in France, he return'd to Strasburg, and preach'd in the French Church in 1557. The Elector Palatine, Otho Henry, invited him to Heidelberg, and made him Divinity-Profeſſor; and here the Diſputes about Ubiquity and the Corporal Preſence, gave him a great deal of Fatigue. In 1564, he aſſiſted at the Conference at Malbrun, where he endeavour'd to moderate the Heat of each Party; but when Peoples Paſſions are up, and their Affections ſtrongly engag'd, Reconciling Propoſals ſignify little. Having reſign'd his Chair in 1577, he was call'd to Lauſane, where he read Divinity-Lectures till his Death, which happen'd in the Year 1582. His Works are theſe, Defenſio ad Calumnias Doctoris cujuſdam Avii in Evangelii Profeſſores, 1588, in 4to. Examen Libri quem D. Telemannus Heſhuſius inſcripſit de Præſentia Corporis in Cœna Domini. Theſes de Cœna Domini. Exegeſis Divinæ Communicationis, 1561. Aſſertio Veteris & veri Chriſtianiſmi adverſus novum & fictum Jeſuitiſmum, 1579, in 8vo. Brevis Notatio præcipuarum cauſarum Diuturnitatis Controverſiæ de Cœna Domini, 1576. Canones quibus defenditur Sidvoia in verbis Chriſti, Hoc eſt Corpus meum, & Controverſiæ de Cœna Domini atque ſimilium dijudicanda certiſſima ratio demonſtratur: Item, aſſertio ritus frangendi & in manus ſumendi Panis Euchariſtici, 1563. Petri Boquini juſta Defenſio adverſus injuſtam vim Heſhuſii & Villagagnonis de judicio Philippi Melanchthonis ad Electorem Palatinum miſſo de Cœna Domini, 1562. * Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

*BOURBONOIS: For Charlotte Elizabeth, Daughter to Charles Lewis, Elector Palatine, in Morery Vol. I. read Charlotte Elizabeth of Bavaria, Daughter to Charles Lewis, Elector Palatine.

BOURBON, (Nicolas) a Greek and Latin Poet, and without queſtion one of the beſt Latin Poets ever bred in France. He has a noble Manner in all the Productions of his Pen, though of ſeveral Kinds. His Elevations are natural and true Sublime; his Fancy ſparkles almoſt in every Sentence, and his Style is proportion'd to his Subject: He may fairly be preferr'd to all the modern Poets. No body judg'd better for Diction and Character. He had one Quality not much to be admir'd, for 'twas his way to commend an Author laviſhly enough before his Face, and cenſure him behind his Back. However, he had the Diſcretion not to criticize beyond his Skill. His Latin Poems, intermix'd with ſome Greek ones, were printed at Paris in 1630; and though the greateſt Part of this Collection are well written, his Imprecation upon the Parricide of Henry IV. exceeds the reſt. There are ſome Prefaces and Letters in Proſe printed with his Works, which ſeem not to fall ſhort of his Poetry. The two Verſes in Honour of Henry IV. cut upon the Door of the Arſenal at Paris, are Bourbon's: They are theſe;

Ætna hæc Henrico Vulcania tela miniſtrat,
Tela Gigantæos debellatura furores.

Ætna our Monarch with this Thunder arms,
To launch his Vengeance at revolting Heads.

* Sainte Marth. in Elog. Doct. Gall. Lib. 1. Du Perron, in Collectan. Perron, pag. 37. Balſac's Familiar Letters, &c. Letter 1. pag. 140. Menagius. Belſon's Hiſtory of the French Academy, Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans les Poetes Modernes, Tom. 8.

BOURDALOUE, (Lewis) a Jeſuite, and one of the moſt celebrated Preachers in France: He was born at Bourges in 1632, and entred in the Jeſuites Society in 1648. After having receiv'd his Education there, and his Talent lying ſtrongly for the Pulpit, his Superiors order'd him to preach at their Church at S. Lewis at Paris. Here he entertain'd the Audience ſo much to Satisfaction, that the King ſent for him to Court, where he preach'd in Lent and Advent eleven Years. His Majeſty, upon the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, ſent him into Languedoc to preach to thoſe they call'd New Converts. His Preaching at Montpelier had a great Effect in 1686. He ſpent ſome of the laſt Years of his Life for the Benefit of Hoſpitals and Priſons, and, by his pathetick Diſcourſes and engaging Manner, procured large Diſtributions for Charity. He had the Happineſs to be admired by every body, by the Quality, and the common People, by thoſe who had Learning, and thoſe who had none: He gained the Underſtanding, and commanded the Paſſions of all Degrees; and this ſort of Empire over the Audience, he maintained as long as he lived. His Talent was indeed extraordinary: His Manner was both natural and raiſed; his Imagination lively, his Judgment exact, and his Learning ſufficient. His Logick was true, his Reaſoning juſt, and always tended to the Point in view: He took Care to make his Inferences ſervıceable to Practice, and to keep diſengaged from thoſe trifling Speculations and little Caſuiſtry, too common in ſome Religious Houſes; where their Sermons are more ſpent in inſignificant Curioſity, than ſolid Inſtructions drawn from the Holy Scriptures. Being thus uncommonly furniſhed, he was in a Condition to make his Diſcourſes ſtrong and affecting: There was a natural Greatneſs in what he delivered, proportioned to the Capacity and Satisfaction of all the Audience. He entertained the Knowing, without overſhooting the Vulgar: Every body underſtood, and every body admired him. And, which is a farther Commendation, his Converſation was inſtructive as well as his Pulpit. He kept Vertue from Contempt, and made Religion call for Reſpect even from Libertines. He received frequent Confeſſions, and managed this Part of his Character with great Tenderneſs, Diſcretion, and Impartiality. He was never overſet with Ceremony of one ſide, or Stiffneſs on the other. Perſons both of the loweſt, and of the moſt raiſed Condition, found equal Benefit from his Application. His Temper was ſo benign and condeſcending to the firſt, that he encouraged thoſe to come to him, who might otherwiſe have been over-awed by his Reputation: And as for the latter, he behaved with that Decency and Addreſs, that recommended him to Quality, and made them willing to lay open their Conſcience to him. No Conſideration could prevail with him to part with Freedom and Sincerity. He always ſupported his Character, and kept it from growing cheap. Notwithſtanding his publick Appearance for forty Years, 'tis ſaid, that both his publick and private Inſtructions were ſo well guarded, as to be covered againſt Cenſure and Animadverſion; and that in an Age, when little Failings of this kind were commonly magnified. Though he wanted no Capacity for the beſt Poſt in his Society, he refuſed all Preferment of that kind, and reſerved himſelf wholly for the Pulpit, and other Paſtoral Functions. He died in May 1704. Since his Death, his Sermons were printed at Paris, and afterwards at Amſterdam. * Memoires du Temps.

BOURDELIN, (Claude) born at Ville-Franche near Lyons in 1621. His Inclination lay for Phyſick and Chymiſtry, which he practiſed about fifty ſix Years: He was particularly famous not only for his Compoſition of Medicines, but for his Skill in Diſeaſes. He was not for letting Blood excepting in Apoplexies, and he has cured Diſtempers proceeding from Inflammations, that is, Pleuriſies, Defluxions upon the Lungs, and Squinances, &c. without opening a Vein. When the Royal Academy of Sciences was ſet up at Paris by M. Colbert in 1666, Bourdelin was made Chymiſt to this Society, where he and M. du Clas examined the Mineral Waters of France. Afterwards he made a great many Experiments by mixing the Juices of Plants, and the Spirit and Salts of Minerals, with the Blood of the Arteries and Veins, and other Humours of the Body, ſuch as Choler, Gall, and the Lympha. He work'd with great Application and Exactneſs upon the Analyſis or Reſolution of Plants into their firſt Principles, and was very ſerviceable to the Improvement of theſe Reſearches, ſo much laboured by the Academy. He invented Expedients for trying the ſame Analyſis in Oil: The Deſign was to diſentangle the heterogeneous Particles, to range thoſe that were uniform by themſelves, and trace Nature to her firſt Rudiments and uncompounded Condition. In ſhort, he preſented the Academy with near two thouſand Analyſes in all ſorts of Bodies, and either diſcovered or practiſed the greateſt Part of the modern Improvements in Chymiſtry. He died in October 1699, almoſt fourſcore Years old. * De Fontenelle, Hiſtoire de l'Academie Royale des Sciences de 1699. pag. 151, 152.

BOURGEUIL, a Town of France; 'tis in Anjou, near the Loire, three Leagues from Saumur to the Eaſt: Bourgeuil is remarkable for a famous Abbey. * Maty, Dict.

BOURGOMASTER, Chief Magiſtrate of the great Towns in Flanders, Holland, and Germany. The Power and Juriſdiction of Bourgomaſters is not the ſame in all Places, every Town almoſt has its particular Cuſtoms and Regulations. At Amſterdam, there are four Bourgomaſters: Three of this Diſtinction are choſen every Year. Thus one of them continues in Office two Years; but the three laſt choſen are called the Reigning-Bourgomaſters for that Year, and preſide by Turns after the firſt three Months; for ſo long after a new Election the Bourgomaſter of the laſt Year preſides. This Time is given him that the new Bourgomaſters may have Leiſure to grow inſtructed in the Forms and Duties of their Office, and get themſelves acquainted with the Publick Buſineſs of the Town.

The Bourgomaſters are choſen by moſt Voices of all thoſe Perſons in the Senate who have been either Bourgomaſters or Eſchevins; and their Authority reſembles that of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in our Cities. They repreſent the Dignity of the Government, and do the Honour of the City on all Occaſions: They diſpoſe of all Under-Offices that fall in their Time, and iſſue all Moneys out of the common Stock or Treaſure, where what is neceſſary for the Safety, Convenience or Dignity of the City, is referred to their Judgment. They keep the Key of the Bank of Amſterdam, (the common Treaſure of ſo many Nations) which is never opened without one of them being preſent: They likewiſe inſpect and manage all the great Publick Works of the City, as the Ramparts and Stadt-Houſe, &c. As their Salary is but five hundred Guilders a Year, ſo they are obliged to no ſort of Expence more than an ordinary Citizen: To no ſort of Expence, I ſay, either in their Habit, their Attendance, their Table, or their Domeſtick. Upon all Publick Occaſions, they are waited upon by Men in Salary from the Town; and whatever Feaſts they make upon Solemn Days, or the Entertainment of Princes or Foreign Miniſters, the Charge is defray'd out of the common Treaſure; but proportioned by their own Direction. * Temple's Obſervations upon the United Provinces, &c.

BURGUNDY, (The Circle of) in Latin Burgundius Circulus, takes in the Provinces of the Low-Countries and the Franche-Comté: 'Twas thrown under this Diviſion by the Emperor Maximilian I. in the Year 1512. The Deſign was to put his Majeſty in the better Condition to defend his Dominions of the Houſe of Burgundy, by engaging the Aſſiſtance of the Empire. But here we are to obſerve, that the Provinces of this Circle are exempt from their firſt Erection from all Duties and Burdens of the Empire. This Reſerve of Liberty was ſecur'd in the Reign of the Emperor Charles V. in the Dyet at Augsburg, held in 1558. Here, by an Agreement between the Emperor and the Empire, the Members of the Circle of Burgundy are declar'd exempt from all Juriſdiction of the Empire, their reſpective Conſtitutions are guarded with expreſs Proviſo's, and their Provinces pronounc'd free from all Impoſitions of the German Empire, and from the Superiority and Sovereignty of the Emperor himſelf. Thus they are entirely diſcharged from all Homage and Contribution, and only enjoy the Protection of the Empire in the ſame manner with the other States of the Empire; inſomuch that it may be queſtion'd whether this Diviſion may properly be called one of the Circles of the German Empire. And here it muſt be obſerv'd, that when the Circle of Burgundy was erected, the three Provinces of Frieſland, Utrecht, and Overyſſel, were not ranged within it, but reckon'd to the Circle of Weſtphalia; becauſe at that time of day they did not belong to the Princes of the Low Countries. At preſent, the Provinces of this Circle are divided into three Parts: France has the County of Burgundy, or the Franche-Comté, with the Southern Part of the Low Countries; the Emperor is poſſeſs'd of the middle Part of the Low Countries; and the States General are Maſters of the Northern Quarter, which takes in the Seven United Provinces; but none of theſe hold of the Empire by any Tenure. * Chiffletius, &c.

BOURY, or Bovery, a Town belonging to the Biſhoprick of Liege, and part of the Circle of Weſtphalia: It ſtands upon the River Ourte, very near the Meuſe, and about a League from Liege. * Maty, Diction.

BRA, a Town in Piedmont near the Sture and Montferrat, about a League from the Town of Quieras, towards Carmagnole. Bra is ſuppoſed to be the ancient Barderata, a Town of the Ligurians. * Maty. Diction.

BRACCIANO, one of the greateſt Lakes in Italy, in the Patrimony of S. Peter: 'Twas formerly called Sabatinus, or Sabatus Lacus. 'Tis ſaid there are floating Iſlands in it, which appear in different Figures, ſometimes Triangular, ſometimes Circular; but never Square. * Pliny, Lib. 2. cap. 4. Baudrand.

BRACCIOLINI, (Francis) an Italian Poet, who wrote a great many Heroick Poems, Tragedies, Comedies, dies, Paſtoral Farces, Lyrick Poetry, Satyrs, and Burleſque: His Works are too long for particular mention. Amongſt his Heroick Poems, his Raillery upon the Pagan Deities was very well receiv'd, and paſs'd through ſeveral Editions at Florence, Venice, and elſewhere. Here he ridicules the Heathen Religion with ſo much Spirit, and ſo handſome a Grace, that ſcarcely any thing has appear'd more entertaining either upon the Ancient or Modern Theatres. The Poem he made upon Pope Urban VIII.'s Promotion to the See of Rome, pleas'd his Holineſs ſo much, that he gave him the Surname of Bee; from which time he was called Bracciolini dell' Api. But of all his Poetical Compoſitions, there is none more valuable than his Croſs Reconquered: This, in the Opinion of ſome Judges, has given him the Reputation of a Third-Rate Poet, and next to Arioſto and Taſſo.

* BRACHMANS, or Brammins, a Sect of Gymnoſophiſts, or Indian Philoſophers. There are ſtill ſome of theſe Sages in the Indies, who go by the ſame Name, and live after the ſame Manner with the Ancients. The Portugueze call them Brames, the old Name for Indian Prieſts. They live upon Sallads, Pulſe and Fruit; but make nothing that had Life in it their Diet. They ſpend great part of the twenty four Hours in ſinging Hymns to the Deity, and are very frequent in Prayer and Faſting. Moſt of them live like Hermits in Solitude, without Matrimony or Property. They wiſh for nothing ſo heartily as Death, looking upon this Life as a burdenſome Buſineſs, and long for the Soul's taking leave of the Body. This is Porphyry's Deſcription of the old Brammins. Strabo reports ſeveral particular Fancies of the Brammins of his Time. They were very early in the Care of the Children they were to educate: They ſent People ſkilful in Phyſick and Conſtitutions to the Mother as ſoon as they underſtood ſhe was with Child. However, theſe Learned People pretended no other Buſineſs than only giving their Bleſſing to the Mother and the Embryo. As the Children came forward in Age, they removed them to ſeveral Maſters. As for the Brammins, they kept out of Towns, lived in the Woods, and went through a great deal of Auſterity: They lay upon Skins, and eat no Fleſh: Their Diſcourſe was ſpent upon Learning and Inſtruction, and they communicated what they knew to all that had a mind to hear them. But then there was a Condition or two required of the Audience; for no body was allowed to ſpeak, or to ſpit, under the Penalty of being turned out for that day. After they had ſpent ſeven and thirty Years in that Society, they might take their Leave on't, and live more at their Eaſe: They had then the Liberty to eat any Animals, thoſe that work'd for the Benefit of Mankind only excepted: They might likewiſe be Polygamiſts; but then they were not allowed to talk Philoſophy with their Wives: For in caſe the Women happen'd to prove good for nothing, they were afraid they might divulge the Myſteries amongſt People unqualified to hear them. And on the other ſide, if they improved by their Huſbands Lectures, there was Danger of ſetting up for Liberty and Independence. They uſed to ſay, we ought to look upon this Life only as a State of Conception, and that Death was a ſort of immortal Birth, and gave Paſſage to real Life, and happy Exiſtence. But then this Privilege could only be expected by thoſe who had made a right Uſe of Philoſophy. Thus far their Morals. As to their Natural Philoſophy, they fell in with the Greeks in a great many Queſtions. They believed the World had a Beginning, and would have an End: That 'twas round; that God, who made it, governs it, penetrates the whole Maſs, or is preſent to every Part: That the Principles of the Univerſe were different from each other; but that the Water was the Principle of the Earth, and that the Sky and Stars were made out of Quinteſſence. Their Scheme of Religion reſembled Plato's. They believed the Immortality of the Soul, and that an Account of their Actions was to be given in Hades. One of theſe Brammins, called Callanus, being in Converſation with Alexander the Great, rallied the State and pompous Equipage of this Prince: He told him, as long as the Golden Age laſted, Nature furniſhed every thing plentifully: But after Jupiter had given the World a new Turn, and obliged Mankind to ſubſiſt upon Art, Labour, and Frugality; that Mortals now began to abuſe this ſecond Favour, which gave him reaſonable Apprehenſions the World was near Diſſolution and Ruin. * Porphyry, de Abſtinentia Animalium. Strabo, Geog.

* BRACLAW, in Latin Braclavia, a Town of Poland, from whence the Palatinate of Braclaw takes its Name. 'Tis a ſmall Province of Poland, on the Eaſtern Side of Podolia, in Ruſſia Nigra and the Ukraine, between the Palatinate of Kiovia, Valachia, and the Upper Podolia. There are a great many populous Towns in it, and ſeveral Caſtles well fortified againſt the Tartars Incurſions, who, according to Staravolski, lie upon the Frontier to the Eaſt. * Sanſon. Baudrand.

BRANCACIO, (Francis-Mary) Cardinal and Biſhop of Viterbo, died in 1675. He wrote a Book upon Chocolate, printed at Rome in Quarto: Here he aſſerts, that Chocolate being a Drink, it may be taken without breaking a Faſt. This Deciſion ſeems ſomewhat too Ceremonious: For if a Man takes two or three Diſhes of Chocolate about Dinner-time, he may ſtay for his Supper without much Mortification. * Journal des Sçavans, Tom. 1. pag. 211.

BRANDEBOURG, or New Brandenburg, a Town of the Circle of the Lower-Saxony in Germany; it ſtands within the Duchy of Mecklenbourg, upon the Lake Tollenſee, two Leagues from the Town of Stargard to the North. * Maty, Diction.

* BRANDENBURGH. Under this Article in Morery Vol. I. 'tis ſaid that one of the Predeceſſors of the Elector of Brandenburgh was baniſhed Italy by Pope Paſchal II. for being a Guelph. For Guelph, read Gibeline.

BRATI, or Bratski, a People of Great Tartary. They live in Siberia near Tungoſia, upon the River Anagara, one of the Streams that falls into the Jeniſſay. Theſe Brati built the Town Bratskoy, and are Subjects to the Czar of Moſcovy. Father Avril, in his Travels, believes them a Horde or Clan of Kalmuc Tartars.

BRAVA, one of the Iſlands of Cape Verde; 'tis the Southermoſt of all of them, and lies on the Weſt of the Iſland Fuego. Both theſe Iſlands afford as good Wine as the Canaries. * Maty, Diction.

BRAUBACH, a Town with a Caſtle in Germany. 'Tis in the Lower County of Catzenellebogen, upon the Rhine, three Leagues above Coblentz. Braubach and a little Bailliage within its Juriſdiction belongs to the Landgrave of Heſſe-Darmſtadt. * Maty, Diction.

BRAUNECK, or Bruneck, a German Town with a very ſtrong Caſtle; it lies in the Dioceſe of Brixen, Parcel of Tirol, and three Leagues from Brixen to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

BREAST-PLATE, (the Jewiſh High-Prieſts) ſee Pectoral.

BREBEUF, (William) a French Poet, wrote ſome of his fineſt Performances, not only when heated with Enthuſiaſm and Poetick Rapture, but under the Calenture of a Hectick and Malignant Fever, which harraſſed his Conſtitution for twenty Years. Beſides his Serious Poems, his Burleſquing the ſeventh Ænead and Lucan is particularly diverting. The Subject of this laſt Piece is well choſen, and very ingeniouſly executed. His Deſign is to rally thoſe great Lords who take their Perſon and their Fortune to be all of a Piece, and never look upon themſelves without the Tinſel of Equipage, Title and Genealogy about them: And here he does not forget to expoſe thoſe ſervile and mercenary Tempers, that idolize this ſort of Greatneſs. This Poem is furniſhed with a great deal of briſk, handſome and entertaining Raillery. * Charles Sorell, Biblioth. Franc. Guillaume du Hamel, Diſſertation ſur les Oeuvres de Brebeuf, pag. 6, 8, 9, 10, 24, 36, 37, &c. Journal des Sçavans 19 Janvier, An. 1665. Boileau, dans l'Art Poëtique, chant. 1. & dans l'Epitre 8. au Roy. Rapin, Reflections generales, ou premiere partie ſur la Poetique, pag. 81. de l'Edition in 12 de Paris. Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes Modernes. Tom. 8.

* BRECHIN. For fifty five Miles from S. Andrews in Morery Vol. I. read twenty five Miles.

* BREGENTS. (The County of) a ſmall Country in Swabia, ſo called from the chief Town. It lies between the Lake of Conſtance and the Swiſs to the Weſt, the Griſons to the South, the Country of Algaw to the North, and the Country of Tirol to the Eaſt. It belong'd formerly to the Counts of Montfort, but they ſold it to the Houſe of Auſtria; ſo that now being Part of the Emperor's Dominions, 'tis reunited to the Country of Tirol: It makes Parcel of the Circle of Auſtria.

of

BRENNER, in Latin Brennus, and Pyrenæus Mons, Mountains of Tirol in Germany. They lie between the Rivers Inn, Aycha, and the Head of the Adige. They ſtretch a great way, are very ſteep and craggy, and make Part of thoſe formerly called the Tridentine Alps.

BRENTA, formerly called Medoacus Major, a River within the Republick of Venice. It riſes in the Biſhoprick of Trent, paſſes by Ciſmonte and Baſſano in the Territory of Trevigni, continues its Courſe within a League of Padua, and falls into the Gulph of Venice a little South of the Town. * Maty, Diction.

* BRESIL, or Braſil. For twelve thouſand Leagues in Morery Vol. I. read twelve hundred.

BRESSE, a Province of France. For Pope Clement VII. in Morery Vol. I. read Pope Clement VIII.

BRES, (Guide) a French Proteſtant Miniſter at Valenciennes in Hainault: He drew up a Confeſſion of Faith in the Name of the Reformed Churches: 'Tis couched in thirty ſeven Articles, preſented to Clara Eugenia, Governeſs of the Low Countries. This Confeſſion was, in the Year 1566, printed in the Walloon Language, and ſoon after in Flemiſh, as the Reader may ſee by the Collection of Confeſſions of Faith, printed at Geneva in 1582. The Town of Valenciennes being taken in 1567, de Brés, with Pellerin de la Grange, were killed. The Confeſſion of Faith drawn by de Brés was ſo well received by the States General, that about thirty Years ſince they got it tranſlated into Modern Greek by a Levantine Monk; and at the ſame time they procured a Verſion of the Heidelberg Catechiſm, of the Liturgy and Diſcipline of their Churches, for the Uſe of the Oriental Church. * John le Brun, de Vera Religione Hollandorum.

BRET, (Cardin le) Counſellor of State, or Privy Councellor, lived in the Seventeenth Century, and was extracted from an ancient Gentleman's Family. At firſt he was Advocate-General to the Court of Aides in Paris, afterwards had the ſame Employment in the Parliament of this City, and at laſt was made Counſellor of State. Under this Quality he had the Honour of ſeveral important Commiſſions; particularly he was aſſigned to ſettle the Frontier between France and Lorrain, to erect the Parliament of Metz, where he was firſt Preſident, and to be King's Commiſſioner for holding an Aſſembly of the States of Bretagne. He died in 1655, ninety ſeven Years old. There is a Volume of his Works extant, containing a learned Treatiſe of the King's Sovereignty, Speeches and Pleadings at the Court of Aides and Parliament of Paris, put in the Form of Precedents or ruled Caſes; and another Tract, entituled, Ordo per antiquus Judiciorum Civilium. * Memoires Hiſtoriques.

* BRETAGNE, a Province of France.

At the End of the Article Bretagne, in Morery Vol. I. inſert the following Addition, taken from Father Lobineau's Hiſtory of Bretagne.

The Ancient Inhabitants of Armorica were the Celtæ: They made Part of the Gauliſh Republick: Their Language, their Religion, and their Government were the ſame with the reſt of the Celtick Nation. The People or Clans mentioned amongſt them are the Veneti, whoſe Capital was Dariorig, ſtanding upon the Coaſt which was likewiſe the Situation of moſt of their Towns: The Rennéz; their chief Town was Condaté; the Nantois, whoſe Town was then called Condivic; the Oſimians, Burghers of Vorgan; the Curioſolites; the Diolites, afterwards called the Burghers of Dol. Livy reports, that thoſe of Vannez made themſelves Maſters of the Country, now within the Republick of Venice, under the Conduct of Belloveſus, about the Year 164 after the Building of Rome. In the Year of Rome 696, Julius Cæſar made a Conqueſt of the Armoricans by one of his Lieutenant Generals. Thoſe of Vannes quickly diſpoſed the reſt to an Inſurrection; but Cæſar made them ſmart for their Revolt. They were quiet under Auguſtus, who in the Diviſion of the Gauliſh Provinces ranged Armorica within the Provincia Lugdunenſis: This Provincia Lugdunenſis, or the Province of Lyons, was divided into two by the Emperor Adrian, and Armorica thrown within the Second. Afterwards this Second was ſubdivided into two, Armorica making Part of that they called the Third, to which Tours was the Capital. 'Twas from this Town that the Armoricans received the Chriſtian Religion, by the Preaching of S. Clare, whom S. Gratian, the firſt Biſhop of Tours, ſent into their Country. In the Reign of the Emperor Honorius, the Armoricans attempted to ſhake off the Roman Government. They raiſed ſeveral Rebellions, but were forced to ſubmit at laſt. In the Year 452, they proved ſerviceable in defeating Attila King of the Huns. Some few Years after this, the Inhabitants of Great Britain, overpowered and ill uſed by the Saxons, whom they had called in to aſſiſt them againſt the Picts, retired into Armorica. Reith, or Rival, one of theſe Britiſh Princes, was the firſt who tranſported himſelf and a great many of his Subjects into Armorica. Afterwards a great many Refugee-Britans followed him, ſettled there, and called the Country Bretagne. This happen'd in the Year 458, and not, as ſome Hiſtorians write, in the Year 383, under the Uſurpation of Maximus, and Conan Meriadoc his Vice-Roy; for 'tis certain, the Armoricans were Subjects of the Roman Empire till the Year 450. But the Britans ſeizing the Northern Coaſts of Armorica, called Dumnonea, maintained themſelves there againſt the Romans and the reſt of the Armoricans. Theſe Britans carried the Chriſtian Religion hither. Rival was their firſt Prince. Euricus, King of the Viſigoths, attempted to expell the Britans out of Gaul; but they proved ſtrong enough to maintain their Ground, and, which was more, they ventured to attack Euric, under the Command of Riothimus. Euric defeated them; but Riothimus rallying his Forces, broke through the Viſigoths, and joined the Romans in Burgundy. When the Franks had made themſelves Maſters of the greateſt Part of Gaul, the Armoricans received them for their Sovereigns: But the Britans preſerved their Freedom, and kept themſelves independent under Dukes or Princes of their own, whoſe Hiſtory and Succeſſion is very uncertain. 'Tis probable they had ſeveral Sovereign Princes at the ſame time in ſeveral Cantons. In the Year 549, Canao Earl of Cornoaille, or Quimper Corontin, Son of Guerech, Founder of the Abbey of S. Gildas de Ruis, after having killed three of his Brothers, ſeized Maclian, and afterwards gave him his Liberty. Maclian, thus enlarged, applied to Comor, another Britiſh Prince, for Protection, and afterwards retired to the Town of Vannes, then belonging to the Franks. In the Year 560, Judual, deſcended from a Royal Family of the Britans, being aſſiſted by King Clotaire, defeated Comor, who had aſſumed the Title of King. Judicael, Judual's Grandſon, likewiſe took the Regal Style. In the mean time Maclian, now Biſhop of Vannes, entred into an Alliance with Budick II. Count of Cornouaille, and after his Death ſeized the Earldom, under the Title of Protector to Theodorick Budick's Son. Theodorick withdrew for ſome time, and afterwards raiſing Forces, and marching againſt Maclian, routed him, and after having executed him and his Son Jacob, recovered the Earldom of Cornouaille. During theſe Revolutions, the Britans erected Sees, and ſettled Biſhops at Leon, at Dol, at Trequier, and at Kimper, and all without conſulting the Archbiſhop of Tours. Guerec, Maclian's Son, made himſelf Maſter of Vannes, and attack'd King Chilperick and Gontran; but at laſt, in the Year 594, he was defeated and killed by Childebert's Army. While Guerec thus conteſted with the French for the Earldom of Vannes, Judual governed the Britans Country called Dumnonea under the Title of King. Judhael, Son of Judual, ſucceeded his Father in the Year 590. His Son Judicael, who ſucceeded him, retired to Dagobert's Court. Judicael having entred himſelf a Monk, offered to reſign his Crown to his Brother Judoc, who refuſed it. However, Judicael withdrew into a Monaſtery, and died there in the Year 658. His Brothers and his Children made a Partition of his Dominions, and governed in the Quality of Counts and Dukes. Charlemagne carried the War into Bretagne. The Britans finding themſelves weakned by the Subdiviſions of the Country, pitch'd upon a ſingle Sovereign: And thus, in the Year 814, we find one Jarnithinus King of Bretagne. After this Prince's Death, the Britans elected Morvan, who maintained the Britans in their Liberty againſt Lewis the Debonnair. After his Death the Britans made a Submiſſion to the Weſtern Emperor. Three Years forward, in 822, Wiomark, at the Head of the Britan Princes, endeavoured to break the Chain: But the Enterprize miſcarrying, they were forced to come to; and upon Wiomark's Death, which happened ſoon after, the Emperor declared Nominoe, a Britan Lord, his Lieutenant General in all Bretagne. Nominoe, thus in Poſſeſſion of Bretagne, made a Shew of governing by the Emperor's Commiſſion; but in Reality ſet up for Sovereign himſelf: He was ſo hardy as to declare War againſt Charles the Bald, and routed him in the Year 845. After this Battle, he threw off the Maſk, acted openly as a Sovereign Prince, and got the Biſhops of Bretagne depos'd, who own'd the Archbiſhop of Tours for their Metropolitan. At laſt he ſet a Crown upon his Head, the Solemnity being perform'd at Dol: He took Angers, Rennes and Mans, and in 851 left his Son Eriſpoe his Succeſſor. This Prince's Reign was but ſhort; for in the Year 857, he was aſſaſſinated by Almar and his Couſin Solomon. After his Death, Solomon ſeized the Crown, concluded a Treaty with King Charles, and held the Government till 874; and now his Subjects riſing upon him, got him aſſaſſinated. His Son Vigo was likewiſe taken by the Conſpirators and impriſon'd. Paſquiten and Curvan, who headed the Revolt, ſhar'd Bretagne between them: Curvan had Rennes, and Paſquiten Vannes; but their good Correſpondence did not hold long, for they drew into the Field againſt each other, and died both of them in the Year 877. Alan, Paſquiten's Brother, Earl of Vannes, and Judicael Earl of Rennes, Eriſpoe's Daughter's Son, ſucceeded in the Partition and Quarrels of their Predeceſſors, where ſome other Lords threw in a Claim amongſt them; but the breaking in of the Normans upon Bretagne made all Parties drop their Conteſts, and unite againſt the Common Enemy. Judicael attack'd the Normans and routed them; but refuſing to give Quarter, he loſt his Life in the Battle. In 878, Alan proſecuted the War againſt the Normans, and was recognized Sovereign of Bretagne, firſt under a Ducal, and then under the Regal Diſtinction. This Prince rebuilt Nantes, ruin'd by the Normans, and died in the Year 907. After his Death, Gurmahilion ſtands the next King of Bretagne, and was ſucceeded by his Son Daniel, in the Beginning of the Tenth Century. Mathewedoi, Alan's Son, was Father to Alan Frizelebeard, who notwithſtanding did not ſucceed immediately, becauſe the Normans over-ran and ravaged the whole Country, and kept the Bretans under Servitude a pretty many Years. But in 937 Alan returning from England with a Reinforcement, gained two Battles upon them, recover'd Nantes, rebuilt the Churches demoliſh'd by the Normans, was recognized Sovereign by all the Bretans, and died in the Year 952. He had a Son named Drogo, by Roſcila, Siſter to the Count of Blois, who died a Minor ſoon after his Father: He had likewiſe two other Sons, Hoel and Guerech, by another Lady called Judith. Hoel poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Earldom of Nantes, Conan in the mean time being Maſter of Rennes; Thibald Earl of Blois having reſign'd it to him. Hoel attack'd Conan, who got rid of him by the Treachery of one Galleron Guerech. Hoel's Brother gave up the Biſhoprick of Nantes, to qualify himſelf the better to ſucceed his Brother: He declar'd War againſt Conan, but died ſoon after. Alan's Son ſucceeded him, but liv'd not long. After his Death, Conan made himſelf Maſter of Nantes; but was kill'd by Fulko, Son of Geoffrey Griſconelle, in a Battle fought at Conguereux in 992. This Geoffrey ſupported the Intereſt of Judicael and Hoel Guerech's Natural Son. Fulko left Judicael the Title of Count, and aſſigned Aimericus Viſcount Thouars for his Protector. Geoffrey, Conan's Son, ſucceeded his Father in the Earldom of Rennes, and forc'd Judicael to hold the Earldom of Nantes of him. Judicael was ſoon after aſſaſſinated, leaving only a Natural Son Budic, who held up the War againſt Geoffrey, and kept his Ground in Part of Bretagne. Geoffrey died in the Year 1008, and left Alan his Son Duke of Bretagne: This Prince was pretty much embarraſs'd by Judicael, Conan's Natural Son, who was afterwards ſlain. Thus Bretagne was canton'd between Alan the Duke, Budick Count of Nantes, and Alan Caignard, Son of Bennet Earl of Cornouaille. In the Year 1030. Eudo, Alan's Brother, had an Aſſignment of Part of Bretan, and was made Governor of the whole: After Alan's Death, which happened in the Year 1040, Eudo gave the Earldom of Rennes to Geoffrey, Alan's Natural Son, and confin'd Conan his other Nephew; but the Bretan Lords reſcu'd Conan in 1047, and the next Year proclaim'd him Sovereign of all Bretagne. This Conan was poiſon'd in 1066, and Hoel Earl of Cornouaille ſucceeded him, in Right of his Counteſs Havoiſe, Daughter to Alan II. Hoel was made Priſoner by Goſſelin, Viſcount of Porhoët, in 1077. Two Years after Count Eudes died, and his Government was ſeiz'd by Alan Fergent's Son, though Geoffrey was the eldeſt. Alan, Fergent levied War againſt Geoffrey, who was kill'd at Dol in 1093; and thus all Bretagne fell under the Juriſdiction of Alan Fergent. This Prince being ſeiz'd with a mortal Diſtemper, retir'd from the World in the Year 1112, and left his Dominions to Conan III. called the Burly. After this Reſignation, Alan Fergent lived to the Year 1119; Conan remaining ſole Duke of Bretagne to the Year 1148. After his Death, Eudo, Viſcount of Porhoet, and Hoel, Conan's Son, diſputed the Sovereignty of Bretagne; but in September 1159, Conan IV. ſat down before Rennes and took it, and was recogniz'd Sovereign of all Bretagne. This Prince in 1160, married Margaret, Siſter to the King of Scotland, by whom he had a Daughter Conſtantia, who, when but five Years of Age, he contracted to Geoffrey, Son to Henry II. King of England, to whom in 1166 he reſigned the Sovereignty of Bretagne, reſerving only to himſelf the Earldom of Guingamp. Upon Conan's Death, which happen'd in 1171, Geoffrey, King Henry's Son, was recogniz'd Duke of Bretagne, and maintain'd himſelf there by Force; he married Conſtantia above-mention'd, and took the Field againſt his Father, and died in France in 1186; but twenty eight Years of Age, leaving his Ducheſs with Child of a Son chriſten'd Arthur. This Prince was the Right Heir to the Duchy of Bretagne. However, Henry King of England was poſſeſs'd of Part of the Country, and endeavour'd to gain the Whole. Henry married Conſtantia to Ranulph, or Ralph, Earl of Caſtres, who likewiſe aſſum'd the Title of Duke of Bretagne. After Henry King of England's Death, the Bretans expell'd Ranulph; and Richard, Henry's Son, ſeiz'd Bretagne for himſelf, and fail'd in doing Juſtice to his Nephew Arthur: However, this young Prince was own'd for Duke in 1196. This Recognition occaſion'd a War between the Bretans and the Engliſh: During this Conteſt, Richard Coeur de Lion died, and Arthur was ſtill ouſted of his Right by John without Land, another Uncle of his, now King of England, and Brother to Richard aforeſaid. Conſtantia, Arthur's Mother, put this Duke under the Protection of the King of France, to whom he was prevail'd with to do Homage for the Duchy of Bretagne; but Arthur ſurrender'd himſelf to his Uncle John without Land, and was oblig'd to hold his Duchy of him. His Inclination ſeem'd notwithſtanding to lie for the Service of the King of France, whoſe Intereſt he engag'd in till the Year 1202, when he happen'd to be taken Priſoner by the King of England's Troops at Mirebeau. Upon this Misfortune, he was firſt confin'd in the Caſtle of Falaiſe, and afterwards conveyed to the Tower of Rohan, where he was kept Priſoner (as Lobinean reports) till his Uncle John had him brought out only to kill him inhumanly with his own Hand, April 3, 1203. After Arthur's Death, Gui of Thouars, Conſtantia's third Huſband, was recogniz'd Duke of Bretagne in Right of his eldeſt Daughter Alice, Heireſs to the Duchy. Alice married Peter of Dreux, ſurnamed Mauclerc, Son to Robert II. Earl of Dreux, who was Grandſon to Lewis the Groſs, King of France. This Match was made in the Year 1212; and thus Alice is ſaid to have brought the Duchy of Bretagne to Peter Mauclerc. This Prince being of a Martial Temper, defended himſelf againſt John King of England. He was not only embarraſs'd with the Clergy of his Dominions, but had a Rebellion likewiſe of ſeveral Bretan Lords to deal with. He engag'd in a League againſt the King of France, and maintain'd a War againſt him the greateſt Part of his time; but at laſt a Peace was concluded in 1234. He declar'd his Son John Duke of Bretagne in the Year 1237, and ſunk himſelf to the Title of Peter de Braine, Chevalier. He was afterwards choſen Head of the Croiſade, and ſail'd into Syria with the Forces embarqu'd for that Service, where he behav'd himſelf ſuitably to his Poſt and Reputation. After his Return, he embarqu'd a ſecond time with S. Lewis upon the ſame Enterprize, was at the Battle of Maſſure, where he was wounded, and taken Priſoner with the King. Being afterwards ranſom'd in the Year 1250, he died in his Voyage back to France.

ſeſſion

John I. his Son, ſurnamed the Red, who ſucceeded him at the Period above-mentioned, after a peaceable Government of forty nine Years, died in October 1286, leaving his Son John II. by Blanche of Champagne, his Succeſſor. This Duke, in the beginning of his Adminiſtration, engaged with Edward I. of England againſt

France; but he ſoon quitted his Intereſt, join'd the King of France, and from this time forward held a good Correſpondence with him. He was cruſh'd to Death at Lyons with the falling of a Pannel of Wall, when Pope Clement V. made a pompous Entry into that Town: This happen'd A. D. 1304. Arthur II. his eldeſt Son, ſucceeded him, and died in 1312. John III. his eldeſt Son, and Viſcount of Limoges, ſurnamed the Good, was the next Duke of Bretagne, his Brother Gui being now Viſcount of Limoges: This John III. died without Legitimate Iſſue in April 1341. After his Death, the Duchy was diſputed between Charles Earl of Blois, who married Jane de Penthievre, Niece to John III. Daughter of Gui, Brother to Arthur II. The Title was diſputed between this Charles and John Earl of Montfort, Arthur's Son, who pretended himſelf declar'd Duke by John III.'s laſt Will and Teſtament. Charles Earl of Blois, on the other ſide, pleaded that the Daughter of the elder Brother ought to be preferr'd to her Uncle, a younger Brother: And John of Montfort alledg'd that the Duchy belong'd to him, as being the next Heir. The Cauſe was argued before the King, and Judgment given at Conflans September 7, 1341, for Charles Earl of Bloiſe; but John of Monfort having a ſtrong Party in Bretagne, held up his Claim in the Field. This Competition engaging the whole Duchy in a War, the King of France ſupported Charles, and Edward III. King of England was an Ally for John. During this Conteſt, the Earl of Montfort was taken Priſoner; but making his Eſcape, he ſet Sail for England, and reimbarqu'd with a Reinforcement for Bretagne; but his Death happening at Hennebont in September 1345, he had no time to try his Fortune. However, the War did not end with his Life; for John IV. John Earl of Montfort's Brother, kept on the Claim by Force of Arms, and at the Battle of Rochedrin had the Luck to take Charles Earl of Bloiſe Priſoner, A. D. 1347. Charles was ſent into England, where he continu'd Priſoner ſome time, and afterwards return'd into Bretagne and France upon his Parole. The brave Gueſclin continued firm to Charles, notwithſtanding the Declenſion of his Affairs. At laſt the Battle at Aurai, fought September 29, 1364, decided this Conteſt; for here Charles was routed and ſlain. And now John IV. called the Conqueror, made himſelf Maſter of all Bretagne, and held up the War againſt France; but at laſt he concluded a Treaty with King Charles VI. which brought Bretagne to a tolerable State of Repoſe, for the Duke had only ſome little Diſturbance from the Conſtable of Cliſſon. This John died in November 1399.

John V. his Son, ſucceeded him at ten Years of Age: His Mother was Jane, Daughter to Charles II. called the Bad, King of Navarre: This Princeſs, after her Huſband's Death, married Henry IV. King of England, in 1402: The Duke of Burgundy being declar'd Regent of Bretagne, and the young Duke's Governor, carried him to Paris. This Duke being now fifteen Years of Age, did Homage to the King of France, and return'd into Bretagne: He married Jane, King Charles VI. of France's Daughter. In the Year 1420, he was ſeized at Loroux by the Earl of Penthievre, and conveyed to Paluau, and from thence to Châteauceaux. Upon this, the Ducheſs convened the States, levied an Army for her Huſband's Reſcue, and beſieg'd Châteauceaux. The Caſtle being cloſe preſs'd, ſurrender'd; one of the Articles of the Capitulation was, that the Counteſs of Penthievre, then with the Garriſon, ſhould have her Liberty; which was accordingly perform'd: And the Duke being now at his own Diſpoſal, purſu'd his Revenge againſt the Penthievres. Though he had Reaſon to complain of the Uſage of Charles VII. when Dauphin, yet he treated with him after the Death of Charles VI. and did him Homage for the Duchy. This Step drew a War from the Engliſh upon him, which laſted till the Peace made in 1422. He died twenty Years after.

Francis I. ſucceeded him in the Duchy of Bretagne; he put Giles de Bretagne his Brother to Death, and died about ſix Weeks after, in July 1451, leaving no Iſſue Male.

Peter II. his Brother, ſucceeded him: This Duke died without Legitimate Iſſue in 1457. After his Death, Arthur Earl of Richmond, and Conſtable of France, Son of John IV. was declar'd Duke of Bretagne. His Government being ſhort, affords nothing conſiderable: He died without Iſſue on Chriſtmas-day 1458. Francis II. Earl of Eſtampes, Son of Richard III. one of John IV.'s Children, ſucceeded as next upon the Line to the Duchy of Bretagne: He was ſometimes in a War with Lewis XI. and after this Prince's Death, went into the Intereſt of the Duke of Orleans. His Treaſurer Landais happening to diſoblige the Nobility, he was forc'd to put him in the Chancellor's Hands, and reſign him to Juſtice. Several of the Bretan Lords form'd an Aſſociation againſt the Duke in Favour of the King of France, which brought a rugged War upon him; but in 1488 a Peace was concluded between him and the French King: He died in September following, leaving by Margaret, Daughter to Gaſton Earl of Foix, only one Daughter, Anne, Heireſs of Bretagne, courted firſt by the Duke d' Albret, then married by Proxy to Maximilian King of the Romans; and laſtly married in Perſon by Charles VIII. the French King, December 6, 1491; and after his Death to Lewis XII. in 1498. Anne of Bretagne died in January 1513, leaving two Daughters, of which one was ſole Heireſs to the Duchy. Francis Earl of Angoulême, and Duke de Valois, married Claudia, the eldeſt of theſe two Daughters: Upon this Match, Lewis XII. made him a Grant of the Duchy, and Francis coming next to the Crown of France, he prevail'd with his Queen to ſettle this Inheritance upon him. Thus after the Death of Claudia, which happen'd in July 1524, Francis I. remain'd Proprietor of the Duchy, and in 1532 had his Son Francis, Dauphin of France, created Duke of Bretagne. This young Prince dying in 1536, Henry II. carried the Title of Duke of Bretagne, and annexed the Duchy to the Crown of France.

* Nouvelle Hiſtoire de Bretagne, compoſée ſur les Titres & les Auteurs originaux, par le P. Lobineau Benedictin en 1707.

Another Addition extracted from the Abbot de Vertot's Account.

Father Lobineau ſuppoſes the firſt Bretans independent of the French: The Abbot de Vertot is of a contrary Sentiment, and affirms the French Kings were always their Sovereigns. This he endeavours to prove, 1. by the Teſtimony of Gregory of Tours: This Hiſtorian relates, That after the Death of Clovis, the Bretans remain'd ſubject to the French Kings, and that the Heads of their Government were called Earls, and not Kings. This Gregory reports farther, that Gueric, Head of the Bretans, ſurpriz'd and plunder'd the Town of Vannes. Upon which he remarks, That this Town and the reſt belong'd to Clotaire's Sons: That Gueric yielded up this Town to Chilprick, and ſwore an Oath of Allegiance to him. 2. Fredegarius aſſures us, that Judicael came to King Dagobert's Court; that he declar'd the Bretans ſhould always own themſelves ſubject to the French Kings, and that he would not ſit at Dagobert's Table, out of Reſpect to that Prince. 3. Under the Kings of the Second Race, the Bretans are reckoned among thoſe Pepin reduc'd under the Dominion of France. 4. Eginhard is a farther Evidence of the Bretans paying an Acknowledgment to the Kings of France; and that upon refuſing the Payment of this Quit-Rent in the Reign of Charlemagne, this Prince forc'd them upon Tribute. 5. In the Reign of Lewis the Debonaire, the Bretans happening to revolt, Lewis march'd againſt them as far as Vannes, where he convened a General Meeting of the States, and made Nominoe or Nominoeus Governor of Vannes and Bretagne. Now the Abbot de Vertot pretends this Nominoe was not of the Royal Line of Bretagne, but only a Soldier of Fortune, and over and above, a Rebel, and cruel Tyrant: He was only ſtyled Head or Chief of the Bretans, and this is the Title given him in the Council of Tours, held A. D. 847, where he is charg'd with Tyranny and Uſurpation. 6. According to the Annals of S. Bertin, Eriſpoé Son of Nominoe, and his Son Solomon, recogniz'd the Sovereignty of the Kings of France; and that in the Year 863, Solomon ſwore Allegiance to King Charles. 7. The Publick Acts and Records of Bretagne, mention'd by Lobineau, are dated in the Reigns of the Kings of France. 8. The French, when they came to an Accommodation with the Normans, reſigned to them the Seigneurial Right or Paramount Lordſhip of Bretagne. That this is Matter of Fact, appears from Dudo Dean of S. Quintins, whoſe Teſtimony is confirm'd by ſeveral other Hiſtorians, and by the Homages the Dukes of Normandy have done to the French Kings. * Traité Hiſtorique de la Mouvance de la Bretagne, à Paris en 1710.

The

The Church of Bretagne.

Paganiſm kept its Ground in Armorica a great while after the Incarnation; and when the Britans came from their own Iſland thither, moſt of the People, excepting thoſe of Nantes and the Neighbourhood, were Idolaters. S Clare, firſt Biſhop of Nantes, was ſent thither by S. Gratian Biſhop of Tours in the Year 277: He travell'd over the Precincts of Nantes, of Rennes and Vannes, and preach'd Chriſtianity there. There is one Juſtin ſaid to be Biſhop of Rennes, and ſome other ancient Biſhops of Vannes and Rennes, are likewiſe mention'd; but this Succeſſion of Biſhops being drawn from Modern Records, is very uncertain. When the Britans came from Great Britain into Armorica, they preach'd the Goſpel to the Natives. About this time there was one Riothimus Biſhop of Rennes, who was no Britan. At the Council of Tours, held in 461, we find the Subſcriptions of Euſebius Biſhop of Nantes, and Athenius Biſhop of Rennes, and of Manſuetus, who only ſtyles himſelf Biſhop of the Britans, without mentioning of what See. From whence we may conclude, (ſays the French Supplementer) that theſe firſt Britan Biſhops, Manſuetus, S. Brieu, S. Sampſon, and others, were Biſhops at large, or Biſhops in common to the whole Nation, without being fix'd to any particular Diſtrict. In the Year 458, a Council was held at Vannes, where Nunnechius Biſhop of Nantes, Paternus Biſhop of Vannes, Athenius Biſhop of Rennes were preſent, together with Albinus and Liberalis of the ſame Character, whoſe Sees are not mention'd. Perpetuus, Archbiſhop of Tours, was Preſident of this Council, which ſeems to have met partly for the Ordination of a Biſhop of Vannes, ſuppoſed to be Paternus. When the Britans had ſecur'd themſelves in the Country, they conſecrated Biſhops for Leon, Dol, Treguier and Kimper, without conſulting the Archbiſhops of Tours. This Freedom, as Euphronius Archbiſhop of Tours reckoned it, moved him to convene a Council at his See in 556. The Synod conſiſting of French Biſhops, made a Canon prohibiting the Conſecration of any Britan or Roman without Leave from the Metropolitan, under the Penalty of Excommunication. Whether all the Britans ſubmitted to this Regulation, is not known. However, 'tis certain the Archbiſhop of Tours executed his Metropolitical Juriſdiction in Bretagne, till the Government of Nominoe, who declaring himſelf Sovereign, endeavoured in the Year 847 to depoſe the Biſhops conſecrated by the Archbiſhop of Tours, and to promote new ones of that Character, depending upon himſelf, and to make an Archbiſhop for the Province. For this Purpoſe he made uſe of Convoïon Abbot of Redon, who charged Suſannus Biſhop of Vannes, and the reſt of the Biſhops of the Province, with Simony. The Cauſe was carried to Rome, where Convoïon, recommended with Letters from Nominoe, preferred Articles againſt the Bretan Biſhops before Leo IV. The Biſhops appearing upon Summons, but making a faint Defence, were reprimanded, but not depoſed by his Holineſs, who referred the Matter to a Synod of Biſhops. At their Return home, Nominoe convened a Synod at Coit-Lou in the beginning of the Year 848. Here a Letter from the Pope to the Biſhops of Bretagne was read, ſetting forth, that the Biſhops above mentioned were depoſed for Simony. There was likewiſe Evidence procured againſt them; and, which is more, they confeſſed the Charge, and declared they had forfeited their Dignity; and to ſhew their Ceſſion was voluntary, they laid down their Paſtoral Staff and Ring; and upon this withdrawing from the Council, the Judges declared them convicted of Simony by Teſtimony, and their own Confeſſion, and then depoſed them. The Prelates thus depoſed were Suſannus Biſhop of Vannes, Felix Biſhop of Kimper, Salaçon Biſhop of Dol, and Liberalis Biſhop of Leon. Mahen, Biſhop of Alet, now S. Malo, kept his Station. Salaçon retired to Jonas Biſhop of Autun, and aſſiſted him in his Functions, and afterwards withdrew to the Monaſtery of Flavigny, where he turned Monk, and died in 864. The reſt of the Biſhops depoſed went off into King Charles's Dominions; and as long as they lived, endeavoured the recovering their Sees. Nominoe having got rid of theſe Prelates, erected a See where S. Brieu died, reſtored that of Treguier, and made Dol an Archbiſhoprick: He likewiſe deprived Actard Biſhop of Nantes, and promoted one Giſlard, born at Vannes, in his Place. Landrand, Archbiſhop of Tours, inſiſted upon his Metropolitical Juriſdiction, and appeared for the Biſhops deprived. The Pope wrote Nominoe a remonſtrating Letter upon Giſlard's Intruſion; and the Archbiſhop of Tours held a Council of two and twenty Biſhops, who ſent Nominoe a Letter, and complained of his Conduct in ſtrong Language. After Nominoe's Death, Actard was reſtored to Nantes; and thinking the Biſhops above mentioned unjuſtly depoſed, he joined with the Archbiſhop of Tours in an Addreſs to the Popes Leo and Bennet, for reſtoring them. Theſe Popes wrote to Bretagne about this Buſineſs, but to little purpoſe; for the Churches of Bretagne continued in the Condition Nominoe left them. The Council of Toul held in the Year 859, made farther Efforts for re-eſtabliſhing the Biſhops depoſed, and for reſtoring the Archbiſhop of Tours to his Pretenſions upon the Churches of Bretagne. Prince Solomon was ſo far from giving way to this Remonſtrance, that he deſired Pope Nicholas to ſend a Pall to the Archbiſhop of Dol. This Requeſt was refuſed by his Holineſs, who wrote to the Biſhop of Dol, giving him to underſtand, that the Church of Tours was the Metropolis of Bretagne, encouraging the Archbiſhop of Tours at the ſame time to inſiſt upon his Right. He wrote alſo to Solomon, giving him this Reaſon for his Refuſal. Solomon ſent another Embaſſy to the Pope, with Inſtructions againſt the Biſhops depoſed, and for maintaining the Independency of the Prelates of Bretagne. The Pope in his Anſwer told him, that the Biſhops above mentioned not being Canonically depoſed, the Cauſe ought to have a Re-hearing, and that either at Tours by an Aſſembly of other Biſhops, or elſe at Rome upon the Allegations of two Biſhops, one of which to be choſen by each Party. As to the Metropolitical Right, he told him, that when he had concluded a Peace with King Charles, he might proceed to examine that Affair; and the Caſe being ſomewhat entangled, 'twou'd be proper for him to ſend Records and neceſſary Inſtructions to Rome for that Purpoſe. This Diſpute about the Archiepiſcopal Juriſdiction was depending at Rome from the Ninth Century to the Fourteenth; Deciſions being ſometimes favourable to one ſide, and ſometimes to another. At laſt Innocent III. who was a great Canoniſt, propoſed a Temper for an Accommodation. Upon this, the Commiſſioners from the Cathedral of Tours agreed to own the Biſhop of Dol Archbiſhop, and to give him up two Suffragans, provided he was willing to acknowledge the Archbiſhop of Tours for his Primate. The Commiſſioners of Dol refuſing this Propoſal, the Cauſe was pleaded at length, and a Definitive Sentence pronounced June 1, 1199. By which the Pope declared the Church of Dol Suffragan to that of Tours, and commanded the Biſhops of Dol to receive the Archbiſhop of Tours for their Metropolitan, and give him the ſame Obedience with the other Suffragans, and never pretend to the Privilege of a Pall. Duke Arthur agreed to put this Judgment in Execution; and from this Time the Churches of Bretagne have always continued under the Juriſdiction of the Archbiſhop of Tours. There have been ſeveral Councils held at Vannes, Nantes, Coit-Lou, Rennes, Dol, and Redon, too long to inſiſt on. * Nouvelle Hiſtoire de Bretagne, compoſée ſur les Titres & ſur les Anciens Originaux, par Gui Alexis Lobineau, Benedictin de la Congregation de S. Maur, à Paris en 1707.

BRETON, Cape Breton; 'tis in Southern America, upon the Southern Coaſt of the Iſle of Cape Breton, lying in the Sea of Canada, between the Iſland of Terre-Neuve and Acadia. * Maty, Diction.

BRETSCH, ſometimes written Brzeſtye, a Town of Poland in Mazovia, and Capital of a diſtinct Province belonging to Great Poland, and called the Palatinate of Cujavia. There is a Palatine, a Biſhop, and three Caſtellans, within this Precinct, with this remarkable Particularity, that the Biſhop takes his Title from the Province, not from the Town where his See is fix'd. The Palatine, on the contrary, has his Diſtinction from the Cathedral Town, and not from the Province; for the Style is the Biſhop of Cujavia, and the Palatine of Worſlauk. The Town of Bretſch is built like an Amphitheater, about four Poliſh Leagues from the Viſtula, eight from Thorn to the South, ten from Lenczycze, otherwiſe Lanſchet, to the North. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu. Baudrand.

BRETTEN, a ſmall Town in the Palatinate upon the Rhine, ſituate upon the River Saltza, on the Confines ſines of the Duchy of Wirtemberg. Some Geographers believe this Town the ſame with the old Solicinium, which others will have to be Sultz, a Town of Wirtemberg: But let this be as it will, Bretten, the native Place of the famous Melanchthon, is the Capital of a little Government of the ſame Name, with ſeveral ſmall Towns its Dependencies. * Maty, Diction.

BREVIARY, or a Collection of Publick Prayers ſaid in the Church at different Hours in the Day, by thoſe of the Roman Communion. The Office called Mattins was formerly ſaid in the Night: The Lauds begin at the Riſing of the Sun, or Six o'Clock: The Prime, the Tierce, the Sexte, and the Nones, are ſo called from the reſpective Diviſions of the Day: The Veſpers are ſaid after Sun-ſet; and the Compline after Nine o'Clock. The Cuſtom of Divine Service at different Hours in the Courſe of the four and twenty is very ancient in the Weſtern Church; they were firſt called the Curſus, and afterwards the Breviary: This laſt Name importing either that the old Office was abridged, or rather that this Collection was a ſort of Epitomy of all the Prayers. The Breviary conſiſts of Pſalms, of Leſſons taken from the Scripture, ſome Homilies of the Fathers, or the Lives of Saints. 'Tis made up likewiſe of Hymns, of Ancients, of Reſponſes and Prayers ſuitable to the Feſtivals and the Hours. This Collection being drawn from the Publick Forms of ſeveral Churches, has made the Breviaries different; ſome of them are intermixt with Romantick Hiſtories of the Saints. This Misfortune has occaſioned ſeveral Reformations in the Breviaries. The Service-Book called Breviarium Romanum, is not the Ancient Breviary uſed in the Church of Rome: 'Tis only a Breviary with which the Cordeliers officiated in the Pope's Chappel; Sixtus IV. being the firſt who brought it to general Uſe. Pius V. Clement VIII. and Urban VIII. got it reformed, and endeavoured to introduce it into all the Churches of their Communion; but this was more than they could compaſs. Notwithſtanding this Effort, a great many Churches have either kept to their old Breviaries, or made new ones. The Cuſtom of ſaying the Breviary privately at home is practiſed not only by Eccleſiaſticks, but by the Laity, when they have not an Opportunity of going to Church: However, we do not find any Ancient Canons that oblige the Clergy to this Duty. The firſt Regulation of this kind was paſſed in the Council of Baſil, and repeated in that of Lateran under Julius II. and Leo X. But then theſe Canons bind none but beneficed Eccleſiaſticks. * Joly, de recitandis Horis Canonicis. Mabillon, de Curſu Gallicano. M. de Vert, des Ceremonies. Divers Traitez des Heures Canoniacles, & de l'Office Divin.

BRIDIEU, (Lewis de) Governor of Guiſe, Quarter-Maſter-General of the King of France's Army, defended Guiſe in the Minority of Lewis XIV. againſt two conſiderable Armies, one Spaniards, and another French, in Rebellion againſt this Prince in the Year 1650. Bridieu forced them to raiſe the Siege almoſt a Month after the Trenches were opened; and they had carried on the Approaches ſo far, as to make ſeveral Breaches in the Caſtle: But the Enemy expecting to march to Paris after the taking of this Town, the Governor did his utmoſt to diſappoint them, becauſe the Repoſe of the Kingdom depended upon keeping this Paſs. His Reſolution having Succeſs, the King made him Knight of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, Lieutenant-General of his Forces, and granted him all the Royal Demeſnes of the Town of Guiſe during Life. * Memoires de Miſhel de Marolles, printed at Paris.

* BRIE, a Country within Champagne. For a more particular Account of the Geography under this Article, we may obſerve that Brie is a Province of France, very fruitful, populous, and conſiderably large, lying between the Marne and the Seine: 'Tis bounded on the North with France properly ſo called, and Soiſſonnois: On the Eaſt with Champagne; and on the South and Weſt with the River Seine, which parts it from the reſt of Champagne, from Gatinois, and Hurepoix. It reaches from Eaſt to Weſt about two and twenty Leagues, that is, from Seſanne to Conflans near Charenton, where the Marne falls into the Seine; but the Breadth is not ſo much. It has been Parcel of Champagne for ſeveral Ages, and is ſtill within the Government of that Province, excepting a ſmall Part of it neareſt Paris, that is, from Lagni to Melun, which is laid to the Government of the Iſle of France. La Brie is commonly divided into three Parts, Upper Brie towards the Marne, of which Meaux is the chief Town; Lower Brie ſtretching to the Seine, Provins and la Brie Pouilleuſe, otherwiſe called Galleueſſe, upon the Marne, towards Campagne and Soiſſonnoiſe, of which Diviſion Château Thiery is the chief Place. Meaux is the Capital of the whole Province, notwithſtanding Provins was the cuſtomary Reſidence of the Counts de Brie, before 'twas annexed to Champagne. * Baudrand. Bourgon, Geograph. Hiſt.

* BRIEG, or Brig. (The Duchy of) in Latin Brigenſis Ducatus, a ſmall Country of Bohemia in Upper Sileſia, between the Duchy of Breſlaw to the North, and the Duchies of Grotkau and Oppelen to the South; 'tis ſo called from the Town of Brieg within it. This Duchy had formerly Dukes of its own, deſcended from George Padiebrach King of Bohemia, and who are likewiſe Owners of the Duchies of Lignitz and Volau: But the laſt Duke of this Family dying in 1575, the Country fell to the Emperor as King of Bohemia.

BRIEU, (S.) in Latin Briacus, or Briomachus, an Iriſhman, living in the Seventh Century, and receiving his Education from S. Germanus, a Biſhop in that Iſland: He tranſported himſelf into Armorica about the Time the Britans ſettled there. He is ſaid to have been a Regionary or National Biſhop, without any See belonging to him; S. Sampſon, S. Leonorus, and S. Magloire, being then Perſons of the ſame Character at large. S. Brieu landing upon the Northern Coaſt of Bretagne, between the Towns Lexobia, and Alet, built a Monaſtery there; and having drawn ſome Monks together, lived amongſt them in the Exerciſes of Retirement and Auſterity the Remainder of his Life, which laſted about ninety Years. His Memory was ſo famous for Piety and Miracles, that a Town was quickly built about the Monaſtery: 'Twas afterwards made a Biſhop's See, of which S. Brieu is reckoned the firſt Biſhop, though he never exerciſed any Epiſcopal Juriſdiction there. * Baillet, Vies des Saints, for the firſt of May.

BRIGIDE, Abbeſs of Kildare in Ireland, born in the Middle of the fifth Century at Fouchard in the Dioceſe of Armagh. Her Father, who was a Perſon of Quality, would have married her; but ſhe made Choice of a ſingle Life, and was profeſſed by S. Meldus an Eleve of S. Patrick's in the Province of Meath. This Lady afterwards erected a Society of Nuns, and founded ſeveral Monaſteries, of which Kildare in the Province of Lemſter was the moſt conſiderable; ſhe is ſaid to have wrought a great many Miracles, which made her called Thaumaturga. Bollandus has ſtuff'd her Hiſtory with a great deal of Fiction and Childiſh Prodigies. * Bollandus. Baillet, Vies des Saints, 1 Fevrier.

* BRIGITTE, or Birgite, (S.) a Swediſh Princeſs. Towards the End of her Life ſhe travelled into Paleſtine, to viſit the Places where our Saviour and the Apoſtles lived, and wrought Miracles. She wrote to Pope Gregory XI. at Avignon, to perſuade him to return to Rome. There is a Volume of Revelations of hers in eight Books: Theſe Revelations were examined at the Council of Baſil, where John de Turre-Cremata, by making a favourable Report, ſkreened them from Cenſure, though Gerſon and ſeveral Eminent Divines thought they deſerved it. * Baronius in Martyr. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. XVII Cent. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Mois de Mars.

BRILLON, (Peter-James) Advocate to the Parliament at Paris, and born in 1671. The Belles Lettres were his Study before he qualified himſelf for the Bar. The following Tracts were written by him; Des Portraits ſerieux, Galans & Critiques; de l'Ouvrage dans le goût des Caracteres de Theophraſte, & des Penſées de Paſchal; de Theophraſte Moderne; de la Critique de M. de la Bruyere, & de ſon Apologie. In his Profeſſion of Law, he publiſhed three Volumes in Folio, which were well received: The Work is entituled, Le Dictionaire des Arrêts, ou la Juriſprudence Univerſelle des Parlemens de France. * Memoires du Tems.

BRISSOT, (Peter) a celebrated Phyſician in the Sixteenth Century, Son to a Lawyer of Character, and born at Fontenai-le-Comte in Poitou. He practiſed in Paris, and broke a miſtaken Cuſtom. It had been the conſtant Method of Phyſicians to bleed the Patients in a Pleuriſy not on the affected Side, but the other. Briſſot diſputed upon this Queſtion in the Phyſick Schools, and made it plain from Galen and Hippocrates, that the Patient ought to bleed upon the pained Side. He wrote a

Tract

Tract, publiſhed after his Death, in Defence of his Opinion. His Life is written prefix'd to a Tract de Miſſione Sanguinis in Pleuritide, printed at Paris in 1622.

BROSSIER, (Martha) a Perſon pretendedly poſſeſs'd, and was likely to have occaſioned great Diſturbances in France about the End of the Sixteenth Century. Her Father, who was a Weaver of Romorantin, gave up his Trade, and ſtrolled about the Country with his three Daughters, hoping to make a better Hand of it that way: One of theſe young Women had the Faculty of ſcrewing her Body into a great many convulſive Figures. He pitch'd upon this Girl, to make the Fortune of the Family, gave out ſhe was poſſeſs'd, and deſired the Exorciſms of the Church. Abundance of People crowded to ſee the Sight, but at Orleance the Cheat was diſcovered, and all the Prieſts in the Dioceſe were forbidden under Pain of Excommunication to exorciſe Martha. This Order was publiſhed in 1598. The Biſhop of Angiers likewiſe ſaw through the Impoſture; for having ſent Martha a Dinner, he ordered holy Water ſhould be given her inſtead of common, and common Water inſtead of holy: Martha was ſo unlucky as to fall into the Snare. When ſhe took the holy Water, ſhe was perfectly quiet, and under no diſturbing Emotion; but when they offered her the other Water, ſhe fell into diſmal Agitations, and twiſted her Body in a lamentable Manner. Upon this, the Biſhop ordered a Book of Exorciſms to be brought him, and began to read ſome of the firſt Book of Virgil's Æneis: Here Martha was catch'd again; for concluding theſe Verſes were the Beginning of the Exorciſing Form, ſhe fell into violent Poſtures, to ſhew the Devil could not bear the Force of what was read. Thus this Prelate was fully convinced of the Roguery: However, he thought fit to proceed no farther than to give Martha's Father a private Reprimand. This Impoſtor notwithſtanding would not carry his Daughter home to Romorantin, as the Biſhop adviſed him: And now a great many Roman Catholicks happening to be diſobliged at the late publiſhing the Edict at Nantes, he hoped to ſucceed better at Paris, and to meet with Fools and Knaves enough to carry on his Buſineſs: And here he made uſe of S. Geneviéve's Church for the Scene of the Comedy. The Capuchins, being either ſurprized, or too forward to ſhew their Talent, ſtruck in immediately: They plied the Evil Spirit with Exorciſms, without looking, as the Church directs, into the Morals and Conſtitution of this Woman. While they went on with their Exorciſms, ſhe did her Poſtures ſo admirably well, that the Mob believed her really poſſeſs'd, and this Report was quickly ſpread all over the Town. The Biſhop, who was willing to take due Precaution, ordered five of the moſt eminent Phyſicians at Paris to examine the Matter: They all agreed in their Anſwer, that ſince Martha underſtood neither Greek nor Latin, 'twas plain that the Devil in her was nothing but her Father's Knavery, and a little Diſtemper of her own. Two Days after, two of the Phyſicians began to grow unreſolved about their former Opinion, deſired three others might be added to the Conſult, and farther Enquiry poſtpon'd till the next Day. Thus April 1, 1599, being the Day for the Criſis, Father Seraphin came on again with his Exorciſms, and Martha pretending herſelf attack'd, exerted, and made twice as many Convulſions as before: She rolled her Eyes, hung out her Tongue, and ſhaked almoſt in every Pore; and when theſe Words of S. John were read, Et homo factus eſt, And the Word was made Fleſh, ſhe tumbled down, and then rolled, leapt, and bounced from the Altar to the Chappel-Door. Upon this, the Exorciſt ſpoke aloud, that if any Perſon continued ſtill to diſbelieve the Poſſeſſion, his way was to ſhew his Courage, and try if he could maſter the Devils. Upon this, Mareſcot, one of the five Phyſicians, accepted the Challenge, and immediately making up to Martha, took her by the Throat, and ordered her to be quiet. She reſigned to his Order; but to keep the Trick covered, pretended the Devil had left her; which Excuſe was farther confirmed by Father Seraphin. On the other ſide, Mareſcot averr'd that 'twas himſelf who had expelled the Devil. The Biſhop thought fit to proceed in the Exorciſms, which made no Alteration in Martha: For perceiving Mareſcot ready to take her by the Collar, ſhe only ſaid, that this Doctor, Riolan, and Hautin (two other Phyſicians) would do well to mind their Practice; but when ſhe underſtood they were gone away, ſhe threw herſelf down with a violent Motion, and play'd the Devil to purpoſe. Upon this, theſe Doctors appeared again, laid the Storm in her Limbs, and made her compoſed immediately. They likewiſe averr'd to Father Seraphin, that there was nothing Preternatural in the Caſe, order'd the Girl not to abuſe the People any longer, and threaten'd her with the Rack: However, time was taken to deliberate and examine farther; and upon Martha's being queſtion'd in Greek and Latin, and confeſſing ſhe did not underſtand thoſe Languages, all of them, excepting one Duret, concluded her not poſſeſs'd. However, ſome People being of a different Opinion, another Sett of Phyſicians was call'd in, and the firſt diſcharged: And now Father Seraphin, with another of his Fraternity, an Engliſhman, played their Exorciſms; and Martha, beſides her uſual Agitations, anſwer'd in French to ſome Queſtions put to her in Greek and Engliſh. Upon this, the Phyſicians declar'd ſhe was really poſſeſs'd, and diſputed learnedly upon the Caſe. Mareſcot, on the other hand, diſprov'd their Reaſons for Poſſeſſion. The Doctors thus happening to differ, made the Town divide upon the Queſtion. Now there being ſome Reaſon to apprehend this Maid might have dangerous Anſwers contrived into her, and that conſidering a great many were diſguſted with the Edict for Toleration to the Hugonots, a Sedition might be raiſed. To guard againſt this Conſequence, King Henry IV. was adviſed to take ſome Order about the Matter. The King cloſed with the Suggeſtion, and commanded the Parliament of Paris to make uſe of their Authority: The Parliament ordered Martha to be ſeized and confined. They kept her about ſix Weeks in Priſon, and during this time had ſeveral eminent Phyſicians to ſee her, who all declar'd they could diſcover nothing in her above the Force of Nature. In the mean time, the Pulpits took extravagant Liberty; they declaimed loudly againſt theſe Proceedings, and endeavoured to make the People believe the Privileges of the Church were ſtruck at; and that they were Hereticks who ſuggeſted this Proſecution. Andrew du Val, a Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Archange du Puy, were the moſt flaming Incendiaries upon this Occaſion. The Parliament had much ado to deal with Archange; but at laſt they made him come to: And May 24, 1599, order'd the Prevot or Mayor to ſend James Broſſier and his three Daughters to Romorantin, commanding their Father not to let his Daughter Martha ſtir abroad without Leave from the Judge, under the Penalty of Corporal Puniſhment. And thus, as Du Cheſne expreſſes it, Le Diable fut condemné par Arrêt, The Devil was caſt, and Judgment was given againſt him by the Parliament. To conclude, Martha and her Father having made a great deal of Noiſe, travelled as far as Rome; where being deſerted and diſcountenanced by every body, they were glad to take up in an Hoſpital. * Du Cheſne, Antiq. des Villes de France. Mezerai, Hiſtoire de France ſous Henri IV. Lettres du Cardinal d'Oſſat. Bayle Diction. Critique. *

BRUOMAT, which Ptolomy calls Brocomagum, a Town in Germany, two Leagues below Strasburg: 'Twas built by the old Germans, taken by Julian the Apoſtates and afterwards demoliſh'd by Attila, who gain'd a great Victory there. It ſtands upon the River Sorne, and belongs to the Count of Hanoue-Leichtenburg. * Adrian, Valeſius, Notit. Galliæ.

*BUCHANAN, (George) To the Relation of this Gentleman's Life, in Morery Vol. I. may be added ſomething by way of Character, concerning the Author and his Works. Buchanan had a more than ordinary Genius for the Belles Lettres, and particularly for Poetry: His Hiſtory is excellent Latin; but Truth, which is a neceſſary Qualification for an Hiſtorian, is not always taken care of. He ſeems to have written with Prejudice and Partiality: His Satyr is too keen, and comes up too often; whereas an Hiſtorian ſhould keep cloſe to Matter of Fact, ſtand clear of Invectives, and not write like a Perſon pre-engaged. This Author's Works are commonly put under three Diviſions: Under the firſt, we have the Poetical Paraphraſe of David's Pſalms; the Tragedy of Jephthah, or the Vow; and that of S. John Baptiſt, or of Calumny. The ſecond takes in the long Satyr againſt the Cordeliers, entituled, Franciſcanus; together with the libelling Pieces, call'd Fratres Fraterrimi; a Book of Elegies; one of Silvæ, another of Hendecaſyllables; one of Jambicks, three of Epigrams, one of Miſcellanies, and five of the Sphere. The third Diviſion has nothing more than two Latin Tragedies, Medea and Alceſtes, tranſlated from Euripides. His moſt commendable Performance is his Paraphraſe upon the Pſalms: 'Twas made when he was impriſon'd in a Monaſtery in Portugal. Here he has both expreſs'd the Senſe well, and given a handſome Turn to the Verſification: His Verſes are of different Kinds, as the Subject ſeem'd to require. No Writer, who has attempted a Poetical Tranſlation of the Pſalms, has come up to Buchanan. His Thoughts are bright and ſolid, his Expreſſion polite, and his Cadence ſtrong and agreeable. His Tragedy of Jephthah, which is an Original, falls ſhort of Exactneſs. He has broke through the Rules of Dramatick Poetry; and whereas the Unity of Time allows no more than twenty four Hours, his Jephthah is at leaſt two Months long. The Style, it muſt be confeſs'd, is beautiful enough; but then 'tis moſtly in the Dreſs of a Comedy, whereas it ought to have been more rais'd, paſſionate, and affecting. The Poem upon the Sphere, in five Books, is valuable in its kind; but then here his Muſe does not fly an equal Pitch: She towers ſometimes, and almoſt flaps and flutters at another. His Odes are likewiſe not uniformly penn'd, nor equally diverting: Some of them are negligently thrown out, and others are nicely finiſh'd, and worthy the Age of Auguſtus. His Epigrams are commonly barren of Senſe, but Muſical enough in the Cadence. His Franciſcanus and his Fratres Fraterrimi have Race and Spirit enough; but then the Satyr is cruelly rough, and puſh'd to Extremity againſt the Monks and Church of Rome. Some of his Hendecaſyllables are too much tinged with this Colour; neither do they all ſtand clear of Indecencies. There is a good Edition of all Buchanan's Works printed at Leyden by Elzevir in 1628. * Geogr. Buchan. in vita ſua à ſe conſcripta biennio ante obitum præfix. operib. Prima collectio Scaliger. Joſeph. Scalig. p. 37. ubi & lacteæ venæ parentem cultiſſimum appellat Buchan. Theod. Beza in Iconib. & in Elench. Script. in Biblioth. Sacr. per Crow. Campden. Barclay. Ger. Joh. Voſſius, Lib. 2. Inſtitut. Poet. pag. 13. & pag. 72. Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 76. Rapin, Reflexion. Gener. ſur la Poëtiq. Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes Modernes, Tom. 7. &c.

BUCOLICKS, or Paſtoral Poetry, that is, Poems made upon the Buſineſs and Diverſions of Shepherds: 'Tis ſaid this ſort of Poetry was invented when Greece was harraſs'd by the Perſians: For the Ceremonies of Diana, ſurnam'd Cariatis, practis'd by young unmarried Women, being diſuſed by the Diſturbance of the Times, ſome Country-People, to keep up ſomething of Solemnity, came to Diana's Temple, and made Ballads in Praiſe of their Goddeſs. This Diverſion being well receiv'd, either upon the Score of the Feſtival, or for the Cadence and Tune of the Song, made this caſual Fancy grow up to a Cuſtom. This ſort of Poetry is very ancient, and reaches to the higheſt Antiquity. 'Tis ſuppoſed to have been firſt thought of in Sicily, and that it made Part of the Shepherds and Shepherdeſſes Entertainment; but let the firſt Scene be laid where it will, 'twas certainly the Product of Love and Lazineſs. Afterwards this ruſtick Amuſement was form'd under Rules, and poliſh'd to ſomething of an Art. Care of keeping the Flock, the natural Beauty of the Fields and Woods, and the Pleaſures of a Country Life, were the uſual Subjects. Theocritus, Moſcus, and Bion, who wrote in Greek, are excellent Bucolique Poets. Amongſt the Latins, Virgil is much the beſt: He has not only borrow'd ſeveral beautiful Thoughts from Theocritus, but very much improv'd upon him. His Eclogues were ſo much valued in his own time, that the Author of his Life reports them ſung at Rome upon the Stage by the beſt Muſicians. To do the Poet Juſtice, there is ſomething not eaſily expreſs'd, ſo ſweet and ſo natural in his Paſtorals, that nothing of that kind either equals or comes near it. * Scaliger, Poëtic. Lib. 1. cap. 4. Salmaſius, in Solin. pag. 861, & 867.

* BUDA, in Latin Aquineum, is at preſent in a deplorable Condition: 'Tis ruined almoſt out of Knowledge, though coming on by ſlow degrees to Reparation. It ſtands in the County of Petits, and belongs to the Emperor as King of Hungary. By the Treaty of Carlowitz in 1699, the Grand Seignior reſign'd all Pretenſions to this Town and its Dependencies. 'Twas formerly the Reſidence of a Turkiſh Beglerbeg, and the Capital of his Government: 'Tis eleven German Miles from Alba Regalis, and the ſame Diſtance from Gran, which three Towns make a Triangle. Buda is thirty two German Miles from Vienna, and forty from Cracovia. There is a Place near Buda called Sicambri, where the Ruins of the old Sicambria are to be ſeen: This Town was built by a Legion of the Sicambri, ſettled there by the Emperor Valentinian. Baudrand is of Opinion, that it was demoliſhed by Attila King of the Huns; and that Buda, Attila's Brother, left his Name upon the Town of Buda, formerly called Aquineum Burſa, or Solva. * Bourgon, Geogr. Hiſtor. Mem. des Troubles de Hong. Tom. 5.

BUDWEIS, a large and ſtrong Town in Bohemia: It lies within the Circle of Bechin upon Muldaw, ſix or ſeven Leagues from the Town Tabor, and about twenty from Prague. * Maty, Diction.

* BULLEN. (Anne) For One thouſand five hundred fifty, in Morery Vol. I. read One thouſand five hundred thirty two.

* BURGOS, in Latin Bravum, or Bracelum, afterwards called Burgi: It ſtands upon the River Arlança, and is an Archbiſhop's See in Old Caſtile: 'Tis twelve Leagues from Palencia, ſixteen from Valladolid, and thirty five from Madrid. The Auguſtinian Monks of this Town pretend they have a Crucifix made by Nicodemus, mention'd in S. John: And ſome are ſo fanciful as to believe that was brought them from Heaven. There is a Royal Hoſpital at Burgos, endowed with eight thouſand Livres per Ann. and 'tis ſaid the Archbiſhoprick is worth a hundred and twenty thouſand. There is a famous Monaſtery in the Suburbs for a hundred and fifty Nuns, who are all either Princeſſes or great Lords Daughters. This Nunnery has ſeventeen others within its Juriſdiction; to which may be reckon'd fourteen conſiderable Towns, and fifty Villages: The Magiſtrates and Offices belonging to all theſe Places are choſen and diſpoſed of by the Abbeſs. S. Aleaume, or S. Eleſmes died in this Town in 1100, and was afterwards pitch'd on by the Burghers for their Patron or Guardian Saint. * Baillet, vies des Saints, au 30. Juin.

BUZANVAL, (Nicolas Choart de) Biſhop of Beauvais, born at Paris in 1611: He was firſt Counſellor in the Parliament of Bretagne, afterwards one of the great Council, then Maſter of Requeſts, Privy Counſellor, and Ambaſſador in Swiſſerland: He acquitted himſelf to Commendation in all theſe Employments, and at laſt, upon the Death of his Uncle Auguſtin Potier, Biſhop of Beavais, and Chief Almoner to the Queen Dowager, Lewis XIV.'s Mother, and Regent of France, he was nominated to that See. Having lived a Secular Life, he retir'd to the Prieſts of the Oratory of S. Magloire, to prepare himſelf for his Conſecration: He founded a great many Hoſpitals in his Dioceſe, of which the chief was that at Beauvais. He made ſeveral new Regulations for the Inſtruction of his People, and the reſtoring the ancient Diſcipline. He maintain'd a Seminary at his own Expence, where ſeveral young Clergy were provided for, and directed in their Studies for managing Parochial Cures. He likewiſe founded a Seminary for the Education of Children, pick'd out of ſeveral Parts of his Dioceſe. His Deſign was to improve their Underſtanding, and form their Morals at the ſame time, to make them Proficients in Secular and Eccleſiaſtical Learning; and all this in order to qualify them for the Inſtruction of other People. This Prelate being deeply engag'd in the Sentiments of the Janſeniſts, did not paſs his time altogether undiſturb'd: He was one of the four famous French Biſhops who refuſed to ſign the Formulary in the Terms required by the Courts of Rome and France. The three others were Nicolas Pavillon Biſhop of Alet, Stephen Caulet Biſhop of Pamiers, and Henry Arnold Biſhop of Angers: Theſe four agreed unanimouſly in Defence of S. Auguſtin's Doctrine upon the Subject of Grace. Their Declaration in diſtinguiſhing Fact from Right, with reſpect to the Conſtitution of Alexander VII. was what they would not depart from. By this Diſtinction the Janſeniſts pretend they carried the Cauſe, and ſecur'd their Opinions; but their Adverſaries on the other ſide will have it, that they were forced to ſubmit with the Allowance of ſome little Softnings; which Modifications did not hinder the Court of Rome from gaining their Point. The Reader, for farther Information, may conſult the Hiſtory of the Five Propoſitions by Janſenius, printed at Liege by Daniel Mournal in 1699. The Biſhop of Beauvais died in 1679, ſixty eight Years of Age. * Memoires du Tems.

CABAS-

C.

CABASSUTIUS, (John) Prieſt of the Oratory, born in Provence, and dying in the latter end of the Seventeenth Century: He was a very exemplary Perſon for Humility, Retirement, Diſintereſtedneſs, and Self-Denial. Cardinal Grimaldi carried him to Rome, and made him the Director of his Conſcience: He had the Reputation of a very able and honeſt Caſuiſt, and was very affable and eaſy of Acceſs to Perſons of the meaneſt Condition. His Book of the Theory and Practice of the Canon Law in Foro Conſcientiæ, and in Foro Contentioſo, &c. was printed at Lyons in 1675; and his Notitia Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ, Conciliorum & Canonum, &c. was printed in Folio in 1681. Theſe two Performances in Latin are very ſerviceable for Churchmen, and have gone through ſeveral Editions; though after all, it muſt be ſaid there are ſeveral Principles laid down, which contradict the Maxims and Uſages of the French Church. Cabaſſutius likewiſe wrote a Tract upon Uſury, printed at Aix, and left Reſolutions upon ſeveral Queſtions under the Title of Horæ Subſicivæ. * M. Du Pin N. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

CABUS, called Schams al Maâla, that is to ſay, the Sun in his Apogæum, was the Son of Vaſchmegheir. Vaſchmegheir pretended a Deſcent from Raaſch, Governor of the Province of Ghilan, when Kai Koſchnu, Prince of the Dynaſty of the Cajanides, reigned in Perſia. Vaſchmegheir came to the Court of Nuh, Son of Naſſer, Sultan of the Dynaſty of the Samarides, in the Year of the Hegyra 342, that is, A. D. 943. And here being taken Notice of for a Perſon of Courage and Conduct, he was truſted with the Command of an Army, with which the Campagne following he conquer'd the Province of Giorgion. After Vaſchmegheir's Death, his eldeſt Son ſucceeded him in his Conqueſts, and reigned to the Year of the Hegyra 366. Upon this Prince's Demiſe, Cabus, his younger Brother, was the next, and the Perſon at the Head of this Article. This Cabus was a Prince of great Reputation upon the ſcore of his Qualifications for Government. His Temper was noble and benign; he was very Knowing, and wrote with unuſual Politeneſs; but notwithſtanding theſe fine Qualities, he proved ſufficiently unfortunate; for having afforded Shelter to Fakreddulat, Prince of the Family of the Buides, expell'd his Dominions by his Brother Muiaeddulat, this laſt, A. D. 981, march'd his Army into Giorgian, and forced Cabus to retire with Fakreddulat into Khoraſſan, where he ſtayed near thirty Years in an exil'd and unfurniſhed Condition: But that which threw new Anguiſh into his Circumſtances, was the ill Uſage he received from Fakreddulat. For this Fakreddulat having recovered his own Territories upon his Brother's Death, was ſo far from reſtoring Cabus, that he ſeized his Dominions; ſo that in ſhort Cabus was forced to wait Fakreddulat's Death before he could recover. He happen'd to ſurvive this ungrateful Prince, and in the 387th of the Hegyra, that is, A. D. 997, the Subjects of Giorgian and Mazandran owned Cabus for their lawful Sovereign. Having now recover'd his Dominions, he quickly enlarged them with the Conqueſt of two Provinces, Ghilan and Tabareſtan; but theſe Succeſſes were but ſhort-liv'd. The Severity, as ſome of the Subjects called it, of Cabus's Adminiſtration, drew an Odium upon him. The great Men living under Reſtraint, and not ſuffered to break the Laws at Pleaſure, engaged in a Plot, ſeized Cabus, and ſent to Manugeher, his Son, to acquaint him they were ready to ſet him upon his Father's Throne; and that in caſe he refuſed the Overture, they would make it to another. Manugeher finding himſelf thus preſs'd, accepted the Offer: But as ſoon as he was recognized and proclaimed Sultan, he went to Baſtham, where his Father was kept Priſoner, threw himſelf at his Feet, aſſur'd him of his Duty and Allegiance; acquainting him withal, that if he pleas'd to command him, he was ready to venture his Life to ſuppreſs the Rebellion and reſtore his Father. Cabus, though much ſatisfy'd with his Son's Submiſſion, made this Anſwer; I deſign, ſays he, to have nothing more to do with the World, and therefore I reſign my Authority, and put my Subjects into your Hands. This was a noble Inſtance of Juſtice and Natural Affection, and is ſeldom parallel'd even by thoſe who profeſs Chriſtianity. As for Cabus, he minded nothing but Devotion: However, his Enemies apprehending he might one Day or other take his Revenge, diſpatch'd him by Poiſon. He was a Learned Prince, and wrote ſeveral Letters and Pieces of Poetry very much valued. He careſs'd Avicenna, and preſented him richly for curing his Nephew of a ſtrong and dangerous Fit of Love. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

CACALLA, or Cazalba, a Town in Andaluſia in Spain, upon the Confines of the Kingdom of Leon, twelve Leagues from Seville, and fourteen from Ecya. * Baudrand.

CADALOUS, or Cadalus, Biſhop of Parma, was choſen Pope in the Year 1061 by the Emperor Henry IV.'s Party: He held up a Competition againſt Alexander II. promoted to the See of Rome by the Cardinals upon the Death of Nicolas II. Cadalous was recogniz'd under the Name of Honorius II. by the Biſhops and Princes on this ſide the Alps. He march'd to Rome with an Army to put him in Poſſeſſion; but Godfrey Marquis of Tuſcany, and his Lady Mathildis, who were in Alexander's Intereſt, repulſed his Troops, and forc'd him to retreat to Parma. Being baffled in this firſt Attempt, he got reinforced, made himſelf Maſter of Part of Rome, and ſeized S. Peter's Church; but notwithſtanding this Advantage, he was forc'd to quit the Town, his Troops were much broken and diſorder'd, and he was near being taken Priſoner: In ſhort, he was forced to ſhut himſelf up in S. Angelo's Caſtle, and obliged to bribe the Beſiegers very high to connive at his Eſcape. Some time after, a Council was held at Mantua, to decide the Controverſy between Alexander and Cadalous; and here this latter, it ſeems, made a faint Defence of his Title and withdrew. Upon this, Alexander was own'd rightful Pope, but obliged at the ſame time to pardon Cadalous: This Council was held in 1064. Cadalous afterwards died in a very mean Condition; but held up his Title of Pope to the laſt. * Leo Oſtienſis, Lib. 3. Cap. 20. Baronius Annal. A. C. 1061, 1062, 1064.

CADEE, or the League of the Houſe of God; in Latin Caſæ Dei Fœdus, Fœdus Cathedrale: 'Tis one of the three Leagues which make the Republick of the the Griſons: 'Tis likewiſe the largeſt and ſtrongeſt of the three. It takes in the Biſhoprick of Coire, the large Vale of Engadine, and that of Bregaill or Pregel. This Country has eleven great Communities, or twenty one little ones within its Circuit: Of all theſe, there are only two that ſpeak High-Dutch: The Language of the reſt is what they call Rhetic, or a broken Italian. The Proteſtant Religion is the Belief of the Government, which has continued an Alliance with ſeven of the Swiſs Cantons ever ſince the Year 1498. The Rivers Adda and the Inn riſe in the Territories of this League, of which the chief Towns are Coire and Furſtenauw. * Maty, Diction.

CAIEM, Bemrillah, (Abulbaca Hamzah, Son of Alf Motavakel) fourteenth Caliph of the Family of the Abaſſides in Egypt; he ſucceeded his Brother Moſtacfi A. D. 1451. Four Years after, he was diſpoſſeſs'd by Malec al Aſchraf Inal, twelfth Sultan of the Dynaſty of the Circaſſian Mamaluks. The Manner of doing it was this: The Sultan ſuſpecting the Caliph (who was but a Spiritual Sovereign) of ſome Practice againſt the State, order'd him to appear before him, reproach'd him for his Ambition; for it ſeems he was charg'd with graſping at the Scepter, and ſetting the Sultan aſide. Caiem being apprehenſive this Prince would throw him out of his Poſt, made this lively Declaration; I make it my Choice, ſays he, to renounce my Caliphat; but at the ſame time I pronounce you have forfeited the Quality of Sultan. The Caliph had no ſooner ſpoken theſe Words, but his Reſignation was accepted, the Court acquainting him at the ſame time, that having firſt ſtript himſelf of his Authority, he had no Power to exert it upon the Sultan. Being thus depoſed, he was guarded off to Alexandria, and kept Priſoner there till his Death, which happened in the Year of the Hegyra 863, and of our Lord 1458. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

*CAIET, or Cayet, (Peter Victor Palma) born at Montrichar in Touraine, of a Proteſtant Peaſant's Family. By the Contribution of a Gentleman in the Country, he was bred to Learning, ſtudied Divinity, took pretended Orders from the Hugonots, and preached at Poitiers in 1582; but, 'twas not long before Caiet quitted his Church, appeared at Court, and got himſelf made Chaplain to Madam Katharine, Siſter to the King of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV. of France. About two Years forward, when this Prince turn'd Roman Catholick, Caiet was charged with the Practice of Magick, and with writing a ſcandalous Book; and Articles being examined by a Proteſtant Synod, he was degraded there. 'Tis probable the Accuſation might paſs the better, by their ſuſpecting he was inclined to quit their Communion: In ſhort, he declared himſelf a Papiſt, and made a ſolemn Abjuration at Paris in 1595, and received a Congratulatory Brief from Pope Clement VIII. in 1596. He ſtudied in the College of Navarre, received Prieſts Orders, and the Degree of Doctor in Divinity in 1600: He was made King's Hebrew Profeſſor, and died in 1610. He wrote ſeveral Controverſial Pieces againſt the French Proteſtants. Soon after he went off from their Communion, he publiſhed his Motives for leaving them; to which one Rotan, a Miniſter, returned an Anſwer in 1596. The ſame Year, Caiet publiſhed a Chriſtian Remonſtrance, as he called it, to the Proteſtant Nobleſs of France; a Tract upon the Holy Euchariſt; a Diſcourſe entituled, The true Underſtanding of the Sacrifice of the Maſs; an Advertiſement touching Matters diſputed in Religion, and pointing at an Expedient for Accommodation. In the Year 1597, he publiſhed a Tract, in which he endeavours to make Calvin confute himſelf; and another Treatiſe of the Church, and of the Direct and Legitimate Succeſſion of the Hierarchy. In 1602, he had a Conference with Du Moulin, a French Proteſtant Miniſter, publiſhed three Papers upon the Diſpute, and a Diſcourſe upon Purgatory, againſt Du Moulin. In 1603, he wrote a Treatiſe upon the Sacrifice of the Maſs: And after having printed a great deal in Polemick Divinity, he undertook the Hiſtory of his own Time. He had in 1598, drawn up a Relation of the War between the Turks and Chriſtians in Hungary, from 1597 to the Spring 1598. In 1605, he publiſhed his Septennary Chronology, beginning at the Peace made at Vervins in 1598. This Work was ſo well received, that ſome Court-Lords of the firſt Quality engaged him to add to his Hiſtory of the Peace, a Narrative of the War carried on nine Years by K. Henry IV. from his coming to the Crown in 1589, to the Peace at Vervins: This he perform'd in three Tomes, in his Novennary Chronology, printed at Paris in 1608. And here, before he comes to the Reign of King Henry IV. he makes an Abridgment of the moſt conſiderable Occurrences, occaſioned by the League, to the Death of King Henry III. He likewiſe wrote two other Books, one of them entituled, Concilium Pium de Componendo Religionis diſſidio; and the other, Remede aux Diſſolutions Publiques, preſented to the Gentlemen of the Parliament. He likewiſe wrote a Book in Latin for learning the four principal Oriental Languages, printed at Paris in 1596. * J. de Toulouſe, Antiquit. Abbat. S. Victor. Maimbourg's Hiſtory of the League. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII. See Cahier, Morery Vol. I.

CAJETAN, (Conſtantine) a Benedictine Abbot of S. Baronte, and born at Syracuſe: He flouriſhed in the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, to 1650; when he died at eighty five Years of Age. He was very warmly affected for the Reputation of his Order, and thought himſelf obliged in Honour to tranſplant ſome great Men into it, who were never reckoned there before. He begins with Amalarius Fortunatus, and publiſhed a Book at Rome in 1612, to prove him of the Order of S. Bennet. In 1618, he wrote a Diſcourſe to bring Pope Gregory the Great into the ſame Society: This Tract was confuted by Gallonius, or rather Baronius, under the Name of Gallonius. Cajetan replied to this Adverſary in 1620; and in 1627, he wrote a Piece, to ſhew that S. Columbanus govern'd his Practice by S. Bennet's Rule. He wrote ſeveral Diſcourſes to prove Thomas à Kempis's Book, of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, was wrote by a Benedictine Abbot called Geſſen. To conclude with him, he publiſhed a Book at Rome in 1641, in which he aſſerts Ignatius Loyola was inſtructed by the Benedictines, and that his Book of Exerciſes was written by Garcias Ciſneros, Abbot of Montſerrat. De Religioſa Sancti Ignatii ſive Enneconis fundatoris Societatis Jeſu, per Patres Benedictinos Inſtitutione; deque libello exercitiorum ejuſdem ab exercitatorio venerabilis ſervi Dei Garciæ Ciſnerci Abbatis Montis-ſerrati, magna ex parte deſumpti, Conſtantini Abbatis Cajetani vindicis Benedictini, Libri duo. M. du Pin, Biblioth. des Auters Eccleſiaſt. XVII. Siecle.*

*CAEN upon Orme. For Henry II. eſtabliſh'd a Mint-Chamber in 1430, Morery Vol. I. read 1550.

CAINITES, a Sect of the Gnoſtick Hereticks in the Second Century, ſo called from Cain, for whoſe Memory they had a great Honour. They are ſaid to have ſucceeded the Nicolaitans; though it's more probable the Nicolaitan Sect came into that of the Cainites, as Tertullian obſerves in his Book of Preſcriptions. They were a Branch of the Gnoſticks; but according to Irenæus, they ſet up before the Valentinians, though Epiphanius and Theodorit make them a Spawn of that Hereſy; they hold two diſtinct Powers or Principles, the uppermoſt of which they call Sophia, or Wiſdom; and the other, inferior in Nature, or poſterior in Being, they pretend made the World: They affirm, Cain, Eſau, Corah, the Sodomites, and all other Criminals of this Nature: Theſe, I ſay, they affirm, were related to the ſuperior Principle; and that for this Reaſon they have been attack'd and harraſs'd by him that created this World; who notwthſtanding could do them no conſiderable Diſſervice, becauſe they lay concealed by retiring into the Sovereign Æon. That Judas being particularly acquainted how things had paſs'd, and let into the Myſtery of the Scheme, betray'd our Saviour, to prevent a dangerous Revolution in the Creation: And thus they either believed our Saviour was juſtly put into Pilate's Hands by Judas, becauſe he endeavour'd to overthrow the true Doctrine; or elſe they concluded, that all the Power of the Creator would be ruined by our Saviour's Death. The Book this Sect relied on moſt, was the Goſpel of Judas. S. Irenæus reports, they had ſeveral other Writings to inſtruct them how to deſtroy the Creator's Works, that is, how to commit all manner of Villany. * Irenæus. Epiphan. in Hæreſ. Theodorit. Fabul. Hæret. &c.

*CAIRO: The Chronological Miſtake of three hundred and ſeventy Years, in Morery Vol. I. corrected under Mammalucks. Ibid.

CAIUS, a Proper Name. Amongſt the Romans, Caius and Caia were uſed to diſtinguiſh the two Sexes, and the Letter C ſtanding forward and right, ſignifies Caius; and the ſame Ↄ turned backward means Caia. Quintillian reports, that in Matrimonial Contracts, and Feſtival Solemnities, the old Romans uſed to mention Caius and Caia as ſtanding upon a Level; which Remark is confirm'd by Plutarch, where he puts the Queſtion, Why thoſe who convey the Bride to her Huſband's Houſe, make her ſpeak theſe Words, Ubi tu Caius, ego Caia? To which he anſwers, This Sentence is ſpoken by the new-married Woman, to ſhew ſhe engages upon Terms of Equality, and that ſhe was to have her Share in the Eſtate and Government of the Family; and that where Caius was Maſter, Caia ought to be Miſtreſs: And thus theſe Words, Ubi tu Caius, ego Caia, carry the ſame Senſe with Ubi tu Dominus eris & Pater familiæ, Ego Domina ero & Mater Familiæ. * Quintillian, Lib. 1. Inſtitut. Plutarch.

*CAIUS, a Prieſt of the Church of Rome, flouriſh'd in the times of the Popes Zepherinus and Victor, that is, in the Reigns of Severus and Antoninus Caracalla: He had a Conference at Rome with the famous Montaniſt Proclus, which he afterwards digeſted in a Dialogue. Euſebius ſaw this Conference, and mentions it in three Places in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. In his Firſt Book, Cap. 25, he cites a Paſſage out of it, whence it appears that the Graves of S. Peter and S. Paul were ſeen at Rome when this Author lived. Euſebius, in his Second Book above-mentioned, Cap. 28. mentions Caius's attacking Cerinthus's Opinion of our Saviour's Reign upon Earth; through the whole Courſe of which Period, this Heretick expected Men ſhould be entertain'd with all the Satisfactions of the Animal Life. In his third Book, Cap. 20. Euſebius remarks, that where Caius cenſures the Boldneſs of thoſe Hereticks who ſtuff the Canon with Apocryphal Books, he mentions but thirteen Epiſtles written by S. Paul, not reckoning that to the Hebrews to this Apoſtle. The ſame Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorian, in his Third Book, Cap. 31. cites ſome Paſſages from the Dialogue above-mentioned, touching Philip the Dea-con's Daughters. Photius takes Notice of three other Tracts of Caius; the firſt, againſt the Hereſy of Artemon, who ſunk our Saviour to a mere Man; the ſecond, entituled, the little Labyrinth; and the third, of the Univerſe, which in Photius's Time was reckon'd to Joſephus. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Cap. 59. Photius. Cod. 48. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. &c.

con's

CALABRA, Curia, a Court built by Romulus, according to Varro, upon Mount Palatine, near that Prince's Houſe; others ſay, it ſtood near the Capitol: 'Twas called Calabra, from the Latin Calare, which ſignifies to ſummon; becauſe Romulus deſigned this Place for a Publick Meeting. Afterwards the Rex Sacrorum called the Senate and People hither to give them Notice of the Feſtivals and Sacrifices. By the way, they had no Rex Sacrorum till after the Expulſion of the Tarquins: This Dignity was inſtituted on purpoſe to repreſent the King's Office in Matters of Religion, ne Sacra Regiæ vicis extinguerentur; to prevent the Sacerdotal Function executed by their Kings from being diſuſed. * Livy, Dion. Halicarnaſ. Macrob. Saturnal. Lib. 1. Feſtus.

CALAJATE, a Town of Arabia the Happy, in Aſia: It ſtands in the Country of Oman, upon the Gulph of Ormus, between the Town of Maſcat and the Cape of Raz-al-gate, thirty five Leagues from the firſt, and thirty from the other. * Maty, Diction.

CALAMO, formerly called Claros: 'Tis a ſmall Iſland in the Archipelago, between Lero and Lango. 'Tis about fourteen Leagues in Circumference, and affords nothing remarkable, excepting a Town of the ſame Name. * Maty, Diction.

CALAPATE, a Town of the Indian Peninſula on this ſide the Ganges: It ſtands in the Kingdom of Biſnager, upon the Coaſt of Coromandel, to the South of S. Thomas. 'Tis probable, it may be the Chaberis of Ptolomy. * Maty, Diction.

CALEMBERG, a Country and Caſtle in Germany, in Lower Saxony, and within the Duchy of Brunſwick: It lies along the Weſer, between Hanover, Cotinghen, and Hamelen. The Caſtle is a German Mile from Hildeſheim, and two from Hanover, to the South: The chief Towns of the Country are, Gottinghen, Hamelen, Hanover, and Neuſtadt, with their Dependencies. * Bertius. Baudrand.

CALFORDE, or Calvord, a ſtrong Place in the Duchy of Brunſwick in Lower Saxony: It ſtands within the Principality of Wolfembuttel, about fourteen Leagues from the Town of that Name, and at the ſame Diſtance from Brunſwick and Havelberg. * Maty, Diction.

* CALIFORNIA, a Peninſula in Northern America, upon the South Sea: It lies to the Weſt of New Mexico, from whence 'tis parted only by the River Colorado. This Diſcovery was made by Father Kino, a German Jeſuit. Calefornia was firſt diſcovered by Ferdinand Cortez, in 1535; ſince his time the Spaniards have only cruized upon the Weſtern Coaſt; but very little upon the Eaſtern. The whole Peninſula, as Baudrand relates, has never a Town; there is only a Spaniſh Plantation lately ſettled in the Southern Part over-againſt New Spain. In Summer time California is exceſſively hot upon the Coaſt, with very little Rain; but the Climate is more temperate upwards in the Country. When the Seaſon for Rain is over, the Dew falls plentifully every Morning; and from the Beginning of April to the Beginning of June the Dew is mix'd with a ſort of Manna, which dries to a Conſiſtence upon the Leaves of Reeds: It has the full Sweetneſs, though not the Whiteneſs of Sugar. The Country affords a great deal of excellent Paſture, the Water is very good, and the Rivers well ſtored with Fiſh: The Fruit-Trees are very fine, and all the Pulſe and Grain ſown there yields a plentiful Product: They have two ſorts of wild Cattle, unknown in Europe, which are delicate Meat. Almoſt all the Fowls ſeen in Spain and Mexico may be found in California. They have likewiſe Salt-Pits, affording good Salt, both for Colour and Hardneſs. The Sea-Fiſh there are good, and plentifully furniſhed; but the Pearl-fiſhing is that which makes the Coaſt particularly famous.

The Californians have no Houſes, the Shades of Trees ſkreen them from the Sun in the Day-time, and they get Heaps of Leaves for Shelter and Softneſs in the Night. During the Winter they keep cloſe in Caves, where a great many lodge together: The Men go ſtark-naked; they have only a Fillet of fine Cloth bound about their Head; and for Ornament they wear a Necklace, and ſometimes a Bracelet of Nacris of Pearl, handſomely enough work'd. Their Arms are Bows and Arrows, with a Javelin, which they commonly carry in their Hand. The Women are ſomewhat more modeſtly dreſs'd: They wear an Apron of Reeds twiſted together, like the fineſt Mats: They cover their Shoulders with Skins, and bind their Heads like the Men with the fineſt Reeds. They likewiſe dreſs with Necklaces and Bracelets: Spinning is the uſual Buſineſs both for Men and Women. The Californians are under no Form of Government, or regulated Worſhip: 'Tis obſerved however, that they pay their Devotion to the Moon, and cut their Hair in reſpect to that Planet. Every Family has an entire Legiſlature, and governs at Diſcretion. This Independency of ſmall Numbers, and Variety of Laws, occaſions Miſunderſtandings, and frequent Wars amongſt them. * Lettres édifiantes & curieuſes des Miſſionaires Jeſuites. V. Recueil 1705.

* CALLIMACHUS, a famous Greek Poet: His Epigrams and Hymns have been ſome Years ſince publiſhed by Mademoiſelle Dacier: This Gentlewoman gives him the Character of the moſt elegant and polite Poet of all Greece. Her Father M. le Fevre was of the ſame Opinion, and obſerves that Catullus and Propertius have imitated this Author very cloſe, and ſometimes even tranſlated him. Not only Quintilian, among the Ancients, but Philip Beroaldus upon Propertius, and John Gerard Voſſius in his Inſtitutio Poetica, ſet him in the firſt Claſs of Elegiack Poets among the Greeks: Beſides his Talent this way, he was an excellent Critick, and wrote ſeveral Tracts upon this Subject, loſt long ſince. However, Joſeph Scaliger cenſures him for making uſe of obſcure and antiquated Language. This Callimachus was Library-Keeper to King Ptolomy at Alexandria, and as M. Baillet obſerves, furniſhed eight hundred Diſcourſes for that learned Repoſitory. * Baillet Tom. I. des Jugemens des Savans, prejugé de la multitude des Livres. Baillet, Jugemens des Sav. ſur les Poëtes Grecs. Tom. 5. p. 251. Joan. Jonſius Holſat. de Hiſt. Philoſoph. Lexicon Suid.

* CALLISTUS I. Pope of Rome, Optatus and S. Auguſtin call him Calixtus: Thoſe who make him a Roman go upon no ancient Authority: And as for the Circumſtances both of his Life and Death, they are very uncertain. There is no good Proof of his building a Church in the Place which the Emperor Alexander Severus awarded to the Chriſtians. That which is reported of the Church-yard, or Burying-place, he is ſaid to have made in the Via Appia, ſeems more probable, becauſe moſt of the Martyrologies mention it; but that there was one hundred and ſeventy four thouſand Martyrs, and forty ſix Popes interred there, as has been pretended, is too extravagant for a Romance: Beſides, 'tis probable, this Burying-Place was common to Chriſtians and Heathens. Farther, the Report of the Emperor Alexander's drawing a Perſecution upon the Chriſtians, is quite foreign to what the beſt Authors relate of this Prince's Sentiment and Diſpoſition. The Martyrdom of Caliſtus is no better vouched; for neither Euſebius nor any Writer of Antiquity ſays a Word of it. The Acts of his Martyrdom are Records of no Credit; for in the old Kalendar, drawn by Bucherius, and in Gregory the Great's Sacramentary, he is not ſo much as called a Martyr. As for the Time of his Pontificate, it began at the End of the Year 219, and laſted five Years, by Euſebius's Chronology, and five Years ten Months according to Mabillon's firſt Catalogue of the Popes, and five Years two Months and ten Days in his ſecond, in which he agrees with Bucherius. This laſt Computation makes Calixtus's Death fall upon the fourteenth of October, An. Dom. 224. * Mem. de l'Hiſt. Eccleſ. de Tillemont. Tom. 4. Baillet, 14. Sept. Vies des Saints. M. du Pin New Eccleſ. Hiſt. three firſt Centuries.

* CALLISTUS II. a celebrated Pope: His Father was Guy of Burgundy, fifth Son to William II. Brother to Renold, and Stephen Earl of Burgundy, and Uncle of Adelais Queen of France, married to King Lewis the Groſs. This Calliſtus was promoted to the Archbiſhoprick of Vienne in 1083, and governed that See till 1119, when he was choſen Pope upon the Death of Gelaſius II. The Election was made by the Cardinals then in France of the late Pope's Party: As for the See of Rome, 'twas then ſeized by Maurice Burdin, born at Limoges, formerly Archbiſhop of Braga. This Prelate by the Emperor Henry V.'s Intereſt, was choſen Pope in 1118, upon the Death of Paſchal II; and upon his Promotion, took the Name of Gregory VIII. Gelaſius, above mentioned, was choſen two and forty Days before him; but upon the Emperor Henry's coming to Rome, he was forced to retire and travel into France: As for Calliſtus, he durſt not go to Rome immediately upon his Election; but held a Council at Rheims, where he excommunicated the Emperor Henry, with Burdin and all his Abettors: After this, he fortified his Title in the Field, and marched to Rome at the Head of an Army. Henry, finding himſelf too weak, was glad to retire. Bourdin ſheltred himſelf in Sutry, but Calliſtus purſuing took him Priſoner, brought him into Rome in an ignominious Manner, ſet him upon an Aſs, as ſome write, with his Face to the Tail, ſhut him up in a Monaſtery firſt, and afterwards in a Caſtle: Honorius II. removed him to another Citadel, where he ended his Days. Calliſtus afterwards made a Peace with the Emperor Henry, and wrote a Tract touching Inveſtitures, which was approved by the Council held in the Lateran, An. Dom. 1123, commonly called The firſt General Council of Lateran: He died December 13, 1124. There are five and thirty Epiſtles of his extant; but the four Sermons upon the Apoſtle S. James, reckoned to him, are ſpurious Pieces. * Baronius, Annal. Papirius Maſſonus du Cheſne, de Vit. Pontif. Baluzius, Analecta Tom. 3. Saint Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. &c.

CALMET, (Auguſtin) a Benedictin Monk, of the Congregation of S. Vannes, and S. Hydulphus, has publiſhed a Literal Expoſition in French, of all the Books in the Old Teſtament: 'Tis a learned and laborious Performance. The Author goes to the Bottom of thoſe Queſtions he handles: He reports the different Sentiments of Commentators, and the Reaſons which ſupport them. He is copious in explaining the Signification of difficult Terms, and intermixes a great deal of Secular Learning. He has Prefaces, and very learned and curious Diſſertations prefix'd to each Volume, in Quarto. The firſt Tome, which makes a Commentary upon Geneſis, was printed at Paris in 1707; the ſecond, which takes in Exodus and Leviticus, in 1708; and the third, which is carried through Deuteronomy and Numbers, in 1709: Since which Time, this Learned Benedictine has publiſhed ſeveral Volumes of the ſame Work; and 'tis moſt likely the Remainder is now ready to appear. * Journal des Scavans de Paris aux mêmes années. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

CALNE, or Chalam, a Town in the Plain of Shinar, or Sennar, built by Nimrod, and where he laid the Foundation of his Monarchy: From this Time, till the Parthians were Sovereigns, 'twas under the Juriſdiction of Babylon. Theſe Parthians being Maſters of it, made it the Capital of their Empire, and called it Cteſiphon. * Geneſ. 10. Amoſ. 6. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

CALOVIUS, (Abraham) an Eminent Divine, born in 1612: He was a rigid Lutheran, and the Head of the Party called Calovians, who ſtand contradiſtinguiſhed from the Calixtins or Moderate Lutherans. Calovius has wrote Controverſial Diſcourſes upon the Confeſſion of Augſpurg, and a Commentary upon the Bible, where he commonly makes it his Buſineſs to contradict Grotius; 'twas printed in 1676. * Konig, Biblioth.

*CALOYERS, or Calogers, Greek Monks of the Order of S. Baſil, of S. Elias, or S. Marcellus: They generally live under the ſame Regulations, and wear the ſame Habit all over Greece, without any Reform, or Relaxing the leaſt from their firſt Conſtitutions. Mount Athos has a great many of this Society, from whence they are ſent off to ſupply moſt of the Churches in the Levant. It muſt be ſaid they are the Defence and Ornament of the Eaſtern Church, and live under Vows like the Monks in the Weſt. They ſpend the greateſt Part of Lent in lamenting their own and other People's Sins; and, in ſhort, they carry the Monaſtick Auſterities as far as 'tis poſſible. There are likewiſe Nuns, called Calogeres, who live much after the ſame manner: Theſe Nuns live in a Society, follow S. Baſil's Rule, are encloſed in Monaſteries, and governed by an Abbeſs: But then we are to obſerve, that theſe Religious Houſes for Women always depend upon ſome Monk's Abby. All theſe Nuns wear the ſame Black Dreſs: Their Arms and their Hands are covered to their Fingers ends; they ſhave their Heads, and each of them have a diſtinct Cell to lodge in. Thoſe who are wealthy, keep Maid-Servants, and ſometimes take in Girls, and breed them to Piety: After they have done the Duty of their Character, they work at their Needle. The Turks, who have ſome Reſpect for theſe Nuns, come to their Monaſteries, and buy Saſhes of their working. The Abbeſſes open the Gates of their Convent freely to the Turks, who come to buy of them, and return to their Apartments as ſoon as they have ſold their Goods. The Sieur de Moni, who with Leo Allatius, gives a Deſcription of theſe Greek Nuns, informs us, that he had read a Manuſcript-Relation made at Conſtantinople, where theſe Women are not reported ſo much to Advantage. The Calogeres of Conſtantinople, ſays the Author of this Relation, are Widows, ſome of which have had ſeveral Huſbands; and that they don't get themſelves profeſſed till they are old. They tie themſelves to no Vows, and all their Confinement conſiſts in having a black Veil on their Head, and ſaying, They won't marry. The greateſt Part of them live in their own Houſes, where they look after their Concerns, and thoſe of their Relations. This Author notwithſtanding affirms, that ſome of them live in Societies; but that theſe are more exceptionable than the others: That both ſorts go where they pleaſe, and take more Liberty under the Skreen of a Religious Habit, than they could do otherwiſe. The Biſhops forbid their Prieſts under ſevere Penalties, coming into theſe Monaſteries. * Moni, Relat. des Crètiens du Levant.

CALPENTINE, a ſmall Iſland in Aſia: It lies on the Weſtern Coaſt of Ceilan, from whence 'tis parted only by a Canal. The Dutch, who are Maſters here, have a ſtrong Town of the ſame Name. * Maty, Diction.

*CALVARY, the Miſtake in Morery Vol. I. concerning Cozroe's bringing back the Croſs upon his Shoulders, corrected under Heraclius, Ibid.

CALVOGUALBES, (Francis de) a Catalan Gentleman, born at Barcelona in 1627: He was extracted from a conſiderable Family: His Anceſtors had done ſuch Publick Service to the Town, that the Burghers called them their Deliverers. One of his Anceſtors, born at Venice, ſettled at Manreſa, a Town in Catalonia, when the Moors beſieged Barcelona: Upon this Occaſion he commanded the Chriſtian Army, routed the Infidels, and made a triumphal Entry into the Town; where his Action was entred upon the Publick Records. When Catalonia revolted in 1640, Francis de Calvo took Service under the French. In 1664, when the French King ſent the Emperor a Reinforcement into Hungary, Calvo was one of the Officers, and behaved himſelf to Advantage. In 1672, he made a Campagne with Lewis XIV. and was one of the firſt that paſſed the Rhine. This Prince made him Governor of Arnheim, and having taken Maſtricht in 1673, he made him Governor there. He defended this Place above two Months, againſt the Confederate Army commanded by the Prince of Orange, who was forced to raiſe the Siege. The Beſiegers being relieved by a Body of Troops, commanded by Mareſchal Schomberg, the King to encourage his Merit made him Lieutenant General of his Forces, and allowed him a Penſion of twenty thouſand Livres. He was at the Battle of Seneff, in 1674: The Spaniards declaring War againſt the French about this Time, he went into Catalonia to ſerve againſt them; where, having ſwam the River Pont Major, he charged the Enemy ſo briſkly, that if Night had not come on, he had taken the Duke of Bournonville, their General, Priſoner. In 1688, the War breaking out again between France and the Confederates, he ſerved in Flanders under Mareſchal Humieres. In 1689, the King made him Knight of his own Order, and gave him the Command of a Body of 5000 to defend the Lines, attack'd by the Spaniards and Dutch with 20000 Men. He died in 1690, ſixty three Years of Age, and was buried at Aire, where he was Governor. * Memoires du Tems.

CAMAIEUX, in Latin Camæ Figuræ, are Stones with ſeveral Figures, and Landſchaps upon them: They may be called a ſort of Pictures drawn by Nature's Pencil, without the Aſſiſtances of Art. There are Trees, Fruit, Towns, Rivers, Letters of the Alphabet, Cyphers, living Creatures, and a great many other things curiouſly painted upon them. There are a great many of theſe Curioſities to be ſeen at Rome, in Kircher's Study, and in his Mundus Subterraneus, Georgius de Sepibus likewiſe gives an Account of theſe Rarities. King Pyrrhus's Agate, mentioned by Pliny, is pretty well known, upon which the nine Muſes of Apollo, with his Harp in his Hand, were naturally repreſented with Strength and Diſtinction. Charles Pattin, in his Hiſtorical Relations, mentions his having having ſeen an Agate in the Emperor's Cloſet at Vienna of an extraordinary Bigneſs; where Nature had cut the following Letters, B. XPIΣTOΣ. where the Author expounds the Letter B by Βασιλεὺς, as much as to ſay, Chriſt the King. Farther, there are certain precious Stones called Camaieux, as Onyxes, Sardonyxes, and Agates; upon which Lapidaries ſhew their Skill, to give Nature a Lift in her Figures, and finiſh what's imperfectly begun. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. Lib. 37. Cap. 1.

* CAMBRAI. For Pope Paul II. in Morery Vol. I. read Pope Paul IV.

CAMERARIUS, (William) a Scotchman, Prieſt of the Oratory, and Doctor of the Faculty at Paris: He wrote ſeveral Tracts of Divinity intermix'd with Philoſophy, and publiſhed a Collection of ſome Diſcourſes of the Fathers, not printed before. This Collection furniſhes Fulgentius's Anſwer to Scarilas's Queſtions upon the Incarnation; a Tract of the ſeven Vices, and the ſeven Graces of the Holy Spirit; an Expoſition of the Creed, reckoned to S. Auguſtin; a Diſcourſe of Anſelm, for guarding the Inward Man; and an Epiſtle of this Prelate's to Bernard, a Prior, and to the Monks of S. Albans. Camerarius wrote a Theological Diſſertation upon this Queſtion, Whether a Confeſſor could abſolve a Penitent who had loſt his Underſtanding, and gave no Sign of Remorſe? His Anſwer is in the Affirmative. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

* CAMILLUS, (M. Furius) one of the greateſt Men of Old Rome, triumph'd four times, and was five times Dictator: He conquered the Antiatæ in a Sea-fight, brought the Prows of their Ships, and ſet them up in a Square at Rome. This Trophy was afterwards called the Roſtra, where Publick Speeches were made to the People. When he was Cenſor, he ordered the unmarried Men to marry the Widows of thoſe ſlain in the War. He defeated the Faliſci, and in the Year 358 of Rome, took the Town of Veiæ, after ten Years Siege: But here by giving all the Plunder to the Soldiers, he broke his Vow to Apollo, to whom he had pre-engaged the Tenth. The Senate being inform'd by the Southſayers, that the Gods were angry, ordered every Soldier to refund the Tythe of the Pillage given him. This Edict occaſioned a ſort of Mutiny againſt Camillus, ſo that when he declared againſt the Propoſal of ſending a Colony to Veiæ, one of the Tribunes of the People preferred an Information againſt him, in order to bring him to an Account for the Booty taken at Veiæ. Camillus, to prevent a worſe Conſequence, baniſhed himſelf, and was fined pretty deep for his pretended Miſbehaviour. He had already dedicated two Temples, one to Juno, and another to Matuta: During this Exile, in the 364th Year, the Capitol being beſieged by the Gauls, he was choſen Dictator. For now the publick Danger, 'tis likely, revived his Merit, and made the Burghers remember their Ingratitude. Camillus, now at Ardea, ſolicited for Succours againſt the Invaſion: He came up to Rome juſt in the Minute when they were weighing two thouſand Pound of Gold; which, purſuant to an Article, was to be given to the Gauls to draw off from the Town. Camillus, ſurprizing the Enemy by a ſwift March, and falling unexpectedly upon them, forced them to retire with Diſgrace and Loſs. After this Deliverance of his Country, he built a Temple to a Voice which had given the Romans Notice of the Approach of the Gauls; but the Intelligence was neglected by them: The Dæmon, who gave this Warning, he called Deus Locutius, and ſettled Sacrifices for his Worſhip. Afterwards, he put the Laws in full Execution, forced the Volſci to ſubmit, defeated the Equi, the Tuſcans, and other neighbouring People. The Report of a new Incurſion of the Gauls into Italy, made the Senate chooſe him Dictator the fifth time, in the Year of Rome 387. He commanded in the Field with his uſual Succeſs, routed the Enemy, advanced to the Plains of Alba, and made a triumphant Entry into Rome. The Romans, by way of Acknowledgment for the great Service he had done them, ſet him up a Statue on Horſeback in the Market Place, which was the firſt Honour of that kind any of his Countrymen had ever received. * Plutarch. in Camillus's Life. Livy, Lib. 5. Florus, Lib. 1. Aurelius Victor, &c.

* CAMIN, or Cammin, a Town within the Circle of the Upper Saxony in Germany: It lies in Ducal Pomerania at the Eaſtern Mouth of the Oder, five Leagues from Griffenberg and Treptow. This Town, built with the Ruins of the Ancient Julin, carried the Biſhop's See thither in 1178: The Burghers declared for the Reformation in 1534; and the Town with the Dioceſe was yielded to the Elector of Brandenbourg by the Treaty of Oſnabrug, upon Condition that he ſhould hold it as a Fief of the Empire; and that after the Death of the preſent Canons, it ſhould be lawful for him to ſecularize, or ſeize their Endowments. * Maty, Diction.

CAMONICA, Val Comonica, a little Country belonging to the State of Venice in Italy: It lies within the Breſſan, along the Bank of the River Oglio, upon the Confines of the Valteline. 'Tis a Place much frequented by the Swiſs, who border upon Italy. * Maty, Diction.

CAMPEGGI, (Thomas) Son of Thomas Campeggi, Biſhop of Feltri, of a great Family in Italy, was ſent Nuncio by Paul III. to the Conference held at Worms in 1540. He was one of the three firſt Biſhops who appeared at the Opening the Council of Trent in 1545, and aſſiſted at the Seſſions held there in the Pontificate of Paul III. He died at Rome in 1564, ſixty four Years of Age: He wrote a great many little Tracts upon ſeveral Queſtions relating to Eccleſiaſtical Polity. The moſt conſiderable of theſe, is that entituled, the Authority of Holy Councils, dedicated to Pope Pius IV. and printed at Venice in 1561. There are other Works of this Prelate, printed at the ſame Place, viz. Of the Authority and Power of the Pope; of the Duty of Chriſtian Princes; of the Revenues of Eccleſiaſticks; of the Plurality of Beneſices; of Simony; of Annats; of Reſervations; of Penſions upon Benefices; of Caſes reſerved; of Exemptions; of the Obſervation of Feſtivals; whether a Biſhop conſecrated by Schiſmaticks is a true Biſhop; and ſeveral Queſtions concerning Marriage. There is a Tract of his likewiſe upon the Celibacy of Prieſts, printed at Venice in 1554: He treats the reſpective Subjects with great Method, Perſpicuity, and Succinctneſs. His Judgment is generally ſolid, and tolerably unbiaſſed, and he writes with leſs Partiality than moſt of the ultramontan Caſuiſts. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. XVI.

* CAMPEGI, for Clement VIII. in Morery Vol. I. read Clement VII.

CAMPER, an Indian Town in the Iſland of Sumatra near the Line, at the Mouth of the Streight of Malaca to the Eaſt. This Town is Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, and governed by an Independent Prince. Maty, Diction.

CAMPOLI, a little Town with a Biſhop's See in the farther Abruzzo, upon the Borders of Marca Anconitana, about two Leagues from Teramo, Aſcoli, and the Gulph of Venice. The Town conſiſts of three Diviſions, ſtanding at ſome Diſtance from each other; they are called Camplo, Nucella, and Caſtronuovo. * Maty, Diction.

* CAMPSON Cauri, Souldan of Egypt. For one thouſand five hundred and forty, in Morery Vol. I. read one thouſand five hundred and four.

CAMPUS Martius, a great Square, between the Town of Rome and the River Tyber. Some Authors affirm Romulus conſecrated this Place to Mars. His pretended Anceſtor deſigned it for robuſt and military Exerciſes. But Livy, on the other ſide, is poſitive, this Field belong'd to the Tarquins, and that when they were expelled Rome, the Romans ſeized their Eſtate as forfeited, and particularly this Field amongſt the reſt, which they dedicated to Mars after they had thrown the Crop of Corn upon it, into the Tyber. This Field took in all the Plain, which reach'd to the Gate del Popolo, and even as far as the Pons Milvius, according to Cluverius's Topography. It had the Tyber on one Side, and on the other Mons Quirinalis, the Capitol, and the little Eminence for Gardens. The loweſt Part of it was called Vallis Martia, and reached from Domitian's Arch, to the Gate del Popolo. Strabo mentioning the magnificent and beautiful Places in Rome, takes particular Notice of the Campus Martius, which was of an extraordinary Circuit, and much longer than broad.

'Twas in this Field the People met to chooſe the Magiſtracy: Here they review'd and liſted their Troops. This Square likewiſe ſerved for exerciſing their young People. Here they learned to ride, to wreſtle, to draw the Bow, to throw the Diſcus or Quoit. When theſe Exerciſes were over, they went into the Tyber to refreſh themſelves, and learn to ſwim. Here the People were planted, to ſee the Naumachiæ or Sea-Engagements, which were repreſented upon the River for Entertainment. Here a great many Figures of Men of Quality, and Enterprize prize were ſet up: There was likewiſe a vaſt Gallery built by Antoninus Pius, with a Pillar ſeventy Foot high, with an hundred and ſix Steps to mount the Top, and thirty ſix Windows to let in the Light. Here was likewiſe the Obeliſque Auguſtus brought from Egypt, with a Sun-Dial upon't. Farther, here was Domitian's Arch, Claudius's Amphitheater; the Naumachia, or Canal for Sea-Engagements, made by Domitian; Auguſtus's Mauſoleum; the Tomb of his Nephew Marcellus; the Trophies of Marius; and a great many Sepulchres and old Monumental Remains all along the Bank of the River.

At one end of this Square there was a little Eminence, called Mons Citorius, or Citatorum, where the People ſtood to give their Votes at Elections. Near this Place the Town-Hall ſtood, where they receiv'd Ambaſſadors who were lodg'd and entertain'd during their Ambaſſy at the Charge of the Republick. Thus Livy informs us, with reſpect to the Macedonian Ambaſſadors, Macedones deducti extra Urbem in villam Publicam, ibique eis locus, & Lautia præbita. 'Twas here likewiſe the Cenſors made the firſt Regiſter of the Number of People, and the Valuation of their Eſtates in the Year 319, after the building of Rome. In Tully's time, C. Capito propos'd the building the Campus Martius, and encloſing it within the Town. He likewiſe offer'd to make the Septa, or Rails, through which the Burghers paſs'd to vote, of Marble, which were only Wood; but the Civil Wars coming on, prevented the executing that noble Undertaking. * Antiquit. Græc. & Rom. Roſin. Dempſter, &c.

CAMPUS-MAGNUS, or the Great Field: 'Tis a large Plain twelve hundred Furlongs long, and a hundred and twenty broad; the River Jordan divides it in two: It begins at the Town Genebath, and ends at the Lake Aſphaltites. The Town of Jericho was in the middle of this Plain: A modern Author in his Voyage to the Holy Land, reports it one of the beſt Pieces of Ground in the World, and that it produces a great deal of Corn; that 'tis bounded on the Eaſt with the Mountains of Arabia, on the Weſt with thoſe of Judea, on the South by the Dead Sea; and on the North by the Sea of Tiberias. 'Tis this Plain which formerly furniſh'd ſuch noble Plants, and ſuch Liquors and ſtrong ſcented Gums which we read of in the Bible, and elſewhere; but at preſent 'tis all Wilderneſs, and ſeems to lie under Joſhua's Malediction pronounc'd againſt Jericho, and the Neighbourhood. * Joſeph, de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 4. cap. 27. Simon, Diction. de la Bible.

CAMUL, a Town in Great Tartary in Aſia, within the Kingdom of Tanju: Sanſon calls it Xamo, and places it near a Deſart of that Name; but M. Witzen gives it a much more Weſtern Situation.

*CANAL. For Lucius XIII. in Morery Vol. I. read Lewis XIII.

*CANARY, or Ciudad de las Palmas, a Town of Africk: It ſtands at the Bottom of the Gulph on the Eaſtern Side of the Canary Iſlands, where there is a good Haven: 'Tis a large and flouriſhing Town, having the Advantage of being the Governor's Reſidence. It has likewiſe a Parliament or Audience, conſiſting of Members out of all the Canaries. To which may be added, a Biſhop's See founded in the Year 1485, and Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Seville. * Maty, Diction.

CANELAND, or the Cinnamon Country, Part of the Iſle of Ceylan, in the Indian Ocean: It ſtretches all along the Weſtern Coaſt of the Iſland, from the Town Chilau to Matura. This Country reaches about twenty Leagues upon the Coaſt, and twelve towards the Inland; they call it Caneland, becauſe the Dutch have planted a great many Cinnamon Trees there. The chief Towns are Chilau, Negombo, Colombo, Calture, Punto Gallo, and Matura. * Maty, Diction.

CANEPHORIA, a Feſtival in Honour of Diana, kept by the Greeks; in which all the young Women never married offer'd this Goddeſs little Baſkets full of Needle-work, letting her to underſtand by this Preſent that they had liv'd ſingle long enough. The Athenians kept a Holy-day to Bacchus, during which Solemnity the Maids carried Gold Baſkets full of Fruit. Theocritus in his Idyllia, and Suidas, mention theſe Baſkets conſecrated to Bacchus, Ceres and Proſerpine. Their Baſkets had a Cover to conceal the Myſtery, and prevent them being look'd into by uninitiated People.

CANFILA, a Town in Abyſſinia, in Africk, it makes the Northern Part of the Kingdom of Barnagas. The River of Canfila riſes in this Country, runs through the Coaſt of Aben, and falls into the Red Sea at Swaguen. * Maty, Diction.

CANICIA, a Province ſituate between Algier and Tunis: Tis large and fruitful, and is govern'd by a Family of the ancient Kings of Africk; Plato's Commonwealth ſeems to have got ſome Footing here, Property is diſcharged, and the People have all the Country affords in Common. They ſow where they encamp, and lodge where they find the beſt Soil for Arable and Paſture; and when they march the Field againſt the Enemy, they take their Children and Cattle along with them. The Algerines, though always at War with them, never gained any Advantage, excepting under the Conduct of Amoudar, Bey of Tunis. * Hiſtoire des derniéres Revolutions du Royaume de Tunis.

CANINA, formerly Elima, a Town of Greece, Capital of the Government of Canina: It ſtands at the Foot of the Mountains of Chimera, eight Leagues from Valona, to the South. * Maty, Diction.

CANIS, or the Dog River, traverſes the Country of Queſroan in Phenicia: It falls from the Mountain Libanus, and runs into the Sea with ſo rapid and noiſy a Courſe, that the Waves, eſpecially when the Sea is rough, make a Sound not unlike the Barking of a Dog. In old Time, they pretended they could hear it a hundred and fifty Miles; this ſurprizing Noiſe made the Phenicians erect a Statue for it on the Shore: The Figure was like a great Dog, and was addreſs'd with Religious Worſhip. Near this Place, in the Channel of the River, Part of this Statue is ſtill to be ſeen. * Simon, Dict. de la Bible.

CANONS. (Apoſtles) 'Tis certain thoſe Canons, though very Ancient, were not left us by the Apoſtles: 'Tis true, they are ſometimes called Apoſtolick Canons; but this means no more, than that they were made by Biſhops who lived ſoon after the Apoſtles, and were called Apoſtolical Men. The Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions is the firſt who reckons them to the Apoſtles. They conſiſt of Regulations which agree with the Diſcipline of the Second and Third Centuries: They are cited in the Councils of Nice, of Antioch, and Conſtantinople, and by ſeveral of the Ancients. However, 'tis not certainly known when this Collection was made: 'Tis probable they were not all drawn up at the ſame time; but then it muſt be granted, that not only the firſt fifty, but the remaining thirty five are of conſiderable Antiquity: The Greeks have always received them, Johannes Antiochenus, who lived in the Reign of Juſtinian, inſerted them in his Collection of Canons; Juſtinian cites them in his Sixth Novel: They are approv'd at the Synod in Trullo, and quoted by John Damaſcen and Photius. Amongſt the Latins they have not met with the ſame Eſteem; Cardinal Humbert rejects them; Gelaſius ranges them with Apocryphal Books; Dionyſius Exiguus has tranſlated the firſt fifty, and ſet them at the Head of his Collection; remarking notwithſtanding, that ſome People refuſed to own their Authority. 'Tis poſſibly for this Reaſon, that Martinus Bragenſis has not inſerted them in his Collection of Canons: However, Iſidore makes no Scruple of putting them in his own; ſince which time, they have always made Part of the Canon Law. As ſoon as they appeared in France, they were well received: The firſt time they were cited for Authority, was in Pretextatus's Caſe, in the Reign of King Chilperick. Hincmar reports them ſtanding at the Head of a Collection of Canons made by the French Church, and believes them ancient, though not made by the Apoſtles. * Beveregius, Codex Canonum Eccleſiæ Primitivæ, Vindicatus, &c. Daillæus de Pſeud. Epigraphis. M. du Pin's Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible. Doujat. Hiſtoire du Droit.

CANONICAL Books, a Name given to the Liſt or Catalogue of Inſpired Writings: The firſt Canon of the Holy Scriptures was made by the Jews. Some Authors report the Canon ſettled at three different times, by the Sanhedrim, or Great Synagogue of the Jews. The firſt was by Eſdras, with the Synagogue's Approbation; the ſecond, by a Meeting of the great Synagogue, when they ſent the Septuagint to Ptolomy; and the laſt, when the Diſpute happened between the Phariſees and the Sadducees; but 'tis probable there never was any more than one Canon, or one ſingle Collection of the Inſpir'd Books of the Old Teſtament made by Eſdras upon their Return

Return from the Captivity; from which time forward this Collection was received by the whole Jewiſh Nation as an entire Body of all the Books dictated by the Holy Spirit. Joſephus reckons them twenty two; Origen, S. Epiphanius, S. Jerome, and moſt of the ancient Greek and Latin Fathers, agree that the Jews had but twenty two Books in their Canon. S. Jerome ranges them under the following Diviſion, and throws them into three Claſſes. The firſt takes in the five Books of Moſes, called the Law: Under the ſecond, the Books called Prophetical are ranged, to the Number of Eight, viz. 1. The Book of Joſhua. 2. The Book of Judges, to which, as S. Jerome obſerves, they joined the Book of Ruth. 3. The Book of Samuel, which the Roman Catholicks call the Firſt and Second of the Kings. 4. The Book of Kings, which thoſe of the Church of Rome call the Third and Fourth of the Kings. The next in S. Jerome's Liſt are the three great Prophets. 5. Iſaiah. 6. Jeremy. 7. Ezekiel: Theſe make three diſtinct Books. 8. The twelve ſmall Prophets, which make but one Book. The third Claſs takes in the Books called Hagiographa; the firſt of which is Job; the ſecond David's Pſalms. The three next were penn'd by Solomon; they are, 3. The Proverbs. 4. Eccleſiaſtes; and 5. The Canticles: Daniel makes the ſixth; the Chronicles, the ſeventh; Eſdras, with Nehemiah, the eighth; and the Book of Eſther the ninth. Thus, as S. Jerome relates, all the Books of the Old Teſtament received by the Jews are twenty two; five written by Moſes, eight Prophetical Books, and nine Hagiographa. Some ſwell the Number to twenty four; but then they are ſtill the ſame Books; for thoſe who reckon this way, make Ruth a diſtinct Book from Joſhua, part the Lamentations from Jeremy, and place theſe two Books amongſt the Hagiographa. Thus, by this Canon of the Jews, the Book of Wiſdom, Eccleſiaſticus, Tobit, Judith, the two Books of the Maccabees, (not to mention ſome Additional Chapters in Eſther, &c.) are no better than Apocryphal.

The Chriſtian Church, for ſeveral of the firſt Centuries, receiv'd the Inſpir'd Writings no farther than the Jewiſh Canon. The firſt Catalogue we meet with of this kind is that of Melito Biſhop of Sardis, mention'd by Euſebius; it agrees with the Jewiſh Canon, excepting his Omiſſion of Eſther, and that he makes Ruth and Judges two Books. S. Gregory Nazianzen divides the Books of Scripture into Hiſtorical, Poetical, and Prophetical: He reckons twelve Hiſtorical Books; that is to ſay, the five Books of Moſes, Joſhua, the Book of Judges, Ruth; two Books of the Kings, Chronicles, and Eſdras; five Poetical Books, which are, Job, David, and the three Books of Solomon; five Prophetical Books, viz. four great Prophets, and twelve ſmall ones: To theſe may be added, the Teſtimonies of S. Athanaſius, S. Cyril of Jeruſalem, S. Epiphanius, the Council of Laodicea, &c. The third Council of Carthage, held in the Year 397, is the firſt Eccleſiaſtical Authority which ſeems to extend the Canon of the Old Teſtament; but here we are to obſerve, that this Provincial Synod does not decree in preciſe Language; they ſeem to take the Word Canonical, like S. Auguſtin, in a large Senſe, and comprehend ſome Books particulary ſerviceable for Inſtruction and good Life under this Diſtinction. We may obſerve farther, that the Canons of this Council don't ſtand upon the ſame Authority with that of Laodicea; the Council of Laodicea being confirm'd by the General Council of Chalcedon, which the other was not. The Canon fix'd by this Council of Carthage, was at laſt confirm'd by the Council of Trent.

That the Council of Trent had no prior Authority to proceed on, excepting ſome ſlender Pretence from the Council of Carthage above-mention'd, appears from the concurrent Teſtimony of the Latin Church. I ſhall give the Reader ſome of the Authorities. The Authors of the Ordinary Gloſs upon the Bible, generally receiv'd in the Weſtern Church in the Thirteenth Century, follow S. Jerome's Catalogue of the Canon of the Scripture, and reckon no more than twenty two Books. They put the Reader in mind, there is a great Difference to be made between the Canonical Books and thoſe without this Liſt, as there is between Records Certain, and Doubtful: For, as they continue, the Canonical Books were written by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt; but who were the Authors of the reſt, or when they were written, is what no Man can tell. They inform us farther, that the Church permits the Reading the Apocryphal Books; but then 'tis only upon the ſcore of Moral Inſtruction, and not for any Authority there is for determining Matters of Faith. In the Year 1502, the famous Cardinal Ximenes publiſh'd an Edition of the Bible in ſeveral Languages, called Biblia Complutenſia. Towards this great Performance, he had the Aſſiſtance of the Univerſity of Alcala, with ſeveral others of Figure for Learning. Here, in the Preface, there is Care taken to advertiſe the Reader, that the Books of Tobit, Judith, Wiſdom, Eccleſiaſticus, the Maccabees, with the Greek Additions to Eſther and Daniel, are no Canonical Scripture. To which is ſubjoin'd, that the Church does not receive thoſe Books for confirming any Articles of Faith, but only for Moral Edification. And here it muſt not be forgotten, that this Bible, with the Preface, was dedicated to Pope Leo X. and publiſh'd by his Conſent and Authority. About four Years forward, the Vulgate Bible, with Lira's Commentary, and the Ordinary Gloſs, was printed at Baſil; and here the Preface to the Ordinary Gloſs above-mention'd is inſerted: And thoſe who conclude all the Books they ſee printed together in the common Volume of the Bible to be of the ſame Authority, are taxed with Ignorance and Folly. Cardinal Cajetan, who wrote about ten Years before the Council of Trent, is another very conſiderable Voucher for the Jewiſh Canon. In his Commentary upon the firſt Chapter to the Hebrews, he informs us, that we ought to adhere to S. Jerome's Prologus Galeatus for ſettling the Canon; that the whole Latin Church is much oblig'd to this Father, for making a juſt Diſtinction between the Canonical Books, and thoſe not Canonical: That by this judicious Separation, he has cover'd us from the Reproach of the Jews, who otherwiſe might have charg'd us with forging a new Canon, which the old Church never knew. For this Reaſon, in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to Pope Clement VII. he aquaints his Holineſs, he declin'd writing Commentaries upon the Apocryphal Books; and amongſt theſe, Judith, Tobit, the Maccabees, Wiſdom, and part of Eſther, are reckon'd by him. He likewiſe ſuggeſts, that the Apocryphal Books are to be read in the Church only for Inſtruction, and not for proving the Fundamentals of Chriſtianity: That with this Diſtinction S. Auguſtin and the Council of Carthage were to be underſtood, to reconcile them with S. Jerome and the Council of Laodicea; which latter, 'tis plain, this Cardinal look'd on as the ſureſt Authorities. After all this Authority, to which a great deal more might be added, the Decree of the Council of Trent upon this Subject, muſt be very ſurprizing. Part of their Deciſion runs thus; The Holy OEcumenical Synod receives all the Books of the Old and New Teſtament, as proceeding from the Holy Ghoſt, and the Mouth of our Saviour.----That the Synod receives them all with the ſame Regard and Veneration. Afterwards they proceed to give a Catalogue of the Inſpir'd Writings; amongſt which they reckon Tobit and Judith, Wiſdom and Eccleſiaſticus, Baruch and the Maccabees, together with ſome Additions to Daniel and Eſther. * Euſebius, Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 4. cap. 26. Athanaſ. Epiſt. Paſchal. 39. Cyril, Hier. Catechiſ. 4. Epiph. Hæreſ. 8. & Lib. de Menſ. & Pond. Greg. Nazianz. in Lib. Carm. Amphiloc. Ep. ad Seleucum. Hieron. in Prolog. Galeato, ſive Præfat. in Libr. Regum. Concil. Laodicen. Gloſſ. Ordinar. Præf. de Libris Bibl. Canonicis & non Canonicis. Ximenius, in Bibl. Complut. Præfat ad Lector. Præfat. in Biblia Baſiliæ edita, cum Gloſſis ordinaria & interlineari, An. 1506. Cajetan. Comment. in 1 Cap. ad Hebr. & in Epiſtola Dedicatoria ad Papam Clementem VII. ante Comment. in Libr. Hiſt. V. T. Concil. Trident. Seſſ. IV.

As to the Canonical Books of the New Teſtament; the Church has always receiv'd for Canonical the four Goſpels, the fourteen Epiſtles of S. Paul, (excepting for ſome time the Epiſtle to the Hebrews) and the firſt Epiſtles of S. Peter and S. John. Some Churches heſitated for ſome time about the Authority of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, the Epiſtles of S. James and S. Jude, the ſecond of S. Peter, the ſecond and third of S. John, together with the Apocalyps: However, theſe Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, with the Revelation, were own'd from the beginning by the greateſt Part of Chriſtianity, and not long after declar'd Canonical by the Univerſal Church. That this is Matter of Fact, appears by the ancient Catalogues of the Books in the New Teſtament, where the ſame Number now receiv'd were inſerted: For Inſtance, the Council of Laodicea, (excepting for the Revelations) the Council of Carthage, and a Council held at Rome, agrees with the Deciſion of the Council of Trent; which, as to this Matter, is ſufficiently Orthodox. The Name Canonical comes from the Word Canon, which not only ſignifies a Law and a Rule, but is likewiſe taken for a Liſt or Table. Thus the Canonical Books are thoſe contained in the Number of Inſpir'd Writings.

And here we may obſerve, that the Canon of the Books of the New Teſtament were neither ſettled by any Synod or ſingle Authority: This Collection was form'd upon the unanimous Conſent of all the Churches, who, by conſtant Tradition, reaching to the Apoſtolical Age, had receiv'd ſuch a Number of them, as written by Authors inſpir'd by the Holy Ghoſt. Euſebius diſtinguiſhes them into three ſorts; the firſt Claſs comprehends thoſe which have been all along receiv'd by the unanimous Conſent of all Chriſtendom; that is, the four Goſpels, the fourteen Epiſtles of S. Paul, excepting that to the Hebrews, and the firſt Epiſtles of S. Peter and S. John. The ſecond Diviſion takes in thoſe which, though not receiv'd at firſt by the Univerſality of Chriſtendom, were notwithſtanding taken into the Canon by ſome Churches, and cited under the ſame Authority by ſeveral of the Fathers; but then this Claſs muſt be farther ſubdivided into two; for ſome of theſe Books have been long ſince receiv'd for Inſpir'd Writings by all the Churches; and amongſt theſe, we are to reckon the Epiſtle of S. James, the Epiſtle of S. Jude, the Second Epiſtle of S. Peter, with the Second and Third Epiſtles of S. John. The others, on the contrary, have been rejected as ſpurious, or unworthy at leaſt of Canonical Authority, notwithſtanding they may be uſeful in other Reſpects: Amongſt theſe may be rang'd Hermas's Paſtor, S. Barnabas's Epiſtle, the Goſpel according to the Egyptians, another of the ſame Title, to the Hebrews, the Acts of S. Paul, and the Revelations of S. Peter. The third Claſs is made up of Books counterfeited by Hereticks, and always rejected by the Church: Of this ſort are the Goſpels of S. Thomas and S. Peter, &c. The Apocalyps has been plac'd in the firſt Claſs by ſome, and let down to the ſecond by others. Notwithſtanding this Book is not in the Canon of the Council of Laodicea, 'tis cited by Juſtin Martyr, Irenæus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Tertullian, &c. as written by the Apoſtle S. John; and has long ſince been receiv'd under the ſame Authority by the unanimous Conſent of the Church. * R. Simon's Critical Hiſtory of the Old Teſtament. M. Du Pin. Prelim. Diſſert. upon the Bible. Cozen's Scholaſt. Hiſt. of the Canon of the Scriptures, &c.

CANTELMI, an illuſtrious Family in the Kingdom of Naples. James Cantelmi, Son of Fabricio Cantelmi Duke of Popoli, and Prince of Paterano, was a Prelate of great Learning and Conduct: He was the Pope's Nuncio at Vienna, at Venice and Poland, and was Nuncio Extraordinary at the Emperor's Court, and at the Dyet of Augsburgh, when the Arch-Duke Joſeph was elected King of the Romans. Pope Alexander VIII. made him a Cardinal in 1690; he was afterwards Archbiſhop of Capua, which See he reſign'd for the Archbiſhoprick of Naples, where he was one of the firſt who declar'd for King Philip V. who made his Entry into that Town in 1702. The Archbiſhop died the ſame Year, being fifty ſeven Years of Age. Roſtainge Cantelmi, Elder Brother to this Prelate, after having ſerv'd ſeveral Campagnes in Sicily, Spain, Africk and Flanders, and been made a Major General, retir'd to the Kingdom of Naples in 1696, and was General of the Troops in that Country. After the Death of King Charles II. he was one of the firſt who recogniz'd King Philip V. and had the Poſt of Captain of the Guards: The French King made him Knight of the Holy Ghoſt in 1702; and in 1705, he threw himſelf into Barcelona to aſſiſt in the Defence of that City. * Lellis, Famiglie di Napoli. Scipione Ammirato Famiglie Napol. Memoires du Temps.

CANTICLES; (The) that is, in the Hebrew Phraſeology, an excellent Song: 'Twas written by King Solomon, whoſe Name it carries in the Hebrew Original, and in the Septuagint: The Talmudiſts aſſign it to King Hezekiah; but the Rabbins own it for Solomon's. As to the kind of the Compoſition, it is an Epithalamium in the Form of a Paſtoral, in which a Bride and Bridegroom, and the Friends and Companions of each of them, are introduc'd in Dialogue. The Jews allow'd none to read this Book, till thirty Years old at the ſooneſt. However, they believ'd 'twas not to be interpreted to the Letter, but that there was a myſterious and religious Senſe couched under it. Some People have ventur'd to ſay, that Solomon's chief Deſign in this Poem was to deſcribe his Inclination to Abiſhag the Shunamite, or to Pharaoh's Daughter. On the contrary, others are of a more Orthodox Opinion, and believe the Canticles are only to be underſtood in an Allegorical Senſe: That Solomon's Thoughts were then carried above the Solicitation of the Senſes, and that all the Diſcourſe turns only upon Holy Affection, and the Love of our Bleſſed Saviour for his Church. Some Writers think a Middle Expoſition may be pitch'd on; that the Hiſtorical Senſe is an Epithalamium upon Solomon's Marriage with Pharaoh's Daughter; but that the myſtical Meaning principally deſign'd, is to be underſtood of our Saviour and his Church; the Union between theſe being compar'd to a Bride and Bridegroom in the New Teſtament. James Benignus Boſſuet, Biſhop of Meaux, has ſubdivided the Canticles into ſeven Parts, making them the Entertainment of ſeven days; during which time, the Jews kept the Nuptial Solemnity. There are no Idyllia written with more Grace and Delicacy than this Poem. The Spirit in Thought and Expreſſion, the Beauty and Variety of the Ideas, and the Suitableneſs of the Figures to the Matter, are judged inimitable. J. B. Boſſuet, Evêque de Meaux, ſur le Cantique des Cantiques. M. Du Pin's Prelim. Diſſert. upon the Bible.

* CANTON, the Capital of the Province of Zuangtang, the firſt City in China on the ſide of Macao: The Town is bigger than Paris, and almoſt as populous; the Streets are ſtrait, and generally paved with great flat Stones, very hard: The Houſes are very low built, and almoſt all of them Shops; but commonly poor ones: The Houſes have no Windows. The beſt of the Town reſembles the Streets of S. Germains Fair at Paris; and at the Hours of Buſineſs, there is almoſt as many People to be met with as at that Fair: Few of the Women walk Abroad; but moſt of the People who crowd the Streets make a poor Figure: They have moſt of them Burdens upon their Backs, Mens Shoulders being the only Conveyance for what is bought and ſold. However, there are ſeveral beautiful Squares, and ſtately Triumphal Arches. There are Gates at the end of all the Streets, which are ſhut in the Night-time. The River gives the Proſpect of a Floating Town, where the Boats touch one another, and lie in a Right Line to the Length and Figure of Streets: Every Barge lodges a whole Family, and has Apartments enough for managing Domeſtick Buſineſs. The Peaſantry, who live in theſe Boats, weigh Anchors or decamp every Morning to fiſh, or work upon Rice, of which they have three Crops every Year. The Seats of the Mandarins, or great Lords, have ſomewhat particular in the Structure; for there is no coming at them for an Audience till you have paſs'd through a great many Courts: When they go abroad, they are attended with a numerous Train, ſometimes no leſs than a hundred. In the middle of this Equipage, the Mandarin appears mounted in a gilt Chair, with ſix or eight Men to carry him. * Recueil des Lettres édifiantes écrites par les Miſſionaires Jeſuites en 1707. See Quantung, in Morery Vol. I.

CANUTUS, (S.) Duke of Jutland, or Sleſwick King of the Obotritæ, that is, of Holſteyn and Mecklenburg, a Martyr, was Son to Ericus the Good, Brother to Canutus IV. King of Denmark: He left his Country, being apprehenſive his Uncle Nicolas, who had ſeiz'd the Kingdom, would take his Life. Upon an Accommodation between the Uncle and Nephew, he return'd, and Nicolas gave him the Duchy of Sleſwick, and the Command of his Army againſt Henry Godeſcalchus Prince of the Sclavonians, called Obotritæ. Canutus gain'd ſeveral Victories againſt this Prince; but at laſt he procur'd him a Peace, and got him to good Terms with the King of Denmark: In Acknowledgment of this Service, Henry left Canutus Heir of his Dominions in 1122; and in 1125, the Emperor erected his Principality cipality into a Kingdom. Magnus, Nicolas's Son, being afraid that Canutus, when his Father was dead, might ſet up his Claim to the Crown of Denmark, got himſelf aſſaſſinated in 1133. He is put in the Martyrs Kalendar, though he did not ſuffer for any Point of Faith: His Feſtival is kept on the 10th of July. * Saxo Grammaticus. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

CAPISTRAN, (John) a Monk of the Order of S. Francis, born in 1385, at Capiſtran, near Aqueila in Abruzzo, in the Kingdom of Naples: His Father was a Gentleman of Anjou, one of the Train of Lewis Duke of Anjou, who had been crown'd King of Naples at Avignon three Years before. John went through Claſſical Learning in his own Country, and afterwards ſtudied the Law at Benigia, where he married, and was made a Judge; but happening to adhere to Ladiſlaus's Intereſt, King of Naples, againſt the Burghers of Perugia, he was ſeized and confin'd. As ſoon as he recover'd his Liberty, he ſold all his Eſtate, and turn'd Franciſcan in a Convent at Perugia in 1415: He went through all the Strictneſs of Diſcipline, and had ſeveral Promotions in his Order: He was ſeveral times Inquiſitor, particularly againſt the Fratricelli and Biſoches, who were of the ſame Sect. Pope Eugenius IV. made him his Nuncio in Sicily, and employ'd him at the Council of Florence to work the Re-union of the Greeks with the Latin Church. He ſent him with a Publick Character to the Dukes of Burgundy and Milan, to diſengage them from the Council of Baſil, and from the Intereſt of Felix V. He diſpatch'd him likewiſe to Charles VII. King of France. Nicolas V. made him Apoſtolick Commiſſioner in Germany, Bohemia and Hungary. And here his preaching converted, as they call it, ſeveral Hereticks; Capiſtran, with the Aſſiſtance of S. Bernardine of Sienna, took a great deal of Pains in reforming his Order. He manag'd with great Zeal and Activity againſt the Jews, and at laſt did his beſt againſt the Turks. Being declar'd Preacher of the Croiſade, in which Ladiſlaus King of Hungary, the brave Hunniades Vaiwode of Tranſylvania, and George Deſpot of Ruſſia, were engaged; Capiſtran, in the Year 1456, appear'd at the Head of the Chriſtian Army before Belgrade, then beſieged by Mahomet II. Here he was in Hunniades's Quarters, who had the greateſt Share in raiſing the Siege, and gaining a Victory over the Infidels. He died three Months after, in the Convent of Willech in Hungary, at ſeventy one Years of Age. He was beatifyed by Pope Leo X. and canoniz'd by Pope Alexander VIII. in the Year 1690. * Wading. Annal. Minor. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

* CAPITOL. In this Temple, conſecrated to Jupiter, the moſt ſacred and valuable Curioſities belonging to the Republick were lodged: Of this ſort were the Sibylls Book, the Ancilia or Shields, ſaid to fall down from Heaven, &c. In this Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus they made their Vows, and took the Oaths of Allegiance: And here the Magiſtrates, and thoſe who had the Honour of a Triumph, preſented themſelves to thank the Gods for their Victory; and to pray for the Proſperity of the Empire. This Fortreſs was the laſt Retreat of the Romans in the firſt Gauliſh War. The Enemy had ſurpriz'd it in the Night by Scalado, had they not been repulſed by Manlius, awak'd by the Noiſe of the Geeſe: This happened in the Year of Rome 364, and 390 before the Incarnation. Manlius for this Service had the Surname of Capitolinus, and was afterwards thrown down the Precipice of this Capitol, for graſping at ſingle Sovereignty. Caſſiodorus in his Chronicon, ſupported by the Teſtimony of Varro, and ſome other Authors, mentions a Capitol built by Numa Pompilius, and different from that of the Tarquins. * Plin. Lib. 3. Dionyſ. Halicarn. Lib. 4. Varro, Lib. 4. Valer. Maxim. Lib. 1. Caſſiodor. in Chronic.

CAPITO, a Roman of a barbarous and ſanguinary Temper: He commanded a Company in Judea in Florus's Army: His Inhumanity was carried to ſuch an Exceſs, that he maſſacred a great many Jews in cold Blood when they went to wait upon the Governor, and caſt themſelves at his Feet. This happened in the twenty fifth Year after our Saviour's Paſſion, and in the twelfth Year of Nero's Reign. * Joſeph de Bello Judaic. Lib. 2. cap. 25. Simon, Diction. de la Bible.

* CAPITULARS, ſignifies in general a Book divided into ſeveral Chapters or Capitula; but by particular Application, is taken for a Collection of Civil and Canonical Law, and more eſpecially for thoſe Laws and Regulations which the Kings of France made at the Publick Meetings of the Biſhops and Temporal Lords. The Biſhops drew up thoſe Regulations under diſtinct Articles which they thought neceſſary for Diſcipline, forming them, for the moſt part, upon the ancient Canons. The Temporal Lords made Proviſion for the Civil Government of the Kingdom: Both theſe being confirm'd by the Royal Aſſent, were publiſh'd and receiv'd. The Execution of what related to Church Affairs was intruſted with the Archbiſhops and Biſhops; and thoſe Capitulars which concern the Temporal Government, were put into the Hands of the Earls and other Lords; and in caſe they prov'd remiſs in their Office, ſpecial Commiſſioners were diſpatched by the King for this purpoſe, called Miſſi Dominici. The Capitulars were in Force through all the Kingdom, and not only the Biſhops but the Popes have been govern'd by them. Childebert, Clothaire, Dagobert, Carloman, Pepin, and particulary Charlemagne, Lewis the Debonair, Charles the Bald, Lotharius, and Lewis II. have ſet forth a great many Capitulars; but this Cuſtom was diſuſed in the Reign of the third Race of the French Kings. Anſegiſus, Abbot of Lobbes, or of Fontenelles according to Baluzius, made the firſt Collection of this kind, conſiſting of the Capitulars of Charlemagne and Lewis the Debonair. This Collection, divided into four Books, was approv'd by Lewis the Debonair, and Charles the Bald. After him, in the Year 845, Benedictus Levita, Deacon of Mentz, collected the Capitulars of the two Emperors above-mention'd, omitted by Anſegiſus; to which he added the Capitulars of Carloman and Pepin. This Collection was divided into three Books, which, with the four laſt-mention'd, makes ſeven. The firſt ſix Books were publiſh'd by Du Tillet in 1548, and the whole Collection of ſeven Books by the Pithœi. Father Sirmond printed ſome Capitulars of Charles the Bald; and laſtly, Baluzius has furniſh'd a fair Edition much enlarged, and reviſed from ſeveral Manuſcripts: 'tis printed at Paris in two Volumes, Folio, 1677. It takes in the Original Capitulars of the Kings of France, the Collections of Anſegiſus and Benedictus Levita, with ſome other Pieces.

From the Eighth Century and forward, the Biſhops called their Synodal Regulations for Diſcipline Capitula, or Capitulars: They were commonly drawn from the Canons of Councils, or the Determination of the Fathers. Theſe Deciſions carried the Force of Law no farther than the Dioceſe where they were publiſh'd, unleſs approv'd by a Council, or the Metropolitan; in which latter Caſe, they were obſerv'd through the whole Province. However, ſome Prelates frequently took in the Capitula, publiſh'd by a ſingle Biſhop. Thus, for Inſtance, the Regulations of Martin Archbiſhop of Braga were received; thoſe of Pope Adrian I. deliver'd to Angilram, or Engarran, Biſhop of Metz, in the Year 785; thoſe of Theodulphus, Biſhop of Orleans, from the Year 797; thoſe of Hincmar Archbiſhop of Rheims; and thoſe of Iſaac Biſhop of Langres. * Doujat, Hiſt. du Droit Canon. Baluz. Præfatio ad Capitularia.

CAPNOBATÆ, a Name anciently given to the Myſians in Aſia: They had this Addition, becauſe they made the Worſhip of the Gods their whole Employment: Their Diet was Milk, Honey and Cheeſe, not eating any Fleſh, nor any thing that had Life in it. To come cloſer to their Diſtinction, they were call'd Capnobatæ, from the Smoak of the Incenſe which they burnt, much oftner than other People. * Strabo, Geogr. Lib. 7.

CAPRARA, an Iſland in the Gulph of Venice, over-againſt the Coaſt of Capitanata in the Kingdom of Naples. Some Geographers take it for the old Teutria. * Maty, Diction.

* CAPRARIA, or La Capraia, a little Iſland between Corſica and Italy, in the Sea of Genoa: 'Twas formerly inhabited by a great many Monks; 'tis now ſubject to the Genoeſe, who keep a Garriſon there: They ſeiz'd it in 1507 from Giacomo de Maro, then Lord of the Iſland: 'Tis eighteen Miles in Compaſs, and conſiderably populous: There is a Town in it with a good Caſtle, to defend the Country againſt Pyrates. The old Writers call'd Ægilon, Capraria and Capraſia. * Plin. Lib. 3. cap. 6. Ptolom.

* CAPREOLUS, Aurelius's Succeſſor in the See of Carthage, ſent his Deacon Beſula to aſſiſt at the Council of of Epheſus in 431. The deplorable Condition of the African Churches, occaſioned by the Incurſions of the Vandals, hindring the Prelates from going thither, Capreolus wrote a ſmall Tract, by way of Anſwer to Vitalis and Conſtantius, two Spaniſh Chriſtians, who had aſked his Opinion, whether 'twas lawful to ſay God was born of a Virgin: He gave his Reſolution in the Affirmative, proved there was but one Perſon in our Bleſſed Saviour, and confuted thoſe of a different Sentiment. In this Treatiſe, he mentions the Condemning Neſtorius and his Hereſy by the Council of Epheſus. This Diſcourſe was publiſhed by Sirmondus, and printed at Paris in 1630. Capreolus wrote a Letter to the Emperor Theodoſius the Younger. Vincentius Lirinenſis ſpeaks much to the Advantage of this Prelate. * Acta Concil. Epheſini. Liberatus, in Breviario. Fulgentius, adverſus Pelagianos. Sirmondus's Edition of Capreolus.

CAPTIVITY. (The Jewiſh) The Learned are divided about the Beginning and End of this Captivity, to which the Holy Scripture aſſigns ſeventy Years. Petavius begins it from the firſt Removing of the Jews in the firſt Year of Nebuchadnezzar, and the fourth of King Jehoiakim. Archbiſhop Uſher ſets it a Year lower; Tirinus, and others, begin the Computation from the thirteenth Year of Joſias's Reign, forty Years before the latter taking Jeruſalem. Cajetan, Genebrard, with other Chronologers, fix the Beginning to the ninth Year of Nebuchadnezzar, at the ſecond Removal, when Jeconiah was carried off from Jeruſalem to Babylon, and Zedekiah ſet up in his Place: But Labbé begins the ſeventy Years of the Jewiſh Captivity from the eleventh and laſt Year of Zedekiah, when the Temple was burnt, the Town razed, and all the People haled out of the Country; and concludes this Period in the firſt Year of Cyrus's Reign over all the Eaſt. The Reaſons with which he ſupports his Opinion, are as follows: The firſt is taken from the xxvth Chapter of Jeremy, v. 2. And all this whole Land ſhall be a Deſolation and an Aſtoniſhment: And theſe Nations ſhall ſerve the King of Babylon ſeventy Years. His ſecond Proof is fetch'd from the xxixth Chapter of the ſame Prophet, v. 10. where 'tis ſaid, After ſeventy Years are accompliſhed at Babylon, I will cauſe you to return to this Place. He argues thirdly from the laſt Chapter of the ſecond Book of Chronicles, v. 20. The Words are theſe: And them that had eſcaped the Sword, carried he away to Babylon, where they were Servants to him and his Sons until the Reign of the Kingdom of Perſia; to fulfil the Word of the Lord by the Mouth of Jeremiah, until the Land had enjoyed her Sabbaths. For as long as ſhe lay deſolate, ſhe kept Sabbath to fulfil threeſcore and ten Years. Now in the firſt Year of Cyrus King of Perſia, &c. Theſe Paſſages mention an entire Demolition of Jeruſalem, which did not come to paſs till after the Burning of the Temple, which was neither in the firſt Year of Zedekiah, nor in the fourth of Jehoiakim, nor in the thirteenth of Joſiah. As for the End of the ſeventy Years, 'tis marked in theſe Words, until the Reign of the Kingdom of Perſia. Now Cyrus having reigned two and twenty Years in Perſia, made War upon the Babylonians, and having ſlain or depoſed Nabonidas, who is Darius the Mede, mentioned in Daniel, his Monarchy began to extend over all Aſia, and held nine Years: 'Tis this Extent of his Empire which the Scripture calls the firſt Year of the Reign of Cyrus King of Perſia. The End of the ſeventy Years Captivity is ſtill more clearly mark'd in the firſt Chapter of Ezra, inſomuch that 'tis a little ſurprizing to find ſome of the Fathers throw the End of the Captivity as far as the ſecond Year of Darius Hyſtaſpes, third King of Perſia. * Labbé, Introduction to his Chronology, Cap. 39.

* CAPUA. The firſt Council of Capua was convened by the Emperor Valentinian in the Year 391. 'Twas to take up the Difference between Flavianus Biſhop of Antioch, and Evagrius Paulinus's Succeſſor in the ſame See. Theophilus Biſhop of Alexandria, and the Biſhops of Egypt, were pitch'd upon for Judges; but Flavianus refuſed to own them under that Character. Bonoſus, Biſhop of Naiſſe, a Town in Dacia, was impeached before the Council for being ſo hardy as to aſſert that the Bleſſed Virgin had Children by Joſeph after our Saviour's Birth. The Council referred this Difference to Aniſius Biſhop of Theſſalonica, and the other Biſhops of Macedonia. Theſe Prelates forbid Bonoſus going to his Church. In this Synod, ſeveral Queſtions concerning Rebaptization, Reordinations, and Tranſlations of Biſhops, were diſcuſſed. * Ambroſ. Epiſt. 56. Epiſt. Papæ Stricii inter Opera Sancti Ambroſii. Ibid. Baron. ad Ann. 389.

CARA-COIN, in the Turkiſh Language ſignifies the Black Sheep. 'Twas the Standard of a Family of the Turcomans who ſettled in Armenia and Meſopotamia under the Tartar Moguls, of the Family of the Gengizkan, in the Year of our Lord 1397. The Sultan Ahmed Ilekhani, Son of Avis or Veis, (to whom Tamberlane after his Conqueſts returned the Principality of Bagdet) gave Cara Mohammed, Captain General of the Turcomans Auxiliaries, the Command of his Troops. After the Death of Cara Mohammed, Cara Joſeph or Iſſuff had a Grant of his Father's Poſt from the ſame Sultan: But this Turcoman proved remarkably ungrateful for the Favours received by him and his Father; for he ouſted Ahmed of his Dominions, and chaſed him from Bagdet. This is that Cara Joſeph from whom the Dynaſty of the Cara Coinlu or the Black Mutton derive their Original. Theſe Turkomans carried their Conqueſt into Natolia, and ſettled there. Thus their Name remains ſtill upon the Country about Trepizonde, the ancient Colchis; for the Turks now call it Cara Coinlu Ili, or the Country of the Black Sheep. The Leſſer Armenia has a contrary Diſtinction of Ac Coinlu Ili, which ſignifies the Country of the White Muttons. The Modern Greeks call theſe two Families of the Turcomans, Mauroprobatadæ, and Aſproprobatadæ. Haſſan Ali, the fourth Sultan in Deſcent from Cara Coinlu, was routed and ſlain by Haſſan Beg, or Uſancaſſan, Founder of the Dynaſty of the White Mutton. This happened in the Year of the Hegyra 873, and of the Incarnation 1458. Thus ended the Dynaſty of the Black Sheep, which began in the Year of the Hegyra 810. * Nighiairiſtan.

CARACTER, or a Letter of the Alphabet. The Medaliſts obſerve, that the Greek Caracter, cut in great Letters, continues uniform in all Medals without the leaſt Alteration of Figure, notwithſtanding the Greek Alphabet has varied in common uſe both in Shape and Pronunciation. This Caracter held unaltered as far as the Emperor Gallienus, after whoſe Reign 'twas leſs round and more pinched. From the Reign of Conſtantine the Great to the Emperor Michael, that is, through the Courſe of five hundred Years, there are none but Latin Caracters to be met with. After this Michael, the Greek Caracters came up again, but alter no leſs than the Language, which was now but a Hotch-potch of Greek and Latin. The Latin Medals have kept their Language and their Character ſomewhat better. About the Reign of Decius, the Caracter began to alter and to loſe its Roundneſs and clear Stroak; but ſome time after the Beauty revived, and it continued tolerably fair till the Emperor Juſtin, when it ſunk to a ſlovenly bungled Figure, as may be ſeen in the Reign of Michael above mentioned: This Misfortune grew bigger upon the Progreſs of time. The Latin Caracter decay'd into the Gothick Form. From hence it may be collected, that when the Caracter is round, and well cut, 'tis a Mark of Antiquity.

* CARAFFA. 'Tis obſerved by Genealogiſts, that this Illuſtrious Family has furniſhed one Pope, twelve Cardinals, two Patriarchs, thirty ſix Archbiſhops and Biſhops, a Great Maſter of Malta, a Lieutenant Governor to the Great Maſter, a great many Knights of the Golden Fleece, Grandees of Spain, Princes, Dukes, &c. * Sanſovin, Famil. Ital. Ammirato, Fam. Napolet. Aldemarius, Hiſt. Geneal. de Caraf. Imhof. Hiſt. Geneal. d'Ital. Petra Sancta. De Thou. Paul Jove, &c.

* CARAMIT. For afterwards at the General Council of Epheſus, Morery Vol. I. read the General Council of Chalcedon.

CARANCEBES, or Karancebes, a Fortreſs of Upper Hungary, ſituate upon the Confluence of the Rivers Karom and Temes, two Leagues above Temeſwar. Carancebes is a Place of great Importance, as being a Guard to the famous Paſs into Tranſylvania called Eiſenthor, or the Iron Gate. * Maty, Diction.

CARASU, a River of Natolia: It riſes in Great Caramania, in the Mountain of Antitaurus, croſſes part of Aladulia, continues its Courſe through Caramania the Leſſer, runs by Tarſus, and then falls into the Mediterranean. The Water of this River is ſo very cold, that Alexander the Great fell into a dangerous Sickneſs by bathing in it. And the Emperor Frederick Barbaroſſa, in his Return from the Holy War, died by venturing into it, A. D. 1100. * Maty, Diction.

CARA-

CARAVIGIOLUS, (Bernardine) a Spaniard, and Cardinal of the Title of the Holy Croſs, was much valued by the Popes Alexander VI. and Pius III. Being piqu'd againſt Julius II. he retired to Piſa, ſtruck in with the Emperor Maximilian, with Lewis XII. of France, and other Princes, that Pope's Enemies. He preſided in the Council of Piſa in 1511, and was afterwards employ'd in Buſineſs of Conſequence by Adrian VI. and Clement VII. He died in 1522, ſeventy ſeven Years of Age. * Mariana Hiſtor. Hiſpanic.

CARCHI, a ſmall but very fruitful Iſland: It lies in the Mediterranean, to the Weſt of the Iſle of Rhodes, between the Iſland Scarpanto and Cape Crio, upon the Coaſt of Natolia. * Maty, Diction.

CARCORA, a Town in the Kingdom of Barca in Barbary. It ſtands upon the Gulph Sidra, at the Mouth of the River Melell. 'Tis taken for the old Diacherſis. * Maty, Diction.

CARDUEL, or Cartuel, a Country of Aſia: 'Tis Part of Georgia Proper, and confines upon the Tartars of Dagheſtan and the Kingdom of Zacheti to the Eaſt: It has Irvan to the South, the Kingdoms of Baratralu and Imirette to the Weſt, and Circaſſia to the North. The Country has the Title of a Kingdom, though tributary to the King of Perſia, who is Maſter of Teflis, which Town was formerly Capital of the Country; but now Kori or Ghori has that Privilege, being the Reſidence of the King of Carduel. * Maty, Diction.

* CARINUS. Correct Part of this Article in Morery, Vol. I. thus: After the Death of Carus the Father, and Numerianus his Son, who had followed his Father in his Eaſtern Expedition, Carinus, whom he had left in Gaul as Cæſar, then riſing to the Imperial Character, oppoſed Diocleſian, who had been elected Emperor by that Army in the Eaſt.

CARIOVALDUS, General of the Batavi, joined the Romans to reinforce Germanicus. The Cheruſſi counterfeiting a Rout, drew him into a Plain ſurrounded with Woods: Under this Diſadvantage, he ſuſtained the Enemy's Charge a great while, and threw himſelf into the warmeſt Part of the Battle: But at laſt, being overſet with Numbers, he was wounded, diſmounted, and ſlain. * Tacit. Annal. Lib. 2. Cap. 11.

CARISTO, a Town with a Biſhop's See in Greece. It ſtands upon the Eaſtern Point of the Iſle of Negropont, over-againſt the Iſle of Andros. * Maty, Diction.

* CARLISLE. For this Dioceſe contains all Weſtmorland, and part of Cumberland, Morery, Vol. I. read all Cumberland, and part of Weſtmorland.

* CARLOMAN. To what is related of this Prince in Morery Vol. I. may be ſubjoined, that he travelled to Rome with a great many Gentlemen of his Court; and received the Tonſure and Habit of a Clerk from Pope Zachary in the Year 747, and afterwards retired to Mount Soracte, where he turned Benedictine; but finding himſelf too much viſited here, he removed to Mount Caſſin, where he was received incognito, and paſſed only for a French Stroller, who came thither to do Penance for his Wickedneſs. There was another French Monk who came along with him. The Abbot ſet them both to work in ſome of the coarſeſt Offices of the Houſe, and put them under the Correction of an ill-humoured Fryar, who gave Carloman two Blows, which he received without the leaſt Complaint. This Monk, who was ſo buſy with his Correction, was one of the Cooks. To check his Peeviſhneſs a little, Carloman's Companion ventured to tell him when he ſtruck, God and Carloman forgive you. But the Monk giving him a third Blow, Carloman's Companion, who had not altogether ſo much Patience as that Prince, ſnatch'd up a Peſtle, and laid the Cook over the Head, with this Sentence, You Raſcal of a Servant, I hope neither God nor Carloman will pardon you. Petronax, Abbot of the Monaſtery, put this French Monk in Priſon; and aſking him why he beat his Brother the Cook, his Anſwer was, Becauſe this Raſcally Servant had the Impudence not only to abuſe, but to give ſeveral Blows to the beſt and the moſt noble Perſon he knew living. Who then, ſays the Abbot, is he whom you call the moſt noble Perſon? 'Tis our Prince Carloman, ſays the Frenchman, who has reſigned his Dominions, and all the Grandeur of the World, for the Love of Jeſus Chriſt. Carloman, notwithſtanding his being diſcovered, continued to live like a common Monk, ſtoop'd to the meaneſt Offices, and ſometimes kept Sheep. Before his Retirement, he convened a Council in Germany, in 742, for reforming the Clergy and Monks. Boniface, Archbiſhop of Mentz, preſided in his Council, and had the greateſt Share in perſuading Carloman to give up his Government, and turn Monk. * Leo Oſtienſis, Lib. 1. Ado, Vienn. Regino. Adrian. Valeſ. Mabillon. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

CARLSTAT, a Town in the Circle of Franconia in Germany: 'Tis fortified with a Citadel: It ſtands upon the Main, in the Biſhoprick of Wurtsburg, four Leagues below the Town of the ſame Name. * Maty, Dict.

CARLSTEIN, a Town with a very ſtrong Caſtle within the Circle of Podberdesk in Bohemia: It ſtands upon the Miſa, four Leagues from Prague to the South Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

CARMELI, Campo Carmeli, formerly called Scythiaca Regio, Scetis, Scitis, and Nitria; a Country in Egypt. It lies between the Nile, the Mediterranean, Libya, and Thebais. It takes in the Deſarts of Scetis and Nitria. In the firſt Ages of the Church, this Country ſerved for a Retirement to a great many People of ſolitary Tempers: And 'twas probably for this Reaſon called Mount Carmel, becauſe Elijah lived privately there.

CARNERO, (The Gulph of) or Carnario, or Quarner: 'Tis Part of the Gulph of Venice. It reaches from the Weſtern Coaſt of Iſtria, to the Iſle Groſſa, and the Coaſt of Morlachia. Within this Gulph the great Iſlands of Cherſo, Veglia, Arba, Oſero, and a great many ſmall ones, are ſituated. 'Tis called Carnero upon the ſcore of the frequent Wrecks which happen there. 'Twas formerly called Sinus Liburnicus, becauſe it lay upon the Coaſt of Liburnia. * Maty, Diction.

CARNIA, a Country belonging to the State of Venice in Italy. It lies in the Northern Quarter of Friuli, upon the Confines of Carinthia, at the Foot of the Alps Carnicæ; ſtretches as far as the Head of the River Tajamento, to the Confluence of the Fella. There are three Towns in it, Tolmezo the Capital, Ponteba Venita, and Guardegnano. * Maty, Diction.

CARO, (Hannibal) made a nice Tranſlation of Virgil into Italian: The Correctneſs of the Style, the keeping cloſe to the Author's Senſe, and the Happineſs of the Expreſſion is ſuch, that it may paſs for an Original. Beſides this Tranſlation, he wrote ſeveral Original Pieces. The Genteelneſs and Delicacy of the Turn is the diſtinguiſhing Character of this Poet. * Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes, Tom. 7. pag. 292.

* CAROLINE, the Name of four Books made by Charlemagne's Orders againſt the Second Council of Nice. Their being publiſhed by his Authority, and under his Name, was the Reaſon they were called Carolines. The Gallican Church tolerated the Uſe of Images without allowing them any Worſhip, for fear it might be abuſed to Superſtition, eſpecially conſidering there were Remains of Paganiſm in ſome Places. The Croſs, and the Conſecrated Plate, had ſome Reſpect paid them, but Images were altogether unworſhipped. In this Controverſy, France kept the Middle-way between the Iconoclaſts who broke the Images, and would not endure the Sight of them; and the Eaſtern Anti-Inoclaſts, who approached them with very ſolemn external Worſhip. The Caroline Books were carried to Rome, and preſented to Pope Adrian by Angilbert, Abbot of Riquier, Charlemagne's Envoy. The Pope, who held cloſe to this Council of Nice, wrote an Anſwer in Defence of Image-Worſhip, and ſent it to the Emperor. But Adrian's Letter made no Impreſſion either upon the Opinion or Practice of the Gallican Church. For in the Council of Frankfort, held in 794, the Sentiment of the Eaſtern Chriſtians was diſaproved, and all ſorts of Image-Worſhip condemned: Which Proceedings were likewiſe followed by the Council held at Paris in 824. Some Authors have queſtioned the Genuineneſs of theſe Books: Some Writers aſſign them to Angilram Biſhop of Metz, others to Alcuinus; and a third ſort will have them Counterfeit. But notwithſtanding the Author is not known, there is no Reaſon to queſtion their being written in Charlemagne's Time, and by his Order. Pope Adrian's Anſwer, the Councils of Frankfort and Paris, are convincing Evidence for the Authority of theſe Books. * Preface to the laſt Edition of the Caroline Books. See Collier's Church Hiſt. Vol. I.

CARON, a great River in Perſia, formerly called Eulæus and Choaſpes: It riſes near the Confines of Yerack Agemi, runs through all the Province of Chuſiſtan, comes up to the Town Suſa or Shuſhan, and falls into the Gulph Balſera: 'Tis the ſame River which the Prophet Daniel called Eulai. * Maty, Diction.

CARONIA, a Town in Sicily upon the Northern Coaſt of the Valley of Devils, between the Mouth of the River Pollino and Cape Orlando. * Maty, Diction.

CARPUS, a Burgher of Troas in Phrygia, who entertained S. Paul in his laſt Voyage to Rome. The Greeks make Carpus one of the ſeventy two Diſciples, report him one of S. Paul's Companions in preaching the Goſpel, mention his Martyrdom, and ſet his Feſtival to the 26th of May. Euſebius ſpeaks of another Carpus, Biſhop of Thyatira in Aſia, and who ſuffered Martyrdom with ſeveral others in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. The Greeks keep his Anniverſary on the 13th of October, which amongſt the Latins is Carpus of Troas's Holiday. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Lib. 4. cap. 14. Tillemont, Mem. Eccleſ. Baillet, Vies des Saints, October.

CARPIANS, a People of the Province of Zeugitana in Africk. This Nation giving no Diſturbance in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius, began to revive the War upon the Roman Empire when Maximus and Balbinus were joint Emperors. Zoſimus in Philip's Life relates this Matter at length; and for farther Evidence, there is a Medal remaining with this Inſcription: IMP. PHILIPPUS AUG. CARDICA. It ſhou'd be CARPICA. The Emperor Aurelian made a Conqueſt of them afterwards, and removed part of them into the Roman Empire. Diocleſian afterwards followed his Precedent. The Senate would have given Aurelian the Name of CARPICUS; but he thinking this too ſlender an Addition, refuſed it. * Vopiſcus, in Vit. Aurelian. Caſaubon & Salmaſius in loc. B. Rhenan. rerum Germanic. &c.

CARPINETO, a Town within the Patrimony of S. Peter in Italy; it has the Title of an Earldom, and ſtands upon the Mountain Carpineto, near Anagnia in Campagnia di Roma. * Maty, Diction.

CARPIO, a Spaniſh Town in Andaluſia, ſtands upon the Guadalquivir, between Corduba and Andaxat, five Leagues from the firſt, and ſeven from the latter. Some take it for the old Corbulo. * Maty, Diction.

CARPOCRAS, or Carpocrates, an Hereſiarch, living in the Second Century. His Heterodoxies are mentioned in Morery, Vol. I. He had a Son called Epiphanes, who maintained his Sentiments. Cerinthus and the Gnoſticks were his Diſciples. The Adamites likewiſe took up part of his Extravagancies. He had a great many Followers; ſome of them had particular Marks at the Tip of their Ear: They had Pictures of our Saviour in Painting and Baſs-Relievo, which Cerinthus pretended were made by Pilate's Order before our Saviour's Paſſion. They put Chaplets or Crowns upon theſe Images, worſhipped them, and ſet them up with the Figures of Pythagoras, Plato, and Ariſtotle. Irenæus relates, that a Woman of this Sect called Marcellina came to Rome in the Pontificate of Anicetus, in the Year 160, and perverted a great many People. Epiphanes, Carpocrates's Son, underſtood the Belles Lettres, and Plato's Philoſophy: He wrote a Book upon the Subject of Juſtice, upon Platonick Principles; and defines the Juſtice recommended by God Almighty to be Community with Equality; and attempts to prove, that not only Lands and Goods, but Women ought to be left common. This Epiphanes died at eighteen Years of Age, had a Statue ſet up for him, and was worſhipp'd as a God at Samos in Cephalonia. * Irenæus, Lib. 1. cap. 24. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 27. Tertul. de Præſcript. cap. 48. Clemens Alexandrin. Lib. 3. Stromat. &c.

CARPZOVIUS, (Benedictus) Son to a famous Lawyer of the ſame Name, in the Marquiſate of Brandenburg: He was Chancellor to the Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs of Saxony, Counſellor to the Elector Chriſtian II. and one of the Judges for Appeals. He was born in 1595, and died in 1666. He was a Perſon of Character in the Law. His Works are, Practica rerum Criminalium, ſeveral times reprinted in Folio: Definitiones Forenſes, vel Juriſprudentiæ Forenſis, Romano-Saxonica ad Conſtitutiones Electoris Auguſti: This Folio likewiſe ran through ſeveral Editions in 1640. He publiſhed his Commentary ad Legem Regiam Germanorum. To theſe may be added, Reſponſa Juris Electoralia: Definitiones Eccleſiaſticæ & Conſiſtoriales, with the Tree of Conſanguinity and Affinity: Proceſſus Juris Saxonici. Fol. Carpzovius has the Reputation of writing the beſt upon the Practice of the Law in Germany: That his Conſtitutions, Precedents, and ruled Caſes, are extracted from the Publick Records. The latter part of his Time he retired to Leipſick, where he gave himſelf wholly to the Study of the Holy Scripture, read the Bible through three and fifty times, conſulted Commentaries, and made Notes upon it. He died in the ſeventy ſecond Year of his Age. * Paulus Freherus, Theatr. Claror. Viror. Biblioth. des Auteurs du Droit Civil. par Denys Simon.

CARRANZA. We have ſeveral Works of this Archbiſhop, viz. his Summa Conciliorum & Paparum, &c. He likewiſe publiſhed a Spaniſh Catechiſm for the Uſe of his Dioceſe, and an Inſtruction for profitably hearing and underſtanding the Maſs. His chief Performance is his Sum of the Councils, which comprehends a great deal of Matter in a ſmall Compaſs. His Catechiſm was cenſured by the Spaniſh Inquiſition; but being afterwards laid before the Congregation commiſſioned by the Council of Trent for examining Books, 'twas approved by them in 1563, and ſigned with a creditable Atteſtation. When this favourable Deciſion was known in Spain, the Count de Lerma complained of it to the Fathers of the Congregation, and deſired them to recall their Judgment. The Congregation refuſing to comply, the Biſhop of Lerida, either ſet on by the Count, or his own Fancy, plaid his Satyr againſt the Aprobation, citing ſeveral Paſſages, which by this Biſhop's Conſtruction ſeemed to deſerve Cenſure, and laying Load at the ſame time upon the Deputies of the Congregation. The Preſident of the Congregation complained of this Uſage to the Legates, demanded Reparation for himſelf and his Collegues, proteſting he would not appear in any Publick Buſineſs till he had received reaſonable Satisfaction. Cardinal Moron took up the Difference with the following Temper: He obliged the Congregation not to give out Copies of the Atteſtation; and that the Biſhop of Lerida ſhould make his Excuſe for publiſhing Books againſt them. As for the Count de Lerma, he drew back the Atteſtation he had put into the Hands of the Agent at Toledo; and ſo the Quarrel was laid aſleep. Carranza, in his Treatiſe of the Reſidence of Biſhops, aſſerts Epiſcopacy to be Jure Divino, and that maintaining the Contrary was a Diabolical Opinion. * Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 26. Spondan. A. C. 1559. Num. 29. Le Cardinal Pallavicin, Hiſt. du Conc. de Trente. Covarruvias, Var. lib. 13. cap. 13. Eiſengrenius, in Catal. Teſt. Verit. Bellarmin. in Tom. 1. Controv. 7. Lib. 2. cap. 8.

CARRE, (Lewis) born in 1663, near Nangis in Brie, was a great Philoſopher and Mathematician: He publiſhed a famous Book entituled, Methode pour la Meſure des Surfaces, la Dimenſion des Solides, leurs Centres de Peſanteur, de Percuſſion & d'Oſcillation, en 1700. M. Carre was at laſt made a Penſioner in the Academy of Sciences; his Buſineſs was to examine the Powers of Mechaniſm: He made ſeveral curious Remarks upon the Cauſes and Variety of Sounds. He died in 1711. * Fontenelle, Hiſtoire de l'Academie des Sciences de 1711.

CARTCHEMA, or Kareſma, are large Wooden Buildings upon the High Roads in Poland; the Stable makes two Sides, with a large Space in the middle for Carts, and at the End there is a Chamber with Cloſets, which is a ſort of Store Room, where the Maſter of the Cartchema keeps his Proviſions; ſo that take it altogether, it is a Store-Room, a Granary, and a Shop. The large Room has a Chimney made like an Oven, according to the Faſhion of the Country. All Travellers lodge together, Men and Women, and every body makes uſe of the Hoſts Fire without any Preference; and that which is moſt particular is, that every Traveller, without any Regard to Difference of Condition, comes into theſe Houſes, lodges there, and goes away without taking any Notice of the Inn-keeper, or having any thing to do with him, except juſt paying him for his Forage. Theſe ſlovenly Inns ſtand very thick, and are ſeldom more than half a League Diſtance from each other. Every Village that is any thing conſiderable has one of them, becauſe they furniſh Trade, and carry off a great Part of the Product of the Country. He that is Owner of the Town, makes a Peaſant or a Jew Inn-keeper in his Cartchema; and gives him Hay, Oats, Straw, Beer and Brandy to put off; which are all the Commodities ſold in theſe Places. The great Inconveniences of theſe Lodgings ings are, the Slovenlineſs and Stench of the Apartments, the Neighbourhood of Cows, Calves, Poultry, and little Children, who quarter in the ſame Place with the Traveller: Beſides, Holidays are extremely troubleſome, for then all the Village crowds into the Cartchema, where they drink, ſmoak, dance, and make a ſtunning and frightful Noiſe, without the leaſt Regard to any Quality. The great Towns have theſe Cartchemas in the Suburbs; they ſtand commonly at the Entry, the Middle, and the End of Foreſts in Deſart Places, and where the Provinces are leaſt populous. * Memoires du Beaujeu.

*CARTHAGE.

The Churches and Councils at Carthage.

The African Churches were not planted by the Apoſtles, neither was there in their time any Preachers ſent thither by them. Petilian is poſitive, that the Africans were the laſt People of the Empire that receiv'd the Goſpel. As for S. Auguſtin, in his Book de Unitate Eccleſiæ, cap. 15. he does not affirm that Chriſtianity was planted in Africk in the Apoſtles Times: He only aſſerts, that ſome barbarous Nations receiv'd the Goſpel later than the Africans. Tertullian, in his Preſcriptions, does not range the African Chriſtians amongſt the Apoſtolick Churches: 'Tis true, Salvian, in his Seventh Book de Providentia, ſeems to ſay the Church of Carthage was founded by the Apoſtles; but this Author being of another Country, and much later in time, his Teſtimony is not ſo conſiderable as thoſe above-mention'd. Nicephorus and Dorothens relate, that Simon the Canaanite, ſurnamed Zelotes, and S. Peter, preach'd the Goſpel in Africk; but this Account is wholly fabulous. S. Auguſtin in his 43d Epiſtle, Pope Innocent I. in his Epiſtle to Decentius, and Gregory the Great, Lib. 7. Epiſt. 32. poſitively declare, that the Africans received the Goſpel from the Romans; that is, as much as to ſay, the Biſhops of Rome ſent Miſſionaries, who founded the African Churches. The Chriſtians there grew numerous in a little time, and the Goſpel flouriſhed for ſeveral ſucceſſive Ages. The Perſecutions raiſed by the Pagan Emperors made a great many Martyrs there, whoſe Sufferings, as Tertullian expreſſes it, was a Vital Principle to the Church, and brought in a great many Converts: In S. Cyprian's Time, the Church of Carthage was diſturbed with the Schiſm of Feliciſſimus and Novatus. The Schiſm of the Donatiſts, which began upon the ceaſing of the Diocleſian Perſecution in the Year 311, occaſioned a Rupture in the African Churches, which laſted above three hundred Years. The Irruption of the Vandals, who took Carthage in the Year 439, almoſt quite ruined the African Churches: The greateſt part of the Biſhops were baniſhed, and the See of Carthage was vacant a long time. But after Belizarius, A. D. 534, recovered Africk for the Emperor Juſtinian, the Catholick Religion revived, and held in a good Condition, till the Moors and Saracens ſeized the Country. This Revolution of the State bore hard upon the Church; inſomuch that in Gregory the Great's Time, there was not above three African Biſhops, with a very ſmall Number of Chriſtians to take care of.

Agrippinus, Biſhop of Carthage, convened the Biſhops of his Province, and thoſe of Numidia, when Zepherinus was Pope: And here it was decreed, that thoſe who had been ſprinkled by Hereticks, ſhould be Re-baptized. That this was Matter of Fact, appears from S. Cyprian's 71ſt Epiſt. When this Saint was Biſhop of Carthage, he held two Synods, A. D. 252; one in April, touching the Caſe of Victor, a Prieſt, who had been received to Communion by his Biſhop, and concerning Infant Baptiſm, which was there approved. The other Synod was held in June the ſame Year, where the Degrees of Diſcipline, and the Manner of reconciling Penitents, were debated. He held a third Synod A. D. 254, touching the Caſe of Marcian Biſhop of Arles, who had joined the Novatians, and Baſilides and Martialis, two Spaniſh Biſhops, charged with Idolatry. Farther, S. Cyprian drew three other Synods to Carthage in the Years 255 and 266. The Subject of the Debate was the Baptiſm of Hereticks, which was voted null by the African Biſhops; though Stephen Biſhop of Rome declared for the contrary Practice. In the Year 305, the Biſhops of Numidia held a Council at Cirta; and the ſame Biſhops held another at Carthage in 311, conſiſting of ſeventy Prelates. Here Cecilian ordained Biſhop of Carthage by Felix of Aptunge, tunge, was condemned as a Traditor by Contagion; and thus decreeing this Biſhop depoſed, they ſet up Majorinus in his Place, who was Chaplain to one Lucilla, a wealthy High-ſpirited Lady; and this was the beginning of the Donatiſts Schiſm.

Gratus Biſhop of Carthage finding the Donatiſts Schiſm ſomewhat ſuppreſs'd by the Conduct of Paulus and Macarius, diſpatch'd by the Emperor Conſtance for that purpoſe, convened a Council in the Year 348, called the firſt Council of Carthage: Here the Prelates condemn'd repeating Baptiſm in the Name of the Trinity. 'Twas likewiſe declar'd, that thoſe who leapt down a Precipice, or kill'd themſelves, ſhould not be counted Martyrs, though the Donatiſts treated them as ſuch. Farther, thoſe who profeſs'd Single Life, were forbidden to dwell or hold any Converſation with Perſons of the other Sex. There are likewiſe ſome other Regulations paſs'd relating to Diſcipline: For Inſtance, the ſettling the Number of the Bench for trying Eccleſiaſticks, is ſomewhat remarkable. A Deacon was to be try'd by three Biſhops, a Prieſt by ſix, and a Biſhop ought to have twelve of the ſame Character to give Judgment either for or againſt him. The ſecond Council of Carthage met in the Year 390, under Biſhop Genethlius, and paſs'd thirteen Canons. There was another held in the Year 394, which, though mention'd in the Code of the Canons of the African Church, is not reckon'd to the Councils of Carthage. Thus the Council of Carthage, held in the Year 397, ſtands for the third: This Council made fifty Canons relating to the Conduct of Biſhops and Prieſts.

That which is call'd the fourth Council of Carthage, was held in the Year 398. Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage preſided in it. This Synod, which was very numerous, made a hundred and four, or a hundred and five Canons. The Biſhops of this Council ſent Commiſſioners to the Emperor Honorius, to intreat him to ſuppreſs the Remains of Idolatry in Africk: They ſucceeded in their Addreſs. There was another National Council held there in the Year following, concerning which we have nothing upon Record. In the Year 401, Aurelius convened a Provincial Council for diſpatching ſome Agents to Pope Anaſtaſius, and Venerius Biſhop of Milan: Their Buſineſs was to procure ſome Eccleſiaſticks to ſupply the Churches unprovided and diſturbed by the Donatiſts Schiſm. Venerius ſent Paulinus, who, at S. Auguſtin's Inſtance, wrote S. Ambroſe's Life. This Synod drew up nine Canons, and order'd another Meeting for September following. They met accordingly in the Veſtry of the Church Reparata; and here S. Auguſtin was one of the principal Promoters of the Reſolution then taken, for allowing the Donatiſts their Sacerdotal Character, provided they return'd to the Church: And thus, by granting them the Degrees of Deacon, Prieſt or Biſhop, which they brought along with them, they recover'd a great many from the Schiſm. This laſt Synod paſs'd ſeventeen Canons, which, with thoſe immediately foregoing, are reckon'd to a fifth Council of Carthage, ſuppos'd to be held in the Year 398, though the true time is A. D. 401. In the Year 403, a General Council was held at Carthage, in which the Catholick Biſhops of each See were order'd to hold a Conference with the Donatiſts. The Donatiſts, inſtead of obeying the Summons, applied to Violence and rugged Expedients. To ſtop this Outrage, another Council meeting, A. D. 404, ſent Commiſſioners to addreſs the Emperor to check the Barbarity of the Circumcellians, and correct the Donatiſts. In the Year 405, there was another Council, in which an Order paſs'd, that all the Provinces ſhould ſend Repreſentatives to a General Council; that the Judges ſhould be requeſted to endeavour the uniting the Donatiſts and Catholicks; and that Thanks ſhould be return'd to the Emperor for the Reſtraint and Diſcountenance put upon the Donatiſts. In June, A. D. 407, a great Council met at Carthage, in which twelve Canons were paſs'd for the Regulation of Diſcipline. The next Year, there were two more; to which may be added one in 409, and another in 410. All theſe Councils planed the way to the Conference held at Carthage in A. D. 411; 'twas between the Donatiſts and Catholick Biſhops, before Count Marcellinus. Thus far the main Buſineſs of the Councils of Carthage was to ſuppreſs the Donatiſts Schiſm. The following Synods met againſt Celeſtius and Pelagius. The firſt was condemn'd in the Council of Carthage, held at the end of the Year 411; and the Errors of both of them were cenſur'd by the Councils of

Car-

Carthage and Milevis, held in the Year 416. Pope Zoſimus, Succeſſor to Innocent I. happening to be ſurpriz'd by Celeſtius, and writing in Favour of his Heterodoxy, the African Biſhops, to the Number of two hundred and fourteen, aſſembled in the Council of Carthage, A. D. 417, ratified the Sentence formerly paſſed againſt Celeſtius and Pelagius, and wrote a long Letter to the Pope, in which they complain of his being too ſudden and uncautious in giving Credit to Celeſtius. The Year following, another Council convening at Carthage, made eight Canons upon the Subject of Grace, and twelve upon Diſcipline. The ſame Year, and that following, the African Biſhops held Councils at Carthage to examine the Caſe of Apiarius a Prieſt, who had appealed from his Dioceſan to Pope Zoſimus. In theſe two Councils, they diſowned Zoſimus's Privilege for receiving Appeals from Africk: As for Zoſimus, he pretended to ſupport his Claim by the Canons of the Council of Nice, which he either wilfully or ignorantly miſtook for the Council of Sardica. The laſt of theſe African Councils paſs'd ſeveral Canons for Diſcipline. In a Council held A. D. 424, when Celeſtin was Pope, they maintain'd the Decree of the preceding Council touching Appeals. Laſtly, the African Biſhops condemn'd the Monothelites, in a Council held at Carthage in 646, and wrote a Letter upon this Subject to Paul of Conſtantinople. * Codex Canonum Eccleſiæ Africanæ. Beveridge, Pandectæ Canonum, &c.

CARTHAGE, or Carthago, a Town in Northern America, within the Audience or Precinct of Guatimala in New-Spain, and in the Province of Coſta Rica; though Baudrand ſets it in the Province of Veragua: 'Tis, as it were, in the middle of the Country, between the two Seas, where there are ſeveral Places which ſerve for a Haven: 'Tis about fifty Leagues from the Town of Panama to the Weſt. Carthage, though no great Town, is a Biſhop's See, the Reſidence of a Governor, and has ſome Monaſteries and Nunneries. * Herrera, cap. 13.

CARUS, (Joſeph Mary) a modern Italian Author, who has made it his Buſineſs to ſearch for old Liturgick and Service-Books. In 1683, he publiſhed a Latin Pſalter from two Editions; the one called the Roman, the other the Gallican, with the Hymns to theſe two Editions; and in 1686, he publiſh'd a Book of Hymns and Prayers; the Antiphonaries and Reſponſes of the Roman Church, according to the Order they are ranged in by Gregory the Great, with Additions, containing a great many Records concerning the Ancients Reſponſes, and the Curſus Eccleſiaſticus, or Divine Service, with Notes. He has ſince publiſhed a Collection of old Prayers uſed in the Office of the Church of Rome, under the Title of Antiqui Libri Miſſarum Romanæ Eccleſiæ, id eſt, Antiphonarius Gregorii Papæ, Comes ab Albino, ex Caroli Magni præcepto emendatus. Alii Lectionarii, & Capitulare Evangeliorum, omnia ex MSS. vel primum edita, vel emendata. This Collection was printed at Rome in Quarto in the Year 1691. There is a Diſſertation at the Head of it, concerning that Part of the Service ſung at Maſs. * M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. XVII.

CASALMACH, or Irio, a great River in Natolia in Aſia: It riſes in Antitaurus, upon the Borders of Aladulia, runs by Tocat and Amaſia, and falls into the Black Sea to the Eaſt of Laly. * Maty, Diction.

* CASAS, (Barthelemi de Las) Biſhop of Chiapa. One Sepulveda a Doctor of Divinity, publiſhing a Book in Latin to juſtify the Outrage and Barbarity practiſed by the Spaniards againſt the Indians, Las Caſas thought himſelf obliged to confute this Sanguinary Reaſoning, and expoſe the Inhumanity of the Performance. The Diſpute was referr'd to the Deciſion of the Univerſities of Alcala and Salamanca, who ordered Sepulveda's Book ſhould be ſuppreſs'd. Notwithſtanding this Award, 'twas printed in the Vulgar Language, and ſent to Rome. The Emperor Charles V. advertis'd of what paſs'd, ſent expreſs Orders to forbid the Publication, and ſeize the Copies. Sepulveda and the Biſhop of Chiapa were ſummon'd to appear before the Council-Royal of the Indies, where they pleaded their Cauſe. Soto made a favourable Report for the Biſhop of Chiapa; but nothing was determined. Las Caſas wrote Memoirs entituled, Briéva Relation de la Deſtrucſon des Indies; in which he declaims againſt the Cruelty and Savage Roughneſs with which the Spaniards treated the Indians. Theſe curious Memoirs were printed at Seville in 1552, tranſlated into French by James Miggrode, and printed in the Year 1582; turn'd into Latin, and publiſh'd at Frankfort in 1598; and into Italian by James Caſtellani, and printed at Venice in 1643. There has lately been a new French Verſion printed at Paris in 1697. This Author wrote a Tract in Latin for reſolving this grand Queſtion, Whether Kings and Princes have any Prerogative from Law and Title to transfer the Allegiance of their Subjects, and put them under the Juriſdiction of any other Prince or Perſon? This very curious Piece has been printed twice in Germany: The Author goes to the Bottom of the Queſtion, and touches upon very nice Points, concerning the Rights of Princes and People. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. XVII.

CASELOUTRE, (or as the Germans call it) Keyſers-Lautern, a Town in Germany within the Palatinate of the Rhine: It ſtands upon the ſmall River Lauter, at the Frontier of Deux-Ponts, and had a Caſtle built by the Emperor Barbaroſſa; 'twas formerly a Free Imperial Town; but in the Year 1402, 'twas ſtruck out of the Matricula or Regiſter of the Empire by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, who mortgaged it to the Elector Palatine, to whom it has belong'd ever ſince. 'Tis four German Miles from Deux-Ponts to the Eaſt toward Spire, from which 'tis Equi-diſtant. * Sanſon, Baudrand.

CASILLAS, (Thomas) a famous Dominican Miſſionary of Andaluſia; he went into Spain with Dom Barthelemi de las Caſas, who failed thither with forty three Monks of the ſame Order to preach Chriſtianity to the Infidels. Father Caſillas was made their Superior. As ſoon as they arriv'd in the Province of Chiapa, Caſillas divided his Monks, and ſent them off into ſeveral Quarters, as the Buſineſs of his Miſſion requir'd. He underwent great Fatigues in his Employment, and drew a ſevere Perſecution upon him upon the ſcore of his maintaining Barthelemi de las Caſas's Sentiment, and appearing againſt the Spaniards Barbarity to the Natives: He built Convents, converted a great many Indians, and made ſeveral of them Monks of his own Order. Dom Barthelemi de las Caſas having reſigned his Biſhoprick, his Catholick Majeſty, in 1551, nominated Caſillas to ſucceed him. He govern'd the See much to Commendation for fifteen Years, and died in 1567. His Grave being opened forty ſeven Years after his Death, his Corpſe and his Pontifical Habit was found unalter'd and entire. * Theat. Eccleſ. Hiſpan. inter Epiſcop. Chiap. Remel. Hiſt. Prov. Chiap. & Guatim. Lib. 4. cap. 15, 16, 17. Font. Theat. Dom. pag. 166.

CASIMIR, a Town of Poland in the Palatinate of Lublin, near the Viſtula: 'Tis a commodious Town to lodge in, handſomely built, and well furniſh'd with the Conveniencies of Life: And to be ſomewhat particular, here are the beſt Cellars, and the only good Spring Water upon all this Road: 'Twas formerly one of the moſt conſiderable Towns in Poland. The Houſes about the Market-Place were ornamented with Baſs Reliefs, and Stone Figures: To which may be added ſeveral fair Churches; but the Beauty and Magnificence of theſe Buildings is now almoſt ſunk into Ruins. The Town ſtands upon a Hill, ſurrounded with Woods, and makes a handſome Proſpect in Form of an Amphitheater, almoſt as far as the Viſtula. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

CASMAN, (Otho) died in 1607: He wrote ſeveral Books with remarkable Titles, viz. Pſychologia, Anthropologia, Coſmopœia, Angelographia, Uranographia, Syſtema Politicum, Anti-Socinus, &c. * Konig. Biblioth.

CASOLI, a Town fortified with a Caſtle, and gives the Title of a Principality: It ſtands in the Hither Abruzzo, within the Kingdom of Naples, three Leagues from Lancaiano to the South-Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

CASPE, a Town of Arragon in Spain, with an old Caſtle, upon the River Ebro, where it receives the Guadalupa, three Leagues from the Frontiers of Catalonia, and twelve below Saragoſſa towards Tortoſa. 'Twas here that Ferdinand Infante of Caſtille, and Duke of Pegnafiel, was declar'd King of Arragon in 1412. The Choice was made by the Nine Electors, the States of that Kingdom had pitch'd upon for this purpoſe; ſix of theſe nine were gained by Dint of Bribery, and by the Intrigues of Peter de Luna, called Bennet XIII. who wanted Ferdinand's Intereſt to ſupport him in his Schiſm. * Voyage d'Eſpagne. Baudrand. Bourgon. Geogr. Hiſtor.

CAS-

CASPIN, a Town in Judea: The Burghers were ſo unadviſed as to revolt from the Jews at Jeruſalem in the time of Judas Maccabeus: They relied on the Strength of their Walls and Works, on a numerous Garriſon, and Store of Proviſions and Ammunition. Upon this Confidence, they inſulted and railed on the Jewiſh General. Judas immediately prepar'd to correct their Inſolence, and after having recommended himſelf and the Enterprize to God Almighty, he aſſaulted the Town, carry'd it by Storm, and made ſo great a Slaughter of the Garriſon and Burghers, that a neighbouring Pond, two Furlongs over, was throughly tinged with the Colour of Blood. 2 Maccab. cap. xii.

CASSADER, (William) Auditor of the Rota, Biſhop of Sardinia, made a Collection of the Caſes ruled by the Rota, from the Year 1513 to 1523. * Hiſt. du Droit, par Denis Simon.

* CASSANDER, Son of Antipater: This Prince's Father raiſed Polyſpercon to one of the chief Places in the Adminiſtration. Notwithſtanding he had the Power of a King, he forbore aſſuming the Title. After his Marriage with Theſſalonice, Alexander's Siſter, he return'd to proſecute his Conqueſts in Greece.

* CASSANDER, (George) born at Bruges in 1515. He was one of the moſt learned Men of his time. To be particular, he was a good Linguiſt, underſtood the Belles Lettres, and was a great Lawyer and Divine. He taught publickly at Bruges, Ghent, and elſewhere, with great Reputation. At laſt he confined his Studies to Controverſial Divinity, and publiſh'd a Book de Officio Pii Viri, &c. His Name not being ſet to it, Francis Baldwin, who was the firſt that carry'd it into France, was taken for the Author: This Miſtake embroil'd him with John Calvin, who wrote againſt him. Baldwin defended himſelf in a Preface ſet at the Head of Optatus's Works, dedicated Johanni Lucanio, which ſtands for Calvino, and in a Book written on purpoſe on the Law de Libellis Famoſis, where he denies being the Author of this Treatiſe. Calvin return'd Baldwin a peeviſh Reply; and now Caſſander thought it proper to diſcover himſelf, and defend his Book in Print, which was ſtill farther attack'd in High-Dutch: To this he likewiſe made a Reply. This reconciling Book gave Satisfaction to no Party who carried Matters to Extremity; for ſome of the Roman Catholicks, as well as the Calviniſts, were diſpleaſed at it. Thus Heſſelius, Bredembachius, and Cenalis, of the Roman Communion, wrote againſt it. However, his Deſign was approv'd by Perſons of Temper and Moderation; and the German Princes thought no Perſon better qualify'd to take up the Differences in Religion. As to Caſſander's Character, he was of a gentle and unambitious Temper, perfectly mortify'd to the Temptations of Honour and Wealth; and thus having no Fancy for Fortune and Figure, he lived retired, and as it were out of Sight. He ſeems to have had no other View, than the Peace of the Church: His Studies, which were his only Employment, tended to this Point; and his main Intention, as far as may be collected, was to find out Truth, and teach it others. He died in February 1566. His Works were all printed at Paris in Folio in 1616. * Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 28. 36. & 38. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVI.

CASSANDRIA, or Shiatto, an Archiepiſcopal Town of Macedon in Greece; it ſtands upon the Point of Cape Caniſtro, twenty ſeven Leagues from Salonichi to the South. * Maty, Diction.

CASSARO, formerly Cacyrum, a great Town in the Valley of Noto in Sicily: It ſtands upon the River Jaſibili, four Leagues from its falling into the Ionian Sea, and ſix from Syracuſe to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

CASSENA, a Town of Nigritia in Africk: Tis the Capital of the Kingdom of Caſſena, bounded on the North by the Deſart of Lempta, on the South by the Nile, which parts it from the Kingdom of Zegzeg. It has the Kingdom of Cano to the Weſt, and that of Gangara to the Eaſt. Beſides the Capital Caſſena, this Kingdom has the Towns of Turca and Nebrina within it. * Maty, Dict.

CASSIAN, (John) a Scythian by Birth, and a famous Anchorite of the Fifth Century. He ſpent the firſt of his Youth in a Monaſtery at Bethlehem, where he made an intimate Acquaintance with the Monk Germanus. From hence they travell'd over Paleſtine, and went into Egypt; from whence, after ſeven Years, they return'd to their firſt Monaſtery: They ſpent ſome time in the Deſarts of Scetis in Egypt. During their Stay in this Solitude, the Quarrel about Origen's Books began between Theophilus Archbiſhop of Alexandria, and the Fratres Longi. Upon this Emergency, Caſſian and Germanus were obliged to retire. And after having ſtaid ſome time at Bethlehem, they came to wait upon S. Chryſoſtom at Conſtantinople. This holy Biſhop gave them a friendly Reception, and ordain'd Caſſian a Deacon. Notwithſtanding the Traverſes Caſſian met with, and the Imputations thrown upon him, his Memory has the Honour of a Saint, not only in the Dioceſe of Marſeilles, but through all Provence, where his Feſtival is kept upon the twenty third of July: He died upon this day, A. D. 448, being ninety ſeven Years of Age. Caſſian's Style, according to Photius's Repreſentation, is ſuitable to his Matter; for beſides his Perſpicuity, he has an inſinuating perſuaſive Manner. His Method is very ſignificant to his Purpoſe, and the Argument is managed with great Judgment and Addreſs. His eight laſt Books of Inſtitutions are not only plentifully furniſh'd with moral Inſtructions, but over and above, the Motives for Conviction are natural and ſtrong: They recommend Vertue, expoſe Vice, and lead to Remorſe with great Advantage and Efficacy. All the Authors who mention him agree, that he had a particular Talent for writing clearly; but then his Style has nothing of Grandeur, or the Sublime in it. By his Manner and Prefaces, we may conclude he wrote in Latin: However, 'tis ſomewhat probable his Works were tranſlated into Greek; for Photius, who had read them, ſays nothing of their being writ in Latin. Eucherius abridg'd them, as is obſerv'd in Gennadius's Book de Scriptoribus Eccleſiaſticis. After him, one Victor Africanus endeavour'd to ſtrike out all the Paſſages in Caſſian which croſs'd upon S. Auguſtin's Opinion, and to inſert ſome Supplemental Thoughts which he fancy'd wanting. To prove this Matter of Fact, we have Caſſiodorus's Authority, who ſays he expected to ſee this Book. There are Extracts from Caſſian in the fourth Book of the Lives of the Fathers, publiſhed by Roſweidus; but the Author of the Collection is unknown. There has been a great many Editions of Caſſian's. In that printed at Arras in 1628, Alardus has inſerted an Apology for Caſſian, entituled, Vindiciæ Titulares. pro Sanctitate Johannis Caſſiani. The laſt Edition was printed at Paris in 1642. * Gennadius, cap. 63. Photius, Cod. 197. Baronius. Bellarmin. Poſſevin. Miræus, Voſſius. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. V.

* CASSIODORUS. (Magnus Aurelius) Amongſt his Philoſophical Tracts, that of the Soul is one of the moſt valuable. Caſſiodorus wrote in a middle Style, and, conſidering the Age, correctly enough. He is very Sententious, and full of Moral Reflexions. His Commentaries upon the Epiſtles of S. Paul, upon the Acts and the Revelations, are loſt. The Commentaries reckon'd to him upon the Canticles, are none of his. He died at above ninety Years of Age, in the Year 562: The beſt Edition of his Works is that publiſh'd at Rohan by Garecius in 1679. The Father S. Marthe, a Benedictine of the Congregation of Sainte-Maur, has printed this Author's Life, with learned Notes. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. VI.

* CASSIOPOEA. When the new Star appeared in 1572, within the Conſtellation of Caſſiopœa, all the famous Aſtronomers of that time wrote Diſcourſes upon it. Among the reſt, Tycho Brahe and Kepler, the Abbot Maurolycus, Fortunius Licetus, Theodorus Graminius, &c. Theodore Beza believed it the ſame Star which directed the Magi to Bethlehem; and that the Phænomenon was ſent to foreſhew the Second Coming of our Bleſſed Saviour. The Landgrave of Heſſe, and Andreas Roſa, were of the ſame Opinion. This Fancy was firſt confuted by Tycho Brahe, and afterwards by the Event, which has effectually ſhewn the Vanity of the Prediction. * Mezeray, Abregé Chronol. au Regne de Charles IX.

CASTAGNETS. The Ancients had ſeveral ſorts of them: Firſt, that called Crotalum in Latin, was a ſort of Caſtagnet made of a Reed cut in two, long ways, and ſo fitted in the Figure, that theſe two Pieces ſtruck againſt each other with different Motions of the Fingers, and made a Noiſe like that which a Stork makes with her Bill. For this Reaſon, old Authors give the Epithet of Crotaliſtria to this Bird. The Poet Ariſtophanes calls a rank Gossiper Crotalus. Pausanias relates, that Pisander Camirensis would have it, that Hercules did not kill the Stymphalides with his Arrows, but that he frighted them with the Noise of these Castagnets: And if this Author may be believed, the Use of them must be very ancient. The Postures used with these Castagnets were sometimes undecent; for which Reason Clemens Alexandrinus, who reckons the Invention to the Sicilians, disallows this Diversion at the Christian Entertainments.

Crumata was another sort of Castagnets, made of little Bones or Shells, as Scaliger observes upon Virgil's Copa. They were much the Fashion with the Spaniards, especially those who lived in the Province of Betica, near Cadiz. The People of this Country hold their Fancy for this Instrument, and 'tis from them the French have taken it. These sort of Castagnets were not unknown to the old Greeks: Aristophanes calls them ὄστρακον, as much as to say Oyster-shells; and Juvenal calls them Testæ.

——— Audiat ille
Testarum crepitus cum verbis. Sat. XI. 169.

Crupezia are another sort of Castagnets, which they play'd on with their Feet: They called them Crupezia, from the Greek Word κρούειν, which signifies to strike, and πέζα, which, according to Hesychius's Etymology, signifies the Sole of the Foot. Pollux says these Crupezia were a sort of Shooes made use of by those who play'd upon the Flute. Arnobius, in his Seventh Book contra Gentiles, calls them Scabilla, and rallies their Superstition. What, (says he) are the Gods so much charmed with the Noise of Cymbals, and the Clatter of the Castagnets! Salmasius, who, in his Commentary upon the Life of Carinus, has muster'd all his Learning upon this sort of Castagnets, calls them Scabella, Scamilla, and Scamella, because they were made like a little Footstool, which were struck with a diversified Motion, with a Wooden or Iron Shoo. There were different sorts of these Castagnets. If the Reader is desirous to know more upon this Subject, he may consult Bartolinus's Book de Tibiis Veterum.

CASTEL, (Perard) of Vire in Normandy, an Advocate of the Great Council, was an eminent Lawyer, and died in the Year 1687. He wrote a Paraphrase upon the Commentaries of Du Moulin ad Regul. Cancellariæ, Fol. and Remarks upon Des Maison's Definition of the Canon-Law, which make the Performance very serviceable. In 1688, a summary Treatise of the Usages and Practice of the Court of Rome, for the Expedition of Signatures and Provisions of Benefices in France, with William Noyer's Remarks upon it, was publish'd in Castel's Name; but 'tis believed this Book was written by his Uncle, who was a Man of Character in the same Profession. * Biblioth. Histor. des Auteurs de Droit, &c. par Denys Simon, Edit. Paris.

CASTEL. (The County of) 'Tis a small Country in the Circle of Franconia in Germany. 'Tis divided into two Parts: The one of them lies between the County of Swartzenberg and the Bishopricks of Wurtzberg and Bamberg. 'Tis within this Moiety that the Town of Castel stands, which gives the Name to the Country or Earldom. The other Division of this Country lies within that of Wertheim and the Bishoprick of Wurtzberg. Remlingen is the chief Town within this Precinct. * Maty, Dict.

CASTEL-GUELFO, a Town in Italy within the Patrimony of S. Peter: It lies within the Earldom of Citta di Castello, upon the Frontier of the Duchy of Urbin, between the Towns of Urbin and Citta di Castello. There is another Castel-Guelfo within the Duchy of Parma: It stands upon the River Taro, between Parma and Borgo S. Donnino, two Leagues from the first, and three from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

CASTEL-MIRABELLO, formerly called Heraclea, a Town with a very good Haven and Castle, almost surrounded by the Sea: It stands upon the Northern Coast of the Isle of Candia, between the Towns of Candia and Setia, and about fifteen Leagues from each. * Maty, Diction.

CASTEL-DEL-OVO, formerly Megaris and Megaria, a small Island in the Tuscan Sea: It lies in the Gulph of Naples, and so near the Town, that a Stone-Bridge joins them both. There is a strong Fort in this little Island, called the Egg-Castle, upon the score of the Oval Figure. This Castle, where the Spaniards always kept a good Garrison, is the Castrum Lucullanum of the Ancients, whither Odoacer King of the Heruli banish'd the young Augustulus, the last Roman Emperor. * Maty, Diction.

CASTEL-PEDIADA, a Town in the Middle of the Island of Candia, eight Leagues from Candia to the East: Tis supposed to be the ancient Gnossus, then the Capital of Crete, which some Writers notwithstanding place at Ginosa, a neighbouring Village. * Maty, Dict.

CASTEL SARACINO, a Town of the Kingdom of Naples: It lies within the Basilicata, eight Leagues from Policastro to the East. Castel-Saracino was almost ruined by an Earthquake, which happened September 8, 1694. The Ground opened to a large Dimension, and threw out great Quantities of Smoak and Flame.

CASTELLANO, (Julio) of Fayenza in Italy, wrote Commentaries upon Tully's Academical Questions, and upon Aristotle de Intellectu Humano. He taught Philosophy at Rome several Years with great Reputation: After some time, his Salary was withdrawn by Sixtus Quintus's Parsimony. This Discouragement, with the consequent Indigence, threw him into a deep Melancholy. 'Twas not long before the Pope changed his Mind, and gave him a Bishoprick. This seasonable Relief made so strong an Impression upon Castellano's Spirits, that notwithstanding he had borne his Poverty with great Equality of Temper and Resignation; notwithstanding he had stood the Shock thus handsomely, the Bulk of so unexpected a Satisfaction prov'd too much for him, threw Nature into a Commotion, and strangled him with Pleasure, at fifty eight Years of Age. His Works are, Commentarii in Libros Aristotelis de Humano Intellectu, ex Doctrina Philosophorum Christianorum descripti. Notæ in Cyropædiam. Adversus Ciceronis Academicas Quæstiones Disputatio. * Thuan. Histor. Teisser, Eloges des Hommes Illustres.

CASTELLI, a Town of the Kingdom of Naples, in the Farther Calabria, upon the Gulph of Squilaci or di Castelli, to the South of S. Severina, a League from the small Town Isola and Cape Rizzuto. * Maty, Diction.

CASTELLINI, (Luke) of Fayenza in Italy, Vicar-General of the Order of S. Dominic, and afterwards Bishop of Cantazaro in Calabria, lived to the Year 1630, and wrote several Books, viz. De Electione & Confirmatione Canonica Prælatorum, præsertim Regularium; three Tracts of the Canonization of Saints, and Theological Disputes upon the Sacraments. This Author is a good Canonist, writes clear, and digests his Matter into a handsome Method; but then he leans too much upon the Authority of modern Authors, and makes use of History not always well vouched. * M. Du Pin, New Eccles. Libr. Cent. XVII.

CASTELLO, (d'Ampurias) formerly Castillo, a Town of Catalonia in Spain: 'Tis within the Vigurie of Gironne upon the Lobregat, two Leagues from Roses, and four from Ampurias. * Baudrand.

CASTELLO, (Della Pietra) a Town standing upon a Rock, well fortified: 'Tis near Adige in the Bishoprick of Trent, three Leagues from Trent, and one from Roverede: It belongs to the House of Austria. Some suppose it the Veruca of the old Rhætia, which others place at Chiusa, a Town in the Veroneze upon the Adige above Verona. * Maty, Diction.

CASTIGLIONI, or Castelio, (Balthazar) Bishop of Avila, lived in the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century: He was born at Mantua, and married the famous Hippolita Taurella: His Works are sufficient Proof of his Proficiency in Language and Learning. Pope Clement VII. gave him a Publick Character to the Emperor Charles V. to prevent the Misfortunes the Town of Rome was then threatned with. Castiglioni is charged with failing in Point of Integrity, and holding too close a Correspondence with his Imperial Majesty, who preferr'd him to the See of Avila; but he lived but a little while after this Promotion. He is reckon'd an Author of Character both upon the score of his Poetry and Prose: His Latin Poems are inserted in the first Tome of Deliciæ Poetarum Italiæ, collected by Janus Gruterus, under the feigned Name of Ranusius Gherus; and his Italian Pieces have been several times printed. Amongst his Latin Productions, there are some Elegies very nicely written.

Julius

Julius Scaliger commends one above the reſt, and makes no Scruple to preferr it to any thing of this kind done by Propertius. He affirms, nothing can be more polite, clean and entertaining than this Elegy. His Cleopatra, according to the ſame Critick, is able to charm and affect all ſorts of Fancies. Paulus Jovius reports it written in a Style perfectly noble and great. Here, ſays Scaliger, the Rhetorick is true, and the Thoughts ſublime: A Quality which Lucan ſtrained for, but could not reach it. But, ſays he, Caſtiglioni had Judgment and Talent to intermix the Sweetneſs of Virgil with the noble Manner natural to him. So that if Caſtiglioni had wrote all his Poetry with the ſame Force, he would have deſerved to have been ſet in the next Claſs to Virgil. * Paulus Jovius, in Elog. Doct. cap. 77. pag. 178. Jul. Scaliger, Hypercrit. 6. Poetic. pag. 797. Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Poëtes.

CASTIGLIONE, (The Lake) de Paſſignano or Perugia, formerly Thraſimene. Hanibal, the Carthaginian General, made this Place famous by a great Victory got upon the Romans, commanded by the Conſul Flaminius. 'Tis obſerved that the two Armies fought with ſuch Heat and Concern, that they did not perceive an Earthquake which happened during the Action. As to the Lake, 'tis about three or four Leagues from Perugia. The Figure is round, and the Circumference about ſeven Leagues. 'Tis uncommonly well ſtock'd with Fiſh, and three little Iſlands lie within it. * Baudrand.

CASTIGLIONE DI PISCARIA, or di Piſcala, a Town of Italy within the Territories of Siena in Tuſcany, near the Mountain Piſcala: It ſtands upon a Canal, through which the Lake Buriana or Caſtiglione falls into the Tuſcan Sea, between the Mouth of the Ombrona and the Gulph of Piombino. * Maty, Diction.

* CASTILLIO or Caſtalio. (Sebaſtian) Scevola de Sainte Marthe reports him "An honeſt well-meaning "Man, and perfectly dead to the Solicitations of Am- "bition. He was ſo humble and unpretending, that he "made no Scruple of working upon the little Farm he "had in the Suburbs of the Town where he taught "Children." But then the ſame Author obſerves, that he took too much Freedom in Religious Subjects, out of an Affectation for Style and Politeneſs. He taxes him farther with great Imprudence for undertaking a French Tranſlation of the Bible: A Man, ſays he, who ſpent all his Time in reading Greek, Hebrew, and Latin Books, and had almoſt quite forgotten the Language of his own Country. Thuanus, under the Year 1563, gives the following Account of him: 'Sebaſtian Caſtalio of Dauphiné, ſays "he, fancying himſelf both a Linguiſt and a Philoſopher, ventured, in the Opinion of a great many Men, "to touch Holy things with Hands not ſufficiently clean "for that purpoſe. For notwithſtanding he was under-qualified for ſo great a Performance, he was ſo "preſuming as to attempt a new Tranſlation of the Bible; though at the ſame time there was no perfect "Harmony between himſelf and the French and Swiſs "Proteſtants. The next Reporter ſhall be Father Simon. "Caſtalio, ſays this Critick, made a Latin Tranſlation "of the whole Bible, and re-touched it ſeveral times. "The firſt Edition is that of Baſil in 1551. The moſt "valued Edition was printed at the ſame Place in 1573; "but not having an Opportunity to get it, continues "this Author, I have made uſe of another Edition, "printed likewiſe with ſmall Notes at Baſil in 1554. "The Genevian Divines, and eſpecially Theodore Beza, "declaimed ſtrongly againſt this Verſion of Caſtalio: "They charge him with Ignorance and Temerity, and "reproach him with playing with the Holy Scripture. "This Cenſure may be ſeen more at large in the French "Preface to the Bible publiſhed in 1559. Farther, Beza and Caſtalio wrote one againſt another upon this "Argument: But Beza not underſtanding Hebrew, he "was forced to write upon the Authority of other Peo- "ple, who were poſitive that Caſtalio knew nothing of "Hebrew. However, it can't be deny'd but that Caſta- "lio was an Hebrician. For Proof, the Reader needs "only conſult his Critical Remarks at the End of his "Tranſlation. Indeed it muſt be granted, he was a much "better Proficient in Hebrew, Greek and Latin, than any "Geneva Doctor: But then he was not careful enough "to keep within the Character of a Tranſlator. He "ſtrained too much for Dreſs and Elocution, and by this "Affectation loſt the Force, and diſſerved the Majeſty "of the Text. This Fault runs through his whole Ver- "ſion. The Reader may judge of the Miſcarriage by "his tranſlating the firſt Words of Geneſis, which ſtand "thus: Principio creavit Deus cœlum & terram; cum au- "tem eſſet terra iners atque rudis, tenebriſque offuſum pro- "fundum, & Divinus Spiritus ſeſe ſuper aquas libraret, juſ- "ſit Deus ut exiſteret lux, &c." To this I ſhall ſubjoin M. Du Pin's Judgment, upon this Author. "Caſtalio, "ſays he, out of a ſtrong Opinion of his Sufficiency, has "made a Latin Tranſlation of the Bible: But here he "has given a ſecular and profane Turn to the Holy Wri- "tings: That noble Plainneſs, that natural Grandeur, "that admirable Force both in the Originals and other "Verſions, is not to be met with in his Tranſlation. His "Style is affected, over-dreſſed, and ſpangled with falſe "Luſter; and, in a word, wholly profane and unbecom- "ing the Subject. He is likewiſe too bold, ſhort of "Correctneſs and Fidelity; and which is more, he does "not always tranſlate in good Latin." Sixtus Senenſis, Genebrard, Huetius, and even a great many Proteſtants, are of the ſame Sentiment with the Criticks above mentioned: However, Buxtorf, Humfredus, Epiſcopius, and Bootius, are more favourable or partial, and either commend, or juſtify this Tranſlation. Caſtalio has been charged with going into the Sentiment of Bernardinus Ochinus upon the Subject of Polygamy. This Imputation, 'tis probable, might be faſtned by his tranſlating Ochinus's Dialogues into Latin. To conclude, Caſtalio died of the Plague at Baſil in 1563, at eight and forty Years of Age: He differed from Beza in ſeveral Points, particularly in the Articles of Predeſtination, Juſtification, and the Perſecution of Hereticks. * Beza, in Vit. Calv. Genebrard, in Præfat. Operum Origenis. Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 34. Sixtus Senenſis, Lib. 8. Bibl. Sanct. La Croix du Maine. Bibl. Franç. Sainte-Marthe, in Elog. Doct. Gall. lib. 2. Spondan. A. C. n. 77. Daniel Huetius, de Claris Interpretibus. Simon, Hiſtoire Critique du Vieux Teſtament, Lib. 2. cap. 27. M. Du Pin, Diſſert. Prelim. ſur la Bible.

CASTELLO DELLA MONTCLOVA, a Town in Spain in Andaluſia, between Eciga and Carmona, four Leagues from the firſt, and ſix from the latter. * Baudrand.

* CASTOR and POLLUX. Tully mentions a miraculous Judgment which happened to one Scopas, for ſpeaking contemptuouſly of theſe Twins. The Story is, that Scopas was cruſhed to death by his Chamber falling upon him, while Simonides, who had ſpoke honourably of theſe pretended Deities, was called out of the Room in time by two Perſons unknown. Phædrus, in the IVth Book of his Fables, gives a Detail of this Matter. The Greek and Roman Hiſtories are full of the miraculous Apparitions of theſe two, who came either to procure or bring News of a Victory: They were ſeen mounted, it ſeems, upon white Pads at the Battle between the Romans and the Latins near the Lake Regillum. But Tully is ſo frank as to diſcover what Credit theſe Stories deſerve. Homer, ſays he, who lived not long after Caſtor and Pollux, aſſures us, they were bury'd at Sparta; and that therefore they were too far off to travel into Italy, and bring Vatienus ſo early an Account of a Battle gained. However, the Romans built them a magnificent Temple, ſacrificed white Lambs, and aſſigned them a Feſtival, where a Man mounted, and holding another Horſe in his Hand, rode at full Speed, and at the End of the Courſe leapt upon the Led-Horſe: He had a ſparkling Star upon his Hat, to ſhow there was but one of the Brothers living at once.

CASTORIA, a Town belonging to the Turk in Macedon, with a Biſhop's See, Suffragan to the Archbiſhoprick of Ocrida: It ſtands near the Town Ocrida, on the Frontiers of Albania. * Voyage de Grece.

CASTRO, (Paul di) profeſs'd the Civil Law at Padua, Florence, Bologna, and Ferrara. His Reputation ran very high upon the ſcore of the Strength and Perſpicuity of his Reaſoning, and the uncommon Talent he had for diſentangling the greateſt Difficulties: Cujacius, and Ferdinand preferr him to all other Interpreters in that Faculty. The French Preſident Faber goes ſtill farther in his Commendation. His Words are, Paucos reperias poſt eum qui fuerint eo ſubtiliores. However, ſome Writers blame him for being too quick in his Reſolutions. Paulus died in 1437, after having read upon the Law

Law forty Years. He wrote upon the Digeſts, Codes, and Councils; and drew up a Body of the Municipal Law of Florence, where, notwithſtanding his being married, he executed the Place of the Pope's Vicar. * Biblioth. Hiſt. des Auteurs du Droit. par Denys Simon. Edit. Paris in 12°. 1692.

CASTREZ, (Les) Caſtrenſis Ager, a ſmall Country of France in Languedoc: 'Tis ſo called from the Town of Caſtrez, the Capital in the Southern Part of Albigeois: It ſtretches from Eaſt to Weſt between Albigeois Proper, Rouergue, Lauragais, and the Lower Languedoc, and has never a conſiderable Town excepting Caſtrez: 'Tis likewiſe called the Dioceſe of Caſtrez. * Voyage Hiſtorique de l'Europe, Tom. de la France.

CASTRI, ſo famous in ancient Hiſtory under the Name of Delphi, is now only an indifferent Town in Livadia. It ſtands at the Foot of the Mount Parnaſſus, ſeven Miles from the Gulph of Lepanto to the North. * Spon, Voyage de Grece.

* CASTRO: (Alphonſo de) His principal Performance is a Tract againſt Hereſies: In this Work he goes by the Alphabet, and does not follow the Order of Time. 'Tis a Medley of Hiſtory and Controverſy. The laſt Edition, enlarged, was printed at Antwerp in 1556, and dedicated to King Philip II. This Author had read a great deal, and writes tolerably well; but his Talent lay more for Controverſy than Hiſtory: He dilates more upon confuting new Hereſies, than in reporting old ones. * Wading, in Bibl. Franc. Eiſengrenius. Teſt. Verit. Nicolas Antonio, Bibl. Hiſpan.

CASTROM, a Town of Muſcovy, in the Province of Suſdal, fifty Miles from Moſcow to the North. 'Tis ſometimes called Caſtromorugarod. It ſtands upon the Volga, where the River Caſtroma falls into it, twenty German Miles below Jariſlau to the Eaſt, towards Niſi-Novogorod. * Relat. de Moſcovie.

CASTROMENA, a Town in Natolia. 'Tis about ten Leagues from the Black Sea, and from the Town Penderachi to the South: 'Tis commonly taken for the Old Claudiopolis, called likewiſe Bithynium, formerly an Archiepiſcopal See, afterwards removed to Penderachi. * Baudrand.

CASTRO de Urdiales, a ſmall Town in Spain: It ſtands upon the Coaſt of Biſcay. There is a Citadel and good Haven belonging to it, between Bilbao and Laredo, ſix or ſeven Leagues from the firſt, and four from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

CASTULO, a Town upon the Confines of the Celtiberians, mentioned by Plutarch in the Life of Sertorius. Stephanus de Urbibus calls it Caſtalo, and reports it a very large Town in Oretania, that is to ſay, in the Country of the Oretani in Hiſpania Tarraconenſis. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be now called Casbona la Vieia, in New Caſtile, upon the Borders of Andaluſia. * Lubin's Geographical Tables upon Plutarch's Lives.

CASUEL, or Gaſuel, the largeſt Bird next to the Oſtrich: 'Twas not known till 1597, when the Dutch brought it over from Java. The Academy of Sciences at Paris diſſected a Caſuel, kept four Years in the Menagerie at Verſailles. Monſieur Perrault, in his Memoirs, gives a Deſcription of this Anatomical Performance. This Bird feeds upon Pulſe and Bread, and, like an Oſtrich, ſwallows every thing thrown to her, though ſhe has no Gizard. Her Tongue is indented, notwithſtanding Aldrovandus's ſaying ſhe has neither Wings nor Tongue. Her Wings lie covered under the Feathers upon her Back; they are not above three Inches long, and are more ſerviceable for ſtriking than walking. Cluſius reports, that ſhe will break an Arm of a Tree as thick as a Man's Thigh with her Feet. * Memoires de l'Academie des Sciences.

CAT, or Cath, a large Town in the Province of Khuarezm, where 'twas formerly the Capital: It ſtands upon the Eaſtern Bank of the Oxus, or Gihow, in 38 Degrees Longitude, and 41 Deg. 6 Minutes Northern Latitude, according to the Arabian Calculation: 'Tis ſixteen Leagues from Hezar Esbe, the ſtrongeſt Town in all the Country. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orientale.

* CATACOMBES, Church-Yards, or Subterranean Places near Rome. The Word is commonly taken for a Vault about three Miles from Rome; where, as S. Gregory reports, S. Peter and S. Paul's Corpſe were lodged. In the early Ages, the Places where they buried the Dead were called Cryptæ: But afterwards, thoſe Caves which were made uſe of for Burying-places were called Catacombes, where, as 'tis pretended, none but Chriſtians were interred. However, for what any body knows, there may be Heathens and Saracens lodged amongſt them. Thus much is certain, that all the Corpſe buried there belonged neither to Martyrs or Saints; for theſe Cemeteries were common to all baptized. Now it muſt be allowed, that all Chriſtians can't be reckoned Saints and Martyrs: Beſides, the Marks for diſtinguiſhing the Martyrs from the reſt, are by no means convincing. The Croſs, the Palm-tree, the Letters I. C. The Figure of a Shepherd or a Lamb cut upon the Tomb-Stones, are good Proof of their being Chriſtians, but ſhort Evidence of their being Saints and Martyrs. The Palm-tree is no certain Emblem of a Crown of Martyrdom; and from the Vials being tinged with Red, they can't be inferred full of Martyrs Blood. Beſides, 'tis not certain whether the Vials were ſtained with Blood; 'tis poſſible it might be Oil, or ſome other Liquor. Farther, ſometimes the ſame Stone has Pagan Inſcriptions, as D. M. Diis Manibus, on one Side, and the Marks of Chriſtianity on the other: Which ſhews the Stone ſerved both for Pagans and Chriſtians. In the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, 'tis certain a great many Martyrs were bury'd in the Chriſtian Cemeteries, as S. Jerom and Prudentius aſſure us. However, in the Popedom of Gregory III. 'twas hard to find a Martyr in theſe Places. When Otgar, Archbiſhop of Metz, wrote to this Pope to ſend him the Corpſe of ſome Saint, his Holineſs let him know, he was not furniſhed to gratify him, becauſe his Predeceſſors and himſelf had removed all the Corpſe of the Saints into Churches newly conſecrated. * Mabillon, Itinerar. Ital. Euſebii Romani Epiſt. ad Theophil. Gall.

* CATANA, or Catania, a Town in Sicily. 'Twas built by Evarchus, and taken by the Chalcidians, who, according to Thucydides, ſettled there in the XIth Olympiad 736 Years before the Incarnation. But other Authors give it leſs Antiquity. However, 'tis certain Catana was a very conſiderable Town 467 Years before the Birth of our Saviour; and that King Hiero died there in the LXXVIIIth Olympiad, that is, 428 Years before the Incarnation. 'Tis not long ſince that the Remains of an Amphitheater, a great many Inſcriptions, and ſeveral other Marks of Antiquity, were to be ſeen there. At preſent, Catana is fortified with a Caſtle ſtanding upon a Rock, which ſecures the Haven. The Country about it is very fruitful; and, in ſhort, it has all the Advantages to make it a good Trading Town, but the Neighbourhood of Ætna: This Volcano is about twenty Miles diſtant. The Eruptions commonly happen every fifteen Years. At the Return of this Period, the Mountain opens, and diſcharges ſuch Torrents of Fire, as frighten the whole Iſland: And of this there was a terrible Inſtance in March 1669. Catana was almoſt ruined by an Earthquake, which happened in January 1693. Out of two and twenty thouſand Perſons in the Town, ſcarcely two thouſand eſcaped; a great number of private Houſes and Monaſteries were thrown down; and the Cathedral, a ſtately Structure, with a Porch, ſupported by ten Marble Pillars, was ruined, excepting three Chappels. In the Place where the Houſes were ſwallowed up, a Lake aroſe about four Miles in Compaſs. * Strabo, Lib. 6. Diodor. lib. 11. & 14. Procopius, lib. 1. de Bello Gothico. Polybius. Thucydides. Plin. Pomponius Mela. Cicero, &c. Rapportes par Leandre Alberti, en ſa Deſcript. des Iſles d'Ital. pag. 83, 84.

CATAPACTAYME, a Holiday, kept by the Peruvians in December; which Month they call Rayme, and begin their Year in't. This Feſtival is dedicated to three Figures of the Sun, Apointi, Churiunti, and Entiaquacqui; that is to ſay, to the Sun the Father, and to the Sun the Son, and the Sun the Brother. * Linſchoten, Hiſt. Ind. Occident.

CATAPANS; ſo the Governors were called which the Emperors ſent to Puglia and Calabria in Italy. Theſe Lords Lieutenants, as we may call them, are frequently mentioned by the Byzantine Hiſtorians. This made Monſieur du Cange fancy, a Chronological Table of theſe Governors might be very ſerviceable for underſtanding the Hiſtorians above mentioned. When the Goths were driven out of Italy, the Emperor Juſtinian ſent Viceroys thither; of which the firſt was Belizarius; after him Narſes, Narſes, (who called in the Lombards) then others who were ſucceeded by the Exarchs of Ravenna. The Governors who came after theſe Exarchs, were called Catapans, of which the Reader ſhall have a Liſt.

A Chronological Table of the Catapans.

Stephen, ſurnamed Maxentius, in the Reign of Baſilius the Macedonian.
Nicephoras Phocas.
Gregorius, A. D. 875.
Caſan or Caſſan Patricius, A. D. 883.
Joannicius Candidatus, A. D. 884.
Trapezius Straticus, A. D. 886.
Theophilact Strategus A. D. 887.
Conſtantine Patricius, A. D. 889.
Symbaticius Protoſphatarius, alias Sabbaticius Straticus.
George Patricius, - - - A. D. 891.
Barſacius Patricius, A. D. 892.
Coſmas Anthius Protopatricius A. D. 893.
Meliſſenus, or Meliſianus, A. D. 900.
Nicolas Patricius, ſurnamed Picyglus, A. D. 915.
Urſilco, A. D. 921.
Michael Schlavius, A. D. 926.
Imogalaptus, A. D. 940.
Platopotius, A. D. 947.
Meliſſenus, or Malatianus, A D. 951.
Marianus Patricius, A. D. 955.
Nicephorus Magiſter, A. D. 966.
Paſſarus Protoſpatha, A. D. 973.
Zacharias, A. D. 975.
Porphyrius Protoſpatha, A. D. 979.
Calocytus, Delphinas Patricius, A. D. 982.
Romanus Patricius, A. D. 985.
Sergius Protoſpatha, A. D. 987.
Nicholas Crites, A. D. 988.
John Patricius, likewiſe called Ammiropolus in 989, and Tubali in 990.
Macrotheodorus Excubitus, A. D. 996.
Gregorius Trachaniotes, A. D. 998.
Belus Barenſis, A. D. 999.
Xiphias Catapan, A. D. 1006.
Curcuas Patricius, A. D. 1008.
Baſileus Meſardonites, A. D. 1010.
Andronicus Turnices, A. D. 1017.
Baſilius Bugianus or Bajunus, A. D. 1018.
Abalantius Patricius, A. D. 1019.
Safarias Crites, A. D. 1023.
Leo Potus, A. D. 1027.
Michael Protoſpatharius Crites, A. D. 1032.
Conſtantinus Protoſpatha, A. D. 1033.
Leo Opus, A. D. 1037.
Nicephorus Dokiano, A. D. 1041.
Vaguſto Catapan, A. D. 1042.
George Maniaces, A. D. 1042.
Pardus Patricius, A. D. 1043.
Conſtantinus Theodorocanus, A. D. 1043.
Euſtachius Palatinus, A. D. 1045.
John or Raphael, A. D. 1047.
Argyrus Magiſter, A. D. 1051.
Alexius Charon, A. D. 1055.
Trombus, A. D. 1058.
Marules, A. D. 1061.
Sirianus, A. D. 1062.
Apochara, A. D. 1064.
Curiacus, A. D. 1066.
Mabrix, A. D. 1066.
Stephen Patrian, A. D. 1071. About this time the Greeks were expelled Puglia and Calabria by the Normans.
* Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latin.

CATECHUMENS. During the Time of the Catechumenate, the Catechumens received Impoſition of Hands: They gave them Bread and Salt; and when they were ready to be baptized, Milk and Honey. There was three Degrees of Catechumens: The firſt were called Audientes, who were only allowed to hear Diſcourſes upon Faith and good Life: The ſecond, Electi, who had farther Freedoms in the Church-Service. The third ſort were the Competentes, who being thoroughly inſtructed in the Creed, and other Doctrines of Chriſtianity, were prepared for Baptiſm. Catechumens were firſt received by making the Sign of the Croſs upon them, and Impoſition of Hands. A great many Churches uſed Exorciſms, breathed upon the Catechumen's Face, put Salt to his Ears and Noſtrils, and anointed his Shoulders and his Breaſt. They likewiſe put Salt in their Mouth. The Catechumenate laſted a longer or ſhorter time, according to the Diſpoſition or Improvement of the Perſon, and ſometimes the Period was prolonged, when the Catechumen happened to fall into Miſbehaviour. The Probation of the Catechumens was practiſed in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches as long as there were any Pagans to be converted; that is, in the Weſtern Church till the Eighth Century: After this Time the Ceremonies and Diſcipline was not required in the Adult who moved for Baptiſm. As for Infants, the Church of Rome obſerves all the Ancient Ceremonies of the Catechumenate immediately before Baptiſm. * Morinus, de Pœnitentia. Albaſpinæus, Obſervat. in Rit. Antiq. Eccleſ. Lib. 2.

CATHARINUS, (Ambroſius) born at Siena. He lived in the Sixteenth Century, and his firſt Name was Politius Lancellotus. After having read upon the Civil Law in ſeveral Univerſities of Italy, he turned Dominican in 1515, took the Name of Ambroſius Catharinus, apply'd himſelf wholly to Divinity, and quickly wrote himſelf into Reputation. In 1545, he was ſent to Trent at the opening of the Council: Here he came up to conſiderable Notice, both upon the ſcore of his Learning and Parts; and becauſe he maintained ſome Opinions not common among Divines at that Time, he was pitch'd on for preaching the Sermon at the Opening the third Seſſion, February the 4th, 1547. The ſame Year he was preferred to the See of Minori, a ſmall Town in the Kingdom of Naples, and Suffragan to the Archbiſhoprick of Amalphi. In 1551, Julius III. who had formerly ſtudied the Law under Catharinus, tranſlated him to the Biſhoprick of Conza in the ſame Kingdom. He died ſoon after ſuddenly at Naples, when his Holineſs was ready to give him a Cardinal's Cap. Catharinus wrote Commentaries upon Geneſis, upon S. Paul's Epiſtles, and the other Canonical Writings of the New Teſtament. He is very buſy with Cardinal Cajetan's Expoſitions, and has made Remarks on purpoſe againſt the Commentaries of this Author. Catharinus ſet up a new Syſtem in Predeſtination, where he ranges Mankind under two Diviſions: One of theſe Claſſes conſiſts of the Elect, who being predeſtinated in a particular manner, God gives them Aſſiſtances ſufficient to make them infallibly happy, without loſing notwithſtanding any Part of the Freedom of their Will. This Diviſion has but a few in it, and only thoſe who are uncommonly favoured by God Almighty: And of this Number may be reckoned the Bleſſed Virgin, the Apoſtles, S. Paul, and other reſembling Perſons. The ſecond Claſs takes in all the reſt of Mankind. Theſe are not predeſtinated to Salvation by any fix'd and unalterable Decree; but only under a contingent Condition, which may, and may not happen: And therefore by conſequence the Happineſs of all theſe depends upon the good or ill Uſe they ſhall make of the Grace and Opportunities God has given them. He maintains this Opinion not only in his Commentaries upon the Scripture, but likewiſe in a particular Diſcourſe upon the Subject of Predeſtination, and in a Tract of the excellent Predeſtination of Jeſus Chriſt; where he aſſerts that our Bleſſed Saviour would have been Incarnate, though Adam had never ſinned. As a Conſequence from this Aſſertion, he maintains in another Book, that the Sin of the fallen Angels conſiſted in their Refuſal to own the Decree of the Incarnation. He likewiſe wrote a Tract upon the Fall of Adam. As for Original Sin, he makes it conſiſt in the Action of eating the forbidden Fruit, and that 'tis transferred upon Poſterity, becauſe our Will is comprehended in Adam's. He wrote ſeveral Diſcourſes upon the immaculate Conception of the Bleſſed Virgin, where he holds the Affirmative with a great deal of Warmth. He wrote in Defence of the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin, and pretends S. John never died, but was tranſlated like Enoch and Elijah. Catharinus wrote a Tract upon Death and the Reſurrection, in which he is very good-natured to Infants dying unbaptized: Theſe he believes not only in a State of Indolence, but farther bleſſed with ſome Degrees of Happineſs agreeable to their Condition. He has a Treatiſe upon the Certainty of Glory, of the Invocation, and Worſhip of Saints, where he maintains the Church can't be miſtaken in Canoni-zations; and here he argues for the Worſhip of Images and Relicks. While the Council of Trent was ſitting, he wrote a Diſcourſe to prove good Men might be certain of their Juſtification; and the Tract upon the immaculate Conception againſt Cardinal Turrecremata; together with a ſort of Manifeſto upon Predeſtination. In another Tract, he defends the Reality of the Euchariſtick Sacrifice; and in another diſtinct Diſcourſe, maintains that our Bleſſed Saviour did not Conſecrate with theſe Words, This is my Body, and this is my Blood. He wrote likewiſe concerning Communion under both Kinds. When he aſſiſted at the Council of Trent, he declared for the Opinion, ſince commonly received in the Schools, concerning the Intention of the Prieſt who adminiſters the Sacraments; that is, whether 'tis neceſſary he ſhould have a real Intention to perform a Holy Myſtery; or whether 'tis ſufficient that he is willing to go through the Forms of the Chriſtian Sacrament; and that he has this Intention when he performs the External Ceremonies required; though 'tis poſſible at the ſame time his Mind may be profanely diſpoſed, and that he deſigns nothing but a Jeſt by the Solemnity. Catharinus made ſeveral Tracts upon the Sacraments, and particularly upon Marriage: He wrote a Book upon the Canonical Scriptures, where he endeavours to prove the Extent of the Canon, as 'tis lately received by the Church of Rome. Laſtly, there are ſeveral of his Tracts extant. 1. Whether puniſhing Hereſy with Death is warrantable Jure Divino. 2. Whether the Biſhop's Reſidence upon his See is required Jure Divino. 3. Concerning giving Baptiſm to the Children of Jews, &c. Catharinus was very frank and hardy in giving his Sentiments, and made no Difficulty to diſſent from S. Auguſtin, Thomas Aquinas, and other Divines. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVI. See Ambroſius Catharinus in Morery's Supplement.

CATHEDRAL, is no more than a pretty modern Diſtinction for the Mother-Church. The chief Church where the Biſhop uſed to officiate was anciently called the Great Church, the Epiſcopal Church, or the Church of the Town. The Name of a Cathedral has only been uſed in the Latin Church, and not there till the Tenth Century. The Cathedraticum was a Perquiſite or Acknowledgment which the Biſhops newly inſtalled gave to thoſe that conſecrated them, to the Notaries Clerks, and other Officers. * Memoires des Sçavans. Remarques de M. du Pin.

*CATHERINE di Medicis. For her being born 1591, read 1509, in Morery Vol. I. and for her being married in one thouſand five hundred and thirteen, read one thouſand five hundred thirty five.

CATHERINOT, (Nicolas) was born at Caſtle-Luſſon near Bourges in 1628: His Father denies Catherinot was a Counſellor in the Preſidial. Nicolas, likewiſe bred to the Law, was a celebrated Pleader, and had ſeveral Preferments in his Profeſſion. He printed his Notes upon Petrus Pitheus's Teſtament, and made ſeveral Obſervations upon the Civil Law. He was a Perſon of indefatigable Induſtry, and publiſhed a hundred and thirty Tracts upon the Subjects of Hiſtory, Criticiſm, &c. His Cuſtom was to make either a ſhort Memoir or a Latin Epigram upon almoſt all conſiderable Occurrences in Europe. A few days before his laſt Sickneſs, he made a Diſtich upon the Birth of the Prince of Wales, Son to James II. King of England.

Expulit Hæreticos Regno Rex maximus uno,
Sed Triplici naſcens nunc Puer ecce fugat.

Catharinot died in July 1688. The whole Corporation of Bourges went along with the Corpſe in their Habits of Ceremony; and one of his intimate Friends of the ſame Profeſſion made the following Epitaph:

Ah ſortem aſperam, duramque nimis!
Periit heu!
Qui
De Rebus Theologicis tam ſublimes, tam diſertos de Politicis,
de Hiſtoricis tam Doctos, tam elegantes de Liberalibus Artibus Tractatus hactenus ediderat.

NICOLAUS CATHARINUS
Biturix,
Scriptis ubique notiſſimus,
Sincera in Deum pietate ac purâ,
Fideli erga proximum charitate ac juſta commendabilis:
Qui
Conſulatum Urbis ſumma cum Laude per triennium geſſit;
Forum per triginta tres annos vivæ vocis oraculo illuſtravit;
Pauperum denique tutelam per quatuor annos continuos ſuſcepit:
Vir certè, ſi quis unquam ad publica commoda natus.
Mortuus 28 Julii, anni 1688, horâ ſolis deſcendentis ſeptima,
Ætatis 60. è dolore colico, cui febris, Cerebrique violentior impetus, ac apoplexia ſucceſſere.
Sepultus in Noſocomio Bituricenſi die 29.
Subſequentibus liberis, parentibus, familaribus & amicis, totius denique Urbis ordinibus mœſtiſſimis.
Amico ſingulari poſſuit mœrens Franciſcus Pinſſonius des Riolles Advocatus Pariſinus.

* Journal des Sçavans de 1688. Tom. 16. pag. 330. Edit. de Holl. Biblioth. Hiſt. des Auteurs de Droit, par Denys Simon.

CATHOLICON d'Eſpagne, or Satyra Menippea: This Book has been ſo much talk'd of, that it may not be improper to mention ſome of it for the Reader's Information: 'Tis a Satyrical Piece, written in the Sixteenth Century, againſt the French Leaguers. 'Tis not the Performance of a ſingle Author. M. le Roi, Chaplain to the young Cardinal of Bourbon, and afterwards Canon of Rohan, publiſhed that Part of it entitled, La Vertue Catholicon d'Eſpagne. This ingenious Eſſay was very entertaining to every body, and the Wits of that time were ſo pleaſed with the Subject and the Manner, that they added a Second Part, under the Title of Abregé des Etats de la Ligue convoquez à Paris au dixiéme Fevrier. Paſſerat and Rapin, two celebrated Poets, wrote the Verſes. M. Guillot Counſellor, Clerk to the Parliament of Paris, whoſe Character is mentioned by Papyrius Maſſonus at the end of his Hommes Illuſtres, made the Cardinal Legate's Harangue for the League. Horent Chrétien, a Man of a lively Genius, wrote the Speech for Cardinal Pelevê. The Publick is obliged to Peter Pithou for M. Aubray's Harangue, which is reckoned the beſt of them all. And Rapin furniſhes two Speeches for the Archbiſhop of Lyons, and Dr. Roſe, Great Maſter of the College of Navarre, and afterwards Biſhop of Senlis. 'Twas this Nicolas Rapin who has ſeveral Latin Poems extant, who made a Collection of all the Speeches, threw them into a Method, and tack'd them to the Catholicon d' Eſpagne, under the Title of Satyre Menippée. This has led a great many People into the Miſtake of making Rapin the Author of the whole Catholicon. This Second Part of the Catholicon was printed in 1594, after the Return of the Parliament to Paris, which had been thence removed to Tours. It mentions three very conſiderable Occurrences; that is, the Reduction of Paris, the baniſhing M. d'Aubray, and the Death of the Count of S. Paul, who was killed this Year by the Duke of Guiſe. And here it muſt be obſerved, that the Catholicon d'Eſpagne, printed with the Memoirs of the League, are miſerably ſophiſticated and daſhed. The Genevians, who ſet forth this Edition, have added counterfeit and ridiculous Characters, quite foreign to the Original. The Notes, added to the Edition at Ratisbon in 1664, are taken from a Manuſcript of M. Dupuy, Library-Keeper to the French King. 'Twas thought prudential to omit ſome of Dupuy, for fear of giving Diſguſt to ſome Perſons of Quality now living. M. de Vigneul Marville, who furniſhes almoſt all this Article, declared he had compared this Ratisbon Edition with ſome Manuſcripts written in the time of the League, and that they agree well enough with Dupuy's Notes. The Catholicon was reprinted reprinted in 1696, with new Remarks. This Edition being quickly carry'd off, there was another publiſh'd with Additional Remarks in 1699.

* CATILINE: Saluſt by way of Character tells us, that Lucius Catilina, deſcended from a noble Family, had ſtrong Limbs, and a great deal of Mettle and Spirit; but his Temper was ſtark naught, and the Bent of his Inclination very unhappy. Faction and Civil War, Rapine and Slaughter, were the Exerciſe and Entertainments of his Youth: He had a very firm Conſtitution, and could faſt and watch, and bear the Cold to an incredible degree. He was bold, falſe, and floating; a perfect Maſter in Diſſimulation, covetous of other Peoples Fortunes, and prodigal of his own; intemperately hot to gain his Fancy, and wanted no Words, tho' he had little Wiſdom in them. His Ambition ran out to the laſt Exceſſes, and carried his Expectation much above Merit and Probability. The Diſſolution of the Town, and the Diſorders in the Government, were look'd on as a fair Opportunity to form his Enterprize: For this purpoſe, he got all the eminent Knaves, Libertines, and prodigal Bankrupts about him: And if he happened to make an Acquaintance with any unblemiſh'd Perſon of Condition, he laid Strumpets and other Diverſions in their way to debauch them: And after having made an Intereſt among the principal Nobility and Gentry, he called them together and laid open his Deſign. The Plot was to murder the Conſul Tully, to fire the City, to call in the Gauls for Auxiliaries, and fill all Places with Blood and Slaughter where they found Reſiſtance.

When Catiline underſtood the Plot was diſcover'd, and that Lentulus, Cethegus, and others of the principal Conſpirators, were ſeized and executed at Rome; when he found Metellus Celer had ſtopt his March into Gaul; that Cneius Antonius was advancing againſt him on the Side of Italy; and that the Mountains had made the reſt of his Way impracticable: Being thus hard ſet, and having no Hopes of a Reinforcement, he reſolved to fight Antonius as ſoon as poſſible. And to prepare his Men to make the moſt of themſelves, he made a bold uncapitulating Speech, and endeavoured to raiſe their Courage from the Topicks of Difficulty and Danger: I ſhall tranſlate it from Saluſt for the Reader.

Gentlemen,

" I am fully ſatisfied that bare Talking is too feeble " an Expedient to warm the Heart, and throw Courage " into the Veins: The General's Harangue can't reinforce the Limbs, nor turn Cowardice into Reſolution: We can expect no more than the Fund we are " furniſhed with already. Natural Courage, or the Advantage of Education, are only diſcover'd by the Teſt " in the Field: When neither Honour nor Danger will " take hold of Peoples Minds, their Fear ſpoils their " Attention, and Words are but thrown away upon " them. However, having ſome few things to ſuggeſt, " and to acquaint you with the Reaſons of what I am " going about, I thought it proper to call you together. " Gentlemen, you are not ignorant into what Miſfortune Lentulus's ſluggiſh and cowardly Conduct has " brought us; and that by waiting ſo long for a Reinforcement from the Town, my retiring into Gaul is " made impracticable: And what Condition we are " in at preſent, you all know as well as myſelf. The " Enemy has two Armies on foot; the one faces us " from the Town, the other cuts off our Retreat into " Gaul. Want of Proviſions, and other Conveniencies, " won't give us leave to ſtay here, were we never ſo " willing: There is no moving to any freſh Quarters, " without opening our Paſſage with Steel. My Advice " to you therefore is to ſtand bluff, and recollect your " Courage; and when 'tis your Turn to charge, pray " remember that your All depends upon your Behaviour, and that you carry Liberty and Honour, Fortune " and your Country, in your Sword Hand. If we conquer, we ſhall be furniſh'd, and ſecure at all Points; " we ſhall have Plenty of Proviſions, and the Confederate Towns and Colonies will open their Gates to us. " But if we grow faint, and give way, all theſe Circumſtances will turn croſs and hoſtile upon us. There " is no Shelter for thoſe that are beaten; and when a " Man's Sword can't protect him, no body elſe will. " Beſides, Gentlemen, the Enemy and we are not under " the ſame Neceſſity: Life, Liberty, and living at " Home, lie all at ſtake on our ſide: As for them, they " only fight to keep on an Arbitrary Junto. Therefore " refreſh your Memory with your former Bravery, and " attack them with proportionable Vigor. 'Twas in " your Power to avoid the Hazards of the Field, and to " have ſpent your Time in Baniſhment and Diſgrace. " Some of you might have lived at Rome, and have expected other Peoples Eſtates, after you had been " turn'd out of your own; but you handſomely ſcorn'd " ſuch ſcandalous Circumſtances, and reſolved to riſque " the Main. If therefore you have a mind to diſentangle yourſelves, and mend your Condition, you " muſt be bold and intrepid: Nothing but Victory can " procure you Peace and Repoſe. For to expect Safety " by running away, and throwing down your Arms " which ſhould defend you, is mere Diſtraction. In a " Fight, thoſe who are moſt afraid, are moſt in Danger; whereas Reſolution fortifies a Man, and makes " him next to impregnable. Gentlemen, when I conſider what you have perform'd already, I have fair " Expectations of Succeſs: Your Inclination, your " Youth, and your Courage, give ſtrong Encouragement: " And over and above, we have Neceſſity on our ſide, " which is enough to fire the Spirits, and harden the " Temper, even of the Faint-hearted. And as for being " encloſed by the Enemy's Numbers, there is no Fear of " that; the Defiles, and Difficulty of advancing, are " ſufficient Defences. And after all, if Fortune ſhould " happen to frown upon brave Men, take care you " don't die unrevenged; don't be dragg'd like Sheep to " the Shambles, nor ſurrender yourſelves to the Gallows: Make the Enemy pay dear for your Lives, and " leave them a bloody and uncomfortable Victory."

* Saluſt. Bell. Catilinar.

CATONA, in Latin Catona, Columella, Columna Rhegina, a Village ſtanding upon a Cape of the ſame Name. 'Tis in the Farther Calabria, at the Mouth of the River Cenis, upon the Fare of Meſſina, and over againſt that Town. The only thing which brings this Place into Notice, is its being a Paſſage to Meſſina, from which 'tis diſtant but three Leagues. * Maty, Diction.

CATTHO, (Angelo) was born at Tarentum, and Archbiſhop of Vienne in the Fifteenth Century: He went into the Intereſt of the Houſe of Anjou, in the Conteſt for the Kingdom of Naples. Afterwards Charles Duke of Burgundy took him into his Service, and allow'd him a Penſion. After the Battle of Morat, Cattho took Leave of this Prince, went to Lewis XI.'s Court, where he was made King's Chaplain, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Vienne; and ſome ſay he was Lewis XI's Phyſician and Aſtrologer. There was an intimate Friendſhip between Cattho and Philip de Comines, both at the Court of the Duke of Burgundy and that of France. 'Twas at Cattho's Inſtance that Philip de Comines wrote his Hiſtory; he declares as much at the beginning of his Memoirs, and addreſſes himſelf to Cattho in ſeveral Places of this Work. 'Twas believed by a great many, that Cattho had the Gift of Prophecy. He died at Vienne, and his Motto was, Ingenium ſuperat vires. * Sainte-Marthe. Gall. Chriſt. Chorier, Hiſt. du Dauph. Mezeray, Reign of Lewis XI. Philip de Comines, in Preface, &c.

CATULUS, Governor of Libya Pentapolitana. After the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, he put abundance of Jews to Death, who had rendevouzed in a Wilderneſs, under the Command of one Jonathan a Weaver. This Impoſtor, to abuſe the People into a Belief of Reſcue from the Hardſhips they lay under, promiſed to entertain them with a great many Miracles. Catulus got this Incendiary apprehended, who, to ſave his Life, turn'd falſe Evidence, and charg'd a great many innocent People with leading him into this Revolt. Amongſt the reſt, Alexander and Berenice his Lady, being falſly accuſed, were put to the Queſtion, and condemned to die; and all this only to get their Eſtates. There was no leſs than three thouſand Burghers of Alexandria dragg'd into this Impeachment, and ſo likewiſe was Joſephus the Hiſtorian then at Rome. And if the Emperor Veſpaſian, and Titus his Son, had not been fully ſatisfy'd about the Inno-

Innocency and Worth of this Gentleman, he had certainly been loſt. Thus when the Matter was thoroughly examined, Jonathan was convicted of falſe Evidence, and Joſephus acquitted. This Impoſtor had his Deſerts ſoon after; and was ſentenc'd by Veſpaſian to be burnt at the Stake. As for Catulus, though the Emperor gave him his Life, he paid dear for his Avarice and Barbarities; for he fell into a diſmal Diſeaſe, which perfectly puzzled the Phyſicians. He was tortur'd with intolerable Pain in every Part of his Body, which was ſtill leſs than the Agonies of his Mind; for the Ghoſts of thoſe he had deſtroyed ſeem'd perpetually before him, and made frightful Impreſſions upon his Imagination. He threw himſelf out of the Bed, as if he had leap'd off the Rack, or out of the middle of a raging Fire. His Pains increaſed every Hour upon him, and at laſt, his Bowels being in a manner conſumed by the burning Heat, he expir'd in the midſt of Torture. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 7. Cap. 28.

CATURGIES; ſo the People of Gallia Narbonenſis were anciently called: They lived between the Allobroges, the Ebruntians, the Mimenians, and the Vocontians. Their chief Towns were Vapincum and Caturigæ. The Country now carries the Name of Gapençois. Their chief Towns are Gap and Chorges. * Maty, Diction.

CATWICK, in Latin Cattorum Vicus. There are two Villages in Holland of this Name, parted only by ſome Hills of Sand, called the Downs: One of theſe Villages ſtands upon the Sea, which breaks in frequently upon the Houſes: The other ſtands a little farther up into the Country, where the Rhine loſes its Current in the Sands. They are about a League diſtant from Leyden; and to diſtinguiſh them, one is called Catwick Op-Zee, that is to ſay, Catwick upon the Sea; and the other Catwick op den Ryn, that is, Catwick upon the Rhyne. 'Tis ſaid they took their Names from the ancient Catti, and that ſeveral Remains of Antiquity are found there. * Maty, Diction.

CAVACHI, a Town in Niphon, the chief Iſland belonging to Japan: The Town ſtands in the Quarter of Jetſengo, to the South of the City Meaco, near the Sea-ſide. 'Tis fortified with a good Citadel, and is the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name. * Maty, Dict.

CAVALLA, a Town of European Turky: It ſtands in Macedonia, near the Confines of Romanici, upon the Gulph of Comteſſa, between the Town Comteſſa and Philippi, four Leagues from each. This Town was formerly called Bucephala, and 'tis ſuppoſed one of thoſe which Alexander the Great built in Honour to the Memory of Bucephalus, his Charging-Horſe. * Maty, Diction.

CAVALRY, a Body of Soldiers that charge on Horſeback. The Romans, in their firſt Wars, knew nothing of the Uſe of Cavalry: Their whole Force lay in their Infantry; inſomuch that when they fought, they order'd their Troopers to light, who mounted no more during the Diſpute, unleſs when the Enemy was routed, to purſue the better. King Pyrrhus's Cavalry made them alter their Fancy, and eſpecially Hannibal, who harraſs'd them ſo much with his Horſe, that their invincible Legions durſt not quit their Camp and draw out into the Field. The Reader, who deſires to underſtand more of the Roman Cavalry, may conſult a Book entitled, Le parfait Capitain, ou l'Abregé des Guerre de la Gaule, tiré des Commentaires de Cæſar, derniere edition d'Hollande, in 12°. 1638. * Tit. Liv. Hiſt.

CAVALLOS, (Porto de Cavallos) a capacious Haven in Northern America: Tis ſituate upon the Coaſt of the Province de Honduras, at the Mouth of the River Sal, in the Gulph of Honduras, to the North of the Town Comayagna. * Maty, Diction.

CAULET, (Francis Stephen de) was much taken Notice of in the Seventeenth Century upon the ſcore of the Contraſt he had with the Court of France upon the Head of the Regale. He was born at Toulouſe in 1610, and extracted from a conſiderable Family of the Long-Robe. He made ſo early a Progreſs in Learning, that he was choſen Abbot of S. Voluſian at ſeventeen Years of Age. He took a great deal of Pains in reforming this Abbey; and by his Induſtry and Contributions, ſettled the Canons-Regular of S. Geneviéve. He was ſeveral Years Director of the Seminary of S. Sulpitius. He reſigned his Abbey to the King of France ſome time before he was nominated to the Biſhoprick of Pamieres, which happened in the Year 1644. In January following, he received his Bulls and other Inſtruments from Rome, and was conſecrated at Paris on the fifth of March. The Week after, he took the Oath of Fidelity or Allegiance, and then went down to his Dioceſe. At his coming to Pamieres, he found his Dioceſe terribly harraſs'd by the Civil Wars, the Clergy much out of Order, and a very ſlender Senſe of Religion among the People. 'Twas with a great deal of Difficulty that he brought the twelve Regular Canons to any tolerable Conduct. He procur'd Bulls from Pope Alexander VII. and Letters Patents from the King, to reform his Chapter as faſt as the old Canons died; and in this Undertaking, he had the good Fortune to ſucceed: He founded three Seminaries. The Deſign of two of them was to breed Children from their firſt Capacity for Learning: And the Buſineſs of the third was, to qualify School-Maſters or Tutors to inſtruct young Women in all proper Places of the Dioceſe. He viſited every Year, without over-looking the leaſt Village, and preach'd through the whole Progreſs. His Government was famous for three great Traverſes which happened in it: The firſt relates to the ſigning the Formulary; and here the Biſhops of Alet, Angers, and Beauvais, had a Share with him. There was an end put to this Buſineſs in 1668. The ſame Year he was forced to excommunicate three Jeſuites of Pamieres. The Motives to this Cenſure was, their overthrowing the Maxims of Penance, and giving Abſolution to the moſt ſcandalous Sinners, excommunicated by their lawful Paſtors. Theſe Jeſuites declaim'd againſt the Conduct of M. de Pamieres in private Company, and attack'd him publickly in the Pulpit with Satyrical Reflexions; and over and above, they inſiſted, that ſince they had once received a Verbal Approbation from their Biſhop, this Approbation or Commiſſion could not be recalled, though the ſame Biſhop ſhould forget his giving it. To check the Courſe of this Miſbehaviour, M. de Pamieres made an Order in Decem. 1667; by vertue of which he revoked all Verbal Licences he might formerly have granted, and forbid thoſe who had received them to take any Confeſſions till they had a Licence for that purpoſe in Writing. The contravening this Order was Suſpenſion ipſo facto. All the Clergy, both Secular and Regular, gave Obedience to this Injunction. There was none but the Jeſuites who run riot, which made M. de Pamieres ſay, that the Character the Biſhop of Cahors gave him of theſe Men was but too true, viz. That the Jeſuites are the Plague and Ruin of the Church; and that all the Biſhops who are in earneſt in God Almighty's Service, ought not to truſt them with any Employment, or ſo much as to appear in their Convents, for that is interpreted as countenancing their Society. Upon the 14th of December, A. D. 1668, they exhibited an Inſtrument to M. de Pamieres. This Inſtrument, as 'tis ſaid, had a very injurious Contents, and was ſtuff'd with a great many haughty Miſtakes, to the Prejudice of the Epiſcopal Dignity. 'Twas cenſur'd upon the 20th of February, the ſame Year, by eighteen Biſhops, at a Meeting with the Eſtates of Languedoc at Montpellier, and the Propoſitions were pronounced falſe, erroneous and ſchiſmatical. The Jeſuites went on with their Confeſſions in Defiance of their Biſhop's Order, and filled all the Town with their Libels. M. de Pamieres publiſhed an Ordinance in January 1668, that three of this Society, viz. John Bouchier Rector, Peter Falgueyras Syndic, and Francis Adanet, Jeſuites and Prieſts, had incurr'd Suſpenſion, and forbid them taking Confeſſions, under the Penalty of Excommunication ipſo facto. Theſe Religious, inſtead of obeying this ſecond Ordinance, gave Direction to the Corrector of their College, and their Scholars, to tear it down where 'twas fix'd; and thus they went on to hear Confeſſions as formerly. M. de Pamieres, after having given them the Admonition requir'd by the Canons, and made uſe of all gentle Expedients to reduce them, at laſt launched an Excommunication againſt them, February 5, 1668. And now the Jeſuites loſt all Decency and Temper; their Scholars tore the Biſhop's Order, walk'd the Streets ſeveral days arm'd to outrage the Biſhop's Domeſticks, and, in ſhort, were guilty of a great deal of Rudeneſs, even in Churches as well as elſewhere. Libels were made againſt this Prelate: They were ſo hardy as to ridicule him in Doggrel, and endeavoured to proſecute him in the Temporal Courts. The King being informed how Matters paſs'd, command-commanded the Jeſuites to obey the Biſhop's Order publiſhed in December laſt paſt. The News of this Royal Arreſt or Injunction made the Jeſuites ſhut up their Church: However, they went on taking Confeſſions, and ventured to ſay Maſs, though they ſtood Excommunicated. This was the ſecond Buſineſs which embarraſs'd the Biſhop of Pamieres. The third was the Diſpute about the Regale: The French King, on the tenth of February 1673, publiſhed a Declaration, in which 'twas ſet forth, that the Right of the Regale reach'd, without Exception, through all the Archbiſhopricks of the Kingdom: And in Conſequence of this Prerogative, his Majeſty enjoined all Archbiſhops and Biſhops to procure Letters of Main-levée or Ouſter le Main, and get them enrolled in two Months in the Chamber of Accounts; and that in Default of giving Satisfaction within the time above-mentioned, the Regale ſhould be declar'd in Force upon the Dioceſe. Moſt of the Biſhops of the Provinces, where 'twas alledged this Prerogative had never paſſed, proteſted privately againſt this Declaration, and got their Diſſent regiſtred in their reſpective Offices; but the Fear of drawing a Storm upon them from the Court, the Proſpect of being baniſh'd, and ſtripp'd of their Revenues, crampt their Motion, and hinder'd them from going any farther. But the Biſhop of Pamieres, being a bold honeſt Man, would not patch up the Buſineſs in this manner, nor apply to ſuch Trimming Expedients. He thought he could not enroll his Oath of Fidelity with a good Conſcience, for this was owning the Regale, from which he believ'd his Church and Province wholly exempted. However, he had continued ſilent, if a Regaliſt had not been ſent down to ſeize the beſt Preferment in his Church. But now he thought himſelf oblig'd in Point of Truſt to publiſh an Inſtrument, April 27, 1677; in which he declared, upon the Authority of the General Council of Lyons, that he could not comply with the preſent Extent of the Regale, which had never run in his Dioceſe; and that his Cathedral being of a regular and reformed Foundation, that was another Reaſon which hinder'd him from acknowledging this Prerogative. This Proteſtation was declared void, by a Sentence given by the Archbiſhop of Toulouſe. M. de Pamieres replied to this Sentence, in the cuſtomary Forms of Eccleſiaſtical Courts, and let the Archbiſhop know that he appealed from his Sentence to the See of Rome. He likewiſe wrote to the King, ſhewed a great deal of Diſintereſtedneſs in his Letter, and ſet the Juſtice of his Cauſe in a full Light; but either this Letter never came to the King's Hand, or elſe the Intereſt the Jeſuites had at Court made his Majeſty diſregard it; for theſe Gentlemen, 'tis ſuppoſed, were glad of an Opportunity for Revenge upon the Biſhop. In ſhort, all his Furniture was ſeized, without leaving him a Faggot to burn, or a Sallad in his Kitchen-Garden. He was ouſted likewiſe of all his Revenues, without an Allowance for the Neceſſities of Life. His Chapter was likewiſe treated with reſembling Hardſhip, becauſe they were of the ſame Sentiment, and adhered to their Biſhop. This Prelate applied to the See of Rome for Relief and Protection, addreſs'd the King once more; and not to neglect any Expedient to diſengage himſelf, he ventured a Letter to Father la Chaize, the King's Confeſſor; and here he reproaches this Jeſuite with ſacrificing the Intereſt of the Church to the Reſentments of his Society. In fine, after the Biſhop had held up his Head againſt all this Rigour for four Years, he died upon the 7th of Auguſt, A. D. 1680, being ſeventy Years of Age. During the time of this Ruffle and Diſtreſs, Pope Innocent XI. ſent him ſeveral Conſolatory Briefs, and wrote to the King in his Favour. This Pope gives him a Character much to his Commendation; he calls him a right truſty Biſhop; that God had raiſed him up in theſe troubleſome Times to lift up his Voice like a Trumpet, when all the reſt were ſilent and overſet: That his Courage ſupported his Character to the nobleſt Pitch: That notwithſtanding the Diſtemper he laboured under, the Preſſures of Poverty, and the Vexations with which he was harraſs'd, he gloried in his Tribulation: And his Holineſs adds, that notwithſtanding all theſe Traverſes and hard Uſage, his Charity daily improved; and that by maintaining our Saviour's Cauſe with ſo remakable a Conſtancy, he had made himſelf an entertaining Spectacle to God and Men. There is a Narrative of this Biſhop's, of what paſs'd between him and the Jeſuites of Pamieres above-mention'd, and an Anſwer to a Paper entitled, The Nullity of the Sentence of Excommunication of M. de Pamieres. There are likewiſe a great many Ordinances, Acts, and Letters of Pope Innocent XI. to the French King, and ſeveral other Perſons: All theſe Pieces are inſerted in the firſt Part of the Inventory of the Affairs of Pamieres. There is likewiſe a Book of his entitled, Traité de la Regale. * Sainte Marthe Gall. Chriſt. Rélation de ce qui s'eſt paſſé dans les Différents, &c. Premiére Partie de l'Inventaire des Piéces concernant l'Affaire de l'Egliſe de Pamieres. Memoires du Tems.

CAVO, Monte Cavo, formerly Albanus Mons, a Mountain in Campagnia di Roma, five Leagues to the Eaſt, and near the Town Albano. This Mountain was formerly famous for Alba Longa built there, and the Feriæ Latinæ, which was ſolemnly kept there by all the People of Latium. * Maty, Diction.

CAXEM, Caxem, a Town of Aſia ſituate upon the Southern Coaſt of Arabia the Happy, twenty Leagues from Fartach to the South-Weſt. Caxem has a good Haven, and a conſiderable Trade: 'Tis taken for the old Cane, the Town of the Adramytæ. * Maty, Diction.

CECILIA, (S.) is one of thoſe Saints whoſe Memory does not ſtand upon any authentick Records. The Acts of her Martyrdom, under the Emperor Alexander Severus, are of no Credit. Some make her a Martyr in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius and Commodus, and others in the Reign of Diocleſian; but all without any Authority. The Story of her Birth and Life is of the ſame Romantick Strain. All that we have certain about her is, that towards the End of the Fifth Century, and ſo onwards, ſhe had the Reſpect of a Saint paid her at Rome, where a Church was called by her Name: However, her Corpſe was not laid in that Town, though 'tis pretended Pope Paſchal I. diſcover'd it in S. Sixtus's Church-yard in 821; but this Hiſtory is no better vouched than S. Cecilia's Acts: Neither was the Place where ſhe was buried pretended to be well known till the Pontificate of Clement VIII. that is, till the end of the Sixteenth Century. Now indeed, as Baronius reports, her Body was found in her own Church. The Religious Regard paid to this Saint has been very Publick in the Weſtern Church ever ſince the Sixth Century. Both the Greek Church and the Latin keep her Feſtival on the 22d of November. Fortunatus Pictavienſis, the moſt ancient Writer who makes mention of her, relates ſhe died in Sicily. * Fortunat. Lib. 7. cap. 4. Sigebert. in Chron. Baron ad Ann. 821. Tillemont, Memoires Eccleſ. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

* CECILIAN, (Cecilianus) Menſurius Biſhop of Carthage's Deacon, lived in the Fourth Century. Upon this Biſhop's Death, in the Year 311, he was choſen to ſucceed him by the neighbouring Biſhops, and with the Conſent of the Clergy and People. Botrus and Celuſius, Prieſts of the ſame Church, finding themſelves diſappointed of the Epiſcopal Chair, for which they had made a Party, projected a Schiſm. This Deſign broke out when Cecilian called for the Conſecrated Plate, which in the Time of the Perſecution was put into Peoples Hands ſuppoſed very honeſt. However, theſe Men proving otherwiſe, and having a mind to cheat the Church of her Treaſure, concerted with the two factious Prieſts above-mentioned to embarraſs the new Biſhop, and diſengage from his Communion. They pretended, though without Truth, that his Ordination was void, becauſe conſecrated by Felix of Aptunge, who, as they falſly alledged, had forfeited his Epiſcopal Character by being a Traditor, that is, by delivering up the Bible to the Heathens in the Decian Perſecution. Secundus de Tiſigis, and other Numidian Biſhops, to the Number of ſeventy, meeting at Carthage, ſummon'd Cecilian, who ſent them Anſwer, that if they had any Charge to bring in againſt him, he deſired the Informer might appear and make it good. His Enemies had then nothing to object, excepting his being conſecrated by a Traditor Biſhop. Cecilian replied, that in caſe they thought Felix of Aptunge unqualified to ordain, they might, if they pleaſed, give him a new Conſecration. Purpurius, Biſhop of Lima, an inſidious ill-temper'd Man, propoſed the taking him at his Word, and that when he came for this Purpoſe, inſtead of laying their Hands on him for Ordination, they ſhould put him under Penance by this Ceremony. Cecilian's Clergy having got Wind of this Deſign, perſuaded him to keep at home. The Biſhops of Numidia, upon his refuſing to appear, condemned him upon three Articles; 1ſt, for Contumacy; 2*dly*, for being ordained by a Traditor; 3*dly*, for hindring Proviſions being carried to the Martyrs in Priſon. In ſhort, they pronounced him depoſed and excommunicated, conſecrated Majorinus to his See, and wrote Circular Letters againſt him to all the African Biſhops. A great many Biſhops of Africk, properly ſo called, came into their Party, and formed the Schiſm; but the Biſhops of the other Provinces held Communion with Cecilian. In the Year 312, the Emperor Conſtantine the Great owned Cecilian for the Catholick Biſhop, by ſending him a Remittance of Charity-Money, and directing Letters Patents to him for granting Civil Exemptions to the Clergy of the African Church. Anulinus, Proconſul of Africk, having executed the Emperor's Orders, Cecilian's Enemies waited upon this Governor, and, in the Name of the Catholick Church in Majorinus's Intereſt, preſented a Schedule, ſetting forth the Crimes with which Cecilian was charged, with a Petition to the Emperor to aſſign them Judges in Gaul. The Proconſul ſent their Petition and Memorial to the Emperor, who nominated Maternus Biſhop of Cologne, Rheticus Biſhop of Autun, Martin Biſhop of Arles, together with Miltiades Biſhop of Rome, to try the Cauſe in October following. Anulinus acquainted both Parties with this Order, and directed each of them to ſend ten Biſhops to Rome. The Commiſſioners appointed appeared there, to which Miltiades joined fifteen Italian Biſhops, who met the 2d of October, A. D. 313. in the Lateran Palace. Cecilian was acquitted by this Council. Donatus, Biſhop of Caſæ Nigræ, his great Adverſary, was caſt. And as for the Biſhops of Majorinus's Party, 'twas decreed that in Places where there were two Biſhops, one of Majorinus's Party, and the other of Cecilian's, he that was firſt conſecrated ſhould remain Biſhop, provided he quitted the Schiſm. After this Sentence, Donatus begged Leave to return into Africk, and Cecilian was kept at Breſcia. However, Olympius and Eunomius, two Biſhops, were diſpatch'd into Africk, to acquaint the Clergy and People which of the two was the Catholick Communion. Theſe two Biſhops coming to Carthage, ſtaid there about ſix Weeks, and publiſhed the Council's Sentence in favour of Cecilian. The Donatiſts petitioned Conſtantine that the Cauſe might have a Re-hearing. This Prince, who granted their Petition, ordered, in the firſt place, that the Matter of Fact alledged by the Donatiſts ſhould be cleared, and Enquiry made whether Felix of Aptunge, who conſecrated Cecilian, was really a Traditor. Ælianus, Proconſul of Africk, was charged with this Commiſſion of Enquiry. After inſpecting Records, and a thorough Examination, 'twas proved that the Blemiſh thrown upon Felix's Memory was altogether groundleſs; and thus the Imputation was diſcharged by the Court, February 15, A. D. 314. The ſame Year, Conſtantine convened a Council at Arles, where Cecilian was likewiſe acquitted, and his Proſecutors cenſured. The Donatiſts reſolving not to deſiſt, appealed from this Sentence to the Emperor, who taking Cognizance of the Cauſe himſelf, Novemb. 8, A. D. 316. pronounced Cecilian acquitted, and the Informers againſt him guilty of Calumny. From hence-forward Cecilian remained undiſturbed in the See of Carthage, and died in 341, in which Year his Succeſſor Gratus aſſiſted at the Council of Sardica. * Auguſtin. Lib. 1. contr. Parmen. cap. 3. Brevic. Collat. Lib. 3. cap. 14. Contr. Creſcon. Lib. 3. cap. 7. Optat. Lib. 1. contr. Parmen. Baron. A. C. 306, 313, &c.

* CECIL, (William Lord Burleigh.) For a ſupplemental Account to Morery Vol. I. of this Nobleman's Character and Sentiments, ſee Collier's Church-Hiſtory, Vol. II.

CEDAR, a large Tree, bearing round Berries. The Wood is remarkably laſting; for being very bitter, the Worms won't touch it. For this Reaſon the Ancients made uſe of Cedar Boards for writing things of the greateſt Conſequence, as may be collected from this Paſſage in Perſius, Et Cedra digna locutus. The Heart of Cedar is red, hard, and high-ſcented. Palaces and Ships are ſometimes built with this Wood. This Tree is always green, thrives beſt in cool Places, and upon Mountains; and if the Top of it is lopt, it dies. Solomon gave King Hiram a great many Towns for the Cedars he ſent him for building the Temple at Jeruſalem. Ferdinand Cortez, as Herrera relates, built a Palace at Mexico, in which there was a thouſand Cedar Beams, moſt of them a hundred and twenty Foot long, and twelve Foot about. There was a Cedar felled in Cyprus one hundred and thirty Foot long, and ſo thick that three Men could ſcarcely fathom it: Demetrius made a Galley of it. Cedar ſmells very ſweet when burnt: The Shade of it, as 'tis ſaid, is a great Relief to thoſe in a Fever when they come to lie under it. It diſtills a kind of Balm which cures the Tooth-ach, looſens and brings out the Teeth when rotten. There are wonderful things reported of the Balm of Cedar: It preſerves from Corruption when mix'd with Salt; it cures the biting of Serpents, cleanſes the Offenſiveneſs of the Leproſy; and being drank, cures ulcerated Lungs, and the Scab in Beaſts and Cattle, kills the Worms and Moths in Cloaths, by putting a little Box of it amongſt them; and the Strength of it is ſo great, that 'twill burn in the Water. Father Gonjon reports in his Voyage to the Holy Land, that he had ſeen eighteen Cedars then ſtanding, which, 'tis believed, had been there ever ſince the Creation. The biggeſt of theſe Cedars was forty Foot about, and thoſe of a middle Size thirty or thirty five. Theſe Trees, contrary to the Nature of others, have their Leaves and Fruit pointing directly upwards, the Weight of them never making them the leaſt bending towards the Ground. * Exod. & Levit. Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Simon, Diction. de la Bible.

* CEDRENUS, (George) living to the Year 1057, and wrote Annals, or an abridged Hiſtory, from the Beginning of the World, to the Reign of Iſaac Comnenus Emperor of Conſtantinople, who ſucceeded Michael VI. A. D. 1057. This Work is no more than an Extract from ſeveral Hiſtorians, and chiefly from Georgius Syncellus, whoſe Chronology he has followed from the Creation to the Reign of Diocleſian. Theophanes is another he has made uſe of, from Diocleſian to Michael Curopalates. The next he borrows from, is Thraceſius Scylitzes, from Curopalates to his own time. In ſhort, this Hiſtory is patch'd up from ſeveral Authors, but without any great Judgment. * Poſſevin, in Apparat. Sacr. Geſner, in Biblioth. Voſſius, de Hiſtor. Græc. Lib. 2. cap. 6, &c.

CELERINUS, Reader in the Church of Carthage in S. Cyprian's time, was nobly deſcended, according to the Chriſtian Heraldry: His Grandmother S. Katharine had two Uncles Martyrs, who had ſerved in the Emperor's Army. S. Laurentinus, his Uncle by the Father's ſide, and S. Ignatius, his Mother's Brother, were likewiſe Martyrs in the laſt Perſecution. Celerinus was at Rome when the Emperor Decius began the Perſecution A. D. 250. He was one of the firſt Chriſtians apprehended, loaded with Chains, and thrown into Priſon, where he ſuffered a great deal. Some time after he was brought before the Emperor, who being ſurprized at his Reſolution, and pitying his broken Health, ordered him to be diſcharged. Celerinus, thus enlarged, returned into Africk. At his Arrival, he had the Mortification to underſtand that his Siſter Luceria, and ſome other Chriſtian Women, had been ſo unhappy as to ſacrifice to Idols. Celerinus wrote a Letter to Lucian, a Confeſſor in Priſon at Carthage, to acquaint him with this melancholy News; to which Lucian returned an Anſwer. Both theſe Letters are preſerved in S. Cyprian's Works. Not long after, Celerinus made S. Cyprian a Viſit in his Retirement. This Biſhop ordained him a Reader with Aurelius, and gave notice of it to his Clergy. 'Tis worth the Readers while, not to miſtake this Celerinus for a Confeſſor of the ſame Name, otherwiſe called Macarius, who was at Rome when Cornelius was choſen Biſhop, and who afterwards quitted the Novatian Party, and returned to the Church. He is mentioned in Cornelius's Letter to Fabius Biſhop of Antioch. * Cyprian, Epiſt. Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 6. cap. 43. Annal. Cyprian. Tillemont, Memoires des Aut. Eccleſ. Baillet, Vies des Saints, 3 February.

* CELESTIN I. A Roman by Birth, was choſen Biſhop of Rome in the Beginning of November, A. D. 423, and ſucceeded Boniface I. The Election was fairly carried, without making of Parties or Diſagreement. The Buſineſs of Neſtorius, and the Meeting of the Council of Epheſus, made his Pontificate remarkable. Neſtorius's Sermons being brought to Rome, Celeſtin and the Italian Biſhops

Biſhops diſapproved his Doctrine. This gave Occaſion to Neſtorius to ſend his Holineſs a Letter, under Pretence of acquainting him with four Pelagian Biſhops who had waited upon the Emperor at Conſtantinople. Celeſtin, who had written to Cyril of Alexandria, and received a Return from him, gave no Anſwer to Neſtorius: Upon which, this Patriarch of Conſtantinople wrote him a ſecond Letter. S. Cyril likewiſe wrote again, and ſent his Deacon Poſſidonius to Rome, to inform the Pope about Neſtorius's Tenents. At Poſſidonius's Arrival, Celeſtin drew a Council together, Auguſt A. D. 430: And here Neſtorius's Writings, his Letters, and thoſe of S. Cyril, being read and examined, Neſtorius's Doctrine was cenſured, and S. Cyril's approved. This Council notwithſtanding, did not ſtrike Neſtorius's Perſon, but only decreed he ſhou'd be acquainted, that if after ten Days Notice of what had paſſed in the Council, he did not condemn his novel Doctrine, and approve that maintained by the Churches of Rome, Alexandria, and the whole Catholick Church, he ſhou'd be depoſed and excommunicated: And S. Cyril of Alexandria was commiſſioned to execute this Sentence. The Conteſt running thus high, Theodoſius the Younger called a General Council to Epheſus, whither Celeſtin ſent his Legates, Philip, Arcadius, and Projectus, with two Letters to the Council againſt Neſtorius. The Legates appeared at the ſecond and third Seſſion, and approved the Proceedings of the Council. Celeſtin after this wrote Communicatory Letters to Maximian, who had been conſecrated to Neſtorius's See. The Acts of the Council of Epheſus furniſh ſeveral of Celeſtine's Letters concerning Neſtorius's Buſineſs; and in the Collection of Chriſtianus Lupus, there is a ſignificant Memorial his Holineſs delivered to his Legates at their going to the Council. Farther, there are three other Letters of this Pope, one of the Year 431, written to Venerius Biſhop of Marſeilles, to Leontius Biſhop of Frejus, and to ſome other neighbouring Biſhops of Gaul, againſt thoſe that attack'd S. Auguſtin's Doctrine upon the Subject of Grace. To this Letter there is a Collection added of the Deciſions of the preceding Popes, and the Councils of Africk, upon the principal Points concerning Grace and Free-Will. Some aſſign this Collection to Proſper, and others to Leo I. but 'tis probable 'twas made either by Celeſtin, or his Order, and directed to the Biſhops in Gaul. Celeſtin's ſecond Letter, of A. D. 428, is ſent to the Biſhops of Vienne and Narbone. Here he reprimands the Clergy for the Singularity of their Habit, and ſeems to diſapprove all Diſtinction in Cloaths between the Clergy and Laity. In the ſame Letter, he declares againſt the Rigours of ſome Gauliſh Biſhops, who, purſuant to the old Diſcipline in the African Churches, refuſed to give Abſolution for ſome Crimes at the Point of Death. There are other Regulations in't with reſpect to the Biſhops and Clergy; as there are likewiſe in his third Letter in 439, directed to the Biſhop of Puglia and Calabria, in which he forbids the conſecrating Biſhops who were Laymen before. In the Year 429, this Pope had a Diſpute with the African Prelates upon the Buſineſs of Appeals to Rome from Africk. But this Conteſt being reported at large in the Supplement of Morery, under the Article Apiarius, I ſhall referr the Reader thither. * Acts of the Council of Epheſus. Auguſtin, Epiſt. 26. Proſper. Gennadius de Scriptor. Eccleſ. Baronius Annal. A. C. 423, to 433, &c.

* CELESTIN III. for Henry V. Emperor, in Morery Vol. I. read Henry VI.

CELESTIUS, a Diſciple of Pelagius, a Scotchman, according to the Language of that Age, that is, an Iriſhman, was deſcended, as they ſay, from a good Family. He had, like his Maſter, a lively Imagination, and a warm Temper, travelled with him to Rome, from thence to Africk, where he wou'd have been ordained Prieſt, to give the better Countenance to his Hereſy. Paulinus, a Deacon of Milan, then in Africk, charged him with Heterodoxy before Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, A. D. 411. This Prelate convened a Council, where Celeſtius was condemned, and expelled Africk. Celeſtius appealed from this Bar to the See of Rome; and without taking any Care to follow this Appeal, ſet Sail for Epheſus, but very probably touched by the way at Sicily, where he was ordained Prieſt, and maintained his Singularities with more Stiffneſs than ever. Pelagius having been delated by Eros Biſhop of Aix, and Lazarus Biſhop of Arles, to the Council of Dioſpolis in Paleſtine, A. D. 415, Celeſtius's Doctrine was condemned there; and, which was more, Pelagius diſclaimed it. The African Biſhops meeting in the Year 416, to the number of ſixty four at Carthage, and of ſixty at Milevis, repeated the Cenſure of Pelagius and Celeſtius's Hereſy, and wrote to Pope Innocent, who agreed with their Deciſion, A. D. 417. After the Death of this Pope, Celeſtius, driven out of Aſia by Atticus Biſhop of Conſtantinople, came to Rome, and waiting upon Zoſimus Pope Innocent's Succeſſor, laid a Confeſſion of his Faith before him, took a great deal of Pains to wipe off the Imputation of Hetorodoxy, and declared himſelf willing to ſubmit to the Judgment of the Holy See. Zoſimus put ſeveral Queſtions to him, examined his Confeſſion of Faith, and poſtponed his Deciſion for two Months. In the mean time, he cenſured Eros and Lazarus, and wrote very favourably of Celeſtius to the African Biſhops. The Africans, who were not all check'd by Zoſimus's Opinion, (who was either ſurprized or worſe miſtaken) held a Council at Carthage at the End of the Year 417, where they confirmed their former Cenſure of Celeſtius's Doctrine, and wrote to Zoſimus to undeceive him. Zoſimus in his Anſwer told them he had determined nothing, and that he deſigned to go farther in the Enquiry. Zoſimus's Letter was received when the African Biſhops held a National Council at Carthage, opened May 1. A. D. 418. At this Synod, they paſs'd eight Canons againſt Pelagius and Celeſtius's Doctrine. Zoſimus, ſomewhat awakened by theſe Remonſtrances of the Africans, reſolved to ſummon Celeſtius before him, and have his Tenents re-examin'd. Celeſtius was cited accordingly, but not having Courage enough to appear, left Rome immediately. Upon this, Zoſimus condemned him, and approved the Deciſions of the African Councils. In the Year 419, the Emperors Honorius and Theodoſius publiſhed an Edict againſt Celeſtius, ſetting forth they had given Order for his being expelled Rome. Some Writers affirm, that this was the Time of his going to Conſtantinople, which Atticus made too hot for him, A. D. 421, or 422. 'Tis ſaid likewiſe, that he came from thence to Rome, and retired with Pelagius into Great Britain: But this Account wants ſufficient Proof. All that can be depended on is, the Relation which occurs in Proſper, and Marius Mercator, that Celeſtius came to Rome A. D. 424; that he was obliged to quit the Town by the Emperor's Order; that Celeſtine forced him farther out of Italy; that he went thence with ſome Pelagian Biſhops to Conſtantinople to viſit Neſtorius, who wrote in their behalf to Celeſtin; and that Marius Mercator preſenting a Memorial againſt them to the Emperor Theodoſius, his Majeſty forced them to remove from this Town, A. D. 429. Farther, there are ſix Propoſitions of Celeſtius, which Hilary Biſhop of Syracuſe ſent S. Auguſtin, who confutes them in his eighty ninth Epiſtle: To which may be added eight Propoſitions, which S. Auguſtin attacks in his Book againſt Celeſtius. And laſtly, there are ſome Fragments of a Confeſſion of Faith preſented by Celeſtius to Pope Zoſimus: Theſe Remains of his Belief may be ſeen in S. Auguſtin's Book de Gratia & Peccato Originali. * Hieron. contra Pelagian. Auguſtin. Proſper, contra Collatorem. Marius Mercator. Uſſerius Armachanus, Antiq. Eccleſ. Britan. M. de Tillemont. S. Auguſtin's Life, Tom. 13. Preface to the 10*th Tome of S. Auguſtin by the Benedictines. Baron. A. C.* 411, &c. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. V.

CELLARIUS, (Chriſtopher) was born at Smalcald in Germany in 1638. His Father was Superintendent of this Town. Chriſtopher ſtudy'd Philoſophy, Mathematicks, and the Oriental Languages at Jena. And having paſs'd through ſeveral Poſts of Credit in Learning, he was made Rhetorick and Hiſtory Profeſſor in the King of Pruſſia's new Univerſity founded at Hall in Saxony. He has obliged the Publick with a great many Works, and promoted new Editions of a great many Ancient Authors; all which have been well received by the Learned World. To mention the Particulars; he wrote de Latinitate Mediæ & Infimæ Ætatis, or Anti-barbarus. Curæ Poſteriores de Barbariſmis & Idiotiſmis Sermonis Latini. He has much enlarged Faber's Theſaurus. He wrote likewiſe an Abridgment of the Rules for the Latin Tongue in High-Dutch. He publiſhed Tully's Epiſtles ad Familiares, Cornelius Nepos, Pliny's Epiſtles, with his Panegyrick upon Trajan, Quintus Curtius, Eutropius, Sextus Rufus, Rufus, Velleius Paterculus, the twelve old Panegyriſts, with Orations from Latin Authors. We have likewiſe a Lactantius, Minutius Felix, S. Cyprian de Vanitate Idolorum, publiſhed by Cellarius. Cælius Sedulius, Prudentius, and Silius Italicus, paſs'd the Preſs by his Induſtry: He procured a new Edition of the Epiſtles of John Picus Count of Mirandula, with the Orations and other Pieces of Cunæus. He publiſhed Zoſimus and Pœanius Eutropius's Paraphraſt. The reſt of his own Works are his Abridgment of Univerſal Hiſtory, a Collection of the Saracen Hiſtory, ſeveral Diſſertations, Elements of Aſtronomy for better underſtanding the Poets, an Epitomy of Ancient and Modern Geography, Notitia Antiqui Orbis, a very conſiderable Performance. He died in 1707. * De Viri Celebr. &c. Chriſtoph. Cellarii Antiquitatum, &c. obitu, Epiſtola ad Clariſſ. &c. Struvium, exarata à Jacobo Burchard. Halæ, 1707. in 4*to.*

CELSUS (Marius) prick'd for Conſul by Nero. He was a Perſon of Capacity and Worth, always loyal to the Emperor Galba, and endeavoured to march the Troops of Illiricum to reinforce him. This Firmneſs to his Duty was a Crime among Traitors and Turn-coats; inſomuch that when, upon the Death of this Prince, he came to the Camp to wiſh Otho Joy of the Empire, the Troops cry'd out againſt him, and were warm for his Execution. Otho notwithſtanding had a mind to preſerve him; he was afraid the taking the Life of a Man of Quality, and one who had been nominated Conſul, might occaſion no ſmall Diſturbance: But this Prince, as things ſtood, having more Power to do Miſchief, than prevent it, made uſe of a little Art: He pretended himſelf highly diſguſted with Celſus, and that he was ready to put him to Death, only he was willing to examine him upon certain Heads before he was diſpatch'd. Thus he ordered him to be ſeized and loaded with Chains, to ſatisfy the Soldiers: But the next Day he had him brought into the Capitol, embraced him, and deſired him to excuſe the rugged Treatment he was forced to give him to ſave his Life. Celſus reply'd, that himſelf being guilty of nothing but his Fidelity to Galba, who had never obliged him, his preſent Majeſty might collect his future Behaviour to him from what was paſs'd. This Inſtance of Generoſity on both ſides was commended by every body, even by the Soldiers themſelves. Otho immediately took him into an Intimacy, and 'twas not long before he made him one of his Generals. Celſus managed this Poſt with his cuſtomary Loyalty, though without Succeſs. He commanded under this Quality at the Battle of Bebriacum, where, after the Field was loſt, the Emperor Otho ſtabbed himſelf, leaving the Empire to his Rival Vitellius, who had the Juſtice to value Celſus, and kept the Conſulſhip for him, A. D. 69. * De Tillemont Hiſtoire des Emp. Tom. 1.

CENSUS, a General Review or Muſter of the Roman People, made every five Year by the Cenſors. King Servius began this Cuſtom. This Prince was the firſt who took an Account of the Numbers of his Subjects, to inform himſelf exactly how far he could muſter for the Field, and what Aſſiſtances in Money he might reaſonably expect. For this purpoſe every Roman Citizen, who had the Freedom of the Town, was obliged to bring in a true Valuation of his Eſtate, a Liſt of his Children, his Slaves and Freed-Men, and all under the Penalty of forfeiting every Part of his Fortune not diſcovered. The Cenſors were obliged to keep an exact Regiſter of all theſe Particulars, and be very careful that no Foreigner, or unqualified Perſon, might be ſurreptitiouſly entred. Ne quis in Cenſorias Tabulas irreperet.

The three Diſtinctions in the Republick, that is, the Nobility, the Gentry, and the Commons, were comprehended within this Liſt. The regiſtring thoſe of the firſt Quality was called Lectio & Recitatio Senatus: The ſecond, Cenſio, Recenſio, & Recognitio; and the third, Cenſus or Luſtrum. The Cenſor ſitting in a Sella curulis, or Ivory Chair, ordered the Herald to call over the Senators by their reſpective Names. This was called Legere or Recitare Senatum. They ſtruck the Names of thoſe out of the Regiſter whom they degraded for Miſbehaviour, and entred others in their Place taken out of the Gentry: This they called Legere in Senatum.

After they had done with the Senate, they proceeded to review the Gentry, who were called over one by one; and when they had nothing to object to their Conduct, the Cenſor uſed to ſay, Præteri, & Traduc Equum, that is, Paſs off, and take your Horſe with you. On the other ſide, if he had failed in his Duty and Behaviour, they took his Horſe and his Penſion from him, Equus adimebatur. After this, they proceeded to muſter the Commons or Third-Rate People, and that not only the Burghers of Rome, but thoſe of other Country Towns, which had the Jus Civitatis, or the Privilege of a Roman Citizen, whoſe Names were returned to the Cenſors. When they had any conſiderable Miſbehaviour to charge them with, they degraded them, took away their Right of voting, and ſet Taxes upon them; Ærarios fieri, & in Ceritum Tabulas referri; becauſe the Burghers of the ſmall Town of Ceres were made Roman Citizens with Abatement, and without the Privilege of voting.

When the Muſter was thus gone through, a Day was appointed for a Meeting in the Campus Martius, where a Luſtration was performed; the People appeared in Arms, and ranged into their reſpective Claſſes or Centuries, according to Servius's Proviſion. And here they had their Sacrifice called Suovetaurilia, becauſe they ſacrificed a Boar, a Sheep, and a Bull, to intreat the Gods to accept what they had done, and to preſerve the Republick in its cuſtomary good Condition and Splendor: And with this Ceremony the Cenſus was concluded. * Roſinus. Dempſter, &c.

* CENSORS, conſiderable Magiſtrates in the Old Roman Republick, who had the Regulation of Manners within their Juriſdiction. They were choſen every five Years in the Comitia Centuriata, where the Conſuls were elected; Cenſores, ſays Aſconius Pedianus, quinto quoque anno creari ſolebant. This long Term did not pleaſe the Conſuls afterwards; which made the Dictator Mamercus Æmilius dock it to eighteen Months; but the Cenſors, diſobliged by having their Time thus ſhortned, razed Mamercus out of his Tribe, and made him one of the Cerites, and liable to pay Taxes.

In the firſt Age of the Commonwealth, noble Extraction was a neceſſary Qualification for this Poſt in the Magiſtracy; but a hundred Years forward, they relaxed upon this Condition: For the Plebeians or Commons being then elected to the Conſulſhip and other great Offices, C. Martius Rutilius, the firſt Dictator of a Commoner, was likewiſe elected Cenſor with Manlius Nævius; and afterwards the Dictator Q. Philo got a Bill paſs'd for electing a Commoner Cenſor. 'Tis likewiſe obſerv'd in Hiſtory, that Q. Pompeius and Q. Metellus were elected Cenſors together, though of Plebeian Extraction. Before the ſecond Punick War, the paſſing thro' ſome of the chief Offices in the Magiſtracy was not neceſſary to qualify a Man to ſtand for Cenſor; for Livy reports, that Publius Licinius Craſſus, who had only been Ædilis, was choſen Cenſor and High-Prieſt at the ſame time; but after this Period, none were elected Cenſors, unleſs they had been Conſuls before. No Perſon was capable of this Office more than once; and Valerius Maximus obſerves, that M. Rutilius being choſen Cenſor a ſecond time, reprimanded the People for their Diſregard of their Anceſtors Laws, who ſometimes thought it convenient to ſhorten the time of this Office, becauſe they believ'd too much Power lodged in it; and therefore it would be ſtrange claſhing with ancient Cuſtom to put it twice into the ſame Hands. Pliny Junior relates this Rutilius plainly refuſed it, not thinking it convenient for the Publick that one Perſon ſhould have it twice.

When the Cenſors had been elected in the Campus Martius, they mounted their Sellæ Curules near Mars's Altar, and thank'd the People for the Honour of their Election. From hence they drove to the Capitol, where they appear'd with all the Ornamental Marks belonging to their Office. Here they took an Oath not to manage either by Favour or Diſaffection; but to act equitably and impartially through the whole Courſe of their Adminiſtration.

The Cenſors fined Celibacy pretty deep, eſpecially ſince Furius Camillus's Law, which forbad it, with a Deſign to recruit Rome, after the Civil War had made it leſs populous. Theſe Magiſtrates likewiſe ſettled the Expences for the Publick Sacrifices, and took care that the Holy Geeſe might be well maintained in the Capitol. Notwithſtanding the Cenſors had a great Compaſs of Authority, they were obliged to give an Account of their Management to the Tribunes and Ædiles Curules. And Livy takes Notice, that the Tribune of the People Ap- pius Metellus committed the two Cenſors M. Furius Philo and M. Atilius Regulus, becauſe, when he was Quæſtor the Year before, they ſtruck his Name out of his Tribe, and made him be taxed. Afterwards a Law was enacted, obliging the Cenſors to give their Reaſons for degrading a Citizen, leſſening his Privileges, and ſetting a Mark of Infamy upon him. This great Office dwindled upon the Progreſs of Time: Under the Emperors it ſunk to nothing, their Majeſties engroſſing all the Branches of that Juriſdiction. For Suetonius reports, that Auguſtus order'd a Cenſorian Review by ten Commiſſioners ſent him at his Inſtance from the Senate. This Precedent was followed by ſucceeding Emperors. Theodoſius endeavour'd to reſtore it to its firſt Significancy; but the Senate oppoſed the Motion, and at laſt the Office was annex'd to the Imperial Dignity. * Cicero, Lib. 3. de Legib. Livy. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus. Plutarch, in vit. Caton. Cenſor.

pius

* CENSORINUS, (Appius Claudius) a Roman Senator, and a great Military Officer: He had been twice Proprætor, twice Conſularis, becauſe the Title of Conſularis, to ſpeak properly, belonged only to thoſe who had been Conſuls, tho' a Man might be Proconſul or Proprætor without having been either Conſul or Prætor. To go on with Cenſorinus, he had been four times Proconſul, thrice Præfect of Rome, twice Præfectus Prætorio, twice Conſul, and Ambaſſador in Perſia and Sarmatia. Upon his retiring to his Country-Seat for the better curing a Wound in his Foot, ſome Troops who revolted from the Emperor came A. D. 269, put the Purple upon him, and forced him to take the Imperial Title. They gave him the Name of Claudius, either becauſe he was lame, or to affront the then Emperor, who was Claudius II. But Cenſorinus's Government was very ſhort; for his exceſſive Severity, not overlooking any Fault, occaſioned his being aſſaſſinated by the Soldiers who elected him, after a Week's pretended Reign. Goltzius and Occo, who place Cenſorinus's mutinous Election to the Reign of Gallienus, are no leſs miſtaken than Meſabarbus of Birague, who, upon the Authority of a Greek Medal, makes Cenſorinus's Reign three Years. * Trebellius Pollio, cap. 32.

CENSURES. (Eccleſiaſtical) Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure is a Penalty by which, for ſome remarkable Miſbehaviour, Chriſtians are deprived of the Communion of the Church, or prohibited to execute the Sacerdotal Character. Excommunication throws out of the Communion of the Church: Suſpenſion lays the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion aſleep, either wholly, or with reſpect to ſome Branches: An Interdict, in the Church of Rome, forbids the Adminiſtring the Sacraments, and performing Divine Service in Publick: Irregularity is a Bar which makes a Perſon incapable of receiving Orders, or making uſe of thoſe he has received: Depoſition is a Sentence for degrading an Eccleſiaſtick, and taking his Orders from him. Theſe are the different Kinds of Cenſures. They are commonly diſtinguiſhed, firſt, into thoſe called à Jure, that is, ſuch as are appointed by the Law; and into thoſe ab Homine, as much as to ſay which are pronounced by a Superior for ſome particular Fact. The ſecond Diviſion is into Cenſures Latæ Sententiæ, which are incurred by committing the prohibited Action, without any need of Judgment pronounced; and Sententiæ Ferendæ, which tho' deſerved by being guilty of the Fault againſt which the Penalty is levelled, yet the Cenſure is not incurred till Sentence is pronounced by an Officer commiſſion'd for that Purpoſe. The third Subdiviſion of Cenſures is into Juſt and Unjuſt: The fourth into Valid and Invalid: The fifth into thoſe reſerved to a ſuperior Judge, and thoſe not reſerved. * Eveillon, des Monitoires. M. du Pin, de Antiq. Eccleſ. Diſciplin. Rituel d'Alet. See Excommunication in Morery's Supplement, and Interdict in Morery, Vol. I.

CENTORBI, or Centorue, a Town in the Valley of Demona in Sicily: It ſtands at the Foot of Mont Gibel to the Weſt, upon the River Chiarama, three Leagues above Paterno. 'Twas formerly a pretty large Town; but being demoliſhed by the Emperor Frederick II. it could never recover its former Conſiderableneſs. * Maty, Dict.

* CENTURIÆ. King Servius Tullus began this ranging the People under Centuries, that is, regiſtring all the Roman Citizens, with an Account of their Age, their Children, their Slaves, their Lands, Goods and Chattels, the Quarter of the Town where they lodged, and the Trade or Buſineſs they lived on. The firſt Enrolment of this kind was made in the Campus Martius, where the Muſter amounted to fourſcore thouſand Men fit to ſerve in the Field, as Livy and Fabius Pictor relate; and fourſcore and four thouſand ſeven hundred, according to Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus. The ſix Claſſes, made up of ſeveral Centuries or Companies, had different Arms and Habits, in Proportion to their Eſtates. The Arms of the firſt Claſs were an Helmet, Back and Breaſt, a Shield, a Dart, a Lance and a Sword. They called them Claſſici, being more conſidered than others, who were called Infra Claſſem, as Aulus Gellius informs us. An hundred thouſand Aſſes Revenue, which makes about a thouſand Crowns French, was required to range them under this firſt Diviſion. Aſconius Pedianus mounts their yearly Income to two thouſand five hundred Crowns. The Arms of the ſecond, third and fourth Claſs, were different from that of the firſt; for they carried a Target inſtead of a Shield, with a Pike and a Javelin. The Revenue of the ſecond Claſs was ſtated at ſeven hundred Crowns per Annum; the Revenue of the third at five hundred; and the Revenue of the fourth at two hundred Crowns. The Arms of the fifth Claſs were Slings, and three of their Centuries were Carpenters, and other Handicrafts-Men neceſſary in an Army: Theſe were obliged to make out a hundred and twenty five Crowns Revenue. The ſixth Claſs conſiſted of a ſingle Century of the meaneſt of the People, who were excuſed from ſerving in the Field, or paying Taxes. They called them Proletarii, becauſe they ſerved for nothing but to increaſe the World. They likewiſe diſtinguiſhed them by Capite Cenſi, becauſe they only gave in their Name to the Cenſor's Regiſter. The Centuries met in the Campus Martius for the Election of Magiſtrates. When the Senate thought fit to order this Publick Meeting, the Conſul gave Notice of it three Free Markets, that is, ſeven and twenty Days before-hand, that the People who had the Right of Voting might have ſufficient Time for being advertiſed. This they called EDICERE Comitia in Trinundinum. This Notice was affix'd in all the great Squares, and Croſſing of the great Streets, three Market-Days ſucceſſively. Here the Buſineſs to be treated was ſet down, and the Lower Magiſtracy prohibited to practiſe Augury upon the Day of the Meeting; in Latin, Ne quis Magiſtratus minor de Cœlo ſervaſſe velit. When any one had a mind to get a Law paſſed in theſe Aſſemblies, they proceeded in the Order following: He that brought in the Bill, called Rogator Legis, harangued the People, or got ſome body to do it for him, to ſhew the Serviceableneſs or Neceſſity of the Law, which was called Concione declarare. If the People gave Signs of liking the Bill, 'twas poſted up three Market-Days, the Contents beginning thus; Quod bonum Fauſtum Felixque Reipublicæ, Populo, Liberiſque eorum eſſet. Thus the Laws of the Twelve Tables were propoſed. This Schedule hung up three Market-Days: And he that brought in the Bill, either by himſelf, or by an Aſſiſtant, dilated upon all the Circumſtances and Advantages of the Law. This was called Promulgatio Legis per Trinundinum: Which ſhews the Difference between theſe two Latin Expreſſions, Proponere Legem, to paſte it up; and Promulgare, to make a Speech in Commendation of it. There is likewiſe a reſembling Difference between theſe other two Words, Rogator Legis, and Auctor Legis: The firſt was he who only propoſed the Law; the ſecond enlarged upon the Particulars of the Bill, and endeavoured to ſet forth its Significancy. When the Day for the Aſſembly was come, the Conſul went early up to the Capitol, or ſome other Eminence; and having the Augur in his Company, he commanded him to examine the Sky; in Latin, Jubebat ſibi in Auſpicio eſſe. After the Augur had pauſed ſome time, to ſee what he could diſcover in the Air, the Conſul ſpoke to him thus; Dicito Silentium eſſe videtur? Tell me if there are no prohibiting Signs of Buſineſs. The Augur's Anſwer was, Silentium eſſe videtur; Things are clear, you may pleaſe to go on. In caſe the Augur was forced to ſpeak negatively, the Word was Obnunciabat, that is, the Marks of Augury diſapproved the Meeting.

After this preliminary Ceremony, the Magiſtrate ſet up his Tent in the Campus Martius, where he harangued the People, exhorting them to make the Service of the Republick their chief Deſign, and do nothing upon Motives of Intereſt or Caprice. Upon this, he order'd them all to their reſpective Centuries, to vote there. Secedite in Centurias veſtras, & de iis deliberate. This Order thus received, the Centuries retired into diſtinct Bodies, and voted by Word of Mouth, till the Year of Rome 615, when they made uſe of Balloting for this purpoſe. Every Century had a Preſident called Rogator, who collected the Votes. When this was done, the Conſul called the firſt Claſs to bring in their Votes. If theſe happen'd to agree to an Univerſality, the remaining Claſſes were not called for; becauſe the firſt being more numerous than all the reſt, their being unanimous amounted to a Majority. If the Voices of the firſt Claſs were divided upon the Queſtion, the ſecond Claſs was called, and ſo forward to the reſt, till they came up to the Number of Votes required by the Conſtitution. This great Privilege of the firſt Claſs above the reſt, diſguſted the People, who could not endure their Votes ſhould ſtand for Cyphers. To ſatisfy this Diſcontent, they pitch'd upon a Temper, that is, to draw Lots which Claſs ſhould be called firſt: And that which had the Determining Lot, was called the Prerogative Tribe, becauſe it had the Privilege of voting firſt.

This Method of Voting held on without Interruption till the Year of Rome 615, when Gabinius, Tribune of the People, got a Bill paſs'd, by which 'twas enacted the Votes ſhould be given by Balloting. Thus this Law was called Lex Tabellaria. The Commons were much pleas'd with this new Proviſion, for before their Liberty of Voting was under Reſtraint: They were ſometimes afraid of diſobliging the Great Men; Grata eſt Tabella, ſays Tully in his Oration for Plancus, quæ frontem operit, hominum mentes tegit, datque eam libertatem, ut quod velint faciant. And in his ſecond Book de Lege Agraria, he calls this Way of Voting Vindex Libertatis, & Principium Juſtiſſimæ Libertatis. However, this Method was not without Inconveniencies, as Tully obſerves in his third Book de Legibus; Non fuit Latebra danda Populo, in qua, bonis Ignorantibus quid quiſque ſentiret, tabella vitioſum occultaret Suffragium.

The Chief Magiſtrate having drawn the Prerogative Claſs out of the Urn, order'd the Cryer to call them; upon which they appeared, and walked over a narrow Bridge into an Encloſure. At their coming upon the Bridge, Balls were deliver'd to them by Officers called Diſtributores, who gave every one two Balls, (one for Choice, and the other for Refuſal) which they threw into an Urn ſtanding at the farther end of the Bridge. This being over, the Conſul computed the Votes, and reported the Election in theſe Words; Quod Bonum Fauſtum, Fortunatumque ſit mihi, Magiſtratuique meo, Populo, Plebique Rom. talem Conſulem, aut Prætorem renuntio; that is, I declare ſuch an one elected Conſul or Prætor by a Plurality of Voices; which Choice, I hope, will prove fortunate to the People or Republick of Rome.

Notwithſtanding all this Precaution, there was ſometimes Tricking and Evaſion: For thoſe who had great Intereſt among the Populace, and had a mind either that a Bill ſhould be thrown out, or a Perſon condemned, managed the Matter ſo, as to turn the Balloting to their own Purpoſe; ſo that a great many of the Voters would neither give a Ball to acquit the Perſon, or paſs the Bill. By this partial Management, Clodius, who profaned the Holy Myſteries of Bona Dea, was brought in Not Guilty. At the Beginning of the Commonwealth, the Commons Votes were reported to the Senate, to be confirmed there: But afterwards the Senate was obliged to give a previous Conſent to what was concluded at the Meeting of the Commons.

CEPEROUX, a Fort in Guiana in Southern America, otherwiſe called Fort Lewis: It ſtands in the Iſland Cayenne, upon the Mountain Ceperoux. The Dutch took it from the French in 1675; but the French recovering it the next Year, have it ſtill in Poſſeſſion.

CEPHALUS, an Athenian Orator, brought in the Cuſtom of Exordiums and Perorations. Æſchines and Demoſthenes ſpeak honourably of him. He uſed to brag he had never harangued againſt the Laws, tho' no Orator of his time had been oftner retained to argue upon thoſe Queſtions. * Suidas. Cœlius Rhodiginus, Lib. 2. Antiq. Lection. cap. 14.

CEPHAS, a Name our Bleſſed Saviour gave Simon Son of Jonas, when his Brother Andrew brought him to him. Cepha in Syriack ſignifies a Stone, as S. John expounds it. Therefore the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles writing in Greek, called him Πέτρος, which the Latins tranſlate Petrus, and the Engliſh, Peter. However, the Syriack Original Cephas is ſometimes uſed. This is the true Etymology of the Word Cephas, as S. Jerome, Tertullian, S. Auguſtin. and the greateſt part of the Commentators obſerve. Optatus ſeems to hint, that the Word Cephas comes from the Greek Κεφαλὴ; and Baronius is poſitive for this Derivation, tho' without any Shew of Probability; for our Saviour ſpoke Syriack, and called S. Peter by the Syriack Name Cephas, which ſignifies a Stone, as S. John explains it: Our Bleſſed Saviour called him ſo, becauſe he was to have the Honour of being Part of the Foundation for building the Church; and 'tis in this Senſe we are to underſtand S. Matthew, cap. xvi. v. 18. Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church, &c. This was ſpoken by our Bleſſed Saviour in Syriack or Chaldee: And S. Matthew, who is ſuppoſed to have penned his Goſpel in the ſame Language, wrote thus; Thou art Cepha, and upon this Cepha will I build, &c. which was turned into Greek thus; Ὅτι σὺ εἶ Πέτρος, καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ Πέτρᾳ, &c. by changing the Word Πέτρᾳ into Πέτρος, to make it agree better to a Perſon. Cephas is ſeveral times mentioned in S. Paul's Epiſtles, viz. 1 Cor. cap. i. v. 12. One ſays I am of Paul, another of Apollos, and another of Cephas. Ibid. cap. iii. v. 22. All are yours, whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas. Ibid. cap. xv. v. 5. 'tis ſaid, Our Bleſſed Saviour appeared to Cephas, and then to the Eleven. And laſtly, Galatians ii. v. 9. Cephas is mentioned as one of the Pillars. And two Verſes forward S. Paul relates, he withſtood him to the Face, becauſe he was to blame. Father Hardoüin pretends this Cephas, mentioned by S. Paul, is not S. Peter, but one of the Seventy two Diſciples. For this Opinion, he cites Clemens Alexandrinus, Dorotheus, ſome Writers in S. Jerome's Time, the Author of the Alexandrian Chronicon, and ſome more modern Commentators, who all fancy it probable. But to this may be returned, as an Over-Balance, not only the Confeſſion of ſeveral Popes, who own that S. Peter was the Cephas withſtood by S. Paul: But likewiſe for this Point we have the unanimous Conſent of all the Fathers and Commentators upon the Holy Scripture; To which may be added, that S. Paul does not mention this Cephas as a Diſciple, but as one of the chief Apoſtles, ranging him with S. James and S. John, who paſſed for Pillars of the Church. To conclude, from our Saviour's being ſaid to have appeared firſt to Cephas, and then to the Eleven, the Inference is clear, that this Cephas is S. Peter; becauſe 'tis ſaid in S. Luke's Goſpel, chap. xxiv. v. 34. that our Bleſſed Saviour appeared firſt to Simon, which Simon is undoubtedly S. Peter: Therefore by inevitable Conſequence the Cephas mentioned by S. Paul (1 Cor. xv. v. 5.) is S. Peter. * Bellarmin de Eccleſ. Baron. A. C. 32. & 34. Hardoüin, Diſſert. de Cephæ. M. Boileau Diſſ. de Cepha.

CERBON, or Cerboney, (S.) in Latin Cerbonius, a Biſhop of Populonia in Tuſcany, much eſteemed for his Sanctity in the Sixth Century: Having conceal'd ſome Roman Soldiers at his Houſe, to protect them from the Goths, Totilas order'd him to be apprehended, and thrown to a Bear. The Bear being turn'd looſe, made directly up to the Biſhop; but inſtead of falling on him, lick'd his Feet. This ſurprizing Change in the Nature of the Beaſt, made an Impreſſion upon Totila, who diſmiſs'd Cerboney, and ſent him home. In the Year 568, this Biſhop was forc'd to quit his Dioceſe, to retire from the Invaſion of the Lombards; he died this Year. His Feſtival, in the Roman Martyrology, ſtands upon the tenth of October. * Gregor. Dial. Lib. 3. Cap. 11. Epiſt. 17. Lib. 1. Molan. Uſuard.

* CEREALES, (Cerealia) Shews or Feſtivals in Honour of Ceres, the Goddeſs of Corn among the Heathens; they were begun by Triptolimus of Eleuſis in Attica, whom Ceres had taught Agriculture. This Solemnity paſs'd from the Greeks to the Romans: 'Twas kept a Week at Rome, in April. After the ſecond Punick War, the Romans improv'd the Feſtival, and gave it a more Pompous Appearance; for now they made a Cavalcade, in which a great many Statues and Paintings of Chariots, Sieges, Crowns, and rich Plunder, taken from the Enemy, were carried in a Pageant; and Macrobius aſſures us an Egg made Part of the Sight. He pretends, 'twas a myſterious Emblem of Ceres; Ovum in Cerealis pompæ apparatu numera- numerabatur primum. Calius Rhodiginus is of Opinion, that the Egg repreſented the Earth, which Ceres had improv'd with Corn; poſſibly it might be an Emblematical Figure of Caſtor and Pollux, (worſhipped by the Romans) both hatch'd out of a ſingle Egg, Ovo Prognatus eodem. Theſe Cerealian Sacrifices were very ſolemn and nicely obſerv'd; and, as ſome ſay, there was no Wine made uſe of: But of this, more by and by. Memmius, when Ædilis Curulis was the firſt who kept this Feſtival, as appears by a Medal, where Ceres is repreſented with three Ears of Corn in one Hand, and a Torch in the other, her Left Foot treading upon a Serpent, with this Inſcription, Memmius Ædilis Cerealia primus fecit; the Feſtival at Athens was call'd Eleuſia, upon the following Occaſion. Ceres being in queſt of her Daughter Proſerpine, came to Eleuſina, where ſhe nurs'd Triptolemus, King Eleuſius's Son: And when the Nurſling was grown up, ſhe taught him to ſow Corn, and make Bread. Triptolemus, by way of Acknowledgment, inſtituted a Holiday for his Benefactreſs, and aſſigned her a Sett of Prieſts call'd Eumolpides, from his Son Eumolpus. There was no Chaplets of Flowers for this Holiday; (of Myrtle there was) becauſe Proſerpine was carry'd off when ſhe was gathering Flowers: They carry'd lighted Torches, and call'd Proſerpine aloud, as Ceres did when ſhe look'd for her on Mount Ida. The Prieſts belonging to this Goddeſs were called Taciti Myſtæ, becauſe they were forbidden to divulge the Myſteries. Wine was no Part of the Sacrifice, as may be collected from a Paſſage in Plautus's Aulularia, Act II. Scene VI.

Staph. Cererin', mi Strobile, has ſunt facturi Nuptias?
Strob. Quî? Staph. Quia temeti nihil allatum intelligo.

However, Cato ſeems to be of another Opinion, and will have Wine uſed in the Sacrifices to Ceres; Poſtea Cereri exta & vinum dato. Lambinus is pretty much embarraſs'd with theſe Contradictory Authorities, and endeavours to diſentangle the Difficulty by a Diſtinction between the Greeks and Romans. The Grecian Ladies, ſays he, ſacrific'd without Wine; but the Roman made uſe of it. When the Sacrifice was over, they made ſplendid Entertainments, the Gladiators play'd Prizes, and they had Chariot-Racing in the Circus, where the Ædiles appear'd, and govern'd at the Spectacle. The Roman Ladies, for their Share in the Solemnity, were dreſs'd in White, with Flambeaux in their Hands, and repreſented the Diſconſolate Behaviour of Ceres, for the Loſs of her Daughter Proſerpine. * Macrob. Saturn. Dion Caſſius, Lib. 43. Tertull. de Spectacul. cap. 7. Calius Rhodigin. Lib. 27. Cap. 17. Ovid. Faſt. Lib. 4. Horat. Serm. Lib. 2. Sat. 1. Plin. Lib. 24. Scalig. Poet. Lib. 1.

* CERES, is Proſperpine's Mother; but for all that, both one and 'tother ſignify the Earth. Thus Rhea, Ceres's Mother, ſignifies the ſame thing with her Daughter, when expounded out of Mythology: There are Real and Phyſical Truths couched under theſe Poetical Genealogies. Some Naturaliſts conſider the Earth under different Ideas, and with this Speculation they make Rhea the ſolid Globe of the Earth: That Ceres is only the Surface of it, which is ſowed and mowed; and that Proſerpine makes the Hemiſphere of the Antipodes. This is Voſſius's Sentiment.

According to the Tradition of the Egyptians, as Diodorus Siculus informs us, Iſis is the ſame with Ceres, invented Agriculture, and publiſhed very equitable Laws; upon which Account ſhe was made a Deity in Egypt. The ſame Hiſtorian reports, that Erictheus King of Athens, tranſporting himſelf into Greece in a time of Famine, and bringing a great Quantity of Corn with him, the Greeks preſented him with the Sovereignty of the Country, by way of Acknowledgment: And being thus ſeized of the Government, he inſtituted the Myſteries of Ceres at Athens, according to the Cuſtoms and Ceremonies of Egypt; and that the Arrival of Ceres at Athens means nothing more, than that Corn was tranſported from Egypt into Greece: Deam illo Tempore in Atticam veniſſe traditur, quo fruges ejus nomine inſignes Athenas ſunt importatæ, quorum ſemina tunc Cereris beneficio quaſi denuo reperta videantur. There is Reaſon to believe that Ceres's ranging over all the Earth, was only the carrying Corn from one Place to another, either to teach the Sowing of Grain, or to relieve the Country againſt a Famine; and if any Country was in a Condition to furniſh foreign Places with Plenty of Corn, 'twas certainly Egypt and Sicily; but more particularly Egypt, in regard the overflowing of the Nile makes the Soil more fertile than any other Part of the World. Upon this Ground the Conjecture ſtands, which makes Iſis Queen of Egypt the ſame with Ceres, and that ſhe ſtock'd other Parts of the World with Corn, and taught the Myſtery of Tillage: And to confirm what has been ſaid upon this Head, that the Cerealian Ceremonies of Egypt and Greece were the ſame, Diodorus Siculus, in other Paſſages of his Hiſtory, brings Sicily, Attica, and Grete, to a Competition with Egypt for this Honour, and reports the Reaſons upon which their reſpective Claims were founded. Herodotus is another Witneſs that the Myſteries of Ceres, called the Law-giver, were imported from Egypt into Greece. The Towns of Greece, as Pauſanias relates, eſpecially Athens and Argos, diſputed hard, like the Egyptians and Phrygians, touching the Origin and Antiquity of the Myſteries of Ceres, and what Nation could beſt pretend to the Credit of furniſhing other Places with Corn. Pauſanias informs us farther, that the Myſteries of Ceres and Iſis were ſuch deep Secrets, that none but her Prieſts were allow'd to ſee her Statue. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid, that thoſe who were unimitiated in thoſe Myſteries, were not permitted ſo much as to enquire how Matters went, much leſs to be preſent at the Solemnities. He likewiſe mentions another Temple of Ceres, where none but Women were admitted, aſſuring us that the Myſteries and Sacrifices of Ceres Eleuſinia were reckon'd the moſt Sacred in all Greece: They diſtinguiſh'd the greateſt Myſteries call'd τέλεα, from the leſſer call'd μυσήρια. The greater were celebrated every Year at Argos, the leſſer once in five Years at Eleuſis: The firſt were kept in Autumn, the laſt in the Spring; as if 'twas done out of an Emblematical Regard to the Receſs and Approaches of the Sun. The leſſer laſted nine days; and after the Religious Solemnities were gone through, they had ſeveral ſorts of Robuſt and Martial Exerciſes. The firſt Place where Ceres receiv'd Divine Honours, was, according to Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, Lib. 1. the Town of Pallantium or Pallanteum, where Rome afterwards ſtood: Here Ceres had a Temple, and a Greek Prieſteſs, and her Feſtival was annually kept at the end of March. Theſe Religious Ceremonies were brought into Italy by Evander. After the Romans had beaten the Volſci, they brought the Plunder into Ceres's Temple, which three Years after was ſolemnly dedicated to this Goddeſs by the Conſul P. Caſſius. This Temple was built at the end of the great Circus or Square. The Solemnity began at Break of Day, and the Women Prieſteſſes (for Ceres had no Prieſts) ran about the Town with lighted Torches as if they were diſtracted: However, they were obliged to qualify themſelves with great Sobriety and Reſervedneſs, and not permitted to divulge any thing of the Myſteries of the Goddeſs; and to bind their Tongues the better to their good Behaviour, they were under a Reſtraint from Wine. Tully reports, that Ceres was worſhipped at Catana in Sicily, as ſhe was at Rome and elſewhere; and that ſhe had a Statue there, which no Man was allowed a Sight of; there being none but Women, either Single or Married, who perform the Sacerdotal Functions. Sacrarium Cereris eſt apud Catanenſes, eadem Religione quâ Romæ, quâ in cæteris locis, quâ propè in toto orbe terrarum. In eo Sacrario intimo fuit ſignum Cereris perantiquum: quod viri non ſolum cujuſmodi eſſet, ſed ne eſſe quidem ſciebant. Aditus enim in id Sacrarium non eſt viris; ſacra per Mulieres & Virgines confici ſolent. To diſcover the Original of the Myſtery of Ceres's Eleuſina, it muſt be remembred that the Invention of Tillage is reckon'd by ſome to Ceres, who made uſe of Triptolemus, and by others to Bacchus. S. Auguſtin, in his Seventh Book de Civitate Dei, Cap. 20. obſerves, that amongſt all the different Kinds of Worſhip paid to Ceres, that of Ceres Eleuſina, celebrated by the Athenians, was the moſt pompous. All that Varro ſays of the Matter, relates to the Invention of ſowing Corn reckon'd to Ceres; and that the Rape, and carrying off Proſerpine by Pluto, ſignifies the Fruitfulneſs of the Seed. This Product having fail'd ſeveral Years, and the Ground growing barren, gave Occaſion to the Fancy, that Pluto had ſeized Ceres's Daughter, and carry'd her to Hades; as much as to ſay, the Fruitfulneſs of the Earth was departed; parted; but after this Calamitous Scarcity, which occaſion'd a Publick Mourning, was gone, and the Plenty of the Seaſons return'd, 'twas believ'd that Pluto had diſcharg'd Proſperpine, and ſent her home, and then the Solemn Feſtivals in Honour of Ceres were inſtituted. The ancient Pagans made Ceres the Guardian Goddeſs to all the Branches of Huſbandry, and Pauſanias in Arcadicis, makes mention of an Altar where they offer'd Fruit, Trees, Honey, Wool, Serpents, a Sow big with Pigs, and eſpecially Poppies, but no Wine. Pauſanias calls Ceres, Mallophoros, that is, Wooll-wearer. Varro, in his Fourth Book de Lingua Latina, derives Ceres from Gerés, which comes from the Latin Word Gerere, that is, to carry, becauſe the Ground carries the Corn; but the Derivation of the Word from the Hebrew Gores is more probable, which ſignifies Corn, thraſh'd or ground. There are ſeveral Medals of Ceres; one, ſtruck by Memmius Ædilis Curulis, repreſents her ſitting with three Ears of Corn in her Right Hand, and a Flambeau in her Left. Another Medal of C. Volteius ſhews her in a Chariot drawn by two Serpents, with Flambeaux, in each Hand: To which may be added two more of Vivius Panſa, where ſhe is drawn with her Gown a little tuck'd up, with lighted Torches in her Hands, and her Right Foot upon a Sow, becauſe this Creature ſpoils the Corn. * Roſin. Antiq. Rom. Lib. 2. cap. 11. Dempſter Paralip. in Illud. Salmaſ. ad Solin. Gaſper Barthius, ad Stat.

CERET, a good Town in Rouſſillon in Catalonia: It ſtands upon the River Tech, five or ſix Leagues from Perpignan and Elna. 'Tis the Place where in 1660 the Envoys of France and Spain met to adjuſt the Frontiers of thoſe Crowns in thoſe Quarters. * Maty, Diction.

*CERINTHUS. By way of Addition to this Article in Morery Vol. I. may be obſerv'd, that S. John the Apoſtle finding Cerinthus in the Publick Bath, would by no means go in, for fear the Houſe (ſays he) ſhould fall upon us. What Epiphanius reports, that Cerinthus was one of thoſe who made the Jews complain of S. Peter's baptizing Cornelius, and that thoſe of Antioch and Jeruſalem, who maintain'd the Neceſſity of Circumciſion were Cerinthus's Diſciples; this Relation of Epiphanius I ſay, does not agree with the time which S. Irenæus and other ancient Authors aſſign to Cerinthus: For they place his Hereſy immediately after Carpocrates, which does not begin till the Year of our Lord 120. However, 'tis certain Cerinthus ſpread ſome of his Heterodoxies whilſt S. John the Evangeliſt was living, that is before the Year 101; but then it is not at all likely it was ſo early as the Year 50, becauſe Irenæus obſerves that the Nicolaitans, who were a Branch of the Gnoſticks, propagated their falſe Doctrine a long time before Cerinthus. It muſt then be granted, that Cerinthus began to publiſh his Hereſy towards the end of the Firſt Century, in the Reigns of Nerva and Trajan, and that he held on his Courſe thro' ſome Part of Adrian's Government. 'Tis probable at firſt his Miſtake was only in a ſingle Tenent; that he aſſerted the Neceſſity of Circumciſion, and obſerving the Moſaick Ceremonies, and ſo join'd the Law and the Goſpel together; but though this was no ſmall Error, he did not ſtop here; for ſettling in Aſia, he held, 1. That the World was not made by the Supreme Deity, but by a diſtinct and inferior Intelligence, who knew nothing of the Sovereign Being. 2. That Jeſus Chriſt was not born of a Virgin, but the Son of Joſeph and Mary, in the common Methods of Nature, with the only Difference of being endowed with higher Degrees of Juſtice and Wiſdom than other Men. 3. That Chriſt, the Son of the Supreme Deity, deſcended in the Shape of a Dove into Jeſus when he was baptized, and that by this means he underſtood the unknown Father, and work'd Miracles. 4. That this Chriſt took Leave of Jeſus at his Paſſion; that Jeſus only ſuffer'd, and Chriſt remain'd Impaſſive. Theſe are the Hereſies Cerinthus is charg'd with by Irenæus. Other Authors, who write upon the Subject of Hereſy, add, that he brought Æons and an inviſible Plenitude into his Scheme, affirmed that the World was made by Angels, and that the Moſaick Law was deliver'd by nothing bigger than an Angel; which does not ſeem to agree exactly with the Opinion of the Neceſſity of obſerving the Jewiſh Law reckon'd to him. Cains and Dionyſius of Alexandria, cited by Euſebius, (Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. 3. cap. 28.) reproach Cerinthus with the Belief of our Saviour's reigning here upon Earth; and that the Satisfactions of this Period ſhould conſiſt in Eating and Drinking, and Marriage; together with Sacrifices and Feſtival Solemnities for a thouſand Years. This Opinion of our Saviour's Reign upon Earth for a thouſand Years was not particular to Cerinthus; Papias, and many of the Ancients, were of the ſame Sentiment. But Cerinthus ſunk the Entertainment to Animal Life, and owns no other Happineſs than this Millenial Reign. If Epiphanius is not miſtaken, there were ſome Cerinthians who flatly deny'd the Reſurrection, or at leaſt many of them held that our Saviour was not yet riſen. Cerinthus rejected all the Goſpels, excepting S. Matthew's: He likewiſe diſown'd the Authority of the Acts of the Apoſtles, and S. Paul's Epiſtles. And, if Philaſtrius may be credited, he honour'd Judas's Memory, and was an Enemy to Martyrdom. * Irenæus, Lib. 1. cap. 25. &c. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 22. Theodorit. Fabul. Hæret. Baron. A. C. 35, 41, 51, 57, 74, 97.

CERLE, (John) born at Aubin in the Dioceſe of Rhodes in 1634: He was choſen Præcentor to the Cathedral of Pamieres, and was afterwards Official in the ſame Church. The Affairs which happen'd during his Employment, made him much taken Notice of. Joſeph de Montpezat, Archbiſhop of Toulouſe, who was in the Jeſuites Intereſt, had declar'd himſelf openly againſt the Clergy of Pamieres, who adher'd to the Janſeniſts. He pronounc'd the Nomination of the Vicars-General void, though the Election had been made in due Form; and thus he ſet up Altar againſt Altar in this Cathedral. Cerle, who was the only Perſon who had eſcaped the Violence plaid upon the Chapter, (who were all either impriſon'd or baniſh'd,) thought himſelf oblig'd to defend his Authority, and maintain his Poſt. He appeal'd to the See of Rome againſt the Proceedings of his Metropolitan. His Appeal is dated Sept. 6, 1680. He publiſh'd the Reaſons of his conteſting with the Archbiſhop of Toulouſe. This Prelate was much diſguſted with Cerle's Freedom and Reſolution. He went to the Parliament, harangu'd with a great deal of Heat, and endeavour'd to make the Parliament believe that the French Court expected they ſhould ſentence Father Cerle to Capital Puniſhment. The Parliament, over awed by the Archbiſhop, condemn'd Father Cerle to loſe his Head upon a Scaffold in the great Square of Toulouſe. Their Sentence was founded upon ſome Articles of Impeachment, publiſh'd in the Archbiſhop's Paſtoral Letters, and other Orders ſet forth by him. The Sentence is dated April 16, 1681. And Cerle was executed in Effigy at Toulouſe and Pamieres the 21ſt of April following. The Executioner, belonging to the Town laſt mention'd, ran away to avoid doing his Office. Father Cerle being every where purſued by his Enemies, was forc'd to ſhelter himſelf in a Cave; he wander'd for ſome time in Deſarts and Mountainous Retreats, and kept firm to his Sentiments, notwithſtanding the Hardſhips he lay under. He wrote ſeveral Letters during his abſconding to the Dioceſe of Pamieres. His Enemies, not contented with their Sentence to Capital Puniſhment, and executing him in Effigy, got him condemn'd to the Galleys at Marſeilles February 12, 1689. Cerle publiſh'd a Cenſure in the Dioceſe of Pamieres againſt the Doctrine which diſpenſes with the Duty of Loving God. He was the only Eccleſiaſtical Superior in France who order'd Publick Prayers in the Dioceſe of Pamieres, upon the Occaſion of the remarkable Revolution in England, which 'tis probable he might call by another Name. He died in his Retirement Auguſt 16, 1691, being fifty ſeven Years of Age. There are a great many Papers in his Cuſtody publiſh'd under the Titles of Acts, Ordinances, Paſtoral Letters, Letters to Popes, &c. They are collected in the ſecond and third Part of the Inventory of the Buſineſs of Pamieres. There were Inſtruments and Papers enough to make a fourth Part, provided they had been collected and ſent to the Preſs. * Memoires du Tems.

CERNICH, or Czernich, a Town in the Kingdom of Hungary: It ſtands in Slavonia, upon the River Cernich, between the Towns of Poſſega and Gradiſca. Some take it for the old Inicerum and Incerum, a Town of Pannonia, which others make the ſame with Garnock in the County of Poſſega. * Maty, Diction.

CERVERA, a Town of Spain within the Country of Sierra in New Caſtile, ſix Leagues from the Town Cuença towards the South-Weſt. There is another good Town

Town of this Name within the Viguérie of Gironne in Catalonia: It ſtands upon the Weſtern Coaſt, near a great Bay of the ſame Name, between Roſes and Collioure, four Leagues from the firſt, and three from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

CESARIUS, a Deacon and Martyr at Terracina: He ſuffer'd, as the Acts of his Martyrdom relate, in the Reign of the Emperor Claudius or Nero; but theſe Acts are ſo ſtuff'd with Fiction, that there is no giving Credit to them. However, he has had the Reſpect of a Martyr paid him in the Church of Rome, as appears by the Sacramentary of Gregory the Great. His Feſtival ſtands on the firſt of November both in the Greek and Latin Church.

* CESARIUS, Archbiſhop of Arles: There are ſeveral of his Homilies extant in Baluzius's Analecta, and S. Auguſtin's Sermons. He not only wrote Pulpit-Diſcourſes for the Inſtructions of his own Flock, but likewiſe furniſh'd ſeveral Biſhops of France, Italy, and Spain, with Compoſitions of this kind. 'Twas his Cuſtom to tranſcribe Sermons from other Authors, and particularly from S. Auguſtin. The Author who has tranſcrib'd him into Gennadius's Book de Scriptoribus Eccleſiaſticis: (For Gennadius could not mention him, becauſe when he wrote, Ceſarius was not Biſhop of Arles) This Writer, I ſay, makes him the Author of a Collection of Paſſages drawn from Scripture and the Fathers upon the Subject of Grace, which paſs'd the Approbation of Pope Felix; which is to be underſtood of the Canons of the ſecond Council of Orange, where Ceſarius aſſiſted. His Life ſeems interpolated, and not preſerv'd in the Condition 'twas firſt written. * Ruricius Lemovicenſis, Epiſt. 31. Gregor. Turon. Bellarm. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VI.

CESALPIN, (Andrew) in Latin Ceſalpinus, a very learned Perſon, both in Philoſophy and Phyſick. He was born at Arezzo, practis'd a great while at Piſa, and was afterwards made firſt Phyſician to Pope Clement VIII. he died at Rome in 1603, eighty four Years of Age. He was very much a Free-Thinker, and, as 'tis ſaid, believ'd the Origination of Mankind to be the ſame with that which ſome Philoſophers have aſſign'd to Frogs; and it muſt be ſaid, his Principles were ſomewhat reſembling thoſe of Spinoſa. However, the Honour of finding out the Circulation of the Blood muſt not be deny'd him. His Works are, Κάτοπτρον, ſive Speculum Artis Medicæ Hippocraticum. De Plantis, Libri 16. de Metallicis, Libri 3. Quæſtionum Medicarum, Libri 2. Praxis Univerſæ Medicinæ. Dæmonum inveſtigatio Peripatetica. Quæſtionum Peripateticarum, Libri 5. Paſſages in Ceſalpinus's Works which prove he knew the Circulation of the Blood are, Ceſalp. Quæſt. Peripatet. Lib. 5. Cap. 4. Fol. 125. Quæſtionum Medicarum, Lib. 2. Cap. 17. Fol. 234. Edit. 1593. * Thuan. Witte. Diar. Biograph. & Bibliographia Curioſa apud Teiſſier, Elog. Tom. 2. pag. 330.

CESENNIUS, (Gallus) commanded the twelfth Legion of the Roman Army in Syria. At the Breaking out of the Jewiſh War, he was detach'd by the Governor Ceſtius to ſeize the Country of Galilee. This Order was given in the twelfth Year of Nero's Reign. He made himſelf Maſter of Sephoris, and a great many other Towns in the Neighbourhood; and receiving Advice that great Numbers of the Revolters had fortify'd themſelves upon the Mountain Azamon, which croſſes Galilee, he march'd and attack'd them, and gaining the Eminence, kill'd above a thouſand. Some of the Revolters eſcaped; but the greateſt Part of them were taken and laid in Irons. This Officer finding no more Buſineſs in Galilee, countermarch'd to Ceſtius. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 2. Cap. 34.

CESENNIUS, (Petus) another Governor of Syria, and a very malicious Perſon: He had like to have deſtroy'd Antiochus King of Comagena, and his two Sons Antiochus and Callinicus, by preferring a falſe Information againſt them, as if they had held a Correſpondence with Artabanus King of the Parthians. Veſpaſian, in the fourth Year of his Empire, order'd Ceſennius to march into Comagena to ravage the Country, and drive Antiochus out of his Dominions; but the ſlender Defence this poor Prince made, was ſufficient Diſproof of the Charge brought in againſt him. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 7. cap. 8.

CETHOSIS-RAMESSES, ſucceeded Amenophis III. in the Kingdom of Egypt: He levied a numerous Army, equipt a Fleet, and then left the Government of his Dominions to his Brother Armais, with a full unreſtrain'd Commiſſion for the Adminiſtration, forbidding him only aſſuming the Royal Style, with an Injunction not to act any thing to the Prejudice of his Queen and Children. After this Settlement of his Affairs at home, he made an Expedition againſt Cyprus, and attacked the Phœnicians, Aſſyrians, and Medes. He carried his Conqueſts through all theſe Countries, and made a great Part of them ſubmit without Conteſt by the Terror of his Arms. Being thus ſucceſsful, he deſigned to puſh the Advantage farther Eaſtward: But this Enterprize was check'd by the ill News he received from the High-Prieſt in Egypt, who ſent him Word, that his Brother Armais had treaſonably uſurped the Crown, and broke through all the Orders left with him. Upon this, he was forced to countermarch his Army, and try to reduce his Brother, in which Attempt he was ſo fortunate as to ſucceed. 'Tis ſaid, this Cethoſis gave his Dominions the Name of Egypt; for it ſeems he had two Names, Cethoſis and Ægyptus. His Brother likewiſe had the double Diſtinction of Armais and Danaus. * Manetho cited by Joſephus, contra Appion. Lib. 1. cap. 5.

CEYTAVACCA, a Town in Aſia in the Iſland of Ceylan, between the Town Colombo, and the Mountain called Adam's Pick. It ſtands in Caneland, and belongs to the Dutch, according to Wiſcar's Map of Ceylan. * Maty, Diction.

CHACO, a large Country in Southern America: 'Tis bounded on the Eaſt by the River Paraguay, which parts it from Paraguay Proper. It has the Country of the Amazons to the North, Peru and Tucuman to the Weſt, and the Province of la Plata to the South. This Country is inhabited by a great Number of Native Americans; but the Europeans are not yet ſettled there. * Maty, Diction.

CHAUM, Ben Banas, a Rabbi, wrote a Book entituled, The Great Synagogue: 'Tis a Commentary upon the two Books of Joſeph Caro, where he treats of the Judicial and Ceremonial Part of the Moſaick Inſtitution. In this Commentary he relates the Opinions and Deciſions of the Ancient and Modern Rabbies: This Work was printed at Leghorn A. D. 1658. * Bartoloxi, Biblioth. Rabbinica. Hiſt. des Juifs, depuis J. C. juſqu'à preſent. Edit. de Paris. 12. 1710. Tom. 7.

* CHALDEANS, or Babylonians, a People in Aſia, now living in the Country called Yerack, and Diarbeck. They pretend to extraordinary Antiquity; and in the Time of Alexander the Great, gave out they had Aſtronomical Obſervations, for four hundred ſeventy three thouſand Years. However, Porphyry and Simplicius leſſen this Number to a thouſand nine hundred and three. Beroſus, who dedicates his Hiſtory of the Chaldeans to Antiochus Theodorus, reckons but four hundred and ninety Years to his own Time: And Epigenes, who lived in the Reign of Auguſtus, ſettles the Computation at ſeven hundred and twenty Years to the Age he lived in, which falls in with Beroſus's Calculation. The Empire of the Chaldeans or Babylonians, was founded by Nimrod, but afterwards ſubdivided among ſeveral petty Princes, till the Reign of Belus, and his Succeſſor Ninus, who enlarged his Dominions, and made them a very powerful and flouriſhing Kingdom. Julius Africanus, Euſebius, and Georgius Syncellus, reckon ſeven Chaldean and ſix Arabian Kings before Belus, and aſſign them four hundred and forty Years; but theſe are Romantick Princes, and ſo is the Catalogue of the Aſſyrian Kings in Cteſias. Belus began his Reign over all Aſſyria 1229 Years before the Incarnation. This Realm was afterwards divided between the Kings of Ninive and Babylon. Nabonaſſar is the firſt King from whence his Chronological Epocha is taken, and falls in the Year 747 before the Incarnation; and Nabonidas, conquer'd by Cyrus in the Year 538 before the Incarnation, is the laſt Chaldean Prince. The Names of the Kings of Babylon are mention'd in the Holy Scripture; and in a Fragment of Beroſus, cited by Joſephus. The Liſt is as follows:

Years before Jesus Christ.		Years of their Reign.
747	Nabonassar	14 Years
733	Nadius	2 Years
731	Chinzirus, or Porus	5 Years
726	Italeus	5 Years
721	Mardocempadus, called by Isaiah Merodach-Baladan,	12 Years
709	Archianus	5 Years
704	Interregnum	2 Years
702	Belibus	3 Years
699	Aftronadius	6 Years
693	Rigebelus	1 Years
692	Messessimordachus	4 Years
688	Interregnum	8 Years

The Kingdom of Babylon re-united to that of Nineve by Essaradon.

625	Nabopolassar	9 Years
603	Nabuchodonosor	43 Years
560	Evilmerodach	2 Years
558	Neriglissor	4 Years
554	Laborosо-Archodus	9 Months
553	Nabonides, or
538	Darius-Medus	17 Years

The End of the Kingdom of the Chaldeans, or Babylonians.

* M. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univers. des Hist. Prof.

CHAMBERLAIN, (The Great) at Rome: His Post is the Government of the Town. He has likewise the Care of the Patrimony of the Church; is a sort of Treasurer, and distributes Charity out of the Revenues of the Church: His Office is much the same with the Sur Intendant des Finances in France: He is likewise an Overseer of the Publick Buildings, as the Ædiles formerly were under the Roman Republick. When the See is vacant, he lodges in the Pope's Apartment, marches with the Swiss Guards, and appoints the Meeting of the Conclave. There is likewise an Officer call'd Chamberlain of the Sacred College: This Office is executed by the Eldest Cardinals, who take it by Turns every Year. He collects and distributes the Revenues of the Sacred College; and when he quits his Employment, he pays every Cardinal his Proportion. This is a distinct Office from that of the Pope's Chamberlain. * Voyage d' Italie.

CHANA, Cana, formerly Coptos, an old Town in Upper Egypt. It stands upon the Eastern Bank of the Nile, between the Towns Minio and Assuana. This Town has been very considerable for Trade, because all sorts of Merchandize brought from the Indies through the Red Sea were carried thither by Land, in order to be embarqu'd upon the Nile. * Maty, Diction.

CHANCELLOR. This Office in the Roman Empire had neither the Dignity nor Power of the Modern Chancellor in France. He was but a Petty Officer among the Romans, who sat in a Place railed in, to write down the Judge's Sentence, and other Proceedings of the Court: His Business was somewhat like our Clerks of the Peace or Assizes. They were paid in Proportion to the Bulk of what they wrote, as Salmasius observes from a Passage of a Law of the Lombards. Volumus ut nullus Cancellarius pro ullo judicio aut scripto aliquid amplius accipere audeat, nisi dimidiam libram argenti de majoribus Scriptis; de minoribus autem infra dimidiam libram. Without question this Officer made no great Figure, since Vopiscus relates that Numerianus blemish'd his Reign by making one of these Chancellors Governor of Rome. Præfectum urbi unum è Cancellariis suis fecit, quo fœditus nec cogitari potuit aliquid, nec dici. Menagius derives the Word from Cancellus, that is, from the Rails or Lattices within which the Emperor sat when he try'd Causes, because the Chancellor was planted at the Door of the Apartment, which parted the Emperor from the rest of the Company. M. du Cange brings this Word from Palestine, where the Tops of the Houses were flat and terrass'd, with Ballustrades lattised, which they call'd Cancelli; that those who mounted the Top of the House to make a Speech, were called Cancellarii; that this Term was afterwards stretch'd to those who pleaded within the Bars call'd Cancelli Forenses; that afterwards, those were called Chancellors who had the first Seat within the Bars or Rails. * Antiquit. Rom. Du Cange, Glossar. &c.

CHANTLOU, (Claud) a Monk of the Congregation of S. Maur, was received in the Abbey of Dorade at Toulouse in 1639, being then twenty three Years of Age. He quitted this Order, not being able to bear that the Monks should be under the Government of an Abbess. Chantlou was very well skill'd in Ecclesiastical History, in Genealogies, and in the Records of his Monasteries. He wrote the History of the Monastery of Mont Major at Arles, and of S. Andrew at Avignon; but these two Books, the French Supplementer believes, are still in Manuscript. In 1662, Chantlou printed S. Bernard's Sermons with Notes, and S. Malachi's Life at Paris. He intended to have publish'd all S. Bernard's Works, which he had compared with a great many Manuscripts, as Mabillon informs us in his Preface at the Head of the Edition of this Father. These four Tomes were printed at Paris after his Death by Lucas Dacherius, whom Chantlou assisted in writing his Spicilegium. He likewise made a Map of the Monasteries in France of the Order of S. Bennet. He transcrib'd abundance of Records of his own Order, and made Draughts of the Seals. In fine, he had been one of the greatest Men of his Age for Learning, had his Life lasted to any considerable Length; but he died suddenly at Paris in 1664, being but forty seven Years of Age. * Menagiana, Tom. 2. pag. 267. &c. De Vigneul Marville, Mélanges d'Histoire, &c. pag. 66.

*CHAOS, Manillius observes that Hesiod, in his Theogonia, makes the World emerge from a Chaos; and after having invoked the Muses to inform him of the Gods, of the Origin of the Earth, of the Rivers, and the Sea; he makes the Muses answer his Question, that Chaos was the first in Being; that afterwards the Earth was form'd out of this Heterogeneous Mass; that Hades and Love had the next Existence; that Darkness and Night were the Product of Chaos; and that the Sky and the Day sprung out of the Bosom of Night. Notwithstanding Hesiod's Chaos is somewhat dark and confused in the Description, 'tis not however difficult to collect its being borrow'd from Moses in Genesis. To illustrate the Point a little, Chaos or unform'd Matter, which was the Principle of the World, was prior to the proper and distinct Nature of Things. The Holy Spirit which moved upon the Waters or Chaos, is what Hesiod mentions under the Appellation of Love; and Darkness, which is said to be upon the Face of the Deep, is what Hesiod means by Erebus or Night; for Ἔρεβος in Greek comes from the Hebrew Harab, which signifies Darkness; Day or the Sky, are said likewise to start out of Chaos, because the Matter of the Stars and Firmament were lodged there, till God parted them. Erebus likewise sprung from Chaos, and carried that Name along with it; for thus Erebus is express'd by Orpheus in Ovid, Per Chaos hoc ingens vastique silentia Regni. Metam. X.

Appian affirms, that Jupiter, who lives in the Uppermost Heaven, drew all the Parts of the Universe into Form and Order, from a confused Chaos. Ζεῦ μάκαρ ἐς σὲ σε πάντα, καὶ ἐκ σέθεν ἐρρίζονται, Jupiter beate, in te omnia & ex te orta sunt. What Appian mentions concerning the Harmony and Conjunction of second Causes, may be referr'd to Love in Hesiod. Diodorus Siculus who gives the Reader a Melange of History and Philosophy, makes the World emerge from Chaos, and so does Euripides and Plutarch. Amongst the Latin Poets, Ovid gives the truest and most beautiful Description of Chaos: It stands thus;

Ante Mare & Terras, & quod tegit omnia Cœlum,
Unus erat toto natura vultus in Orbe,
Quem dixêre Chaos, rudis indigestaque moles,
Nec bene junctarum discordia semina rerum.
Metam. I.

The Poet observes afterwards, that 'twas God who gave Order, Distinction, and Beauty to this unform'd Mass. And here it must be said, Ovid comes close to the Account given by Moses: For first, Moses parts the Sky and the Air from the Earth. The next Step in his Description is to drain the Ground, and make the Waters fall into proper Receptacles: From hence he proceeds to furniſh Trees and Plants; after that, he ſubjoins the Formation of the Stars: The Production of Fiſh, Birds, and Terreſtrial Animals, come next; and after all, he cloſes the ſix days Works with the Formation of Man: And here the Creation of Man is reckon'd as the Maſter-piece of All. That God transfus'd ſome Reſemblances of his own Being: That he communicated ſome Lineaments of his Likeneſs, ſomething of the Holineſs, Command, and Sovereignty of the Divine Attributes; that is to ſay, God made him an Intelligent Being, penetrated his Mind with the Nature of Truth, and the Deſire of Eternity. The Poet, in his firſt Book of his Metamorphoſis, deſcribes the Creation much in the ſame manner: For Inſtance, he makes Man the Offspring of the Deity, gives him a nobler Compoſition than other Animals, repreſents God putting the Dominion of other Creatures into his Hands: That his Soul was the Reſemblance of the Divine Nature; that God ſtamp'd his own Image upon him, gave him an erected Poſture, to look upwards and contemplate the Sky. When the Poet Seneca, according to Cuſtomary Language, gives the Name of Chaos to the Shades Below, Noctis Æterna Chaos, averſa ſuperis Regna.

he lets us plainly underſtand, that this Part of the World has retained the Name of Chaos upon the ſcore of the Darkneſs, Diſturbance and Confuſion ſtill upon it. Ritterſhutius, in his Notes upon Guntherus, derives Chaos from the Hebrew Word, which ſignifies to be cover'd with Darkneſs; which Etymology is confirm'd by the Poet Prudentius, Hym. 5. Cathemer.

Merſo ſole Chaos ingruit horridum,
Lucem redde tuis, Chriſte, fidelibus:

The old Italick Verſion, Luke cap. xvi. ver. 26. calls the Space between Heaven and Hell Chaos, which the Evangeliſt calls Chaſma, that is, a Gulph, or an Abyſs. Fauſtus Rheginenſis likewiſe makes uſe of the Word Chaos for the Gulph laſt mention'd. * Grotius. Annot. in Luc. 16.

CHAOUL, or Chaul, a Town upon the Coaſt of Malabar: It ſtands in the Peninſula on this ſide the Ganges, within the Kingdom of Decan, upon the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Guzarat: 'Tis part of the Dominions of the Great Mogul, and ſtands twenty ſix Miles from Surrat to the South towards Goa. The Situation of this Town is very commodious; the Sea lying to the Weſt, and coming up to the Walls; and to the South there's a large River, and deep enough to bring the biggeſt Veſſels up to the Fort. To the Landward 'tis ſufficiently fortify'd againſt Inſult, being ſurrounded with a very ſtrong Wall with eleven Baſtions. Three of theſe point to the Sea and the others are contriv'd to play upon the River, or the Land. The Fort called il Morro, where the Governor commonly reſides, bears upon the Town, and commands the River. The Streets are fair and large, but not crowded; for the Town, tho' formerly populous, is now but thinly inhabited. There are ſeveral Monaſteries and Churches in it, endowed at firſt with conſiderable Revenues; but the great Loſſes the Portugueze have ſince ſuffer'd has affected the Churches; inſomuch that the greateſt Part of them have no Prieſts to officiate. The Governor of the Town has the Privilege of receiving an immediate Commiſſion from the King of Portugal, neither can he be recall'd unleſs by his Majeſty; whereas other Governors hold their Places of the Vice-Roy at Goa, and continue but three Years in their Employment. This Privilege of the Governors of Chaoul puts them in a Condition to execute great things, upon the ſcore of the Length of their Adminiſtration: But then, on the other ſide, if they happen to warp towards Avarice, and other Inſtances of Publick Miſbehaviour, they are in no Danger of being call'd to an Account; but have an Opportunity of gratifying an Arbitrary Humour, and oppreſſing the Subjects.

It muſt be obſerv'd, there's the old Town of Chaoul, different from that already mention'd, and much larger; but then 'tis neither ſo uniformly built, nor ſo well fortify'd. The greateſt Part of the Burghers are Pagans, and the reſt Mahometans. Notwithſtanding its lying two Leagues diſtant from the Sea, 'tis not the leſs commodious for Trade, having the Convenience of two Rivers, which ſerve both to bring up Merchant-Men, and enrich the Soil. The Merchants there are very wealthy, and live ſplendidly. * See Baudrand, and the Voyages of M. Carre, printed in 1699.

CHAPELAIN, (John) born at Paris, Son and Grandſon to a Publick Notary, lived in the Miniſtry of the Cardinals Richelieu and Mazarine. His Reputation for Poetry ran ſo high, that 'twas commonly ſaid, that what the French Muſes loſt by the Death of Malherbe, was more than made up to them in Chapelain. Balzac has given him great Commendation in ſeveral of his Letters. He had maintain'd his Credit without the leaſt Declenſion, if he had been ſo lucky as to have ſtopt after the writing his Ode to Cardinal Richelieu; this Performance being admir'd by the beſt Criticks: But his Poem de la Pucelle, or of the Maid, which he had been thirty Years in writing, or promiſing, ſunk his Character, and blaſted his Credit. This Misfortune gave Occaſion to the following Verſes of a Poet of that Age.

Nous attendons de Chapelain,
Ce rare & fameux Ecrivain,
Cette digne & docte Pucelle.
La Cabale en dit force bien,
Depuis vingt ans l'on parle d'elle,
Et dans trois jours l'on n'en dira plus rien.

This Poem likewiſe drew a Satyrical Diſtich in Latin from M. de Momor, Maſter of the Requeſts.

Illa Capellani dudum expectata Puella,
Poſt tanta in Lucem tempora prodit anus.

To conclude, Chapelain was a Member of the French Academy, a Man of Probity, and a good Critick; but no more than an indifferent Poet. He died in the Year 1674, ſeventy nine Years of Age. * Boileau, Satyr. &c.

CHAPTER. The Cathedral had always a Company of Prieſts and other Clerks to aſſiſt the Biſhop and perform the Service; but the Name of a Chapter has no higher Antiquity than the time when ſeveral of the Clergy combined in a ſort of Community, and were called Canons, that is, in the Eighth Century. 'Twas then that the Body of the Canons began to be called a Chapter. The Chapter of the Canons of the Cathedral were, as it were, a ſtanding Council to the Biſhop, and during a Vacancy had the Juriſdiction of the Dioceſe. Beſides the Chapters of Cathedrals, there were other Corporations of Canons ſo called; and afterwards the Monks called their Society a Chapter. In Cathedral Churches, the Biſhop in the earlier Ages was Head of the Chapter; but farther downwards, Abbots and other Dignitaries, as Deans, Provoſts, Treaſurers, Chanters, &c. were preferr'd to this Diſtinction. Notwithſtanding theſe Chapters ought regularly to be under the Biſhop's Juriſdiction, ſeveral of them have ſtrain'd for Independency, and procur'd Charters of Exemption from the See of Rome. * Thomaſin, Diſciplin. Eccleſ.

CHARACTER. See Caracter.

CHARASITANIANS, an ancient People in Spain ſettled beyond the Tagus, and without the Conveniency of Cities or leſſer Towns. They lived upon a large Hill conſiderably raiſed, where there was a great many Caves opening all to the North. The Ground at the Foot of this Hill was ſo looſe and ſlenderly bound together, that it ſunk every where upon being walk'd on, giving way to the leaſt Touch, like Aſhes or Quick-Lime. This Place was a ſort of Sanctuary to the Barbarians, and ſerv'd both to ſecure their Plunder and themſelves. This is the Account Plutarch gives of them in the Life of Sertorius. Ptolomy, Book II. Cap. 6. plants the People called Carpetani in Hiſpania Tarraconenſis; and mentions a Town called Caracca beyond the Tagus; which Town goes now under the Name of Guadalajara: From this Caracca, the Clan above-mention'd were call'd Charaſitanians. From hence it may be inferr'd, theſe People were ſettled in New Caſtille, along the Bank of the Taio, above Toledo, towards the Eaſt. The Reader has no reaſon to be ſurpriz'd by finding the Geography of of Old Spain somewhat embarraſſed: For we are to conſider there was abundance of diſtinct Clans, ſo uncouth in the Pronunciation, that Strabo tells us he declines ſetting down all their Names, for fear of tiring the Reader, and making his Narrative look rough and diſagreeable. * Strabo, Geogr. Lib. 3. L. P. Lubin, Tables Geographiques ſur les Vies de Plutarque.

CHARISTIA, Dies Charæ Cognationis, or the Kinſmens Feaſt. This Feſtival was kept in February, as appears by the Ruſtick Kalendar, ſtill to be ſeen upon an old Marble at Rome. In Conſtantine's Time, this Holiday went only by the Name of Chariſtia. Valerius Maximus informs us farther of the Particulars; "Our Anceſtors, "ſays he, kept a Feſtival Solemnity called Chariſtia, in- "viting only their Relations by Blood or Marriage; "the Deſign was to preſerve a good Correſpondence; "and if there happened to be any Difference between "them, they thought it might be eaſier made up by "the good Humour revived in the Entertainment." Convivium etiam ſolemne majores inſtituerunt, idque Chariſtia appellaverunt, cui præter cognatos & affines nemo interponebatur; ut ſi qua inter neceſſarios querela eſſet orta, inter ſacra menſæ & inter hilaritatem animorum, fautoribus concordiæ adhibitis tolleretur. This Feſtival is mentioned by Ovid in his Faſti.

Proxima cognati dixêre Chariſtia chari,
Et venit ad ſocios turba propinqua Deos.

* Ovid, Faſt. Lib. 2. v. 617. Antiquit. Græc. & Rom.

*CHARLES I. King of England. For a farther Account of this Reign, See Collier's Church Hiſt. Vol. II.

*CHARLES II. King of England. To this Article in Morery, I ſhall inſert this Prince's Declaration, forced upon him by the Covenanters in Scotland.

A DECLARATION by the King's Majeſty.

To his Subjects of the Kingdoms of Scotland, England, and Ireland, Printed at Edinburgh 1650.

'HIS Majeſty taking into Conſideration that merciful Diſpenſation of Divine Providence, by which he hath been recovered out of the Snare of evil Counſel; and having attained ſo full Perſuaſion and Confidence of the Loyalty of his People in Scotland, with whom he hath too long ſtood at a diſtance, and of the Righteouſneſs of their Cauſe, as to join in one Covenant with them, and to caſt himſelf and his Intereſts wholly upon God, and in all Matters Civil to follow the Advice of his Parliament, and ſuch as ſhall be entruſted by them; and in all Matters Eccleſiaſtick, the Advice of the General Aſſembly and their Commiſſioners; and being ſenſible of his Duty to God, and deſirous to approve himſelf to the Conſciences of all his good Subjects, and to ſtop the Mouths of his and their Enemies and Traducers, doth, in reference to his former Deportment, and as to his Reſolutions for the future, declare as follows:

'Though his Majeſty, as a dutiful Son, be obliged to honour the Memory of his Royal Father, and have in Eſtimation the Perſon of his Mother; yet doth he deſire to be deeply humbled and afflicted in Spirit before God, becauſe of his Father's hearkning to, and following evil Counſels, and his Oppoſition to the Work of Reformation, and to the Solemn League and Covenant, by which ſo much of the Blood of the Lord's People hath been ſhed in theſe Kingdoms; and for the Idolatry of his Mother, the Toleration whereof in the King's Houſe, as it was a Matter of great Stumbling to all the Proteſtant Churches, ſo could it not but be an high Provocation againſt him, who is a jealous God, viſiting the Sins of the Fathers upon the Children: Albeit his Majeſty might extenuate his former Carriages and Actions, in following of the Advice, and walking in the way of thoſe who are oppoſite to the Covenant and to the Work of God, and might excuſe his Delaying to give Satisfaction to the juſt and neceſſary Deſires of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland from his Education and Age, and evil Counſel and Company, and from the ſtrange and inſolent Proceedings of Sectaries againſt his Royal Father, and in reference to Religion and the Ancient Government of the Kingdom of England, to which he hath the undoubted Right of Succeſſion. Yet knowing that he hath to do with God, he does ingenuouſly acknowledge all his own Sins, and all the Sins of his Father's Houſe, craving Pardon, and hoping for Mercy and Reconciliation through the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. And as he doth value the conſtant Addreſſes that were made by his People to the Throne of Grace on his behalf, when he ſtood in Oppoſition to the Work of God, as a ſingular Teſtimony of long Suffering, Patience and Mercy upon the Lord's Part, and Loyalty upon theirs; ſo doth he hope, and ſhall take it as one of the greateſt Tokens of their Love and Affection to him, and to his Government, that they will continue in Prayer and Supplication to God for him, that the Lord, who ſpared and preſerved him to this Day, notwithſtanding all his own Guiltineſs, may be at Peace with him, and give him to fear the Lord his God, and to ſerve him with a perfect Heart and with a willing Mind all the Days of his Life.

'And his Majeſty having, upon full Perſuaſion of the Juſtice and Equity of all the Heads and Articles thereof, now ſworn and ſubſcribed the National Covenant of the Kingdom of Scotland, and the Solemn League and Covenant of the three Kingdoms of Scotland, England and Ireland, doth declare, that he hath not ſworn and ſubſcribed theſe Covenants, and enter'd into the Oath of God with his People, upon any ſiniſter Intention or crooked Deſign for attaining his own Ends, but, ſo far as Human Weakneſs will permitt, in the Truth and Sincerity of his Heart; and that he is firmly reſolved, in the Lord's Strength, to adhere thereto, and to proſecute to the utmoſt of his Power all the Ends thereof in his Station and Calling, really, conſtantly, and ſincerely, all the Days of his Life. In order to which, he doth in the firſt place profeſs and declare, that he will have no Enemies but the Enemies of the Covenant, and that he will have no Friends but the Friends of the Covenant; and therefore as he does now deteſt and abhor all Popery, Superſtition and Idolatry, together with Prelacy and all Errors, Hereſy, Schiſm, and Profaneneſs, and reſolves not to tolerate, much leſs allow, any of theſe in any Part of his Majeſty's Dominions, but to oppoſe himſelf thereto, and to endeavour the Extermination thereof to the utmoſt of his Power; ſo doth he as a Chriſtian exhort, and as a King require, that all ſuch of his Subjects who have ſtood in Oppoſition to the Solemn League and Covenant, and Work of Reformation, upon a Pretence of Kingly Intereſt, or any other Pretext whatſomever, to lay down their Enmity againſt the Cauſe and People of God, and to ceaſe to preferr the Intereſts of Man to the Intereſt of God, which hath been one of thoſe things which has occaſioned many Troubles and Calamities in theſe Kingdoms; and being inſiſted into, will be ſo far from eſtabliſhing the King's Throne, that it will prove an Idol of Jealouſy, to provoke into Wrath him who is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. The King ſhall always eſteem them beſt Servants, and moſt loyal Subjects, who ſerve him and ſeek his Greatneſs in a Line of Subordination unto God, giving unto God the things that are God's, and unto Cæſar the things that are Cæſar's; and reſolveth not to love or countenance any who have ſo little Conſcience and Piety as to follow his Intereſts with a Prejudice to the Goſpel and the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt, which he looks not upon as a Duty, but as flattering and driving of ſelf-deſigns, under a Pretence of maintaining the Royal Authority and Greatneſs. Secondly, his Majeſty being convinced in Conſcience of exceeding great Sinfulneſs and Unlawfulneſs of that Treaty and Peace made with the bloody Iriſh Rebels, who treacherouſly ſhed the Blood of ſo many of his faithful and loyal Subjects in Ireland, and of allowing unto them the Liberty of Popiſh Religion, for the which he doth from his Heart deſire to be deeply humbled before the Lord, and likewiſe conſidering how many Breaches have been upon their part, doth declare the ſame to be void, and that his Majeſty is abſolved therefrom, being truly ſorry that he ſhould have ſought unto ſo unlawful Help for reſtoring of him to the Throne, and reſolving for the Time to come, rather to chooſe Affliction than

'than Sin. Thirdly, as his Majeſty did in the late Treaty with his People in this Kingdom agree to recall and annull all Commiſſions againſt any of his Subjects, who did adhere to the Covenant and Monarchical Government in any of his Kingdoms; ſo doth he now declare, by Commiſſionating of ſome Perſons by Sea againſt the People of England, he did not intend Damage or Injury to his oppreſſed and harmleſs Subjects in that Kingdom, who follow their Trade of Merchandize in their lawful Callings; but only the Oppoſing and Suppreſſing of thoſe who had uſurped the Government, and not only bar him from his juſt Right, but alſo exerciſe an Arbitrary Power over his People, in thoſe things which concern their Perſons, Conſciences, and Eſtates: And as ſince his coming into Scotland he has given no Commiſſion againſt any of his Subjects in England or Ireland, ſo he doth hereby aſſure and declare, that he will give none to their Prejudice or Damage; and whatever ſhall be the Wrongs of theſe Uſurpers, that he will be ſo far from avenging theſe upon any who are free thereof, by interrupting or ſtopping the Liberty of Trade and Merchandize, or otherwiſe, that he will ſeek their Good, and to the utmoſt employ his Royal Power, that they may be protected and defended againſt the unjuſt Violence of all Men whatſoever. And albeit his Majeſty deſires to conſtruct well of the Intentions of theſe (in reference to his Majeſty) who have been active in Council or Arms againſt the Covenant; yet being convinced that it doth conduce for the Honour of God, the Good of his Cauſe, and his own Honour and Happineſs, and for the Peace and Safety of theſe Kingdoms, that ſuch be not employ'd in Places of Power and Truſt; he doth declare, that he will not employ nor give Commiſſion to any ſuch, until they have not only taken or renewed the Covenant, but alſo have given ſufficient Evidences of their Integrity, Carriage or Affection to the Work of Reformation, and ſhall be declared capable of Truſt by the Parliament of either Kingdom reſpective. And his Majeſty, upon the ſame Grounds, doth hereby recall all Commiſſions given to any ſuch Perſons, conceiving all ſuch Perſons will ſo much tender a good Underſtanding betwixt him and his Subjects, and the ſettling and preſerving a firm Peace in theſe Kingdoms, that they will not grudge nor repine at his Majeſty's Reſolutions and Proceedings therein, much leſs upon Diſcontent act any thing in a divided Way unto the raiſing of new Troubles, eſpecially ſince, upon their pious and good Deportment, there is a Regreſs left unto them in manner above expreſſed.

'And as his Majeſty hath given Satisfaction to the juſt and neceſſary Deſires of the Kirk and Kingdom of Scotland, ſo doth he hereby aſſure and declare, that he is no leſs willing and deſirous to give Satisfaction to the juſt and neceſſary Deſires of his good Subjects in England and Ireland: And in Token thereof, if the Houſes of Parliament in England, ſitting in Freedom, ſhall think fit to preſent to him the Propoſitions of Peace agreed upon by both Kingdoms, he will not only accord to the ſame, and ſuch Alterations thereon meant, as the Houſes of Parliament, in regard of the Conſtitution of Affairs, and the Good of his Majeſty's and his Kingdoms ſhall judge neceſſary, but do what is farther neceſſary for proſecuting the Ends of the Solemn League and Covenant; eſpecially in thoſe things which concern the Reformation of the Church of England, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline and Government; that not only the Directory of Worſhip, Confeſſion of Faith, and Catechiſm, but alſo the Propoſitions and Directory for Church Government, accorded upon by the Synod of Divines at Weſtminſter, may be ſettled; and that the Church of England may enjoy the full Liberty and Freedom of all Aſſemblies, and Power of Kirk Cenſures, and of all the Ordinances of Jeſus Chriſt, according to the Rule of his own Word; and that whatſoever is commanded by the God of Heaven, may be diligently done for the Houſe of the God of Heaven; and whatever heretofore has been the Suggeſtions of ſome to him to render his Majeſty jealous of his Parliament, and of the Service of God; yet as he hath declared, that in Scotland he will hearken to their Counſel, and follow their Advice in thoſe things that concern that Kingdom and Kirk; ſo doth he alſo declare his firm Reſolution to manage the Government of the Kingdom of England by the Advice of his Parliament, conſiſting of an Houſe of Lords, and an Houſe of Commons there; and in thoſe things that concern Religion, to preferr the Counſels of the Miniſters of the Goſpel to all other Counſels whatſoever. And that all the World may ſee how much he tenders the Safety of his People, and how precious their Blood is in his Sight, and how deſirous he is to recover his Crown and Government in England by peaceable Means; as he doth eſteem the Service of thoſe who firſt engaged in the Covenant, and have ſince that time faithfully followed the Ends thereof, to be Duty to God, and Loyalty to him; ſo is he willing in regard of others, who have been involved in theſe late Commotions in England againſt Religion and Government, to paſs an Act of Oblivion, excepting only ſome few in that Nation, who have been chief Obſtructers of the Work of Reformation, and chief Authors of the Change of Government, and of the Murder of his Royal Father. Provided that theſe who are to have the Benefit of this Act, lay down Arms, and return into the Obedience of their lawful Sovereign.

'The Committee of the States of the Kingdom, and General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland, having declared ſo fully in what concerns the Sectaries and the preſent Deſigns, Reſolutions and Actings of their Army againſt the Kingdom of Scotland; and the ſaid Committee and Aſſembly having ſufficiently laid open Publick Danger and Duty, both upon the Right Hand and upon the Left: 'Tis not needful for his Majeſty to add any thing thereunto, except that in thoſe things he doth commend and approve them; and that he reſolves to live and die with them and his loyal Subjects, in Proſecution of the Ends of the Covenant.

'And whereas that prevailing Part in England, after all their ſtrange Uſurpations and inſolent Actings in that Land, do not only keep his Majeſty from the Government of that Kingdom by Force of Arms, but alſo have now invaded the Kingdom of Scotland, who have deſerved better things at their Hands, and againſt whom they have no juſt Quarrel; his Majeſty doth therefore deſire and expect that all his good Subjects in England, who are and reſolve to be faithful to God and to their King, according to the Covenant, will lay hold upon ſuch an Opportunity, and uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to promote the Covenant, all the Ends thereof, and to recover and re-eſtabliſh the Ancient Government of the Kingdom of England, (under which in many Generations it did flouriſh in Peace and Plenty at home, and in Reputation abroad) and Privileges of the Parliament, and native and juſt Liberty of the People. His Majeſty deſires to aſſure himſelf, that there doth remain in theſe ſo much Confidence of their Duty to Religion, their King and Country, and ſo many Sparkles of the Ancient Engliſh Valour, which ſhines ſo eminently in their Noble Anceſtors, as will put them on to beſtir themſelves for the breaking the Yoke of theſe Mens Oppreſſions from off their Necks. Shall Men of Conſcience and Honour ſet Religion, Liberties and Government, at ſo low a Rate, as not rather to undergo any Hazard, before they be thus deprived of them? Will not all generous Men count any Death more tolerable, than to live in Servitude all their Days? And will not Poſterity blame thoſe who dare attempt nothing for themſelves, and for their Children, in ſo good a Cauſe, in ſuch an Exigent? Whereas if they gather themſelves and take Courage, putting on a Reſolution anſwerable to ſo noble and juſt an Enterprize, they ſhall honour God, and gain themſelves a Reputation of Pious Men, Worthy Patriots, and Loyal Subjects, and be called the Repairers of the Breach, by the preſent and ſucceeding Generations; and they may certainly promiſe to themſelves a Bleſſing from God upon ſo juſt and honourable Undertaking for the Lord, and for his Cauſe, for their own Liberties, their native King and Country, and the unvaluable Good and Happineſs of Poſterity. Whatever hath formerly been his Majeſty's Guiltineſs before God, and the bad Succeſs that theſe have had, who owned his Affairs whilſt he ſtood in Oppoſition to the Work of God; yet the 'State of the Queſtion being now altered, and his Ma-

'jeſty having obtained Mercy to be on God's ſide, and 'to preferr God's Intereſt before his own, he hopes
'the Lord will be gracious, and countenance his own
'Cauſe in the Hands of weak and ſinful Inſtruments,
'againſt all Enemies whatſoever.

'This is all that can be ſaid by his Majeſty at pre-
'ſent to thoſe in England and Ireland at ſuch a Di-
'ſtance; and as they ſhall acquit themſelves at this time
'in the active Diſcharge of their neceſſary Duties, ſo
'ſhall they be accepted before God, endeared to his Ma-
'jeſty, and their Names had in Remembrance through-
'out the World.

Given at our Court at Dumfermling, the Sixteenth Day of Auguſt, 1650. and in the Second Year of our Reign.

CHARLES XII. King of Sweden, was born June 27, 1682. By his Father's laſt Will and Teſtament, who died in April 1697, the Adminiſtration was lodg'd in the Queen Dowager Hedwige-Eleonora of Holſteyn Gottorp, who was to govern the Kingdom jointly with five Senators, till the young Prince, her Grandſon, was eighteen Years of Age. Notwithſtanding this Diſpoſition, he was declared a Major when but fifteen Years and five Months old, by the States of the Realm convened at Stockholm, November 27, the ſame Year, and was crown'd the 24th of December following. Immediately after his Acceſſion to the Throne, he finiſh'd the Treaty of Ryſwick, begun by his Predeceſſor; but the Ambition of ſome neighbouring Princes (as the French Supplementer obſerves) quickly deprived him of the Repoſe he had procur'd others. Frederick Auguſtus King of Poland, and Elector of Saxony, Frederick IV. King of Denmark, and Peter Alexowitzs, Czar, or Great Duke of Moſcovy, reckoning too far upon the Diſadvantage of King Charles's Age, and thinking him as young and immature as others who had lived no longer, concerted an Alliance againſt him, and projected his Ruin on all ſides. The firſt Blow of this ſecret Enterprize fell upon the Duke of Holſteyn, the King of Sweden's Brother in-Law, againſt whom the King of Denmark committed ſome Acts of Hoſtility. This Attack was made under the Pretence of obliging this Duke to raze his new Fortifications, the making of which were notwithſtanding allowed him by the Treaty concluded at Altena in the Year 1689. England, Holland, and the Princes of the Houſe of Lunenburg, being no leſs concerned than Sweden, to maintain this Treaty, conſulted how to prevent the Diſorders which might be conſequent upon the Infraction. At firſt they try'd the Expedient of a Negotiation, and a Meeting was appointed at Pinneberg, and here there was a Conference for ſix Months, which by the Stiffneſs of the Daniſh Miniſters turn'd to no Account. Their Maſter's Buſineſs was only to gain Time to put himſelf into a Condition to appear an open Enemy, as ſoon as his Allies had prepar'd their Quota. Theſe Confederates ſpar'd no Pains nor Proteſtations of Friendſhip to remove the King of Sweden's Jealouſies, and lay his Vigilance aſleep. But this Prince on the other ſide diſſembling his Diſſatisfaction, but getting Intelligence at the ſame time of the Practice againſt him, took proper Meaſures to diſappoint their Projects. He was convinc'd it would be very difficult to deal with ſuch potent Enemies, provided their Forces ſhould happen to be joyned, and that it would be no leſs dangerous on the other ſide to ſuffer any of them to carry the War into the Heart of Sweden. Theſe things thus conſidered, he reſolved to march out of Sweden, and attack the Prince or State that ſhould firſt declare againſt him, and after that make up to the Enemy that preſſed hardeſt. This was reſolved after he had pitched upon Count Piper for his Chief Miniſter, to aſſiſt in the Direction of his Expeditions, and after he had ſettled his Council of Defence, which was to ſit at Stockholm for the Managing and Security of the Kingdom. Theſe Meaſures being thus ſettled, he detached five thouſand Men into Pomerania, who had the good Fortune to land, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of twelve Daniſh Men of War: Theſe Troops were deſigned for the Defence of Holſteyn, where the King of Denmark had made an Incurſion in the latter end of the Year 1699. As ſoon as he had received Advice of the King of Poland's breaking in upon Livonia, theſe Swediſh Troops in the beginning of the Year 1700, were reinforced with ten thouſand Men from Bremen and Pomerania, commanded by General Gyllenſtein: At the ſame time a Body of twelve thouſand moved to join them by the way of Scania. The other Sovereign Powers concerned in the Treaty of Altena did not barely look on; for after having made an ineffectual Tryal for bringing the King of Denmark to an Accommodation, the Troops of Lunenberg joined the Swediſh Army, which paſſed the Elbe to ſtop the Progreſs of the Danes in Holſteyn. The Engliſh and Dutch equipt thirty Men of War, ſailed into the Sound, and in July joined the Swediſh Fleet, commanded by the King, and conſiſting of thirty nine Ships of the Line of Battle, and twenty Fregates and Fire-Ships. The Daniſh Fleet not thinking themſelves ſtrong enough, ſheered off into the Port of Copenhagen; and now there was nothing to be done but to keep them in, and to throw ſome Bombs upon the Fleet and Town, under which they had retired for Shelter: But this Advantage upon the Danes was too ſlender an Expedition to ſatisfy his Swediſh Majeſty.

His Mind was taken up with a much more ſignificant Project, and more difficult in the Execution: The Reſolve was to carry the War into the Heart of Denmark, to beſiege the Capital by Land, while the Fleets abovementioned ſhould block it up by Sea. In order to this, he made a Deſcent at Humblebeck, over againſt Landſcroon. The Coaſt was guarded by a conſiderable Body of Daniſh Cavalry, beſides ſome Infantry poſted behind the Lines. King Charles had but five thouſand Men with him: However, as ſoon as he came near the Shore, he ordered his Men to debark, and threw himſelf into the Water to march up to the Enemy. The Danes, diſorder'd by ſo bold and unexpected an Attack, were broken after ſome Reſiſtance, and quitted the Poſt of Humblebeck, though fortify'd with ſeveral Pieces of Cannon. His Swediſh Majeſty having ſeized this Fort, ſent off ſeveral Veſſels to Landſcroon to take the reſt of the Army and the heavy Artillery on board; and after this Reinforcement, moved into Zeeland. The King of Denmark in the mean time, alarmed with the Progreſs of the Swediſh Arms, thought it beſt to accept a Peace, which was at laſt concluded with the Duke of Holſteyn, upon the Conditions propoſed by the Guarantees of the Treaty of Altena. This Accommodation was finiſh'd at Travendale Auguſt 18, 1700.

The King of Sweden, diſengaged from this Expedition, march'd his Army into Scania, and reſolved the next Spring to advance againſt the King of Poland, who had block'd up Riga. He had no ſooner given Orders for his Troops to go into Winter Quarters, but he received Advice that Narva, where Count Horne was Governor, was beſieged by an Army of a hundred thouſand Muſcovites. This unexpected News made him alter his Meaſures, and forced him to move towards the Czar, notwithſtanding the Rigour of the Seaſon, which made the Baltick almoſt impracticable for Sailing. He embarqu'd in Perſon at Carlſham the beginning of October, and landed one Part of his Troops at Pernau in Livonia, while the other diſembarqu'd at Revel. As ſoon as they joined each other, to the Number of eight thouſand, at Weſemberg in Eſtonia, he marched directly for Narva, forced the Muſcovite General Czeremetof to retire, and puſh'd him to the Defile of Pyhaiaggi. This ſtrong Poſt, guarded with eight thouſand Horſe, and which the greateſt Part of the Swediſh Officers deſpaired of gaining, was carried without Loſs, and the way opened to the Enemy's Camp before Narva, where they arrived November 30, at Ten in the Morning. The Muſcovite Army, eighty thouſand ſtrong, was cover'd with a double Retrenchment, fortify'd with Chevaux de Frize, and chained Paliſadoes. They were likewiſe poſſeſſed of all the Eminences that commanded the Plain. However, neither their Numbers, nor the Difficulty of coming at them, made the King of Sweden loſe a Minute. This Prince immediately drew up his Army, even within the Fire of the Muſcovites Cannon, and having plaid his own for ſome time, charged the Enemy about Two: The Onſet and the Action were ſurprizingly bold; the Ditch was filled up, and the Retrenchments laid open in leſs than a Quarter of an Hour. Thirty thouſand of the Enemy were kill'd upon the Spot, or puſhed into the River of Narva and drowned; twenty thouſand begg'd Quarter, and were ſent back, moſt of them them without their Arms; the reſt were either taken or diſperſed. This Victory coſt his Swediſh Majeſty not above two thouſand Men killed or wounded: As to the Enemy's Loſs, the Duke of Croy, Generaliſſimo, the Prince of Georgia, with ſeven other Generals, were made Priſoners; a hundred and forty five Pieces of Cannon, twenty eight Mortars, a hundred and fifty one Colours, twenty Standards, with all the Baggage, were taken. The Czar, who retir'd from his Camp the Evening before the Battle, had the Mortification to underſtand that Major-General Spens had defeated ſix thouſand of his Troops, and killed a thouſand of them; beſides the Misfortune of another Body of eight thouſand, which was defeated by Count Steenbock.

After this great Victory, which forced the Muſcovites to retire from the Provinces they had invaded, the King of Sweden ſpent the Winter at Lais, where Magazines were laid up for him. This Preparation was order'd by his Majeſty before his March to Narva, in the Language following; I am going, ſays he, to fight the Muſcovites: Get a Magazine ready at Lais. When I have relieved Narva, I ſhall march by this Town to fight the Saxons. The Event exactly anſwer'd the Courage of the Language; for after having received a Reinforcement of fifteen thouſand Men from Sweden, he order'd General Schlippenbach to look to the Defence of Livonia; and in the Spring 1701 he marched to Riga, where he found the Saxons entrenched on the Banks of the Duna. They were commanded by Mareſchal Steinhau, by Prince Ferdinand of Courland, and Lieutenant-General Paykell, and had fortify'd ſome Iſlands to defend the Paſſage of the River: But neither theſe Difficulties, nor the Reſiſtance of the Enemy, diſcouraged the Swediſh Army from paſſing the River in Boats. His Swediſh Majeſty prepar'd Floats of Timber, newly invented, for raiſing Batteries, and making uſe of ſome Sloops filled with Dung ſet on Fire, the Smoak hinder'd the Enemy from diſcovering the Swediſh Troops. The King charg'd in Perſon at the Head of the firſt of his Troops, who gained the other ſide of the River; and after having halted a little for the debarqueing of the reſt, he drew up his Men in Order of Battle in Sight of the Saxons, who had poſted themſelves in a very advantageous Situation, and fortify'd their Camp with Batteries. Thus there was no conquering till the Swedes had forced five Redoubts, two Epaulements or Demi-Baſtions, and eight Retrenchments, behind each of which they rallied as faſt as they were puſh'd. In ſhort, all theſe Works were carry'd, the Enemy were driven from their Poſt, and purſued near a League, with the Loſs of two thouſand Men killed, fifteen hundred made Priſoners, thirty ſix Cannon, five Colours, two Standards, and the greateſt Part of their Baggage taken.

This Action broke the King of Poland's Meaſures, who the laſt Campagne, attacking Livonia without any precedent Declaration of War, had made himſelf Maſter of the Forts of Cobron and Dunamund; which latter was forced to ſurrender for want of Proviſions and Ammunition. Upon the News of this Irruption, General Welling had Orders to march with eight thouſand Finlanders to prevent the Enemy's Progreſs, and had the good Fortune at firſt to drive the Saxons as far as Courland; but in Auguſt following, the King of Poland appearing at the Head of a great Army, this General finding himſelf too weak to hazard any Enterprize, retir'd with his Cavalry under the Cannon of Peurna, and poſted his Infantry at Riga, which the Enemy had block'd up to no purpoſe. The Retreat of this General gave the Saxons an Opportunity to quarter at large in the Country, and make themſelves Maſters of the Forts of Kokenhuſen, Schlesbourg, and Creutzbourg. This was the Poſture of Affairs in Livonia, when his Swediſh Majeſty arrived there and gave them a new Turn. The Day after the Battle gained at the Duna, Major General Morner was detach'd, with Orders to ſeize Mittau, the Capital of Courland, where the Saxons had their chief Magazine: This Enterprize was executed without the leaſt Loſs. Another Magazine at Stoke, where great Quantities of Meal and Oats were laid up, beſides forty eight Pieces of Cannon, and four hundred Grenadoes, was likewiſe carried by Colonel Klingſpore; but not without a ſtout Reſiſtance from the Enemy. His Majeſty advanced himſelf as far as Kokenhuſen, which the Saxons abandon'd, after they had blown up the Fort, and broke the Bridge. As he marched farther, he made himſelf Maſter of a great many other Forts and Magazines, and at laſt of the Town and Caſtle of Bautſch. From hence he moved forward to Birſen, from whence twenty thouſand Muſcovites retired in Diſorder, without ſtopping till they came in their own Country, leaving in this Place ſix Pieces of Canon, and thirty two Pontons belonging to the Saxons. Thus the Duchy of Courland fell into the Swedes Hands, and all the Places ſeized by the Enemy were recovered, excepting the Fort of Dunamund, which held out till the latter end of the Year, and was then taken, with ſeventy four Pieces of Cannon and twelve Mortars, which the King of Poland had ordered to be brought thither from his Arſenal at Dreſden. This Prince, diſcouraged with the Speed of the Swediſh Conqueſts, and willing to decline a Battle, quitted his Poſt, and retired with Precipitation into Poland with the Remainder of his Troops.

The King of Sweden, who only waited for the Return of the Seaſon to follow him, was farther confirmed in this Reſolution by the Princes of the Houſe of Sapieha, who begged his Protection againſt the hard Uſage received from the King of Poland, and the Incurſions of Oginſcki. And now the Addreſs of the States of Lithuania, to diſſuade his Swediſh Majeſty from entring Poland, were to no purpoſe: He reſolved to make the Republick declare for him, and depoſe his Enemy; and upon this Head he had explained himſelf in a Letter, written Auguſt the 9th to the Cardinal Radziewiski, Primate of Poland. While he was making neceſſary Preparations for this great Enterprize, eight thouſand of his Troops, commanded by Colonel Schlippenbach, defeated twenty thouſand Muſcovites at Sagnits, killed two thouſand, and took their Cannon and Baggage. Another Body of three thouſand Swedes, attack'd near Bautſch by ten thouſand Muſcovites, being reinforced with eighteen hundred Men, killed three thouſand of the Enemy, and took eight Pieces of Cannon. Theſe two ſucceſsful Actions happening in one Day, were an over Revenge for the Misfortune of five thouſand Swedes, overborne with twelve thouſand Muſcovites at Rapin, who notwithſtanding, before they loſt their Lives, killed two thouſand of the Enemy.

King Auguſtus in the mean time, who foreſaw how prejudicial the King of Sweden's March into Poland would be to him, did his utmoſt to prevent it. The Republick, whom he ſolicited to embarque in his Quarrel, dreaded the Arms of his Swediſh Majeſty, and ſeemed diſpoſed to diſpatch Ambaſſadors to him. Auguſtus, to prevent this fatal Conjunction, ſent Propoſals to his Enemy firſt, by the Counteſs of Conigſmark, and ſome time after by the Sieur Witzdumb his Chamberlain; but the King of Sweden would ſee neither of them, and refuſed to receive the Overtures of a Prince, whoſe Reality he thought was not to be depended on. On the contrary, he purſued his Project with the greater Vigour: For after having ſent ſome Detachments into Lithuania, to ſupport Prince Sapieha, Great Mareſchal, he marched into Samogitia in January 1702, diſperſed Prince Wieſnowiski's Troops, and moved with ſuch Expedition, that within ſixteen Leagues of Warſaw he met the Ambaſſadors King Auguſtus had prevailed with the Republick to diſpatch to perſuade him to keep in Courland.

This unexpected March occaſioned the breaking up of the Dyet at Warſaw, where the King of Sweden arrived upon the 22d of May, and where he diſcourſed the Cardinal Primate. King Auguſtus had now left Cracovia. His Eminence the Cardinal wrote to him on the 14th to diſſuade the hazarding a Battle, which if unfortunate, would prove deciſive: But this Prince receiving Advice, that beſides the ten thouſand Men the King of Sweden expected by joining Major-General Morner, he waited for twelve thouſand from Pomerania, and eight from Lithuania; his Poliſh Majeſty reſolved to fight him before theſe Reinforcements came up. With this View he moved forward to Cliſſow, where the Swediſh Army found him advantageouſly poſted at the Head of thirty thouſand Saxons and Poles: This happened July the 29th. The King of Sweden, notwithſtanding the Superiority of Auguſtus's Numbers, and the Fatigue his own Troops had gone through, reſolved upon the Attack; and here the Enemy's Right Wing being flank'd on one ſide of a Marſh which cover'd their Front, was quickly broken and driven a great way beyond their Camp. In this firſt Onſet the Duke of Holſteyn was killed. The Saxons Left Wing, who had not charged as yet, filled the Moraſs with Faſcines, and came powdring upon the Swedes Right. This Wing, though much fewer than the Enemy, ſuſtained the Shock by the Advantage of the narrow Ground they were drawn up in, and afterwards charged the Saxons with ſo much Vigour, that they puſhed them beyond the Moraſs. The Saxons rallied, and made a Stand behind their Chevaux de Frize, but to no Purpoſe; for after an obſtinate Reſiſtance, they were every where broken and routed; the Swedes remained Maſters of the Field of Battle, where four thouſand Saxons were killed, and two thouſand of them made Priſoners, without reckoning the Poles, either killed or taken. The Swedes likewiſe ſeized all their Baggage and Cannon. Two hundred of the Saxons Wives, or Wenches, loſt their Liberty, which was returned them; and they were ſent back with a Convoy to Cracovia, where the Enemy drew together, and whither the King of Sweden purſued them.

and

But the King of Poland not thinking fit to ſtay for him, retired towards Leopold, and quitted Cracovia; the Gates of which Place were forced by the Swedes, and the Caſtle carried by Storm, notwithſtanding there were ten thouſand Men to maintain it, who were all made Priſoners, with their Governor. The King of Sweden, ſome Weeks after the Battle, was reinforced with twelve thouſand from Pomerania; and now preparing to follow his Blow, and puſh the Saxons, he happened to fall from his Horſe, and break his Knee. This Accident checqued the Courſe of his Succeſs, and gave King Auguſtus time to breathe, who making uſe of the Opportunity, held a Dyet at Sendomir. This Meeting, procured by the Saxons, and prepoſſeſs'd with an Averſion to the King of Sweden, declared this Prince an Enemy to the Republick, and reſolved to ſtop his March; which Reſolution was afterwards confirmed at Mariembourg.

While the King of Poland convened Dyets after Dyets, to bring the Republick to an open War; the Cardinal Primate, and almoſt all the Palatines of Great Poland, being apprehenſive of the ill Conſequences of this Rupture, made ſome Steps towards the convening an Aſſembly at Warſaw. The Armies, which the Winter had hitherto kept from Buſineſs, began to be in Motion. The main Body of the Swedes advanced along the Viſtula, while a Detachment of four thouſand, commanded by Count Steenbock, was employed in reducing the Palatines in Auguſtus's Intereſt. The King himſelf, though incommoded with the Hurt of his Knee, made a long March at the Head of his Troops, and arrived at Lublin in February 1703. From hence he detached half of his Army under Lieutenant General Renſchold, who had Orders to advance towards Warſaw, where the Cardinal and the Confederate Senators had declared every thing null that had been done in the Dyets of Sendomir and Mariembourg. The reſt of the Swediſh Army followed in April, and encamped at Prag over againſt Warſaw, on the other ſide of the Viſtula. Here he received the Deputies of the Dyet; to which Auguſtus King of Poland had convened a Counter-Aſſembly at Lublin; and after having conferred with the Cardinal Primate for a cloſer Union of the Republick with Sweden, he publiſhed his Intentions upon this Alliance in a Declaration dated April 26.

And now, being ſomewhat tired with the ſlow and floating Proceedings of the Aſſembly at Warſaw, who could not eaſily digeſt the dethroning King Auguſtus; he drew his Army out of their Quarters, and pretending to take freſh ones on the other ſide the Viſtula, he threw a Bridge over the River to amuſe the Enemy, and all on the ſudden advanced towards Bug: A Body of the Saxon Horſe, commanded by Mareſchal Steinau, not thinking it adviſable to diſpute his Paſſage, retreated to Pultauſck. The King mounted his Infantry behind his Cavalry, ſwam a ſmall River to gain ſome Leagues of the Road, and made ſo ſwift a March, that he came up with the Saxons in Sight of this Town, which ſtands in an Iſland formed by two Branches of the River Nareu. The Saxons got into the Town, having firſt broken the Bridge between them and the King of Sweden. This Prince being apprehenſive this Body of Horſe might make their Eſcape over the Bridge, which lay upon the other Arm of the Nareu, reſolved to croſs the River a League lower. But the Compaſs of Ground he was forced to take, and the Defiles he was obliged to paſs, ſtopt him ſo long, that when he came to Pultauſck, he found but ſeven hundred of the Enemy, two hundred of which were killed, and the other five hundred made Priſoners. All the Enemy's Baggage was plundered, and Leiutenant-General Beiſt taken by the King himſelf; while he was endeavouring to get off in a Floating-Mill, having broken the Cable. His Swediſh Majeſty's Deſign to ruin Part of the Saxon Infantry, and the Neceſſity he lay under of opening a Communication with Dantzick by the Viſtula, made him reſolve upon the Siege of Thorn, a ſtrong Place, which the King of Poland had ſeized by Surprize. Thus after having aſſigned General Renſchold the Route of Great Poland, to reduce the Palatinates in the Enemy's Intereſt, he marched the reſt of his Army to Thorn; and having ſtreightned the Place by a cloſe Blockade, he proceeded no farther at preſent, but waited the coming up of his heavy Artillery from Sweden.

Some time after, the Cardinal Primate ſet forth an Anſwer to the laſt Declaration publiſhed by the King of Sweden: In this Inſtrument, dated May the 15th, he juſtified the Conduct and fair Intentions of the Dyet of Warſaw; and here he treated the King of Sweden with great Regard, preſſed him earneſtly to an Accommodation, and offered the Guarantee of the Republick for the Reſtoring his Affairs on the Foot of the Treaty of Oliva; proteſting withal, that the Poliſh Nation could not bring themſelves to dethrone a Prince of their own chooſing. His Swediſh Majeſty, not at all ſatisfied with this Declaration, gave Count Piper Inſtructions to require a fuller Explication from the Dyet, and to let them underſtand how much they miſtook their real Intereſt. This Miniſter executed his Commiſſion with ſo much Capacity and Addreſs, that his Maſter's Deſign was anſwered. While the Confederates at Warſaw made it their Buſineſs to ſhew how much the Republick was inclined to a Peace, the Army of the Crown acted by a different Diſpoſition, moved into Great Poland, where they did little Buſineſs; which was the Fate of another Body of eight thouſand, which declared for King Auguſtus in Lithuania. This Prince, not being able to bring theſe two Armies (who it ſeems were ſomewhat diſconcerted) to the Relief of Thorn, offered to ſurrender the Place to the King of Sweden, upon Condition the Saxon Garriſon might be allowed to go off. The King of Sweden's Anſwer was, that he attacked Thorn only to make himſelf Maſter of the Troops that defended it: And after having received his heavy Artillery, with four thouſand Recruits, he preſſed the Siege ſo cloſe, that he forced the Garriſon to ſurrender at Diſcretion, notwithſtanding there were ſix thouſand Foot, and two hundred Dragoons to defend the Place.

The taking of this Town gave the King of Sweden the Advantage of enlarging his Winter-Quarters, and cantoning his Troops in Royal Pruſſia and Ermeland. At firſt, ſome Brandenburg Troops appeared againſt it: However, the Town of Elbing was forced to open her Gates, and ſubmitt to Contributions, and ſo was the adjacent Country, not excepting Dantzick. The Poles could not tell what to make of the Elector of Brandenburg's ſuffering the Swedes to march with ſo little Oppoſition up to his Frontiers. But they were extremely ſurprized when, in Conſequence of the Treaty of Oliva, they underſtood this Prince had concluded another with the King of Sweden, by which he obliged himſelf to declare againſt the Republick of Poland, in caſe they adhered to King Auguſtus in his War againſt the Swedes.

This was the Concluſion of the Campagne in 1703, which on Auguſtus's ſide was wholly ſpent in convening Dyets. That at Lublin, ſommoned at the ſame time with the Aſſembly at Mariembourg, and held June the 19th, gave this Prince at firſt ſome Hopes of reſtoring his Affairs, then much out of Order. The greateſt Part of the Palatinates remonſtrated loudly againſt the Contributions levied by the Swedes; the Members of the Dyet are almoſt all in Auguſtus's Intereſt, and Prince Wieſnowiski, General of the Lithuanian Army, was their Mareſchal. The Cardinal Primate, whoſe Preſence might have croſſed their Meaſures, ſeem'd to be in no Condition to appear there. However, his Eminence, who was both a Perſon of Spirit and a great Stateſman, came to Lublin when leaſt expected: He got himſelf admitted to an Audience, almoſt quite againſt Auguſtus's Inclination, tion, and took the uſual Oath to put him in the Capacity to ſit in the Dyet, where he harangued with ſo much Livelineſs and Argument, that the Deputies came almoſt round in their Opinion, and either oppoſed or checked at leaſt the Meaſures concerted by Auguſtus's Party. For Inſtance, the Sentence for forfeiting the Houſe of Sapieha was very much ſoftned: They would by no means ſuffer the Saxon Troops to be incorporated with and ſettled upon the ſame Foot with thoſe of the Republick; and refuſed to conſent to the Foreign Alliances propoſed by Auguſtus againſt the Swedes. However, King Auguſtus made the beſt of his way, and carried on his Deſign as far as the Juncture would give him leave; for in December following, at the Aſſembly of Jawarow, he got the Palatine of Culm diſpatched Ambaſſador Extraordinary to conclude a cloſer Correſpondence with the Muſcovites. However, this Point was not carried without Remonſtrance, even of ſome of his own Creatures, who proteſted warmly againſt it.

To proceed; a Propoſal of this King could not fail of being well received by the Czar, whoſe Buſineſs was to keep the main of the War in Poland, to detain the King of Sweden; whoſe Abſence from his own Dominions gave his Czariſh Majeſty an Opportunity of carrying on his Conqueſts in Livonia. But here it muſt be obſerved, that the Advantages gained the two laſt Years were very ſlender, conſidering the great Armies on foot for the Enterprize, and the ſmall Body of Swediſh Troops employed for the Defence of that Province.

In the Campagne made 1702, the Czar, with an Army of forty thouſand, fell upon a Body of three thouſand commanded by Mareſchal Schlippenbach, who being overborne with Numbers, was forced to retreat with the Loſs of a thouſand of his Men, after having cut in pieces three thouſand of the Enemy. Upon this, the Czar entred Livonia, ravaged the Country, carried off ſome of the Inhabitants, advanced into Nyland, where he took the Forts of Notebourg and Nyskantz; the Swedes in the mean time harraſſing his Troops at the Lake Peypuz, and in Courland. The next Campagne was leſs creditable for the Czar; for in the Spring, two thouſand of his Men were cut off by Colonel Lewenhaupt, near Birſen in Courland. As for himſelf, not appearing with his Army of ſix thouſand in Livonia till Autumn, all the Advantages of this Seaſon were only forcing Mareſchal Schlippenbach to quit the Field, and burning every thing he met with in his March homewards.

The King of Sweden, undiſturbed with theſe inſignificant Exploits, for which he did not queſtion an Opportunity for Revenge, ſet cloſe to his main Project, which was the Dethroning his Enemy Auguſtus: And here the ſeeming Impracticableneſs of the Attempt made it more glorious to compaſs it. In ſhort, he carried his Point at laſt in the Dyet held by the Confederates of Great Poland at Warſaw, January 30, 1704. Soon after the Swediſh Commiſſioners arrived there, his Swediſh Majeſty being thoroughly apprized of the Diſpoſitions of the Aſſembly, ſent them a Letter, in which he adviſed the chooſing Prince James Sobieski King, promiſing to employ his whole Force to maintain this Prince upon the Throne. This Propoſal occaſioned ſome Diſpute amongſt the Deputies; but the Character and Intereſt of the Cardinal Primate, the Proſpect of putting Poland in a State of Repoſe, and the Fear of diſpleaſing his Swediſh Majeſty, overbore the Oppoſition of ſome of the Members, the Remonſtrances made by the Pope, and the menacing Letter written by the Czar: Inſomuch that at laſt they agreed to ſend Commiſſioners to his Swediſh Majeſty, to deſire him to diſpatch Ambaſſadors to aſſiſt at the Election of a new King. And farther, the Aſſembly, in a Seſſion held February the 14th, declared the Throne vacant, and that they deſigned to aſſume the Sovereign Adminiſtration: And that King Auguſtus having violated the Laws and Privileges of the Country, had, purſuant to the Pacta Conventa, diſcharged them of their Allegiance ſworn to him. This Reſolution of the Houſe was confirmed by a ſolemn Oath. A Vote paſſed for ſeizing the Revenues of the Crown, and putting them into the Hands of the Confederates: The Saxon Troops were declared Enemies of the Republick, and the Dyet adjourned to proceed to a new Election.

This Storm of Thunder fell hard upon King Auguſtus, but did not ruin him quite. His firſt Effort was a Manifeſto, in which, after having blamed the Cardinal Primat for the Maladminiſtration charged upon himſelf, he earneſtly ſolicited the Aſſiſtance of the Emperor and Empire. He convened an Aſſembly of his Adherents, in which every thing that had paſſed againſt him in the Dyet of the Confederates was declared void. In fine, he projected the procuring a conſiderable Reinforcement of Coſſacks and Muſcovites, and made it his Buſineſs to ravage his Enemy's Country, and fortify himſelf about Cracovia; but theſe laſt Meaſures were abſolutely broken by General Renſchold, whom the King of Sweden had ſent againſt him with a conſiderable Detachment. The March of the Swediſh Troops was ſo quick and ſecret, that King Auguſtus was within a little of being ſurprized at Cracovia. He had only time to order his Army to follow him with all ſpeed to Bochnia, whither he retired himſelf: But General Renſchold purſued him ſo hard, that he was forced to retreat to Tarnow, from thence to Boronow, near which Place the Swedes came up with him. They defeated his Rear-Guard, Part of which were made Priſoners, took three Pieces of Cannon, with ſome Baggage; and forced him to the other ſide of the Viſtula for his Security, and to break a Bridge he had laid over this River to maintain a Communication with Sendomir.

'Twas about this time the News was ſpread that King Auguſtus had ſeiz'd Prince James Sobieski, and Prince Conſtantine his Brother, near Breſlaw in Sileſia, February 28; and that he had conveyed them into Saxony, where they were kept Priſoners. The Truth of this Report was put beyond Queſtion, as ſoon as a Letter of Prince James was received upon this Subject. In this Letter he applies to the Republick for Satisfaction of an Injury, which broke into the Liberties, and ſubverted the Rights and Privileges of the Poliſh Nation. 'Twas read on the 3d of March, in an Aſſembly of the Confederates, and occaſioned ſo much Reſentment and Averſion, that they reſolved to have done with Auguſtus, and lay aſide all Regard to him. 'Twas about this time that Dantzick was obliged to enter into the Confederacy, which the Crown-General Prince Lubomirski had likewiſe engaged in. But the Contributions the Swedes laid on all Poland, to defray the Expence of the War, diſobliged the People extremely. However, theſe Diſcontents ran lower a little while after, when the Palatine of Poſnania brought ſome Articles from the King of Sweden, in which his Swediſh Majeſty promiſed not to diſmember or lop off any of the Provinces of the Republick; to withdraw his Troops, and to lend five hundred thouſand Crowns to ſubſiſt the Crown Army, as ſoon as the new King was elected and crowned; to put all the Conqueſts he had made into the Confederates Hands, in caſe the Republick obliged themſelves to join his Forces: And laſtly, to releaſe all the Poliſh Priſoners which ſhould be in his Cuſtody. After theſe Propoſals had been four Days under Debate, they came to an unanimous Reſolution to treat with Sweden, and prepared to publiſh the Interregnum. And afterwards, when Count Arſwedhorn, M. Wachſlager, and M. Palmberg, the Swediſh Ambaſſadors, came into the Dyet upon the 6th of May, the Election was publiſhed for the 19th of June following. The King of Sweden's Preſence, who was come up to Warſaw to attend this important Affair, was the main Spring which ſet the Motion going. Had it not been for this Prince's Authority, and the Lift given by his Miniſters, the Buſineſs had certainly miſcarried.

Nothing could be more embarraſſed and tumultuous than the Face of Affairs at this Election: All the Members ſeem'd to differ in their Intereſt and Inclinations; one Party preſſed in the firſt place, that all the Swediſh Troops might march out of the Territories of the Republick; another inſiſted upon making Prince James Sobieski King, who, upon the ſcore of his Confinement, was in no Condition to remedy the Publick Diſorders, and reſtore the State: The Majority offered the Crown to Prince Alexander Sobieski, who refuſed it, for fear of drawing new Misfortunes upon his Brothers. Another Party, in which the Cardinal Primate and Grand General appeared, ſeemed to repent their having gone ſo far, and durſt not interpoſe their Authority for quieting Matters, for fear the Odium of ſo great an Alteration ſhould be thrown wholly upon them. Thus the Seſſion of the 19th of June came to nothing, and was adjourned to the 26th of the ſame Month, where they likewiſe came to no Concluſion. But on the 12th of July, Staniſlaus Leczinski, Palatine of Poſnania, was choſen King at Nine o' Clock at Night by a Part of the Deputies, the Cardinal Primate and Crown General being abſent, and the Nobleſs of Podlachia proteſting againſt it. The Qualifications of the new King, his illuſtrious Birth, his condeſcenſive Behaviour, and his great Capacity for Buſineſs, made his Election well receiv'd, not only by thoſe who choſe him, but likewiſe by the oppoſite Party. His firſt Buſineſs was to write to the King of Sweden, to acquaint him with his Election; upon which he was congratulated by that Prince. And now the two Kings acting by concert, to redreſs the Grievances of the Nation, and ſilence their Complaints, nam'd Commiſſioners, with Powers to conclude a Treaty for promoting a firm Union between the two Nations, and for maintaining the Liberties of Poland: But notwithſtanding the Acceptableneſs of theſe Meaſures to the Confederates of Great Poland, they made little Impreſſion upon thoſe in King Auguſtus's Intereſt; for in a Dyet begun at Sendomir, ſomewhat before the new Election, they declar'd the Deputies of the Aſſembly at Warſaw Rebels and Enemies to the Republick, and pronounc'd all their Reſolutions, which either they had or ſhould paſs, ſcandalous and void. The Step they took moſt diſagreeable to their Prince Auguſtus, was their carrying their Diſtruſt ſo far, as to put a new Oath upon him, by which they tied him to attempt nothing againſt the Rights and Privileges of the Nation, and to keep cloſe to the Pacta Conventa.

Whilſt theſe two Parties battled each other with their Votes in their reſpective Dyets, they were ſeconded with their Troops in Great Poland, where their Quarrel was carry'd on by ravaging the Country, and beating up the Quarters of each other. The King of Sweden projecting a more deciſive Expedition, left only a Detachment in Great Poland, under the Command of General Meyerfeld, and mov'd ſuddenly from Newſtadt with the reſt of his Army, in hopes of ſurprizing King Auguſtus at Jarowſlaw; but this Prince having Notice of his Enemy's Deſign, quitted Sendomir, and got to Tornogrod: His Intention was to enter Great Poland another way, while General Brandt amus'd the Swedes by diſputing the Paſſage of the River Sann. Theſe Motions prov'd the more eaſily practicable, in regard the King of Sweden did not purſue him, not thinking it worth the while to delay executing the Deſign he had laid of ſeizing Lemberg or Leopold, Capital of the Palatinate of Ruſſia. This Place, one of the moſt conſiderable and beſt fortify'd in all Poland, had been ſeveral times beſieged, but never taken. 'Twas inveſted on the 5th of September, and carry'd the next day by Storm, with an unexpected ſuddenneſs; the Swedes killed all thoſe who had made Reſiſtance, made the Governor Galeski and the Palatine of Kaliſch Priſoners, took a hundred and forty four Pieces of Cannon; all which they nail'd, for want of Draught-Horſe, to carry them off. Beſides the rich Plunder taken by the Officers and Soldiers, the Burghers were forc'd to pay fifty thouſand Crowns to the King of Sweden, who about the end of September drew off his Forces from the Town, to countermarch towards Warſaw, where his Abſence had prov'd very unſerviceable to King Staniſlaus's Affairs.

King Auguſtus having eſcaped from Jarowſlaw and Sendomir, made himſelf Maſter of ſeveral Caſtles, being joined by Prince Galliczen, who reinforced him with nineteen thouſand Muſcovites. His Army being thus encreaſed, and finding the Paſſage to Warſaw open, he moved towards the Town by ſwift Marches, in hopes of ſurprizing the principal Confederates. But the new Queen, the Cardinal Primate, and Prince Sapieha, Great Treaſurer of Lithuania, and ſome other Palatines, receiving Advice of Auguſtus's Approach, went off towards Pruſſia; while King Staniſlaus and Prince Alexander paſs'd the Viſtula, broke the Bridge after them, and retired to Leopold to the King of Sweden. Before this, Count Horn, in a Council of War, propoſed moving againſt the Saxons as far as Lakovitz, and poſting themſelves there with ſix thouſand of the Crown-Army, and about ſeven hundred Swedes; but this Advice would by no means paſs. The Poles refuſed to hazard a Battle, and left this General to defend Warſaw. He had not above four hundred and ſeventy five Men for this Purpoſe, two hundred being detached to guard the Paſs of Lakovitz, where, after they had ſold their Lives dear, they were all cut in Pieces. However, with this Handful of Men, Horn ſhut himſelf up in the Town, which was inveſted Auguſt the 30th, and then retired into the Caſtle upon the 2d or 3d of September. This Reſolution was more Heroick Bravery, than any Proſpect of preſerving himſelf againſt ſo great an Army as that of King Auguſtus. In ſhort, upon the 4th of September, perceiving the Place ready to be carried by Aſſault, he ſurrender'd upon Articles, after three Summons, and was Priſoner of War with the reſt of the Garriſon. The Burghers of Warſaw bought off their being plunder'd with fifty thouſand Dollars; but the Houſes and Furniture of the Confederates were not at all ſpared. The Mother and two Sons of the Great General, who had retired for Shelter into a Convent, were carried off. Count Horn, and the two Swediſh Ambaſſadors, were ſtopt at their going out of the Caſtle; the Biſhop of Poſnania was likewiſe ſeized, challenged by the Pope's Nuncio as his Holineſs's Priſoner, and afterwards conveyed to Rome.

At the end of September, King Auguſtus having laid a Scheme to make this late Succeſs ſignificant, encamped at Wichſgrod upon the Viſtula, near the Mouth of the Bugg. Upon his coming hither, he ſent Diſpatches for recovering the neighbouring Palatinates which had recognized King Staniſlaus. At the ſame time he convened a General Dyet, where, amongſt other things, 'twas debated where 'twas more proper for the Saxon Troops to winter, to facilitate the Reduction of Great Poland. There were likewiſe Ways and Means propoſed for diſappointing the Enemy, in caſe their Forces ſhould move towards that ſide.

And now all things ſeemed to ſmile upon Auguſtus's Undertakings, and make him forget the Diſgraces of former Campagnes: He had no ſooner received a Reinforcement of ſixteen thouſand Saxons, but Advice was brought him of the Concluſion of a Treaty with the Muſcovites, which had coſt him a long time in finiſhing. By the Articles of the Alliance, the Czar obliged himſelf, as long as the War laſted, to maintain and recruit at his own Charge twelve thouſand Men to ſerve in the Armies of the Republick, to pay the Republick two Millions every Year, and to put all the Conqueſts he had made in Livonia into their Hands, on Condition they would engage not to treat with Sweden, but in concert with the Muſcovites. This promiſing Situation of Affairs made King Auguſtus conclude he was in a Condition to make an Impreſſion upon all Pruſſia. He ſummoned Dantzick to renounce the Confederacy, to expel the Confederates who had retired thither, and to pay him the ſame Contributions they had engaged by Articles to furniſh the Swedes. But the Dantzickers foreſeeing the King of Sweden would make himſelf formidable upon the Viſtula, ſent Auguſtus ſome Complimental Excuſes, which he thought himſelf obliged to receive, ſince a croſs Turn of Affairs began to riſe upon him.

General Meyerfeld, who was truſted with the Defence of Great Poland, finding himſelf too weak to keep the Field, poſted his Troops, amounting to about three thouſand Swedes, under the Cannon of Poſnania. Upon the 18th of Auguſt, at Eleven o' Clock at Night, he received Advice, that General Schulenberg was upon his March to ſurprize him; that the Enemy was four thouſand Saxon Horſe, two thouſand five hundred Foot of the ſame Nation, and five hundred Poliſh Horſe. Meyerfeld, upon this News, ſent his Baggage into the Town, from whence he drew out a Reinforcement of four hundred and fifty Men; brought the reſt of his Troops out of their Camp, ordered them to leave their Tents ſtanding, formed them, and expected the Enemy in this Poſture. At Break of Day, the Saxons having ſeized ſome Centinels, fell upon the Swediſh Tents, where they thought to have found them all aſleep; but on the contrary, perceiv'd them to advance in good Order, and charge boldly with Sword in Hand: They made a Halt to receive them, fir'd ſeveral times, but at laſt were broken, routed, and purſued. However, they rallied ſeveral times, and fac'd Colonel Taub, who quickly made them turn their Backs upon him. The Swedes Loſs was only three hundred killed, and forty eight made Priſoners; but that of the Saxons was much greater; for beſides ſix hundred wounded, they loſt almoſt a hundred Priſoners, and left near five hundred Dead upon the Field of Battle; amongſt which which were the Count de Pronitz, Colonel Rets, and ſome other Officers; beſides Major-General Brauſer, who died of his Wounds a few days after.

King Auguſtus, ſomewhat diſturbed at this Rebuke, and knowing of what Importance Poſnania would be to him, to ſecure the March of his Troops from Saxony into Poland, reſolved to beſiege this Town with an Army of ſixteen thouſand Saxons, Polanders, and Moſcovites, under the Command of General Patkul, a Livonian: This Officer, born a Subject of Sweden, had been arreſted for encouraging ſome Cabals againſt his Prince in Livonia; and making his Eſcape from Priſon in Stockholm, deſerted to Auguſtus and the Czar of Moſcovy, where he was careſs'd and promoted to the higheſt Poſts, for endeavouring to ruin his native Country. While the Saxons waited for their heavy Artillery to batter Poſnania, General Meyerfeld, who commanded the Garriſon of eighteen hundred Swedes, prepared for a vigorous Reſiſtance. However, the Place was in ill Condition, without Cannon, and only fortify'd with a double Wall of the old Faſhion. He began with burning the Suburbs, which might have been ſerviceable to the Enemy's Approach. He afterwards made ſeveral bloody Sallies, in one of which he beat up a whole Quarter of the Saxons. He maintained himſelf againſt two Aſſaults in one day, repulſed the Beſiegers with ſo much Bravery, that they deſpaired of carrying the Place, tho' they had three Breaches, and raiſed the Siege, after ten Weeks, to join King Auguſtus, againſt whom the Swediſh Army was now advancing.

The King of Sweden, moving from Leopold to Warſaw, took the Town of Beltz, Capital of a Palatinate of the ſame Name; in his March enter'd Zamoſch, Prince Zamoſchi opening the Gates to him. Thus appearing ſuddenly between the Bugg and the Viſtula, he fell ſo unexpectedly on the Places and Paſſes between thoſe two Rivers, that the Saxons quitted them without Reſiſtance. They retired beyond the Bugg, and carry'd the Terror of the Surprize as far as Pulſtaunk, where King Auguſtus was encamp'd. This Prince went off with Precipitation, with a Deſign of paſſing the Viſtula near Sacrotzin, to reach Warſaw, where he projected fortifying himſelf, and making a ſtand; but the rapid March of the King of Sweden made him quickly alter his Scheme: This Prince leaving Part of his Army at Prag, over againſt Warſaw, under the Command of General Stromberg, croſſed the Bugg with the reſt of his Troops, and making ſeveral Detachments, cleared the Country of all the Saxons in their way. Theſe latter retiring firſt to Thorn, ſecured themſelves at laſt on the other ſide of the Viſtula, breaking the Bridges after them, and thus cutting off all Communication between themſelves and Lithuania. The King of Sweden, whoſe main Deſign in this Expedition was to ſtop their Paſſage into Lithuania, repaſſed the Bugg, and croſſed the Viſtula, October 27, with Part of his Infantry at Othſock, three Leagues above Warſaw. A Body of Saxons, who defended this Poſt, ſcoured off to Warſaw; from whence King Auguſtus moved the ſame Night, leaving the Muſcovite Troops to defend the Place, who notwithſtanding thought fit to follow him quickly after. The next day, General Stromberg, for want of Boats, was forced to make Bridges of Floats of Timber at Prag: He threw one of theſe over the Viſtula, which happen'd unluckily to break in two Places. This Misfortune hindred his Cavalry three days from paſſing the River, and prov'd exceeding ſerviceable to King Auguſtus's Retreats. Notwithſtanding this Diſappointment, the King of Sweden and King Staniſlaus purſued Auguſtus with a ſmall Party of their Cavalry which had paſſed the Viſtula at Othſock. His Swediſh Majeſty order'd the other Regiments to follow him as faſt as they could paſs the River, and make after the Enemy with all imaginable ſpeed. The main Body of the Saxon Army (from whence King Auguſtus privately detach'd himſelf to get to Cracovia) was now conſiderably diſtant, took the Route of Sileſia, and made long Marches: However, Novemb. 7, the Swedes fetch'd them up on the Frontiers, having in nine days marched forty Poliſh Leagues without Infantry or Baggage.

General Schuylemberg, who commanded the Saxons and Muſcovites, endeavoured to ſecure their Retreat by leaving his Horſe upon the moſt advantageous Poſts, while the Infantry marched forward; but being hard preſs'd, he was forced to make a Stand near Punitz, a League and a half from Niſſa, in the Palatinate of Poſnania: And now expecting to be attack'd by the Swedes, he drew his Army up in Order of Battle, conſiſting of four Regiments of Horſe, and twelve Battalions; in the Center of which he placed his Cannon. The King of Sweden, who had only the Regiments of Renſchold, Cruſſaw, and Ducker, Dragoons, and Ornſted's Regiment of Horſe; three of which joined him on the Road with General Renſchold: However, notwithſtanding this Diſadvantage of Numbers, he charged with ſuch Vigour, that the Saxon Cavalry was immediately broken. The Infantry, which the Swedes fell upon afterwards with Sword in Hand, defended themſelves with more Reſolution. However, had not the Night come on, they muſt have been all cut in Pieces; for they had not only loſt their Cannon, but ſome freſh Swediſh Regiments came up as ſoon as the Fight was over. Thus, by the Advantage of Darkneſs and a violent Rain, the Saxons got off without Noiſe to a neighbouring Village, leaving a great many Dead, Wounded, and Priſoners behind them, and parted themſelves into ſeveral Diviſions, to embarraſs the Swedes Purſuit by the different Roads they went off in: In ſhort, 'twas neceſſary to ſpend ſome time to learn which way the main Body of their Troops had taken. His Swediſh Majeſty being inform'd how things went, march'd along the Banks of the Oder, which the Enemy was forc'd to paſs. General Welling having receiv'd Orders to take the Route of Glaugaw in Sileſia with the Regiments lately come up, upon the 8th and 9th of November fell upon ſeveral Muſcovite Parties, and cut them in Pieces. Six or ſeven hundred of their Infantry, finding their March ſtopt near Travenſtadt, barricaded themſelves between the Houſes; they fir'd furiouſly with Muſquet and Cannon, and made ſuch an obſtinate Defence, that they were all killed, excepting two Officers and three Soldiers; and here the Swedes took eleven Braſs Cannon. His Swediſh Majeſty follow'd General Schuylemberg ſo cloſe, who was marching to Guraw in Sileſia, beyond the Oder, that he made himſelf Maſter of his Baggage, and took or kill'd all the ſtraggling Soldiers in his way. This General flying from Guraw to Lutken, and afterwards to Guben, where he found but four thouſand Soldiers, took care to poſt them between the Dykes, the Marſhes, and in Woods, where 'twas not practicable for the Horſe to march. Matters ſtanding thus, the King of Sweden being in no Condition to fight without Infantry, repaſſed the Oder on the 11th of November, after having defeated two thouſand Coſſacks near Guraw, and three hundred Saxons, who were almoſt all cut in Pieces. This glorious Expedition coſt the Swedes but about a hundred and thirty Horſe or Dragoons, and four or five Officers; but a much greater Number of Horſes. Thus Great Poland was ſecur'd for Staniſlaus, and the Winter-Quarters the Saxons deſigned for themſelves, fell to the Swedes Share upon the Bugg, and even in Pruſſia, whither his Swediſh Majeſty march'd with ſome of his Horſe.

The King of Sweden, who always ſucceeded where he acted in Perſon, had not the ſame good Fortune in Livonia, where the Czar reſolv'd to employ all his Forces to repair the Diſgrace of the laſt Campagne. Major-General Schlippenbach, who took his Quarters in this Province after the Retreat of the Muſcovites in 1703, omitted nothing during the Winter for putting Dorpt and Narva in a Poſture of Defence; for theſe Places he expected would be firſt attack'd. In the Spring 1704, having no News of the Enemy's advancing, he projected being before-hand with them. He reſolv'd, with a Detachment of a thouſand Men, to join Major-General Lewenhaupt, who was quarter'd in Courland; that theſe Troops, thus reinforced, ſhould ravage the Frontiers of Muſcovy on the ſide of Pleskow; but the coming up of a great Army of Muſcovites into Livonia, quickly oblig'd him to ſtand upon the Defenſive, notwithſtanding he had reinforc'd himſelf with levying ſeveral new Regiments. The Enemy, whoſe Deſign was upon Narva, took their Poſt at the Mouth of the River of the ſame Name, and ſo cut off all Communication between the Town and the Sea. The River being thus ſeiz'd, diſtreſs'd the Garriſon, who expected Succours from Carelia in Finland. During the Rigour of the Winter, Major-General Maindel, who commanded in this Province, had had Buſineſs for all his Troops to oppoſe the Incurſions of the Muſcovites upon the Ice, and to make Reprizals upon them the ſame way. But when the Thaw had put an end to this Way of Fighting, and made the Lake navigable, he projected the Relieving Narva, and order'd a Convoy of Proviſion and Ammunition, with the Regiment of Rebinder, making twelve hundred Men, to embarque under the Command of Vice-Admiral Pron. The Fleet, conſiſting of thirteen Fregates, ſet ſail from Vibourg, and croſſing the Gulph of Finland, attempted getting into the River Narva; but quickly deſpairing of carrying their Point, and bringing the Convoy up into the Town, they debarqu'd their twelve hundred Men upon the Coaſt of Eſtonia, with Orders to join Major Schlippenbach. This General was advanc'd beyond Weſemberg with fifteen hundred, to cover the debarquing the Convoy from Carelia. He was attack'd by eight thouſand Muſcovites, and after a rough Conteſt, which coſt the Enemy eighteen hundred Men, was oblig'd to retire with the Loſs of 800, and two Pieces of Cannon. Another Tryal made by him on the Lake of Peypus, had ſtill a more unfortunate Event: Fourteen Boats, who put out from Dorpt May 13, to croſs the Lake, had no ſooner got into the Middle of it, but were ſurrounded with a great many Muſcovite Barques equipt for Fighting: They defended themſelves a great while with extraordinary Bravery; but being overborne with Numbers, and the continual Fire made by nine thouſand Men, who came from the Foreſt to the ſide of the Lake, they were forc'd at laſt to ſurrender. Vice-Admiral Laſcher, who commanded the Swedes, wou'd by no means accept Quarter: Thus he ſet Fire to his Powder-Room, and blew up himſelf and his Fregate. Theſe Diſgraces did not all diſhearten Major-General Schlippenbach; he took his Opportunity to ſuccour the Beſieged, march'd privately with the Regiment of Rebinder, and threw it into Narva May 20; the Garriſon ſallying with three hundred Foot and two hundred Horſe to make the Attempt Practicable.

Hitherto the Place had been block'd up by Land, only at ſome Quarters; but the Czar coming up the 10th of June, completed the Blockade with forty thouſand Men, commanded by General Ogilvi. Five days after, another Army of twenty thouſand Muſcovites inveſted Dorpt, no ſtrong Place, and garriſon'd only with fifteen hundred Men. The Beſiegers began to make their Approaches on the 26th; and after having prepar'd three Attacks, fir'd prodigiouſly upon the Town for near a Month with Bombs and Cannon. The Beſieged on their part omitted nothing that might be ſerviceable for repulſing the Enemy: Sallies, Stratagems, Cannonading, and every thing proper for Defence, were made uſe of without Intermiſſion. However, this noble Reſiſtance ſerv'd only to prolong the Siege, which, according to all the Rules of War, might have been over in a few days. Upon the 24th of July, the Houſes being almoſt all burnt or batter'd, the Outworks half ruined, and the Enemy Maſters of one Gate, Colonel Skitte, the Governor, was forc'd to capitulate. By the Articles, 1. The Garriſon was to go out with Arms and Baggage, and be conducted to Revel. 2. Their Charges upon the Road were to be borne by the Czar. But the Muſcovites, ſomewhat Strangers to good Nature and good Faith, abſolutely refus'd to perform the ſecond Article, and demurr'd a great while before they would make good the firſt. However, the loud Complaints of the Swedes made them come to at laſt, and convoy them to Revel, after having kept the Officers confined about a Week.

The Muſcovites Efforts before Dorpt had not made them the leſs buſy in carrying Narva. Upon the 26th of June, the Czar open'd the Trenches in ſeveral Places, and batter'd the Town Night and Day with ſuch Fury, that the Garriſon had ſcarcely any time for ſallying to hinder the Enemy's Approaches. They were three thouſand ſtrong, commanded by Count Horne who had ſignalized himſelf when this Place was beſieged in 1701. This Governor, who had rais'd himſelf to a Major-General, omitted nothing to maintain the Reputation he had gain'd, and to throw a ſecond Diſgrace upon his Czariſh Majeſty: And 'tis poſſible he might have ſucceeded, had it not been for an unexpected Accident, which made all his Conduct and Bravery miſcarry. Part of the Fortifications of the Place ſtood upon unſound and marſhy Ground: One of the Baſtions called Honor ſinking all of a ſudden, Auguſt 17, filled the Ditch with Rubbiſh, extremely damag'd the neighbouring Baſtion called Victoria, and made a Breach wide enough for a hundred Men abreaſt. The Czar, apprehenſive of the Courage of the Garriſon, tho' leſſen'd to half their firſt Number, did not think fit to puſh the Opportunity, and command his Men upon ſtorming: He order'd ſome Letters tied to Arrows to be ſhot into the Town, to ſhake the Reſolution of the Beſieged, and give them to underſtand their Ruin was inevitable. The Swedes however, encouraged by their Governor, who had been ſeveral times ſummon'd, reſolv'd to defend themſelves to the laſt Extremity, and turn'd Part of the unſerviceable People out of the Town. Auguſt 20, about Two in the Afternoon, ſixteen thouſand Muſcovites mounted the Breach in four Places, and were receiv'd with ſo much Bravery, that after having been repulſed ſeveral times, they loſt ſeven thouſand of their Men. However, the reſt were not diſhearten'd; the Loſs of the Czar's Men ſerv'd only to encourage him to ſupport his Troops, and carry on the Aſſault with more Eagerneſs. At laſt the Swedes, being no more than a Handful, were overborne with Numbers and freſh Men: The Town at laſt was forc'd, after the Trenches had been open'd two Months. The Enemy, at their Entry, quickly made the Streets run with Blood, and manag'd with unprecedented Cruelty. They ſpar'd neither Women nor Children, and gave Quarter to none but the Garriſon, Part of which had retir'd into the Caſtle of Ivanogorod; and another Part was forced to yield themſelves Priſoners of War, on Condition of having their Lives ſaved. The ſame day this Caſtle, ſtanding on the other ſide of the River near Narva, was ſummon'd by General Ogilvi. Lieutenant-Colonel Stiernſtrahal, who commanded two hundred Men, refus'd to ſurrender for ſome days; and had he not been ſtreighten'd for want of Proviſions, he would not have accepted the Terms offer'd him. He was conducted to Revel with his Garriſon, while the Priſoners taken at Narva were carry'd to Moſcow, and treated with all the rough Uſage imaginable; Count Horn eſpecially, who ought to have been beſt uſed, was with three of his Daughters thrown into the Hole of a Priſon, where they were left languiſhing a long time, without Beds, Linnen, or other Conveniences. Thus the Czar was pleaſed to revenge himſelf upon a brave Man, for his bold Defence of his Prince and Country.

This Prince believing his new Conqueſts would ſpread a Terror through all Livonia, march'd towards Revel, advancing within two Leagues of this Town, in order to beſiege it; but receiving Advice of its being furniſh'd with every thing neceſſary for a vigorous Defence, and apprehenſive the approaching Seaſon of the Year would be unfavourable for making a long Siege, he reſolv'd to countermarch into Muſcovy. Before his going off, he furniſh'd the two Towns he had taken with Garriſons judg'd ſufficient to curb Part of the Province. And now Major-General Schlippenbach beginning to breathe a little, concluded he had no occaſion for all his Troops to check the Incurſions of the Muſcovites: He therefore detach'd Part of them to join Major-General Lewenhaupt, who during all the Year 1704 had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by gaining ſeveral Advantages in Courland and Lithuania.

In the beginning of the Campagne, the Troops of Prince Wieſnowiski and thoſe of Oginski acting in concert with the Muſcovites, broke Major-General Lewenhaupt's Deſign of making an Irruption into the Province of Pleſkow with a Detachment of the Swediſh Army in Livonia. Being obliged to alter his Meaſures in May, he reſolv'd to move towards Lithuania, and make that Country the Seat of the War, after having joined Prince Sapieha. Wieſnowiski obſerving theſe Motions, made long Marches through the Foreſts and ill Roads, to fall upon Sapieha before this Junction; but a Reinforcement of ſix hundred Men, detach'd by Lewenhaupt, made him quit this Enterprize, and march to Birzen, where there was a Body of Muſcovites. Wieſnowiski preſs'd theſe Troops to follow him in queſt of the Enemy, but all to no purpoſe: They excuſed themſelves by ſaying, they immediately expected a Reinforcement of ſix thouſand Men. This Refuſal however did not hinder Wieſnowiski from making ſome Incurſions into Courland, till he received Advice at Janiskie that Major-General Lewenhaupt being reinforc'd with ſome Troops from Riga, and joined by Sapieha, was advan-advancing with an Intention to fight him. Upon this News, he took another Route for above twenty Leagues, ſtill purſued by Lewenhaupt, and at laſt got under the Cannon of Birzen: And now being join'd with Oginski, he made long Marches to beſiege Selsbourg, a ſmall Town in Courland, upon the Duna. The Swedes follow'd him cloſe, and coming twice up with him, took Part of his Baggage and ſome Priſoners. They made a Halt at Poniewitz, where Prince Sapieha, having publiſh'd a Proclamation for a Dyet, brought two Gentlemen into his Intereſt, who ſwore the Truth of what had paſs'd amongſt the Confederates at Warſaw. Upon this he ſent off ſome Detachments, which ruined a Magazine made for the Muſcovite Troops, cut five hundred Horſe and two hundred Dragoons in Pieces, and plunder'd Oginski's Baggage. Wieſnowiski ſummon'd a Dyet of Lithuanians for confirming the Reſolutions paſs'd at Lublin; but perceiving no body came thither, he reaſſumed his Project upon Selsbourg, where Count Linkshold was Governor, and batter'd the Fort eleven days, at the Head of twelve thouſand Men. And now every thing being ready for the Aſſault, Major-General Lewenhaupt, inform'd of the Danger of the Garriſon, appear'd in ſight of the Place, Auguſt the 4th. This oblig'd Wieſnowiski to raiſe the Siege, and draw off to Jacobſtadt, where his Army was encreas'd by a Muſcovite Detachment. The Swedes follow'd him two days after, and drawing up in Order of Battle within Cannon-ſhot of the Enemy, fell on with that Bravery, that they broke their Right Wing, and puſh'd it upon their Left. Wieſnowiski, did his utmoſt to rally his Men, but to no purpoſe; they ran away in every Part of the Army, till the Night had ſhelter'd them from being purſued. This Battle, fought by three thouſand Swedes, and four thouſand of Sapieha's Men, againſt ten thouſand Lithuanians, and four thouſand Muſcovites, coſt the latter above two thouſand. They loſt thirty nine Colours and Standards, twenty one Pieces of Cannon, ſix thouſand four hundred and fifty Grenadoes, with a great deal of other Ammunition. The Conſequences were very ſerviceable to King Staniſlaus. This Succeſs made all Samogitia declare for him; and over and above, a great many Lithuanian Lords took the Oath of Allegiance to him. Beſides, General Lewenhaupt, being willing to make the moſt of the Conſternation the Enemy lay under by the Defeat of Jacobſtadt, inveſted Birzen, where the Poliſh Garriſon ſurrender'd upon Articles, and took Service under Sapieha. This Place, though of no great Service to the Swedes, might do them a great deal of Miſchief in caſe of its falling into the Muſcovites Hands. This Conſideration made Lewenhaupt raze the Fortifications, having firſt ſent off thirty two Pieces of Braſs Cannon and ſome Mortars to Riga. This alternate Succeſs embarraſs'd the Czar, who, after the taking of Dorpt and Narva, hop'd to have rais'd the Siege of Birzen, or at leaſt to have made himſelf Maſter of Mittau and Bauſtch. The Swedes, after his Retreat, took their Quarters in Lithuania, from whence General Lewenhaupt provided for the Security of Courland.

The Winter Seaſon, which forced both ſides upon a ſort of Truce, gave the Confederates at Warſaw an Opportunity of improving their Intereſt in Great Poland. King Staniſlaus neglected no Expedient for bringing over the Palatines of the Faction. To this purpoſe he publiſh'd a Manifeſto, October 30, to ſet forth the Juſtice of his Cauſe; and ſoon after, convened a Dyet at Koſteine, a Town of Great Poland; which Aſſembly was open'd December 22. In the mean time King Auguſtus, much leſs concerned for what paſſed in this Aſſembly, than for the Irruption with which Saxony was threaten'd by the King of Sweden, quitted Poland immediately, and got privately into his Electorate. As ſoon as he came thither, he gave Orders to work upon the Fortifications of Dreſden, his Capital, and threw up Lines where the Country lay moſt expoſed. The ſudden Departure of this Prince extremely ſurpriz'd the Poles in his Intereſt. The Heads of the Party, 'tis true, left no Stone unturn'd to ſupport the Common Intereſt; but the Gentlemen in this Aſſociation were ſo divided, that the fixing upon any common Meaſures for putting a Stop to the preſent Diſorders, were altogether impracticable. On the other ſide, the Dyet at Koſteine was govern'd by a different Diſpoſition, where all the Members were perfectly unanimous.

Here, in January 1705, 'twas reſolv'd to ſend Commiſſioners to the Cardinal Primate, and to Bronits, Mareſchal of the Confederacy. 'Twas likewiſe agreed, that ſix thouſand Florins per Month ſhould be aſſigned for furniſhing the new King's Table, and twelve Companies of the Gentry were to be rais'd for his Guard. After this, Staniſlaus conſulted Cardinal Radziewiski, who was retir'd to Dantzick. Theſe Reſolutions of the Dyet, ſupported by the King of Sweden, drew a great Part of the Nobleſs into the Confederacy; and amongſt the reſt, the Palatines of Siradia, Poſnania and Calitz. There was one Gentleman that gave the Confederates a great deal of Diſturbance, and ſeem'd to perplex their Buſineſs in all Places, and lie every where in Ambuſh: 'Twas the Sieur Smigilski, Staroſt of Gneſna, and one of the moſt reſolute Adherents of King Auguſtus's Party. This Gentleman ſcatter'd the Dyet of Siradia, carry'd off the Mareſchal, and made ſome of the Members of the Dyet of Opatow Priſoners. Some time after, getting into Warſaw, he tore the Univerſals or Proclamation paſted up for crowning King Staniſlaus, and publiſh'd King Auguſtus's Declaration for ordering the Nobleſs of his Party to mount: But theſe ſlight Exploits fell ſhort of being deciſive, the Situation of Auguſtus's Affairs requiring much ſtronger Supports. This Prince had ſolicited the Mediation of the Elector of Brandenburgh for a Peace with the King of Sweden; and this Overture being refus'd by his Swediſh Majeſty, made Auguſtus believe the Elector would engage in his Quarrel. But his Electoral Highneſs was more pliant to the Commiſſioners of Dantzick, who concluded an Alliance with him; by vertue of which he ſtipulated to protect them, upon Condition of their paying him fifty thouſand Crowns per Ann.

The King of Sweden, diſſembling his Notice of what was done by the Burghers of Dantzick, (which afterwards notwithſtanding was remembred to their Coſt) was wholly intent upon carrying his Point in favour of King Staniſlaus: And while he acted privately by way of Negotiation, he had the Pleaſure to ſee his Arms proſper every where under the Conduct of his Generals, notwithſtanding this Diſadvantage of the Seaſon.

In January, the Swedes in Lithuania took Polanga, a Poſt of great Conſequence for opening a Communication between Courland and Lithuania. Soon after eight hundred Swedes, ſupported with four hundred of Sapieha's Men, were attack'd near this Place by ſixteen hundred Muſcovites, and five hundred Lithuanians. They repulſed the Enemy, killed ſix hundred of their Men, and being upon the Purſuit, fell upon another Body of three thouſand Muſcovites, and a thouſand Lithuanians, and cut them all in Pieces, excepting three hundred.

General Renſcold's Party, that ſcoured the Country near Sileſia, took Priſoners and Plunder every day; and amongſt other things made Prize, had the good Luck to ſeize ſome Waggons laden with Wool, in which the Czar had lodged two hundred thouſand Crowns for the paying his Troops in Saxony.

To give an Account of what was done in Carelia: Here Major-General Maindell, after having burnt a great deal of Forrage laid up for the Muſcovites, and killed them two hundred Men in the Iſland Ratuzari, reſolv'd to ruin their Fleet, which lay over againſt Notebourg. The Party-Man Sèwikas, who had the Command of five hundred Men for this purpoſe, ſurprized the Enemy by the Advantage of the Ice, and burnt eleven of their Ships, before they had time to put themſelves in a Poſture of Defence. In Great Poland, Colonel Lybecker, who commanded a Detachment of three thouſand Swedes, had Notice in January of two thouſand Poles in the Confederacy of Sendomir, being at Lowitz, where they kept a negligent Guard, under the Caſtellan Polaniecki. He attack'd theſe Forces in the Night, kill'd ſix hundred Men, took five hundred Priſoners, and diſperſed the reſt; the greateſt Part of which got off by croſſing the Viſtula. In this Place, upon the 10th or 11th of March following, a Party of three hundred and fifty Swediſh Horſe, detach'd by Lieutenant-General Nicroth, with ſome Poles, and two Companies of Walachians, fought forty two Poliſh Companies in the Service of the Crown Army. Major Piper, who was at the Head of the Swedes, perceiving the Poles and Walachians refuſe to charge, powder'd with with his Horſe upon the Enemy, who were intrench'd in the Suburbs of Lowitz, and forc'd them to run, after they had loſt a conſiderable Number.

Three Days after, twenty eight Companies of Auguſtus's Party, who returned to Lowitz, on the other ſide the Viſtula, with two hundred German Dragoons, ſurprized Captain Elfsbourg there, who belonged to Creutz's Regiment of Horſe. This Officer, who had none but his ſingle Troop with him, retreated into a Church yard, where he defended himſelf with ſo much Courage, that the Enemy were obliged to lodge ſome of their Men in the neighbouring Houſes to fire upon him: Upon this, Elfsbourg ſallying out of the Church-yard, cut a Lane through the Poles, and burnt the Houſes that fired upon his Men; and afterwards returning to his Poſt, forced the Enemy to take their Leave of him, after he had fought them from Seven in the Morning, till Four in the Afternoon, without loſing any more than two Corporals and a Trooper.

This continued Succeſs in the Swediſh Army was ſtill increaſed, upon their being joined by Potoski, Palatine of Kiovia. This Nobleman had formed a third Party in Poland, with which at firſt he pretended to ſtand Neuter: But now declaring for King Staniſlaus, he brought a Body of ſix thouſand to a Detachment which Lieutenant-General Stromberg had ſent to join him as far as Javarow. He likewiſe brought a great many Perſons of Diſtinction into the Confederacy. Thus King Auguſtus's Party was conſiderably weakened, and grew leſs and leſs every Day even in Little Poland, where General Schulembourg was forced to evacuate Cracovia, and retreat to Lublin. In ſhort, all the Hopes of this Prince for retrieving his Affairs lay in the Aſſiſtance from Muſcovy. The Bojar Alexander Daniel Monſhoff came to Wilna in April, to propoſe a Cartel to the King of Sweden for Exchange of Priſoners: But this Overture was rejected, either for the Humourſomneſs of the Conditions, or becauſe of the haughty Manner with which this Miniſter propoſed them. If Monſhoff's Gaſconades were to be credited, there was nothing leſs to be expected from the Czar his Maſter, than the Conqueſt of Courland and Livonia, and the total Ruin of the Swedes. Theſe menacing Rodomantodes were to be made good this Year with an Army of a hundred thouſand Muſcovites, and another of ſixty thouſand Coſſacks under General Mazeppa. This Expectation was farther fortified by Prince Dolhonski, the Czar's Ambaſſador to the Republick, who, purſuant to Articles ſtipulated by the Czar, had brought two Millions along with him for ſubſiſting the Crown Army. On the other ſide, King Auguſtus, endeavouring to raiſe the Spirits of his Party, extremely ſunk by his Abſence, promiſed to paſs the Oder immediately, and march into Poland with five and twenty thouſand Men.

All this Menacing gave the King of Sweden little Trouble, being much better aſſured of the Execution of his Deſigns, than the Enemy was of theirs. Thus perfectly at eaſe in his Quarters at Ravitzs, he waited the Opening of the General Dyet, which was preparing in ſeveral particular Meetings for the Coronation of King Staniſlaus. His Swediſh Majeſty likewiſe gave out his Orders to his reſpective Generals for diſappointing the Preparations of the Enemy. During the Winter, Contributions had been carefully levied upon each Palatinate, the Tax being laid in Proportion to the Wealth and Extent of the Country. The Town of Thorn had contributed four hundred Crowns per Month; Dantzick had likewiſe a Share in the Impoſition; and notwithſtanding the Protection of their new Ally, was forced to put all Auguſtus's Effects in the Swedes Hands, and to yield to the levying a hundred and fifty ſix Crowns upon every Village within their Precinct. Farther, at Carelſcroon in Sweden, twelve Men of War were rigged out, and eighteen Fregates, to tranſport Recruits into Livonia. This Fleet, commanded by Admiral Anckerſtierna, debarqued the Troops at Revel in May, and afterwards joined Vice-Admiral Sparre's Squadron to go in queſt of the Muſcovites in the Sea of Ingermeland.

At laſt, the General Dyet was ſummoned by the Cardinal Primate to meet at Warſaw in July following; and ſome time before the Members convened, the Swedes gained a ſignal Victory upon the Frontiers of Lithuania. Czeremetoff, who commanded an Army of thirty thouſand Muſcovites in Little Ruſſia, moved along the Duna, with a Deſign to beat up Count Lewenhaupt's Quarters, and then to block up Riga, after he had over-run Courland. But the Swediſh General having rendezvouſed his Troops at the Village of Zachary in Samogitia, reinforced himſelf with twelve hundred from the Garriſons of Riga and Libau. He was now putting himſelf in a Condition to receive the Enemy, when Advice was brought him, July the 13th, that they had ſurprized Mittau, and put the Garriſon to the Sword. Being more provoked than diſcouraged at this Diſgrace, he moved immediately with his Horſe, and ordered his Foot to follow him as far as Gemutſhoff: He marched all Night, and came up to Mittau, from whence the Muſcovites were drawn off to their Camp at Nepren four Leagues from thence. The Swedes came back in the Evening to Gemutſhoff, and paſſed the River there on the 16th, to put themſelves in a Condition of fighting upon narrow Ground: Their Army was drawn up upon two Lines, their Right covered by a Marſh, and their Left by a little River. Some Squadrons detached to get Intelligence were ſurrounded by the Muſcovite Foot, bolting out of a Wood, and had much ado to recover their main Body. At laſt the Battle began: The Onſet was given by Lewenhaupt, to prevent the Enemy's having time for drawing their Troops into cloſer Order, being too much extended, conſidering the Ground they were to fight on. The Enemy charged with all their Foot, intermix'd with their Horſe, and that with ſuch Fury, that after a long Reſiſtance, the Swediſh Left Wing was broken, and had been entirely defeated, if the Infantry of the ſecond Line had not taken their Place, and given them time to rally: And now the Muſcovite Infantry, incloſed on all ſides, were cut in pieces between the two Lines. On the Right, the Colonels Horn and Schreitenfelt falling with Sword in Hand upon the Muſcovite Battalions and Squadrons, killed a great many of them, and gained conſiderable Ground: But while the firſt Line fought the main Body of the Enemy, a Detachment of their Cavalry rear'd the Swedes, and forced the ſecond Line to turn about and face them for ſome time. But they were quickly repulſed here, forced to retire in Confuſion, and croſs the River, which the Van-Guard of their Army had already paſſed. And now General Lewenhaupt followed them with his Right Wing, which renew'd the Fight, and was quickly ſeconded by the Left. As long as the two Wings, at firſt conſiderably diſtant from each other, fought ſeparately, the Muſcovites, who were much ſuperior in Number, defended themſelves well enough; but as ſoon as the Swedes Army was all joined, and made but one Front, they were broken beyond Hopes of rallying, and fled in great Diſorder to their Camp, about half a League from thence. Here theſe barbarous People inhumanly cut the Throats of the Priſoners they had taken at Mittau, and diſperſed themſelves, carrying off Part of their Baggage, and leaving the reſt to the Swedes, beſides thirteen large Braſs Cannon, eight Colours, and one Standard. Thus the Battle ended, where the Muſcovites loſt ſix thouſand, and the Swedes fifteen hundred, amongſt whom were Colonel Horn, Lieutenant-Colonels Dankwort and Kulbars, Major Wrangel, and Count Linzcold.

In fine, the Succeſs of this Battle, though very conſiderable, could not divert the Storm from Courland and Livonia: For the Czar, who moved by the way of Leopold with an Army of ſixty thouſand Coſſacks, with the ſame Number of Muſcovites in Lithuania, as ſoon as he heard the Defeat of Czeremetoff, put himſelf at the Head of his beſt Troops to fall upon Count Lewenhaupt. This latter had no other Courſe to take, than to retire under the Cannon of Riga: This was done, after he had drawn off the Garriſon of Mittau, (where he left but five hundred Men in the Caſtle) and received a Reinforcement of two thouſand from Revel. The Caſtle of Mittau, inveſted Auguſt 22, was in no Condition to hold out againſt ſo great an Army. Inſomuch that Colonel Knorring, the Governor, perceiving the Works perfectly diſmantled, was obliged to ſurrender upon honourable Conditions to Colonel Ronne. The Blockade of Riga was made at the ſame time, and formed on the ſide of Courland by thirty thouſand Muſcovites, commanded by the Czar in Perſon. This Prince, who had flatter'd himſelf with the ſpeedy Conqueſt, was quickly diſcouraged by the Difficulty of the Enterprize. Either deſpairing to force Count Lewenhaupt's Intrenchments, or foreſeeing the Town, already covered with Lewenhaupt's ſmall Army, might might be relieved by Sea; or, laſtly, judging it more ſerviceable to the Common Cauſe to countermarch into Great Poland: In ſhort, being determined by ſome or all of theſe Reaſons, he quickly raiſed the Blockade, left General Czeremetoff upon the Duna, and General Ronne in Courland, and took the Route of Tykoczin to come near Warſaw, where every thing ſeem'd to favour the Confederates Affairs.

The Meeting at Warſaw, which opened July 11, made ſome Proviſion to ſecure themſelves againſt the Incurſions of the Staroſt Smigilski, and from a Viſit they might expect from the Body of Saxons and Poles on the other ſide the Viſtula. Thus no Buſineſs was done till the Seſſion of the 18th of July, when the Mareſchal of the Confederacy moved the Houſe ſhould write to the Cardinal Primate, and invite him to the Dyet; that they would ſpeedily enter upon Treaty with the King of Sweden's Commiſſioners; and that this Prince, by the Mediation of King Staniſlaus, might be engaged to provide for the Security of the Deputies of Great Poland who were to come to the Dyet. Theſe three Propoſals were approved by the Univerſality, and the two laſt quickly put in Execution by the King of Sweden, who came to Warſaw the 17th. His Swediſh Majeſty having nominated Count Arſwed Horn, M. Wachſlager, and M. Palmberge, for his Commiſſioners, gave Orders for reinforcing General Nicroth, encamped with a ſmall Body at Viaſdow, and then his Majeſty returned to his Camp at Bloni. The Saxons and Poles, poſted on the other ſide the Viſtula, where their Troops were daily increaſing, had laid a Deſign to carry off the Members of the Dyet, and to this purpoſe ordered a Detachment of a thouſand to paſs the River at Othſock: But this Body being defeated, the reſt fell lower, and reſolved to attempt croſſing the Water at Gura above Warſaw, or at Sacrotzin near the Mouth of the Bugg. As ſoon as General Nicroth had Notice of the Deſign, he ordered two Detachments, each of a hundred and eighty Gentlemen, to obſerve the Enemy: One of them, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Stalhamer, was ordered to Sacrotzin, and the other, under Lieutenant Colonel Claes Bonde, was to go to Gura. This latter advancing towards the Viſtula at the Head only of eighty Men, having laid an Ambuſcade with the reſt, had the Misfortune to be cut in pieces; the Enemy having paſſed the River in the Night at a Ford near Gura upon the 29 or 30th of the Month laſt mentioned. And now General Nicroth, leaving his Baggage at Viaſdow, marched above a League and a half to meet the Enemy with his three Regiments of Smalandia, Oſtrogothia, and Kruſen, making ſomewhat more than two thouſand Horſe. He found the Saxons and Poles drawn up in three Columns, to the Number of ſix thouſand; the firſt commanded by the Generals Schulenbourg and Paykel, and the others by Mareſchal Denham, Comentowski, Prince Wieſnowiski, and Riwaski. While the Swedes were forming themſelves, the Right Wing being commanded by General Nicroth, and the Left by Colonel Kruſe, the Saxons attacked their Left, and found ſo much Reſiſtance there, that they were forced to fall back and throw themſelves upon the Poles in the ſame Wing. Colonel Burinſcold making Advantage of this Diſorder, charged them ſo briſkly, that he puſhed them about a League, where they rallied behind a Village. He forced them from this Poſt Sword in Hand, and drove them about half a League, killing and breaking every thing that offered any Reſiſtance. At his going back, he was joined by General Nicroth and Colonel Kruſe, who had made their way through the Enemy's Left, though not without very great Difficulty, and purſued them almoſt two Leagues, after a great Slaughter upon the Field of Battle. Above two Thirds of the Saxons and Poles fell in the Fight, which laſted from Six in the Morning, till Four in the Afternoon. Beſides, a great many Priſoners were brought to the King of Sweden; amongſt the reſt, General Paykel was carried to his Majeſty: This Officer, though not the ſame with Patkull, was likewiſe a Livonian, and by conſequence a Subject of Sweden. After this Defeat, which coſt the Swedes about three hundred Men, the Dyet being in no farther Apprehenſions of the Enemy, had full Liberty to continue their Seſſions, which was ſucceſsfully done after the Return of the two Kings to Warſaw. Potoski, Palatine of Kiovia, who came up to the Bugg at the Head of an Army of fifteen thouſand, and Prince Lubomirski, Staroſt of Sepuſia, who was poſted with a Body near Cracovia, gave a farther Security to the Dyet. Being now out of all Danger, they deſpiſed the Oppoſition of Prince Wieſnowiski and Prince Radziwil, and ſettled a General Council to be ſummoned by the Mareſchal of the Confederacy at Sendomir, to traverſe the Deſigns of theſe two Princes. And farther, the Dyet did not think themſelves obliged to mind the Pope's Briefs directed to the Biſhops, nor the Solicitations of his Nuncio in favour of Auguſtus.

Thus in the Seſſion of Auguſt 27, having ſolemnly confirmed all that had been done in favour of King Staniſlaus, and againſt King Auguſtus and his Adherents, 'twas reſolved in the Seſſion of September 5, that the Houſe ſhould write to all the Palatinates, to exhort them to come into the Aſſociation, and eſpecially to the Biſhops: Theſe, as being chief Senators, were invited to take their Place in the Dyet, for that otherwiſe they would be barred their Share in the Government. 'Twas likewiſe agreed to ſend ſome of their Members to the Cardinal Primate, to deſire him to come to Warſaw. 'Twas farther reſolved, a Remonſtrance ſhould be ſent to the Pope, for confining the Biſhop of Poſnania, for directing his Briefs to the Biſhops, and for the Intrigues managed by ſome of his Miniſters. 'Twas debated on the 15th, whether the Amneſty ſhould be general, and take in Prince Lubomirski Grand General, who had quitted the Aſſociation of Warſaw to go into that of Sendomir. At laſt 'twas concluded by the Majority, that the Indemnity ſhould paſs without Exceptions; but that thoſe of the oppoſite Party ſhould be obliged to come in within ſix Weeks, reckoning from the Day of King Staniſlaus's Coronation; and that the Treaty of Alliance between Poland and Sweden ſhould be ſigned. In fine, upon the 17th the Coronation of the new King was appointed for the 4th of October, and the Solemnity to be kept at Warſaw. And 'twas about this time that the Commiſſioners of the King of Sweden and the Republick began to work upon the League Offenſive and Defenſive between Sweden and Poland, with more Earneſtneſs than formerly; which notwithſtanding was not ſigned till the 28th of November following. The chief of Articles were theſe, viz.

That after the Coronation of King Staniſlaus, no Contributions ſhould be levied upon any of the Dominions of the Republick: That the Treaty of Oliva ſhould be renewed: That there ſhould be a League between Sweden and Poland againſt the Czar: That no Province ſhould be diſmembred from the Crown: That there ſhould be a full unreſtrained Commerce for the Swedes in Poland, and for the Poles in Livonia: And laſtly, that the Houſe of Sapieha ſhould be reſtored to their Honours and Eſtates. Cardinal Radziewiski, who as Archbiſhop of Gneſna, was to crown the King, wrote to the Dyet, that not being in a Condition to come to Warſaw, he would agree to every thing that paſſed there, and ſend the Archbiſhop of Leopold to repreſent him, and perform the Functions of the Primate.

Thus King Staniſlaus having ſworn the Pacta Conventa, paſſed through the Forms of Inauguration, and was crowned October the 4th in S. John's Church at Warſaw. The Solemnity being ended, he ſpent three Days with the King of Sweden at his Camp at Bloni. The Day after the Royal Ceremony, the Cardinal Primate fell ill at Dantzick, and died a Week forward: His Death was extremely regretted by all the Confederates: He was a Perſon of a great Genius, and may fairly be reckoned among the Stateſmen of the firſt Claſs. His Archbiſhoprick was given to the Archbiſhop of Leopold, related to King Staniſlaus; and the Palatinate of Poſnania vacant by the Acceſſion of this Prince to the Crown, was reſtored as a Reward upon Bronitz, Mareſchal of the Confederacy.

A great many Poles of the contrary Faction diſengaged from their Party, to lay hold of the Amneſty. King Auguſtus foreſeeing the Conſequences of this Revolution, reſolved at laſt to go back into Poland, and came privately to Konigsberg in Pruſſia, from whence he got forward November the 1ſt to Tykoczin: He was received here with great Demonſtrations of Joy by thoſe who were beſt affected to his Intereſt. To give them farther Satisfaction, he inſtituted an Order of Knighthood called the White Eagle, and ſeem'd not to deſpair of reſtoring his Affairs by the Czar's Aſſiſtance. But, as it happened, this Prince could could effect nothing in Great Poland, notwithstanding the numerous Army he had drawn thither; and besides, since his coming out of Courland, he had lost all his Acquisitions there, excepting Mittau. However, they had still a great Army of Muscovites and Cossacks, besides the Poles in their Interest, and the Troops expected from Saxony. To give a better Face to their Business, and put it in something of a Method, they convened an Assembly at Grodno, in which King Augustus got several Bills pass'd, though perfectly subversive of the Polish Liberties. The easy Compliance of his Creatures upon this Head gave him Hopes of farther Success, which quickly vanish'd by the indefatigable Valour of the King of Sweden, and the Precautions taken by King Stanislaus, whose Party encreased every Day.

While the Dyet of Grodno, which broke up on the 15th of December, spent their time in Consultation, Part of the Crown-Army, commanded by Potkomirski, and Prince Lubomirski Great Chamberlain, came and took the Oath of Allegiance to the new King: They then march'd back to Jarowslau upon the Vistula, to join Potoski and Sapieha. The rest of the Year was spent in Skirmishing between the two Parties. A Captain of Horse belonging to Lieutenant-General Stromberg, lately reinforced with some Companies from Lubomirski, routed Commentowiski, who had lately defeated a Party of the Swedes. Some Detachments made upon the Vistula by General Meyerfeld levy'd Contributions on the Enemy, and carry'd a great many Prisoners into their Camp; but, on the other side, a Party commanded by Captain Colmer was invested in the Castle of Plotsko, and forced to surrender to prevent being burnt, by their setting Fire to a neighbouring Church. Smigielski likewise keeping the Field, attempted to surprize Colonel Grusinski near Kielce; but this Officer retreating to the Castle of Warsaw, took an Opportunity to sally upon his Enemy, and kill'd him a hundred and fifty Men. 'Twas not long before this Starost had his Revenge; for after having carry'd off two of Potoski's Companies, he mov'd to Cracovia, where he attack'd King Stanislaus's Guards with some Advantage.

The Motion the King of Sweden made in January 1706 was of much greater Consequence. As soon as the Frost began to make Marshes and Rivers passable, he decamp'd upon the 8th from Bloni in quest of the Enemy, and was join'd by Sapieha's and Potoski's Troops. Afterwards he crossed the Vistula at Warsaw, and passing by Stanislowa, Wennegrod, Korowitsk, and Kirzemin upon the Bugg, he crossed this River the 17th at Poptavia, near the Village Brainski; thence advancing near Tykoczin, he march'd within two Leagues of this Town, and upon the 25th encamp'd in the Neighbourhood of Grodno. The next Day, when the Swedish Army was going to pass the Niemen upon the Ice, they perceived, in a Hollow Way, on the other side the River, a great Body of the Enemy's Dragoons; some of which being dismounted, began to fire, while the rest drew up in the Plain. This did not hinder the King from passing the River on Foot at the Head of his Guards, where the Loss they receiv'd was only three Soldiers wounded, the Muscovite Dragoons, who had Resolution enough to make a stand, were quickly driven away from their Post by the Swedish Dragoons: However, they rallied near Grodno, where they had all their Cavalry to support them, and their Infantry appearing at the same time, the King of Sweden concluding they had a mind to hazard a Battle, drew up his Troops in Order of Battle as fast as they arrived; but the Muscovites wanting Courage to risque the Contest, quitted their Camp, retir'd into the Town, left a great many Waggons loaden with Provisions behind them; besides a hundred of their Foot, who were intercepted and almost all cut in Pieces. In the Evening, the Swedish Army came forward to the Suburbs, burnt by the Enemy, and appear'd the next Day before Grodno. Notwithstanding the King of Sweden was very desirous to force the Enemy, he chose rather to consult his Prudence than his Courage, and finding twenty six thousand of them advantageously intrench'd behind Works in a manner impregnable in themselves, besides their being fortify'd with a great many Cannon, he chose rather to draw his Troops about the Town and invest them. By this Conduct, he effectually cut off their Provisions, and the Wood they had so much need of, and reduc'd them to the Necessity of surrendring or starving. The Swedes had none of these Hardships to deal with, for which they may thank the Discipline observ'd by the Muscovites in their Quarters; for both there, and all about Grodno, they found a great many Magazines uncommonly well furnish'd with Provisions and Ammunition. In fine, by keeping the Enemy thus block'd up, they cut off all Communication with their own Party; and thus there was no joining their Troops without venturing a Battle with the Swedes. All these Considerations made the King of Sweden pass the Winter at Grodno; from whence King Augustus had moved with Precipitation with four Regiments of Dragoons the Day after his coming thither. General Menzikoff retiring with a strong Guard the Day before Augustus, made the Czar apprehensive of Danger, and dissuaded him from exposing himself to the Hazards and Inconveniences of being invested. And now the King of Sweden taking his Quarters between Grodno and Wilna, sent off several Detachments to reduce the neighbouring Country.

A Party of Walachians, marching as far as Tykoczin, defeated a Party of Muscovites, and made most of them Prisoners.

Major-General Myerfeld going to Indura, at the Head of a thousand Horse, attack'd a Regiment of Dragoons, of which a hundred Men were killed, and forty taken Prisoners: And here he had infallibly carry'd off all the Enemy's Cavalry, dispers'd in the neighbouring Village, but that his Horses were too much tir'd to pursue: And thus the Enemy, who retir'd in Confusion, got into Grodno by some Avenues less closely block'd up. The Baggage they left behind them was very considerable: There was a great Number of loaden Waggons; and over and above, the Swedes took a thousand Horses, and brought them to their Camp.

Six thousand Horse of the Troops of Sapieha and Potoski fell upon Major-General Sinitski at Olita, who had drawn a Body of Lithuanians, Muscovites, and Saxons together, with a Design to beat up the Swedes Quarters; and here they killed him fifteen hundred Men, took three Pair of Kettle-Drums, fifteen Colours, and all the Baggage; amongst which there was twenty thousand Crowns, besides the General's Plate.

Colonel Kruse, detach'd to the Frontiers of Prussia, carry'd the Fort Augustoa by Storm, where all the Muscovite Garrison were put to the Sword. He likewise cut off six hundred of the Enemy in several Places, and brought off a hundred Prisoners.

Another Body of six thousand Poles and Lithuanians, supported by some Swedish Companies, had Orders to move towards Caume, and advance farther into the Country, which was entirely reduc'd by them.

The Satisfaction these successful Expeditions occasion'd in the Swedish Army, was considerably increas'd by the News from Silesia. King Augustus, who came into Great Poland after his Retreat from Grodno, concluded it impossible to retrieve his Affairs, without making some considerable Progress in that Country while the King of Sweden was employ'd in Lithuania. With this View he order'd General Schulembourg, who commanded his Troops in Saxony, to pass the Oder at all Adventures; and at the same time his Majesty march'd to alarm General Renschold, who was always very careful to observe the Saxons Countenance. The Swedish Army was then in the Palatinate of Posnania; from hence they decamp'd and mov'd first to Kossin, and then to Lissa, where they understood fifteen thousand Saxon Foot and seven thousand Horse and Dragoons, had crossed the Oder upon the Ice. General Renschold, who had laid a Design to draw them into a Place where he might fight with least Disadvantage, amuz'd them with a feigned Countermarch into Posnania. The Enemy were more easily persuaded to believe him in earnest, because his Army consisted of no more than five Regiments of Foot, five Regiments of Dragoons, and fifteen of Horse; which in all made but ten thousand Men. Another Reason which made the Amusement pass, was this General's not making any Attempt to dispute their passing the River, nor prevent their joining the Muscovites; which latter he despis'd too much to attack them by themselves. His main Business was to draw the Saxons out of the Woods and Morasses, where they lay cover'd: The Event answer'd ſwer'd the Stratagem, for they fell into the Snare laid for them. Upon the 12th of February, a conſiderable Body of the Enemy appearing near Travenſtadt, grew more confident than ever that the Swedes were afraid of them, by their counter-marching as far as Twetske, half a League from Liſſa. As ſoon as General Renſchold had drawn up his Army, he advanc'd to the Saxons, who were very advantageouſly poſted, with the Villages of Jaggersdorf on the Right, Roerſdorf on their Left, and the Town of Travenſtadt on their Backs. Genereral Schuylemberg was preparing to ſend a Detachment along the two Villages, to take the Swedes in their Rear, when he perceiv'd them coming on with a gentle March towards him. Upon this, he order'd his firſt Line to retire, and take their Poſt behind a Hollow Way: Beſides, he took care to cover them with Chevaux de Frize, with long Beams fix'd in the Ground, and pointed with Sword-Blades, diſcharging his Cannon at the ſame time; which being mounted too high, did little Execution. The Swedes leapt over the Hollow Road, broke through what lay in their way, drove through the Intrenchments, notwithſtanding the firing of the Enemy's two Wings, who had much ado to ſtand the Swedes firſt Charge, and quickly ran off as faſt they could. The Saxon Infantry being deſerted by their Cavalry, threw themſelves immediately into a ſquare Figure, and after having maintain'd the Fight for ſome time, were forc'd to ſurrender; and now whole Regiments threw down their Arms, and begg'd Quarter upon their Knees. The Saxons Lives were ſpar'd, and eight thouſand of them made Priſoners; but the Muſcovites were allow'd no Quarter. Lieutenant-General Wirſtromiski and Major-General Zutzelberg, four Colonels, viz. the Count Joyenſe, who died of his Wounds, the Sieurs Droſt, Sak, and Boſe, and a hundred and ſixty Officers above Subalterns, fell into the Swedes Hands, and were treated with great Humanity. Seven thouſand of the Enemy were found dead upon the Field of Battle, and thereabouts, though the Fight laſted but an Hour. As for the Swedes, they loſt but three hundred and ſeventy three Men, with five or ſix hundred wounded. Amongſt the latter, were the Lieutenant Colonels Bukwald, Patkul and Creutz, the Majors Wrangel, Snolski and Captain Lod: The firſt of which receiv'd nine Muſquet Bullets and four Cuts with a Sword; General Renſchold had a Horſe killed under him: He took thirty two Pieces of Braſs Cannon, and thirty ſix Standards and Colours, eleven thouſand ninety four Muſquets, and all the Enemy's Baggage, which they had left two Leagues from Travenſtadt.

The Noiſe of this Victory, which open'd a Paſſage into Saxony, and cover'd Great Poland from King Auguſtus, carry'd a Conſternation as far as Grodno, where the Beſieged projected nothing farther than preſerving the Debris of their Troops: And having the Niemen between the Swedes and themſelves, they began their Retreat as ſoon as the Seaſon had melted the Ice of this River. And here, of the twenty ſix thouſand they had at firſt, only ſeven thouſand Foot and two thouſand Dragoons got off; the reſt being all deſtroy'd with Famine, Cold, or Diſeaſes. This leiſurely Defeat of the Enemy was no leſs honourable for the King of Sweden, than the bloody Victory above-mentioned; who, as ſoon as he heard of the Flight of this Remainder, prepar'd immediately to purſue them; but the River being thaw'd, and the Paſſage by conſequence impracticable, they were forced to mend the Bridge near Orlowa. The time ſpent upon this Buſineſs afforded the Muſcovites Leiſure to get forward, and gave them Opportunity to fortify themſelves upon their Route, where they committed all imaginable Barbarities, plundering and burning every thing in their way. They filed off towards the Palatinate of Brezeſcia, in order to get into Muſcovy: And concluding it neceſſary to ſtop the Swedes March, they retrench'd themſelves upon one of the Banks of the Jaciolda: Their Deſign was to ſecure the drawing off their Cannon and their Baggage, with their Sick and Wounded. All the Ground from this little River, as far as Pinsk, was extremely proper for their Purpoſe, being in a manner all Forreſts, with Rivers and unpaſſable Moraſſes between them. The Enemy having broken the Bridges and fell'd the Wood for about a League and a half, where the Paſſage lay moſt open, threw up five Redoubts near Sielce, and planted Cannon upon them. The King of Sweden, who could not croſs the Niemen till the 14th of April, arriv'd at Roſana the 24th, and three days after came up to the Jaciolda, which he endeavour'd to paſs not near Sielce, but two Leagues lower, hard by Bereza. Fifteen hundred Dragoons of the Enemy were poſted here, to guard the Paſs of the River, and cover'd with a Redoubt which they had made in the middle of a Moraſs; but the Swedes throwing themſelves into the Water, ſome up to the Middle, and ſome up to the Neck, and falling upon them Sword in Hand, forced them to quit their Poſt, without ſo much as making any Reſiſtance. As ſoon as this News was brought to Sielce, the Muſcovites quitted their Works in great Diſorder, and ran away croſs the Woods: Theſe unhappy Troops, overſet with Fear, obſerving no Order in their Retreat, but diſperſing in ſmall Numbers, were almoſt all knock'd on the Head either by the Peaſants or Swedes, who made uſe of Flat-bottom'd Boats to follow them into the Moraſſes.

The Coſſacks, who had ſeized a great many Towns in the Palatinate of Novogrodeck, and in the Duchy of Slutzk, were likewiſe diſlodg'd by the Swediſh Troops: Two thouſand of them had intrench'd themſelves at Neſvitſh, where Lieutenant-Colonel Trautwetter, having ſurpriz'd them by a Party of five hundred Horſe, ſet Fire to the Town, took a hundred and fifty Priſoners, and kill'd between three and four hundred. Colonel Michalowitz was one of this Number: He was Commander in Chief at this Action, and formerly had the ſecond Command under General Mazeppa.

Some days after the King of Sweden, encamped at Pinsk with King Staniſlaus, ſent off a Detachment to Szaborn, a ſtrong Place ſituate in a Moraſs. The Garriſon, conſiſting of above eight hundred, was ſummon'd, and ſurrender'd at Diſcretion, and ſo did Lakowicze and Neſvitſh. Theſe three Places, which commanded all the Flat Country, had their Artillery taken out, amounting to ſeventy Pieces of Braſs Cannon, and their Works ſlighted: This Demolition was extremely welcome to all the leſſer Nobility and Gentry of the Country. Nothing but the Town of Sluzk was left undemoliſh'd: This Place, fortify'd with fourteen Baſtions, and a good Citadel, was ſpar'd, in Conſideration of the Ammunition and Proviſions they furniſh'd the Swedes with, and out of Reſpect to the Houſe of Newbourg, a Princeſs of which Family was Heireſs to this Duchy.

Thus Lithuania, where Auguſtus had his greateſt Expectation, was perfectly clear'd of the Foreign Forces he had brought thither, and even of the native Troops he had made uſe of to embroil and harraſs the Country: For at the ſame time that the remainder of the Muſcovites and Coſſacks fled, ſome of them to Muſcovy, and others to the Ukrain, Wieſnowiski, Oginski, and Sinitski, the principal Lithuanians in Auguſtus's Intereſt, took the ſame Route; and as they went off, threw ſome Battalions into Biſcho. The two Kings being eaſed of the Burden of the War in theſe Quarters, applied themſelves to put things in Order, and ſecure their Succeſs.

While the Swediſh Troops were in Quarters of Refreſhment in the Neighbourhood of Dubna in Volhinia, King Staniſlaus held a Dyet at Zuzuch, where not only the Nobility of his own Party, but a great many of thoſe who were formerly of the contrary Intereſt, were preſent. The Nobleſs of Lithuania, Volhinia, Podolia, and the neighbouring Palatinates, not only ſent Commiſſioners to the two Kings, July 1, but came themſelves in Perſon to offer Staniſlaus their Service, and mounted immediately to act againſt the Saxons. Prince Radziewill, Great Chancellor of Lithuania, was taken into Favour, and ſo was Prince Czartoriski, who interceded for the Mareſchal Denhoff his Brother-in-Law; to which may be added Lubomirski, Lord Chamberlain, who brought in forty two Companies of the Crown Forces, and Jabloniowiski, Palatine of Ruſſia, Uncle on the Mother-ſide to King Staniſlaus, who promis'd to bring over another Party of them. Wieſnowiski and Oginski, whoſe Country was lately harraſs'd, were the only Perſons of Quality who could not make their Submiſſions paſs.

The Palatinate of Cracovia ſtood almoſt ſingle in following the Fortune of King Auguſtus, who was working upon ſome Fortifications for the Defence of the Capital. This Prince was ſomewhat uneaſy at General Meyerfeld's advancing as far as Lublin with a conſiderable Body. Beſides, Potoski, Palatine of Kiovia's Troops, detached towards Leopold, had defeated a Body of Coſſacks there, and ſeized eleven Companies of the Crown Forces: And Sapieha was encamped between Brzeſcia and Caun. Thus King Auguſtus was apprehenſive of being ſurrounded on all Sides, and eſpecially by the King of Sweden's Army, and by the Troops commanded by General Renſchold, who were on their March towards him. Thus he prepared to quit this Town, in caſe he was likely to be attack'd, and ſent off the main Body of his Army into Saxony. In ſhort, he was never more embarraſſed than now: The Palatinates of Lublin and Beltz offered to take Arms, and raiſe new Regiments againſt him. The Crowm Army, his only Reſourſe, ſeemed unreſolved to that degree, as to give him Apprehenſions they might deliver him up to the Enemy; which made him never appear without a ſtrong Guard. However, he took a Review of this Army at Konigh, Auguſt 3d, and led them, with ſome Saxon Troops, near Wolpa, ſix or ſeven Leagues from Grodno; from whence he retired as ſoon as he received Advice of the King of Sweden's moving towards the Viſtula. This Prince laid two Bridges over the River, one at Bulavia, the other at Caſimir, and on the 24th came up to Radom: He ſoon left this Place, and went to Lencziza, to view Renſchold's Army, conſiſting of three thouſand Horſe, four thouſand ſix hundred Dragoons, and ſix thouſand Foot. And after having given this General his Orders, he returned to Radom, to put every thing in a Diſpoſition to execute the great Deſign he was now upon.

And now the Enemy began to appear again in the Provinces lately quitted by the Swedes: A Party of Coſſacks made an Irruption into Volhinia, where they plundered the Lord Chamberlain Lubomirski's Eſtate. As for the Czar, he drew what Force he could into the Palatinate of Kiovia, upon the Boriſthenes, from whence he threatned to enter Great Poland; but the Sieur Wental, a Captain of Horſe, being detached from Jariſlaw with two hundred Walachians, ſcoured the Country as far as Caminieck, and forced the Hoſpodar of Moldavia to put the Sieur Potoski Stranike into his Hands, promiſing withal not to afford any Shelter to the two Kings Enemies. A Party of Poles ſeized Chancellor Siuka a Confident of King Auguſtus, together with Mareſchal Denhoff, and Prebentowski's Ladies: And in Great Poland, Colonel Borckouski defeated ſix Companies of the Crown-Army, and made them Priſoners.

To proceed; the King of Sweden, leaving eight thouſand with General Meyerfeld for the Security of Great Poland, together with fifteen thouſand of the Troops of Potoski, Sapieha, and Lubomirski, marched his Army by Rawitz, September the 1ſt, and took the Route of Sileſia. He paſſed the Oder with Prince Sapieha and General Renſchold, and encamped the 6th with Part of his Horſe near Schonberg, a League from Gorlitz in Upper Luſatia. All theſe Forces made twenty four thouſand effective Men, and frightned the Country to that degree, that they quitted thir Houſes, and left their Furniture behind them; but 'twas not long before they returned, being now delivered from their Fears of ill Uſage, by the exact Diſcipline of the King of Sweden's Army.

Almoſt all the Towns on this ſide the Elbe opened their Gates to him, and ſent Commiſſioners to intreat his Protection; which was granted on Condition they kept their Houſes. There were now no Saxon Troops to be ſeen, excepting the two Regiments of Dragoons of Jourdan and Furſtemberg, which appeared near the Village Tepſel, a League from Gorlitz. Colonel Gortz, who commanded two hundred and fifty Swediſh Dragoons, and fifty Walachians, charged them ſo roughly, that ninety ſix fell upon the Spot, and thirty ſix were taken Priſoners, after he had killed Major-General Jordan with his own Hand. Upon this, having the Command of about a thouſand Horſe, he was ordered to march beyond the Elbe, and fight thoſe he ſhould meet with. He likewiſe received Orders at Naumburg to move farther, and puſh the Enemy till he had driven them all out of the Territories of Saxony. From thence advancing to Erford, he had Notice that between four and five thouſand Saxons moved toward Elmenau, whither this Officer followed them. He was no ſooner arrived there, but the Enemy ſcoured off to the neighbouring Forreſts: He purſued them through their Shelter, killing ſome Muſcovites, and making ſome Saxons and French Priſoners. General Schuylemberg who commanded them, ſeized ſeveral advantageous Poſts in the Forreſt of Turingerwald, cut down a great many Trees for a Barricade, and diſputed the Ground by Inches with the Swedes Dragoons, who puſhed him into the Wood of Travenwald: Here he made a Stand by Advantage of a narrow Defile, and by felling more Timber to ſtop the Way. Colonel Gortz, perceiving there was no forcing the Enemy here, left Major Adelberg to amuſe them, filing off himſelf another Way to take them in the Rear. The Saxons making their Advantage of this Intermiſſion, diſperſed themſelves, and got off in the Night, ſome with their General into Franconia, others towards Koborg and Barite, and moſt of them into the Forreſt of Bohemia. Three hundred and fifty French, leſs fortunate than the reſt, were met by Colonel Gortz: They defended themſelves like Deſperadoes a great while, till Captain Tornflycht ordering his Troops to diſmount, finiſhed their Defeat. Thus the Saxon Troops, excepting the Garriſon at Dreſden, quitted the Electorate of Saxony: And here their Abſence occaſioned a greater Repoſe, in regard the ſame Day they went off, a Truce of two Months and a half was publiſhed in the King of Sweden's Camp. This Prince having ſettled the Contributions with the Commiſſioners from the Towns and Country, printed a ſevere Regulation, for preventing the Diſorders which the Officers and Centinels might otherwiſe have fallen into. They were forbidden taking any thing, excepting Forrage, without paying for it, either in the Houſes where they quartered, or elſewhere. They were forbidden to make uſe of the Horſes of private Perſons, without paying the Hire. They were likewiſe reſtrained from chooſing their Quarter; from inſulting or maltreating thoſe who entertained them, from offering Violence to any Perſons; in Towns, Villages, or upon the Highway: Neither were they allowed to ſtop any Carriages upon the Road. In fine, they were ordered to take Care that no Fire happened by their Miſbehaviour, and to bring Certificates from their Hoſts, to prove they had obſerved every Part of the Diſcipline enjoined them.

The Irruption of the King of Sweden into Saxony, had carried the Conſternation farther than King Auguſtus's Subjects: All the Princes Confederate againſt France and Spain ſeemed very much alarm'd, and ſolicited ſtrongly to divert it. The Princes of Germany eſpecially, upon the firſt Noiſe of this Expedition, declared againſt it in a haughty Manner at the Dyet of Ratisbon: Here they threatned to pronounce the Swedes Enemies of the Empire, in caſe they carried the War into Saxony. The Emperor had preſſed the King of Sweden by his Envoy to explain his Intentions, and plainly dictated the menacing Reſolutions of the Dyet, his Imperial Majeſty being the main Spring of that Motion. But as ſoon as he received Advice of the King of Sweden's Progreſs in the Electorate, he concluded it was his Intereſt to make ſmooth Application to this Price: To this purpoſe he diſpatched Count Wratiſlaw to him, to excuſe what had paſſed at Ratisbon. The diſagreeable Part of the Proceedings there, was now charged upon ſome States of the Empire. As for his Imperial Majeſty, he promiſed his utmoſt Endeavour to finiſh the Reducing King Auguſtus. This Envoy Extraordinary had Audience October 13th. And after having acquitted himſelf of his Commiſſion, left the finiſhing the Affair to Count Zinzendorf, Envoy Ordinary; to Mr. Robinſon, and Mynheer Granenbourg, Envoys from England and Holland, now expected from Dantzick, and to M. Oberg, Envoy from Hanover. Theſe Men of Publick Character were to ſolicite a Peace, which ſome of their Maſters were ambitious to compaſs.

While theſe State Intrigues were carrying on, the Buſineſs in Poland had a new Appearance, and began to look favourably for King Auguſtus: For notwithſtanding Potoski, Palatine of Kiovia, nominated Great Crown General by King Staniſlaus, had defeated a Body of Tartars near Peterskow; notwithſtanding he had beaten two large Detachments advanced beyond the Viſtula; notwithſtanding this Succeſs, King Auguſtus made no Difficulty to paſs the River with a conſiderable Army: His March obliged the Confederate Poles and Lithuanians to join the Swedes at Caliſch. Here a Council of War being held, 'twas reſolved to venture a Battle, which, at the repeated Inſtan-Inſtances of the Poles, General Meyerfeld was forced to conſent to: For this purpoſe he detached ſix thouſand Horſe with Orders to paſs the River Boſna, to get Intelligence of the Force and Diſpoſition of King Auguſtus's Army, encamp'd about a League and a half from thence. This Detachment having executed their Orders, were called back by their General, who drew up all his Army in Battalia, as ſoon as he receiv'd Advice of Auguſtus's moving towards him. The main Body conſiſted of four Regiments of Swediſh Horſe, and two Regiments of Foot, one of them Swedes, belonging to Horn, and the others French and Swiſs, taken at Travenſtadt, and thrown into one Body under Colonel Gortz. The Right Wing, all of them Poles, were commanded by General Potoski, and the Left was made up of Lithuanians. All theſe Troops, who ſcarcely amounted to ten thouſand, had forty thouſand Muſcovites, Saxons, Coſſacks, Poles, and Tartars, to fight with: They were drawn up upon two Lines; Prince Menzicoff and the Muſcovites made their Right, and K. Auguſtus with his Saxons their Left. The Under Mareſchal of the Crown Army, with the Poles, were poſted in the Center. When the cuſtomary Signal was given, the Swedes charging firſt drove the Saxons above three Miles, and puſh'd them upon their ſecond Line; but King Staniſlaus's Poles and Lithuanians ran away after the firſt Diſcharge, and were purſued by the Enemy's Horſe, who at their coming back fell upon the Swedes Rear. Theſe laſt, though incloſed on all ſides, and broken into ſeveral ſmall Diviſions, defended themſelves a long time, and ſo did the Regiment of Gortz: But Night coming on, made them deſpair of ſupporting each other, or making their Way through ſo great a Force of the Enemy. However, they maintain'd the Fight with extraordinary Bravery, till perceiving themſelves over-borne with the Enemy's Numbers, they yielded to a Capitulation, and were forc'd to lay down their Arms Regiment by Regiment in the Place where they fought in ſeparate Bodies. General Meyerfeld had but two Battalions and ſixty Horſe with him. The French and Swiſs finding their Regiment was deny'd Quarter, took up their Arms again, and proteſted unleſs they had the ſame Conditions with the reſt, they would fight as long as they could feel themſelves alive: This Reſolution procur'd them the ſame Articles with the reſt. General Potoski behaving himſelf with his Cuſtomary Valour, was taken Priſoner at laſt, after he had maintain'd his Ground with great Vigour and Intrepidity. Major-General Graſſaw having rally'd the Horſe, to the Number of a Brigade, endeavour'd to break through the Enemy and join the Swediſh Foot; but miſcarrying in the Attempt, he retreated with five or ſix hundred Men to Poſnania.

The moſt remarkable Circumſtance in this Fight, where two thouſand five hundred Swedes were made Priſoners, was this, that King Auguſtus was forced to beat them when 'twas his Intereſt to let them alone; whereas 'twas his Fortune to be always defeated by them when his Averſion ran higheſt, and his Wiſhes were ſtrongeſt againſt them. This Myſtery will be explained, when the Reader is given to underſtand, that ſome few days before the Action, King Auguſtus had ratify'd the Ceſſation of Arms publiſh'd in Saxony; and over and above, made no Queſtion of a Peace being concluded between the King of Sweden and himſelf when he was forced to fight. M. Pfingſten, who brought the Articles of the Truce from Saxony, and the Draught of the Peace King Auguſtus was to ſign, had likewiſe a Letter from the King of Sweden to General Meyerfeld, to inform him of what had paſs'd, and to order him to forbear all Acts of Hoſtility: And here the Buſineſs being to conceal the two Treaties from the Muſcovites, 'twas impoſſible for Pfingſten to deliver the Letter himſelf to the Swediſh General; and thus it happen'd to miſcarry. In the mean time Menzikoff, who began to ſuſpect King Auguſtus's ſlow Motion, preſs'd him with great Warmth to advance upon the Swedes, whom he knew to be much ſhort in their Numbers: And here King Auguſtus had but five thouſand Saxons in the Army. This, conſidering the Juncture, was a dangerous Circumſtance; for if any Correſpondence between Auguſtus and the Swedes had been ſmoak'd, the Muſcovites and the reſt would in all likelihood have join'd and fallen upon him. Thus King Auguſtus was forced to come to, and follow whither the Muſcovites dragg'd him. All that he could do in this Extremity, was to ſend M. Pflug privately to General Meyerfeld to acquaint him with the Negotiation in Saxony, with the Situation of things at preſent, and with an Account of the Force of his own Army; conjuring him at the ſame time to countermarch with all ſpeed, and avoid a Battle, which in all likelihood would prove unfortunate. General Meyerfeld, not having receiv'd any Information from the King his Maſter concerning the Peace mention'd by Auguſtus, fancy'd this friendly Intelligence only a Snare laid for him. This Miſtake kept him in his Poſt, where the Over-forwardneſs of the Poles made him run the Hazard of a Battle; and here King Auguſtus behav'd himſelf with great Humanity, endeavour'd to keep his own Men from getting a Victory; and when that could not be prevented, did his utmoſt to preſerve the Swedes.

This Prince had been tir'd a great while ſince with the Inconſtancy of the Poles, and the Dependence the Muſcovites endeavour'd to keep him under: Theſe croſs Circumſtances diſpos'd him to put an end to the War, which had thrown him into ſuch Diſadvantage. The March of the Swedes Army into his Electorate gave him the laſt Uneaſineſs, and put him upon a Reſolve to diſengage himſelf. To this purpoſe he ſent a Drum with a Letter to the King of Sweden, acquainting his Swediſh Majeſty with his Inclination for a Peace, and the preſſing Motives which brought him to this Diſpoſition: He gave him farther to underſtand, that he was ready to ſend Baron Imhoff and M. Pfingſten with full Powers to manage the Negotiation. On the other ſide, the King of Sweden gave a Publick Character to Count Piper, his Chief Miniſter, and to Mr. Hermelin, Secretary of State, to enter upon a Treaty with the Saxon Plenipotentiaries. The firſt and the only Conference manag'd in Form began Sept. 2, at Biſcops Werden near Leipſick, under the Pretence of ſettling the Contributions. After a long Debate, the main Point was at laſt agreed, which was Auguſtus's quitting the Crown of Poland. The Matter likewiſe for the following Conference, was prepar'd, and the whole carry'd on with all the Secrecy imaginable. In ſhort, the Plenipotentiaries pretending to no more than ſettling the Contributions, met but ſeldom, ſtaid but a little while together, and took care to tranſact their Buſineſs by ſome Confidents, who paſſed backward and forward from each Party, to acquaint their Principals with the Difficulties and Conceſſions on either ſide. The Count Jablowski, Palatine of Ruſſia, and Prince Sapieha, Great Mareſchal of Lithuania, were King Staniſlaus's Plenipotentiaries, and ſent him an Account of every thing that paſs'd; but they never ſaw the Saxons during the whole Courſe of the Conferences; and after the ſigning of the Treaty, had no Perſonal Communication with them, excepting in a Garden on the Backſide of Leipſick. The Subſtance of the Articles of this Treaty is as follows;

I. There ſhall be a Peace between the moſt Serene and Mighty Prince Charles XII. King of Sweden, &c. his Ally the moſt Serene and Mighty Prince Staniſlaus I. King of Poland, &c. on the one part; and between the moſt Serene and Mighty Prince Frederick Auguſtus, King, Elector and Duke of Saxony, on the other.

II. All Damages done or ſuffer'd by the two Parties during the Courſe of the War, ſhall be entirely forgotten, and reputed as never done. It ſhall not be lawful for any Perſon to claim Satisfaction, or attempt Reparation, either by Force or Courſe of Law; and that no private Perſons ſhall commence a Suit upon the ſcore of any Forfeiture of Eſtates during the War; provided always, that this laſt Clauſe ſhall be no Prejudice to the Contents of the Sixth Article.

III. That in Conſideration of the preſent Peace, the moſt Serene and mighty Prince Frederick, Elector of Saxony, for ever relinquiſhes all his Right and Pretenſions to the Crown of Poland; and in Conſequence of this Renunciation, he recognizes the moſt Serene and mighty Prince Staniſlaus I. lawful Sovereign of Poland; upon Condition that the ſaid moſt Serene King, Elector of Saxony, ſhall during his Life retain the Title of a King, and receive the Honour due to a Crown'd Head; but ſtill without bearing the Arms, or taking the Title of King of Poland.

IV. The moſt Serene King and Elector promiſes, within ſix Weeks after the ſigning the preſent Treaty, to notify his Abdication to the States of the Republick of Poland, whom from this preſent time he diſcharges of their Oath of Allegiance ſworn to him; and over over and above, binds himſelf not to hold any Correſpondence, to afford any Shelter or Support to any Perſons of the Republick, who are either open or ſecret Enemies to King Staniſlaus.

V. He renounces all Alliances formerly made with Foreign Potentates againſt the King of Sweden and King of Poland, and particularly that Alliance made with the Czar of Muſcovy, to whom he engages not to afford any Aſſiſtances for the future; and likewiſe to recall the Saxons then in his Czariſh Majeſty's Service.

VI. All Judgments given in the Dyets, and in other Courts of Juſtice in Poland, ſince the 15th of February 1704; by vertue of which any Perſons are condemn'd, their Eſtates forfeited, their Offices taken from them, &c. ſhall from the preſent time be perfectly void and of none effect; but then with regard to Secular or Eccleſiaſtical Dignities conferr'd by the moſt Serene King, Elector of Saxony, it ſhall wholly depend upon the Pleaſure of the moſt Serene King of Poland, either to continue them, or beſtow them upon others.

VII. The Scepter and Crown of Poland, the reſt of the Regalia, with the Jewels, Papers and Publick Records, carry'd off into Saxony, ſhall be returned to the moſt Serene King of Poland, immediately after the Ratification of the preſent Treaty.

VIII. The moſt Serene Royal Princes, James and Conſtantine Sobieski, ſhall be releas'd and ſet at Liberty, after having engaged under their Hand-Writing not to take any Revenge for what they have ſuffer'd during the War and their Confinement. And on the other ſide, the moſt Serene King, Elector, promiſes under his Hand to pay the moſt Serene Prince James all Sums of Money due to him, and immediately proceed to ſettling the Accounts.

IX. All the Poles and Lithuanians carry'd out of Poland, and impriſon'd in Saxony or elſe-where, ſhall be ſet at Liberty. His Electoral Majeſty likewiſe engages to uſe his Intereſt with the Pope for procuring the Enlargement of the Biſhop of Poſnania.

X. All the Centinels and Officers, both Swedes and Saxons, made Priſoners during the War, and under Confinement by either Party, ſhall be ſet at Liberty without Ranſom; neither ſhall any of them be detain'd and forced to take Service.

XI. All Traytors and Deſerters, born Subjects to the King of Sweden, and reſiding in Saxony, ſhall be deliver'd to his Swediſh Majeſty, and particularly John Reinhold Patkull, who, until he is ſo deliver'd, ſhall be kept cloſe Priſoner.

XII. All the Muſcovite Soldiers now in Saxony, ſhall be put into the King of Sweden's Hands as his Priſoners.

XIII. All Colours, Standards, Kettle-Drums, Cannon, Mortars, and other Military Proviſions, Marks of Victory and Advantage, which have been taken from the Swedes, ſhall be look'd for and reſtor'd; neither ſhall it be lawful to retain any thing of this kind upon any Pretence whatſoever.

XIV. Colonel Gortz, taken into the Protection of his Swediſh Majeſty, and condemn'd to Capital Puniſhment, without being heard in his Defence, ſhall be diſcharg'd from the Sentence pronounc'd againſt him, and reſtor'd to his Quality and Condition.

XV. And in regard 'tis impracticable, conſidering the Diſtance of Place, that the preſent Treaty ſhould be quickly ratify'd and fortify'd with the Guaranty hereafter to be mention'd; it ſhall in the mean time be lawful for his Swediſh Majeſty to continue his Winter-Quarters with his Troops in the Electorate of Saxony, and during all that time to take Proviſions and Contributions from thence; and the Swediſh Troops now in Poland ſhall remain there without Diſturbance, till the Saxons ſhall quit that Country.

XVI. The Towns and Caſtles of Gracovia and Tykoczin ſhall be evacuated of the Saxon Troops at the ſame time, and put into the Hands of his Poliſh Majeſty's Commiſſioner, in the Condition they ſhall then be in, with all their Artillery and Ammunition.

XVII. The Towns and Citadels of Leipſick and Wittemberg, now garriſon'd by the Swedes, ſhall be evacuated, as ſoon as the Conditions of the preſent Treaty ſhall be perform'd; after which Term all the Swediſh Troops ſhall quit Saxony, at the day hereafter to be agreed on.

XVIII. From the day the preſent Treaty ſhall be concluded and ſign'd by the Plenipotentiaries, there ſhall be a Ceſſation of Arms between the Swedes and the Electorate of Saxony; which Truce ſhall extend to Poland and Lithuania, as ſoon as the News of the Treaty ſhall reach thither, which ſhall be conveyed within the Term of three Weeks.

XIX. 'Tis farther concluded between the moſt Serene King of Sweden, and the moſt Serene King the Elector, that they ſhall both concur to protect the Evangelical Religion in the Empire: And for the Security of this Religion in Saxony and Luſatia, the moſt Serene King Elector engages for himſelf and his Succeſſors, neither to bring in nor ſuffer any Alteration in that Point, nor to grant thoſe of the Roman Communion any Churches, Schools, Univerſities, Colleges, or Monaſteries, nor to allow them any Place for building of them.

XX. In caſe the preſent Treaty ſhould draw the Arms of the Czar of Muſcovy, or thoſe of any other Princes, upon the moſt Serene King, Elector of Saxony, that then the moſt Serene Kings of Poland and Sweden engage to aſſiſt him, and likewiſe to comprehend him in all future Treaties to be made with the Czar.

XXI. And to make this Treaty more firm and laſting, the moſt Serene King Elector engages to bring within ſix Months the moſt Serene and Mighty Emperor, the moſt Serene and Mighty Queen of Great Britain, (as the French Supplementer words it) and the High and Mighty States General, as Guarantees and farther Security: His Swediſh Majeſty reſerving himſelf the Liberty to bring what other Potentate he ſhall think convenient into the Guaranty aforeſaid.

XXII. The preſent Treaty ſhall be ratify'd within ſix Weeks, and one Copy of it drawn by his Swediſh Majeſty, another by his Poliſh Majeſty, and two others by his Electoral Majeſty; to be exchang'd immediately after the Ratification.

A Separate Article.

Notwithſtanding the moſt Serene King, Elector of Saxony, has promiſed to furniſh within ſix Months the Inſtruments of the Guaranty above-mentioned; yet in caſe he ſhall happen to be hinder'd for ſome Reaſons, ſo as not to produce one or two of the Inſtruments within the Time preſcrib'd; 'tis ſtill agreed and concluded, that the preſent Treaty ſhall have no leſs Force and Effect, and be carry'd on to the full Execution of the Articles.

As ſoon as this Treaty was ſign'd by the Commiſſioners, September the 24th, M. Pfingſten, one of the Saxon Plenipotentiaries, took Poſt to King Auguſtus, who ratify'd the whole without Scruple or Difficulty. Thus, at the Return of this Miniſter, the Exchange of the Ratification was made in Form, and the Peace proclaim'd in the King of Sweden's Camp, and at Leipſick and Dreſden, November the 24th.

All Europe was ſurpriz'd with the expeditious finiſhing this great Negotiation: The King of Sweden was much admir'd for his Diſintereſtedneſs in the Articles; for he did not demand an Inch of Ground for enlarging his Dominions, but ſatisfy'd himſelf with the bare Reputation of his Victory: And thus, by this Inſtance of Moderation, he appear'd more great in the Peace, than he had done in the War, in which he had been ſo very remarkable for his Courage and Succeſs.

This Prince having declar'd War againſt Muſcovy, after ſeveral Diſputes in the Field, loſt the Battle of Pultowa, July 8, 1709. In this Action he was wounded in the Foot, and loſt eight thouſand of his Men. The 11th of the ſame Month, General Lewenhaupt was forced to ſurrender the Remainder of the Swediſh Army, amounting to ſixteen thouſand, to Prince Menzikow the Czar's General. The ſame day the King of Sweden croſs'd the Boriſthenes, and finding himſelf purſu'd by a Muſcovite Detachment, he retir'd to Oczakow at the Mouth of the ſame River. 'Twas with great Difficulty he got hither, having no more than two or three hundred Swedes and three Companies of Walachians with him: And being forced to march through barren and deſart Countries, he came up to Bender, where he was well receiv'd by the Seraſkier. The Grand Seignior, when inform'd of his Arrival, ſent Orders for entertaining him in the beſt manner manner, and particularly to furniſh him with a Guard and all other Conveniences. The Sultan ſtrangled the Baſhaw of Oczakow, becauſe he delay'd two days the ſending Boats to the King of Sweden for paſſing the Boriſthenes. After he had paſſed this River, he was join'd with a ſmall Debris of his Army, to the Number of fifteen hundred Walachians, and eighteen hundred Swedes; amongſt which were three Generals, ſix Colonels, and a great many leſſer Officers. The Grand Seignior ſent forty thouſand Tartars for a Guard, till he arriv'd at a Place of Security. He continued at Bender till the beginning of the Year 1711, and contriv'd Meaſures for returning into his Dominions, and putting him in a Condition to fight the Enemy.

Having ſince receiv'd an authentick Account from a Pomeranian Gentleman, a Subject of the Crown of Sweden, and who follow'd his Swediſh Majeſty from Pultowa to Bender, I ſhall give the Reader a ſhort Narrative of what paſs'd there.

This Prince, after the Defeat at Pultowa, had a friendly Reception at Bender upon the Nieſter: Here he was treated at the Grand Seignior's Expence. After having ſtaid two Years at this Town, he removes to the Village of Warniza, about a Mile diſtant to the North: Here he receives Intelligence, that his Enemies had brib'd the Grand Vizir and the Cham of Tartary to deliver him up to the Muſcovites, who promis'd to reward their Treachery with two Millions of Dollars. Upon this Notice, he delays his Return home. The Grand Vizir, whether ſuſpecting the Conſequences of a Delay, or eager to get the Money of the Muſcovites, ſends his Majeſty Order to be gone; and not receiving a ſatisfactory Anſwer, ſends the Baſhaw of Bender to preſs his Deparure.

The King expoſtulates with the Baſhaw, and glances upon the Treachery concerted; at which this Turkiſh Miniſter ſeem'd ſomewhat alarm'd, and went off with an Air of Diſſatisfaction. About three days after, the Prime Vizir ſent Orders to Bender, that in caſe the King of Sweden refus'd to go off, they were to force him. His Majeſty giving them an unacceptable Anſwer, they threaten'd to throw him and his Tent into the Nieſter; but finding him brave and undiſmay'd, they outrag'd him no farther.

The King receiv'd Intelligence, that about twenty thouſand Janizaries and Spahi's, Part of which were his Guard, and paid by him, had Orders to attack him; but the Janizaries, being moſtly on the King's ſide, furniſh'd Advice and Ammunition.

This Friendſhip being diſcover'd by the Spahi's, diſcourag'd 'em from executing their Orders, eſpecially when they ſaw the Swedes prepar'd for a reſolute Defence.

The King finding his Correſpondence with the Grand Seignior had been interrupted by the Treachery of the Turkiſh Miniſtry, ſent ſeveral Expreſſes by different Ways to the Porte: Two of theſe arriving there, acquainted the Sultan with what had paſs'd: Upon which Diſcovery, ſeveral of the Miniſtry were executed, and an Ambaſſador with rich Preſents diſpatch'd to the King of Sweden.

This Ambaſſador brought a Letter from the Grand Seignior, written in Gold upon Parchment with his own Hand: 'Twas carry'd by the Envoy upon a Crimſon Velvet Cuſhion from Bender to the King's Houſe, under the Firing of the Cannon, and attended with great Ceremony by all the Quality at Bender.

The Ambaſſador at this Audience deliver'd a Bow and Arrow ſet with Jewels, worth a hundred thouſand Crowns, a Pair of Piſtols, and a broad Sword worth fifty thouſand Crowns; together with a fine Purſe of Gold; for which Favour, his Swediſh Majeſty return'd a ſuitable Preſent.

Not long after, the Grand Seignior ſent the King another Preſent of three hundred fine Arabian Horſes, worth two Millions of Dollars; but the Grand Vizir chang'd 'em and deliver'd poor ones. The King ſent farther Expreſſes to the Grand Seignior to acquaint him with this foul Play; upon which Notice, the Cham of Tartary and the Grand Vizir were puniſh'd.

And for farther Signs of Friendſhip, the Sultan ſends another Preſent, with a Command to the Cham of Tartary and the Baſhaw of Bender to obey the King of Sweden's Orders.

And now the Winter approaching, the King built him an Houſe where his Tent was fix'd; and here from the Balconies they ſounded to Prayers every Morning and Evening.

There were Houſes likewiſe built for his Officers and Centinels.

Notwithſtanding the Harmony between the Sultan and his Swediſh Majeſty, his Affairs were much embarraſs'd by the Grand Vizir, the Mufti, and ſeveral others of the Miniſtry, brib'd by the Poles and Muſcovites; inſomuch that not only his Swediſh Majeſty ran the utmoſt Riſque, but the Grand Seignior himſelf was in Danger of being deſtroyed.

The King receiving Advice from the Walachians, that in caſe he ſet forward for Pomerania, he would certainly be ſeiz'd, defers his Journey.

The Cham of Tartary, thus diſappointed, enters upon a new Practice with the Grand Vizir, gets the Paſſages by Sea and Land way-laid and ſtopt; ſo that all Intercourſe between the Sultan and his Swediſh Majeſty was wholly impracticable.

The Vizir likewiſe had ſo far miſreported Matters to his Maſter, that the Muſcovite Ambaſſador was enlarg'd from the Seven Towers, and the Swediſh Envoy and his Retinue confin'd in that Place.

And now the Storm began to gather and look black at Bender; for upon the 11th of January, O. S. 1713, the Cham of Tartary ſent thirty thouſand Tartars, commanded by his eldeſt Son, into the Village Warniza. However, his Swediſh Majeſty getting Intelligence of his March ſome time before, order'd all his Troops to come to his Head-Quarters; which was done accordingly: And here foreſeeing their Danger, they had furniſh'd themſelves with Proviſion for ſix Weeks.

On the 28th of January, a ſmall Party of Swedes ſent out to forage, were attack'd by ſix thouſand Tartars, hoping to find the King one of the Number; but his Majeſty being at his Houſe, ſent out Succours and diſengag'd his Party.

Two days after, the Tartars drew out into the Field, march'd to the King's Head-Quarters, which they ſurrounded, and ſtood under their Arms a whole day; during which time, the Baſhaw of Bender ſent a Field-Mareſchal to propoſe an Accommodation; which the King, knowing their Perfidiouſneſs, refus'd.

The next Day, January 31, the whole Body of the Tartars, join'd with ſeveral thouſand Spahi's and Janizaries, march'd up to the Swedes Trenches, and menac'd his Majeſty with an Attack; but the Weather happening to change ſuddenly from cold to warm, and three Rainbows appearing over his Majeſty's Room, the Turks interpreted this to an ill Omen, were ſeiz'd with a Panick, and dropt their Attack: However, before they went off, they fir'd twenty ſeven Cannon at the Royal Houſe, which did little Execution.

When the Enemy was retir'd, the Swedes went to their Devotion, and gave Thanks for their Deliverance.

To proceed; on February the 1ſt, the Tartars and Turks advanced from Bender and the neighbouring Towns with a numerous Army, and threaten'd the Swedes with Extremities in caſe they refus'd to ſurrender: They were likewiſe provided with a great Train of Artillery and Ammunition.

The Enemy's Preparation being thus formidable, and ſome Deſerters aſſuring the King that in caſe he ſurrender'd to the Janizaries, himſelf and his Men would certainly be preſerv'd. Matters ſtanding thus, the Swediſh Officers and Clergy addreſs'd his Majeſty, and adviſed a Surrender. But the King ſhewing 'em Letters which diſcover'd Treachery, and that there was no truſting the Infidels, they reſolv'd to ſtand upon their Defence.

However, they were not all equally firm and reſolute, for ſeveral Courtiers and Officers left their Prince and went over to the Turks.

And now the King order'd his Men to kill moſt of their Horſes for want of Forage: And an Aſſault being immediately expected, the Trenches were every where guarded by the Officers at their reſpective Poſts.

The Day above-mention'd, about Noon, all the Turks and Tartars attack'd the Swedes with great Fury Sword in Hand; and here moſt of the King's Troops in the Trenches were made Priſoners.

During the Action, his Swediſh Majeſty rode about to encourage his Men, till at laſt, wanting Ground to move mounted, he was forced to quit his Horſe. His Majeſty, thus hard preſs'd, drove furiouſly forward, diſpatch'd three Turks with his Sword at one Charge, and kill'd thirty of 'em in making his way to his Apartment. And having thus cut his Paſſage through the Enemy, he drew up his Men in ſeveral Rooms.

There were about eighty Swedes in a Houſe by the Nieſter, which had been his Majeſty's Chancery.

This and the Royal Houſe were attack'd by the Turks and Tartars, who were repuls'd at both Places without the Loſs of ſo much as one Swede.

His Swediſh Majeſty conceiving it beſt to have all his little Force together, order'd his Men in the Chancery to march out and join him in the Royal Houſe.

This Order being executed, and the Men poſted as occaſion requir'd, his Majeſty, Sword in Hand, mov'd from Room to Room to encourage his Men, who made a reſolute Defence, and kill'd great Numbers of the Enemy. However, the Infidels preſuming on their Numbers, made a ſecond and third Attack, threw in Bombs and Grenadoes, and made a great Fire with their Cannon; but for want of Skill in charging and levelling their Artillery, they did little Damage: And here the King, according to his Manner, ridicul'd 'em for a Parcel of blundering Blockheads. "They have Villany in abundance, "ſays he, but without any Brains to it: Theſe clumſy "Wretches don't know how to charge a Cannon, nor give "it Force enough to ſhoot through a ſlender Brick-Wall. "Are we to put ourſelves into the Hands of ſuch inſig-"nificant Things as theſe? No, let us behave like brave "Men, and theſe Poltroons will eaſily be baffled.

After this, the Enemy made a fourth Attack, in which ſome Swedes were kill'd and many wounded. However, not being able to carry their Point, and tir'd with the Reſolution of the Swedes, they only diſcharg'd their Cannon.

The Length of the Action, the vaſt Superiority of the Enemy, who were at leaſt fifty to one, having worne out the Swedes and made 'em faint, 'twas thought neceſſary to give 'em ſome Refreſhment: And here his Majeſty opening a Caſk of Brandy, and having nothing to drink in, took a Drawer out of a Cabinet, and gave every one ſome himſelf.

When his Men were thus recruited and prepar'd for executing Orders, he made a ſhort Speech to 'em at the Cloſe of the Day.

"Dear Children, (ſays he) ſtand upon your Guard, "we will hold it out to Night, and To-morrow it may "pleaſe God the Enemy will offer us reaſonable Terms, "and then we ſhall go off honourably.

They anſwer'd one and all, that whatever his Majeſty's Pleaſure was, they were willing to obey it with the greateſt Satisfaction.

The Turks having been ſo often baffled in their Aſſaults, got a great deal of combuſtible Matter together, and ſet Fire to the Top of the Houſe, which burn'd down to the lower Rooms. The Swedes did their utmoſt to prevent it.

Notwithſtanding this farther Misfortune, his Majeſty ſtood firm, and harangu'd his Men with an Air of Reſolution.

"Dear Children, (ſays he) we'll neither ſurrender "ourſelves to theſe Villains, nor be taken by 'em; to "be burnt alive is far better, for then our Misfortunes "will end at once, and we ſhall go honourably into the "other World.

Their Anſwer was, We are all ready to execute your Majeſty's Pleaſure: And here ſome of 'em propos'd to his Majeſty, tho' with the humbleſt Submiſſion, that they thought it more eligible to get immediately out at the Windows and put themſelves in Order, that when the Enemy advanced, they might firſt fire upon 'em, and then defend themſelves with their Swords till they were all cut to Pieces; that falling thus reſolutely by their Prince's Side, would be a glorious way of loſing their Lives, and tranſmit their Memories with Honour to Poſterity.

His Majeſty, being tranſported with ſuch a Motion, clapt his Men on the Shoulder, and told 'em, 'twas nobly reſolv'd. "Come, dear Children, (ſays he) let's re-"move the Barricade, throw open the Door, ruſh out "with a Fury, and get immediately into Order:

This Order being executed with the greateſt Diſpatch and Martial Dexterity, the Turks preſently advanced upon 'em; but were ſo warmly receiv'd by the Swedes Carabines, that after a ſhort Onſet they fell ſome Spaces backward.

And now his Majeſty thought it adviſable to make the beſt of his way to his Chancery, which was not ſet on Fire; but being tir'd with commanding all day, and entangled with his Spur, he happen'd to fall down.

The Turks perceiving their Advantage, fell in, ſeiz'd his Majeſty, and pouring in great Numbers, made all his Men Priſoners, and brought 'em about Midnight to Bender.

The King was handſomely lodg'd at the Baſhaw's Houſe, where this Turkiſh Governor coming to his Majeſty, fell upon his Knees, and aſk'd his Pardon with the greateſt Submiſſion.

He endeavour'd to excuſe himſelf for what had happen'd, by alledging the Order of his Superiors; that the Grand Vizir and Cham of Tartary had put him upon this unacceptable Service; that being under their Command, he was forc'd to obey, and therefore begg'd his Majeſty would not charge him with the Treatment he had receiv'd.

The King, with an Air of Contempt, told him, that they were all wicked Wretches and Traytors alike; and notwithſtanding he was the Baſhaw's Priſoner, and in his Power, he ſcorn'd to diſſemble his Reſentment, and was not to be ſoften'd by any ſmooth Applications. In this deſperate Action, where the King diſtinguiſh'd himſelf with the utmoſt Bravery, all the Hurt he receiv'd was only a Scratch on his Noſe.

After his Majeſty had been Priſoner five days at Bender, he was conveyed away under a ſtrong Guard Feb. 6, O. S. and ſome days paſs'd before the Swedes knew whither the Turks intended to carry 'em; but now a Providential Turn happen'd for their Deliverance.

About half way from Bender to Conſtantinople, there's a By-way which leads to the White-Sea: Hither the Turks were order'd to march with his Majeſty, to convey him over the White-Sea into Aſia. Before the Guard ſtruck into this Road, they were met by a Capuchi Baſhaw, diſpatched thither by the Grand Seignior.

This Officer enquiring who that Company were, they told him that the King of Sweden was there: Upon which he preſently inform'd himſelf of his Majeſty's Uſage at Bender, and how they were now going to diſpoſe of him.

This Relation gave him the utmoſt Surprize: He declar'd the Grand Seignior knew nothing of the Matter; that the Grand Vizir had inform'd his Maſter the King of Sweden voluntarily quitted Bender, and deſign'd to go by Sea to France. Now there being two Places where his Majeſty might embarque, and his Choice being uncertain, the Sultan ſent two Capuchi Baſhaws, by two different Routes, to wiſh him a good Voyage, and to thank his Majeſty for having done him the Honour of coming into his Territories, and repoſing ſuch Confidence in him.

This Baſhaw having expreſs'd a ſtrong Diſlike of the Barbarities at Bender, and that the Sultan knew nothing of it, return'd to Conſtantinople for freſh Orders, leaving his own Men to attend his Swediſh Majeſty. The King having ſtaid ſome time at the Place above-mention'd, had a conſiderable Body of the Spahi's ſent to attend him, who, according to Orders, conveyed his Majeſty to Adrianople.

When the Grand Seignior was inform'd of the Practice againſt the King of Sweden at Bender, he was highly diſpleaſed at the Conduct of his Miniſtry: The Prime Vizir was ſtrangled, the Cham of Tartary confined; and had it not been for his Swediſh Majeſty's Interceſſion, the Baſhaw of Bender had met with the Bow-ſtring.

After his Majeſty had been ſome Weeks at Adrianople, the Grand Seignior took a Journey thither, expecting a Viſit from him; but the King falling ſick on a ſudden, the Interview miſcarry'd, and the Sultan return'd to Conſtantinople.

As for his Swediſh Majeſty, he ſet forward with only ſeven Gentlemen, and travelling two hundred and eighty German Leagues in fifteen days, arrived at Stralſund in Pomerania November 22, 1714.

This Prince, to give a ſhort Deſcription of his Perſon, is tall and ſlender, of a fair Complexion, blue Eyes, and brown Hair: His Air is noble and recommending, his Conſtitution ſtrong, and able to endure all

all the Fatignes of a Military Life. His Mind, though lively and penetrating, is by no means rambling and unresolv'd, but rests upon a solid Thought, and goes a great way in Reflexion: He talks not much, but much to the Purpose, and frequently with great Force and Persuasion. His Manner is condescensive and engaging, his Humour agreeable, and that even to Pleasantry among his Domesticks. He always shews a great Esteem for Merit, and encourages Bravery with distinguishing Rewards, even to his Enemies.

This long Article, (excepting the Narrative of what passed at Bender, &c.) as the Dutch Editor observes, is taken Word for Word from the Paris Supplement; but the Author seems to have forgotten, that when the King of Sweden was in Saxony, he obliged the Emperor to return the Protestants in Silesia the Privileges taken from them. His Swedish Majesty quitted Bender, and came to Demir-Tocka; but whether willingly, or forced by the Turks, is somewhat uncertain. In 1714, he left Turky, travell'd through Hungary and all Germany incognito, and arrived at Stralsund in Pomerania November the twenty second, 1714. This Town, and the rest of his Dominions in Germany, were afterwards lost, the Muscovite, Danish, and Prussian Forces, proving successful against him: But 'tis now time to break off the Narrative of this Prince's Fortune, and dismiss the Article. * Memoires Historiques, &c.

* CHARLES VI. King of France. For Charles I.'s Misfortunes in Morery Vol. I. read Charles VI.'s Misfortunes. For King Edward, who had married Katharine of France, read King Henry.

CHARON, a Greek Historian, Son of Pitocles, was born at Lampsacum upon the Hellespont. He wrote a History of Æthiopia, another of Greece, in three Books; that of Lybia in two; four Historical Books of the Frontiers belonging to the Territory of Lampsacum; a Chronicle of the Kings of Lacedæmon; the Original of Towns in two Books; the History of Crete in three, in which he makes a Recital of Minos's Laws, and a Voyage beyond Hercules's Pillars. * Suidas.

CHARPENTIER, (Francis) Dean of the French Academy, was born at Paris in February 1620. The Discovery of a lively Genius made his Friends design him for the Bar: But notwithstanding his Qualifications for this Profession, his Inclination carried him another way. He preferr'd the Repose of the Closet to a noisy and tumultuous Life; and the Study of Languages and Antiquity was more his Fancy than that of the Law. He was made a Member of the French Academy in 1651, and had the Advantage of the best Conversation for Improvement. When Monsieur Colbert was made Minister of State, he projected the setting up a French East-India Company; and to recommend the Design more effectually, he thought it proper a Discourse should be published upon this Subject. He was so much satisfy'd with Monsr. Charpentier's Performance upon this Head, that he entertained him in his Family, with a Design to place him in another Academy, then upon the Stocks, and afterwards known by the Name of the Academy for Inscriptions and Medals. This Minister, now Surveyor of the Royal Buildings, believed he could not acquit himself handsomely in his Post, unless he made it his Business to carry Architecture to the last Improvement; for, as he used to say, a Person in that Office ought to contrive farther than laying one Stone upon another. For this Purpose he had a Meeting at his House of several Persons of Learning on set Days: These he consulted in drawing the Model of Publick Buildings. Thus he laboured to assist Mechanick Skill, with Geometry and Learning, and give Strength and Beauty to the Structure. Learned Languages, in which M. Charpentier was a considerable Master, his great Knowledge in Antiquity, and the Exactness of his Judgment, made him very serviceable in carrying on the Business of this new Academy. And to do him Justice, no Person of that Learned Society contributed more than himself towards that noble Series of Medals, which were struck with the most considerable Events happening in the Reign of Lewis XIV. M. Charpentier published several Works which were well received: His first Performance was Socrates's Life, to which was added the memorable things spoken and done by this Philosopher, translated from Xenophon. About eight Years forward, in 1658; he printed a French Version of the Cyropædia, A Discourse of a true Subject, touching the setting up a French East India Company, addressed to all Frenchmen, in 1664: And a Relation of this new Erection, dedicated to the French King in 1665. The Share he had in a famous Dispute, whether 'twas proper to have Publick and Monumental Inscriptions in Latin and French, put him upon publishing a Tract in 1676, entituled, La Defense de la Langue Françoise pour l'Inscription de l'Arc de Triomphe; or, A Defence of the Propriety of the French Language, to make an Inscription for a Triumphal Arch, entituled, De l'Excellence de la Langue Françoise; or, The Excellency of the French Language. His Harangues and Discourses delivered before the Academy, or in the Meetings above mentioned, or when he was pitched on to make a Speech to the King, are extant in the Collections of the Academy. There are likewise several Poems, in Odes, Sonnets, and Paraphrases upon the Psalms, in Print. As to the Character of his Works, it may be said in general, that Wit and Art, Strength and Learning, are every where visible and shining in them. There the Reader may meet with some of the highest Flights of Elocution, and which resemble the Gust of the best Antiquity. 'Tis plain by his Writings, that he had copied from the best Originals, and built by the most beautiful Models. He died very piously April 22, 1702, being eighty two Years of Age. * Journal des Savans de 1702. XXXII. Journal. Pellisson, Histoire de l'Academie.

CHARTREUSE, La Grande Chartreuse. 'Tis a famous French Monastery in Dauphiné, three Leagues from Grenoble to the North; it stands at the Top of a great Mountain, where it sinks into a Valley a League in Length, and half a Mile in Breadth: There is no coming at it but by one Passage shut up with a Gate, near which there is a House built for the Religious Servants, and Houses for the Cows, which the Carthusians maintain in their Valley. The Convent stands farther inward; 'tis well built, and very large, having Appartments not only for their own numerous Society, but likewise for the Proxies of other Carthusian Houses who meet there every Year. This Convent is the Head of its Order. The General of the Carthusians lives here; he is called Prior of the Carthusians, and is elected only by the Monks of this Convent. To conclude, if Fame may be believed, La Grande Chartreuse has immense Treasure in it.

CHASTEAU-DAUPHIN, a strong Castle in France in the Province of Dauphiné. It stands within the Alps, in a Valley of the same Name, between Embrun and Salusses, ten Leagues from the first, and seven from the latter.

CHASTEL, (John) was Son to a Woollen-Draper in Paris. This John, when but nineteen Years old, attempted the Assassinating King Henry IV. of France. This Prince coming to Paris the 24th of December 1594, and being in an Apartment of Hôtel du Bouchage, and stepping forward to salute Montigny, Chastel struck him upon the Under-Lip with a Knife, and broke one of his Teeth. Upon this, he slipt back into the Crowd, where being discovered by his disordered Countenance, he was immediately seized. 'Twas a melancholy young Fellow; who being questioned about the Fact, confessed himself pushed upon the execrable Attempt by his being conscious of a scandalous and wicked Life; that he despaired of Forgiveness, and that it was impossible for him to escape going to Hell. However, he hoped to make his Damnation more tolerable by executing his Enterprize. This he believed a meritorious Action, because the King not being reconciled to the Church, he was to be look'd on as no better than a Tyrant. He confessed farther, he had gone through a Course of Study in the College of Clermont under the Jesuites, and that they had often brought him into their Chamber of Meditations, where Hell was represented in a great many frightful Figures. This Deposition, together with the seditious Libels against Henry III. and Henry IV. were found in John Guignard's Chamber, and written by this Jesuite. This Discovery, with a Recollection of the disloyal Zeal some of the Fathers of this Society had shown for the Spanish Interest, together with some dangerous Maxims their Preachers had delivered against the Security of Princes, and contrary to the ancient Laws of France, and by the Opinion then received, that the Jesuites, by their College Instructions, and Auricular Confessions, made themselves Masters of the Understanding and Passions of young People, and by injecting false Doctrine, and Terror, could bend bend them to what Practice they pleaſed. Theſe Conſiderations made the Parliament of Paris bring the whole Society under Cenſure and Penalty. Thus by an Arreſt or Decree, paſſed upon the 19th of December; and publiſhed with lighted Torches, John Chaſtel was condemned to the uſual Puniſhment for ſuch horrible Crimes. And 'twas farther ordered by the ſame Decree, That the Prieſts and Scholars of the College of Clermont, and all others calling themſelves Members of the Society of Jeſus, as being thoſe who debauched young People in their Principles, were Diſturbers of the Publick Repoſe, and Enemies to the King and the Publick, ſhould quit their Houſe and College within three Days, and the Kingdom within a Fortnight; and that their Goods and Eſtates ſhould be employ'd for pious Uſes, at the Diſpoſal of the Parliament. * Mezeray, Abregé Chronologique au Regne de Henry IV.

CHASTELAIN, (Martin) born at Warwich, a ſmall Town in Flanders: He was born blind, and yet did a great many ſurprizing things. He made the Inſtruments for his own Buſineſs; he made Organs, Spinnets, Viols, Violins, and play'd tolerably well on them. He was one time ask'd, what he deſir'd moſt to ſee? He reply'd, Colours; for, ſays he, I underſtand almoſt every thing elſe by touching. When they asked him farther, whether he had not rather ſee Heaven? No, ſays he, I had rather touch it. * Furetieriana, pag. 265.

CHASTELAINE, or Caſtelaine, a Precinct, or the Diviſions of the Country in Flanders, each of which bears the Name of the Capital Town. In Poland, Caſtelanies are narrow Governments, depending upon the Caſtelain of a Town: They are under the Juriſdiction of the Palatines, whoſe Governments are of greater Extent, and take in ſeveral Caſtelanies. * Maty, Diction.

CHASUBLE, Part of a Sacerdotal Habit, which the Prieſt puts on over his Alb when he's going to ſay Maſs. Walafridus Strabo obſerves, that in the Primitive Times they uſed to officiate in a common Habit; but Cardinal Bona expreſſes himſelf with ſome Warmth againſt Nicolas Allemannus, for aſſerting the Apoſtles did not make uſe of any Officiating Veſtments diſtinct from what they wore at other times. However, ſeveral Authors are of Opinion, that Divine Service was performed without any diſtinguiſhing Dreſs, and that the Cloaths in which they adminiſtred the Sacraments, were the ſame which they wore at other Times; excepting that they made uſe of the beſt they had upon ſuch Solemn Occaſions. * Bona de Rebus Liturgicis. The Preface to the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the Jews by Simonville.

CHAZELLES, (John Mathew de) born at Lyons July 24, 1657. His Family was conſiderable in Trade: He had his firſt Education in the great College of the Jeſuites at Lyons, from whence he removed to Paris in 1675. He firſt made an Acquaintance with Mr. Du Hamel, Sacretary to the Academy of Sciences; who obſerving his Genius lay ſtrongly for Aſtronomy, preſented him to M. Caſſini, who took him with him to the Obſervatoire. Chazelles went to the Bottom of this Science, and work'd under M. Caſſini upon the great Map, now laid upon the Weſtern Tower of the Obſervatoire, and ſeven and twenty Foot in Diameter: 'Tis made in the Form of a Planiſphere, upon the Obſervations the Academy had made by the King's Order upon ſeveral Parts of the Earth; and, which is moſt remarkable, 'twas in ſome ſort a Prophetick Performance. It contained ſome Corrections of M. Caſſini upon the Terreſtrial Globe: Theſe were Conjectures of great Uſe, and afterwards made good by undeniable Experiments. In 1683, the Academy carried on the great Work of the Meridian to the North and South, begun in 1670. And M. Caſſini, who had the Northern Quarter aſſigned him, took in the Aſſiſtance of M. Chazelles. In 1684, the Duke of Mortemar made uſe of Chazelles to teach him Mathematicks; and the next Year procured him the Preferment of Hydrography Profeſſor for the Galleys at Marſeilles. The Reputation he had gained in the reſpective Buſineſs, encouraged him to undertake the Care of a new School for young Pilots deſigned to ſerve on Board the Galleys: This Place for Marine Education has all along furniſhed a great Number of good Seamen. In the Year 1686, the Galleys made four little Campagnes, or rather four Courſes purely for Exerciſe. M. de Chazelles went on board every time with them, and kept his School upon the Sea: Here he ſhew'd the Practice of what he had taught. He likewiſe made a great many Geometrical and Aſtronomical Obſervations, by Vertue of which he drew a new Map of the Coaſt of Provence. In 1687 and 1688, he made two other longer and more conſiderable Sea-Campagnes. This helped him to draw a great many Plans of Ports and Roads where he arrived, and of the Towns and Forts within his View. Theſe Plans were more than bare Curioſities; for being lodged with the Miniſters of State, they ſerved for a Ground to very ſignificant Enquiries. Experience, the ſovereign Miſtreſs of Arts, has divided the Sea amongſt two ſeveral Sorts of Shipping: The Ocean falls to the Share of long Ships, and the Mediterranean ſeems made for Galleys. As for the Galleys, they are made too flat for the high Waves of the Ocean. And as for the long Ships or Men of War, they can do nothing upon the Water without Wind. At the Beginning of the War, which ended at the Peace at Ryſwick, ſome Marine Officers, and M. Chazelles with the reſt, fancied the Galleys might be ſo contrived as to live upon the Ocean, that they might ſerve to tow the Men of War when the Wind failed, or proved contrary; that in fine, they might make them independent of the Wind, and by conſequence give them a more commanding Motion than thoſe of the Enemy. Thus they might likewiſe help to ſecure the Coaſt of France upon the Ocean. M. Chazelles was ſent into the Weſtern Coaſts of France in July 1689, to examine the Practicableneſs of the Scheme above mentioned; and in 1690, fifteen Galleys new built ſet ſail from Rochefort, and afforded a Sight perfectly new upon the Ocean: They cruized as far as Torbay in England, and proved ſerviceable at the Deſcent upon Tinmouth. Here Chazelles performed the Functions of an Engineer, very different from thoſe of an Hydrography Profeſſor. Notwithſtanding he had no Military Education, he ſhew'd as much Courage as if he had been bred a Soldier. The General Officers he ſerved under declared, that when they ſent him to take a View of any Poſt of the Enemy, they could rely entirely upon his Intelligence. The Galleys, after their Expedition, came to the Mouth of the Seine, into the Baſins of Havre de Grace and Honfleur; but here they could not winter, becauſe 'twas neceſſary to make theſe Baſins dry ſeveral times, to prevent the ſtagnating and Stench of the Water. Chazelles propoſed the carrying the Galleys up to Rohan; but here the Pilots were all againſt him, and objected unconquerable Difficulties: However, he ſtood ſingle, and maintained the Practicableneſs of the Matter. His Reputation was ſuch, that the Hazard was ventured, and the Project had full Succeſs. Thus the Galleys wintered at Rohan; and here he that brought them hither was to preſerve them from the Inconveniences likely to happen to ſo untried a Condition. To prevent Accidents therefore, he contrived a new ſort of Mooring, and made a little Peer of Stakes, which ſecured the Galleys from the Ice, which might otherwiſe have done Damage; and all this at a ſmall Charge, which upon any other Contrivance would have been very conſiderable. While he was at Rohan, he put his Obſervations in order, which he had made upon the Coaſts of the Ocean; and here he made eight diſtinct Maps, with a Portulan to them, that is, a large Deſcription of every Haven, how to go into it, of the Depth, the Tides, the Dangers, the Diſcoveries, &c. M. Chazelles's new Maps were inſerted in the Neptune Françoiſe, publiſhed in 1692. This Year he was Engineer at the Deſcent at Oneille. In 1693, M. de Pontchartrain, then Secretary of State for the Marine, and afterwards Chancellor of France, reſolved to get the Neptune Françoiſe carried on to a ſecond Volume, and which was to take in the Mediterranean. M. de Chazelles deſired he might have a Year's Voyage in this Sea for making Aſtronomical Obſervations. This Requeſt being granted, he paſſed by Greece, Egypt, and the other Parts of Turky, with his Quadrant and Teleſcope in his Hand. This Voyage gave a new and conſiderable Proſpect in Aſtronomy. To give this Science its laſt Improvement, 'tis neceſſary to collect the Obſervations of the Aſtronomers of former Ages; and to this Purpoſe, the Longitude and Latitude of Places muſt be exactly known. And here the Doctrine of the Ancients is not entirely to be relied on, becauſe the Inſtruments they work'd by, were not ſo exact as thoſe of the Moderns. The Aſtronomers big enough to be taken Notice of in this Enquiry, were Hipparchus, Ptolomy, and Tychobrahe. The two firſt lived at

Alexan-

Alexandria in Egypt, and made that the Place for Obſervation. Tychobrahe lived in the Iſland Huena in the Baltick, where he built the famous Obſervatoire, which he called Uranibourg. The Academy of Sciences, at its firſt Erection, deſigned to ſend Aſtronomers to Alexandria and Uranibourg, to examine the Performances of the three great Men above mentioned. But the Voyage to Alexandria being clogged with Inconveniences, they ſatisfied themſelves with ſending to Uranibourg, which Voyage was undertaken by M. Picard in 1671. He drew a Meridian of the Place, and was much ſurprized to find it ſo different from that fix'd by Tychobrahe; and which he concluded was not done without the niceſt Care; it being neceſſary to have a ſtated Point, to which all the reſt of his Obſervations ought to be referred. This would make one believe that the Meridians changed, that is, that the Earth did not turn always upon the ſame Poles; for if any other Point of the Terreſtrial Globe ſhould be the Pole, all the Meridians which were to paſs through this new Point muſt of neceſſity change their Poſition. From hence 'tis ſufficiently evident, how neceſſary 'tis for Aſtronomers to be well aſſured of the Variations and Variableneſs of the Poles and Meridians. When M. de Chazelles was in Egypt, he meaſured the Pyramids, and found that the four Sides of the biggeſt lay preciſely againſt the four Quarters of the World. Now this exact Poſition to Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, being in all Probability deſigned above three thouſand Years ſince by thoſe who built this vaſt Structure; it follows from hence, that during ſo long an Interval, there has been no Alteration in the Situation of the Heavens; or which comes to the ſame thing, the Poles of the Earth and Meridians have all along continued the ſame. Now, could one have imagined that ſo great an Aſtronomer as Tychobrahe ſhould have miſcarried in his Meridian, and that the old Egyptians, ſo little improved this way, ſhould have been exact in drawing theirs? The Invariableneſs of the Meridians have been farther confirmed by that drawn by M. Caſſini in the Church of S. Petrone at Bologne in 1655. M. de Chazelles likewiſe made a Report of his Voyage in the Levant, and gave the Academy all the Satisfaction they deſired concerning the Poſition of Alexandria. Upon this, M. Pontchartrain made him a Member of the Academy in 1695. To paſs over a great many of his Performances in Study and Action; in 1702, he propoſed the Practicableneſs of making the Galleys lie dry in all the Ports where there was Tide enough to bring them in. By this means he made them three times oftner ſerviceable than otherwiſe they could have been. His Project was tried upon two Galleys at Ambleteuſe, where they ſtood run a-ground a Fortnight without the leaſt Inconvenience: And beſides, by his Inſtructions they were this way careened with much more Eaſe and Advantage. To conclude, he died in January 1710. And beſides his great Genius and Attainments, was a very religious Perſon. * Fontenelle, Hiſtoire de l'Academie des Sciences de 1710.

CHEBRECHIN, or Sczebreczin, a Town in Poland within the Juriſdiction of Zamoſch, in the Palatinate of Belz. 'Tis the moſt conſiderable next the Capital, and ſtands towards the Bottom of the Hill, planted with Orchards to the Right and Left, and drawn like a Curtain upon a large Moraſs. The Jews in this Town are very wealthy. All the Orchards in the Neighbourhood are well ſtock'd with Bee-hives, which makes a conſiderable Branch of Trade; this Canton furniſhing more Wax than any other in Poland. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

CHEFFOUNTAINES, (Chriſtopher) a Cordelier, born in Bretagne, and made General of his Order in 1571. He was afterwards, in the Year 1586, conſecrated Archbiſhop of Cæſarea, to perform the Epiſcopal Functions in the Dioceſe of Sens, in the room of Cardinal de Pellevé, only Titular Archbiſhop. Cheffountaines died at Sens in 1590. He wrote ſeveral Controverſial Pieces, and particularly a curious Tract entituled, La Correction de la Theologie Scholaſtique; or, A Correction of School-Divinity: But here he handles only one Queſtion upon the Words of Conſecration; where he aſſerts the Words, This is my Body, This is my Blood, don't effect the Conſecration in the Holy Euchariſt. * M. Du Pin's New Eccleſiaſtical Library, Cent. XVI.

CHELIDONES, in Latin Chelidoniæ Inſulæ. They are three little Iſlands upon the Coaſt of Natolia, at the Head of the Gulph Satalia, near the Weſtern Cape, which makes this Gulph. * Baudrand.

CHELIDONIUS, or Celidonius, a Biſhop depoſed by S. Hilary of Arles, in a Council held there, and where S. Germanus aſſiſted in the Year 444. He was charged with ſitting on the Bench before his Ordination at a Trial for Life and Death; where 'twas farther alledged, that the Canons barred Ordination to Perſons in ſuch Circumſtances. Chelidonius finding himſelf condemned, took a Journey to Rome, and complained of the Sentence pronounced by Hilarius. This Prelate followed him thither, waited upon Pope Leo, intreating him not to give the Churches any Diſturbance. He likewiſe complained that ſome Gallican Biſhops, who had been juſtly depoſed in their own Country, officiated notwithſtanding without Reſtraint at Rome. He therefore deſired his Holineſs to comply with this Remonſtrance, declaring at the ſame time, that he did not appear with an Intention to proſecute his Adverſary, but only to enter his Proteſt; and in caſe he miſſed Satisfaction, he was ready to retire; which he did accordingly, as ſoon as he found Pope Leo convened a Synod for trying the Cauſe. After his going away, Leo brought Chelidonius in Not Guilty, and reſtored him to his See. But Hilarius, Archbiſhop of Arles, would by no means acquieſce in this Sentence. Thus Chelidonius continued depoſed, notwithſtanding Pope Leo's Letter to the Biſhops of the Province of Vienne, for affirming his Holineſs's Judgment. 'Tis not ſaid by any Authors of the Age above mentioned, of what See Chelidonius was Biſhop. Francis Chiffletius aſſures us he was Biſhop of Bezançon. His Authority is a Manuſcript of S. Romanus, lodged in the Abbey of S. Claude. This Opinion has been followed by a great many Learned Men; but Father Queſnel, in his Diſſertations upon Leo, proves this Life of S. Romanus is neither the Product of any cotemporary Author, nor deſerves any Credit: And over and above, Queſnel ſhews that Chelidonius was no Metropolitan, but only a Biſhop in the Province of Vienne. * Saint Leon de la nouvelle Edition du P. Queſnel, Ep. 10. Honorat. Vit. Hilar. Arelat. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

CHEREMON, who wrote the Hiſtory of the Egyptians, lived under the Cæſars. According to Suidas, he was Præceptor to Dionyſius of Alexandria, who taught from the Reign of Nero to that of Trajan. Strabo reports, that he attended Aulus Gallus into Ægypt in quality of a Philoſopher and Aſtronomer; but that he made himſelf deſpicable by his Vanity. Tzetzes relates, that Cheremon, the Egyptian Hiſtoriographer, pretends that the Phœnix lately died in Egypt at the Period of ſix thouſand Years: But here he has carried the Fable of the Phœnix much beyond other Writers; for ſome allow her but five hundred Years of Life; and thoſe who go fartheſt, as Tacitus obſerves, won't let her live above fourteen hundred. Porphyry informs us, that Cheremon was a Stoick, and that he gave an Account of the Buſineſs and Privileges of the Egyptian Prieſts. Origen, in his Book againſt Celſus, cites a Stoick Philoſopher of this Name, who wrote about Comets; and ſince Porphyry aſſures us Cheremon the Egyptian was a Stoick, 'tis probable they are both the ſame; but let this be as it will, Joſephus, towards the End of his firſt Book againſt Appion, mentions one Cheremon who wrote the Hiſtory of Egypt.

CHERSO, an Iſland, with a Town of the ſame Name. It ſtands in the Gulph of Carnero, Part of the Gulph of Venice, between the Coaſt of Iſtria and the Iſland Veghia. Cherſo belongs to the Venetians, and gives the Title of an Earldom. The Iſlands of Oſero, Unia, Sanfego, and ſome others of leſſer Conſideration, are within its Juriſdiction. * Baudrand.

* CHERUBINS, Angels of the ſecond Order of the firſt Hierarchy. The true Etymology of the Hebrew Word Cherubin is ſomewhat uncertain: Some ſay Cherub comes from a Root, that in Chaldee and Hebrew ſignifies to labour. Cherub likewiſe ſignifies Strong and Powerful, and in this Senſe Ezekiel calls the King of Tyre a Cherub: Tu Cherub Unctus, that is, You are a powerful Prince. Amongſt the Egyptians, a Cherub was an Emblematical or Symbolical Figure. Moſt of the Jews, who in this Conjecture have been followed by the Chriſtians, affirm, that Cherubin ſignifies As Children, which was the Figure in which they were repreſented; for Che in Hebrew ſignifies As, and Rub an Infant or little Boy. Some Eccleſiaſtical Writers, and S. Jerom amongſt the reſt, in his Commentary upon Ezekiel, interpret this Word, A great deal of Learning or Knowledge: They fetch the Derivation from the Hebrew, Nachar, to know, and Rab, a great deal: But this Etymology looks too much ſtrained. Aben Ezra's Opinion, in his Commentary upon Geneſis, ſeems moſt probable. This Rabbi is of Opinion, that we are not only to underſtand by the Word Cherubin the Figure of a Youth, as a great many of the Rabbies, together with the Chaldee Paraphraſe, underſtand it; but that all ſort of Figures are comprehended in this Word: And under this Signification Cherubin ſometimes paſſes in Scripture. Some Authors will have it there is a Metatheſis or Tranſpoſition of Letters, and that inſtead of Charab, we are to read Rachab: Now Rachab ſignifies to mount on Horſeback, or drive a Chariot: As much as to ſay, that the Cherubins were God Almighty's Chariot; which Conjecture agrees well enough with the Repreſentation. Joſephus ſpeaking of the Cherubins which covered the Ark, only affirms they were winged Animals, and that they had no Reſemblance with any known Figure; that Moſes had ſeen them about the Throne of God, and copied them from that Original. The Cherubins in Ezekiel are particularly deſcribed; they have the Figure of a Man, of a Lion, an Ox, and an Eagle: Theſe Figures are only ſymbolical. The Head of a Man, for the Purpoſe, ſignifies Knowledge: The Wings of an Eagle, were the Emblem of ſublime and deep Contemplation, or it may be of the Readineſs and Speed with which they executed the Orders of God Almighty: The Breaſt of a Lion, marks their Strength and Power: And the Feet of an Ox, repreſents their Conſtancy in Labour and Buſineſs. The firſt Cherubins mentioned in Scripture are thoſe poſted at the Gate of Paradiſe. And though the Vulgate tranſlates by one Cherubin, the Septuagint turns them Cherubins; and the Hebrew Word Cherubin is likewiſe Plural. Theodoret, Theodorus of Heraclea, and Procopius, interpret theſe Cherubins by thoſe formidable Figures, which appeared to Adam to keep him at a Diſtance from Paradiſe: But the more common Opinion is, they were Angels with a flaming Sword in their Hand, or, as ſome will have it, with a great Fire about them. Some are of Opinion, that the Cherubins and the flaming Sword were the ſame thing. Farther, Cherubin in general is taken for Figures repreſenting different and diſtinct things; and 'tis in this Senſe we are to underſtand the Paſſage in Exodus xxvi. where the Curtains are ſaid to be the Work of Cherubin, which the Vulgate tranſlates by Embroidery. But the principal Figure of the Cherubins was an Ox. S. John in the Revelations, Chap. iv. calls the Cherubins Animals or Beaſts; they were furniſhed with Wings, as appears by the Deſcription of the Cherubins upon the Ark. God is frequently ſaid to ſit upon the Cherubins in Holy Scripture. This Expreſſion is made uſe of to expreſs the Majeſty and Power of the Supreme Being. Doctor Spencer makes the Cherubins an Egyptian Figure, and dilates upon this Subject. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Judaic. Lib. 3. cap. 6. Spencer, de Legibus Hebræorum Ritualibus, Lib. 3. Diſſert. 5.

CHERVINSKO, or Czerwinsk, a Town of Poland, eight Leagues from Warſaw, towards the Mouth of the Viſtula: 'Tis ornamented with a magnificent Structure of an Abbey, belonging to the Order of the Auguſtinians; 'tis one of the moſt wealthy in Poland, and always makes the Preferment for one of the greateſt Lords of the Kingdom, and ſometimes 'tis beſtowed upon the King's Son: 'Tis thus diſpoſed on, notwithſtanding 'twas founded for Regulars. The Annual Revenue is about forty thouſand Livres. The King nominates; but in regard the Abbot is to be a Monk, the Election is likewiſe to be made by the Convent of the Abbey, for confirming the Kings Nomination; and frequently they take no Notice of it: Thus there is often a ſecond, and ſometimes a third Election, at a Month's Diſtance from each other: And in caſe the laſt happens not to comply with the King's Nomination, the Titular or Elect promoted by the Court commences a Suit againſt the Convent at Rome; and during the Vacancy the Profits are ſequeſtred. This Abbey has a Figure of the Bleſſed Virgin, where 'tis pretended Miracles are done, which makes the Poles pay their Devotions there preferably to any other Place. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

CHESAPEAK, a great Gulph in Northern America. It runs about ſeventy Leagues into the Continent between the Coaſt of Virginia and Penſylvania: But then the Breadth is little more than ten Leagues. This Gulph is made by ſeveral Rivers, the chief of which are Saſqueſahanoughs, Patawomack, Toppahanock, Pamaunck, and Powhatan. The firſt diſcharges itſelf into the Bottom of the Gulph, and the reſt fall in on the Weſtern Side. * Baudrand.

CHEVREAU, (Urban) born in May 1613 at Loudun, a Town of Poitou in France. His Inclination lay ſtrongly for the Belles Lettres, in which he made a conſiderable Progreſs. Beſides, he was a Perſon of Addreſs, and fit for the Converſation of Quality. He was one of Chriſtina Queen of Sweden's Secretaries. The King of Denmark engaged him ſome time at his Court. Several German Princes entertained him, and amongſt the reſt the Elector Palatine Charles Lewis, Father to the Ducheſs of Orleans. He continued for ſome time at this Court, ſat at the Council-Board, and helped to bring over the Princeſs laſt mentioned to the Roman Communion. At his Return to Paris, he was made Præceptor and Secretary to the Duke of Maine. He died at his Seat at Loudun in February 1701, being eighty ſeven Years of Age. The firſt Work publiſhed by him is entituled, Le Tableau de la Fortune. 'Tis a little Book in which he relates all the great Revolutions which have happened in the World. A great many Years after, he wrote l'Hiſtoire du Monde, of which there have been four Editions, two in France, and two in Holland. The laſt Dutch Edition in 1698. is the beſt, being printed from a Copy which the Author had corrected in abundance of Places. This Performance, though his Maſter-Piece, is not altogether without Faults. The Style is unpoliſhed in ſeveral Places; and one would fancy that Chevreau, though not unacquainted with the Art of Writing, was of Opinion that the Style of an Hiſtorian ſhould be ſomewhat rugged and jolting upon the Ear. Beſides, he is pretty often miſtaken in Matter of Fact, and ſeems to have ſtuffed his Hiſtory too much with his Common-place Books. But here it muſt not be forgotten, that M. l'Abbé de Vertot has lately furniſhed a new corrected Edition, carried on to the Year 1715. 'Tis printed at Amſterdam by David Mortier. There are ſeveral other Works of his printed, not neceſſary to be inſerted. * Memoires pour l'Hiſtoire des Sciences, Mars & Avril 1701. Memoires du Tems.

CHIANGARA, a Town in Aſia belonging to the Turk. Sanſon in his ſmall Maps places it in Natolia Proper, upon the Confines of Amaſia and Caramania. The Province of Chiangara, which anſwers the Old Galatia, takes its Name from this Town. * Baudrand.

CHIAURLICK, Ziorlo, Ciorlo, a Town of Turky in Europe; it ſtands in Romania, between Adrianople and Conſtantinople, upon the River Athiras, a League from its diſemboguing into the Sea of Marmora. Chiaurlick is an old Thracian Town, which went by the Names of Tzurulum, Turulus, Turullus, Turulea, and is ſuppos'd to be the ſame with Arzus. * Baudrand.

CHIENNING: 'Tis one of the great Towns in China, and Capital of ſix leſſer ones: It ſtands upon the River Min, in the Province of Fokien, where 'tis the fourth City. 'Twas a conſiderable Town of Trade before the War brought upon the Country by the Tartars, who burnt it. * Baudrand.

CHIEUCHIANG, or Kieukiano, is one of the great Cities in China; 'tis Capital of four others, and the fifth for Value and Bigneſs in the Province of Kiangſi. It ſtands upon the River Kiang, a little above its falling into the Lake Poyang. * Maty, Diction.

CHIMERE, a ſmall Town in European Turky; 'tis in Epirus a Province in Greece, upon the Coaſt of the Ionian Sea, twelve Leagues from Butrinto to the North. Chimere ſtands upon the Brow of a ſteep Hill, has a good Haven, a Biſhop's See Suffragan to Lepanto, and is the Capital of a ſmall Country of the ſame Name; the Inhabitants of which are called Chimarioti, or Cimarioti. Theſe Cimariots are deſcended from the old Macedonians. They have but five or ſix ſmall Towns upon the Coaſt, which ſignify little; but their Mountains are ſo high, and ſo almoſt inacceſſible, that they ſerve inſtead of Forts. The Cimariots rely ſo much upon the Advantage of this Situation, that they refuſe to pay Taxes to the Turks. They profeſs the Religion of the Greek Church, practiſe remarkably upon the Highway, as the Mainots likewiſe do, who are deſcended from the Lacedemonians. * Maty, Diction.

and

CHINHOA, or Kinhoa, a Town in China: 'Tis the firſt great Town in the Province of Chekian, and has ſeven leſſer Towns within its Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

CHINY, (The Earldom of) a Country in the Duchy of Luxembourg in the Low Countries. This County lies upon the Confines of Lorrain, Champagne, and the Duchy of Bouillon. 'Tis conſiderably large; the chief Towns are Chiny, the Capital; Herbemont, Neufchaſtel, Virton, Marville, Montmedy, Orval, Yvoix, and Orchemont. It had formerly Hereditary Earls; but the Family being extinct in 1272, 'twas united to the Duchy of Luxembourg. * Baudrand.

CHIOUTAYE, Chiutaye, or Kiotahia, a Town in Natolia Proper: 'Tis near the River Sangary, about twenty Leagues from the Town Burs to the South-Eaſt. Chioutaye is a conſiderable Town, the See of an Archbiſhop, and the Capital of a Country of the ſame Name: The Country lies about the River Sangary, between the Precinct of Chiangar, Beckſangil, and Bolli, and anciently called Bogdomantis. * Baudrand.

CHIRURGERY, or Surgery, a third Part of a Phyſician's Buſineſs, conſiſting in outward and manual Applications for curing Wounds, Tumours, &c. in Human Bodies. The Effects and Succeſs of Surgery lying more open to Proof and Evidence than thoſe of Medicine, gave this Buſineſs an earlier Improvement; and Æſculapius himſelf is ſaid to have made a conſiderable Progreſs this way. Arcabuto was the firſt Surgeon entertained by the Roman Republick; but he was not long in their Favour; for when they ſaw him cut and ſlaſh his Patients, they ſtoned him in the Campus Martius. Johannes Schultetus wrote a Book entituled, Armamentarium Chirurgicum, in which he deſcribes all the Inſtruments of Surgery; 'tis printed at Ulm in Folio, and at the Hague in Octavo. Ambroſius Pareus, and Fabricius ab Aquapendente, wrote likewiſe upon this Subject. * Antiquit. Roman.

CHITIM, or Chittim, Son of Javan, mentioned in Geneſis, and firſt Anceſtor of the Macedonians; for Macetes, in Greek Μακέτης, uſed by the moſt ancient Authors for Macedo, is ſuppos'd to be deriv'd from Chitim. In Homer's Odyſſes, the Cithæi lived in the Neighbourhood of Macedonia, and, according to this Poet, were Subjects to Telephus King of Myſia: For this Reaſon, Alexander the Great, in the Firſt Book of the Maccabees, Chap. i. ver. 1. is called King of Cithim, from whom the Latins were deſcended: For, as Suidas obſerves, Latinus, Son of Telephus, carry'd the Citheans into Italy. Thus, ſays he, Chitim ſignifies both the Italians and Macedonians. For this Reaſon, Balaam foretold the Ships from Chittim ſhould ſail up the Mediterranean and deſtroy Aſſur and Heber: The fulfilling of which Prediction is more applicable to the Romans than the Macedonians. * Melanchon in Cap. 11. Daniel. Hornius, Hiſt. Philoſoph. Lib. 3. Cap. 2. Father Calmet's Literal Commentary upon Numbers, Chap. 24. v. 24.

CHITIS, an Arabian Iſland, where ſome of the Troglodytes, who lived upon robbing, retir'd for Shelter; and being detained here by tempeſtuous Weather, and wanting Proviſions, they were forced to live upon Plants and Roots; and thus digging for Suſtenance, they accidentally found the Precious Stone called the Topaz. * Plin. Nat. Hiſt. Lib. 36. Cap. 8.

CHITRO, in Latin Cithram and Pydna, an Epiſcopal Town in Macedon, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica, or Salonichi: It ſtands upon the Gulph of Salonichi, twelve Leagues from the Town, at the Mouth of the River Chitro, otherwiſe called Palacas, and Platamona. * Baudrand.

CHIUN, an Idol worſhipped by the Iſraelites, repreſenting Hercules, whom the Egyptians called Chon: 'Twas an Emblem of the Sun. * Godwin de Ritibus Heb. Lib 4. Cap. 2. Hoffman, Lexicon Univerſal.

CHIUNCHEU, a Town in China: 'Tis the tenth in the Province of Quantung: It ſtands in the Iſland Hainan, and has twelve Towns of Dependencies. * Maty, Diction.

CHIZICO, (Cape Chizico, or Cape Spinga) formerly called Dindyma, a Mountain of Natolia in Aſia: It jets into the Sea of Marmora, over againſt the Iſland and Town of Chizico. The old Cyzicum, one of the moſt conſiderable Towns in Aſia upon the ſcore of its Bigneſs, fine Buildings and Antiquity, and an Archiepiſcopal See in the flouriſhing Ages of Chriſtianity, was built upon Cape Chizico; the Ruins of which are now called Spiga, Spinga, and Palermo. * Baudrand.

CHNODOMARUS, an old German King; he defeated the Romans in a ſet Battle, A. D. 351, in the Reign of the Emperor Conſtantius: After this, he overran Gaul without Reſiſtance, and plunder'd a great many wealthy Towns; but Julian gaining a great Victory upon him near the Rhine, took him Priſoner in the Year 357, and ſent him to the Emperor Conſtantius at Rome, where he died of a Diſtemper. * Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 16.

CHOARENA, the Eaſtern Part of the Parthians Dominions bordering upon India. Craterus, one of Alexander the Great's Generals, made an entire Conqueſt of it, and recruited Alexander's Army with the Natives who ſubmitted. * Strabo, Lib. 15.

CHOISEUL, (Gilbert de) Du Pleſſis Praſlin, Biſhop of Tournay, was deſcended from one of the ancienteſt Families in Champagne; and which ſeveral Ages ſince has furniſh'd Dukes, Counts, Peers, Mareſchals of France, &c. He was Son to Francis de Ferry de Choiſeul Count du Pleſſis, Lieutenant-General of the Light-Horſe of France: His Mother was Magdalen Barthelemey. His Brothers took the Profeſſion of Arms: As for himſelf, his Education was ſpent in Learning and the Exerciſes of Piety; and now being an Eccleſiaſtick and Doctor in Divinity, the King preferr'd him to the Biſhoprick of Comminges. He immediately went to his Dioceſe, where he found the People extremely ignorant. He laid out himſelf in Viſitations and Inſtructions, travell'd over the Mountainous Part of the Pyreneans, to examine the Condition of the Inhabitants, and improve their Underſtanding and Practice. In a Year of great Scarcity, he borrow'd Money to ſubſiſt the Poor; and when a Mortality happen'd, he viſited the Sick, got the Plague himſelf, and had like to have died on't: He reform'd his Clergy, and founded ſeveral Seminaries. In 1644, he was employ'd in taking up the Controverſy occaſion'd by the Book publiſh'd by Janſenius, Biſhop of Ypres. In 1667, he had a great Share in the Conferences manag'd by the States of Languedoc, touching the Buſineſs of the four Biſhops: And 'twas he that drew up the Report of this Matter. After he had ſat twenty four Years upon the See of Comminges, he was tranſlated to Tournay in 1670. He was no leſs belov'd in the Dioceſe of Tournay, than he had been in that of Comminges, and took the ſame Pains as formerly in reforming the Clergy, and ſuppreſſing ill Cuſtoms and Abuſes. He died at Paris in December 1689, being ſeventy ſix Years of Age.

The moſt conſiderable Book-Performance of this Biſhop, is a Book entituled, Memoires touchant la Religion, in three Volumes in 12°. printed in 1680. The firſt Volume is levelled againſt Atheiſts, Deiſts and Libertines; and in the two latter, the Proteſtants are attack'd. Soon after the Book was publiſh'd, a Proteſtant made Reflexions upon't. To this the Biſhop reply'd, and endeavour'd to defend himſelf from Point to Point. Here he maintains the abſolute Neceſſity of an infallible Judge of Controverſies; and that theſe Words of our Bleſſed Saviour, This is my Body, are to be literally underſtood. Farther, he proves the Oblation at the Holy Euchariſt a true Sacrifice, and that 'tis within the Liberty of the Church to grant or refuſe the Laity the Holy Euchariſt under both Kinds, and that none but Prieſts, when they Conſecrate, are oblig'd to receive in this Manner. Monſieur de Tournay having approv'd a Tranſlation of a little Book entituled, Wholſome Advice from the Bleſſed Virgin to her indiſcreet Worſhippers; and ſome People declaiming loudly againſt this Book, he thought himſelf oblig'd to juſtify his Approbation, and inſtruct his People upon this Subject, which he did in a Paſtoral Letter publiſh'd in 1674. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

CHOISY, (Francis Timolion de) Prior of Saint Lô at Rohan, and great Dean of the Cathedral of Baieux, and one one of the forty of the French Academy, was born at Paris April 1644. In the Year 1685, he was ſent Ambaſſador to the King of Siam, provided that Prince was willing to be inſtructed in the Chriſtian Religion, and Ambaſſador Extraordinary in the room of the Chevalier de Chaumont, in caſe this latter happen'd to die in his Voyage. Before his going to Siam, he wrote Dialogues in French touching the Immortality of the Soul, and the Exiſtence and Providence of a Supreme Being, printed at Paris in 1684. After his Return, he publiſh'd a Natrative of his Voyage, and ſeveral other Books. For Inſtance, he wrote David's Life, with the Verſion of the Pſalms, where the material Differences between the Hebrew and the Vulgate are mark'd: In this Performance he keeps to the Literal Senſe, and makes them intelligible to the meaneſt Underſtanding. Much about the ſame time he publiſh'd Solomon's Life; that of S. Lewis King of France; des Penſées Chrêtiennes; a Verſion of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt: And laſtly, des Hiſtoires de Pieté & de Morale, in eight Volumes, both inſtructive and entertaining. He likewiſe went upon the Hiſtory of France, and finiſhed the Reigns of Philip de Valois, of King John, Charles V. and Charles VI. His laſt Buſineſs of an Author is an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. The Manner he preſcribed himſelf is this; "The Work, (ſays he) "ſhall not be embarraſs'd with too much Learning; I "ſhall endeavour to inſert nothing but what may be "ſerviceable and edifying; there ſhall be nothing in it "but what every body may underſtand; excepting "that the ſcandalous Part of ſome Hereſies ſhall be ſome-"what caſt into Shades: As to other things, there will "be no perplex'd Paſſages to break the Reader's Atten-"tion, and ſtop him in his Courſe." He has already publiſh'd ſeveral Volumes upon this Subject: Here he intermixes Profane Hiſtory, and throws in entertaining Paſſages and Deſcriptions: His Language likewiſe is ſufficiently polite; and as to his Matter, 'tis drawn from the beſt Authors both Ancient and Modern. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

CHOKIER, (Eraſmus) a Lawyer of Liege: He wrote a Tract de Juriſdictione Ordinarii in Exemptos, & de Advocatis Feudalibus, printed at Cologne in 1629. There was another John Chokier born at Liege, and Vicar-General to the Biſhop and Prince of that Place: He wrote to the Year 1636. His Tracts are, De permutatione Beneficiorum; Notæ ad Commentarium Alphonſi Soto ad Regula Cancellariæ; Vindiciæ Libertatis Eccleſiaſticæ; Scholia in primarias preces Imperatoris: Tractatus de Legato; Ancora debitorum. * Bibliotheque Hiſtorique des Auteurs de Droit, &c. par Denys Simon, Edit Pariſ. in douze, premier Tom. 1692. Second Tome 1695.

CHOMBAIS, a Town which gives Name to a little Kingdom: 'Tis in the Peninſula on this ſide the Ganges, upon the Coaſt of Malabar, between the Towns of Calecut and Cananor. * Maty, Diction.

CHORGES, a conſiderable French Town in Dauphiné, three or four Leagues from Ambrun and Gap. Chorges is ſuppoſed to be the ancient Caturigæ, one of the chief Towns of the Caturigæ. * Baudrand.

* CHOSROES, the firſt King of Perſia. Some Paſſages of the Hiſtory of this Prince are miſtaken in Morery Vol. I. For Inſtance, Beliſarius was ſent againſt Cabades, this King's Father; and farther, not Juſtinian, but Juſtin I. was the Emperor who bought a Peace of Choſroes. Neither was Juſtinian I. Tiberius's General againſt Chorſoes; this Juſtinian being Emperor a conſiderable time before the other.

CHRESM, or Chriſm, Oil conſecrated by the Biſhop and uſed in the Sacrament of Baptiſm, Confirmation, Orders, and Extreme Unction. This Chriſm is conſecrated with great Ceremonies upon Holy Thurſday: There are two ſorts of Chriſm; the one is a Compoſition of Oil and Balſam, made uſe of in the Sacrament of Baptiſm, at Confirmation, and giving Orders; the other, which is only plain Oil conſecrated by the Biſhop, is made uſe of for the Catechumens, and for Extreme Unction. This Ceremony is very ancient, and has been all along practis'd by the Greek and Latin Churches at the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm: This Difference only excepted, that the Greeks anoint the Body all over, whereas the Latins go no farther than the Top of the Head. In Confirmation, the Greeks anoint the Forehead with Chriſm, ſuppoſing it as it were eſſential to the Sacrament; whereas the Latins make Impoſition of Hands the moſt eſſential Ceremony. * Adrian Baillet, aux Fêtes Mobiles, Sect. 5. N. 15, 16. dans la Vie des Saints, &c.

CHRISTIANUS, (Florentius) publiſh'd a Greek and Latin Edition of Ariſtophanes's Comedies, with his own Notes, and ſome other Authors upon them: 'Twas printed at Geneva in 1608, in Folio; his Son Claudius complains very much of the Inſincerity and unwarrantable Liberty of the Genevian Publiſhers; and affirms they have, by inſerting ſo much of their own Head, almoſt ſpoil'd the Edition. Kuſterus has reprinted Ariſtophanes in Holland in the Year 1710. This Edition is much more correct than the other; to which he has added Notes of his own, and made ſome Alterations in the Tranſlation. As for Florentius Chriſtianus, he was a beautiful Genius, and underſtood all the Delicacies of the Greek Language.

* CHRISTIANS of S. Thomas: They live under the Juriſdiction of the Patriarch of the Neſtorians, who reſides at Babylon. The Popes have frequently ſent Miſſionaries into this Country ſince the Portugueze ſettled there. John de Albuquerque, a Franciſcan, and firſt Archbiſhop of Goa, founded a College at Cangrannor in 1546; 'tis to inſtruct the young People in the Doctrine and Ceremonies of the Latin Church: The Jeſuites likewiſe founded a College here in 1587. By the way, we are to obſerve, that Cangrannor was the Chriſtians of S. Thomas's chief Place of Abode. Mar-Joſeph, Biſhop of Serra, ſent into this Country by the Patriarch of Babylon, conſented to obſerve the Latin Rites; but perſiſted in the Errors of Neſtorianiſm. The Portugueze got him ſeized to ſend him to Rome; but upon his Arrival in Portugal, he had Leave to return to his Biſhoprick. During his lying under this Arreſt, Mar-Abraham was put in his Place. He was ſent to Rome, where he abjur'd Neſtorianiſm, and recognized the Pope's Supremacy; but upon his Return into his own Country, he return'd to his former Heterodoxy, and renounced the Pope. He pretended to change his Opinion in a Synod held at Goa; but quickly relapſed. Alexis de Meneſis, Archbiſhop of Goa, received a Commiſſion from Clement VIII. to proſecute Mar-Abraham; but the Chriſtians of S. Thomas refus'd to ſubmit to Meneſis's Summons and Sentence, and ſtill perſiſted in Neſtorianiſm, and maintain'd the Juriſdiction of their Patriarch of Babylon. Meneſis convened a Synod upon the 25th of June 1599, and having gained a great many Neſtorian Prieſts, prevailed with them to renounce their erroneous Belief and their Patriarch. In this Synod, he ſettled the Latin Diſcipline in a great meaſure, and reſtrained their Prieſts from Marriage. * Jovet, Hiſtoire des Religions.

CHRISTIANPREIS, or Frederickort, a Fort belonging to the King of Denmark: 'Tis in the Duchy of Sleſwick, upon the Confines of Holſteyn, upon the narroweſt Part of the Gulph of Chriſtian Haven, two Leagues from the Town Keiel to the North. This Fort is commanded by a Mountain not very diſtant. * Mat. Diction.

CHRISTIANSBOURG, a Fort belonging to the Danes upon the Golden Coaſt of Guinea, near Little Accara, about twenty ſix Leagues from S. George de Mina to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

CHRODEGANG, Biſhop of Metz, Son of Sygramus and Landrada, of an ancient Auſtraſian Family: Chrodegang having ſpent his Youth at Charles Martel's Court, was promoted to the See of Metz by Pepin, and conſecrated by Pope Stephen in the Year 743. Notwithſtanding his Character, he was ſtill employ'd by Pepin in ſeveral Negotiations: He drew up a Rule for Canons-Regulars, publiſh'd from a genuine Copy by P. Labbé: He built two Monaſteries in his Dioceſe, and govern'd his See with commendable Application till his Death, which happen'd March 766. * Henſchenius's Hiſtorical Commentary, M. Du Pin. Baillet, Vies des Saints. 6 March.

* CHROMATIUS, Biſhop of Aquileia: He had likewiſe been Prieſt in the ſame Church under the Biſhop Valerian, and aſſiſted in that Character at the Council of Aquileia, convened againſt the Arians in 381. He was promoted to the See of Aquileia in 389; and in 401 or 402, he held a Provincial Council, where he acquieſced in the Sentence which the Synod at Rome had lately pronounced nounced againſt the Origeniſts; but he could not be prevailed with to condemn Ruffinus. He appear'd with a great deal of Friendly Concern for S. Chryſoſtom, and wrote a Letter in his Behalf to the Emperor Honorius. 'Tis certain he was dead in the Year 412. The Modern Roman Martyrology places his Feſtival to the 2d of December. S. Jerom, in his Preface upon the Chronicles, gives him the Character of a very pious and learned Prelate: S. Chryſoſtom in his Letter to him ſpeaks much to his Advantage. S. Ambroſe wrote to him upon the Subject of Balaam's Prophecy; and Caſſiodorus informs us, that he wrote an Abridgment of the Martyrs Sufferings, now loſt. The Letter to S. Jerom, with Cromatius and Heliodorus's Names to it, is Counterfeit, and ſo is S. Jerom's Anſwer, where there is mention made of the Birth of the Bleſſed Virgin. * Hieron. Præf. in Paralipom. Epiſt. 42, 43. Ambroſ. Ep. 8. 50. Chryſoſt. Ep. 155. Baron. Al. C. 400, 404, 405. Martyrolog. Roman. Præfat. Bellarmin. de Scriptor. Eccleſiaſt. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt.

CHRYSARGYRUM, a remarkable Tax paid in the Roman Empire: 'Twas levied upon thoſe who lived upon the Baſket, and upon Women who maintained themſelves by Licentious Practice. Catamites likewiſe paid a certain Proportion: This ſcandalous Tax was levied every fourth Year, and brought into the Exchequer. There were likewiſe Officers ſettled for collecting it, and the Names of thoſe liable for the Payment enter'd upon a Regiſter. The Emperor Anaſtaſius, making a Speech againſt this Impoſition in the Senate, made a Law for putting it down, and burnt the Rolls for collecting it: And to prevent its being revived by ſucceeding Emperors, he pretended to repent what he had done. He told the Officers ſettled for collecting this Revenue, that he would gladly reſtore the Tax, and bid them make a thorough Enquiry, to ſee if any of the Regiſters were undeſtroyed. Theſe Officers believing the Emperor in earneſt, and deſirous of their former Places, brought in a great many Rolls for Aſſeſſment, acquainting him withal, that in caſe theſe were loſt, the Method of Collecting could not be retriev'd, for the Offices in the Empire could furniſh no farther; the Emperor being now Maſter of his Deſign, ſet all the Papers on Fire. Zoſimus a Pagan, and prejudic'd Hiſtorian, pretends this Tax was firſt ſettled by Conſtantine the Great; but this is deny'd by Evagrius. And beſides this Authority, 'tis very probable this Tax was levied upon Infamous Perſons long before Conſtantine's Reign; as the Reader may be inform'd in Suetonius's Life of Caligula, and in Alexander Severus's Reign, written by Lampridius. * Evagrius, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 3. Cap. 39, 40. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Græc.

CHRYSOLITE, a Precious Stone tranſparent, of a Gold Colour, with Streaks of Green, and a ſtrong Luſtre: 'Tis found in Æthiopia, Arabia, and the Indies, and is ſofter than other Precious Stones. 'Twas the ninth or the firſt of the fourth Row upon the Jewiſh High-Prieſt's Breaſt-Plate: The Name of Jacob's tenth Son was cut upon it, whom the Jews owned for their tenth Patriarch. If Cardan may be believ'd, this Stone is a Preſervative againſt the Aſthma, the Palpitation of the Heart, againſt Swooning, Melancholy and the Pannick. It is ranged the ſeventh in the Foundation of the Wall of the Heavenly Jeruſalem. Exod. xxxix. Revelat. xxi.

CHRYSOPRASUS, a Precious Stone which makes the tenth in the Foundation of the New Jeruſalem: The Colour of it is Green like a Leek, and the Luſtre much condenſed: 'Tis mark'd with ſeveral Stroaks of Gold. 'Tis ſaid it ſtrenghens the Sight and exhilarates the Spirits. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

CHUANAUCA, that is, a Volcano or Mountain which diſcharges Smoak and Flame: 'Tis within the Andes in Chili, in Southern America, to the South-Eaſt of the Town Oſorno. * Maty, Diction.

CHUCUITO, Chuquito, or El Cluyo, a Country of Southern America: 'Tis partly ſituated in Chili, from whence 'tis ſeparated by the Mountains Andes to the Weſt. 'Tis bounded by Tucuman to the North-Eaſt, and by the Country upon the Streights of Magellan to the South. 'Tis divided into two Parts, which take their Names from Mendoça, and S. Juan de la Frontera, their Capitals. * Baudrand.

CHYMISTRY, or the Art for ſeparating Heterogeneous Subſtances in Vegetables, Minerals, and Animals; the Chymiſts add the Arabick Particle Al, and make it Alchymy, to expreſs the moſt ſublime and myſterious Part of what may be perform'd this way. The Force of Fire in a Laboratory makes great Diſcoveries in Nature, not otherwiſe to be met with. Joachim Becherius has explain'd the Principles of Chymiſtry, together with the moſt obſcure Terms, in a Book entituled, OEdipus Chymicus. Martinus Rullandus has wrote upon the ſame Subject in his Lexicon Alchemiæ. Petrus Borellus has made a Collection of all the Authors who wrote about Chymiſtry, in his Book called Bibliotheca Chymica. There are a great many Chymical Operations ranged in Alphabetical Order, in a Book printed at Leyden A. D. 1684, entituled, Collectanea Chymica Leydenſia. The beſt French Authors upon this Argument are, Le Fevre, Glaſer, La Faveur, Charas and Lemery. The Tranſmutation of Metals, or going in queſt of the Philoſophers Stone, is Part of the Chymiſts Buſineſs, and has prov'd unfortunate to a great many Eſtates.

CIALIST, a Town of Great Tartary in Aſia. Geographers are not agreed about the Situation. Sanſon in his Maps places it near the Lake of Kithay or Carentia, upon the River Hoang. Witſen in his new Maps ſets it upon the ſame River, but within the Kingdom of Tanguth, upon the Confines of India, and to the Eaſt of the Lake Chiamay, which he makes the Head of the River Hoang. This Situation ſeems the moſt probable, becauſe the Tartars border'd upon the Lake Kithay, till the Muſcovites ſettled and built in this Country.

CIAMPINI, (John) an Abridger of the Pope's Briefs: The Author is now living, and has written an Hiſtorical Diſſertation upon the Antiquity, the Buſineſs, and Privileges of the Abridger of the Briefs: This Book was printed at Rome in 1691. The ſame Year, he publiſh'd an Hiſtorical Diſquiſition upon two Emblems now in the Cardinal Carpegni's Cloſet, where he examines the Queſtion, whether the two Philips, Emperors, were Chriſtians? He has likewiſe written a conſiderable Tract upon the Old Temples and Churches, Pagan and Chriſtian. And in 1695, he printed an Hiſtorical Synopſis of Religious Structures built by Conſtantine the Great in Old and New Rome. He likewiſe wrote a Critical Diſſertation upon the Author of the Pontifical, and a Tract to prove the Uſe of Unleavened Bread in the Euchariſt, has always been the Cuſtom of the Latin Church. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. XVII.

CIBALE, a Town of Pannonia, near which Place in the Year 314, the Emperor Conſtantine gained a great Victory againſt Licinius, who loſt twenty thouſand Men upon the Spot, notwithſtanding he took the Field with thirty five thouſand againſt twenty thouſand of the Enemy. * Zoſim. Lib. 2.

CIBOIRE, in Latin Ciborium: 'Tis like a great Cup cover'd; the Uſe of it is to keep the Conſecrated Bread, called the Hoſt, in the Roman Communion. Veſſels of this Figure were formerly made like Egyptian Beans. Ugutio will have it, that Ciborium is properly a Diſh for Meat. In Eccleſiaſtical Authors 'tis taken for a little Canopy or Veil, hung aloft upon four Pillars over the High Altar. There are ſome of this Figure to be ſeen in the Churches of Paris and Rome. * Mabillon, Liturgia Gallicana.

* CICERO: (Marcus Tullius) Tullius was the Name of his Family, according to ſome Authors, deſcended from the Kings of the Volſci. For this Pedigree, we have the Authority of Plutarch, and Euſebius in his Chronicon. But notwithſtanding this Genealogical Flouriſh, 'tis generally thought there was not much Heraldry in his Extraction, and that his Character was much more raiſed by his Elocution, than by his Family. Tully came very young to Rome, and ſpent the firſt Part of his Education in learning Greek, as we are informed by himſelf in his Epiſtle to Titinnius. "I remember, ſays he, when "I was a Child, one Plotius taught Latin at Rome: I "was then ſomewhat diſturbed for not being one of his "Scholars, in regard he was reckoned a Perſon of great "Capacity, and very well ſkilled in his Buſineſs. But "ſome knowing Perſons removed my Fancy, by letting "me underſtand, that learning Greek was the likelieſt "way for Improvement." He appeared early at the Bar, and took ſo much Liberty in pleading againſt Sylla's Favourites, that to avoid the Revenge of a Man who ſpared no body, he was obliged to travel into Greece.

He ſtudied at Athens under Antiochus Aſcalonites, an Academick Philoſopher: And now making Elocution his chief Buſineſs, he went into Aſia, was Scholar to Xenocles, Dionyſius, and Menippus; and at Rhodes, to Apollonius Molo, the moſt eloquent Perſon of that Time. From hence he returned to Rome, where he married Terentia, by whom he had two Children, Marcus Tullius, and Tullia or Tulliola. He was afterwards divorced from Terentia, and married Popillia, a young, wealthy, and very handſome Lady. Terentia gave out he married her for her Beauty; but Tyro, Tully's enfranchiſed Slave, relates, that Money was the Motive, and that he wanted her great Fortune to pay his Debts. To proceed, Tully made his way to the higheſt Poſts, and ran through the great Offices in the Commonwealth. For Inſtance, he was Quæſtor or Treaſurer in Sicily in the 678th Year of Rome, and 72 before the Incarnation. At his Return, he was made Ædile, or Surveyor of the Publick Buildings, Baths and Aquæducts. In the Year 690 of Rome, ſixty Years before the Birth of our Lord, he was Counſul with C. Antonius Nepos. Afterwards, in the Year 695, and 55 before the Chriſtian Æra, he was baniſhed by Clodius and his Faction. He was afterwards outlawed in the Triumvirate of Octavius, Antonius, and Lepidus. Being thus proclaimed guilty of High-Treaſon, his Head and Right Hand were ſtruck off by Popillius Lenas, who overtook him in his Litter, as he was making his way to the Sea of Caeta. His Head and his Hand were carried to Rome, and by Mark Anthony's Order hung up in the Roſtra, where Tully had made ſeveral fine Speeches in Defence of the Publick Liberty. Fulvia, Mark Anthony's Lady, ſpent a great deal of Railing at this Remainder of his Corpſe; and, which was more remarkably ſavage, ſhe drew his Tongue ſeveral times out of his Mouth, and prick'd it with her Bodkin. He was killed in the 710th Year of Rome, and 41 before the Incarnation. Tully was a Perſon of great Genius and Improvement: He was an extraordinary Orator, and a very good Philoſopher: His Style was flowing and diffuſed, with no ill Talent for Raillery. He was a true Lover of his Country, but brought his own Merit too much into Notice and Parade. When the Storm came upon him, his Courage ſeemed to give way, and fell ſhort of his Philoſophy. His oſtentatious Humour was his great Failing; and one would almoſt wonder, how ſo much Senſe and ſo much Vanity could keep together. Tully deſigned to write a Hiſtory of his Country, and finiſhed three Books in Verſe of what happened to him in his Conſulate. Several Learned Men are of Opinion that theſe Books are hinted in his Letter to Lentulus, Lib. 1. Ep. Fam. Ep. 9. Plutarch wrote Tully's Life. He is likewiſe mentioned by Dion Caſſius, Appian, Saluſt, Florus, Oroſius, &c. Lambinus and Fabricius have likewiſe prefix'd his Life to his Works. 'Twas alſo written by Tullius Tyro, his manumiſed Slave.

CID, whoſe right Name was Rodrigo Dias de Bivar, was one of the greateſt Military Men of the Eleventh Century: He was Son to Don Didaco Laynes, Lord of Bivar. His Mother was Tereſa Nugnes, Daughter to Don Rodrigo Alvares, Count and Governor of Aſturia. Ferdinand II. King of Caſtile, happening to ride through Bivar, took a Fancy to Rodrigo Dias, though then but ten Years old. He deſired his Father would let him have him, that he might be bred at Court, and go through the Exerciſes ſuitable to Perſons of Quality. His Father reſigning him to the King, he was Knighted by his Majeſty as ſoon as he was grown up for Service in the Field. 'Twas not long before Rodrigo gave Proof of his Courage, and earned his Honour: For having ſeveral times defeated the Moors, he took five of their Chiefs or Petty Princes Priſoners, who were enlarged upon Condition of paying him a yearly Acknowledgment. One Day, when theſe five Kings ſent their Tribute, he had a Fancy to receive it before King Ferdinand; and the Moors then calling him Cid-Ruis-Dias, the King would have him go under that Name for the future: Cid in Arabick ſignifying Lord. Cid-Ruis-Dias happening to have a Quarrel with Count Gomez de Gormas, killed him in a Duel. The Cid was paſſionately in Love with Chimene, Gomez's Daughter, who, it ſeems, had a reciprocal Affection for him. And here this Lady's Fancy was much diſtreſſed: The Loſing her Father, ſhe imagined, called for Revenge, which could not be executed without the Loſs of a Perſon ſhe valued ſo much. But it ſeems Love was too hard for Revenge. In ſhort, ſhe married the Cid, and had a Son and two Daughters by him. The Son, Don Didaco Rodrigo, died in his Father's Life-time: He was killed by the Moors, from whom the Cid conquered the Town of Valencia, which Town was granted to him by Alphonſus VI. then King of Caſtile and Leon. This Prince married the Cid's two Daughters to Gonſalvo Lord of Carrion's Sons. The Weddings were kept at Valencia with great Solemnity; but an unlucky Accident happened, which occaſioned a great Miſunderſtanding between the two Families. A Lyon kept in the Cid's Houſe broke out of his Den, and ruſhed into the Hall where the Bridegrooms and a great many Lords and Ladies were ſitting: This rough Appearance diſturbed the Company, every one either running away, or putting himſelf in a Poſture of Defence: And here the Cid's two Sons-in-Law appeared the greateſt Cowards in all the Company. This faint Behaviour ſat hard upon their Spirits, and made them hate the Cid mortally, imagining he let the Lyon looſe upon them to try their Mettle. But this was not the only Blot in their Eſcutcheon; they ſhew'd themſelves no leſs Poltrons in a Battle againſt the Moors; where the Cid notwithſtanding gained the Day, and repulſed the Infidels, who attempted the recovering Valencia. After the Fight was over, theſe two Brothers went home, and carrying their Ladies with them, executed their Malice upon the Women, not daring to venture upon their Father Cid-Ruis. It ſeems they uſed their Wives ſo barbarouſly upon the Road, that they left them for dead at Robledos. King Alphonſus being informed of this Inhumanity, ordered the Quarrel ſhould be decided at the Sword's Point, and that the Town Carrion ſhould be the Field of Battle. In ſhort, three Knights on the Cid's ſide enter'd the Liſts, and beat the two Brothers and their Uncle Suero Gonſalvo, who were all declared Traytors, and degraded. The Cid's two Daughters had better Luck afterwards; the eldeſt was married to Don Ramirez, Son to Don Sancho Garcias, King of Navarre; and the youngeſt to Don Peter I. King of Arragon's Son, whoſe Name was likewiſe Peter, and who died in his Father's Life-time. The Cid-Ruis-Dias lived but a little while after this proſperous Turn: And ſome Writers reckon his Death to the Year 1098. He maintained himſelf to the laſt in the Town of Valencia; but after his Death, 'twas retaken by the Moors. * Mariana & Turquet, Hiſt. d'Eſp. & Chronic. del Cid-Ruis-Dias.

CILO, (Junius) Governor of Bithynia and Pontus. The Bithynians complained of his Maladminiſtration to the Emperor Claudius, and requeſted he might be puniſhed for his Avarice and Oppreſſion. The Emperor, not well underſtanding the Bithynians Remonſtrance, turned to ſome other People to hear their Addreſs, and do them Juſtice. Upon this, one Narciſſus, a Courtier in Cilo's Intereſt, ventured to miſreport the Matter, and tell Claudius that the Bithynians returned Cilo Thanks for his gentle and benevolent Uſage. Very well, ſays the Emperor, then let him be Governor of theſe Provinces two Years longer. * Dion Caſſius, Lib. 60. Tacit. Lib. 12. Annal. Cap. 21. This latter Author calls him Junius Colo.

CIMBRIACUS, (Quintus Æmilianus) a German Latin Poet, living in the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century: Some Criticks report him not inferior to Pontanus or Strozza for Epigram and Elegy. His moſt valuable Performances are Aſteria, or the War of Rhodes, and his Encomiaſtica, or Panegyricks upon the Emperors Maximilian and Frederick. * Auct. Dialog. de Latina Lingua reparata, apud Obert Giſan. pag. 404. Konig. Biblioth. Baillet Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poetes Latin. Tom. 7. pag. 107.

CINNA, (C. Helvius) lived in the Time of the Triumvirate. He wrote ſeveral Poems upon Achilles, Telephus, Xerxes, &c. but it ſeems his Smyrna, upon which he beſtowed nine Years, was beſt received. There are ſome Fragments of it remaining amongſt thoſe of other Poets, whoſe Works are loſt. Father Briet affirms, that the Fragments of his Achilles, his Telephus, and his Xerxes, have a true Poetick Turn, and that his Manner reſembles thoſe of the firſt Claſs. * Catullus, Carm. 96. Quintilian, Lib. 10. Cap. 4. Voſſius, de Poet. Latin. Philip Briet. Lib. 2. de Poet. Lat. pag. 15, & 16. Baillet, Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poetes Latins, Tom. 6. p. 121.

CIOFANI, (Hercules) born at Sulmo in Italy, wrote Notes upon Ovid's Metamorphoſis. They are learnedly edly managed, and extracted from ſeveral Poets His Latin is proper, polite and well ornamented. This is the Character which Learned Criticks have beſtowed on him, of which Number are Paulus Manutius, Muretus, Scaliger, and Scioppius. * Paul. Manut. in Addit. ad Bibl. Neap. Scaliger, pag. 72. *Scioppius de Art. Critic. pag.*19. &c.

CIPIERRE, (Renatus de Savoy) was Son to Claud of Savoy, Count of Tende, Governor and High-Steward of Provence. Frances de Foix was his ſecond Lady, by whom he had a Son and Daughter, whom their Mother brought up in the Reformed Religion. Her Huſband was ſtrongly ſuſpected of Proteſtantiſm, partly becauſe his Wife profeſs'd it openly, and partly becauſe he would not ſuffer the Hugonots within his Juriſdiction to be roughly handled. This Moderation raiſed the Count of Sommerive his own Son upon him: He had him by his firſt Marriage, and was forced to defend himſelf in the Field againſt him. In ſhort, the Father had the worſt in the Conteſt, and was forced to quit his Government to this unnatural Son. Cipierre, who had done his utmoſt to maintain his Father in his Poſt and Privilege, was unfortunately aſſaſſinated by a Troop of Mutineers at Frejus in 1568. He was coming from Nice, where he had been to wait upon the Duke of Savoy. The Aſſaſſins laid an Ambuſcade for him in the Wood; but not being ſtrong enough to prevent Cipierre and his Retinue from getting into Frejus, they purſued him thither, rang the Tocſaint upon him, and beſet him in his Lodgings: The Conſuls endeavoured to preſerve him, and prevailed with the Marquis d'Arſi, who commanded the Mutineers, to retire with his Men, upon Condition that Cipierre and his Domeſticks ſhould deliver up their Arms. This Condition being performed, the Mutineers returned ſoon after and cut theſe poor People in Pieces, who were now unprepared for Defence. But the Marquis not finding Cipierre's Corpſe among the Dead, (the Conſuls having conveyed him to a Place of Security) pretended himſelf concerned for him, proteſting that the only Expedient to ſave his Life was to put him into his Hands. The Conſuls relying upon this ſolemn Aſſurance, produc'd him immediately; upon which he was ſtabb'd in a hundred places. 'Twas not doubted but that the Court and the Count de Sommerive had a Share in this Exploit, and that Cipierre was thus barbarouſly uſed upon the ſcore of his being a Hugonot. The Prince of Conde, the Admiral Coligni, and the reſt of their Party, were very much alarm'd at this Murder. * Thuanus, Lib. 44. Beza, Hiſtor. Eccleſ. Lib. 12, &c.

* CIRCENSIAN Plays. To what has been relalated by this Article in Morery, may be added, that upon the Day deſigned for the Exerciſes of this Feſtival, the People went in the Morning to the Capitol, where all the Equipage for the Solemnity being ready, they march'd out in Proceſſion, paſſed through the Squares and principal Streets of Rome into the Circus, where they took ſeveral Tours, to make the Appearance more Pompous. At the Head of the Show, the Chariots moved which carry'd the Figures of their Gods, and the Statues of thoſe Romans beſt diſtinguiſh'd for Quality and Enterprize: Theſe were followed by other Chariots, where the Roman Ladies ſate richly dreſſed: There were likewiſe Chariots amongſt them for the Courſe. After this, the Statues of the Gods were brought out of the Circus, and the Ladies took their Place to ſee the Shows.

Thoſe who ventured their Fortune at the Race, appeared at the Barriers in their Chariots drawn by two, four, and ſometimes ſix Horſes a-breaſt; only expecting the Signal to enter the Race-Ground. There were commonly four Companies of theſe Chariot-Jockeys, diſtinguiſh'd by the Colours of their Livery: The firſt was called the Green; the ſecond the Blue; the third the Red; and the fourth the White. The Emperor Domitian ſet up two new Companies, which he called the Gold and the Purple, from the Colours they wore. Parties were made in Favour of each of theſe Diſtinctions, which ſometimes occaſioned Quarreling and Bloodſhed. The Names of theſe Jockeys were drawn by Lots, and match'd in the following manner: They took an Urn, into which they threw Ballots about the Bigneſs of a Bean, and wrote A or B, or ſome other Letter upon them, and had always two Balls of the ſame Letter. Upon this, the Jockeys came up one after another, and ſaying their Prayers to Jupiter, put their Hands into the Urn. After this, one of the Judges of the Diverſion took each Charioteer's Ballot, and match'd thoſe who drew the ſame Letters. And in caſe the Number of the Jockeys happen'd to prove odd, he that had the ſingle Letter drove againſt the conquering Chariot: This was no ſmall Advantage, becauſe he came freſh to the Courſe againſt one that had been tir'd, by ſtraining for the Prize. When they had proceeded thus far, they opened the Barrier with a Flouriſh of Trumpets; and the laſt Signal being given, by hanging out a white Handkerchief, they enter'd the Liſts and ſtrain'd to come up firſt to the Poſt; and here they were obliged to turn five or ſeven times about the Poſt without touching it: And thus they ſhew'd their Dexterity and Skill in driving. This Maſterly managing the Reins is hinted by Horace in his firſt Ode:

——— Metaque fervidis
Evitata rotis.

He that gained the Prize, was conveyed to the Temple with a pompous Train. * Antiquit. Græc. & Rom. Roſin. Dempſter. Grævius.

CIRCUMCISION, a Jewiſh Ceremony. Herodotus reports, Circumciſion was practiſed in Egypt, in Æthiopia, Colchis and Phœnicia: And this Hiſtorian is of Opinion, that the Syrians of Paleſtine received the Cuſtom from the Egyptians, and that thoſe who lived by the Rivers Thermodon and Parthenius took it from the Inhabitants of Colchis. Farther, he is poſitive that this Ceremony was received among the Egyptians and Æthiopians from the earlieſt Antiquity. And here he won't determine which of the two Nations was firſt in the Uſage; though he thinks it probable the Æthiopians received it from the Egyptians by the Commerce they had with them. Sanchoniathan, cited by Euſebius, affirms that Saturn was the firſt who preſcribed Circumciſion, and that it paſſed from his Dominions into Egypt. Celſus the Philoſopher makes theſe Teſtimonies an Objection to deſtroy the Credit of the Old Teſtament, where 'tis ſaid Abraham was the firſt who received the Sign of Circumciſion, and that it was a Ceremony peculiar to the Jews, and a Mark to diſtinguiſh them from other Nations. Thus the Emperor Julian pretends, that Abraham coming from Chaldea into Egypt, learned the Cuſtom of Circumciſion, and practiſed it in his own Family. Marſham, going too far into the Belief of theſe Authors, reports that Circumciſion was firſt practiſed in Egypt, and that the Iſraelites took it from them; but in regard the Account given by Moſes is to be rely'd on beyond all Profane Hiſtorians, 'tis certain God Almighty preſcribed Circumciſion, and that Abraham was firſt in the Practice. Beſides, Circumciſion was no Law to the Egyptians; there was none but a certain Number of their Prieſts, and Men of Learning, who got themſelves circumciſed. Clemens Alexandrinus relates, that Pythagoras, upon his coming into Egypt, was obliged to be circumciſed, to qualify himſelf for correſponding with the Prieſts of the Country, and to get acquainted with their Myſteries. But here the Matter of Fact is very uncertain; for Abraham, who travelled into Egypt, and made ſome Stay there, returned into Paleſtine without being circumciſed. 'Tis plain therefore, he did not begin the Cuſtom in Imitation of the Ægyptians, but by expreſs Command from God Almighty. Thus 'tis much more probable, that the Egyptians received Circumciſion from Jacob's Children and their Poſterity, who lived with them ſo long in Egypt. Artapanus, cited by Euſebius, aſſures us, that Moſes acquainted the Egyptian Prieſts and Æthiopians with this Ceremony: But notwithſtanding this Authority, 'tis very probable ſome of the Egyptians, prior to Moſes, imitated the Iſraelites in this Practice. The Iſraelites, upon their coming out of Egypt, diſcontinued this Cuſtom all the time they were in the Wilderneſs: The Reaſon of this Omiſſion ſeems to be, becauſe then they were parted from all other Nations, and therefore had no Occaſion for the diſtinguiſhing Mark of Circumciſion. But when they came into the Land of Canaan, God commanded the circumciſing all thoſe who were born in the Wilderneſs; and when this was done, The Lord ſaid unto Joſhua, this day have I rolled the Reproach of Egypt from off you: That is, till now you were like the Egyptians, which was a Blemiſh

Blemiſh and a Reproach to you; but now that Stain is wiped out. S. Ambroſe reports, the Egyptians had their Women circumciſed; but there is no Author vouches this for an ancient Cuſtom; though ſome are of Opinion, there are modern Inſtances of it in the Eaſtern Countries. When the Prophets Ezekiel and Jeremy lived, the Egyptians are reckoned among the Uncircumciſed, no leſs than the Babylonians and Syrians. From hence it may be inferr'd, that Circumciſion was no general Cuſtom among the Egyptians. At preſent there are ſeveral Nations in the Levant where Circumciſion is commonly practiſed: Amongſt theſe the Arabians, Turks, Perſians, Abyſſins, and Homerites, may be reckon'd; but then the Arabians do not circumciſe till thirteen Years of Age, in Imitation of their Progenitor Iſhmael.

God commanded the Ceremony of Circumciſion, for the Sign of a Covenant between himſelf and the Iſraeliti/h Nation, and as a Mark to diſtinguiſh them from other People. All the Iſraeliti/h Male-Children were circumciſed the eighth Day after their Birth. Their Slaves were likewiſe obliged to be circumciſed. 'Till this Ceremony paſſed upon them, they were not accounted God's People. Thus Foreigners, who deſired to be incorporated with the Jewiſh Nation, were obliged to be circumciſed. Divines look upon Circumciſion to be a Sacrament of the Moſaick Law; and ſeveral of them are of Opinion, that Original Sin was remitted by it. S. Auguſtin ſeems inclined to the Belief of this Sentiment. However, this does not ſeem to be the Reaſon of its Inſtitution: For if the Iſraelites had believed it neceſſary for the Salvation of their Children, they would never have omitted the Practice all the time they were in the Wilderneſs. Beſides, their Daughters were born with Original Sin, no leſs than the Male-Iſſue; therefore if Circumciſion had been inſtituted for this Purpoſe, the Females ought to have been circumciſed no leſs than the Males. Farther, upon this Suppoſition Circumciſion would not have been deferr'd till the eighth Day, becauſe the Children might die before that time.

Our Bleſſed Saviour was willing to ſubmit to the Law of Circumciſion; and though the Place where he was circumciſed is not mentioned in the Goſpel, 'tis probable it was at Bethlehem: And if Epiphanius may be credited, 'twas in the ſame Grotto where he was born. As to other Circumſtances of our Bleſſed Saviour's Circumciſion, there is nothing certain about them; that is, whether it was done with a Knife made of Iron or Stone, and whether Joſeph, or ſome other Perſon, perform'd the Ceremony.

The Feſtival of our Saviour's Circumciſion, now kept in the Weſtern Church upon the 1ſt of January, and formerly called the Octaves of the Nativity, is no very ancient Solemnity: 'Twas kept in Spain no ſooner than the Seventh Century; and in France, before this time, the 1ſt of January was ſo far from being a Holiday, that it was a Day of Faſting and Mortification. In the Second Council of Tours, held in the Year 566, and in the fourth Council of Toledo convened A. D. 633, there is mention made of a Faſt upon the Kalends of January, inſtituted in Oppoſition to Pagan Superſtition practis'd on this Day in Honour of Janus. Some Remainders of this Heatheniſh Solemnity continued upon Chriſtendom: Some ignorant Chriſtians, it ſeems, diſguiſed themſelves upon this Day, made Balls and Entertainments, and ſpent their time in Profane Diverſions. To check this Licence, the Church turn'd the 1ſt of January into a Day of Abſtinence and Auſterity. It appears by the Second Council of Tours, that Maſs was ſaid upon the 1ſt of January at Two in the Afternoon; that the Faſt might not be ended till about Three. 'Tis hard to tell the preciſe Time when this Day was turn'd into a Feſtival. The Cuſtom at firſt was by no means uniform; for they faſted in ſome Churches and feaſted in others. At laſt, the Feſtival Circumſtances carry'd it, and the Day was conſider'd as the Firſt-Fruits, as it were, of the Redemption of Mankind, by the firſt ſhedding the Blood of our Bleſſed Saviour. This Day is likewiſe a Commemorating Feſtival of the Name of Jeſus; becauſe, according to the Jewiſh Cuſtom, our Saviour had this Name given him when he was circumciſed, as S. Luke informs us.

CISTERNA, a Town within the Patrimony of the Church in Campania di Roma: 'Tis near the Palus Pomptina, five Leagues from the Town Paleſtrina to the South. Near Ciſterna are to be ſeen the Ruins of the Tres Tabernæ: 'Twas a Town belonging to the Volſci, and afterwards an Epiſcopal See, now removed to Velitri. * Baudrand.

CITIUM, a Town in the Iſle of Cyprus, ſituate upon the Southern Coaſt of the Iſland, near Amatus to the Eaſt: This Town formerly gave Name to the Iſland, the Inhabitants being called Citians. They ſent a Colony into Macedonia, and called the Town where they ſettled Citium. * Ptolomy, Lib. 5. Cap. 14. Plin. Lib. 5. Cap. 1.

CIVETTE, a ſmall Animal which furniſhes the Perfume called Civet: 'Tis about the Bigneſs of a Cat, or a large Poll Cat; it has ſome Spots, which Pliny calls Eyes in a Panther: Her Teeth are like Dogs Teeth, but frequently broken, for it is a fierce mettleſome Beaſt, and being impatient of Reſtraint, breaks her Teeth againſt the Iron-Bars of her Den. Her Pouch, which is the Receptacle of the Civet, is below her Fundament: 'Tis two Inches and a half broad, and five Inches long. Thus 'twill hold the Bulk of a little Hen's Egg: From hence an odoriferous Liquor diſtils from a great Number of Glands, which lie between the two Coats of her Pouch. Scaliger and Matthiolus are of Opinion, that the Civet's Perfume is nothing but Sweat; but this is a Miſtake, and ſo is their other Fancy, that Time makes it ſtronger, and that all the Civet-Cat's Body ſmells ſweet. Belo and a great many others believe the Civet-Cat to be the ſame with the Hyena mention'd by Ariſtotle; but Scaliger, Buelus, Matthiolus, Leo Africanus, Busbequius, Aldrovandus, and ſome other Moderns, will have the Civet unknown to the Ancients, and that ſhe is a ſort of a Cat. The Name comes from the Arabick Zibet or Zebed, which ſignifies Froth; this Liquid Matter being frothy and very white when it comes out, but loſes its Colour when laid up. This Account is extracted from the Academy Royal of Sciences by M. Perault.

Farther, Le Pere Ange de S. Joſeph reports, that at Baſſora, he has frequently ſeen the Gatto Zibetto; that 'tis a ſort of Poll-Cat; that they beat with a little Stick till ſhe ſweats Muſk. Theſe Civet-Cats are kept very cloſe to draw the Sweat from them, which runs upon their Wool, which is done once a-day. They make a great Revenue, but are kept at a conſiderable Expence. Every time they have a mind to get their Sweat, they put their Heads under a Fork, without this Poſture there is no maſtering them; for they are very untoward things, and not to be tamed. * Relation des Voyageurs.

CLARIO, or Claro, in Latin Clarius. (Iſidore) This Author's Letters were publiſhed in 1705, by Don Mauro Piazzi, Abbot of the Monaſtery of Parma. Clarius has furniſh'd two conſiderable Performances upon the Scripture; the one to correct the Verſion of the Vulgate through the whole Bible; the other makes Expoſitions for diſentangling the Literal Senſe of Difficult Paſſages. This Work is one of the moſt learned, moſt judicious, and moſt ſerviceable Performance that has been made upon the Bible. However, the firſt Edition, printed at Venice in 1542, was put in the Index Expurgatorius amongſt other prohibited Books, chiefly becauſe of the Freedom he takes with the Vulgate in his Preface. This Prohibition was taken off by the Committee of the Council of Trent for examining Books, and his Works ſuffer'd to paſs, excepting the Preface and Prolegomena. 'Twas afterwards very beautifully printed at Venice in 1564. Iſidore Clarius wrote with Eaſe and Perſpicuity, and was one of the moſt learned Perſons of his Time. * Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 16. Ghilini, Theat. d'Huom. Let. Le Mire, de Script. Sæc. 16, &c. R. Simon, Hiſtoire Critique du Vieux Teſtament. M. du Pin, Biblioth. des Auteurs Eccleſ. XVI. Siecle.

CLAUBERGIUS, (Johannes) Doctor in Divinity, and Profeſſor of Philoſophy and Divinity at Duisbourg in the Duchy of Cleves, was born at Solingen, a little Town belonging to the Duchy of Berg, or Mons in Weſtphalia. His Birth-day was February 24, 1622: He was Son to John Clauberg, an Elder of the Reformed Conſiſtory of his Town; his Mother was Katharine Caſpers. After he had ſtudied at Bremen and Groningen under celebrated Profeſſors, he travelled into France, and ſtaid ſome time at Saumur, where Capellus, Amyraldus, and La Place held the Chairs. From Saumur he went to Paris, and made an Acquaintance with the Learned of both Communions.

munions. From hence he travelled into England, and ſpending but little time here, returned to Groningen. Lewis-Henry, Prince of Naſſaw, invited him to Herborne, to teach Philoſophy and Divinity there. But he excuſed himſelf at firſt, and went to Leyden, where Des Cartes's new Philoſophy was in Vogue. Soon after he went to Herborne, and drew a great many Students thither. In 1651, he accepted the Philoſophy Chair at Duisbourg. He was one of the firſt that taught Des Cartes's Philoſophy in Germany, and managed with great Reputation and Succeſs. He died in January 1665. All his Works were collected in two Volumes in Quarto, and printed at Amſterdam in 1691. Moſt of them had been printed by themſelves, and ſome of them tranſlated into French and other Languages: The Titles are as follow; Phyſica Contracta. Diſputationes Phyſicæ. Theoria Corporum viventium. Conjunctio animæ & corporis. Metaphyſica de Ente cum Notis. Paraphraſis in Meditationes Carteſii, Notæ breves in Carteſii Principia Philoſophiæ. Exercitationes centum de Cognitione Dei & noſtri. Logica Vetus & Nova. This is an excellent Logical Performance, and proved very ſerviceable to the Authors of the Art of Thinking. Logica Contracta. Defenſio Carteſiana. Dubitatio Carteſiana. Differentia Carteſianam inter & vulgarem Philoſophiam. Exercitationes & Epiſtolæ Joh. Claubergii & Tob. Andreæ, varii Argumenti. * Henry Chriſtian Henninius's Life of Claubergius prefix'd to his Works.

* CLAUDIAN, a Latin Poet, living in the Fourth Century. Several Learned Men will have him an Egyptian, born at Canopus. Crinitus thinks this can't be denied, ſince Claudian in his Epigram to the Proconſul Gennadius has this Verſe;

Graiorum populis & noſtro cognite Nilo.

However, this is not the moſt General Opinion; for moſt of the Criticks report him a Spaniard; and Petrarch, Angelus Politianus, and Landini, will have him a Florentine: Others relate Claudian a Gaul, and that he was born at Vienne in Dauphine. Their Conjecture goes upon this Ground, that the Family of the Claudians has been conſiderable in this Town, and furniſhed a great many ingenious Men. But let this be as it will, 'tis certain Claudian was a Pagan, and lived in the Reign of Arcadius and Honorius, who erected him a Statue at Rome after his Death with this Inſcription: Tribunus: Notarius: inter Cæteras ingentes Artes Præglorioſiſſimus Poetarum. He wrote a Poem de Raptu Proſerpinæ, in three Books; two Books of Invectives againſt Ruffinus; two againſt Entropius, &c. The Poem upon our Saviour, which goes under his Name, is none of his. Some reckon it to Pope Damaſus; and granting 'twas written by Claudian, it muſt be Claudianus Mamercus, who lived in the Emperor Zeno's Reign. Claudian is without Diſpute the beſt Poet ſince the Age of Auguſtus; and Marcus Antonius Sabellicus had Reaſon to report him the laſt of the ancient Poets, and the firſt of the modern ones. M. Godeau, with ſeveral other German and Italian Criticks, declares, that amongſt all thoſe who endeavoured to imitate Virgil, Claudian has beſt reſembled the Majeſty of this Poet, and has the leaſt Appearance of the Diſadvantage of the Age he lived in. A Scotch Critick makes no Difficulty to preferr Claudian to Virgil: But without this Exceſs of Commendation, it muſt be allowed, 1. That Claudian had an admirable Genius. Crinitus ventures to ſay, that his Inclination lay happily for Poetry, and that Nature ſeems to have made him on purpoſe for this Study. The old Eccleſiaſtical Writers, Oroſius, and Paulus Diaconus, for Inſtance, give him the ſame Character. Ludovicus Vives ſays, Claudian was born a Poet, that he was Maſter of every Part of the Poetick Talent, and warmed with the Fire which produces Rapture and extraordinary Flights. Buchanan, Lipſius, Contarini, and Hanckius, are of the ſame Opinion. 2. As for Learning, Claudian ſeems to have been no negligent Obſerver of Nature, underſtood the Laws of his Country, and the Military Profeſſion. M. Baillet believes, Claudian had Learning enough for a Poet, that is, without going to the Bottom of thoſe Sciences, each of which take up a Man's whole Time: He was contented to dip a little into them, and only took enough to dreſs and recommend his Muſe; and it may be he had none but Homer and Virgil for his Improvement this way. 3. As for Claudian's Style, moſt of the Criticks agree, that 'tis correct, beautiful, and harmonious, ſolemn, noble, and ſublime: And that which he is moſt admired for, is to find it ſo ſmooth and natural, with a great many other commendable Qualities, which are ſeldom met with in other Poets. Some modern Criticks, however, cenſure his Latin. An Author of the Port Royal Gentlemen ſays, he ſwells too much towards Bombaſt. Briet and Rapin, two learned Jeſuits, make the ſame Remark to his Diſadvantage. Lilius Gyraldus tells us, Claudian begins his Subject with a great deal of Fire and Spirit; but after he has gone ſome way in his Courſe, his Muſe flags, and that the latter End of his Poems very rarely holds up to the Beginning. 4. Amongſt all Claudian's Pieces, his Invectives againſt Ruffinus and Entropius are moſt beautiful in M. Godeau's Judgment. This learned Critick thinks nothing can have more Heightnings, or be better finiſhed than theſe Satyrs. His Poem de Raptu Proſerpinæ, or, the carrying off Proſerpine, is the next in Value. The Poem upon the Conſulſhip of Honorius may be reckoned his Third-rate Performance. Julius Scaliger obſerves, Claudian refined ſomewhat upon Poetry, and brought in a new Embelliſhment, of which we have nothing reſembling, excepting in Perſius; and that is his making Prefaces to his Poems. As to the Editions of Claudian, that of Heinſius the younger is the beſt: That of Barthius is a very good one; but the Commentary is ſomewhat too long. But then the Scholiaſts for the Uſe of the Dauphin are not brought into this Compariſon. * Auguſtin, Lib. 5. de Civit. Dei, Cap. 26. Oroſ. Lib. 7. Cap. 35. Proſper. in Chron. Scaliger, Poet. Lib. 6. Lilius Gyraldus Dial. 4. de Vit. Poet. Ant. Godeau Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe. fin du IV Siecle. Crinit. de Vit. Poetar. Lib. 1. Cap. 85. Buchanan de Jure Regni apud Scotos. Rapin's Reflections upon Poetry, 2*d Part. Reflection* 14, and 15. Baillet, Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poetes Latins. Tom. 6. pag. 483. Where the Reader may find all the Criticks drawn up in order of Time who have paſt their Judgment upon Claudian.

CLAUDIUS, a famous Rapparee, who went upon the Road in Judæa and Syria, and did ſo much Miſchief, that the Emperor Septimius Severus ordered ſtrict Search to be made after him about the Year of our Lord 200. This Moſs-Trooper had the Confidence at the ſame time to come attended with ſome Gentlemen to the Emperor's Camp, to approach his Majeſtys Perſon, and pay his Reſpects to him as if he had been one of his Colonels; and when he had gone through this Ceremony, he withdrew without being known, inſomuch that there was no diſcovering him. * Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 75.

 CLAUDIUS Tiberius, &c. For Livia, Daughter to Auguſtus, in Morery Vol. I. read Livia, Wife to Auguſtus. And for Meſſalia his third Wife, read Meſſalina; and for poiſoning her Brother Germanicus, read her Brother Britanicus.

CLAUSEN, A German Town in Tirol: 'Tis ſituated upon a high Rock, near the River Eiſoko, between Brixen and Bolzano, three Leagues from the firſt, and ſix from the latter. It belongs to the Emperor. * Baudrand.

* CLEMENT I. a Diſciple of the Apoſtles, and an Aſſiſtant in propagating the Goſpel, as we may learn from S. Paul's Epiſtle to the Philippians, Chap. 4. Ver. 3. With Clement alſo, and with other my Fellow-Labourers. According to ſome Chronologers, he was conſecrated Biſhop of Rome in the Year 90, and ſat there till the End of the Firſt Century. The Acts of his Martyrdom are evidently counterfeit; neither is it certain that he was a Martyr, ſince Irenæus does not mention him under that Diſtinction. However, Ruffinus and Pope Zoſimus, at the End of the Third Century, allow him this Honour, and his Feſtival ſtands upon the Martyrologies on the 23d of November. His firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians is cited as an Authority next to the Holy Scriptures by ſeveral Ancient Eccleſiaſtical Writers; and indeed 'tis one of the nobleſt Remains of Antiquity. 'Tis written in the Name of the Church of Rome to the Church of Corinth, to compoſe ſome Differences amongſt the Chriſtians of the latter Church. The Genuineneſs of the ſecond Epiſtle is not unqueſtionable; however 'tis cited by the Ancients; and by the Fragment we have of it, it appears not unworthy S. Clement. The eight Books of the Conſtitutions, miſtakenly reckoned to him, is a Performance of conſiderable Antiquity, in which ſeveral Paſſages have been added and altered upon the Courſe of Time.

Clement's Recognitions, though a Book of Antiquity, is full of Error and Fiction. * M. Du Pin, New Eccles. Libr. Three first Centuries. Baillet Vies des Saints, 23 Novem. Tillemont, Memoires pour l'Histoire de l'Eglise, Tom. II.

*CLEMENT VIII. Antipope. For resigning his Claim so willingly, was made Bishop of Majorca by Pope Martin V. and thus an end was put to the Schism, which had lasted more than fifty Years.

*CLEMENS Titus Flavius Alexandrinus. For under the Emperor Alexander Severus, read Septimius Severus, in Morery Vol. I.

CLEMENT, a Scotchman, living in Germany in the Eighth Century. Boniface, Archbishop of Mentz, charg'd him with teaching several erroneous Doctrines: For Instance, that in Contradiction to the Canons, and the Authority of the Fathers, he maintained that he might be a Bishop though he had two Bastards; that he endeavoured to introduce Judaism, by allowing the Christians to marry their Brother's Widow; that he asserted that our Blessed Saviour, at his Descent into Hell, brought away all those detained there, both Believers and Infidels; and that he advanced several other Tenents contrary to the Catholick Faith touching Predestination. Boniface, Archbishop of Mentz, got him condemned in the Year 743, in a Council held at Lestines, a Palace belonging to the Kings of France, not far from Bins in Hainault; and afterwards delated him to Pope Zachary, in the Year 745. This Pope in a Synod confirm'd Boniface's Sentence, and deposed Clement. * Baronius, A. C. 742, & 745, &c.

CLEMENS, (Cassius) a Roman Senator in the Interest of Pescennius Niger, against the Emperor Severus. When this Prince sat in Person upon his Tryal, Clemens with a great deal of Assurance told him, that Niger's Cause, notwithstanding he miscarry'd, was no less Defensible than that of Severus which had Success: That both these Pretenders had the same Design, which was the Dethroning an Usurper; and that if Severus punished Niger's Adherents, he ought to punish his own; that otherwise he would be guilty of a Partiality, which though the present Times had not the Courage to censure, would infallibly stick upon his Memory. This unexpected Freedom made the Emperor recollect himself, and give Clemens his Life, with Part of his Fortune. This happen'd in the Year of our Lord 194. * Dion. Cassius, Lib. 74.

CLEMENT, (James) a Jacobin Monk, born at Sorbonne, a Village near Sens: He was professed in a Convent at Paris, and received Priest's Orders soon after: This Monk was but twenty five Years of Age when he assassinated Henry III. King of France. He was a heavy ignorant Fellow, and of a melancholy Constitution. Who they were that put him upon this Villanous Practice, is not certain, says Mezeray: "However, he thinks 'tis "plain the Attempt was suggested at least; for some "People were glad to find the Murder undertaken by "him, and furnish'd him with Instructions and Mea"sures to finish the Enterprize: For, continues the Hi"storian, some of his Friends made him acquainted "with the Count de Brienne, and some other Royalists "of Quality then Prisoners in the Bastile; that there "was a Pasport procur'd him from this Count, and a "Counterfeit Letter of Credence directed to the King "by the President Harlay." The Plot was executed in the manner following; La Gueste, Attorney-General, going with his Brother from his Seat at Vanvres to S. Cloud, met James Clement upon the Road; and understanding by him that he had Business of Importance to acquaint the King with, order'd him to get up behind his Brother, and carry'd him to S. Cloud. No Man could be more unconcerned than Clement upon this Occasion. His Humour, when at Supper with La Gueste's Domesticks, was gay and entertaining; he was not the least disconcerted at all the Questions put to him; and upon his going to bed, slept soundly till the Morning. The next day, when introduced into the Presence by La Gueste, he came up to the King without being over-set in the least, talked unsurprized to him, deliver'd him several Letters, and while the King was reading them, took his Opportunity, drew his Knife out of his Sleeve, and plunged it in his Belly. The King finding himself hurt, cry'd out, snatch'd the Knife out of the Wound, and struck the Assassin twice with it upon the Forehead and upon the Cheek. La Gueste drew his Sword, struck the Monk upon the Forehead with the Pommel, and two or three Persons more indiscreet killed him upon the Spot. When 'twas known who he was, the Grand Prêvôt, or Steward of the Houshold, had him drawn in Pieces by four Horses, burnt his Quarters, and scatter'd the Ashes in the Air. * Mezeray, Abrégé Chronologique, dans l'Histoire d'Henry III.

CLEMENTINES (The) are a Collection of several ancient Works, falsly reckoned to Clemens Romanus. 'Tis stuffed with Apochryphal Pieces, Fables and Mistakes: 'Tis published by Cotelerius in his Opera Sanctorum Patrum, &c. but the Name of Clementines is commonly given to a Collection of the Decretals of Pope Clement V. published by his Successor John XXII.

CLEODEMUS, an Athenian, famous for the Victory he gained over the Goths in the Year of our Lord 269, in the Reign of the Emperor Gallienus. The Barbarians rigged out a Fleet, powder'd upon Greece, and plunder'd it at Discretion. As they march'd on and ravag'd the Country, they took Athens, then a celebrated Seminary for Learning; and after having gather'd all the Books together, they were going to set Fire to them, when a Politick Goth stopt them, giving them to understand, that as long as the Greeks spent their time in these Learned Amusements, they would neglect making any Military Provisions, and give their Enemies Leisure to carry on their Conquests. Not long after, Cleodemus having got some Ships together, attack'd the Goths near the Sea-side, gave them an entire Defeat, and forced them to run off into other Countries. * Zonaras.

CLEON, born at Daulis in Greece, never dreamt in his whole Life, notwithstanding he lived to a considerable Age. The Reason commonly given was, that he had no Tincture of Melancholy in his Constitution; but possibly the Phænomenon may be explained another way; that is, the Impression which Dreams made upon his Brain were always worne out before he waked, which might proceed from the Texture of his Brain being uncommonly fine and fluid. * Plutarch, de Defect. Orac.

CLEONE, a Town within the Territory of Argos. Plutarch mentions it in the Lives of Timoleon, Demosthenes, and Cimon. Pausanias, in his Corinthiaca, reports it situated between the Towns of Corinth and Argos. Strabo says it stands upon an Eminence, surrounded with very good Walls, and in the Road between the two Towns above-mentioned; that it was eighty Stadia or Furlongs from Cleone to Corinth, and a hundred and twenty to Argos. 'Tis called at present San Vassali. * Strabo, Lib. 8. Lubin's Geographical Tables for Plutarch's Lives.

CLEONICE, a young Gentlewoman whom Pausanias having a mind to keep, sent to fetch her from Byzantium. Her Relations, though Persons of Condition, being afraid to disoblige this rough haughty General, were forced to part with her. When Cleonice came into Pausanias's House, she desir'd his Servants that all the Lamps might be put out before she came into their Master's Bed-Chamber. This being done, as she came towards the Bed, she happen'd to throw down a Stand. Pausanias, now asleep, waked with the Noise, and being afraid of some unfriendly Visitor, snatch'd his Dagger, and struck the Lady, who died of the Wound: 'Tis said he never enjoyed any Quiet after this Accident; and that Cleonice's Ghost appeared every Night to him in his Sleep, accosting him in menacing Language. This Misfortune made all his Allies desert and turn upon him; and making the most of this tragical Event, joined Cimon, and besieged him in Byzantium. However, he got privately out of the Town, and retired to Heraclea, to a Place where they consulted the Deceased to look into Futurity. Here he called up Cleonice's Ghost, and conjured her to lay down her Resentment. Cleonice appearing to him, made Answer, That he should be rescued from his present Disturbance as soon as he came to Sparta. The mystical meaning was probably this, that his Life was pretty near an end. * Plutarch, in Cimon's Life.

CLEOPAS, or Cleophas: The Name occurs but twice in the New Testament, though 'tis supposed different Persons are meant by it. The first is reckoned one of the seventy two Disciples, and nearly related to our Blessed Saviour, had the Surname of Alpheus, and was Son to James, and Brother to Joseph, the Blessed Virgin's gin's Husband. 'This Alpheus married one Mary, by whom he had four Sons and two Daughters: The eldest Son was Joseph or Joses, Mat. xxvii. ver. 56. Mark xv. ver. 40. The second Son was James, called the Less, or James the Son of Alpheus. The third was Jude, the Brother of James: The fourth was Simeon, Bishop of Jerusalem; all which the Reader may see in Morery Vol. I. 'Twas this Cleopas, who travelling to a Town called Emmaus, met our Blessed Saviour after his Resurrection, Luke xxiv. The Scripture does not tell the Name of the other Disciple who went along with Cleopas to the Town above-mentioned. S. Gregory, Theophylact, and Dorotheus, think 'twas S. Luke himself who reports the Passage: Others are of Opinion this can't be, because S. Luke, at the beginning of his Gospel, declares that he wrote only from Testimony, and not from what he had seen; but this Objection seems to have no Weight, because this Evangelist might be present at some of the Facts: For his Declaration does not deny his being an Eye-Witness to no Part of our Saviour's History, but only that the greatest Part of his Gospel was received from those who had the Evidence of Sense. It may be therefore more probably objected, that if S. Luke had been the Person, he would have said so to have made the greater Impression; but this is only Conjecture, and no Disproof of the former Opinion. Origen believes this other Disciple was Simeon, who went with his Father Cleopas to Emmaus. Epiphanius thinks it was Nathanael, whom our Saviour calls a True Israelite without Guile, and S. Ambrose calls this Disciple Emmaon; but all this is but guessing at the Matter. * Simon, Diction. de la Bible.

CLICTOVEUS, (Josselin) the best Controversialist of his Time, both for Learning and strong Reasoning: He confutes Mistakes without Passion and Personal Resentment. He understood the Holy Scripture very well, and had read a great deal in the Fathers; he wanted nothing but the Qualifications of a Critick, and more Skill in Languages to make him an accomplished Divine. He wrote Latin tolerably well, and much better than the School-men; but fell short of the Style of several contemporary Writers: He lived in the Sixteenth Century. * Spondanus, in Annal. Valerius Andreas, in Biblioth. Belg. Miræus in Elog. Belg. & de Script. Sec. XVI. M. du Pin, New Eccles. Library, Cent. XVI.

CLISSA, formerly called Andetrium, a good Fort belonging to the Venetians: It stands upon a steep Mountain in Dalmatia, four Leagues from Spalato to the North, and six from Sebenico to the East. * Maty, Dict.

CLISTHENES, Son to Aristonimus King of Sicyon in Peloponnesus: He prohibited the rehearsing Homer's Verses, because he thought them too much valued at Argos. He demolished Adrastus King of Sicyon's Monument: He likewise offer'd his Daughter in Marriage to the Conqueror at the Olympick Games. One Megacles an Athenian, happening to distinguish himself above the rest, received the Prize and carried his Bride to Athens. The precise time of his Government is not certainly known; but 'twas probably at the fifty eighth Olympiad. * Herodot. Lib. 6. Cap. 126.

CLITUS, a Mutineer at Tyberias in the War between the Jews and Romans. Flavius Josephus order'd one of his Troop to cut off his Hands; but this Soldier not having Resolution enough to do it, Josephus resolved to be the Executioner himself. Clitus perceiving he could not avoid the Punishment, desired he might have one Hand left him. This was granted, provided he would cut off the other himself. Upon this, Clitus drew his Sword, and chopt off his Left Hand. * Joseph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 2. Cap. 4.

CLOPPENBOURG, a small Town with a good Castle and large Bailiwick: 'Tis within the Bishoprick of Munster in Westphalia, at the Head of the River Soste, upon the Borders of the Earldom of Oldenbourg. * Maty, Diction.

* CLOTHO, one of the three Parcæ who held the Distaff, and drew the Thread: She is painted with a Party-colour'd Gown with a Crown upon her Head, powder'd with seven Stars, and a Distaff in her Hand. Lucian reports Clotho one of Charon's Companions; that she registred those that died, and who were to be ferry'd over in Charon's Boat. In the Dialogue between her and this Stygian Waterman, she speaks thus;

"Clotho. Charon, you're right, embarque your "Passengers, and in the mean time, I'll stand at the "Wharf with my Register, and ask every Person's "Name, his Family, and the Town where he lives; "and then Mercury shall take Care to stow them as "fast as they come in. Let's begin with the little Chil- "dren who have no Answer to make, neither have I "any Questions to put to them. * Lucian. Hesiod, Theogon. See Parcæ.

* CLOUAUD, Clodoald, or S. Cloud, was Son to Clodomir King of Orleans: He lost his Father A. D. 524, in the Battle this Prince gained upon the Burgundians. S. Cloud was bred at Paris at his Grandmother Queen Clotilda's Court, with his Brothers Theobald and Gontaire. Clotaire, Uncle to these young Princes, took them away under Pretence of crowning them, and then murder'd Theobald and Gontaire with his own Hands: But S. Cloud was conveyed away by some Court-Lords, who concealed him. When he was grown up towards a Major, he generously resigned his Father's Dominions, enter'd himself an Ecclesiastick, and took Leave of the World. He made an Acquaintance with one Severinus, a Religious, who lived in a little Cell near Paris, and spent some time with him in Monastick Discipline; but 'twas not long before he retired into Provence for more Solitude: But being discover'd in this Country, he return'd to Paris, where he was ordain'd Priest by the Bishop Eusebius, S. Germanus's Predecessor. And here he perform'd the Functions of his Character for some time, and then withdrew to the Village Nogent, upon the River Seine, two Leagues from Paris, where he built a Monastery, furnish'd it with some Monks, and spent the rest of his Life in Exercises of Penance. The time of his Death is not certainly known, but 'twas about the Year 560. He was bury'd in the Church of the Monastery, where his Corpse still remains. The Village Nogent was afterwards called S. Cloud; and here the Tomb of this Saint is to be seen with a very old Inscription. The Monastery was afterwards turn'd to a Collegiate Church. S. Cloud's Festival in the Martyrology stands upon the 7th of September. * Gregor. Turon. Lib. 3. Cap. 18. Du Saussay, Mart. des SS. de France, ou 4 Septembre, &c. M. Baillet, vies des SS. Septembre.

CNIVA, King of the Goths or Scythians, and Successor to Ostrogotha, passed the Tanais or rather the Danube, ravaged the Country about Thrace, and march'd at the Head of seventy thousand Men against the Town Enstherium, afterwards called Nova in the Lower Mœsia. He was repulsed by Gallus, but came powdring upon the young Decius, whom he defeated A. D. 250, and took Philippopoli; where, as Ammianus Marcellinus reports, there was a hundred thousand Men killed. The Emperor Decius march'd speedily to the Relief of the Provinces, routed the Goths, and recover'd all the Plunder; but by stopping their Passage over the Tanais, and forcing them to fight, he was routed and slain with his Son. Historians differ about the Circumstances and Place of this Battle. * Zosim. Lib. 1. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 31. Jornandes, Rer. Gothic. &c.

COBA, a Town beyond the River Oxus, and within the Dependency of Schasse or Farganah. Coba is more beautifully built, than the Capital Farganah. 'Tis situate in the 92d Degree 15 Minutes Longitude, and about the 42d Degree of Northern Latitude, in the fifth Climate, according to Abulpheda's Tables. The Castle is fallen to Decay, but the Wall of the Town is a very good one, and the Suburbs have a great many fine Gardens. There is a Place near Medina where the first Mahometan Mosque was built, which is likewise called Coba. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Oriental.

COBURG. (The Duchy of) 'Tis properly speaking Part of the Circle of Franconia, though Maps place it within Thuringia, which bounds it to the North: The Bishoprick of Bamberg lies to the East of this Duchy, the Bishoprick of Wirtsbourg to the South, and the Earldom of Henneberg to the West. The Bailiwicks of Eisfeld, Hilperhusen, Rombild, and Sternberg, make the Territories, together with Coburg, the Capital of the Duchy. This Duchy was formerly Parcel of the Duchy of Henneberg, and was carried by Marriage into the House of Misnia. The Branch of Sax-Altenbourg, possessed of it, failing in the Year 1672, it fell into the Hands of the Prince of Sax-Gotha, the nearest Relation of the Dukes of Sax-Altenburg. * Maty, Diction.

COCIUS,

COCCIUS, (Joſcelin) of Bilfeld, Canon of Juliers, was bred amongſt the Lutherans; but upon his coming to Cologne, turned Roman Catholick. He made a Collection of the Teſtimonies of the Fathers, and the Deciſions of the Councils, upon Controverſial Subjects: He was four and twenty Years upon this Work, and printed it at Cologne in two large Volumes, Folio, in the Years 1599 and 1600, under the Title of Theſaurus Catholicus. M. Du Pin gives it the Character of a laborious Work, but not written with that Care and Judgment that one would wiſh for. * M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. XVI.

CODURC, (Philip) was the French King's Secretary, and deſcended from Proteſtant Parents, but turned Roman Catholick, and applied himſelf to the Study of Languages and the Holy Scriptures: He was a great Linguiſt and a good Expoſitor: He wrote an excellent Commentary upon Job, and Annotations on the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th Verſes of the Ninth Chapter to the Hebrews, to ſhew that the Word Διαθήκη muſt be tranſlated Covenant, and not Teſtament. He tranſlated Job, and the Books written by King Solomon, into French, from the Hebrew Text. He likewiſe concerned himſelf with Controverſy: But in treating this Subject, he had always Regard to the Holy Scriptures, the Jewiſh Cuſtoms, and the Laws of the Roman Empire. Thus his Pen was governed in his Diſſertation on the Sacrifice of the Maſs, and the real Preſence of our Saviour's Body and Blood in the Holy Euchariſt, and in his Diatribæ of the Juſtification of the Saints. He likewiſe wrote a ſmall Diſſertation upon our Saviour's Genealogy. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. XVII.

COENUS, Pelemon's Son, and one of Alexander the Great's Favourites and Generals: He was diſpatched by this Prince to beſiege Bazira in the Indies. After he had built ſeveral Forts for a Blockade upon this Town, he returned to Alexander's Army, where he always commanded to Commendation. His Death, which happened in the third Year of the 113th Olympiad, was much regretted by Alexander: However, this Prince, in his Panegyrick upon his General, could not help cenſuring a Diſcourſe Coenus had made him to diſſuade carrying his Arms to the fartheſt Parts of the Eaſt. If Coenus, ſays he, had foreſeen the Shortneſs of his Life, he would never have given himſelf the Trouble of making ſo long a Speech. * Arrian. Quint. Curtius. Strabo.

COERANUS, an Alexandrian in Egypt, was the firſt Burgher in this Town who was admitted to ſit in the Roman Senate; the Alexandrians being expreſly excluded from this Privilege by Auguſtus's Edict: He owed this Promotion to Caracalla, who made him Senator and Conſul, A. D. 212, and this after he had been baniſhed by Severus, as an Abettor of Plautianus. * Dion. Caſſius, Lib. 51. Cap. 76.

COGORETO, or Cogureo, a Town in Italy. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of the States of Genoa, between Genoa and Savona, five Leagues from the firſt, and four from the latter. Chriſtopher Columbus, who made himſelf ſo famous by the Diſcovery of America, was born in this Town.

*COINTE, (Charles le) Prieſt of the Oratory, and Author of the Eccleſiaſtical Annals of France. This Latin Hiſtory makes eight Volumes in Folio, beginning A. D. 235, and ending at the Year 835. It takes in the Decrees of the Councils held in France, with Remarks upon them; a Catalogue of the French Biſhops, with their Lives; the Founders and Privileges of Monaſteries; the Saints Lives; Queſtions upon Doctrine and Diſcipline; and every thing that relates to the Church-Hiſtory of France. 'Tis a Work of vaſt Pains, and extraordinary Search into Authors and Records; but being wrought up without Style and Ornament, it gives little Entertainment, and had no great Paſſage at firſt. * Memoires Du Tems. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

COLLECT. This Word formerly ſignified an Aſſembly of the Faithful. Holidays were called Collect-days: And Contributions for the Poor being gathered on theſe Days, this collecting of Alms was likewiſe called Collects; and 'tis in this Senſe S. Paul makes uſe of the Word, 1 Corinth. Chap. xvi. Laſtly, ſhort Prayers recited by the Prieſt at the Maſs are called Collects. The Uſe of them is reckon'd to Pope Gelaſius and Gregory the Great; though it appears by ancient Records they were prior to theſe Popes, who only ſettled the Forms. This Prayer is called a Collect, becauſe it took in the Subſtance of larger Devotions, and was made in the Name of the Aſſembly. * Bona, de Rebus Liturgicis. De Vert, Explication des Ceremonies de la Meſſe, Edit. de Paris in 8*vo.*

*COLLEGE, a Name given to certain Bodies or Societies. The Romans had a great many Corporations of Mechanicks and other Profeſſions, anciently called Colleges; and had their Patrons and Proxies to manage their Buſineſs. For Inſtance, there was a College of Charioteers or Jockeys, Collegium Arigariorum & Aurigarum, who in the Publick Diverſions of the Circus drove againſt their Rivals for the Plate or Prize. They were ſubdivided into ſeveral Colleges or Fraternities, diſtinguiſhed by the Colours of their Habits. Gruter in his Inſcriptions mentions four; Ruſſatam, the Red, Praſinam, the Green, Venetam, the Blue, and Albatam, the White. Theſe Colours, as 'tis ſuppoſed, were worne to repreſent the four Seaſons, each Quadrille or Diſtinction repreſenting one: For the Purpoſe, the Green was an Emblem of the Spring, the Red of Summer, the Blue of Autumn, and the White of Winter, becauſe 'tis frequently cover'd with Snow.

The Augurs made another College: This Society, founded by Romulus, conſiſted only of three Perſons, to which Servius Tullus added a fourth: They were confined to this Number in the Year of Rome 454, when in the Conſulſhip of P. Apuleius Panſa, and M. Valerius Corvinus, the Tribunes of the People threw five more into the Corporation elected from the Commons. Thus the College continued nine Perſons till Sylla's Time, who increaſed it to fifteen, according to Florus, and as ſome other Writers relate to twenty four.

The College of Æſculapius, or Health, Collegium Æculapii & Hygiæ, was a Society or Corporation of ſixty Perſons, who upon certain Days in the Year met at a Place appointed for ſacrificing, for the Benefit of thoſe who were deſirous to addreſs the pretended Deities of Æſculapius and Health. And here there was an Entertainment for the Fraternity.

There was another College of Dendrophori, Collegium Dendrophororum: This Fraternity is often taken Notice of in old Marbles; and yet 'tis ſomewhat difficult to ſettle the Buſineſs of theſe Dendrophori. The Learned are divided upon the Queſtion. Salmaſius, in his Notes upon Caracalla's Life, written by Spartian, will have it, that thoſe who carry'd Branches of Trees in their Religious Proceſſions, were theſe Dendrophori, grounding his Conjecture upon Etymology. That for this Reaſon Sylvanus, in an old Inſcription cited by Gruter, is called Dendrophoros, becauſe this pretended Deity is commonly repreſented with a Branch of Pine, or ſome other Tree in his Hand.

The Title of the Theodoſian Code, De Paganis & Templis eorum, Leg. 20. ſeems to countenance this Opinion, "'Tis reaſonable, ſays the Text, that all the Eſtates "poſſeſſed by the Dendrophori, and other Pagan Pro- "feſſions, which were ſettled for Entertainments and "Diſtributions of Money, ſhould be annexed to the "Revenue for maintaining our Houſhold; that thus "the Miſapplication of the firſt Inſtitution may be ſup- "preſſed:" By this Law the Dendrophori ſeem'd to have been a Religious Society, and not the Name of a Trade.

However, the contrary Sentiment, maintained by moſt of the Learned, is by no means leſs probable: Thus the Dendrophori were Timber-Merchants, who ſold their Goods for the Service of the War, for Batteries and Fortification. Hence it is that they are commonly incorporated with thoſe who had the Care of providing Military Engines, and Timber for the Camp, called Fabri. They are likewiſe ranged amongſt the Centonarii, which was a Military Profeſſion. The Learned Gothofred, in his Commentary upon the Theodoſian Code, where the Dendrophori are reckon'd among the Centonarii, and Fabri, is of Opinion that Centonarii ought to be written Centenarii: That Centenarii were Mechanicks that fell'd large Timber, hew'd and ſold it: That the Dendrophori cut down rough Timber, not ſo long as that furniſh'd by the Centenarii, and that they provided Rafters for building; and that the Fabri were Carpenters who hew'd the Timber, fitted the Beams, and raiſed the Building:

Building: And thus from the reſembling Buſineſs of the Centenarii, Dendrophori and Fabri, the three Colleges, formerly diſtinct, were incorporated into one. * Cod. Theod. Tom. 5. Leg. 14. Tit. 8. pag. 184, 185. Antiq. Rom. Roſin. Dempſter.

COLLIUS, (Francis) one of the Doctors of the Ambroſian College in Milan, flouriſh'd in the Beginning of the Seventeenth Century: He wrote a Book entituled, De Animabus Paganorum, printed in two Volumes in Quarto at Milan, A. D. 1622 and 1623. In this Work, he diſcourſes of the Salvation or Damnation of a great many celebrated Heathens: He pronounces upon their Condition by Conjectures drawn from the Degrees of their Knowledge in Religious Matters, from their Lives and Behaviour, from their Sentiments and Writings, and from the Authority of Eccleſiaſtical and Pagan Authors. And here, after having reſolved ſeveral general Queſtions concerning the Means the Pagans had to ſave their Souls, he concludes for the Salvation not only of Melchizedeck and Job, but of the Egyptian Midwives, and the Queen of Sheba: Neither does he deſpair of the Happineſs of the Seven Wiſe Men of Greece, nor of Socrates; but then he takes the Liberty to damn Pythagoras, Ariſtotle, &c. though he grants they acknowledg'd the true God. He declares for Nebuchadnezzar's Happineſs, but believes the greateſt Part of the Heathen Princes loſt. He pretends there is no reaſon to queſtion the good Condition of the Magi, who came to worſhip our Bleſſed Saviour; but as for the Sibylles, he determines nothing. He diſcuſſes the Queſtions relating to the Salvation or Damnation of Adam, Cain, Enoch, Sampſon and Solomon; and pronounces the laſt ſaved. He ſpends his Judgment about the Condition of Tertullian and Origen; but makes a Recital of every thing which may ſerve to excuſe or condemn them. Theſe are the Subjects this Author has made Choice of to exerciſe his Wit and ſhew his Learning: For to ſpeak clearly, this Work is only Conjecture and the Product of Fancy, and the random Opinion of Men upon an impenetrable Argument, and where the Truth is only known to God Almighty, who is to ſettle the eternal Fate of Men. However, there are a great many ſerviceable and curious Thoughts in Collius's Book: 'Tis handſomly written, and full of Citations. To do him Juſtice, he takes Care not to run any great Riſque; for if he ſometimes advances Paradoxes, he gives them out for no more than Conjectures, and always determines with Temper and Latitude. Collius likewiſe wrote a Book de Sanguine Chriſti, in which there are ſeveral remarkable Paſſages. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

COLMAN, (S.) in Latin Colomannus, born in Ireland, paſſed through Germany in his Pilgrimage to the Holy-Land: 'Twas in the beginning of the Eleventh Century. Upon his appearing in Auſtria, he was taken for a Spy, ſent Priſoner to Stockeraw, a little Town in Lower Auſtria upon the Danube, and put to the Torture: He bore his Puniſhment with great Reſolution. The Judge having put ſeveral Queſtions to him, being diſappointed in his Expectation of Intelligence, condemn'd him to be hang'd with two Highwaymen: He was executed accordingly, October 13, 1012. The Malefactors Bodies were eaten up by the Crows; but S. Colman's remained untouch'd and unputrify'd; and the Timber upon which he ſuffer'd ſhot into Root and green Branches: 'Tis ſaid ſeveral other Miracles were wrought to mark the Innocence and extraordinary Piety of this Perſon. The Clergy and People of the Neighbourhood looking upon him as a Martyr, went in Proceſſion to receive his Corpſe, and conveyed them with great Solemnity into the Church of Stockeraw, where new Miracles being wrought, Henry Marquis of Auſtria remov'd his Body to the Town of Melck. He was honourably interr'd October 7, 1015, in the Collegiate Church founded by the Marquis Leopold I. Henry's Father. Some Years forward, the Canons of this Church were diſlodged and Benedictins put in their Place, and had the Charge of keeping S. Colman's Relicks. From this time, a Feſtival was ſettled for this Saint: It ſtands upon the 13th of October in the Roman Martyrology, where the Kalendar makes him a Martyr; and the Country of Auſtria, for farther Satisfaction to his Memory, pays him the Honour of a Patron or Guardian Spirit. * Erehenfroy, Abbé de Melck, a Contemporary Author. Lambecius, Tom. 2. Bibliotb. Imper. Dithmar. Evêque de Meersbourg. l. 7. Chron. ad fin. &c. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Octobre.

COLME, a River in Flanders: 'Tis properly ſpeaking a Branch of the Aa. It runs to Bergen S. Vinox, and falls into the Canal of Dunkirk. * Maty, Diction.

COLOCHINA, (The Gulph of) or Caſtel Rampano, anciently called Laconicus Sinus, a great Gulph in the Sea of Greece: It lies between the Coaſt of Zaconia and the Iſland Cerigo, with the Gulph of Napoli, to the Eaſt, and that of Coron to the Weſt. It takes the Name from the little Town Colochina upon the Coaſt, to the Weſt of Vaſilipotamo, and ſometimes from Caſtel Rampano upon the Coaſt, lying Eaſt of the ſame River. * Maty, Dict.

COLOGNA, a Town in Italy within the State of Venice: 'Tis in the Paduan, upon the Confines of the Territories of Verona and Vicenza, ſix Leagues from Vicenza to the South. * Maty, Diction.

*COLOGNE. To what is ſaid upon this Article in Morery Vol. I. may be added a Word or two concerning a Council ſaid to be held here in A. D. 346. In this Synod, Euphratus Biſhop of the Town is reported depos'd for denying our Saviour's Divinity. The Acts of this Synod are inſerted in the ſecond Tome of the Councils, pag. 615; but 'tis very probable theſe Records are counterfeited. For Satisfaction in this Matter, the Reader may conſult Baronius's Annals for the Years 346 and 347, and M. Du Pin's New Eccleſ. Libr. Tom 2. The Author of the Acts of S. Servatus, Biſhop of Tongres, is the firſt who cites this pretended Synod.

*COLOMBAN, (S.) Abbot of Luxeuil in Burgundy, was born A. D. 559 in Lemſter, a Province in Ireland: He was bred to Learning, and gave Proof of great Capacity and Application. Being apprehenſive of the Danger of a Secular Life, he put himſelf under the Conduct of a holy old Man, called Silenus, who perceiving Colomban had a great deal of Wit and Judgment, inſtructed him in the Holy Scriptures. Upon this, Colomban retir'd to the Abbey of Bencor, then the moſt celebrated Religious Houſe in Ireland. He lived here ſeveral Years under the Abbot Congalus, ſurnamed Fauſtus, Founder of this Monaſtery, ſtock'd, as 'tis ſaid, with almoſt three thouſand Monks. In the Year 589, he travell'd into France, where he was entertained in Auſtraſia by Childebert II. and Queen Brunehaut. He retired at firſt into the Deſart of Voſge, upon the Frontiers of the Dioceſe of Bezançon, where he lived in a Caſtle almoſt demoliſh'd, call'd Anegray. But the Number of his Diſciples increaſing, he was forced to look out for a more commodious Habitation; and in the Year 592, founded the Monaſtery of Luxeuil, having Gontrand King of Burgundy's Leave for this purpoſe.

Soon after, he founded the Monaſtery of Fontaine, and govern'd theſe two Houſes till he was expell'd by King Thierri, at the Inſtance of Queen Brunehaut, diſguſted at the Liberty S. Colomban took in reproving the King for Miſbehaviour: He was guarded to Nantes, and put on board for Ireland; but the Veſſel happening to be blown back, he went on Shoar and dwelt in Switzerland, then the Dominions of Theodebert, Brother to Thierri. He preach'd the Chriſtian Religion to the Swabian Heathens who lived upon the Lake of Geneva. Some time after, Theodebert being defeated and taken Priſoner by Thierri, S. Colomban was forced to travel into Italy A.D. 612, where he founded the Monaſtery of Bobio, at the Foot of the Appennins, in Agilulphus King of the Lombards Dominions, who made uſe of him for converting the Arians. Colomban died in this Monaſtery A. D. 615. He wrote a Commentary upon the Pſalms, never publiſhed; but his Rule, ſome Pieces of Poetry, ſeveral Letters, with other Tracts for Diſcipline and Penitential Canons, were printed at Louvain in the Year 1667. * Jonas, in vita S. Euſt. Sigebert de Script. Eccl. C. 60. Sirmond. Tom. 1. Concil. Gall. Surius, ad diem 21 Novem. Stengelius, in Cor. Luci. Baron. Poſſevin. &c.

COLOMBO, a little Town belonging to the Portugueze in Conog in Africk: 'Tis near the River Coanza, and two days Journey from Loanda San Paolo to the South. * Maty, Dict.

COLUBARA, an Iſland belonging to the Ottoman Empire in Europe: 'Tis in Servia, between the Arms of the Save, below the Mouth of the Drina. 'Tis conſiderably large, and the Town Sabacz ſtands in it. Some Geographers take it for the Old Matubaris. * Mat. Diction.

* COLYBES, were Corn bleſſed and diſtributed upon the firſt Saturday of Lent. The Greeks ſet the Riſe of this Cuſtom as high as Julian the Apoſtate; this Prince, it ſeems, having profaned the Bread and other Proviſions ſold in the Market at Conſtantinople in the beginning of Lent: Having thus profaned the Proviſions by the Blood of the Sacrifices offer'd to Idols; the Patriarch Eudoxus order'd the Chriſtians to eat nothing but Colybes, or bak'd Wheat. * Allatius. Du Cange, &c.

COMANA, or Nova Corduba, a Town in Southern America: 'Tis the Capital of Paria, otherwiſe called New Andaluſia. It ſtands upon the Gulph of Cariaca, upon the Confines of the Government of Venezuola. * Maty, Dict.

COMBRAILLE, a ſmall Country in Lower Auvergne, a Province of France: 'Tis near the Confines of La Marche, or Bourbonnois. It takes in the little Territory of Franc Alleu, and five others which take their Names from the five Villages Evahon, Chambon, L'Eſpar, Auzance and Sermur. Montegu is the principal Town within this Precinct. * Maty, Diction.

COMINO, or Cumin, formerly called Hepheſtia; a ſmall Iſland in the Mediterranean. 'Tis ſituate between the Iſland Gozo and that of Malta, and belongs to the Knights of this latter Iſland, who have built a good Fort to defend it againſt Pyrates. The Iſland Cominotto, or Cuminot, lies near the Southern Coaſt of Comino, and belongs likewiſe to the Malteze. * Maty, Diction.

* COMITIA, or Meetings for Elections at Rome: They were of three ſorts; the one made up of Curiæ or Pariſhes, called Comitia Curiata; others drawn out of Tribes, for that Reaſon called Comitia Tributa; and a third reckoned by Centuries, and going under the Denomination of Comitia Centuriata: The People of Rome being ranged under theſe Diviſions. None but the Burghers at Rome had Votes in the Comitia Curiata, where the leſſer Magiſtrates were elected; but in the two other Meetings, the Colonies and Country Towns voted equally with the Citizens of Rome: And 'twas in theſe numerous Aſſemblies that the Ardua Negotia were treated, and the Chief Magiſtrates choſen. See Centuries. * Roſin. Antiq. Rom. Lib. 8. Cap. 6.

COMMERCE. This powerful Expedient for enriching States and Kingdoms has been the Concern of moſt Governments. Under the firſt Line of the Kings of France, begun in the Year 418, and laſting till 751; during this Interval, 'tis hard to tell the Condition of Trade in this Kingdom; becauſe theſe Princes made Conqueſt their Inclination, and apply'd themſelves more to Military Exerciſe and Improvement, than to the Enriching their Dominions by Manufactures or Foreign Commerce. Charlemagne, ſecond King of the Second Race, called the Carolovinian Family, being deſirous to encourage Trade, erected the Office of King of the Merciers, who was to inſpect and govern the Merciers and Drapers throughout the Kingdom. This Officer, whoſe Poſt was conſiderable, had a Commiſſion to give Patents of Knighthood to the Mercers, and govern'd by Deputies in all the Provinces and principal Towns in the Kingdom. At this time of day, there was none but theſe Merciers who traded in all ſorts of Commodities; and in regard they work nothing themſelves, the King of the Mercers uſed to receive them with Compliment; Nous avons noblement reçu Chevalier; or, We have nobly received ſuch an one Knight. The Great Chamberlain, an Officer of the Crown, and who had Juriſdiction for inſpecting Manufactures, was put in the Place of the King of the Merciers, by Francis I. A. D. 1544. This Prince was a great Encourager of Learning and Arts, was the firſt French King who formed a Scheme for carrying on Trade to the remoteſt Parts of the Earth. 'Twas by his Inſtructions, given to Admiral Chabot, that the French made Diſcoveries from Cape Breton to Florida and Virginia; to which may be reckoned Maragnan and Caradia in America. He was reſolved likewiſe to rig out a Fleet for the Eaſt-Indies; but the executing this great Deſign was hinder'd by the War which broke out between this Prince and the Emperor Charles V. Charles D. of Orleans, Son to Francis I. Great Chamberlain of France, dying in the Year 1545, his Majeſty put down that Office, and ſat up that of King of the Merciers, which continued to the Year 1597, when Henry IV. ſuppreſs'd it and took the Buſineſs of Trade into his own Hands. 'Twas this King who ſet up a Manufacture of Tapeſtry-Hangings at the Gobelins, or the Fauxbourg of S. Marcellus at Paris; another for Gilt Leather at the Fauxbourg of S. Honoratus. He likewiſe erected Mills at Etampes for ſplitting and cutting Iron, a Manufacture for Linnen-Cloth, and Gold and Silver Brocades; at the Royal Square for Gawzes and fine Linnen; at Mante upon the Seine, for Earthen and Dutch Ware; at Paris, at Nevers, and at Briſambourg in Xaintogne, for Cryſtal-Glaſs, in Imitation of that made at Venice, at Paris, and at Nevers, and ſeveral other Places. This Prince likewiſe erected a Chamber or Council of Commerce, conſiſting of Officers taken out of the Parliament, the Chamber of Accounts, and the Court of Aides, where every thing relating to Trade was ſettled and determined. In 1607, he erected the Office of Maſter-Viſitor, and Reformer-General of Merchandize: His Buſineſs was to inſpect all Manufactures which made the principal Branch of Trade. Lewis XIII. deſirous to encreaſe the Trade by Sea, made Cardinal Richelieu Great Maſter and Superintendant-General of Navigation and Commerce; and this Miniſter ſet up ſeveral Companies for the promoting Trade. In 1626, this Prince ſet up a Council for Commerce, conſiſting of four Privy-Counſellors, and three Maſters of the Court of Requeſt, where the Superintendant of Navigation was Preſident. Lewis XIV. has made the French Trade flouriſh in all Parts of the World: To which the Advice and Application of Monſieur Colbert has very much contributed. * French Morery.

COMMERCY, a little Town within the Duchy of Barr in Lorrain. 'Tis Capital of a Barony of the ſame Name. It ſtands upon the Meuſe, about three Leagues above S. Michael, and four from Toul to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

COMMIRE, (John) a Jeſuite, born at Amboiſe in the Year 1625. His Writing gave him a conſiderable Character among the Learned of his Time. He had Penetration and Judgment; and his being converſant with the beſt Authors of Antiquity, made his Style very copious and entertaining: And it may be, ſince the Age of Auguſtus, no man has ſucceeded better in Lyrick Poetry. In his Odes, the Thoughts are ſublime, the Images lively, the Expreſſion correct, and the Ranging of the Periods muſical; all which Advantages are not to be met with in any other Lyrick Poet ſince Horace. The Manner of his Fables is particularly entertaining: He ſeems to have borrowed the Politeneſs of his Style from Phædrus, with that natural genteel way of telling his Story, which makes the true Character of that ſort of Writing. He has imitated the beſt Roman Antiquity with great Exactneſs; and though his Genius lay moſt for the Belles Lettres, he inſtructed young People in Divinity, and read to Commendation in that Faculty ſeveral Years. He died at Paris in 1702. His Latin Poems, making one Volume, were printed ſeveral times in his Life-time: His Poſthumus Works were likewiſe publiſhed. * Menagiana, Tom. 2. pag. 287. Edit. Holland. Baillet, Jugemens des Savans ſur les Poëtes Modernes.

COMMODIANUS, a Chriſtian Author living about the Beginning of the Fourth Century. He was firſt a Pagan, and converted by reading the Bible. He wrote a ſmall Tract in Verſe; it goes upon Doctrinal and Practical Heads: But as to the Verſification there is nothing of Harmony or Cadence in it: 'Tis rough and remote from the Spirit of Poetry. He attacks the Pagans and Jews, and gives very good Inſtructions to the Catechumens, the ſtanding Faithful, and thoſe under Penance. None of the Ancients, excepting Gennadius and Pope Gelaſius, mention this Author, and the latter throws his Performance amongſt Apocryphal Books: His Reaſon poſſibly was, becauſe Commodianus goes into the Sentiment of Papias, Juſtin Martyr, Tertullian, and other Millenary Fathers. This Tract lay undiſcovered till Sirmondus finding it in an old Manuſcript, Rigaltius made uſe of his Copy, and publiſhed it at the End of S. Cyprian. * Gennad. de Script. Eccleſ. Gelaſius Decret. de Apocryphis.

COMPANY. (Eaſt India) This Society was ſet up in France in 1664, for Trading in the Eaſt Indies. The Chamber or Body who manage the Affairs of this Society, meet at Paris: They conſiſt of twenty one Directors, twelve of which are choſen out of the Burghers of Paris, and nine out of the Provinces. There are likewiſe Offices for managing the Affairs of this Company in other

Towns

Towns of this Kingdom. This Company has Privilege of Trading, excluſive of all other French Subjects, from the Cape of Good Hope to the Indian Ocean; and this for the Term of Fifty Years. The King likewiſe granted theſe Merchants the Propriety and Lordſhip of all the Iſlands and Countries which they could ſeize or conquer from his Majeſty's Enemies. He likewiſe gave them the Iſland of Madagaſcar or S. Laurence. The Commodities which this Company import from the Eaſt Indies are Gold and Spices, Silk, Cinnamon, Pepper, Ginger, Nutmegs, Cotton Cloth, Wad, Porcelaine, Log-Wood, Ivory, Frankincenſe, Bezoar-Stone, &c. The Portugueze were the firſt Europeans who ſailed on the Back of Africa, and diſcovered the Way by Sea to the Eaſt Indies. This Diſcovery was made in 1498, when the Spaniards, by Columbus's Diſcovery, made themſelves Maſters of Part of America, which gave Occaſion to the famous Partition made by Pope Alexander VI. who drawing an imaginary Line from one Pole to t'other, which was to be about a hundred Leagues from the Azores, gave the King of Caſtile all the Country to the Weſtward of this Line, and to the King of Portugal all that lay to the Eaſt. The Dutch ſet up an Eaſt India Company in 1595. Sir William Temple obſerves, "That five or ſix Eaſt India Ships "uſed formerly to make the Dutch Fleet of the Year for "that Branch of Trade; whereas now, continues this "Author, they are riſen to eighteen or twenty. This "is the Reaſon why particular Perſons of that Company "in Holland make not ſo great Advantage of the ſame "Stock as ours do in England, though their Company is "very much richer, and drives a far greater Trade than "ours. This is the Reaſon the Dutch are forced to keep "ſo long and ſo much of their Commodities in their "Ware-Houſes in Holland, and to bring them out only "as the Market calls for them. 'Tis likewiſe the Reaſon "why they bring ſo much leſs from the Indies than they "might do, if they had Vent enough here: As I re-"member, ſays Sir William Temple, one of their Seamen, "newly landed out of their Eaſt India Fleet in the "Year A. D. 1669, upon diſcourſing a Boat between "Delf and Leyden, told us, that before he came away "from the Indies, he ſaw three Heaps of Nutmegs burnt "at a time, each of which was more than a ſmall "Church could hold, which he pointed at in a Village "then in Sight." To proceed, the Engliſh Merchants of London, in 1600, had a Patent from Queen Elizabeth for Trading in the Eaſt Indies. The Danes likewiſe have a Share in this Branch of Commerce. Their Buſineſs lies within the Gulph of Bengal, upon the Coaſt of Pegu, and in ſome Iſlands to the South. The famous Guſtavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, projected an Eaſt Company for his Subjects in the Year 1626; but the War in Germany prevented the Execution of the Deſign. * Paris Morery.

COMPANY. (The Weſt India) In the Year 1664, the French King ſet up a Company at Paris for Trading in America, from the River of the Amazons to that of Oronoko, and to the Antillæ Iſlands, then in the Hands of the French. Their Patent likewiſe reached to Canada, Acadia, the Iſlands of Newfoundland, and other Iſlands from the North of Canada to Virginia and Florida. They had alſo a Royal Grant for Trading upon the Coaſt of Africk from Cape Vert to the Cape of Good Hope. * Paris Morery.

COMPANY, (The Levant) a Body of ſome private Perſons in France, being determined in the Year 1669, the King permitted the erecting of a new Company in 1670 for Trading in the Levant, that is, in the Countries lying upon the Mediterranean. * Paris Morery.

COMPANY, (The French China) in 1660, granted a Licence to this Body for Trading in China, in the Kingdoms of Tonquin and Cochin-China, and the neighbouring Iſlands. * Paris Morery.

COMPANY, (Landt) that is to ſay, the Land or Country of the Company. Thus the Dutch call Part of the Coaſt of the Country of Jeſſo. It lies to the North of the Iſland of Japan. * Maty, Diction.

* COMPITALES, (Compitalia) kept by the Romans upon the Croſs-ways. Macrobius reports, that they ſatisfied their pretended Deities with Straw Statues of Men and Women, which they ſacrificed inſtead of Children formerly murdered at this Solemnity: And for each Slave in their Family, they threw in ſo many Bales of Wool, and with theſe their Gods were glad to be contented. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus relates, that this Feſtival was kept after the Saturnalia, that is, in the Beginning of January; and that 'twas proclaimed in theſe Words: Die nona poſt Kal. Janu. qui Ritubus Compitalia erunt. Tully tells us, he declined going to his Houſe at Alba, to prevent diſguſting his Slaves, then buſy in keeping the Compitalian Solemnity. * Dion. Halicarnaſſ. Antiquit. Lib. 4. Cicer. Epiſt. Famil. Lib. 7.

CONANTIUS, Biſhop of Palenza, lived in the Beginning of the Seventh Century. Gennadius gives him the Character of a Perſon of Diſcretion, Learning and Elocution. He takes Notice of his applying himſelf to the regulating Divine Service; that he made Hymns with new Tunes, and threw in Forms of Prayer taken from the Pſalms. * Gennad. de Script. Eccleſ. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, VII and VIII Century.

* CONCEPTION. (The Immaculate) Thus thoſe who believe the Bleſſed Virgin clear of Original Sin, call her being conceived. This, as the French Supplementer ſpeaks, though a pious Opinion, is no Article of Faith; for neither the Scripture nor the Fathers have excepted the Bleſſed Virgin from the Condition of other Mortals in this reſpect. S. Bernard, though a great Votary to the Bleſſed Virgin, ſeems no Friend to the Sentiment of the Immaculate Conception. Thomas Aquinas, Bonaventure, and Alexander Hallenſis, likewiſe believe the Bleſſed Virgin conceived in Sin, and that ſhe was ſanctified in her Mother's Womb immediately after Conception. Scotus, a Franciſcan, was the greateſt Champion for the Immaculate Conception, which was afterwards maintained by thoſe of his Order. The Dominicans, on the other ſide, appearing ſtrongly againſt this Belief, the Council of Baſil, in the 36th Seſſion, decreed for the Immaculate Conception; and the Faculty of Divinity at Paris fell in with this Opinion, and maintained it about the End of the Fourteenth Century, againſt John Mançon, Doctor and Divinity Profeſſor of S. Dominick's Order. This Divine, in 1387, paſted up ſeveral Theſes in S. Thomas's Hall, amongſt which there were fourteen Propoſitions charged with Heterodoxy; and amongſt theſe four or five againſt the Bleſſed Virgin's Immaculate Conception. He not only aſſerted her being conceived in Original Sin, but held it a fundamental Error to maintain the contrary. At the ſame time ſome of his Fraternity preached the ſame Doctrine at Paris, which gave great Offence both in the Town and Univerſity. And when the Dean of the Faculty who had been apply'd to for ſuppreſſing this Liberty, reported theſe Propoſitions to the Body, without naming the Author; John Monçon, then preſent, was ſo far from recanting or making any Excuſe, that he proteſted he had done nothing in this Affair, but by Advice of the chief Perſons of his Order. Thus perſiſting in his Singularity, and having once promiſed to retract, and not keeping his Word, the Faculty in the firſt place, and afterwards all the Univerſity in a Body, cenſured his Theſes as falſe, raſh, ſcandalous, and contrary to Chriſtian Piety. Peter d'Orgemont, Biſhop of Paris, confirmed this Cenſure, and condemned the Dominicans Propoſitions in Form: The Sentence was pronounced in the Court of Noſtre Dame Church, abundance of People being preſent. John de Monçon, who foreſaw he ſhould be condemned, withdrew to the Court at Avignon, where his Fraternity had an Intereſt. Here he appealed from the Biſhop's Sentence to the Pope, and proteſted, with the reſt of his Order, that the Doctrine of S. Thomas Aquinas, approved by the Church, lay at Stake; and that neither the Univerſity nor the Biſhop of Paris had ſufficient Authority to condemn it. Upon this, the Univerſity deputed four of their moſt eminent Doctors, Petrus de Alliaco, Great Maſter of Navarre, and afterwards Biſhop of Cambray, and Cardinal, Giles des Champs, John de Neuville, Bernardins, and Peter de Alainville, Doctor and Canon Law Profeſſor: And at the ſame time, they ſent abroad a Circular Letter to juſtify their Proceeding againſt the Dominicans, who had falſly alledged the Doctrine of Thomas Aquinas in their Defence. Theſe Commiſſioners had Audience of his Holineſs in a full Conſiſtory, and John de Monçon had the Liberty of making his Defence both by Word of Mouth and in Writing. The Pope having heard both ſides, and taking almoſt a Year for a thorough Examination of the Matter, confirmed the Biſhop of Paris's Sentence and the Cenſure of the Univerſity. He likewiſe ordered John de Monçon to return to this Learned Body, and ſubmitt without Reſerve to their Correction. John, to keep himſelf from going to Jayl promiſed to obey this Order, but ran away the Night following, and got to his own Country in Arragon. The Commiſſioners, at their Return to Paris, were received with Acclamations and publick Reſpect of the Religious Orders: But the Dominicans, thinking themſelves well ſupported with the Intereſt of William de Valence, a Brother of their Society, Biſhop of Evreux, and King's Confeſſor, made no Scruple to maintain the cenſured Propoſitions. Upon this, the Univerſity expelled them their Body. The Biſhop of Paris forbid them Preaching or taking Confeſſions, and a great many of them were dragged to Priſon. No body would give them any charitable Relief; and thoſe who ventured to go out of their Convent, were pelted by the Mob, and abuſed in the open Streets.

ſity

The Pope being informed of John de Monçon's Eſcape, and the Obſtinacy of his Party, excommunicated them in a Bull, which was ſent from Avignon to be fulminated againſt them in France. Ferri Caſſinel, Biſhop of Auxerre, was pitch'd on to lay it before the King, and preſs the Execution: This Biſhop did his Part with ſo much Zeal, that the King ordered the Apprehending all thoſe who diſcourſed or wrote againſt the Immaculate Conception; and that they ſhould be brought up to Paris, to be diſciplined by the Univerſity. In ſhort, the Dominicans were forced to recant publickly, and promiſed they would keep the Feſtival of the Immaculate Conception. The hardeſt Puſh in the Proſecution was, the Univerſity's not ſuffering the Biſhop of Evreux ſhould perſiſt in his Sentiment, procured an Order from his Majeſty, that this Prelate ſhould condemn the Doctrine repugnant to the Immaculate Conception by a publick Act; which he did accordingly before the King, the Princes, the Conſtable Cliſſon, the Lords of the Court, and the Council, the Rector of the Univerſity of Paris, attended by the Deputies of the four Faculties. And the Matter went ſo far, that the King would not make uſe of this Prelate any longer: And as for the reſt of the Dominicans, they remained diſincorporated from the Univerſity many Years; not being re-admitted to that Body till 1403. Sixtus IV. who was a Franciſcan, left Divines at Liberty to hold either the Affirmative or Negative of this Queſtion; though as for himſelf he inclined to the Affirmative. The Council of Trent, in the ſixth Seſſion decreed nothing deciſive touching this Matter: However, they excepted the Bleſſed Virgin in their Decree, where they aſſert all Men conceived in Original Sin: Declaring at the End of this Decree, that their Intention was not for comprehending the Bleſſed Virgin; but that Sixtus IV.'s Conſtitutions ought to be obſerved in this Controverſy. This Exception is not inſerted in the firſt Editions of the Council; the Reaſon is, (as we are informed from a Manuſcript of Curtemboſche, who aſſiſted at the Council) that the Queſtion fell under ſome Difficulties and Contradictions in the Debate; but at length the Exception paſs'd, and was approved by the Council in the laſt Seſſion. Pius V. in his Conſtitutions publiſhed in 1570, ſet forth by Vertue of the Conſtitutions of Sixtus IV. confirmed by the Council of Trent, that every one ſhould have the Liberty to hold the Propoſition in that which he thought the moſt pious or the moſt probable Senſe.

About the End of the Sixteenth Century, the Jeſuite Maldonat having in his Lectures handled the Queſtion of the Immaculate Conception of the Bleſſed Virgin in a Problematical way; the Pariſian Divines took Check at it: The Rector of the Univerſity complained about it to Peter de Gondi, Biſhop of Paris, who gave Judgment for Maldonat in 1575. The Faculty of Divinity on the other ſide publiſhed a Concluſion or Reſolution, in which they declared the Opinion of the Immaculate Conception an Article of Faith. This Reſolution of the Faculty provoked the Biſhop of Paris to that degree, that he excommunicated the Syndic and the Dean of the Faculty, who appealed from his Sentence to the Parliament: The Cauſe was pleaded there before the Biſhop of Paris. The Court ordered theſe two Doctors ſhould be abſolved ad Cautelam; and thus the Affair reſted with the Parliament. But Pope Gregory XIII. confirmed the Biſhop of Paris's Sentence. From this Time the Immaculate Conception is the general Opinion of the Divines, but not held as a Point of Faith.

The Feſtival of the Conception, begun to be kept in the Twelfth Century, is no convincing Proof that this Conception muſt be Immaculate, becauſe in the Martyrologies we meet with the Feſtival of S. John's Conception. The Emperor Manuel Comnenus ſettled this Holiday for the Greek Church in the Twelfth Century: And at the ſame time it began to gain Ground in France. The Canons of Lyons, attempting to begin this Cuſtom, were oppoſed by S. Bernard: But notwithſtanding his Oppoſition, the Solemnity prevailed in France and England; where ſome called it the Feaſt of the Sanctification: And here 'twas at every body's Choice to keep or not keep it, till the Decree of the Council of Baſil, A. D. 1439, which by the way was not received at Rome. In ſhort, Sixtus IV. expreſly enjoined it by his Conſtitutions, publiſhed in 1476, and 1483. Alexander VII. confirmed theſe Conſtitutions by a Bull dated 1661. * Launoi, Præſcript. Several Tracts concerning the Conception. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library. Baillet Vies des Saints, 8 Decembre.

* CONCORDATE. The Pragmatick Sanction was ſettled A. D. 1438, in a Meeting of the Clergy at Bourges: It went upon the Authority of the Council of Baſil, with ſome Modifications. This Proviſion was approved and executed in France during the Reign of Charles VII. Pope Pius II. at a publick Meeting held at Mantua A. D. 1459, declared againſt the Pragmatick Sanction, and threatned to ſuppreſs it in a Diſcourſe to the French Ambaſſadors. Theſe Ambaſſadors on the other ſide maintained it; and the King's Attorney-General enter'd his Proteſt againſt the Pope's Speech. After the Death of Charles VII. Lewis XI. laid the Pragmatick Sanction aſleep; but the Parliament made a long Remonſtrance againſt this Repealing Edict, and refuſed to verify it. Lewis XI. dying in Auguſt 1483, theſe States convening at Tours, addreſs'd for the Execution of the Pragmatick. Thus 'twas obſerv'd through the Reign of Charles VIII. and Lewis XII. A. D. 1489, commanded it ſhould be ſtrictly kept to. The Council of Lateran, beginning in the Pontificate of Julius II. in the fourth Seſſion, ſummoned the Abettors of the Pragmatick. This Pope dying, and the Council kept on by Leo X. it happen'd that when Francis I. made himſelf Maſter of Milan, the Pope and the King had an Interview at Bologna, where they ſettled the Concordate: This Agreement was publiſh'd and approv'd in the Eleventh Seſſion of the Council of Lateran, held Novemb. 9, 1516. The King endeavoured to get it received and verified in the Parliament Feb. 16, 1517; and for this Purpoſe went thither himſelf; but the Parliament would not comply, and refuſed to verify his Letters Patents May 13, 1517, which enjoined keeping the Concordate. And on the other hand, this Parliament paſſed an Order, importing that their Court neither could nor ought to enroll or regiſter the Concordates, but to keep the Pragmatick as formerly. The King commanded the Parliament to ſend ſome of their Bench to him, to inform him touching the Motives for this Decree. Upon this, their Court pitch'd upon Andrew Verjus, and Francis de Lyons, to repreſent them, and carry their Remonſtrance in Writing. The King, however, took no Notice of this Inſtrument and ſent the Lord de la Trimouille with expreſs Order to publiſh the Concordate. The Parliament offer'd to publiſh the Concordate, provided they might declare they did it only upon his Majeſty's expreſs Order; and with a farther Proteſtation, that their Meaning was not to authorize or approve this Publication, and that Suits depending in Matters relating to Church Preferment ſhould be decided by the Pragmatick, as if the Concordate was not in being. The Univerſity and Chapter of Notre-Dame at Paris likewiſe approved the Publication of the Concordate. At laſt the Lord de la Trimouille coming to the Court, and exhibiting the King's Letter, by which he was order'd to be preſent at the Publication of the Concordate; this Accommodation between the Pope and the King, was publiſhed and regiſter'd March 22, 1517. With this Clauſe however, that 'twas done by the King's expreſs Command, ſeveral times repeated, and in the Preſence of the Lord de la Trimouille. The Parliament afterwards renewed their Proteſtations, and the Univerſity likewiſe appeared ſtrongly againſt the Concordate. This Oppoſition occaſioned a great deal of Conteſt in the Parliaments between the Biſhops and Abbots elected elected by the Chapter and Convents, and those nominated by the King. The Parliament always gave Judgment by the Pragmatick; and the Great Council, to whom these Causes were remitted by Louisa of Savoy, then Regent of France, governed themselves by the Concordat. And when Francis I. was enlarged from his Confinement at Madrid, he prohibited the Parliament the Cognizance of these Causes, and ordered they should be try'd at the Council Board. The Clauses of the Concordate touching the declaring the true Value of Benefices, and those relating to Mandates, were annull'd; Annates were restrained to Consistorial Benefices, and the King's Nomination reached to Archbishopricks, Bishopricks and Abbeys, which had the Privilege to choose their Abbot. Notwithstanding things continued in this Condition, and the Concordat has been all along kept within these Limitations; notwithstanding this, the Parliaments, the Estates, and the Assemblies of the Clergy, have frequently since, though to little Purpose, made several Efforts for recovering the Freedom of Elections. * Pinsson, Pragmat. Sanct. Maimbourg, Hist. du Pont. de S. Greg. le Grand. Fr. Duaren, de Sac. Eccleſiæ Beneficiis. P. Pithou, Hist. de l'Origine de la Pragm. Sanct. & du Concordat. Du Pin, Biblioth. des Aut. Eccles. XVI Siecle.

CONCORDIA, a Town in Italy with the Title of an Earldom. 'Tis within the Duchy of Mirandola, two Leagues from the Town of Mirandola to the West. * Maty, Diction.

CONDROS, a little Province within the Bishoprick of Liege. This Country reaches from the Territory of the Town of Liege to Dinant upon the Meuse, having Hasbaye and the County of Namur to the North, and the Duchy of Luxembourg to the South. Huy is the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

CONFARREATION. The Ceremony of Confarreation was observed amongst the Romans at certain Nuptial Solemnities: 'Twas so called from a Cake of Wheat made use of upon such Occasions. Tacitus gives this Account of it. " 'Twas the Custom to pitch upon three " Persons of Patrician Families, whose Fathers had been " married with the Ceremony of Confarreation; but this " Usage cannot be practised at present, either because " this Ceremony has been neglected, or for the Difficulty of going through it; or rather for the little " Regard now paid to the Business of Religion; or, in " fine, because of the Privilege the Priests and their " Wives have of being discharged from the Authority " and Jurisdiction of their Fathers, by vertue of their " Sacerdotal Characters. * Rosin. Dempster.

* CONFESSION: This Word has a particular and foreign Signification sometimes occurring in History. The Ancients called the Sepulchres or Tombs of the Martyrs by this Name; S. Peter's Confession at Rome was secured with two Keys; and when the Popes sent Kings and Princes some of the Filings of S. Peter's Chains, they put them up in a hollow Golden Key, made like one of those which lock'd up this Apostle's Tomb. * Du Cange Glossar. Latinitat.

CONFLANS, from Confluence, signifies the Meeting of two Rivers. Amongst other Places of this Name, there is one a League above Paris, where the Marne falls into the Seine. Here Jane, Queen of Navarre, died in 1349. It belongs at present to the Archbishop of Paris, where they have a noble Seat, very much improved and ornamented by Francis de Harlay de Chanvalon, formerly Archbishop of Paris. Before the discalceated Carmelites built near this House, there was a most surprizing Eccho between Conflans and Charenton. Pliny mentions an Eccho at Athens, and another at Olympia, as a very extraordinary thing, because it returned the Sound seven times; but here the Voice was ten times repeated.

CONFLANT. S. Honorine, a Town in the Isle of France, where the Oyse and the Seine meet, between Poissy and Pontoise, five or six Leagues below Paris. * Maty, Diction.

CONFLANT en Jarnisi, a Town belonging to the Duchy of Barr in Lorrain, stands at the Confluence of a little River, with the Orne, between Verdun and Metz. Some Geographers take this Place for that called Ibliodorum, which others make the modern Beuville, a Village of the same Country, standing upon a little River between the Towns Conflans and Fresne. * Bandrand.

* CONFUCIUS, a famous Chinese Philosopher. Four Books, of which Confucius is supposed the Author, are of great Authority amongst the Chinese. The first of these Books is entituled Ta-Kio, or the Grand Science. Only the first Chapter of this Book was written by Confucius, and published by his Disciple Tieng-Su. The rest of this Book is only a Commentary upon the first Chapter, made by this Disciple. The second, entituled Chun-Jung, or the Middle of Vertue, is written by Cu-cu, Confucius's Grandson, Scholar to Cemcius, and Mencius's Master. The third, called Lungya, or Conferences, is a Collection of the History and Opinions of Confucius and his Scholars. The fourth is a Collection of the Conversations Mencius, born ninety six Years after Confucius's Death, had with the Learned Men of his Time. Father Couplet translated the three first Books of this Work into Latin. Notwithstandig some pretend to find the Worship and Belief of the true God in these Books; yet upon a thorough Enquiry, the Reader will find little better than Atheism and Irreligion at the Bottom: For 1. The Sky or Vertue is made the Supreme Deity. 2. The Book recommends Superstitious Worship and Sacrificing to other Beings besides God Almighty. 3. This Book promises no Happiness or Rewards beyond this Life. * Martini, Hist. Sinica. Intorceta Couplet. Defense de la Censure de la Faculté de Theol. de Paris. Consult the Article CHINA in Morery.

CONGIARIUM a Bounty in Money which the Emperors distributed to the Commonalty of Rome: But the Largesses they gave to the Soldiers was called Donativum. Thus Tacitus, mentioning both those Bounties, says, Congiarium Populo, Donativum Militibus dedit. Sometimes every body had thirty Sestertii, sometimes forty, and sometimes two hundred and fifty, as Suetonius observes. Children were not barred this Bounty in the Reign of Augustus, though before that time none but those above twelve Years old received any Share.

CONGREGATION de Auxiliis, or the Assistances of Grace. Thus the famous Assembly of Prelates and other Divines was called: They were convened at Rome by Clement VIII. and Paul V. to give their Judgment on Lewis Molina, a Spanish Jesuite's Book, entituled, De Concordia Gratiæ & Liberi Arbitrii. The Dominicans, who disputed first at Salamanca against Molina's Positions, delated him at Rome, and pretended to prove that this Book was full of Pelagian and Semi-Pelagian Doctrine upon the Heads of sufficient Grace, gratuitous or free Predestination, and Scientia Media or Midle Knowledge. At this Congregation fifty Propositions were said to deserve a Censure: 'Twas resolv'd to condemn them. This Congregation sat from the 2d January 1598, to the 28th of August 1607. After the Sixty eighth Session, January 22. 1605. which was the last Year of Pope Clement VIII. his Holiness commanded the Secretaries of the Congregation to give Notice to the Dominicans and Jesuites to prepare themselves to give in their Answer, whether they would own the Doctrine of S. Augustin concerning Grace was contained in the fifteen Articles drawn up by him. 'Twas thought this Pope resolved to knock down this Controversy in a Bull, in case the Jesuites refused to give up their Sentiment. But his Death happening upon the 3d of March, 1605. delivered the Jesuites from the Apprehensions they had of being obliged either to recant or fall under Censure. The Cardinals coming into the Conclave to choose a new Pope, took an Oath, by vertue of which the Person elected promised to pronounce decisively upon the Controversy. Leo XI. being Pope but twenty five Days, Cardinal Borghese succeeded him in May 1606, under the Name of Paul V. He convened the Congregation, who held seventeen Sessions in the Pope's Presence. The last sat August 28. 1607. This Congregation had but nine Cardinals summoned; and besides, there appearing no Secretary to enter the Debates, 'tis not certainly known what passed. 'Tis said the Pope asked the Cardinals Advice, to know whether the deciding the Controversy between the Dominicans and Jesuites was seasonable at this time, and how the Points were to be resolved: And here 'tis said, that four of the Board advised his Holiness to suspend his Judgment, and five recommended a Decision. But let this be as it will, the Superiors of the two Orders were forbidden to brand the Doctrine contrary to their own with Heresy, till the Pope had pronounced upon the Queſtions. A Copy of a Letter, likewiſe under the Pope's Hand, was ſent the reſpective Delegates to tranſmit to all the Monaſteries of their Orders. In this Letter Paul V. promiſed to publiſh his Determination in due time; and, in the interim, commanded them to forbear reproachful Language, both as to Points and Perſons. The 1ſt of December 1607, the Pope order'd the Congregation of the Holy Office to write to all his Nuncios to ſtop the printing any Books upon the Subject of Grace, till the Bull was publiſh'd. But this Prohibition was no more minded, than the Oath Paul V. took to put an end to this Controverſy within a Year after his Election, or the Promiſe he made the two Orders afterwards to publiſh his Deciſion. 'Twas thought this Pope would have given the Cauſe againſt the Jeſuites, who was ſo hardy even at Rome as to maintain Opinions contrary to what was held by Thomas Aquinas and S. Auguſtin; neither of which Writers could be charg'd with Error, without making a Man ſuſpected of Hereſy. However, notwithſtanding this Bull never appeared, the Jeſuites Adverſaries made their Advantage of the Proceedings of the Congregation de Auxiliis, and of the Copy of a Bull which 'twas ſaid Paul V. reſolv'd to publiſh. By the way, Father Coronel abridg'd the Acts of this Congregation. Theſe enterprizing Motions of the Dominicans, obliged Innocent X. to ſet out a Decree, dated April 23, 1654; in which he declares, that no Credit ought to be given to theſe Acts, nor to the pretended Conſtitution of Paul V. and that they ought not to be alledged by either Party. The Jeſuites, ſupported by this Decree, maintained that the Acts and Conſtitutions above-mentioned are to paſs for no more than Counterfeit Records. To this their Adverſaries return, that the Decree goes only upon a Maxim of Civil Government, and that 'tis a general Rule for the Congregations at Rome not to allow the Publication of what paſſes privately there, nor any Decrees lodged in their Paper-Office, without an Order from the Board. But this doth not hinder the getting Authentick Tranſcripts of their Acts; and that Father Coronel's Abridgment is a true Recital of the Subſtance of what paſſed. * Hiſtoire de la Congregation de Auxiliis. Brevis Enarratio Actorum omnium, &c. a Patre Gregorio Nunnio Coronel, &c. Journal du P. du Leſmos, &c. Bibliothéque Univerſ. Tom. 14. pag. 228, &c.

* CONGREGATION of the Holy Office. To what is mention'd in Morery, Vol. I. upon this Article, may be added, that there are a great many other Congregations at Rome: For Inſtance, the Congregation of the Juriſdiction upon Biſhops and Regulars: That of the Council, which has Authority to explain the Council of Trent: That of the Index, which pronounces upon what Books are fit to be printed, corrected or cenſur'd: That of the Government of all the Dominions of the Church; and that de Bono Regimine. The Cardinal Nephew is commonly the Preſident of theſe two laſt. To theſe may be ſubjoin'd, the Congregation for regulating the Mint, or Value of Money: And laſtly, the Congregation of Biſhops, where thoſe to be promoted to the Sees of Italy are examined: This Aſſembly is held before the Pope, &c. The Form and Continuance of theſe Congregations depend upon the Pope's Pleaſure, who ſometimes conſtitutes new ones for a certain Term, and for deciding particular Buſineſs. The Reader may conſult Cardinal John Baptiſt de Luca, who, in his Account of the Court of Rome, makes a Recital of all the Congregations, Tribunals, and Juriſdictions of that See. * Onuphr. Panvin.

CONIGLIERE, or Conijera, formerly called Triguadra, an Iſland belonging to the Kingdom of Spain: 'Tis very ſmall, and ſtands in the Sea of Majorca and Minorca, near the Northern Coaſt of the Iſland Yvica. * Maty, Diction.

CONIGLIERI, or Conigeras, anciently called Pelagiæ, Tarichææ, Phœnicum Inſulæ. They are five little Iſlands in the Sea of Barbary; they lie between the Coaſt of Sicily, Malta, and the Kingdom of Tunis, near the Gulph of Mahometa. * Baudrand.

CONON, an Hiſtorian living in the Reign of Archilaus Philopater, King of Egypt, to whom he dedicated his Hiſtory: This Author wrote a Collection, ſubdivided into fifty Narratives, relating to the fabulous Period and the firſt Hiſtorical Accounts of Greece. His Work is not extant; but there is a large Extract from it in Photius's Bibliotheca, Cod. 186.

CONON, a Diſciple of Philopponus, a Tritheite: He maintained his Heterodoxy in a Conference before Johannes Scholaſticus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, in the Seventh Century; but afterwards he broke Philopponus for refuſing to acknowledge the Three Natures they ſuppoſed in the Deity were equal. He ſet up for the Head of a particular Sect, declared againſt Philopponus, and wrote a Diſcourſe againſt his Tract upon the Reſurrection. * Photius, Cod. 23.

CONRAD, Abbot of Eſterback, a Ciſtercian, wrote a Tract in ſix Books of the Original of this Order: 'Twas publiſh'd by Father Triſſier, in his firſt Tome of his Bibliotheque of the Authors who wrote upon the Order of the Ciſtercians. 'Tis ſuppoſed this Author lived to the Year 1240. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIII.

* CONRINGIUS. (Hermannus) This Author has printed a great many Tracts upon different Subjects; De Origine Juris Germanici; De Finibus Imperii Germanici ad Lib. 1. Cod. Theod. De Stud. Liberal. Urbis Romæ & Conſtantinop. He wrote three Volumes in Quarto, to make good the Pretenſions of the Archbiſhop of Cologne for Crowning the King of the Romans. Notæ ad Leonis Tertii Epiſtolas ad Carolum Magnum Imperatorem. De Ærario Boni Principis. Opera Juridica, Politica, & Philoſophica. De Pace Civili inter Imperii Ordines Religione diſſidentes. De Urbibus Germanicis Adverſaria Chronologica de Antiquiſ. Aſiæ & Ægyptiæ Dynaſtiis de Nummis Hebræorum Paradoxa, &c. * Biblioth. Hiſtorique & Chronologique des principaux Auteurs de Droit, &c. par Denis Simon.

CONSCRIPT, Fathers or Senators, Members of the Roman Senate, taken from the Rank of Gentlemen, to complete the Number of the Senate when it happen'd to fall ſhort. The hundred Senators choſen by Romulus were called Fathers, and their Deſcendents Patricii Majorum Gentium, or Patricians of the top Families, as Livy obſerves. But thoſe taken into the Senate by L. Junius Brutus, and P. Valerius Poplicola, the firſt Conſuls after the Expulſion of Tarquin, were called Patres Conſcripti, or Regiſter'd Fathers, as Livy and Plutarch inform us. Thoſe deſcended from theſe Patres Conſcripti, were likewiſe called Patricians; which Diſtinction continued beyond the Reign of the Emperor Conſtantine. * Tacit. Lib. 11. Cap. 25. Freinſhemius in Florum, Lib. 1. Cap. 1, &c.

CONSISTORY, a Court at Rome, held with the greateſt Splendor and Solemnity: 'Tis held at the Pope's Pleaſure. Here his Holineſs preſides on a Throne cover'd with Scarlet, and upon a Chair of Cloth of Gold. The Cardinal Prieſts, and Biſhops, are placed on his Right Hand, and the Cardinal Deacons on his Left; the Publick Conſiſtory is held in the great Hall of S. Peter's Palace, where Princes and Ambaſſadors of Crown'd Heads are received: The Pope is dreſs'd in his Pontifical Habit. The other Prelates, Protonotaries, Auditors of the Rota, and other Officers, ſit upon the Steps of the State; the other Courtiers ſit upon the Ground: King's Ambaſſadors are ſeated on the Pope's Right: The Fiſcal Advocates, or Lawyers for the Exchequer and Conſiſtory, are ranged behind the Cardinal Biſhops. 'Tis in this Conſiſtory that Cauſes are pleaded before the Pope. The Secret Conſiſtory is held in a Private Chamber, called The Chamber of Pape Gay, where the Pope's Throne is only a Seat two Steps high. None but the Cardinals are admitted here, whoſe Votes are taken at every Debate; and in this Senſe the Pope is ſaid to hold a Conſiſtory. The Bulls for Biſhopricks or Abbeys are not diſpatch'd till they are paſſed the Conſiſtory. Du Cange derives the Word from Conſiſtorium, Locus ubi conſiſtitur, which, as this learned Gloſſary Writer obſerves, firſt ſignify'd a Porch, Gallery, or Anti-Chamber. 'Tis likewiſe taken for the Place where the Prince coming from his private Apartment gave Audience; and afterwards, the Council Chamber, where the Prince appear'd about Buſineſs, or trying Cauſes, was called the Conſiſtory. The Place likewiſe where Prelates and Prieſts met for diſpatching their Affairs went by this Name. * Varre's Hiſtory of the Court of Rome. Memoires Hiſtoriq.

* CONSTANTINE the Great, Roman Emperor, and the firſt of this Name. There are a great many Edicts of of Conſtantine the Great in Favour of the Chriſtian Religion, and ſeveral of his Letters extant relating to the Affairs of the Church. Cardinal Baronius having taken ſome Pains in his Enquiry after the Author of the Donation, attributed to Conſtantine in Favour of the See of Rome, believes that the Greeks forged this Inſtrument, to ſhew the Church of Rome held her Paramount Authority of the Emperor, and not of our Bleſſed Saviour; but the Juriſdiction this Donation gives over the Eaſtern Patriarchs does by no means agree with this Opinion. Farther, 'tis not at all probable the Greeks ſhould forge a Record prejudicial to their Claim upon Italy; and beſides, this Deed of Gift is cited by the Latins two hundred Years before 'tis mention'd by any of the Greeks. Morinus believes it counterfeited by Johannes Diaconus of the Church of Rome, who lived to the Year 963; but that can't be, for 'tis cited before this time by Hincmar. The Learned de Marca, Archbiſhop of Paris, his Book de Concordia Sacerdotii & Imperii, believes it a Piece of pious Legerdemain of Pope Paul I. to ſtop the Mouths of the Emperor of Conſtantinople's Ambaſſadors, who in the Year 767 requir'd the Surrender of the Provinces in Italy which King Pepin had made a Grant of to the See of Rome; but 'tis not very likely his Holineſs would ſtoop to ſo mean an Expedient, or that King Pepin, the Pope's Benefactor, ſhould conſent to ſuch an Invention. Others are of Opinion, that this Donation was forged by Iſidorus Mercator, becauſe it agrees very well with the Genius of this Author who invented a great many reſembling things. The Style likewiſe looks like Mercator's; and laſtly, the Circumſtance of Time favours this Conjecture: For this Forger lived towards the end of the Eighth Century, when we find this Donation firſt mention'd by Hincmar. To ſupport this Donation, there is an old Charter cited, in which King Dagobert grants a Privilege to the Abbey of S. Dennis in France. In this Inſtrument 'tis ſaid, that the Emperor Conſtantine granted S. Peter, arcem Romani Imperii cum omni integritate; but then by the Word arcem, we are to underſtand the Lateran Palace where Conſtantine built a ſtately Church, called Baſilica Conſtantini, which has ever ſince been the Seat of the Roman Patriarch. Some Writers are willing to allow the Kings of France granted the Popes of Rome the principal Towns within the Eccleſiaſtick State: But then they ſay there was no Juſtice in this Bounty, becauſe theſe Towns and Territories were the Property of the Emperors of Conſtantinople. But to this 'tis eaſy to return, that the Greek Emperors having quitted theſe Provinces to the Lombards, and the Kings of France recovering them from theſe Uſurpers, they became the lawful Proprietors by Right of Conqueſt; and by Conſequence their Grant of them to the Church of Rome muſt be unexceptionable. We will conclude this Article with the Anſwer Jerom Donato, the Venetian Ambaſſador at Rome, made to Julius II. about the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century. This Pope deſiring the Ambaſſador to give him a Sight of the Inſtrument, by vertue of which the Republick of Venice founded their Right upon the Adriatick Gulph. To this Donato reply'd, That if his Holineſs would pleaſe to order the reading of the Original Deed by which Conſtantine granted the Town of Rome and the other Territories of S. Peter's Patrimony, he would ſee the Grant of the Adriatick Sea to the Venetians endorſed upon the Charter. * Baron. Annal. De Marca. Concord. Sacerd. & Imper. M. Du Pin. New Eccleſ. Lib. Cent. IV.

* CONSTANTINE XIII. For May 1, in Morery Vol. I. read May 29.

* CONSTANTINE IV. King of Scotland. For Kenneth's firſt Laws, in Morery Vol. I. read Kenneth's third Laws.

* CONSUL. None were qualify'd for the Office of Conſul till he had firſt been Quæſtor, Ædilis, and Prætor. The Age commonly requir'd was forty three Years. However, there are Precedents of Conſuls much younger: For the Purpoſe, Valerius Corvinus gain'd the Conſulate at twenty eight Years of Age, Scipio Africanus at twenty four; Marius Pompey and Auguſtus likewiſe gained this Poſt much earlier than the Cuſtomary Period of the Commonwealth. The Conſuls had in a manner a Sovereign Authority; but their Power was much leſſened under the Emperors, who left them little more than the Pageantry of their Office, with the Privilege of ſummoning the Senate, and holding a Court of Juſtice; and beſides, the Emperors were for the moſt part Conſuls themſelves. Thoſe who are choſen upon the 24th of October, the uſual Day for the Election, and were not in Office till the 1ſt of January following, were called Conſules Deſignati. Thoſe who had been Conſuls, were ſtyled Conſulares. They were commonly ſent to govern the Conſular Provinces; but afterwards the Governors of theſe Provinces were called Conſulares, without ever having been Conſuls.

A Chronological Series of the Roman Conſuls.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		L. Lucius Junius Brutus, Son of Marcus, happening to be kill'd in a Battle, Sp. Lucretius Tricipitinus was put in his Place; and this Conſul happening to die within the Year, his Place was filled with M. Horatius Pulvillus.
246	508	L. Tarquinius Collatinus, Son of Egerius, was obliged to reſign his Office, and was ſucceeded by P. Valerius, Son of Voluſus, who was afterwards called Poplicola.
247	507	P. Valerius Poplicola II. T. Lucretius Tricipitinus
248	506	P. Valerius Poplicola III. M. Horatius Pulvillus II.
249	505	Sp. Lartius Flaccus, or Rufus T. Herminius Aquilinus
250	504	M. Valerius Voluſus P. Poſthumius Tubertus
251	503	P. Valerius Poplicola IV. T. Lucretius Tricipitinus II.
252	502	P. Poſthumius Tubertus II. Agrippa Menenius Lanatus
253	501	Opiter Virginius Tricoſtus Sp. Caſſius Viſcellinus
254	500	Poſthumus Cominius Aruncus T. Lartius Flavus
255	499	Ser. Sulpitius Camerinus M. Tullius Longus
256	498	P. Veturius Geminus T. Albatius Helva
257	497	T. Lartius Flavus II. Q. Cælius Siculus
258	496	A. Sempronius Atratinus M. Minucius Augurinus
259	495	A. Poſthumius Albus, afterwards called Regillenſis T. Virginius Tricoſt. Cœlimontanus
260	494	M. Claudius Sabinus P. Servilius Priſcus
261	493	A. Virginius Tricoſtus T. Veturius Geminus
262	492	Sp. Caſſius Viſcellinus II. Poſt. Cominius Aruncus II.
263	491	T. Geganius Macerinus P. Minucius Augurinus
264	490	A. Sempronius Atratinus II. M. Minucius Augurinus II.
265	489	Q. Sulpitius Camerinus Sp. Lartius Flaccus II.
266	488	C. Julius Julus P. Pinarius Mamercinus
267	487	Sp. Nautius Rutilus Sex. Furius Fuſus
268	486	C. Aquillus Tuſcus T. Sicinus Sabinus
269	485	Sp. Caſſius Viſcellinus III. Procul. Virginius Tricoſtus
270	484	Q. Fabius Vibulanus Ser. Cornelius Maluginenſis
271	483	L. Æmilius Mamercus K. Fabius Vibulanus
272	482	M. Fabius Vibulanus L. Valerius Potitus
273	481	C. Julius Julus Q. Fabius Vibulanus II.
274	480	K. Fabius Vibulanus II.

Sp.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Sp. Furius Fuſus
275	479	Cn. Manlius Cincinatus
		M. Fabius Vibulanus II.
276	478	K. Fabius Vibulanus III.
		Virginius Tricoſtus II.
277	477	L. Æmilius Mamercus II.
		C. Servilius Structus
278	476	C. Horatius Pulvillus
		T. Menenius Agrippa Lanatus
279	475	A. Virginius Tricoſtus
		Sp. Servilius Structus
280	474	P. Vulerius Poplicola
		C. Nautius Rutilus
281	473	L. Furius Medullinus
		M. Manlius Vulſo
282	472	L. Æmilius Mamercus III.
		Vopiſcus Julius Julus
283	471	P. Furius Fuſus
		L. Pinarius Mamercinus
284	470	T. Quinctius Capitolinus
		Ap. Claudius Sabinus
285	469	Tib. Æmilius Mamercus
		Valerius Potitus II.
286	468	A. Virginius Cœlimontanus
		T. Numicius Priſcus
287	467	T. Quinctius Capitolinus II.
		Q. Servilius Priſcus
288	466	Tib. Æmilius Mamercus II.
		Q. Fabius Vibulanus II.
289	465	Q. Servilius Priſcus II.
		Sp. Poſthumius Albus
290	464	T. Quinctius Capitolinus III.
		Q. Fabius Vabulanus II.
291	463	Poſthumius Albus
		Sp. Furius Medullinus.
292	462	P. Servilius Priſcus
		L. Æbutius Helva.
293	461	L. Lucretius Tricipitinus
		T. Veturius Geminus
294	460	P. Volumnius Amitinus
		Serv. Sulpicius Camerinus
295	459	P. Valerius Poplicola II.
		C. Cladius Sabinus
296	458	Q. Fabius Vabulanus III.
		L. Cornelius Maluginenſis
297	457	C. Nautius Rutilus II.
		L. Minucius Augurinus
298	456	C. Horatius Pulvillus
		Q. Minucius Augurinus
299	455	M. Valerinus Maximus
		S. Virginius Tricoſtus
300	454	T. Romilius Vaticanus
		C. Venturius Cicurinus
301	453	Sp. Tarpeius Montaia
		A. Aterius Fontinalis
302	452	S. Quintilius Varus
		P. Horatius Trigeminus
303	451	P. Sextius Capitolinus
		T. Meneius Agrippa Lanatus

The Decemviri who had the ſame Power with the Conſuls.

304	450	Ap. Claudius Craſſinus
		T. Genucius Augurinus
		Sp. Veturius Craſſus
		C. Julius Julus
		A. Manlius Vulſo
		Sp. Poſthumius Albus
		Ser. Sulpicius Camerinus
		P. Sextius Capitolinus
		T. Romilius Vaticanus
		P. Horatius Trigeminus

The Decemviri who had the ſame Power with the Conſuls

305	449	Ap. Claudius Craſſinus II.
		Q. Fabius Vabulanus
		M. Cornelius Maluginenſis
		M. Rabuleius
		L. Minucius Augurinus

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Q. Pœlius
		T. Antonius Merenda
		Cæſo Duillius
		M. Sergius
		Sp. Oppius Cornicenſis

The Decemviri who had the ſame Power with the Conſuls.

306	448	Ap. Claudius Craſſinus III.
		Q. Fabius Vabulanus II.
		M. Cornelius Maluginenſis II.
		M. Rabuleius II.
		L. Minucius Augurinus II.
		Q. Petelius II.
		F. Antonius Merenda II.
		Cæſo Duillius II.
		T. Sergius II.
		Sp. Oppius Cornicenſis II.

The Decemviri's falling under Diſgrace upon the ſcore of Appius's Licentiouſneſs, reſigned their Charge, and Conſuls were elected in their Place for the Year following.

307	447	L. Valerius Potitus
		M. Horatius Barbatus
308	446	L. Herminius Exquilinus
		T. Virginius Tricoſtus
309	445	Geganius Macerinus
		C. Julius Julus
310	444	T. Quinctius Capitolinus IV.
		Agrippa Furius Fuſus
311	443	M. Genucius Augurinus
		C. Curtius Medullintes

The Commonwealth made three Military Tribunes, with Conſular Dignity and Juriſdiction.

312	442	A. Sempronius Attratinus.
		T. Cœlius Siculus
		L. Milius Longus

Theſe Magiſtrates being elected contrary to the Conſtitution, quitted their Office, and Conſuls were put in their Place.

		L. Papirius Mugillanus
		L. Sempronius Attratinus
313	441	M. Geganius Macerinus II.
		T. Quinctius Capitolinus V.
314	440	M. Fabius Vibulanus
		Poſthumus Albutius Helva.
315	439	C. Furius Fuſus Pacillus
		M. Papirius Craſſus
316	438	Proc. Geganius Macerinus.
		L. Menenius Agrippa Lanatus
317	437	T. Quinctius Capitolinus VI.
		Agrippa Menenius Lanatus

Three Military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

318	436	M. Æmilianus Mamercinus
		L. Quinctius Cincinnatus
		L. Julius Julus
319	435	M. Geganius Mamercinus
		L. Sergius Fidenus
320	434	M. Cornelius Maluginenſis
		L. Papirius Craſſus
321	433	C. Julius Julus II.
		L. Virginius Tricoſtus
322	432	C. Julius Julus III.
		L. Virginius Tricoſtus II.

Three Military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

323	431	M. Fabius Vibulanus
		M. Foſſius Flacinator
		L. Sergius Fidenas

Three

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Three military Tribunes with the ſame Authority.
324	430	L. Pinarius Mamercus. L. Furius Medullinus, and Sp. Poſthumius Albus Regillenſis.
325	429	T. Quinctius Cincinnatus. C. Julius Mente.
326	428	L. Papirius Craſſus II. L. Julius Julus.
327	427	L. Sergius Fidenas II. Hoſtus Lucretius Tricipitinus.
328	426	T. Quinctius Cincinnatus II. A. Cornelius Coſſus.
329	425	C. Servilius Axilla. L. Papirius Mugillanus II.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
330	424	T. Quinctius Cincinnatus, C. Furius Pacillus. M. Poſthumius Albus. A. Cornelius Coſſus.
		Four military Tribunes of Conſular Authority.
331	423	A. Sempronius Atratinus. L. Furius Medullinus II. L. Quinctius Cincinnatus. L. Horatius Barbatus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
332	422	Ap. Claudius Craſſus. Sp. Natius Rutilus. L. Sergius Fidenas II. Sex. Julius Julus.
333	421	C. Sempronius Atratinus. Q. Fabius Vibulanus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
334	420	L. Manlius Capitolinus. Q. Antonius Merenda. L. Papirius Mugillanus. L. Servilius Structus.
335	419	T. Quinctius Capitolinus Barbatus. N. Fabius Vibulanus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
336	418	T. Quinctius Cincinnatus II. M. Manlius Capitolinus. L. Furius Medullinus III. A. Sempronius Atratinus II.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
337	417	Agrippa Menenius Lanatus. Sp. Natius Rutilus P. Lucretius Tricipitinus. C. Servilius Axilla.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
338	416	M. Papirius Mugillanus. C. Servilius Axilla II. L. Sergius Fidenas II. Q. Servilius Priſcus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
339	415	P. Lucretius Tricipitinus II. Sp. Veturius Structus II. Agrippa Menenius Lanatus II. L. Servilius.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
340	414	A. Sempronius Atratinus II. M. Papirius Mugilenſis II.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Q. Fabius Vibulanus. Sp. Nautius Rutilus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
341	413	P. Cornelius Coſſus. L. Quinctius Cincinnatus. C. Valerius Potitus. N. Fabius Vibulanus.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
342	412	Q. Fabius Vibulanus II. Cn. Cornelius Coſſus. P. Poſthumius Albinus. L. Valerius Potitus.
343	411	L. Furius Medullinus. Q. Fabius Ambuſtus.
344	410	C. Furius Pacilius. M. Papirius Mugillanus.
345	409	C. Nautius Rutilus. Æmilius Mamercinus.
346	408	C. Valerius Potitus. Cn. Cornelius Coſſus.
347	407	L. Furius Medullinus II.
		The military Tribunes of Patrician Families with Conſular Authority.
348	406	C. Julius Julus. P. Cornelius Coſſus. C. Servilius Ahala.
		Four military Patrician Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
349	405	C. Valerius Potitus II. C. Servilius Ahala II. L. Furius Medullinus. N. Fabius Vibulanus II.
		Four military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
350	404	P. Cornelius Coſſus II. L. Valerius Potitus II. Cn. Cornelius Coſſus. N. Fabius Ambuſtus.
		Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
351	403	C. Julius Julus II. M. Æmilius Mamercinus. T. Quinctius Capitolinus. A. Manlius Vulſo. L. Furius Medullinus II. Q. Quinctius Cincinnatus.
		Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
352	402	P. Cornelius Maluginenſis. Sp. Natius Rutilus III. Cn. Cornelius Coſſus II. C. Valerius Potitus III. Cæſo Fabius Ambuſtus. M. Sergius Fidenas.
		Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
353	401	M. Æmilius Mamercinus. M. Furius Fulſus. Ap. Claudius Craſſus. L. Julius Julus. M. Quinctilius Varus. L. Valerius Potitus III.
		Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.
354	400	C. Servilius Ahala III. Q. Sulpicius Camerinus. Q. Servilius Priſcus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation
		A. Manlius Vulso II.
		L. Virginius Tricostus.
		M. Sergius Fidenas II.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
355	399	L. Valerius Potitus IV.
		L. Julius Julus II.
		M. Furius Camillus.
		M. Æmilius Mamercinus III.
		Cn. Cornelius Cossus II.
		Cæso Fabius Ambustus II.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
356	398	P. Licinius Calvus.
		P. Mælius Capitolinus.
		P. Menius.
		L. Furius Medullinus.
		L. Titinius.
		L. Publius Philo.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
357	397	M. Pomponius.
		L. Æmilius Longus.
		C. Duilius.
		M. Veturius Crassus.
		Cn. Genucius Augurinus,
		Valer. Publius Philo.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
358	396	L. Valerius Potitus V.
		L. Furius Medullinus III.
		M. Valerius Maximus.
		M. Furius Camillus II.
		Q. Servilius Priscus II.
		Q. Sulpicius Camerinus II.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
359	395	L. Julius Julus II.
		L. Furius Medullinus IV.
		L. Sergius Fidenas.
		A. Posthumius Albinus.
		P. Cornelius Maluginensis II.
		A. Manlius Vulso III.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
360	394	P. Licinius Calvus.
		L. Titinius II.
		Cn. Genucius Augurinus II.
		P. Mœnius II.
		L. Atilius Longus II.
		M. Mœlius Capitolinus II.
		Six Military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
361	393	P. Cornelius Cossus.
		P. Cornelius Scipio.
		M. Valerius Maximus II.
		K. Fabius Ambustus III.
		L. Furius Medullinus V.
		Q. Servilius Priscus III.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
362	392	M. Furius Camillus III.
		L. Furius Medullinus VI.
		C. Æmilius Mamercinus.
		L. Valerius Poplicola.
		Sp. Posthumius Albinus.
		P. Cornelius Scipio II.
363	391.	L. Lucretius Flavus.
		Ser. Sulpicius Camerinus.
364	390	L. Valerius Potiens.
		M. Manlius Capitolinus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
365	389	L. Lucretius Flavus.
		Ser. Sulpitius Camerinus.
		M. Æmilius Mamercinus.
		L. Furius Medullinus VII.
		Agrippa Furius Fusus.
		C. Æmilius Mamercinus II.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
366	388	Q. Fabius Ambustus.
		Q. Sulpicius Longus.
		K. Fabius Ambustus.
		Q. Servilius Priscus. IV.
		C. Fabius Ambustus.
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginensis.
		Part of this Year
		M. Furius Camillus was made Dictator.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
367	387	L. Valerius Poplicola II.
		L. Virginius Tricostus.
		P. Cornelius.
		A. Manlius Capitolinus.
		L. Æmilius Mamercinus.
		L. Posthumius Albinus.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
368	386	T. Quinctius Cincinnatus.
		Q. Servilius Priscus V.
		L. Julius Julus.
		L. Aquilius Cervus.
		L. Lucretius Tricipitinus.
		Ser. Sulpicius Rufus.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
369	385	L. Papirius Cursor.
		C. Sergius Fidenas.
		L. Æmilius Mamercinus II.
		L. Menenius Lanatus.
		L. Valerius Poplicola III.
		C. Cornelius.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
370	384	M. Furius Camillus IV.
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginensis II.
		Q. Servilius Priscus VI.
		L. Quinctius Cincinnatus.
		L. Horatius Pulvillus.
		P. Valerius Poplicola.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
371	383	A. Manlius Capitolinus II.
		T. Quinctius Capitolinus.
		P. Cornelius.
		L. Quinctius Capitolinus.
		L. Papirius Cursor II.
		C. Sergius Fidenas.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
372	382	Ser. Cornelius Maluginensis III.
		P. Valerius Poplicola II.
		M. Furius Camillus V.
		Ser. Sulpicius Rufus II.
		C. Papirius Crassus.
		T. Quinctius Cincinnatus II.
		Six military Tribunes with Consular Authority.
373	381	L. Valerius Poplicola IV.
		L. Lucretius Tricipitinus II.
		A. Manlius Capitolinus III.

L. Æmilius

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		L. Æmilius Mamercinus III.
		Ser. Sulpitius Rufus III.
		M. Trebonius Flaccus.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

374	380	Sp. Papirius Craſſus.
		Q. Servilius Priſcus.
		L. Papirius Craſſus.
		Ser. Sulpitius Prætextatus.
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginenſis IV.
		L. Æmilius Mamercinus IV.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

375	379	M. Furius Camillus VI.
		Furius Medullinus.
		A. Poſthumius Regillenſis.
		L. Poſthumius Albinus.
		L. Lucretius Tricipitinus III.
		M. Fabius Ambuſtus.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

376	378	L. Valerius Poplicola V.
		L. Menenius Lanatus II.
		P. Valerius Poplicola III.
		Sp. Papirius Curſor.
		C. Sergius Fidenas III.
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginenſis.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

377	377	P. Manlius Capitolinus.
		C. Sextilius.
		C. Manlius Capitolinus.
		M. Albinus.
		L. Julius Julus.
		L. Antiſtius.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

378	376	Sp. Furius Medullinus.
		P. Cœlius Siculus.
		Q. Servilius Priſcus II.
		M. Horatius Pulvillus.
		C. Licinius Calvus.
		L. Geganius Macerinus.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

379	375	L. Æmilius Mamercinus. V.
		Ser. Sulpitius Prætextatus II.
		P. Valerius Poplicola IV.
		L. Quinctius Cincinnatus II.
		C. Veturius Craſſus.
		C. Quinctius Cincinnatus.

During the five following Years two Tribunes of the People ſtood at the Head of the Government, but were not allow'd the Ceremony of the Cellacurulis, or, a Chariot with an Ivory Chair in it.

380	374	C. Licinius Calvus.
		L. Sextius Lateranus.
381	373	C. Licinius Calvus II.
		L. Sextius Lateranus II.
382	372	C. Licinius Calvus III.
		L. Sextius Lateranus III.
383	371	C. Licinius Calvus IV.
		L. Sextius Lateranus IV.
384	370	C. Licinius Calvus V.
		L. Sextius Lateranus V.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

385	369	L. Furius Medullinus II.
		P. Valerius Poplicola V.
		A. Manlius Capitolinus.
		Ser. Sulpicius Prætextatus III.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		C. Valerius Potitus
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginenſis VI.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

386	368	Q. Servilius Priſcus III.
		M. Cornelius Maluginenſis.
		C. Veturius Craſſus II.
		Q. Quinctius Cincinnatus.
		A. Cornelius Coſſus.
		M. Fabius Ambuſtus II.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

387	367	L. Quinctius Capitolinus.
		Sp. Servilius Structus
		Ser. Cornelius Maluginenſis VII.
		L. Papirius Craſſus.
		Ser. Sulpitius Prætextatus IV.
		L. Veturius Craſſus.

The ſame Year they made two Dictators.

M. Furius Camillus, who reſigning his Office, was ſucceeded by P. Manlius.

Six military Tribunes with Conſular Authority.

388	366	A. Cornelius Coſſus II.
		L. Veturius Craſſus II.
		M. Cornelius Maluginenſis II.
		P. Valerius Poplicola VI.
		M. Geganius Macerinus.
		P. Manlius Capitolinus II.

The ſame Year a Dictator was choſen. 'Twas

		M. Furius Camillus.
389	365	L. Æmilius Mamercinus, a Patrician Conſul.
		L. Sextius Lateranus.

The firſt Conſul elected out of the Commons.

390	364	L. Genucius Aventinenſis.
		Q. Servilius Ahala.
391	363	C. Sulpicius Peticus.
		C. Licinius Stolo Calvus.
392	362	L. Æmilius Mamercinus II.
		Cn. Genucius Aventinenſis.
393	361	Q. Servilius Ahala II.
		L. Genutius Aventineſis II.
394	360	C. Licinius Stolo Calvus II.
		C. Sulpicius Peticus II.
395	359	M. Fabius Ambuſtus.
		C. Pætilius Libo.
396	358	M. Popilius Lænas.
		Cn. Manlius Capitolinus Imperioſus.
397	357	C. Fabius Ambuſtus.
		C. Plotius Proculus.
398	356	C. Marcus Rutilus.
		Cn. Manlius Capitolinus Imperioſus II.
399	355	M. Fabius Ambuſtus II.
		M. Popilius Lænas II.
400	354	C. Sulpicius Peticus III.
		M. Valerius Poplicola.
401	353	M. Fabius Ambuſtus III.
		T. Quinctius Barbatus.
402	352	C. Sulpicius Peticus IV.
		M. Valerius Poplicola II.
403	351	P. Valerius Poplicola.
		C. Martius Rutilus II.
404	350	C. Sulpicius Peticus. V.
		T. Quinctius Cincinnatus.
405	349	M. Popilius Lænas III.
		L. Cornelius Scipio.
406	348	Ap. Claudius Craſſinus.
		L. Furius Camillus.

Years from the buildjng of Rome	Years before the Incarnation.
407	347	M. Popilius Lænas IV. M. Valerius Corvus.
408	346	T. Manlius Torquatus. C. Plautius Hypſæus.
409	345	M. Valerius Corvus II. C. Petilius Libo II.
410	344	M. Fabius Dorſo. Ser. Sulpicius Camerinus.
411	343	C. Marcius Rutilus III. T. Manlius Torquatus II.
412	342	M. Valerius Corvus III. A. Cornelius Coſſus Aruina.
413	341	Q. Servilius Ahala. C. Martius Rutilus IV.
414	340	L. Æmilius Mamercinus. C. Plautus Hypſæus II.
415	339	T. Manlius Torquatus III. P. Decius Mus.
416	338	T. Æmilius Mamercinus. Q. Publius Philo.
417	337	L. Furius Camillus. C. Mænius Nepos.
418	336	C. Sulpicius Longus. P. Ælius Pætus.
419	335	L. Papirius Craſſus. Cæſo Duillius.
420	334	M. Valerius Corvus IV. M. Attilius Regulus
421	333	T. Veturius Calvinus. Sp. Veturius Albinus.
422	332	L. Papirius Spurius. C. Pætilius.

Some Writers are of Opinion there was no Conſuls this Year, becauſe of a great Mortality.

423	331	A. Cornelius Coſſus Aruina II. Cn. Domitius Calvinus.
424	330	L. Valerius Potitus. M. Claudius Marcellus.
425	329	L. Papirius Craſſus II. L. Plautius Venno.
426	328	T. Æmilius Mamercinus II. C. Plautius Decianus.
427	327	P. Cornelius Scapula. P. Plautius Proculus.
428	326	L. Cornelius Lentulus. Q. Publius Philo II.
429	325	L. Papirius Curſor. C. Pætilius Libo III.
430	324	L. Furius Camillus. Junius Brutus Scæva.

The ſame Year there was choſen Dictator.

		L. Papirius Curſor.
431	323	C. Sulpicius Longus. Q. Aulius Ceretanus.
432	322	Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus. L. Fulvius Curvus.
433	321	T. Veturius Calvinus II. Sp. Poſthumius Albinus.
434	320	L. Papirius Curſor II. Q. Publius Philo III.
435	319	L. Papirius Curſor III. Q. Aulius Ceretanus II.
436	318	M. Foſtius Flaccinator. L. Plautius Venno. II
437	317	Q. Æmilius Barbula. C. Junius Bubulcus.
438	316	Sp. Natius Rutilus. M. Popilius Lænas.
439	315	L. Papirius Curſor IV. Q. Publius Philo IV.
440	314	M. Pætilius Libo. C. Sulpicius Longus III.
441	313	L. Papirius Curſor V. C. Junius Bubulcus II.
442	312	M. Valerius Maximus. P. Decius Mus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
443	311	C. Junius Bubulcus III. Q. Æmilius Barbula II.
444	310	Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus II. C. Marcius Rutilus.
445	309	There was no Conſul this Year, but the Dictator who had born that Office once before, was, L. Papirius Curſor. C. Junius Bubulcus was General of the Horſe.
446	308	Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus III. P. Decius Mus.
447	307	Appius Claudius Cæcus. L. Volumnius Flamma.
448	306	Q. Martius Tremulus. P. Cornelius Aruina.
449	305	L. Poſthumius Megellus. T. Minucius Augurinus.
450	304	P. Sempronius Sophus. P. Sulpicius Saverno.
451	303	Ser. Cornelius Lentulus. L. Genucius Aventinenſis.
452	302	M. Livius Dexter. M. Æmilius Paulus.
453	301	There was no Conſul this Year, but the Dictator, was, Q. Fabius Maximus, and the General of the Horſe. M. Æmilius Paulus.
454	300	Q. Appuleius Panſa. M. Valerius Corvus.
455	299	M. Fulvius Petinus. T. Manlius Torquatus.
456	298	L. Cornelius Scipio. Cn. Fulvius Centumales.
457	297	P. Fabius Maximus Rullianus IV. Q. Decius Mus III.
458	296	Appius Claudius Cæcus II. L. Volumnius Flamma II.
459	295	Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus V. P. Decius Mus IV.
460	294	L. Poſthumius Megellus II. M. Attilius Regulus.
461	293	L. Papirius Curſor. Sp. Carvilius Maximus.
462	292	Q. Fabius Maximus Gurges. Junius Brutus Scæva.
463	291	L. Poſthumius Megellus III. C. Junius Brutus Bubulcus.
464	290	P. Cornelius Ruffinus. M. Curius Dentatus.
465	289	M. Valerius Corvinus. Q. Cæditius Noctua.
466	288	Q. Martius Tremulus II. P. Cornelius Aruina II.
467	287	M. Claudius Marcellus. Sp. Nautius Rutilus.
468	286	M. Valerius Maximus. C. Ælius Pætus.
469	285	C. Claudius Canina. M. Æmilius Barbula.
470	284	C. Servilius Tucca. L. Cæcilius Metellus.
471	283	P. Cornelius Dolabella. Cn. Domitius Calvinus.
472	282	C. Fabricius Luſcinus. Q. Æmilius Papus.
473	281	L. Æmilius Barbula. Q. Marcius Philippus.
474	280	P. Valerius Lævinus. T. Coruncanius Nepos.
475	279	P. Sulpicius Saverrio. P. Decius Mus.
476	278	C. Fabricius Luſcinus. Q. Æmilius Papus II.
477	277	P. Cornelius Ruffinus II. C. Junius Bubulcus II.
478	276	Q. Fabius Maximus Gurges II. C. Genuſius Clepſina.
479	275	M. Curius Dentatus II.

L. Cornelius

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation
		L. Cornelius Lentulus.
480	274	Ser. Cornelius Merenda.
		M. Curius Dentatus III.
481	273	C. Fabius Dorso.
		C. Claudius Canina.
482	272	L. Papirius Curſor II.
		Sp. Carvilius Maximus II.
483	271	C. Quinctius Claudius.
		L. Genutius Clepſina.
484	270	C. Genutius Clepſina II.
		Cn. Cornelius Blaſio.
485	269	C. Fabius Pictor.
		L. Quinctius Guli.
486	268	P. Sempronius Sophus.
		App. Claudius Craſſus.
487	267	M. Attilius Regulus.
		L. Julius Libo.
488	266	M. Fabius Pictor.
		D. Junius Pera.
489	265	Q. Fabius Maximus Gurges III.
		P. Decius Mus.
490	264	Ap. Claudius Caudex.
		M. Fulvius Flaccus.
491	263	M. Valerius Maximus.
		M. Otacilius Craſſus.
492	262	L. Poſthumius Megellus.
		Q. Mainilius Vitulus.
493	261	L. Valerius Flaccus.
		T. Otacilius Craſſus.
494	260	Cn. Cornelius Scipio Aſina.
		C. Duillius Nepos.
495	259	L. Cornelius Scipio.
		C. Aquilius Florus.
496	258	A. Attilius Calatinus.
		C. Sulpicius Paterculus.
497	257	C. Attilius Serranus.
		Cn. Cornelius Blaſio.
498	256	L. Manlius Vulſo.
		C. Attilius Regulus.
499	255	Ser. Fulvius Nobilior.
		M. Æmilius Paulus.
500	254	Cn. Cornelius Scipio Aſina II.
		A. Attilius Calatinus II.
501	253	Cn. Servilius Cœpio.
		C. Sempronius Bleſus.
502	252	C. Aurelius Cotta.
		P. Servilius Geminus.
503	251	C. Cœcilius Metellus.
		C. Furius Pacilus.
504	250	C. Attilius Regulus II.
		L. Manlius Vulſo II.
505	249	M. Claudius Pulcher.
		L. Junius Pullus.
506	248	C. Aurelius Cotta II.
		P. Servilius Geminus II.
507	247	L. Cœcilius Metellus.
		M. Fabius Buteo.
508	246	M. Otacilius Craſſus II.
		M. Fabius Licinus.
509	245	M. Fabius Buteo II.
		C. Attilius Bulbus.
510	244	A. Manlius Torquatus.
		C. Sempronius Bleſenſis.
511	243	C. Fundanius Fundulus.
		C. Sulpicius Gallus.
512	242	C. Luctatius Catulus.
		A. Poſthumius Albinus.
513	241	A. Manlius Torquatus II.
		Q. Luctatius Corco.
514	240	C. Claudius Centho.
		M. Sempronius Tuditanus.
515	239	C. Mamilius Turrinus.
		Q. Valerius Falco.
316	238	T. Sempronius Gracchus.
		P. Valerius Falco.
517	237	L. Cornelius Lentulus.
		Q. Fulvius Flaccus.
518	236	P. Cornelius Lentulus.
		C. Licinius Varus.
519	235	T. Manlius Torquatus.
		C. Attilius Bulbus II.
520	234	L. Poſthumius Albinus.
		Sp. Carvilius Maximus.
521	233	Q. Fabius Maximus Verrucoſus.
		M. Pomponius Matho.
522	232	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		M. Publicius Malleolus.
523	231	M. Pomponius Matho II.
		C. Papirius Maſo.
524	230	M. Æmilius Barbula.
		M. Junius Pera.
525	229	L. Poſthumius Albinus II.
		Cn. Fulvius Centumalus.
526	228	Sp. Carvilius Maximus II.
		Q. Fabius Maximus Verrucoſus II.
527	227	P. Valerius Flaccus.
		M. Attilius Regulus.
528	226	M. Valerius Meſſala.
		L. Apoſtius Fullo.
529	225	L. Æmilius Papus.
		C. Attilius Regulus.
530	224	T. Manlius Torquatus II.
		Q. Fulvius Flaccus II.
531	223	C. Flaminius Nepos.
		P. Furius Philus.
532	222	Cn. Cornelius Scipio.
		M. Claudius Marcellus.
533	221	P. Cornelius Scipio Aſina.
		M. Minucius Rufus.
534	220	L. Veturius Philo.
		C. Luctatius Catullus.
535	219	M. Livius Salinator.
		L. Æmilius Paulus.
536	218	P. Cornelius Scipio.
		T. Sempronius Longus.
537	217	C. Flaminius.
		Cn. Servilius Geminus.
538	216	L. Æmilius Paulus II.
		C. Terrentius Varro.
539	215	L. Poſthumius Albinus III.
		T. Sempronius Gracchus.
		Albinus happening to be kill'd before he enter'd upon his Office, they put in his Place
		Q. Fabius Maximus III.
540	214	Q. Fabius Maximus IV.
		M. Claudius Marcellus II.
541	213	Q. Fabius Maximus V.
		Q. F. T. Sempronius Gracchus II.
542	212	Ap. Claudius Pulcher.
		Q. Fulvius Flaccus III.
543	211	P. Sulpicius Galba.
		Cn. Fulvius Centumalus.
544	210	M. Valerius Lœvinus II.
		M. Claudius Marcellus III.
545	209	Q. Fabius Maximus VI.
		Q. Fulvius Flaccus IV.
546	208	M. Claudius Marcellus IV.
		T. Quinctius Criſpinus.
547	207	C. Claudius Nero.
		M. Linus Salinator.
548	206	Q. Cœcilius Metellus.
		L. Veturius Philo.
549	205	P. Cornelius Scipio Africus.
		P. Licinius Craſſus.
550	204	M. Cornelius Cethegus.
		P. Sempronius Tuditanus.
551	203	Cn. Servilius Cœpio.
		C. Servilius Nepos.
552	202	T. Claudius Nero.
		M. Servilius Geminus.
553	201	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		P. Ælius Pœtus.
554	200	P. Sulpicius Galba II.
		C. Aurelius Cotta.
555	199	L. Cornelius Lentulus.
		P. Villius Tappulus.
556	198	T. Quinctius Flaminius.
		Sex. Ælius Pœtus.
557	197	C. Cornelius Cethegus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Q. Minucius Rufus.
558	196	L. Furius Purpureus.
		M. Claudius Marcellus.
559	195	M. Porcius Cato.
		L. Valerius Flaccus.
560	194	P. Cornelius Scipio Africus II.
		T. Sempronius Longus.
561	193	L. Cornelius Merula.
		Q. Minucius Thermus.
562	192	L. Quinctius Flaminius.
		Cn. Domitius Ænobarbus.
563	191	M. Acilius Glabrio.
		P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica.
564	190	L. Cornelius Scipio Asiaticus.
		C. Lælius Nepos.
565	189	Cn. Manlius Vulso.
		M. Fulvius Nobilior.
566	188	C. Livius Salinator.
		M. Valerius Messala.
567	187	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		C. Flaminius Nepos.
568	186	Sp. Posthumius Albinus.
		Q. Martius Philippus.
569	185	Ap. Claudius Pulcher.
		M. Sempronius Tuditanus.
570	184	P. Claudius Pulcher.
		L. Porcius Licinus.
571	183	Q. Fabius Labeo.
		M. Claudius Marcellus.
572	182	L. Æmilius Paullus.
		Gn. Bœbius Tamphilus.
573	181	P. Cornelius Cethegus.
		M. Bœbius Tamphilus.
574	180	A. Posthumius Albinus.
		C. Calpurnius Piso.
575	179	L. Manlius Acidinus.
		Q. Fulvius Flaccus.
576	178	M. Junius Brutus.
		A. Manlius Vulso.
577	177	C. Claudius Pulcher.
		Tib. Sempronius Gracchus.
578	176	Cn. Cornelius Scipio.
		Q. Petilius Spurinus.
579	175	P. Mutius Scævola.
		M. Æmilius Lepidus II.
580	174	Sp. Posthumius Albinus.
		Q. Mucius Scævola.
581	173	L. Posthumius Albinus.
		M. Popilius Lœnas.
582	173	C. Popilius Lœnas.
		P. Ælius Ligus, Ex Plebe.
583	171	L. Licinius Crassus.
		C. Cassius Longinus.
584	170	A. Hostilius Mancinus.
		A. Atilius Serranus.
585	169	Q. Marcius Philippus II.
		Cn. Servilius Cœpio.
586	168	L. Æmilius Paullus II.
		C. Licinius Crassus.
587	167	Q. Ælius Pœtus.
		M. Junius Pennus.
588	166	C. Sulpicius Gallus.
		M. Claudius Marcellus.
589	165	T. Manlius Torquatus.
		Cn. Octavius Nepos.
590	164	A. Manlius Torquatus.
		Q. Cassius Longinus.
591	163	Tib. Sempronius Gracchus II.
		M. Juventius Thalna.
592	162	P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica.
		C. Martius Figulus.
593	161	M. Valerius Messala.
		C. Fannius Strabo.
594	160	L. Annius Gallus.
		M. Cornelius Cethegus.
595	159	Cn. Cornelius Dolabella.
		M. Fulvius Nobilior.
596	158	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		C. Popilius Lœnas II.
597	157	Sex. Julius Cæsar.
		L. Aurelius Orestes.
598	156	L. Cornelius Lentulus.
		M. Martius Figulus II.
599	155	P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica II.
		M. Claudius Marcellus II.
600	154	Q. Opimius Nepos.
		L. Posthumius Albinus.
601	153	Q. Fulvius Nobilior.
		T. Annius Luscus.
602	152	M. Claudius Marcellus III.
		L. Valerius Flaccus.
603	151	L. Licinius Lucullus.
		A. Posthumius Albinus.
604	150	T. Quinctius Flaminius.
		M. Acilius Balbus.
605	149	L. Marcius Censorinus.
		M. Manlius Nepos.
606	148	Sp. Posthumius Albinus.
		L. Calpurnius Piso.
607	147	P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus.
		C. Livius Drusus.
608	146	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		L. Mummius Achaicus.
609	145	Q. Fabius Æmilianus.
		L. Hostilius Mancinus.
610	144	Ser. Sulpicius Galba.
		L. Aurelius Cotta.
611	143	Ap. Claudius Pulcher.
		Q. Cœcilius Metellus.
612	142	L. Cœcilius Metellus.
		Q. Fabius Servilianus.
613	141	Cn. Servilius Cœpio.
		Q. Pompeius Rufus.
614	140	C. Cœlius Sapiens.
		Q. Servilius Cœpio.
615	139	Cn. Calpurnius Piso.
		M. Popilius Lœnas.
616	138	Cn Cornelius Scipio Nasica.
		D. Junius Brutus.
617	137	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		C. Hostilius Mancinus.
618	136	P. Piburius Philus.
		Sex. Atilius Serranus.
619	135	Ser. Fulvius Flaccus.
		C. Calpurnius Piso.
620	134	P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus II.
		C. Fulvius Flaccus.
621	133	P. Mucius Scævola.
		L. Calpurnius Piso Frugi.
622	132	P. Popilius Lœnas.
		P. Rupilius Nepos.
623	131	P. Licinius Crassus.
		L. Valerius Flaccus.
624	130	M. Perpenna.
		C. Claudius Pulcher.
625	129	C. Sempronius Tuditanus.
		M. Aquilius Nepos.
626	128	Cn. Octavius Nepos.
		T. Annius Luscus.
627	127	L. Cassius Longinus.
		L. Cornelius Cinna.
628	126	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		L. Aurelius Orestes.
629	125	M. Plautius Hypsæus.
		M. Fulvius Flaccus.
630	124	C. Cassius Longinus.
		C. Sextius Calvinus.
631	123	Q. Cœcilius Metellus.
		T. Quinctius Flaminius.
632	122	Cn. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		C. Fannius Nepos.
633	121	Q. Fabius Maximus.
		L. Opimius Nepos.
634	120	P. Manlius Nepos.
		C. Papirius Carbo.
635	119	L. Cæcilius Metellus.
		L. Aurelius Cotta.
636	118	M. Portius Cato.
		Q. Marcius Rex.
637	117	L. Cæcilius Metellus.

Q. Mutius.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		Q. Mutius Scævola.
638	116	C. Licinius Geta.
		Q. Fabius Maximus.
639	115	M. Æmilius Scaurus.
		M. Cœcilius Metellus.
640	114	M. Acilius Balbus.
		C. Portius Cato.
641	113	C. Cœcilius Metellus.
		Cn. Papirius Carbo.
642	112	M. Livius Druſus.
		L. Calpurnius Piſo.
643	111	P. Cornelius Scipio Naſica.
		L. Calpurnius Beſtia.
644	110	M. Minucius Rufus.
		Sp. Poſthumius Albinus.
645	109	Q. Cœcilius Metellus.
		M. Junius Silanus.
646	108	Ser. Sulpicius Galba.
		M. Aurelius Scaurus.
647	107	L. Caſſius Longinus.
		C. Marius.
648	106	C. Attilius Serranus.
		Q. Servilius Cæpio II.
649	105	P. Rutilus Rufus.
		C. Manilius Nepos.
650	104	C. Marius II.
		C. Flavius Fimbria.
651	103	C. Marius III.
		L. Aurelius Oreſtes.
652	102	C. Marius IV.
		Q. Luctatius Catulus.
653	101	C. Marius V.
		M. Aquilius Nepos.
654	100	C. Marius VI.
		L. Valerius Flaccus.
655	99	M. Antonius.
		A. Poſthumius Albinus.
656	98	Q. Cœcilius Metellus.
		T. Didius Nepos.
657	97	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		P. Licinius Craſſus.
658	96	Cn. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		C. Caſſius Longinus.
659	95	L. Licinius Craſſus.
		Q. Mutius Scævola.
660	94	C. Cælius Calvus.
		L. Domitius Ænobarbus.
661	93	C. Valerius Flaccus.
		M. Herennius.
662	92	C. Claudius Pulcher.
		M. Perpenna.
663	91	L. Marcius Philippus.
		Sex. Julius Cæſar.
664	90	L. Julius Cæſar.
		P. Rutilius Lupus.
665	89	Cn. Pompeius Strabo.
		L. Porcius Cato.
666	88	L. Cornelius Sylla.
		Q. Pompeius Rufus.
667	87	Cn. Octavius Nepos.
		L. Cornelius Cinna.
668	86	L. Cornelius Cinna II.
		C. Marius VII.
669	85	L. Cornelius Cinna III.
		Cn. Papirius Carbo.
670	84	Cn. Papirius Carbo II.
		L. Cornelius Cinna IV.
671	83	L. Cornelius Scipio Aſiaticus.
		C. Norbanus Flaccus.
672	82	C. Marius.
		Cn. Papirius Carbo III.
673	81	M. Tullius Decula.
		Cn. Cornelius Dolabella.
674	80	L. Cornelius Sylla II.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus Pius.
675	79	Q. Servilius Vatia.
		App. Claudius Pulcher.
676	78	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		Q. Luctatius Catulus.
677	77	D. Junius Brutus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		M. Æmilius Brutus.
678	76	Cn. Octavius Nepos.
		C. Scribonius Curio.
679	75	L. Octavius Nepos.
		C. Aurelius Cotta.
680	74	Licinius Lucullus.
		M. Aurelius Cotta.
681	73	M. Terentius Varro.
		C. Caſſius Longinus.
682	72	L. Gellius Poplicola.
		Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
683	71	Cn. Aufidius Oreſtes.
		P. Cornelius Lentulus.
684	70	Cn. Pompeius Magnus.
		M. Licinius Craſſus.
685	69	Q. Hortenſius.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus.
686	68	L. Cæcilius Metellus.
		Q. Martius Rex.
687	67	C. Calpurnius Piſo.
		M. Acilius Glabrio.
688	66	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		L. Volcatius Tullus.
689	65	P. Cornelius Sulla.
		P. Antonius Pætus.
690	64	L. Julius Cæſar.
		C. Marcius Figulus.
691	63	M. Tullius Cicero.
		C. Antonius Nepos.
692	62	D. Julius Silanus.
		L. Licinius Murena.
693	61	M. Papius Piſo.
		M. Valerius Meſſala.
694	60	L. Afranius.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus Celer.
695	59	C. Julius Cæſar.
		M. Calpurnius Bibulus.
696	58	L. Calpurnius Piſo.
		A. Gabinius.
697	57	P. Cornelius Lentulus Spinther.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus.
698	56	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		L. Martius Philippus.
699	55	Cn. Pompeius Magnus II.
		M. Licinius Craſſus II.
700	54	L. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		Ap. Claudius Pulcher.
701	53	Cn. Domitius Calvinus.
		M. Valerius Meſſala.
702	52	Cn. Pompeius Magnus III.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus.
703	51	Ser. Sulpicius Rufus.
		M. Claudius Marcellus.
704	50	L. Æmilius Paulus.
		C. Claudius Marcellus.
705	49	C. Claudius Marcellus II.
		L. Cornelius Lentulus.
706	48	C. Julius Cæſar II.
		P. Servilius Vatia.
707	47	Q. Fufius Calenus.
		P. Vaticinius.
708	46	C. Julius Cæſar. III.
		M. Æmilius Lepidus.
709	45	C. Julius Cæſar IV.
710	44	C. Julius Cæſar V.
		M. Antonius Nepos.
711	43	C. Vibius Panſa.
		A. Hirtius.

There was elected in their Place for the ſame Year,

		Cæſar Octavius, and
		Q. Pedius.
712	42	M. Æmilius Lepidus II.
		L. Munacius Plancus.
713	41	P. Servilius Vatia Iſauricus.
		L. Antonius.
714	40	Cn. Domitius Calvinus II.
		C. Aſinius Pollio.
715	39	L. Marcius Cenſorinus.

C. Calviſius

Years from the building of Rome.	Years before the Incarnation.
		C. Calviſius Sabinus.
716	38	Ap. Claudius Pulcher.
		C. Norbanus Flavus.
717	37	M. Vipſanius Agrippa.
		L. Caninius Gallus.
718	36	L. Gellius Poplicola.
		M. Cocceius Nerva.
719	35	L. Cornificius.
		Sex. Pompeius.
720	34	L. Scribonius Libo.
		M. Antonius II, who reigned and put in his Place,
		L. Sempronius Atratinus.
721	33	C. Cæſar Octavius II.
		L. Volcatius Tullus.
722	32	Cn. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		C. Soſius Nepos.
723	31	C. Cæſar Octavius III.
		M. Valerius Meſſala Corvinus.
724	30	C. Cæſar Octavius IV.
		M. Licinius Craſſus.
725	29	C. Cæſar Octavius V.
		Sex. Appuleius.
726	28	C. Cæſar Octavius VI.
		M. Vipſan Agrippa II.
727	27	C. Cæſar Octavius VII.
		M. Vipſan Agrippa III.
728	26	C. Cæſar Octavius VIII.
		T. Statilius Taurus II.
729	25	C. Cæſar Octavius IX.
		M. Junius Silanus.
730	24	C. Cæſar Octavius X.
		C. Norbanus Flaccus.
731	23	C. Cæſar Octavius XI.
		A. Terentius Murena
732	22	M. Claudius Marcellus.
		L. Aruntinus.
733	21	Q. Æmilius Lepidus.
		M. Lollius.
734	20	M. Appuleius Nepos.
		P. Silius Nerva.
735	19	C. Sentius Saturninus.
		Q. Lucretius Cinna Viſpillo.
736	18	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		P. Cornelius Lentulus.
737	17	C. Furnius.
		P. Julius Silanus.
738	16	L. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		P. Cornelius Scipio.
739	15	M. Livius Druſus Libo.
		Cn. Calpurnius Piſo.
740	14	M. Licinius Craſſus.
		C. Cornelius Lentulus.
741	13	Tib. Claudius Nero.
		P. Quinctilius Varus.
742	12	M. Valerius Meſſala.
		P. Sulpicius Quirinus.
743	11	P. Fabius Maximus.
		Q. Ælius Tubero.
744	10	Julius Antonius.
		Q. Fabius Max. Africanus.
745	9	Cl. Druſus Nero.
		T. Quinctius Criſpinus.
746	8	M. Martius Cenſorinus.
		C. Aſinius Gallus.
747	7	Tib. Cl. Druſus Nero II.
		Cn. Calpurnius Piſo II.
748	6	D. Lælius Balbus.
		C. Antiſtius Vetus.
749	5	C. Cæſar Octavius XII.
		L. Cornelius Sulla.
750	4	C. Calviſius Sabinus II.
		L. Paſſienus Rufus.
751	3	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		M. Valerius Meſſalinus.
752	2	C. Cæſar Octavius XIII.
		M. Plautius Silanus.
753	1	Coſſus Cornelius Lentulus.
		L. Calpurnius Piſo.

Years from the building of Rome	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
754	1	C. Julius Cæſar, Auguſtus's Grandſon.
		L. Æmilius Paulus.
755	2	P. Vinicius Nepos.
		P. Alphinius Varus.
756	3	L. Ælius Lamia.
		L. Servilius Geminus.
757	4	Sex. Ælius Catus.
		C. Sentius Saturninus.
758	5	L. Valerius Meſſala.
		Cn. Cornelius Cinna Magnus.
759	6	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		L. Arruntius Nepos.
760	7	A. Licinius Nerva.
		Q. Cæcilius Metellus Creticus.
761	8	M. Furius Canullus.
		Sex. Nonius Quinctilianus.
762	9	Q. Sulpicius Camerinus.
		C. Poppæus Sabinus.
763	10	P. Cornelius Dolabella.
		C. Julius Silanus.
764	11	M. Æmilius Lepidus.
		T. Statilius Taurus.
765	12	Tib. Germanicus Cæſar.
		C. Fonteius Capito.
766	13	C. Silius Nepos.
		L. Munacius Plancus.
767	14	Sex. Pompeius Nepos.
		Sex. Appuleius Nepos.
768	15	Druſus Julius Cæſar.
		C. Norbanus Flaccus.
769	16	T. Statilius Seſenna.
		L. Scribonius Libo.
770	17	C. Cælius Rufus.
		L. Pomponius Flaccus.
771	18	Cl. Tib. Nero III.
		Germanicus Cæſar II.
772	19	M. Junius Silanus.
		L. Norbanus Balbus.
773	20	L. Valerius Meſſala.
		M. Aurelius Cotta.
774	21	Cl. Tiberius Nero IV.
		Druſus Julius Cæſar II.
775	22	C. Sulpicius Galba.
		D. Haterius Agrippa.
776	23	C. Aſinius Pollio.
		C. Antiſtius Vetus.
777	24	Sex. Cornelius Cethegus.
		L. Viſellius Varro.
778	25	Coſſus Cornelius Lentulus.
		C. Calviſius Sabinus.
779	26	Cn. Cornelius Lentulus.
		C. Calviſius Sabinus II.
780	27	M. Licinius Craſſus.
		L. Calpurnius Piſo.
781	28	Ap. Junius Silanus.
		P. Silius Nerva.
782	29	C. Rubellius Geminus.
		C. Fuſius Geminus.
783	30	L. Caſſius Longinus.
		M. Vinicilis Quartinus.
784	31	Cl. Tib. Nero Cæſar V.
		L. Ælius Silanus.
785	32	C. Domitius Ænobarbus.
		A. Vitellius Nepos.
786	33	Sergius Sulpicius Galba.
		L. Cornelius Sylla.
787	34	Paulus Fabius Perſicus.
		L. Vitellius Nepos.
788	35	C. Ceſtius Camerinus.
		M. Servilius Rufus.
789	36	Q. Plautius Lælianus.
		Sex. Papinius Gallicanus.
790	37	Cn. Acerronius Proculus.
		Cn. Porcius Nigrinus.
791	38	C. Cæſar Caligula II.
		L. Apronius Cæſianus.
792	39	M. Aquilius Julianus.
		P. Nonius Aſprenas.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
793	40	C. Cæſar Caligula III. Single Conſul at firſt, but afterwards a Collegue was elected, which was, L. Gellius.
794	41	C. Cæſar Caligula IV. Cn. Sentius Saturninus.
795	42	Tib. Claudius Emperor II. L. Licinius Largus.
796	43	Tib. Claudius Emperor III. L. Vitellius II.
797	44	L. Quinctius Criſpinus II. T. Statilius Taurus.
798	45	M. Vinicius Quartinus II. M. Statilius Corvinus.
799	46	C. Valerius Aſiaticus II. M. Valerius Meſſala.
800	47	Claudius Emperor IV. C. Vitellius Nepos III.
801	48	A. Vitellius, afterwards Emperor. L. Vipſanius Poplicola.
802	49	C. Pompeius Gallus. Q. Verraneus Lætus.
803	50	C. Antiſtius Vetus. M. Suillius Rufus.
804	51	Tib. Claudius Emperor V. Ser. Cornelius Scipio Orfitus.
805	52	P. Cornelius Sulla. L. Silvius Otho.
806	53	D. Junius Silanus. Q. Haterius Antonius.
807	54	Q. Aſinius Marcellus. M. Acilius Aviola.
808	55	Nero Claudius Emperor. L. Antiſtius Vetus.
809	56	Q. Voluſius Saturninus. P. Cornelius Scipio.
810	57	Nero Claudius Emperor II. L. Calpurnius Piſo.
811	58	Nero Claudius Emperor III. M. Valerius Meſſala.
812	59	C. Vipſanius Poplicola. L. Fonteius Capito.
813	60	Nero Claudius Emperor IV. Coſſus Cornelius Lentulus.
814	61	C. Cæſonius Pœtus. T. Petronius Sabinus.
815	62	P. Marius Celſus. L. Aſinius Gallus.
816	63	L. Memmius Regulus. T. Virginius Rufus.
817	64	C. Lecanius Baſſus. M. Licinius Craſſus.
818	65	P. Silvius Nerva. C. Julius Veſtinus.
819	66	C. Suetonius Paulinus. L. Pontius Teleſinus.
820	67	L. Fonteius Capito. C. Julius Rufus.
821	68	C. Silius Italicus. M. Galerius Trachalus.
822	69	Serv. Sulpicius Galba Emperor. T. Vinius Criſpinianus.
823	70	Fl. Veſpaſianus Emperor I. T. Veſpaſianus Cæſar.
824	71	Fl. Veſpaſianus II. M. Cocceius Nerva.
825	72	Fl. Veſpaſianus III. Ti. Veſpaſianus Cæſar II.
826	73	D. Flav. Domitianus. M. Valerius Meſſalinus.
827	74	Fl. Veſpaſianus IV. T. Veſpaſianus III.
828	75	Fl. Veſpaſianus V. T. Veſpaſianus IV.
829	76	Flav. Veſpaſianus VI. T. Veſpaſianus V.
830	77	Flav. Veſpaſianus VII. T. Veſpaſianus VI.
831	78	L. Cejonius Commodus Verus. C. Cornelius Priſcus.
832	79	Fla. Veſpaſianus VIII. T. Veſpaſianus VII.
833	80	T. Veſpaſianus Emperor VIII. Fl. Domitianus VII.
834	81	M. Plautius Silvanus. T. Annius Pollio.
835	82	F. Domitianus Emperor VIII T. Flavius Sabinus.
836	83	Fl. Domitianus IX. T. Virginius Rufus II.
837	84	Fl. Domitianus Emperor X. Ap. Junius Sabinus.
838	85	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XI. T. Aurelius Fulvus or Fulvius.
839	86	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XII. Ser. Cornelius Dolabella.
840	87	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XIII. A. Voluſius Saturninus.
841	88	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XIV. L. Minucius Rufus.
842	89	T. Aurelius Fulvus. A. Sempronius Atratinus.
843	90	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XV. M. Cocceius Nerva II.
844	91	M. Ulpius Trajanus. M. Acilius Glabrio.
845	92	Fl. Domitianus Emperor XVI. A. Voluſius Saturninus II.
846	93	Sex. Pompeius Collega. Cornelius Priſcus.
847	94	L. Nonius Aſprenas. M. Arricinus Clemens.
848	95	Flav. Domitianus Emperor XVII. T. Flavius Clemens.

Under theſe we are to take in Domitian's ſix Conſulates, who was ſix times ſubrogated Conſul in Veſpaſian's Reign.

849	96	C. Fulvius Valens. A. Antiſtius Vetus.
850	97	M. Cocceius Nerva Emperor III. T. Virginius Rufus III.
851	98	M. Cocceius Nerva Emperor IV. M. Ulpius Trajanus II.
852	99	C. Soſius Senecio. A. Cornelius Palma.
853	100	M. Ulpius Trajanus Emperor III. M. Cornelius Fronto. Plinius Junius the younger, and Cornutus Tertullus were Honorary Conſuls, or Conſuls that held out their Year.
854	101	M. Ulpius Trajanus Emperor IV. Sex. Articuleius Pœtus.
855	102	C. Soſius Senecio II. L. Licinius Sura.
856	103	M. Ulpius Trajanus Emperor V. L. Appius Maximus.
857	104	Suranus. P. Neratius Marcellus.
858	105	T. Julius Candidus. A. Julius Quadratus.
859	106	L. Cejonius Commodus. L. Tutius Cerealis.
860	107	C. Soſius Senecio III. L. Licinius Sura II.
861	108	Ap. Annius Trebonius. M. Attilius Bradua.
862	109	M. Valerius Meſſala. C. Popilius Pedo.
863	110	Claudius Criſpinus. Solenus Orphitus Haſta.
864	111	L. Calpurnius Piſo. M. Vettius Ruſticus.
865	112	M. Ulpius Trajanus Imperator VI. C. Julius Africanus.
866	113	L. Publius Celſus. C. Clodius Criſpinus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
867	114	Q. Ninius Haſta. P. Manlius Vopiſcus.
868	115	Ælian Hadrianus. Salinator.
869	116	Æmilius Ælianus. L. Antiſtius Vetus.
870	117	Quinctius Niger. T. Vipſanius Apronianus.
871	118	Ælian Hadrianus Emperor II. T. Claudius Fuſcus.
872	119	Ælian Hadrianus Emperor III. Q. Junius Ruſticus.
873	120	L. Catilius Severus. T. Aurelius Antoninus.
874	121	M. Annius Verus II. Augurus.
875	122	M. Acilius Aviola. C. Corellius Panſa.
876	123	Q. Arrius Pœtinus. C. Verranius Apronianus.
877	124	M. Acilius Glabrio. C. Bullicius Torquatus.
878	125	P. Cornelius Scipio Aſiaticus. C. Vettius Aquilinus.
879	126	M. Lollius Pedius. Q. Junius Lepidus.
880	127	Gallicanus. C. Cœlius Titianus.
881	128	L. Nonius Aſprenas. M. Annius Libo.
882	129	P. Inventius Celſus. Q. Junius Balbus.
883	130	Q. Fabius Catullinus. M. Flavius Aper.
884	131	Ser. Octavius Lœnas. M. Antonius Ruffinus.
885	132	Sentius Augurinus. Arrius Severianus.
886	133	Heberus. Junius Silanus Siſenna.
887	134	C. Julius Servilius. C. Vibius Juventius.
888	135	Pompeianus Lupercus. L. Julius Atticus.
889	136	L. Cejonius Commodus Verus. Sex. Vetulenus.
890	137	L. Ælius Hadrianus. P. Cœlius Balbinus.
891	138	Sulpicius Camerinus. Quinctius Niger Magnus.
892	139	Antoninus Pius Emperor II. Brutus Præſens.
893	140	Antoninus Pius Emperor III. M. Aurelius Cæſar.
894	141	M. Peducæus Priſcinus. T. Hænius Severus.
895	142	L. Cuſpius Rufinus. L. Statius Quadratus.
896	143	T. Bellicus Torquatus. T. Claudius Atticus.
897	144	Lollianus Avitus. C. Gavius Maximus.
898	145	Antoninus Pius Emperor IV. M. Aurelius Cæſar II.
899	146	Sex. Erucius Clarus. Cn. Claudius Severus.
900	147	M. Valerius Largus. M. Valerius Meſſalinus.
901	148	C. Bellicius Torquatus. M. Salvius Julianus.
902	149	Ser. Cornelius Scipio Orfitus. Q. Nonius Priſcus.
903	150	Romulus Gallicanus. Antiſtius Vetus.
904	151	Sex. Quintilius Gordianus. Sex. Quinctilius Maximus.
905	152	Sex. Acilius Glabrio. C. Valerius Verianus.
906	153	Bruttius Præſens II. M. Antonius Rufinus.
907	154	M. Aurelius Cæſar III. Sex. Lateranus.
908	155	C. Julius Severus. M. Rufinus Sabianus.
909	156	C. Cejonius Silvanius. C. Serius Augurinus.
910	157	Barbatus. Regulus.
911	158	Q. Flavius Tertullus. C. Sacerdos.
912	159	Plautius Quinctilius. Statius Priſcus.
913	160	T. Vibius Batus. Ap. Annius Bradua.
914	161	M. Aurelius Emperor III. L. Aurelius Cæſar.
915	162	Q. Junius Ruſticus. Vettius Aquilinus.
916	163	L. Papirius Ælianus. Junius Paſtor.
917	164	C. Julius Macrinus. L. Cornelius Celſus.
918	165	L. Arrius Pudens. M. Gavius Orfitus.
919	166	Q. Servilius Pudens. L. Fuſidius Pollio.
920	167	L. Aurelius Verus Emperor II. T. Vinidius Quadratus.
921	168	L. Vettius Paulus. T. Junius Montanus.
922	169	Soſius Priſcus. Q. Cœlius Apollinarius.
923	170	L. Julius Clarus. M. Aurelius Cethegus.
924	171	T. Ticinus Severus. C. Scædius Natta.
925	172	Claudius Maximus. Cornelius Scipio Orfitus.
926	173	M. Aurelius Severus II. F. Claudius Pompeianus.
927	174	Annius Trebonius Gallus. L. Flaccus.
928	175	Calpurnius Piſo. M. Salvius Julianus.
929	176	T. Vitraſius Pollio. M. Flavius Aper.
930	177	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor. Plautius Quinctillus.
931	178	Vettius Rufus. Cornelius Scipio Orfitus.
932	179	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor II. Veſpronius Candidus.
933	180	Bruttius Præſens. Sex. Quinctilius Gordianus.
934	181	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor III. Antiſtius Burrhus.
935	182	Petronius Mamertinus. M. Vettius Trebellius.
936	183	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor IV. M. Aufidius Victorinus.
937	184	M. Eggius Martellus. M. Papirius Ælianus.
938	185	M. Attilius Bradua. Triarius Maternus.
939	186	L. Aurelius Commodus V. M. Acilius Glabrio.
940	187	Clodius Criſpinus. Papirius Ælianus.
941	188	C. Allius Fuſcinus. Duillius Silanus.
942	189	Julius Silanus. Q. Servilius Silanus.
943	190	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor VI. Petronius Septimianus.
944	191	Caſſius Appronianus. M. Attilius Bradua II.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
945	192	L. Aurelius Commodus Emperor VII.
		L. Helvius Pertinax.
146	193	Q. Solfius Faluo.
		C. Julius Clarus.
947	194	L. Septimius Severus Emperor II.
		Clodius Albinus.
948	195	Q. Flavius Tertullus.
		L. Flavius Clemens.
949	196	Cn. Domitius Dexter.
		L. Valenus Meſſala.
950	197	Ap. Claudius Lateranis.
		M. Marius Rufinus.
951	198	T. Aterius Saturninus.
		C. Annius Trebonius.
952	199	P. Cornelius Anullinus.
		M. Aufidius Fronto.
953	200	Tib. Claudius Severus.
		C. Aufidius Victorinus.
954	201	L. Annius Fabianus.
		M. Nonius Mucianus.
955	202	L. Septimius Severus Emperor III.
		M. Aurelius Cæſar.
956	203	P. Septimius Geta.
		L. Septimius Plautianus.
957	204	L. Fabianus Septimius Cilo.
		M. Annius Libo.
958	205	M. Aurelius Antonius Emperor II.
		P. Septimius Geta II.
959	206	M. Nummius Annius.
		Fulvius Æmilianus.
960	207	M. Flavius Aper.
		Q. Allius Maximus.
961	208	M. Aurelius Antonius Emperor III.
		P. Septimius Geta II.
962	209	Tib. Claudius Pompeianus.
		Lollianus Avitus.
963	210	M. Acilius Fauſtinus.
		C. Cæſonius Maſer.
964	211	Q. Epidus Rufus.
		Pomponius Baſſus.
965	212	L. Pompeius Aſper.
		His Collegue was one of the ſame Name.
966	213	M. Antonius Caracalla Emperor IV.
		P. Cœlius Balbinus.
967	214	Silius Meſſala.
		Q. Aquilius Sabinus.
968	215	Æmilius Lætus.
		Anicius Cerealis.
969	216	Q. Aquilius Sabinus.
		Sex. Cornelius Anullinus.
970	217	Bruttius Præſens.
		Extricatus.
971	218	M. Opilius Antoninus.
		Diadumenus Cæſar and Adventus.
972	219	M. Aurelius Antonius Auguſtus II.
		Sacerdos.
973	220	M. Aurelius Antonius IV.
		M. Aurelius Eutychianus.
974	221	Annius Gratus.
		Claudius Seleucas.
975	222	M. Aurelius Antonius V.
		M. Aurelius Alexander Severus.
976	223	Maximus.
		Papirius Ælianus.
977	224	Claudius Julianus.
		Claudius Criſpinus.
978	225	L. Turpilius Dexter.
		M. Mœcius Rufus.
979	226	M. Aurelius Alexander Severus Emperor II.
		C. Quinctilius Marcellus.
980	227	Cœlius Balbinus.
		M. Clodius Pupienus.
981	228	Vettius Modeſtus.
		Probus.
982	229	M. Aurelius Alexander Severus Emperor III.
		Caſſius Apronius Dio.
983	230	Calpurnius Agricola.
		Clementinus.
984	231	T. Claudius Pompeianus.
		Felicianus.
985	232	Julius Lupus.
		Maximus.
986	233	Maximus II.
		Ovinius Paternus.
987	234	Maximus III.
		Urbanus.
988	235	L. Catilius Severus.
		L. Ragonius Urinatius Quinctianus.
989	236	C. Julius Maximinus Emperor.
		C. Julius Africanus.
990	237	P. Titius Perpetuus.
		L. Ovinius Ruſticus Cornelianus.
991	238	M. Ulpius Crinitus.
		C. Nonius Proculus Pontianus.
992	239	M. Antonius Gordianus Emperor.
		M. Acciolus Aviola.
993	240	Vettius Sabinus.
		Venuſtus.
994	241	M. Antonius Gordianus Emperor II.
		T. Claudius Pompeianus.
995	242	C. Aufidius Atticus.
		C. Aſinius Prætextatus.
996	243	C. Julius Africanus.
		Æmilius Pappus.
997	244	Fulvius Æmilianus.
		Peregrinus.
998	245	M. Julius Philippus Emperor II.
		Tib. Fabius Titianus.
999	246	Bruttius Præſens.
		Nummius Albinus.
1000	247	M. Julius Philippus Emperor II.
		M. Julius Philippus Cæſar.
1001	248	M. Julius Philippus Emperor III.
		Julius Cæſar Philippus II.
1002	249	Fulvius Æmilianus.
		Vettius Aquilinus.
1003	250	Decius Auguſtus Emperor II.
		Annius Maximus Gratus.
1004	251	Decius Auguſtus Emperor III.
		Q. Herennius Hetruſcus.
1005	252	C. Vib. Trebonianus Gallus.
		C. Vib. Voluſianus.
1006	253	C. Vib. Voluſianus II.
		M. Valerius Maximus.
1007	254	Licin. Valerianus II.
		Gallienus.
1008	255	Licin. Valerianus III.
		Gallienus II.
1009	256	M. Valerius Maximus II.
		M. Acilius Glabrio.
1010	257	Licin. Valerianus IV.
		Gallienus III.
1011	258	M. Aurelius Memmius Fuſcus.
		Pomponius Baſſus.
1012	259	Gallienus IV.
		Valerianus Junior.
1013	260	Fulvius Æmilianus.
		Pomponius Baſſus II.
1014	261	Gallienus V.
		Petronius Voluſianus.
1015	262	Gallienus VI.
		Pompeius Fauſtinus.
1016	263	Nummius Albinus.
		Maximus Dexter.
1017	264	Licinius Gallienus VII.
		Æmilius Saturninus.
1018	265	Licinius Valerianus Cæſar.
		L. Cæſonius Marcerlucillus.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
1019	266	Licinius Gallienus VIII. Sabinillus.
1020	267	Ovinius Paternus. Arceſilaus.
1021	268	Ovinius Paternus II. Marinianus.
1022	269	M. Aurelius Claudius Emperor. Ovinius Paternus III.
1023	270	Flavius Antiochianus. Furius Orfitus.
1024	271	L. Domitius Val. Aurel. Emperor. C. Julius Capitolinus.
1025	272	Quietus. Voldumianus.
1026	273	M. Claudius Tacitus. Furius Placidianus.
1027	274	L. Domitius Valerius Aurelianus Emperor II. C. Julius Capitolinus.
1028	275	L. Domitius Valerius Aurelianus Emperor III. T. Nonnius Marcellinus.
1029	276	M. Claudius Tacitus Emperor II. Fulvius Æmilianus.
1030	277	M. Aurel. Probus Emperor II. M. Furius Lupus.
1031	278	M. Aurel. Probus Emperor III. M. Furius Lupus.
1032	279	M. Aurelius Probus Emperor IV. C. Junius Tiberianus.
1033	280	Junius Meſſala. Gratus.
1034	281	M. Aurelius Probus Emperor V. C. Julianus Tiberianus.
1035	282	M. Aurelius Probus Emperor VI. Pomponius Victorinus.
1036	283	M. Aurelius Carus Emperor II. M. Aurelius Carinus Cæſar.
1037	284	M. Aurelius Carus Emperor III. M. Aurelius Numerianus Emperor.
1038	285	Valerius Diocletianus Emperor II. Ariſtobulus.
1039	286	Maximus Junius Priſcillianus. Vettius Aquilinus.
1040	287	Conſtantius Valerius Diocletianus Emperor III. Maximianus Herculeus.
1041	288	M. Aurelius Maximus. Pomponius Januarius.
1042	289	Annius Baſſus. L. Ragonius Quinctianus.
1043	290	Conſtantius Valerius Diocletianus Emperor IV. Valerius Maximianus II.
1044	291	C. Junius Tiberianus. Caſſius Dio.
1045	292	Afranius Hanibalianus. M. Aurelius Aſclepiodotus.
1046	223	Conſtantius Valerius Diocletianus Emperor V. Valerius Maximianus III.
1047	294	Conſtantius Chlorus. Galerius Maximianus.
1048	295	Nummius Tuſcus. Annius Cornelius Anullinus.
1049	296	C. Valerianus Diocletianus VI. Conſtantius Cæſar II.
1050	297	Maximianus Herculeus V. Galerius Maximianus Cæſar II.
1051	298	Anitius Fauſtus. Severus Gallus.
1052	299	C. Valerius Diocletianus VII. Maximianus Herculeus VI.
1053	300	Conſtantius Chlorus II. Galerius Maximianus Armentarius III.
1054	301	Poſthumius Titianus. Fl. Popilius Nepotianus.
1055	302	Conſtantius Chlorus IV. Galerius Maximianus Armentarius IV.
1056	303	C. Valerius Diocletianus VIII. M. Maximianus Herculeus VII.
1057	304	C. Valerianus Diocletianus IX. Maximianus Herculeus VIII.
1058	305	Conſtantius Chlorus V. Galerius Maximianus Armentarius V.
1059	306	Conſtantius Chlorus VI. Galerius Maximianus Armentarius VI.
1060	307	Maximianus Herculeus IX. Conſtantius.
1061	308	C. Valerius Diocletianus X. Galerius Maximianus Armentarius VII.
1062	309	Maxentius. Romulus.
1063	310	Maxentius, who had no Collegue.
1064	311	Galerius Maximianus Auguſtus VIII. Licinius Auguſtus.
1065	312	Fl. Valerius Conſtantinus Auguſtus II. Licinius Auguſtus II.
1066	313	Fl. Valer. Conſtantinus Auguſtus III. Licinius Auguſtus III.
1067	314	Cejonius Rufus Voluſianus. Anianus.
1068	315	Flavius Val. Conſtantinus Auguſtus IV. Licinius Auguſtus IV.
1069	316	Rufus Cecinna Sabinus. Q. Aradius Ruffinus.
1070	317	Ovinius Gallicanus. Septimius Baſſus.
1071	318	Licinius Auguſtus V. Criſpus Cæſar.
1072	319	Flavius Valer. Conſtantinus Auguſtus V. Licinius Cæſar.
1073	320	Fl. Val. Conſtantinus Auguſtus VI. Conſtantius Junius Cæſar.
1074	321	Criſpus Cæſar II. Conſtantius Cæſar II.
1075	322	Petronius Probianus. Annicius Julianus.
1076	323	Acilius Severus. Fl. Junius Rufinus.
1077	324	Criſpinus Cæſar III. Conſtantinus Cæſar III.
1078	325	Amicius Paulinus. Publius Julianus.
1079	326	Fl. Valerius Conſtantinus Auguſtus VII. Julius Conſtantius.
1080	327	Conſtantinus Cæſar IV. Maximus Baſilius.
1081	328	Fl. Magnus Janicarius. Fabius Juſtus.
1082	329	Fl. Val. Conſtantinus Auguſtus VIII. Conſtantius Cæſar V.
1083	230	Ovinius Gallicanus. L. Aurelius Symmachus.
1084	331	Annius Baſſus. Ablavius Ægyptius.
1085	332	Ovinius Pacatianus. Mecinius Hilarianus.
1086	333	Fl. Valerius Delmatius. M. Aurelius Xenophilus.
1087	334	L. Ranius Optatus. Anicius Fauſtus Paulinus.
1088	335	Fl. Valerius Conſtantinus. C. Cejonius Albinus.

Fl. Popilius

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
1089	336	Fl. Popilius Nepotianus. Facundus or Secundus.
1090	337	T. Fabius Titianus.
1091	338	Felicianus } Polemius. Urſus }
1092	339	Fl. Valerius Conſtantinus Auguſtus II. Conſtantius Auguſtus.
1093	340	Fl. Septimius Acyndinus. L. Aradius Proculus.
1094	341	Fl. Antonius Marcellinus. Cœlius Probinus.
1095	342	Conſtantius Auguſtus II. Conſtantinus Auguſtus III.
1096	343	M. Memmius Placidus. Fl. Pſidius Romulus.
1097	344	Domitius Leontius. Saluſtius.
1098	345	Amantius Cejonius. Rufius Albinus.
1099	346	Conſtantinus Auguſtus IV. Conſtantius Auguſtus III.
1100	347	Flavius Rufinus. F. Euſebius.
1101	348	Fl. Philippus. Fl. Saellas.
1102	349	Ulpius Limenius. Fabius Catullinus.
1103	350	Sergius. Nigrianus.
1104	351	After the Conſulate of Sergius and Nigrianus.
1105	352	Conſtantius Auguſtus V. Conſtantius Gallus Cæſar.
1106	353	Conſtantius Auguſtus VI. Conſtantius Gallus II.
1107	354	Conſtantius Auguſtus VII. Conſtantius Gallus III.
1108	355	Fl. Arbetius. Mavortius Lollianus.
1109	356	Conſtantius Auguſtus VIII. Cl. Julianus Cæſar.
1110	357	Conſtantius Auguſtus IX. Cl. Julianus Cæſar II.
1111	358	Datianus. Neratius Cerealis.
1112	359	Euſebius. Hypatius.
1113	360	Conſtantius Auguſtus X. Cl. Julianus Cæſar III.
1114	361	Fl. Taurus. Fl. Florentius.
1115	362	Fl. Mamertius. Fl. Nevitta.
1116	363	Cl. Julianus Auguſtus IV. Secundus Saluſtius.
1117	364	Jovianus Auguſtus. Varronianus. Puer Nobil.
1118	365	Valentinianus Auguſtus. Valens Auguſtus.
1119	366	Gratianus. Puer Nobil. Fl. Dagalaiſus.
1120	367	Fl. Lupicinus. Fl. Jovinus.
1121	368	Valentinianus Auguſtus II. Valens Auguſtus II.
1122	369	Felix Valentinianus. Sex. Aurelius Victor.
1123	370	Valentinianus Auguſtus III. Valens Auguſtus III.
1124	371	Gratianus Auguſtus II. Sex. Anicius Probus.
1125	372	Fl. Modeſtus. Fl. Arintheus.
1126	373	Valentinianus Auguſtus IV. Valens Auguſtus IV.
1127	374	Gratianus Auguſtus III. Flavius Equitius V. C.
1128	375	After the Conſulate of Gratianus and Equitius,
1129	376	Valens Auguſtus V.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
		Valentinianus Auguſtus the younger.
1130	377	Gratianus Auguſtus IV. Fl. Merobaudes V. C.
1131	378	Valens Auguſtus VI. Valentinianus Auguſtus II.
1132	379	D. Auſonius Gallus. Q. Claudius Olybrius.
1133	380	Gratianus Auguſtus V. Theodoſius Auguſtus.
1134	381	Poſthumius Syagrius. Fl. Annius Eucherius.
1135	382	Poſthumius Syagrius II. Fl. Antonius.
1136	383	Fl. Merobaudes II. Fl. Saturninus.
1137	384	Fl. Ricimer. Fl. Clearchus.
1138	385	Arcadius Auguſtus. Fl. Bauto.
1139	386	Flavius Honorius, Puer Nobil. Fl. Evodius.
1140	387	Valentinianus Auguſtus III. Fl. Eutropius.
1141	388	Theodoſius Auguſtus II. Fl. Cynegius.
1142	389	Fl. Tynaſius. Fl. Promotus.
1143	390	Valentinianus Auguſtus IV. Fl. Neoterius.
1144	391	Tiberius Fabius Titianus. Q. Aurelius Symmachus.
1145	392	Arcadius Auguſtus II. Fl. Rufinus.
1146	393	Theodoſius Auguſtus III. Fl. Abundantius.
1147	394	Arcadius Auguſtus III. Honorius Auguſtus II.
1148	395	Sex. Anicius Olybrius. Sex. Anicius Probinus.
1149	396	Arcadius Auguſtus IV. Honorius Auguſtus III.
1150	397	Fl. Cæſareus. Pontius Atticus.
1151	398	Honorius Auguſtus IV. Fl. Eutychianus.
1152	399	Manlius Theodorus. Fl. Eutropius.
1153	400	F. Stilicon. V. C. Fl. Aurelianus.
1154	401	Ragonius Celſus. Fl. Flavitta.
1155	402	Arcadius Auguſtus V. Honorius Auguſtus V.
1156	403	Theodoſius Junior Auguſtus. Fl. Rumoridus.
1157	404	Honorius Auguſtus VI. Fl. Ariſtinetus.
1158	405	Fl. Stilicon V. C. Fl. Anthemius.
1159	406	Arcadius Auguſtus VI. Sex. Anicius Probus.
1160	407	Honorius Auguſtus VII. Theodoſius Auguſtus II.
1161	408	Anicius Baſſus. Fl. Philippus.
1162	409	Honorius Auguſtus VIII. Theodoſius Auguſtus III.
1163	410	Fl. Varanes. Fl. Tertullus.
1164	411	Theodoſius Auguſtus IV. He had no Collegue.
1165	412	Honorius Auguſtus IX. Theodoſius Auguſtus V.
1166	413	Fl. Lucianus. Fl. Herodianus.
1167	414	Fl. Conſtantianus V. C. Fl. Conſtantius.
1168	415	Honorius Auguſtus X. Theodoſius Auguſtus VI.
1169	416	Theodoſius Auguſtus VII.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
		Junius Quartus Palladius.
1170	417	Honorius Augustus XI.
		Fl. Constantius V. C.
1171	418	Honorius Augustus XII.
		Theodosius Augustus VIII.
1172	419	Fl Monaxius.
		Fl. Plintha.
1173	420	Theodosius Augustus IX.
		Fl. Constantius III. V. C.
1174	421	Fl. Agricola.
		Fl. Eustathius.
1175	422	Honorius Augustus XIII.
		Theodosius Augustus X.
1176	428	Rufius Marinianus.
		Fl. Asclepiodotus.
1177	424	Fl. Castinus.
		Fl. Victorinus.
1178	425	Theodosius Augustus XI.
		Placidius Valentinianus Cæsar.
1179	426	Theodosius Augustus XII.
		Valentinianus Augustus II.
1180	427	Fl. Hierius.
		Fl. Ardaburius.
1181	428	Fl. Felix.
		Fl. Taurus.
1182	429	Fl. Florentius.
		Fl. Dionysius.
1183	430	Theodosius Augustus XIII.
		Valentinianus Augustus III.
1184	431	Anicius Bassus.
		Fl. Antiochus.
1185	432	Fl. Ætius, U. C.
		Fl. Valerius.
1186	433	Theodosius Augustus XIV.
		Fl. Anicius Maximus.
1187	434	Fl. Aspar.
		Fl. Ariobindus.
1188	435	Theodosius Augustus XV.
		Valentinianus Augustus IV.
1189	436	Flavius Isidorus.
		Flavius Lenator.
1190	437	Flavius Ætius, U. C.
		Flavius Sigisvuldus.
1191	438	Theodosius Augustus XVI.
		Anicius Glabrio Faustus.
1192	439	Theodosius Augustus XVII.
		Flavius Festus.
1193	440	Valentinianus Augustus V.
		Flavius Anatolius.
1194	441	Flavius Cyrus Panapolites, had no Collegue.
1195	442	Flavius Dioscorus.
		Flavius Eudoxus.
1196	443	Flavius Anicius Maximus.
		Flavius Paternus.
1197	444	Theodosius Augustus XVIII.
		Decius Albinus.
1198	445	Valentinianus Augustus VI.
		Flavius Nonius.
1199	446	Flavius Ætius V. C. III.
		Q. Aurelius Symmachus.
1200	447	Flavius Ardaburius.
		Probus Alypius.
1201	448	Rufius Posthumianus.
		Flavius Zeno.
1202	449	Flavius Protogenes.
		Turcius Secundus Asterius.
1203	450	Valentinianus Augustus VII.
		Gennadius Avienus.
1204	451	Marcianus Augustus.
		Clodius Adelphius.
1205	452	Flavius Herculanus.
		Flavius Asporatius.
1206	453	Flavius Opilio.
		Flavius Vincomalus.
1207	454	Flavius Ætius.
		Flavius Studius.
1208	455	Valentinianus Augustus VIII.
		Flavius Anthemius.
1209	456	Flavius Joannes.
		Flavius Varanes.
1210	457	Flavius Constantinus.

Years from the building of Rome	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
		Flavius Rufus.
1211	458	Leo Augustus.
		Majoratus Augustus.
1212	459	Flavius Ricimer.
		Flavius Patricius.
1213	460	Flavius Magnus.
		Flavius Apollonius.
1214	461	Flavius Severianus.
		Flavius Dagalaiphus.
1215	462	Leo Augustus II.
		Vibius Severus Augustus.
1216	463	Decius Basileus Felix.
		Flavius Vibianus.
1217	464	Flavius Rusticus.
		Anicius Olybrius.
1218	465	Flavius Basiliscus.
		Flavius Herminericus.
1219	466	Leo Augustus III.
		Tib. Fabius Titianus.
1220	467	Flavius Pusæus.
		Flavius Joannes.
1221	468	Anthemius Augustus, without Collegue.
1222	469	Flavius Zeno.
		Flavius Marcianus.
1223	470	Flavius Severus.
		Flavius Jordanus.
1224	471	Leo Augustus IV.
		Flavius Probianus.
1225	472	Flavius Festus.
		Flavius Marcianus.
1226	473	Leo Augustus, without Collegue.
1227	474	Leo Augustus the younger, without Collegue.
1228	475	Zeno Augustus II. without Collegue.
1229	476	Basiliscus Augustus II.
		Flavius Armatus.
1230	477	After the Consulship of Basiliscus and Armatus follows (for this Year had no Consuls) that of
1231	478	Flavius Illus, without any Collegue or Partner.
1232	479	Zeno Augustus II. had no Collegue.
1233	480	Flavius Placidius, without any Collegue.
1234	481	Flavius Severinus.
		Flavius Trocondus.
1235	482	Anicius Faustus, without any Collegue.
1236	483	Theodoricus Amalus, King of the Goths.
1237	484	Flavius Venantius.
1238	485	Q. Aurelius Symmachus, the younger, without any Collegue.
1239	486	Maurus Decius.
		Flavius Longinus.
1240	487	Anicius Manlius Severinus Boetius. U. C. without Collegue.
1241	488	Flavius Sufidius.
		Claudius Dynamius.
1242	489	Anicius Probinus.
		Eusebius Chronio.
1243	490	Anicius Faustus.
		Flavius Longinus II.
1244	491	Flavius Olybrius the younger, without Collegue.
1245	492	Anastatius Augustus.
		Flavius Rufinus.
1246	493	Decius Albinus.
		Eusebius Chronio II.
1247	494	Flavius Præsidius.
		Turcius Asterius.
1248	495	Flavius Viator.
		Flavius Æmilius.
1249	496	Flavius Paulus, without Collegue.

Years from the building of Rome.	Since our Saviour's Incarnation.
1250	497	Anaſtaſius Auguſtus II. without Collegue.
1251	498	Decius Paulinus. Joannes Scytha.
1252	499	Flavius Joannes Gibbus. Flavius Aſclepius.
1253	500	Flavius Patricius. Flavius Pypatius.
1254	501	Flavius Pompeius. Rufius Avienus.
1255	502	Rufius Avienus, the younger. Flavius Probus.
1256	503	Flavius Dexecratus. Flavius Voluſianus.
1257	504	Flavius Cethacus, without Collegue.
1258	505	Manlius Theodorus. Flavius Sabinianus.
1259	506	Flavius Meſſala. Flavius Areobinda.
1260	507	Anaſtaſius Auguſtus III. Venantius Decius.
1261	508	Venantius Decius, the younger. Flavius Celer.
1262	509	Opportunus U. C. without Collegue.
1263	510	Manlius Severinus Boëtius. Flavius Eutharicus.
1264	511	Felix Gallus. Secundinus.
1265	512	Flavius Paulus. Flavius Muſchianus.
1266	513	Anicius Probus. Flavius Clementinus.
1267	514	M. Aurel. Caſſiodorus, Senator, without Collegue.
1268	515	Flavius Anthemius. Flavius Florentius.
1269	516	Flavius Petrus U. C. without Collegue.
1270	517	Anaſtaſius Auguſtus IV. Flavius Agapitus.
1271	518	Flavius Florentius H. Flavius Magnus.
1272	519	Juſtinus Auguſtus. Eutharius Celicæ U. C.
1273	520	Flavius Vitalianus U. C. Flavius Ruſticus.
1274	521	Juſtinianus, U. C. Flavius Valerius.
1275	522	Q. Aurelius Symmachus, U. C. Severinus Boëtius. U. C.
1276	523	Anicius Maximus, without Collegue.
1277	524	Juſtinus Auguſtus II. Flavius Opilio.
1278	525	Anicius Probus. Flavius Philoxenus.
1279	526	Anicius Olybrius, the younger, without Collegue.
1280	527	Flavius Mavortius, without any Collegue.
1281	528	Juſtinianus Auguſtus II, without Collegue.
1282	529	Maurus Decius, without Collegue; unleſs he had for Partner Baſilius Junior.
1283	530	Poſthumius Lampadius, U. C. Flavius Oreſtes, U. C.
1284	531	After the Conſulate of Lampadius and Oreſtes I. (This Year had no Conſuls.)
1285	532	After the Conſulate of Lampadius and Oreſtes II. (This Year had no Conſuls.)
1286	533	Juſtinianus Auguſtus III. without Collegue.
1287	534	Juſtinianus Auguſtus IV. Theodoſius Paulinus Junior.
1288	535	Flavius Beliſarius, U. C. without Collegue.
1289	536	After the firſt Conſulate of Beliſarius (this Year had no Conſuls.)
1290	537	After the Conſulate of Beliſarius II. (This Year had no Conſuls.)
1291	538	Flavius Joargus. Flavius Voluſianus.
1292	539	Flavius Appio an Ægyptian, without Collegue.
1293	540	Flavius Juſtinius, U. C. without Collegue.
1294	541	Baſilius Junior, U. C. without Collegue.
1295	542	II. After the Conſulate of Baſilius.
1296	543	III.
1297	144	IV.
1298	545	V.
1299	446	VI.
1300	547	VII.
1301	548	VIII.
1302	549	IX.
1303	550	X.
1304	551	XI.
1305	552	XII. After the Conſulate of Baſilius the younger All theſe Years had no Conſuls.
1306	553	XIII.
1307	554	XIV.
1308	555	XV.
1309	556	XVI.
1310	557	XVII.
1311	558	XVIII.
1312	559	XIX.
1313	560	XX.
1314	561	XXI.
1315	562	XXII.
1316	563	XXIII.
1317	564	XXIV.
1318	565	XXV.
1319	566	Juſtin Emperor and Conſul.
1320	567	Juſtin Emperor and Conſul II. who bore that Office during his Life, and after whoſe Death there was no more Conſuls. * Riccioli Chronolog. Reform.

In this Regiſter of the Conſuls we have gone upon Riccioli's Performance. However, there are ſome Difficulties not altogether adjuſted by Chronologers: But the Plan of this Work won't allow a critical Diſcuſſion of this Matter. 'Tis ſufficient to obſerve, that the Faſti Conſulares begin to be ſomewhat perplex'd under the Emperors, who gave and took away the Conſulſhips at Pleaſure, ehaving deprived the People of the Right of voting at Elections. For when the Sovereignty of the Roman Empire was lodg'd in a ſingle Perſon, the Conſulate was little more than an honourable Diſtinction. However, the Romans were deſirous to keep up the Office, becauſe it look'd like ſome Remains of Liberty. In fine, this Office after a long and gradual Declenſion was extinguiſh'd in the Reign of Juſtinian: Inſomuch that after him the ſucceeding Emperors neither gave the Office nor took the Name. Baſilius is the laſt Name that ſtands upon the Faſti Conſulares, and was Conſul in the Year 541. The Honour of this was then ſunk to ſuch a Degree that 'twas ſometimes beſtow'd upon Perſons of the loweſt Rank. The Emperor Juſtin had a Mind to revive the Office five and twenty Years after and made himſelf Conſul. But his Deſign miſcarried, for he had no Succeſſor in the Office. We never find above two Conſuls at a time, though ſometimes contrary to the ancient Uſage of the Common-Wealth there was but one. Beſides Subrogations were ſo common, that ſometimes a ſingle Year reckons ten or a dozen Conſuls, though ſome of them held the Office but a Month, and others two, &c. through the Interval of an Interregnum, as we may call it, during which Period Period there was no Conſuls. Their Computations went thus, the firſt Year after the Conſulate of ſuch an one, the ſecond Year, the third Year, and ſo on. In this Chronological Series the Letters V. C. which ſtand after ſome Proper Names ſignify Vir Clarus or Clariſſimus, Illuſtrious or moſt Illuſtrious.

CONSULAR (Medals). So thoſe Medals were called which were ſtruck while the Roman Republick was govern'd by Conſuls. Goltzius has made a Collection of them in a Chronological Series. Urſinus has rang'd all theſe Conſular Medals by the Roman Families. Thoſe who are moſt inquiſitive about theſe Curioſities could not muſter above a thouſand thirty ſeven Conſular Medals, referr'd to a hundred ſeventy eight Roman Families. M. Pattin has explain'd theſe 1037 Conſular Medals, which notwithſtanding they are called Conſular, it does not follow they were all ſtruck by the Conſuls. This Denomination is only to diſtinguiſh them from thoſe made by the Emperors, and to inform us they were ſtruck before the Government was in a ſingle Perſon.

CONTESSA, a little Town in European Turky. 'Tis ſituated in Macedonia upon the Gulph de Conteſſa, at the Mouth of the River Stromona, between the Towns Libanova and Cavalla. * Maty, Diction.

CONTESSA (the Gulph of), anciently call'd Sinus Strymonicus, a great Gulph in the Archipelago. It lies between the Peninſula of Monteſanto and the Coaſt of Macedonia and Romania: Formerly it took its Name from the River Strymon, now call'd Stromona. * Maty, Diction.

CONTIGLIANO, formerly Cutilium, Cutilia, Cutiliæ, a Town of Italy within the Patrimony of the Church. 'Tis in the Duchy of Spoleto, three Leagues from Rieoti to the Weſt, upon the Lake Contigliano; called Cutiliæ Aquæ by the Ancients, and where they reported there was a floating Iſland with a Grove upon it. * Maty, Diction.

COPROGLI PACHA (Mahomet) II[d] of that Name, Brother of Achmet, and Son of Mahomet the firſt, was made Grand Vizier at the latter End of the Year 1689. Muſtapha, who married his Siſter, was in that Poſt after Achmet. 'Twas he that had the Bowſtring at Belgrade in the Year 1683. for his Miſcarriage at the Siege of Vienna. The Promotion of Coprogli was look'd upon by the Turks as a good Omen: They flatter'd themſelves he would reſtore their Affairs in Hungary. They were not diſappointed in their Expectation. For he was no ſooner put into this Poſt, but the Turn of Affairs began to grow lucky for the Infidels: For Inſtance, the Imperialiſts were beaten at Kaſaneck in Albania, January the firſt 1690. This was Incouragement to the Muſſlemans, and now the Grand Vizier putting himſelf at the Head of his Troops, took Nizza and Vihirz, and whilſt Count Teckeli cut four Imperial Regiments in pieces in Tranſilvania commanded by General Heiſler, Mahomet carry'd Samandria Sword in Hand. This Succeſs brought him forward to Belgrade, which he took by Storm, and put 6000 Chriſtians to the Sword. His next Motion was throwing Succours into Great Waradin, Temeſwer and Giula, which Places had been a great while blocked up: In ſhort, this Year ended with the Turks taking Lippa, Peter Waradin, Illock and Orſowa, and by the burning Walcowart: This proſperous Campaign made the Mahometans expect the next would be equally ſucceſful: But the Death of Soliman the Third retarded their Preparations. Coprogli proclaimed Achmet Brother to the Emperor deceas'd, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of another Party who moved for the Reſtauration of Mahomet IV. Afterwards putting himſelf at the Head of the Army, he attack'd the Imperialiſts, Auguſt the 19[th] 1691, near Salankemen, and at firſt had conſiderably the better. This Grand Vizier fought reſolutely at the Head of his beſt Troops, and began to hope for a compleat Victory, when he was taken off with a Canon Ball. His Death diſconcerted the Turks, and abated their Courage. The Aga of the Janizaries, however, ſupported his Men for above half an hour, kept the Imperialiſts from gaining Ground, and made the Iſſue of the Battel doubtful. But this Officer being knock'd down with a Muſquet Ball, the Spahis retir'd in Confuſion. The Allanians, tho' doing their beſt to defend their Retrenchments, were oblig'd to quit them at the fourth Charge. The Germans preſs'd into their Camp, and made themſelves Maſters on't, and likewiſe of part of the Artillery. This Battel coſt the Mahometans no leſs than 20000 Men. Thus Coprogli ended his Days, who, had his Life been prolonged, might have rais'd the Reputation of the Turkiſh Arms to as high a pitch as his Father and his Brother had done before him. * Mèmoires du Tems.

COQUIMBO, a River of Southern America in Chili: It riſes from the Foot of the Vulcano Coquimbo, and croſſing the Country of Serena, falls into the Pacifick Sea at the Town Serena. * Maty, Diction.

CORAL, a Maritime Plant growing at the Bottom of the Sea; there are ſome Branches of it near two Yards long. They are pulled from the Bottom with Hooks crooked like Anchors. Father Bohours reports he had ſeen a Collar for the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, made of a ſingle Piece of Coral: 'Tis ſometimes red, black, and white in the ſame Branch; 'tis likewiſe found green, yellow, Aſh-colour'd and brown; the Ends of the Branches appearing plainly nothing but Wood; the other Parts at the ſame time being turned into white or red Coral. From whence we may conclude 'tis formed by a petrifying Juice, and that by Degrees; and like Fruit it does not grow red, 'till 'tis come to a full Maturity. When the Branches are green or white 'tis a ſign of its being unripe: 'Tis an earthy Subſtance, rough and knotty at its firſt coming out of the Sea; and the Value of it is not to be diſcover'd 'till 'tis poliſh'd. Your white and red Coral is reckoned the beſt. Some Naturaliſts fancy that Coral worn by a Man has a ſtronger red than when 'tis part of a Woman's Dreſs; and that when 'tis worn by a ſick Perſon it grows pale, livid and ſpotted: So that by the Change of the Colour it gives warning of ſome approaching Diſtemper. Its Colour is recovered with Hanging it over a Dunghil, and covering it with Muſtard Seed, or ſcouring it with moiſtned Bread. Pliny reports, that 'tis neither hard nor red 'till 'tis drawn out of the Water; that 'tis a green Shrub, with Buds and Seeds ſhooting above the Water: But he is miſtaken: Coral is found about the Baſtion of France in Africa, towards the Iſlands of Corſica and Majorca, at Taborca, and about the Cape of Quiers in Catalonia. Formerly the Perſian Gulph, the Red Sea, the Sicilian and Neapolitan Seas, were the Places where they fiſh'd for Coral. There is none of it to be met with in the Ocean. Father Kircher relates there are whole Groves of Coral in the Red Sea. Some of the Branches look decayed and full of Holes like wood Worm-eaten. The Japoneſe value Coral more than any Jewels. In Medicine Coral reduc'd to Powder is made uſe of: 'Tis preſcrib'd in Syrrups; Tinctures are drawn from it; and 'tis ſerviceable upon a great many Occaſions. In the Belief of ſome People, Coral ſtanches the Blood, preſerves Houſes from receiving Damage by Thunder and Lightning, and drives away Evil Spirits. Bouch. Ganſius has writ the Hiſtory of Coral, and affirms it a reſtorative Mineral. The Ancients call'd it Gorgonium, becauſe they fancied it petrify'd upon coming into the Air as the People did at the ſight of Meduſa's Head. The Juice of Citron takes off the bluſhing Colour of Coral, and makes it turn white as Snow, after having been pulveriſh'd and ſteep'd a day or two. * Relations des Voiageurs.

CORBATCH, a Town in the lower part of the Circle of the Upper Rhyne. It ſtands within the County of Waldeck, three Leagues from the Town Waldeck to the Weſt. Corbatch has one of thoſe Seminaries for Learning the Germans call Scholæ Illuſtres; 'twas formerly an imperial Town: But at preſent 'tis Part of the Territories of the Counts of Waldeck, who commonly reſide there. * Maty, Diction.

CORBIERE (the Valley of), a Place well known by a ſignal Victory Charles the Great gain'd there againſt the Saracens. It lies in Languedock near the Pyrenean Mountains, and the Dioceſes of Alet and Narbonne. * Maty, Diction.

CORBIGNY; in the Precinct of Laon; in Latin Corbonacum or Carbonacum; a French Town in Champagne: 'Tis otherwiſe call'd St. Marcoul, five Leagues from Leiſſe to the South towards the River Aiſne, and four four from Laon to the Sumer East, and six from Rheims. King Charles the Simple, receiving the Corps of St. Marcoul at Corbigny, which the Terror of the Normans Invaſion had removed thither, placed the Body in St. Peter's Church, and built a Monaſtery there, for maintaining the Religious who were truſted with the Reliſts of this Saint. The Year following, which made 906, he aſſign'd the Palace and Precinct of Corbigny for the Dowry of his Queen Fredigonda. This Princeſs at her Death bequeathed the Houſe and her Eſtate at Corbigny together with the Monaſtery to the Abby of St. Remigius of Rheims, under the Juriſdiction of which Houſe it has ſince continu'd with the Diſtinction of a Priory. However, the King reſerved the Patronage in reſpect to the Memory of St. Marcoul. 'Tis ſaid this is the Place where the Kings of France firſt touch'd for the King's Evil; it being the Cuſtom of thoſe who were troubled with this Diſtemper, to pray to St. Marcoul for a Cure. And for this Reaſon the French Kings immediately after their Coronation uſually go a Pilgrimage from Rheimes to Corbigny, where they ſpend nine Days in Devotion, either in Perſon or by their Chaplains, to St. Marcoul. St. Lewis afterwards founded a famous Fraternity here, and entered himſelf firſt upon the Regiſter. * Baillet. Topogr. des Saints.

CORBINIAN, firſt Biſhop of Freiſingen in Upper Bavaria, was born at Châtres near Paris, in the Reign of King Clotharius III. He retired when very young into a Cell, cloſe by St German's of Auxerre near Châtres. He lived in ſo exemplary a Manner in this Retirement, that the Fame of his Sanctity drew a great many Viſits upon him, which made him reſolve upon a Journey to Rome. At his coming thither, A. D. 710. he entreated Pope Conſtantine to aſſign him a Retirement near St. Peter's and St. Paul's Church. But this Pope having a Mind to ſee him, and finding him a Perſon of Capacity by his Converſation, exhorted him to employ his time in preaching. He reſigned himſelf to his Holineſs's Order; and after having preached for ſome time in France and Germany, returned to Rome, to procure a Diſpenſation from this Employment. But Pope Gregory II. ſent him back into Bavaria. He was ſtopt upon the Road by Grimoald's Duke of Bavaria's Guards. And here he made an Impreſſion upon the Duke, and prevail'd with him to part with his Brother's Widow whom he had married. Afterwards he ſettled at Freiſingen, built a Church there, and took a great deal of Pains to extinguiſh the Remains of Idolatry in Bavaria. Biltrude (the Lady Grimoald quitted) attempting to get Corbinian murdered, this Saint withdrew into Tirol: Here he continued 'till Grimoald was dead, and then Hubert his Succeſſor prevail'd with him to return in the Year 726. He dy'd A. D. 730. The modern Martyrologies ſet his Feſtival at the 8th of September. His Life was written by Arebo fourth Biſhop of Freiſingen, and ſince publiſh'd by Surius and Mabillon. * Bulteau, Hiſt. Monaſt. d'Occident. Baillet Vies des Saints Septembre.

* CORDELIERS, Monks of the Order of St. Francis: They wear coarſe grey Cloth with a little Cowl, and a Cloak of the ſame Cloth, and a Rope Girdle with three Knots. They are the ſame with the Minorites; they are called Cordeliers from the Rope-Girdle they wear: This Name was firſt given them in the War St. Lewis made againſt the Infidels; where the Minorites having repuls'd the Barbarians, and the King asking their Name; the Anſwer was, they were des Gens de Cordeliés, or, People with Ropes ty'd about them. The Cordeliers are incorporated into the Univerſity of Paris, and admitted to the Degree of Doctors. They follow Scotus's Sentiments, for which Reaſon they are call'd Scotiſts. Their Fraternity lies under no Diſadvantage to hinder them from being Biſhops, Archbiſhops, Cardinals and Popes, many of them having riſe to theſe Promotions. This Order is the firſt, which renounced Property and Eſtates. * See St. Francis and Minorites.

* CORDUBA, a Town of Spain upon the Guadalquiver in Andaluſia. It was formerly call'd a Kingdom, with a Biſhop's See Suffragan to Toledo: to what has been ſaid on this Article in Morery Vol. firſt, I ſhall ſubjoin a Catalogue of moſt of the Martyrs: To begin, St. Acſiclas, St. Zoilus and St. Victoria ſuffered Martyrdom in this Town in the Reign of Diocletian, under the Governor Dio. St. Fauſtus, St. Januarius and St. Martyr ſuffered likewiſe there at the ſame time. This Town fell under the Mooriſh Kings for two or three Centuries. They perſecuted the Church with great Severity, and made abundance of Martyrs. The principal Martyrs in this Town executed by the Saracens about the middle of the IXth Century, are theſe following, St. Eulogius a Prieſt, an Hiſtorian and an Apologiſt for the other Martyrs of this Place, ſuffered in the Year 859. St. Perfectus a Prieſt was made a Martyr in the Year 850. St. Columba ſuffered in the Year 853. and of the Spaniſh Æra 891. St. Pompoſa a Virgin and Nun of Pilemella was martyr'd two Days after St. Columba: St. Flora and St. Mary, Virgins, were martyr'd November 24, A. D. 851. The laſt was a Nun of Cuteclar, and Siſter of Walabonza martyr'd the Year before; St. Iſaac, St. Paul a Deacon, St. Theodemer a Monk, and St. Sancus ſuffered in June 851; St. Peter, St. Walabour, St. Wiſtromond, St. Habence, St. Sabinian, St. Jeremy. St. Siſenard a Deacon, all Martyrs, A. D. 851. St. Emela, Deacon, St. Jeremy, St. Chriſtopher, St. Levigild, Monks, martyr'd A. D. 852. To which may be added, St. Rogel, and St. Ser-dieu, St. Athanaſius, and Felix, St. Digna and St. Benilda, St. Faudillus, all martyr'd in June, A. D. 853. St. Argemir, St. Aura, martyr'd in the Year 856. Corduba ſtands in the middle between Granada to the Eaſt, and Sevil to the Weſt. * Strabo Lib. III. Ambroſius Morales. Baronius. Alphonſus Garſias, Hiſt. Cord. Mariana, &c.

* CORDUS (Cremutius), dy'd in the Reign of Tiberius. Tacitus gives him this Character, that he was Manu, Lingua, Mente Promtus, i. e. that he could fight, and talk, and think above the ordinary Rate. The Emperor's prime Miniſter Sejanus had a Pique at him for ſomething more than his writing that Brutus and Caſſius were Ultimi Romanorum. However, this Freedom making a fair Pretence, Sejanus menac'd him with a ſevere Execution; inſomuch that to prevent the Torture, Cordus faſted himſelf to Death. * Tacit. Annal.

CORFINIUM, a Town in Italy, formerly Capital of the Peligmians, who joining the Samnites and other Clans, made this City the Head of their Confederacy, in their War with the Romans. Their Arſenal was likewiſe here, and they had Conſuls and Prætors like the City of Rome. Corfinium at preſent is but a ſmall Village call'd San-Pelino, in the hither Abruzzo, near the River Peſcara: Some Geographers make it the ſame with the Village Pentina, at the Foot of the Apennins in Abruzzo laſt mention'd. * Lubin. Tab. Geograph. upon Plutarch's Lives.

CORNELIA, Pompey the Great's Wife, for whom he had ſuch a Regard, that he ſeem'd to value her above his Fortune in the Empire. He appear'd more ſolicitous for her Security than for the Iſſue of the Conteſt between himſelf and Cæſar; and had her convoy'd to a Diſtance from Action and Danger.

——— Seponere tutum
Conjugii decrevit onus; Lesboque remotum
Te procul à ſævi Strepitu, Cornelia, Belli.
Lucan.

After the Loſs of the Battle of Pharſalia, he kept up her Spirits by putting her in Mind that if ſhe only valued her Husband's Perſon, ſhe had loſt nothing; but if ſhe was ſmitten with his Fortune, ſhe had Reaſon to be pleas'd now ſhe had nothing but his Perſon to ſet her Fancy upon.

——— Tu nulla tuliſti
Bello damna meo. Vivit poſt prælia Magnus.
Sed Fortuna periit: quod defles, illud amaſti.
Lucan.

Cornelia left Lesbos, and embark'd with Pompey. The People of the Iſland were generally troubled at her going off, becauſe all the time of her Husband's Proſperity, ſhe had behaved her ſelf with the ſame Affability and obliging liging Manner, as ſhe could have done when his Fortune was at the worſt.

Stantis adhuc fati vixit quaſi Conjuge victo.

After Pompey's Death ſhe was extreamly diſconſolate, and did her beſt for a Revenge upon Cæſar.

——— Sævumque Arcte Complexa dolorem.
Perfruitur lacrymis, & amat pro conjuge Luctum.
Claudian.

CORNELIA (Maximilla), a Veſtal: The Emperor Domitian ordered her to be buried alive, on Purpoſe to make his Reign taken notice of by ſome terrible Severity. He got her proſecuted for debauching with one Celer a Roman Gentleman; and without going thro' the cuſtomary Forms of a Tryal, gave Judgment that ſhe ſhould ſuffer the Puniſhment of a licentious Veſtal: What Cæſar, ſays ſhe, do you pronounce me a Libertine, when the Sacrifices I have performed, have put you in a Condition for a Triumph? She was ſhut up in a Hole digg'd on Purpoſe for that Puniſhment. She refus'd to give the Executioner her Hand to let her down, and behav'd herſelf with great Decency and Reſolution. Pliny, Lib. IV. Epiſt. II.

CORIA, a Spaniſh Town in Andaluſia: It ſtands upon the Guadalquiver, about three Leagues above Seville, and about a quarter of a League from la Puebla de Coria, which is no more than a Hamlet belonging to it. * Maty, Diction.

* CORINTH: This Town had a Share in the Misfortunes of Greece under the Reigns of Philip of Macedon, of Alexander the Great and their Succeſſors. After the Incarnation Corinth was a Metropolis within the Patriarchate of Conſtantinople, and had the Sees of Zant and Cephalonia for Suffragans. This Town was the Metropolis of Greece, when St. Paul preach'd there; St. Eraſtus the Treaſurer, Criſpus and Gaius were Corinthians, and ſo was Soſthenes, Phebe, and other Saints, in this Apoſtle's time. This City continu'd a Church Metropolis under the Conſtantinopolitan Emperors, and when the Venetians were Maſters there: Criſpus and Gaius were baptiz'd by St. Paul, which few Perſons were beſides. The firſt was Head of a Jewiſh Synagogue at Corinth; and 'tis ſaid he was afterwards Biſhop of the Iſland Ægina, near the Coaſt of Attica. Gaius was a Macedonian; but liv'd at Corinth when St. Paul came thither, and lodged the Apoſtle at his Houſe. Cenchrea was a Borough of Corinth upon the Aſian ſide. Dionyſius was Biſhop of Corinth in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. Prirnacus was in the ſame Station ſome time before, when Adrian was Emperor. St. Cyriacus a famous Anchorite in Paleſtine was born at Corinth in the Year 418. * Baillet, Topogr. Vies des Saints.

CORINTHIAN (the Order), one of the three Orders in Architecture: 'Tis diſtinguiſh'd by its Pillars and Capitals, curiouſly ornamented in Sculpture by cutting two Rows of Foliages ſixteen in Number; From whence as many little Branches or Stakes come out covered by the ſame Number of Volutes: By the way, a Volute is Part of a Capital twiſted into a Spiral Line. This Order was invented by the Sculptor Callimachus, who happened to light upon a Basket ſet upon Bears-foot, which being covered with a Tyle made the Extremity of the Leaves bend upwards. This new Figure ſtruck his Fancy ſo far that he imitated the Manner, in the Pillars made by him at Corinth. This accidental View, ſerving him as a Model to ſettle the Proportions of the Corinthian Order. Villalpandus affirms that this Story of Callimachus is but a Fiction, and that the Greeks were not the Inventors of the Corinthian Capital. But they took their Model from Solomon's Temple, where the Capitals were ornamented, as this Author will have it, with Foliages of the Palm Tree. And he farther pretends that the Leaves of Bears-foot were never imitated by the Ancients in the Corinthian Capitals. However, the Contradiction to this Aſſertion is Matter of Fact, as may be ſeen in a great many Capitals now in Greece, and without travelling ſo far, the Pillar des Tutelles at Bourdeaux have Corinthian Capitals of Acanthus or Bears-foot. * Antiquit Græc & Rom.

CORNELIUS, ſirnamed Aſina, bargain'd for an Eſtate in Land, and when it was requir'd ſome body might be bound with him for Payment of the Purchaſe, the next Day he brought an Aſs into the Market loaden with Baggs of Money for his Security, which gave him the Sirname of Aſina. * Macrob. Saturnal. Lib. I. Cap. 6.

CORNELIUS, a brave Roman Officer, who commanded at the Siege of Jeruſalem, under Titus Veſpaſian. This Gentleman when he ſaw his Brother Longus had ventured too far in the Portico of the Temple, from whence there was no poſſibility of his being diſengag'd, encourag'd him to die honourably, rather than tarniſh his Reputation by ſurrendring to the Enemy. * Joſeph, de Bell. Judaic. Lib. XV. Cap. 19.

CORNET (Nicholas), one of the moſt celebrated Divines of the XVII^th^ Century. He was born at Amiens in 1592. made an early Progreſs in the Belles Lettres, and liv'd ſome time among the Jeſuits, where he made a Speech in French, Latin and Greek, much eſteemed by the learned of that time: When he commenc'd Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty at Paris, he diſcovered his Genius and Improvement to farther Advantage. His Reputation ran ſo high, that Cardinal Richelieu would have had him for his Confeſſor, but he declined this Employment. However, the Cardinal made uſe of his Advice upon ſeveral Occaſions, and 'tis ſaid Cornet wrote the Preface præfixt to his Eminency's Book of Controverſy. Cardinal Mazerine made him Preſident of his Council of Conſcience, and offered him the Archbiſhoprick of Bourges. In his Will he gave a great many Legacies to pious Uſes, and dy'd in the College of Boncourt, April 18. 1663. He was buried in the Chapel of the College of Navarr, where M. Boſſuet Abbot, afterwards Biſhop of Meaux, made his Funeral Oration, which has furniſhed this Article, and was printed at Amſterdam in 1698. Cornet was a Perſon of great Learning, and almoſt every where conſulted for his Judgment and Advice. He was of a gentle healing Temper, and ſucceeded ſo well in the Extract of the five famous Propoſitions, that the Error was generally condemned, without any Bodies attempting a Defence.

CORNUTUS (Cæcilius) happening to be wrongfully accuſed for a Conſpiracy in the Reign of Tiberius, choſe rather to part with his Life than give himſelf the Trouble of a Defence; the Iſſue of which would have been very hazardous under a Prince with whom the ſlendereſt Suſpicion paſt for Evidence. * Tacit Annal. IV. Cap. 28.

CORPOBALIO (Cæſar), an Italian Poet, wrote a lively Deſcription of the Miſery of poor Gentlemen who waited upon great Noblemen at Rome. This Poem made ſuch an Impreſſion upon their Maſters that they reſolved to uſe them better. But Pope Urban VIII. concluding after all that theſe People would ſtill be unfortunate, founded an Hoſpital to furniſh and entertain them when they grew old. * Vigneul-Marville, Melanges d'Hiſtor &c. pag. 190.

CORSI (Dominico Maria), Cardinal and Biſhop of Rimini born in 1637, and deſcended from one of the richeſt Families in Florence. He was firſt Clerk of the Apoſtolick Chamber, then Auditor of the ſame Chamber, and afterwards made Cardinal by Pope Innocent XI. in 1686. who gave him the Title of St. Peter in Montorio; he dy'd in 1697.

CORSINI (Nereo), Cardinal, born at Florence, Son to Philip Marquis Corſini and Magdalen Machivelli; after having been Treaſurer General of the Apoſtolick Chamber, Nuntio in France, Legate or Governor of Ferrara, Archbiſhop of Damietta, Biſhop of Arezzo in Tuſcany, was made a Cardinal by Pope Alexander VII. in 1664; but the Preferment was kept in Petto 'till February 1666: He had the Title of the Saints Nereus and Achilles. He quitted his Biſhoprick of Arezzo in 1674, and dy'd at Florence in September 1678.

CORVO, or Cuervo, the Iſle of Corvo, that is to ſay of a Raven; this Iſland lies in the Atlantick Ocean. 'Tis one of the Azores or Terceres, and the moſt Weſtern of all of them. It has not above two or three little Villages with a good Haven called Corvo. Some Geographers draw their firſt Meridian thro' this Iſland. * Maty, Diction. Robb. Geographie.

COSDAR. For Ionia in *Cpadocia*in. Morery Vol. firſt, read Iconium in Lycaonia.

COSMUS, & DAMIANUS (Saint) Brothers. Their Memory is honoured with the Title of Martyrs, tho' the Hiſtory of their Lives is uncertain. The Greeks have three St. Coſmus's and three St. Damianus's of which they make three Pairs. The Feſtival of the firſt is kept July the firſt, of the ſecond upon the firſt of November; and the Holiday of the third Pair ſtands at the 17th of October. They pretend the firſt two lived at Rome, and ſuffered Martyrdom in the Reign of Carinus; that the ſecond dwelt in the Proconſular Aſia, and died a natural Death; and that the third two were Arabians, and were executed for Chriſtianity at Egæ in Cilicia, in the Reign of Diocletian under the Governor Lyſias. The Latins receiv'd none of theſe Names for Martyrs, but theſe laſt two. The Tradition goes that their Corps were brought from Cilicia to Syria near the Town Cyrus: And when Theodoret was living there was a Church built there in Honour of them. They had another at Conſtantinople, magnificently rebuilt by the Emperor Juſtinian. Felix III. alſo built them one at Rome in the Year 528. And their Names ſtand in the Roman Regiſter. * Theodoret, Epiſt. CXXXV. In Collet. Lup. Marcellin, Chronic. Bona, de Reb. Liturg. Baillet, Vies des Saints Septembre.

COSMUS, a holy Prieſt, an Italian by Birth, lived in the VIIIth Century. He was taken upon the Seas by the Saracens, and carried to Damaſcus where St. John Damaſcen's Father bought him, and truſted him with the Education of his Son. His Scholar made a great Proficiency in a ſhort time under this excellent Perſon, who afterwards retir'd into a Monaſtery. Several Writers are of Opinion that this Coſmus is the ſame with Coſmus of Jeruſalem, call'd the Hagiopolite, Biſhop of a Dioceſe in Paleſtine, and Companion of St. John Damaſcen; that he liv'd in the eighth Century, and wrote ſeveral Hymns; we have thirteen of them in the Bibliotheca Patrum. He is likewiſe Author of Part of the Odes in the Greeks Triodium. In the Emperor's Library at Vienna there is an Expoſition on the Pſalms in Iambick Verſes, which goes under the Name of Coſmus of Jeruſalem. * Baronius Annal. A. C. 730. N. 8. & 734. N. 1. &c.

COSMUS, ſirnamed the Ægyptian, born at Alexandria, and living to the Beginning of the VIth Century. The firſt part of his Life was ſpent in Trading: For this Purpoſe he travell'd into Æthiopia, the Indies, and other Countries. Afterwards he turned Monk, and in the Year five hundred thirty five wrote a Topography of Chriſtendom, lately publiſh'd by Father Bernard of Montfaucon, in his new Collection of Greek Authors. He likewiſe wrote a Coſmography of the Southern Parts of Africk from Alexandria to the Southern Ocean: Aſtronomical Tables, and an Expoſition upon the Canticles. The Deſign of his Topography is to confute the Hypotheſis of the World and the Earth's being Spherical. According to his Syſtem the Earth is flat, and the Sky like an Arch or Ceiling over it. * Dom. Bernard Montfaucon, Collectio Nova Patrum.

COSS, a Town in the Upper Thebais in Ægypt call'd Said Ala by the Arabians. It ſtands upon the Nile, and is ſaid to be the biggeſt Town in Ægypt next to Grand Cairo. 'Tis probable 'twas old Thebes. * De Herbelot Biblioth. Oriental.

COSSART (Gabriel), a Jeſuit born at Pontoiſe in the French Vexin in 1615, and deſcended from a Gentleman's Family. He entered himſelf among the Jeſuits at eighteen Years of Age, and after having been Lecturer at ſeveral Colleges, profeſs'd Rhetorick at Paris ſeven Years with great Reputation. He was one of the beſt Orators and Poets of his Time, as appears by the Collection of his Speeches, and Performances in Poetry, publiſh'd by the Jeſuit La Rue in 1675, and dedicated by him to Ferdinand the famous Biſhop of Paderborn, and Baron of Furſtenbourg. This learned Prelate had formerly expreſſed a great Eſteem for Father Coſſart, and given him a Taſte of his Bounty. When Coſſart gave over Rhetorick, he apply'd himſelf to the Study of the Councils, and aſſiſted Father Labbe in the Undertaking of a new Edition much larger than any extant. Labbe dying in 1667. when the eleventh Volume was in the Preſs, Father Coſſart carried on the Remainder of this great Work, which in 1672. was publiſh'd in eighteen Volumes. He dy'd at Paris in September 1674, and had the Reſpect of a great many Copies of Verſes at his Funeral. * Mem. Hiſt.

COST DESERT, the Name of Part of Cafraria. This Coaſt lies towards the Cape of Good Hope, between Cape Infant, and a River of the ſame Name which parts it from Natal. This Country is barren and unimprov'd, and has its Name from this Diſadvantage. * Maty, Diction.

COST DESERT, Part of the Country near the Streights of Magellan. It lies to the Eaſt between the River de la Plata, and the Port of Deſire. 'Tis thus called becauſe the Europeans have no Plantations there, though 'tis not uninhabited by the Americans. * Maty, Diction.

COSTOBARES, deſcended from one of the nobleſt Families in Idumea, and whoſe Anceſtors had been Prieſts to the pretended God Coſas, worſhipped by that People before Hyrcanus's time, who obliged them to Circumciſion and the reſt of the Jewiſh Religion. Coſtobares being of the ſame Province with Herod, and doing him great Service in the Beginning of his Reign, was rewarded with the Government of his own Country, and likewiſe of Gaza. Herod married him to his Siſter Salome Joſeph's Widow, who was executed by this Prince. Coſtobares being mounted to this Elevation began to grow giddy, and forgetting the Obligations receiv'd from his Prince, grew ſo proud as to fancy the Condition of a Subject beneath his Quality and Merit. Thus elated, he prevailed with the Idumeans to revolt from Herod, and wrote to Cleopatra Queen of Ægypt to beg a Grant of the Country for him of Marc Anthony, believing the gaining this Point would ſet a Crown upon his Head. However, this Preſumption had like to have undone him; and 'twas only Herod's Regard for his Siſter which prevented his Death. But though his Lady preſerved him this time, it was not long before the occaſion'd his Ruin. For a Miſunderſtanding happening between them, this Lady informed againſt him, and told her Brother that Coſtobares was concerned in the Conſpiracy concerted by Antipater, Lyſimachus and Doſitheus, and that he had receiv'd Babas's Children into one of his Caſtles, who was one of her Brother's greateſt Enemies. This Depoſition being proved to a full Evidence, Herod had done with him and took his Life. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XV. Cap. 2.

COSTOBARES and Saul, two Brothers of an illuſtrious Jewiſh Family, they had both the Honour of the Prieſthood, and were nearly related to Agrippa: They tarniſhed the Luſtre of their Family, by injurious and violent Practices; and 'tis ſaid they took great Satisfaction in Inſult and Oppreſſion, and haraſſed the People, by travelling with a Troop of reſolute and deſperate Men. However, they omitted nothing to keep the Town of Jeruſalem in due Submiſſion to the Romans: For being at laſt convinced that all their Application and ſoliciting ſignified nothing, and only made the Rebels more bold and obſtinate, they quitted the Town with Silas, brought Agrippa's Troops to Ceſtius's Army, and did him very good Service. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic.

COTA, a Town in the Peninſula of Indus on this ſide the Ganges. It lies within Malabar, a Mile from the Sea, and the ſame Diſtance from the Town Cananor; 'tis the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name. * Maty, Diction.

COTA (Rodriguez), a Spaniſh Poet of Toledo. Gaſpard Barthius a German, and a great Admirer of Spaniſh Books, tranſlated his Celeſtina into Latin, and publiſh'd it under the fuſtian Title of Porno Boſcodidaſcale. This Tranſlator, commonly overloaden with Affection and Regard for the Authors he works upon, makes no Scruple to call this Spaniſh Book a divine Performance. The Poem is written in a comick Strain, but full of moral Sentences, with Examples and Deſcriptions very ſerviceable for Inſtruction; and which is particularly remarkable, the Spaniſh Language has a peculiar Advantage for moral Subjects, and this Performance is one of the beſt in that Tongue. 'Twas afterwards tranſlated into French, and printed more than once. But this Verſion does not anſwer up to Barthius's Commendation. * Barthius, Adverſar. Nicholas Antonio, Biblioth Hiſp. Tom. II. pag. 212, 213.

COTE-

* COTELERIUS (John Baptiſt) Bachelor of Divinity of the Houſe and Society of Sorbon, and King's Greek Profeſſor, was born at Niſmes in Languedoc, in 1628. He made an extraordinary Proficiency in the Languages when very young. For being at twelve Years old brought into the Hall of the General Aſſembly of the French Clergy held at Mante, A. D. 1641. he conſtrued the New Teſtament in Greek, and the Old in Hebrew, at the firſt opening of the Book, and at the ſame time diſintangled ſeveral Difficulties propoſed with Reference to the peculiar Conſtruction of the Hebrew Language; and likewiſe explained the Text from ſeveral Cuſtoms practiſed amongſt the Jews. After this, he demonſtrated ſeveral mathematical Propoſitions, in explaining Euclid's Definitions. This made him look'd upon as a Prodigy of a Genius, and gain the Eſteem of all the Clergy. His Reputation riſe proportionably to his Advances in Life. He declined going into holy Orders, and ſpent his time wholly in Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity. He was pitched upon with M. du Cange to review the Catalogue and Abſtracts of the Greek Manuſcripts in the King's Library. And in 1676 was made Greek Profeſſor in the Royal College of France; which Poſt he maintained with great Reputation. The Greek Fathers were his chief Study, he read their Works both printed and Manuſcript with great Exactneſs, made Notes upon them, and tranſlated them into Latin. His great Work, on which he beſtowed ſeveral Years, is his Collection of thoſe Fathers who lived in the Apoſtolick Age; that is, St. Barnabas's Epiſtle, Clemens Romanus's two Epiſtles, Hermas's Book, St. Ignatius, and St. Polycarp's Epiſtles, with the Acts of their Martyrdom; all reviewed and corrected, upon ſeveral Manuſcripts, &c. with Annotations at the end. This Work makes two Volumes in Folio, printed at Paris in 1672, and re-printed in Holland in 1698. The moſt conſiderable Things in this Performance, are the Author's curious and learned Annotations. Theſe Remarks explain the Difficulties in the Greek Terms, clear up ſeveral hiſtorical Paſſages, and ſet Matters of Belief and Diſcipline in a better Light. And here he has thrown a great deal of uncommon and ſignificant Learning into a few Words, and given the Reader the Notes he made upon the Fathers through the whoie Courſe of his Study; always taking care not to inſert any thing which had already been obſerved by others.

Afterwards he publiſhed three Volumes in Quarto, entitled, Monumenta Græcæ Eccleſiæ, furniſhed from the King and Monſieur Colbert's Libraries, with a Tranſlation, and critical Notes; which, though not ſo large, lie as much out of the common Road as thoſe in his great Work. The firſt Volume was printed in 1675, the ſecond in 1681, and the third in 1686. This Work had been continued if Death had not ſnatch'd him away Auguſt 12. 1686. And though his Age was not much, his Conſtitution was broken with intenſe Study; for he took a great deal of Pains in his learned Performances, writing all the Greek Text, and the Verſion on the ſide with his own Hand: Never quoting any thing in his Notes without Proof from the Original, and ſometimes ſpending ſeveral Days in queſt of a ſingle Paſſage.

There is no Neceſſity of dilating farther upon his Learning, his great Skill in the Greek Language, and Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity, his indefatigable Diligence and Exactneſs; all theſe Qualities are ſufficiently diſcovered in his Writings. But then to do ſome Juſtice to his Merit, we muſt take Notice he was a Perſon of primitive Probity and Candour, ſurpriſingly modeſt and unpretending, without the leaſt Tincture of Stifneſs or Pride. He lived particularly retired, made, and received very few Viſits; and thus having but a little Acquaintance, he appeared ſomewhat melancholly and reſerved; whereas really he was of a frank, converſable, and friendly Temper. * See his Life by Stephen Baluzius, and prefixt to his Patres Apoſtolici of the Amſterdam Edition. Memoirs du Tems. M. du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

COTYS, Brother to Mithridates, who was King of Boſphorus, in the Reign of the Emperor Claudius: Mithridates being in a Practice for a Revolt, was diſcovered by this Brother, who was rewarded with his Crown for that Service. * Tacit, Annal. XII.

COUCO, a Town in Barbary, it ſtands within the Province of Algier, towards the Confines of Bugia, ten or twelve Leagues from a Town of this Name to the South Weſt. Couco ſuppoſed the ſame with the old Tubuſuptus is a conſiderable large Town, and very ſtrong, upon the Score of its Situation upon a ſteep Rock. 'Tis the Capital of a Kingdom, wholly ſurrounded with Mountains, and where the Avenues are next to impracticable. This Advantage of Ground has frequently incouraged the King and his Subjects to conteſt for their Liberty againſt the Algerines, and refuſe their Claim of Homage and Tribute. * Maty, Diction.

COUCY (Enguerran de) VII. of this Name, Lord of Coucy, Malre, de la Fere, & d' Oiſy, Count of Soiſſons, and Earl of Bedford, was one of the moſt conſiderable French Noblemen of his Time. After the taking of King John at the Battel of Poitiers, Enguerran de Coucy, and ſeveral other Hoſtages, went over into England for enlarging that Prince. And here he was ſo acceptable to Edward III. King of England, that he made him his Son-in-Law, created him Earl of Bedford, and gave him the Earldom of Soiſſons, which Guy de Blois reſigned to this Monarch to diſcharge him from the Confinement of an Hoſtage. Enguerran upon his Return to France, finding the War flaming out between the French King and the King of England, retired into Lombardy, to prevent his being obliged to bear Arms againſt his Father-in-Law. And here he took Pope Gregory the XI^th^'s Part againſt Barnabon Viſconti. But at laſt he maſtered the Scruple of his matrimonial Alliance in ſome meaſure, and waited upon King Charles V. who in the Year 1368 ſent him into Bretagne upon Buſineſs of Importance, and afterwards gave him the Command of ſome Troops, with Orders to march into Germany to ſupport his Mother's Claim upon the Duchy of Auſtria. At laſt, not proving ſucceſsful enough to mediate a Peace with England, he openly declared for the French King, helped him to recover Cherbourg, Carantan, and other Places belonging to the King of Navarr, Earl of Evereux: King Charles V. was ſo much pleas'd with this Service, that he offered him the Conſtable's Sword after the Death of Bertrand du Cueſelin; but he thank'd his Majeſty, and told him that Oliver de Cleiſon was better qualified for that Poſt than any other Perſon. This Prince made Coucy Governor of Picardy, and in the Year 1384. King Charles VI. made him chief Butler of France. He was likewiſe employed in ſeveral conſiderable Negotiations at the Courts of Bretagne and Savoy, and afterwards, at the Requeſt of Philip of France, call'd the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy; he attended John of Burgundy his Son, Count of Nevers, in an Expedition againſt the Infidels: This Undertaking proved unlucky, and the Chriſtian Army was beaten at Nicopoli A. D. 1396. Enguerran de Coucy remained Priſoner there, with ſome other Noblemen of the firſt Rank, and died in February the next Year. Iſabella, Daughter of Edward III. King of England, was his firſt Lady, and Iſabeau, Daughter to John the Firſt, Duke of Lorrain, the ſecond: By the firſt he had Mary, who follows in the next Article. And Philippa bred in England, where ſhe married Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland, Marquis of Dublin, Earl of Oxford, and Lord Chamberlain of England; but this Marriage was nulled. By the ſecond he had Iſabeau de Coucy, marry'd in 1409 to Philip of Burgundy, Count of Nevers and Rethel.

COUCY (Mary de) Counteſs of Soiſſons, Baroneſs of Coucy, d' Oiſy, was married in her Father's Lifetime to Henry de Barr, eldeſt Son of Robert Duke of Barr, Marquis de Pont, and Mary of France, Siſter to King Charles V. Her Husband was killed at the Battel of Nicopoli in the Year 1396. She ſold her Seignieury of Coucy, and the Châttellanies of Marle, and de la Fere to Lewis of France, Duke of Orleans, Brother to King Charles VI. and died in 1404. Thus the ſecond Family of Coucy, deſcended from the Male Line of Guines, failed, and all the Eſtate was firſt carried into the Houſe of Barr, afterwards into that of Luxembourg, and laſtly, into the Royal Family of Bourbon, which conveyed it to the Crown. * L'Allouette Hiſtoire de la Maion de Coucy. Du Chêné Hiſt. de la Maiſon de Coucy, Mazery, &c.

↓ de

* COUNCIL. There is only the Council held at Jeruſalem concerning the Obſervation of the Moſaic Inſtitution, which can be reckoned a Council held by the Apoſtles. As to General Councils, the Emperot Conſtantine the Great is the firſt that convened a General Council. 'Twas called Oecumenical, becauſe he aſſembled the Biſhops from all Parts of the Roman Empire, the Οἰκουμένη, that is to ſay the whole World. The eight firſt General Councils were ſummoned by the Emperors, and held in the Eaſt; ſome of them conſiſted only of Eaſtern Biſhops; as the General Council of Conſtantinople, where there was never a Weſtern Biſhop but Aſcolius. In the following great Synods, the Pope's Legates oftentimes repreſented the Weſtern Patriarchate. The laſt Councils, called General by the Roman Catholicks, were held in the Weſt, and compoſed of Weſtern Biſhops. Amongſt the Councils reckoned general in France, the Council of Conſtance held in the Year 1414 is one, and the Council of Baſil held in 1431 another. And here we muſt ſet aſide the Council of Florence, which does not go for a general one in France ſince the Cardinal of Lorrain's Time; and the fifth Council of Lateran, which paſſes with the French no better than the other: To this we add, that the Council of Trent, as to the Diſciplinary Part, is not received in France, though the Doctrine of that Synod is believed Orthodox. * Labbe, & Coſſart. Richerius, Hiſt. Concil.

COVOLA, a Caſtle in Italy belonging to the State of Venice: It lies within the Treviſan, upon the Confines of the Territories of Vicenza, and of the Biſhoprick of Trent, near Brenta, a League above the Town Ciſmonte, at the Mouth of the River of this Name. This Caſtle is particularly ſtrong by its Situation on the Point of a Rock, ſo very ſteep on all ſides, that there is no getting up or down but by a Pully. * Maty, Diction.

COUR (Didier de la) a Reformer of the Order of St. Bennet in Lorrain and France, and the Founder of the reformed Congregations of St. Vanne and St. Maur. He was born in the Year 1550 at Monzeville, three Leagues from Verdun, and extracted from a noble Family. His Father was Bertrand de la Cour, and his Mother Jean Bouchart related to the beſt Genealogies of the Country. He took Prieſts Orders at one and thirty Years of Age, and ſpent ſome time in preaching with great Succeſs. Towards the End of his Courſe in Divinity he returned to St. Vanne, where he had formerly been received a Monk, with a ſtrong Reſolution to live up to the Rule of the Houſe; but his regular Life being unacceptable to the Diſorders of the Convent, they perſuaded him to return to Pont-á Mouſſon to finiſh his Studies. Having gone through his Courſe of Divinity, and made a conſiderable Proficiency in the Greek and Hebrew Languages, he commenced Doctor of Divinity. And now he return'd to St. Vanne more intent than ever, upon bringing the Fraternity to the Strictneſs of the Inſtitution. He diſcourſed this Matter ſeveral times with the Biſhop, but to no Purpoſe. The Prior Anſelin, who had ſomething of Inclination for Regularity, made him Maſter of the Novices; but theſe he found ſo ſtubborn and unreſigned, that he was twice forc'd to throw up the Employment: and now ſoliciting the Biſhop once more, all he could prevail for with this Prelate was to threaten the Monks unleſs they reformed. Theſe Religious, who dreaded nothing more than living as they ſhould do; theſe Men, I ſay, to get a Deliverance from Reformation, preſſed Didier de la Cour to take a Journey to Rome, and endeavour to get the Revenues belonging to the Abbot of St. Vanne, parted from the Lands ſettled for the Biſhop of Verdun's Table. He undertook the Journey, though not without great Unwillingneſs. But being ſcandalouſly deſerted and betray'd by his Fraternity, this Undertaking failed of Succeſs, and ſerv'd only to bring a Storm upon him from the Biſhop. At his Return this Prelate treated him roughly. The Conjuncture proving thus unfortunate, the good Man deſpairing of ſetting the Abbey to rights, reſolved to quit the Houſe, and turn Hermit. The Chapel of St. Chriſtopher's at Rarecourt, four Leagues from Verdun, was pitch'd upon for his Retirement. He lived ten Months here in great Diſcipline and Solitude, eating nothing but brown Bread, which was ſent him every Week. But the Civil Wars growing troubleſome, and the Hugonot Soldiers taking his Cell in their way, he found his Life in Danger, and was forc'd to quit this Retirement. And now, not being able to reconcile himſelf to living at St. Vanne, where the Monks ſo much misbehav'd themſelves, he reſolved to change his Order, and go over to the Minims. But here being out of his Center, and without Repoſe, he quitted theſe Religions, who were loth to part with him, and returned to St. Vanne, where the Juncture began to look more favourable. The Prior Anſelin voluntarily reſigning his Poſt, prevailed with the Society to chooſe Didier de la Cour for his Succeſſor. Didier doing what he could to prevent this Promotion, yielded at laſt to the Advice of ſome good People, who told him he was bound to accept the Election, and obey his Biſhop: This Biſhop was Errick Prince of Lorrain. The new Prior addreſs'd his Dioceſan, and with great Freedom told him, that having commanded him to take the Government of a diſorderly Houſe, his Lordſhip was obliged to ſupport him in his Attempt for a Reformation. However, he would not conſent to the obſerving St. Bennet's Rule up to the Letter, which the Prior would gladly have revived: The Biſhop agreed only to the propoſing a Temper to bring the Practice of the Convent to the ſubſtantial Part of their Vow. But even here the old Monks threw in ſo much Diſlike and Oppoſition, that thoſe who hitherto had appear'd moſt averſe to Didier's Meaſures, confeſs'd, that his Suggeſtions were the only practicable Plan; and that the beſt Expedient was to take in Novices, and breed them to the Strictneſs of the Rule. The Reform of the Abby of St. Vanne was ſettled upon this Foot, and the Prior took in five new Members; who promiſing but ſlenderly at firſt, and ſeeming pretty wavering, were profeſs'd however, and engag'd to obſerve St. Bennet's Rule up to the firſt Inſtitution; and in the ſame Manner they had gone through it in their Noviciate. This Example drawing in a great many more, the Biſhop of Verdun requeſted Didier to attempt the Reformation of the Monaſtery of Moyen-Mouſtier in Voſge, dedicated to St. Hydulphus. This Buſineſs being well finiſhed, made way for the erecting a new Congregation, begun at firſt upon the Union of the two Monaſteries of St. Vanne and St. Hydulphus. The Bull was diſpatch'd at Rome by Pope Clement VIII. April the 7th 1604. and on the 31ſt of July the ſame Year, the firſt General Chapter was held in the Abby of St. Vanne. Cardinal Charles of Lorrain, Legate à Latere in the Dioceſſes of Metz, Toul, and Verdun, and in the Duchies of Lorrain and Barr, made uſe of this Opportunity for introducing a Reform of the Monaſteries within his Precinct; and having procured a Brief from Rome for his Purpoſe, dated September 27. 1605. he began with the Abby of St. Miel, where himſelf was Abbot. The Preſident of this Abby was followed by a great many others, and amongſt the reſt by St. Hubert en Ardennes, by that of St. Dennis, and others in the Low Countries, erected into a Congregation by the Name of St. Placidius. 'Tis likewiſe to this Reform of St. Vanne that the Congregation of St. Maur in France owes its Original. The firſt Monaſtery in France which ſubmitted to the Diſcipline of St. Vanne, was the Abby of St. Auguſtine in Limoges, A. D. 1613. Some Years after the Abby of St. Farron de Meaux received the ſame Reformation. The Monaſteries de Nouvaille in Poitou, of Jumiege, and Bernay, in Normandy, followed quickly after. And a great Number of Religious Houſes offering to come in daily, made Didier de la Cour propoſe the erecting a new Congregation in France by the Name of St. Maur. His Reaſon was, becauſe he foreſaw a great many Difficulties and Inconveniencies would ariſe, eſpecially in keeping up a neceſſary Correſpondence between the Monaſteries of Lorrain and France, provided they were incorporated in one Congregation. However, theſe two Congregations of St. Vanne and St. Maur, have all along kept a good Underſtanding, and lived uniform in their Practice and Diſcipline. To conclude; Didier de la Cour died with the Character of a holy Perſon in the Abby of St. Vanne, in November, A. D. 1623. * See the fourth Tome of the Chronicle of St. Bennet, & l'Hiſtoire de la Mere de Blemure.

COURBON (le Marquis de), was born at Châteauneuf du Rhône, a ſmall Town in the Lower Dauphine. His Father's Name was Bornas, and his Mother's Reymer, both of them of pretty private Extraction, and little Fortune. They had three Sons, the Marquis was the youngeſt, who appearing of a lively Genius, was ſent to the College, where he was quickly tired with ſtudying, and deſir'd his Parents to give him leave to follow his Inclination for a military Life; but not having Rhetorick enough to gain their Conſent, he counterfeited a Letter in his Father's Name to a Merchant, deſiring him to furniſh his Son with what was neceſſary to equip him; after having received a Sum of Money of the Merchant, he bought himſelf Cloaths and Arms, ſtole his Brother's Horſe, and went Volunteer in the French Army in Flanders: A Peace being ſoon after concluded between France and Spain, he reſolv'd to try for Employment in foreign Countries: And now croſſing the Pyrenean Mountains, he fell among a Gang of Highway-men, who rob'd him of his Money and Cloaths. Notwithſtanding this croſs Bite, he held on his Journey, and had the good Luck to meet one du Verdier a French Hermit, who entertain'd him ſeveral Months in his Cell, and adviſed him to return to France, where they began to make new Levies. This Anchorete lent him fifty Piaſters, or Cobs to furniſh him upon the Road. But in his Return over the Pyrenees, he had the ill Fortune to meet with a Parcel of Miquelets; and being in no Condition to get out of their Hands he deſired to be admitted one of their Company, which made about thirty Men. This being granted, he quickly brought himſelf to their Manner of living, which was to ſhift their Quarters very often, and to lodge ſometimes in Caves or Ruins, and ſometimes in the open Field. In the mean time his chief Buſineſs was to get acquainted with the Roads, in order to make his Eſcape. One Night after a great deal of Fatigue, all the Fraternity falling faſt aſleep, he got up, and making no Noiſe, recovered a by Way leading to a great Road; and here he travell'd with ſuch Speed, that within a few Hours he was out of Danger, and came to Perpignan: After having reſted himſelf a few Days here, he ſet forward for Paris; as he travell'd through Burgundy, he met a Nobleman who offered to entertain him as his Gentleman, and allow a conſiderable Salary. After two Years in the Service of this Lord, he caſt about for ſome other Employment, in hopes of advancing himſelf better. For this Purpoſe he took Boat upon the Rhone, and fell down to Marſeille, where he met with a Captain who was rigging out a Privateer: And here Courbon advanc'd two hundred Piſtoles, which he had gotten in Burgundy, towards the Charge of the Equipment, and was ſo lucky as to take a Prize, and had ten thouſand Livres for his Share. His Pocket being thus repleniſh'd, he travell'd to Rome, where the Acquaintance he fell into obliged him to make a Figure, and ſpend his Money. When he found himſelf grow low in Caſh, he contriv'd how to go off handſomely, and pretended he had receiv'd Letters from his Relations to call him home. He had ſcarce made thirty Miles of his Way, when he light of a Lady in an Inn, who was going to Rome, becauſe of a Miſunderſtanding between her and her Husband: Courbon offered to go back with her, which ſhe accepted; when they were there, he made uſe of his Intereſt, and brought the Lady and her Husband to good Terms, who ſent her Money to furniſh her Return. The Marquis de Courbon went along with her as far as Lyons, where he offered to take his Leave; But ſhe engag'd him to go as far as Paris, and there by way of Acknowledgment furniſh'd him with Money to enter himſelf into the Academy, where in a ſhort time he learned his Exerciſes perfectly well. The Count, this Lady's Husband, wanting a Gentleman of the Horſe, entertained Courbon in that Service, without knowing he had been with his Lady at Rome. He underſtood this by chance from a Roman Gentleman, who dining with the Count, took notice of Courbon as an Acquaintance; upon which he ſoon deſired to take leave of his Maſter; the Count leaving him to his Liberty offered to procure him an Employment elſewhere, and, in ſhort, got him a Lieutenant's Commiſſion in the Regiment of Furſtemberg. His Captain, who was a German, relying upon his Capacity and Honour, ſent him to raiſe Recruits. While Courbon was buſy in his Commiſſion the Captain died, and the Company was given to a German; who thinking Courbon a little negligent, put another in his Poſt. Courbon having notice of this Matter, made haſte to return with his new Levies, and finding another in his Poſt, expoſtulated with the Captain, forc'd him to draw his Sword, and in fine kill'd him: And now being afraid he might be ſeized, he retir'd into the Territories of the Biſhop of Munſter, who having War with the Dutch at that time, made him a Cornet. Afterwards being afraid he might ſuffer for killing his Captain, he took Service againſt his own Prince. He was very near receiving due Correction for his Misbehaviour. For being at the Head of a Party of Germans, he was made Priſoner by the French, amongſt which he light upon a Relation, who helped him to make his Eſcape: Upon his Return to his Quarters he got a Lieutenant's Commiſſion, and behaving himſelf with great Bravery, was quickly after made a Captain of Horſe. When a Peace was concluded between France and the Empire, he got Leave to viſit his Relations; having travell'd as far as Pierre-Latte in Dauphiny, he met with the Hermit who had uſed him ſo courteouſly in Spain. Here Courbon made his Acknowledgment, and paid him his fifty Piaſters. At his Return into Germany, he put in for the Command of one of the new Regiments, the Emperor then raiſed againſt the Turk. But here he miſcarried in a Competition, and was glad to accept the third Command in the Count de Caſtels Regiment. In this Poſt he skirmiſhed to Advantage with the Reinforcements the Turks ſent to their Army before Vienna. After the raiſing the Siege, having notice of the Death of the Count de Rimbourg the Emperor's Miniſter, and Maſter of all the Mints in the Empire, he courted his Widow; but there was no gaining this Lady without the Conſent of the Court of Vienna, which upon Application was granted in Conſideration of the Service Courbon had done his Majeſty. The Count de Rimbourg left his Counteſs very wealthy, having raiſed a great Eſtate partly by his Employments, and partly by being Maſter of a Secret for tranſmuting Metals. He is ſaid to have found out this Myſtery in the Manner following. When Rimbourg was young he took the Habit of a Monk, and being profeſs'd and aſſigned the Buſineſs of a Porter, he gave an Alms to a Woman, who to reward his Charity, bid him go to ſuch a Place and dig a Hole, where he ſhould find a dead Man's Head with a Piece of Paper in it, which would teach him the Secret to make his Fortune. He found the Paper, read it, and perceiv'd it promiſed the turning certain Metals into Silver, by a Powder injected when they were in a State of Fuſion. In ſhort, the Experiment ſucceeded to that Degree, that in a little time he furniſh'd the Abby Church with a great deal of Silver Plate. The Court of Vienna quickly receiving Advice of his having this Secret, preſſed him to diſcover it: And upon his Refuſal got him ſeiz'd and forc'd him to go to Work: Having ſpent ſome Years in this Alchymiſtical Buſineſs, he was willing to take leave of the Cloiſter, and procuring a Diſpenſation by the Emperor's Intereſt, he married the Counteſs of Roſembourg, deſcended from one of the nobleſt Bohemian Families, lived with her ſeveral Years without Iſſue, and at his Death left her a great Eſtate together with his Secret, which ſhe always conceal'd from the Emperor, and discover'd it only to Courbon when she married him. Not long after Courbon's Marriage with his Countess, the Venetians had leave to raise some Regiments in the Empire, and make Choice of the Officers to command them. Contarini, Ambassador from this Republick, chose the Marquis for Collonel of a Regiment of Dragoons: The Marchioness his Lady went along with him as far as Venice, where she took a House to stay there 'till he made his Campaign. The Season opened with the Siege of Coron, to the taking of which Town the Marquis de Courbon's Bravery and Conduct contributed considerably. The next Campaign he distinguish'd himself at the taking of Neu Naverino, and while the Siege of Napoli di Romania was carrying on, he lost his Marchioness, who died of a Dissentory by eating too many Currants. However, the Regret upon this Accident did not hinder him making Incursions into the Enemy's Country in the Winter. The following Campaign being gloriously ended for the Christians, he returned to Venice, and from thence to Vienna, to get seiz'd of the Estate his Countess left him by her last Will, to make his Court to the Emperor and Prince Charles, and to force the Count de Castel to make Satisfaction for the Affront he had given him. When the Winter was over he return'd to Venice, and embark'd to join the Army then marching to the Siege of Negropont. One Day when the Marquis came near the Town, to examine how the Miners did their Duty, a Canoneer in the Garrison perceiving him, pointed his Canon so exactly, that the Ball took the Marquis under the left Arm, and carry'd him off when but thirty eight Years of Age. The Noise of his Death made the besieged take Heart, and defend themselves with such Resolution, that the Venetians were oblig'd to raise the Siege. This Gentleman by the Strength of his Merit, raised himself to the Post of Quarter Master General and after the Death of the Mareschal de Conigsmark, he was one of the Commanders in chief under the Generalissimo. The Marquis Courbon was passionately fond of Reputation, which made him always particularly hardy and enterprizing. He was very gay and entertaining in Conversation; but without disobliging any body. He kept a noble House, and entertain'd above sixty in his Family, some of which could play upon all Sorts of Instruments; so that he never wanted a Consort of Musick. He was likewise serious in his Religion, and lived answerably to what he profess'd. His Life was written by M. Aimar a Judge at Pierre-Latte in Dauphiny, and his intimate Friend: 'Twas printed at Lyons in 1692. See le Journal des Scavans Tom. XXI. pag. 142.

COURIER or Curier, call'd Cursor by the Romans: Thus Martial in one of his Epigrams.

Cursorem sextâ tibi, Rufe, remisimus Horâ.

Livy informs us that Sempronius Gracchus was pitch'd on for this Business, and that in three Days he came as far as Bella, making use of two laid Horses for this Purpose: from whence we may learn, that long before Augustus's Reign, the Romans had Post Horses settled, for dispatching Advices thro' the Republick. Xenophon in his Cyropædia reports, that Cyrus was the first in this Expedient: And that for receiving News with Expedition from distant Places, he had Horses laid from Stage to Stage with a Post-Master, whose Business it was to receive the Courier's Pacquet. Herodotus in his Urania, attributes this Invention to Xerxes after his Defeat in Greece.

COURT (Charles Cato de), Son to Charles de Court, one of the French King's Gentlemen, and his Mother was Ann de Saumaise: He was born at Pont de Vaux in March 1654. He received the first Part of his Education at Bourge in Bresse, and studied Rhetorick and Philosophy at Lyons. He made himself Master of the Greek Language by his own Industry: When he was twenty Years of Age he came to Paris for farther Improvement: And notwithstanding he was left to his own Conduct in a Town where Luxury and Diversion has too much the Ascendant, he received no Disadvantage by his Liberty: His Custom was to study twenty Hours a Day, and grudged the remaining four to sleep and refreshment. Here he learned the living and dead Languages, and apply'd to Originals for Improvement. He read the Bible in Hebrew, and run through the most curious and uncommon Authors in secular Learning. He was Master of every thing he read, and to whatever Subject they put him he discoursed about it, as if it had been his whole Study. He struck out a new Plan or System of the Canon and Civil Law, and discovered a great Proficiency in Ecclesiastical Learning: He could read all Sorts of Medals and Inscriptions at first Sight: And there was scarcely any defac'd Remains of Antiquity left imperfect or unexplain'd by him. His Recreation when tired, was only Change of Study. His main Business was neither Fame nor Fortune. His Aim run higher, 'twas to discover Truth, and practise Vertue: After having formed and furnished his own Understanding, he was willing to look into the Manners and Customs of Foreigners. For this Purpose he went to Rome, where he got a true Taste of Architecture, Painting and Sculpture. He locked himself up as it were almost a Year in the Vatican, where he made some Discoveries of Treasure, which possibly the Masters knew nothing of. He likewise made Observations upon the Court of Rome, and endeavoured to reach the Bottom of their Politicks. His Fancy lay for travelling into Greece, and even as far as China; but he returned Home in Obedience to his Father, who died soon after. His next Motion was to the Court where he assisted in the Education of the Duke of Maine, natural Son to Lewis XIV. In 1687. he came to London, where the famous Boyle, and other Gentlemen best distinguish'd for Learning made an Acquaintance with him. He attended the Duke of Maine to the Siege of Philipsbourg, where nothing relating to the Siege passed by his Observation. When the Army broke up he returned to his Studies. But being at the Camp of Vignamont near Huy in 1694, he was seiz'd with a violent Feaver of which he died. The Abbot Genest wrote his Life, printed at Paris in 1696, from whence this Article is extracted.

COURTET (William), of Serignan near Beziers, entred himself a Dominican in the Convent of Albi, in the Beginning of the Reform of Father Sebastian Michael; being strongly recommended to his Superiors by his Learning and Piety, they sent him to Tolouse to instruct the Novices, and read in Divinity. He was afterwards made Prior of a religious House at Avignon: But having a burning Zeal to preach Christianity in Heathen Countries, he travell'd into Spain to get an Opportunity for a Voyage to Japan. He embark'd to the Philippins, with two and twenty Monks of his Order, under the Government of Father Diego Collado. Father Courtet being arrived at the Manilles was made Reader in Divinity: During this Employment he prepared himself for his Mission. Thus June the 10th 1636. he embark'd with two Monks of his Order for Japan, and arrived there on the 16th of July. They were discovered at their first coming a shore, and put in Prison, where they lived a Year under very rough Usage: Afterwards they were sentenc'd to Death by the Emperor, and Father Courtet was convey'd to Nagazanchi, the Place for Execution; where after they had put him twice to the horrible Water-Torture, they beheaded him September 29, 1637. * Histor. Philipp. Tom. I. Lib. II. Cap. 60, 61. Diarium Dominic. An. 1637. 17 Septembre. Jean de Sainte Marie, Vies des Saints de l' Ordre de Saint Dominiq. Tom. III.

COUSIN (Lewis), President of the Court for regulating the Mint, was born at Paris, August 1627. and seem'd design'd by his Genius for an Ecclesiastick. After having gone through a Course of Humanity in the University, he entred upon the Study of Divinity, gained Credit by his Probation Sermon, and was admitted Bachelor of Divinity in the Faculty of Paris. And being afterwards engaged in another Employment, was was call'd to the Bar in 1646, where he pleaded about eleven Years. After which time he procur'd the Office in the Mint above mention'd. This Buſineſs affording a great deal of Leiſure, he ſpent his time in reading the beſt Greek and Latin Orators, Poets and Hiſtorians. And upon the Progreſs of his Studies applied himſelf particularly to the Fathers and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians. Inſomuch, that notwithſtanding his ſecular Employment, he might paſs for a very good Divine. Over and above theſe Acquirements he was a Maſter of Stile, and had gone a great Way into the curious Part of Arts and Sciences. Having advanced thus far in Reading, he attempted the tranſlating the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians into French, and began with Euſebius. He publiſh'd a beautiful and exact Tranſlation of this Hiſtorian in 1672. To which he added a Preface, where he juſtifies him from the Charge of Arianiſm. He grants Euſebius is miſtaken in ſome Paſſages by following Africanus and Hegeſippus ſomewhat too implicitly. In 1676. Couſin printed his Tranſlation of Socrates, Sozomen and Theodoret, and that of the Byzantine Hiſtorians, from the Reign of Juſtin the Elder, to the Fall of the Eaſtern Empire, in IX. Volumes in Quarto. He likewiſe undertook the tranſlating the beſt Hiſtorians of the Weſtern Empire, from Charles Magne, of which two Volumes are printed in twelves. (The Remainder is finiſhed and ready for the Preſs,) Not to mention his Verſion of Euſebius's Tract againſt Hierocles, where that Author diſproves the Miracles reckoned to Appolonius Tyaneus. All theſe Tranſlations are done, like a Man that was Maſter of his Subject, who without tying himſelf down to a Verbal Tranſlation, has given his Author's Senſe, and reach'd his Meaning though not in his own Terms: And, in ſhort, has made him look as ſmooth and agreeable in another Language as he could do in his own. Couſin's great Talent in Criticiſm, the Conformity of his Sentiments to the Gallican Church, and the Concern and Reſolution he always diſcovered for maintaining his Reaſon, made him pitch'd upon for Royal Cenſor: He acquitted himſelf in this Employment, with great Application, Judgment and Impartiality: Inſomuch that the Authors who paſſed his Teſt were always ſatisfied with his Remarks. He was put upon the writing the Journal des Scavans, and work'd upon it without Intermiſſion from 1687. to 1702, and having written ſo much in French, and in ſo beautiful a Manner, he was receiv'd into the French Academy, June 15. 1697. where he performed ſeveral Exerciſes to great Commendation. He was a Perſon of extraordinary Probity, Juſtice and Penetration, manag'd up to the Dignity of his Poſt, and the Size of his Reputation. He learned Hebrew at ſeventy Years of Age, with a Deſign to ſpend the laſt Part of his Life in reading the holy Scriptures: He died February 26. 1707. eighty Years old. By his laſt Will and Teſtament he gave an Eſtate to the College of Banvais for ſix Divines, who were to be maintain'd in a compleat Proviſion from the time they entred into a Courſe of Philoſophy 'till they commenc'd Doctors in Divinity. The College of Banvais, not accepting this Eſtate, 'twas ſettled upon the College of Laon: He likewiſe left his Library to the Abby of St. Victor with twenty thouſand Livres principal, the yearly Intereſt of which was to be employed for encreaſing the Library. 'Twas with this Condition that upon the Anniverſary of his Death High Maſs ſhould be ſaid, and a Diſcourſe made upon the Uſefulneſs of a publick Library. * Journal des Scavans de Paris 1707. M. du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, XVII. Century.

COUSTANT (Peter), a Benedictin of the Congregation of St. Maur, took a great deal of Pains upon the Fathers like the reſt of his Fraternity. The reviſing St. Hilary fell to his Share. He publiſhed a new Edition in Folio of this Father printed at Paris in 1693. And in 1706. he defended this Edition againſt the Objections of Father Germon, in a Book entitled, Vindiciæ Manuſcriptorum Codicum à R. P. Bartholomæo Germon impugnatorum, cum Appendice in quâ S. Hilarii quidam loci ab Anonymo obſcurati, & depravati illuſtrantur & explicantur. * M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

COUVIN a Town within the Biſhoprick of Liege. It lies between the Sambre and the Meuſe, a League from Mariembourg upon the Confines of Hainault, being formerly a Dependency of that Province. But in the Year 1090. Baldwin Earl of Hainault ſold it to the Biſhop of Liége. * Maty, Diction.

COUVOYON (Saint), the firſt Abbot of Redon in Bretagne in the IX^th^ Century, was Son to Conon a Gentleman of Bretagne. He ſtudied at Vannes where he took Orders, and was made Arch-Deacon of that Church: But he quickly quitted his Preferment, threw up the World, and retir'd to the Solitude of Redon, where he built a Monaſtery, having pocured a Grant of the Site from Ratwil Lord of the Mannor. Notwithſtanding ſome People would have ouſted Couvoyon he went on with the Building his Monaſtery, and ſettled St. Bennet's Rule for the Religious. At laſt, the Duke of Bretagne, and the King of France confirmed the Grant made by Ratwil, who died in the Abby, and left the Houſe ſome more Eſtate. In the Year 848. Couvoyon took a Journey to Rome to get the Reſolution of this Queſtion, Whether a Biſhop could take Preſents of thoſe ordained without Simony? Pope Leo IV. condemned this Practice in a Synod where Couvoyon was admitted: Nomenoius Duke of Bretagne, who aſſumed a regal Title, cited Suzan Biſhop of Vannes, and Felix Biſhop of Cornoüaile or Kimper, and two other Biſhops of Bretagne, (complained of by St. Couvoyon,) deprived them of their Sees, and nominated four other Biſhops to ſucceed them: He founded three new Biſhopricks in Bretagne, St. Brieux, Treguier and Dol, making this laſt an Archbiſhoprick. The Biſhops deprived made their Complaint to Charles the Bald, and carry'd the Cauſe in the Council of Tours. When the Normans and other barbarous Nations made a Deſcent upon the Coaſt of Bretagne, A. D. 865. St. Couvoyon retir'd to Solomon Duke of Bretagne, who gave him Ground for building a new Monaſtery. 'Tis now the Abby of St. Maxent. St. Couvoyon ſhutting himſelf up here, died, A. D. 868. about eighty Years of Age. The Abby of Redon was built in the tenth Century. St. Couvoyon's Feſtival ſtands on the 28^th^ of December, which was the Day his Corps were removed from Maixent to Redon. * His Life is written by two Authors in Father Mabillon. In Secul. IV. Ord. S. Benedicti. Baillet Vies des Saints.

CRAFURD. The Lindſeys who have this Title, have been Earls about three hundred Years. 'Twas not at Edingborough but in the Caſtle of Sterling, that King James the Second ſtabb'd Douglaſe with his own Hand. For Crafurd forced the King's main Body to give Ground, in Morery Vol. Firſt, read Crafurd forced Huntly's main Body to give Ground.

CRANAUS, ſecond King of Athens, ſucceeded Cecrops in the 3182 Year of the Julian Period, 1532 Years before the Incarnation: Deucalion's Deluge in Theſſaly happened in his Reign. This Deucalion making his Eſcape through the Deluge got to Athens in the fourth Year of this Prince: Amphyction Deucalion's Son, marry'd Cranaus's Daughter, and quickly turned his Father in Law out of his Kingdom: 'Twas in Cranaus's Reign that Neptune proſecuted Mars for the Murder of his Son Halirothius, and got him tried at Athens by a Bench of twelve Gods, that is twelve Judges; and here Mars was brought in not guilty. This Trial gave Occaſion for making this Place a Court or Seſſions Houſe afterwards. And from hence 'twas called Areopagus, or Mars's Cloſe. * M. du Pin Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

CRA-

CRANENBOURG, a Town within the Circle of Weſtphalia. It lies in the Dutchy of Cleves, a League and a half from Cleves to the Weſt. * Baudrand.

CRASSO (Julio Paulo) of Padua, a famous Phyſician, living in the XVI. Century. Paul Craſſo tranſlated a great many of the old Phyſicians who wrote in Greek: For Inſtance, Aretæus of Cappadocia, Rufus of Epheſus, Palladius, Theophilus or Ptolomeus, Galen and Hippocrates. A Catalogue of theſe Authors may be ſeen in Vander Linden. His Tranſlation of the eighth Book of Aretæus is not very exact, becauſe, as Ryneſius relates, he workt upon imperfect Copies, which occaſioned him to miſs the Senſe of his Author in a great many Places. But here Huetius comes on in his Vindication, and obſerves, that in caſe Craſſo has ſome times added and retrench'd, he may fairly be pardon'd this Fault; becauſe, generally ſpeaking, he hits the Matter right, and gives the Senſe of his Authors with a great deal of Method, Perſpicuity and Politeneſs. * Ricobon de Illuſt. Petav. Imperialis, in Muſ. Caſtelan. Reineſius, apud Konig. Biblioth. Vet. & Nov. p. 55. Dan. Huet. de Interp. l. 2. p. 267.

CRASSO, (Lorenzo) an Italian, has written a Panegyrical Character of learned Men, printed at Venice, in two Volumes, Quarto, A. D. 1666. 'Tis written in Italian, and much valu'd for the exactneſs of the Performance; Craſſo having taken care to inſert the moſt memorable Actions and Writings of the Authors mention'd by him. * Baillet Jugemens ſur les Critiques Hiſtoriens. Chap. 74.

CRASSUS, the Sirname of one of the moſt Illuſtrious Roman Families, divided into the Branches of the Papirians, Veturians, Claudians, Otacilians, and eſpecially that of the Licinians; one Branch of which took the Name of Craſſus without any other Family Diſtinction. The firſt of the Licinians which occurs in Hiſtory with the Sirname of Craſſus, is PUBLIUS LICINIUS CRASSUS, Conſul in the 549th Year of Rome, and two hundred and five Years before the Incarnation. Several others of the ſame Name were afterwards raiſed to the ſame Dignity. For Inſtance, Publius Licinius Craſſus, in the 583d Year of Rome, and before the Incarnation 171. C. Licinius Craſſus, in the Year of Rome 586. P. Licinius Craſſus, in the Years 684 and 699, before the Incarnation 70 and 55. M. Licinius Craſſus, in the 724th Year of Rome, and before the Incarnation 30. M. Licinius Craſſus, in the 740th of Rome, and before the Incarnation 14. M. Licinius Craſſus, in the Reign of Tiberius, 27 Years after the Incarnation. Licinius Craſſus Frugi, in the Reign of Nero, A. D. 64. Theſe were all Conſuls, beſides others of the ſame Name, diſtinguiſhed by Enterprize and Office.

CRASSUS, (P. Licinius) High Prieſt, and a celebrated Lawyer, was Conſul with L. Valerius Flaccus, in the Year 623 of Rome, and 131 before the Incarnation. A Diſpute hapned between theſe two Collegues, who ſhould command the Army againſt Ariſtonicus. Craſſus carry'd his Point againſt Flaccus, then Prieſt of Mars; and in virtue of his being Pontifex Maximus, or High Prieſt, forbid Flaccus moving out of Rome, where the Functions of his Prieſthood engaged him. In the mean time he reſigned his High Prieſthood, (an irregulur Precedent Primæ Impreſſionis) and marched into Aſia, where he began to learn Greek, and went on in this Amuſement with ſuch Application, that he made himſelf Maſter of the five Dialects in a very ſhort time: Inſomuch, that now he was in a Condition to diſcourſe his Allies without an Interpreter. This Improvement however, did not make his Expedition ſucceſsful; for the next Year, notwithſtanding his being reinforced by the Kings of Bithynia, Pontus, Cappadocia, and Paphlagonia, he was routed in a main Battel, and taken Priſoner by the Thracians in Ariſtonicus's Service. And now aiming to avoid the Diſhonour of being taken, by a handſome Diſpatch, he ſwitched the Thracian, who had him in Cuſtody, over the Eyes; who finding the Blow ſmart, drew his Dagger and ſtabbed him. Craſſus's Head was carry'd to Ariſtonicus, and his Body was bury'd at Smyrna. * Cicer. Philip. II. Livy, Lib. 59. Vallerius Maximus, Lib. III. Cap. 2. & Lib. 8. Cap. 7. Quintilian, Lib. XI. Cap. 2. Florus, Lib. II. Cap. 20. Strabo, Lib. XIV. Juſtin. Lib. XXXVI. Cap. 4.

CRASSUS (C. Publius Licinius) Son to M. Licinius Craſſus, mentioned in Morery, Vol. firſt, diſtinguiſhed himſelf in Gaul under Julius Cæſar, and afterwards marched into Aſia at the Head of 1000 Horſe againſt the Parthians, in which Expedition he was killed. He had been Augur, and was ſucceeded by Cicero in that Office. * Plutarch, in Vit. M. Licin. Craſſ. Cæſar, de Bell. Gall.

CRASSUS, (M. Licinius Frugi) as much a Beaſt, if Seneca may be believ'd, as the Emperor Claudius, who cut off his Head A. D. 47. after having raiſed him to an elevated Station, and graced him twice with the Parade of a Triumph. His Lady Scribonia, his Son, who marry'd the Emperor's Daughter, and upon the ſcore of his being adopted into the Pompey's Family, was called Cn. Pompeius Magnus, and ſeveral others of the Name of Craſſus, were involved in his Ruin. * Senec in Ludicr. in Mort. Claud. Cæſaris. Sueton, Lib. V. Cap. 77.

Beſides Cn. Pompeius Magnus, Marcus Licinius Craſſus Frugi, abovementioned, had two other Sons, M. Licinius Craſſus Frugi, who was Conſul A. D. 64. in Nero's Reign, who put him to Death, and L. Piſo Frugi Lucinianus, adopted by the Emperor Galba for his Son and Succeſſor, and afterwards killed by the Soldiers of Otho's Faction, A. D. 69. * Dion Caſſius, Lib. LXIV. Senec. Ibid. Sueton. in Vit. Galb.

* CRATINUS, an Athenian Comick Poet: Of the XXI Plays he made, there remains only a few Verſes; ſo that 'tis hard to diſcover his Character and Talent. He is ſaid to have been very bold in his Raillery, let fly againſt Perſons of the firſt Rank; and as Plutarch relates, Pericles himſelf did not eſcape his Satyr. Quinctilian valued his Comedies very much, and recommended the reading them to thoſe who aimed at Elocution. Ariſtophanes obſerves that he died when the Lacedemonians made their firſt Deſcent upon Attica; that is, at the beginning of the Peloponneſian War, which broke out in the LXXXVII. Olympiad, and CCCCXXXII. before the Incarnation. * Horat. Epiſt. Lib. 1. Ep. 19. Satyr. Lib. 1. Sat. 4. Quinctil. Inſtitut. Lib. X. Cap. 1. Baillet, Jugement des Sçavans ſur les Poëte, Tom. 5. p. 179.

CREDO, the Grand Credo, Juræ Pars; ſo they called the Southern Parts of the Mountain Jura. The Grand Credo lies between the Bailliage of Gex, and La Breſſe, French Provinces: It reaches from North to South from the Rhone four Leagues below Geneva, to the France-Compte, where the Mountain Jura goes by the Name of St. Claud. * Maty, Diction.

CREMIENIECK, or Krimienieck, a Town in Poland. It ſtands in the upper Volhynia, on the Confines of Podolia, upon the ſmall River Ikwa, thirteen Leagues from Luſne to the South. This Town is Capital of a large Caſtellany, 'tis built upon the ſloping of a Hill, upon the top of which there is a good Citadel for its Defence. * Maty, Diction.

* CREMONA, a Town in Italy, within the Milaneze near the Po, and Capital of the Cremoneze. Since Cremona was rebuilt by the Emperor Frederick Barberoſſa, A. D. 1284. it has been govern'd by Viſcounts of its own, and afterwards fell into the Hands of the French, the Venetians; and thenceforward to the Dukes of Milan, and Kings of Spain. The French and the Duke of Modena beſieg'd it in 1648, but were obliged to quit the Enterprize. In the Year 1702, 'twas ſurpriz'd by the Imperialiſts commanded by Prince Eugene, who enter'd the Town in the Night with a Body of about 6000. The Garriſon conſiſting of French and Iriſh, who kept the Place for Philip V. King of Spain, charged the Enemy with incredible Valour, notwithſtanding they were ſurprized in the Night, diſperſed in the Town, and taken at the greateſt Diſadvantage. In ſhort, the French and Iriſh received the Germans ſo warmly, from break of Day 'till towards the Evening, and made ſo great a Slaughter, that the Enemy were forced to retreat out of the Town, and give up their Enterprize. This Defence of the Garriſon may fairly be reckoned one of the boldeſt Actions of this Age; but then we are to obſerve, that Mareſchal Villeroy was taken Priſoner, and carry'd off. To go back to the Times of the Roman Empire. This Town ſuffer'd in the Reign of Auguſtus, becauſe the Burghers had joined Mark Anthony againſt him: When this Emperor had made himſelf Maſter of the Country, he ſeized the Eſtates belonging to Cremo- na, and granted them to his Troops called Veterans; but the Precincts of this Town not being large enough to ſatisfy the Soldiers, Auguſtus aſſigned them other Lands within the Territories of Mantua; and that for no other Reaſon, but becauſe they lay in the Neighbourhood of Cremona, which occaſioned this Verſe in Virgil, Eclog. 9.

Mantua væ Miſeræ nimiùm vicina Cremonæ.

CREPA, or Lyſy, a Town of Morea, in the Northern Quarter of Zaconia, between the Rivers Alpheus and Orchomene, ſeven or eight Leagues from Mantinea to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

* CRESCENS (St.) one of St. Paul's Diſciples. This Apoſtle informs us in his 2d Epiſtle to Timothy, that he had ſent Creſcens to Galatia, which Epiphanius interprets Gaul. This Remark has occaſion'd ſome People's believing Creſcens preached the Goſpel in Gaul; and here they make him the Founder of the Churches of Vienne, and Mentz. But this is only a weak Conjecture, for St. Paul means Galatia in Aſia, which was likewiſe called Gaul, and not Gaul in the Weſt of Europe, which was not ſo happy to receive Chriſtianity till a long time after the Apoſtle. * Baron. A. C. 110. Martyrol. Roman. 27 Junii. St. Marthe. Gallia Chriſt. Tom. 1. pag. 792. De Tillemont Mem. Eccleſ. Baillet vies des Saints. Juin.

CRESPELLANA, a good Town within the Patrimony of the Church in Italy. It lies in the Territory of Bononia, three or four Leagues from the Town of Bononia towards Modena. * Maty, Diction.

* CREVANT; For Commanded by John Steuart, Earl of Boucan and Douglas, in Morery, Vol. firſt, read John Steuart, Count of Boucan, and by the Earl of Douglas; for Charles the VIIth had made the firſt Conſtable of France, and Douglas Duke of Touraine.

CREVECOEUR, a ſmall City belonging to the French within the Precinct of Cambray, famous for the Victory Charles Martel gained here in the Year 717. At preſent it is only a Borough near Monte Revellen: There was a Fort of this Name in Holland upon the Meuſe, a League diſtant from Bois le duc; but the French who took it in 1672, demoliſhed it in 1674. * Mezeray. Cordemoy, Hiſt. de France.

CREUSEN, a Town within the Circle of Franconia in Germany. It lies in the Marquiſate of Culembach, three Leagues from Barhut to the South. * Maty, Diction.

CREUTZ, (the County of) a ſmall Province of Sclavonia, within the Kingdom of Hungary: It ſtretches from Eaſt to Weſt from the County of Poſſega to that of Cilley. The County of Waradin with the Drave bounds it on the North, and that of Agram with the Save, on the South. The Town Creutz, from which the Province takes its Name, is the only conſiderable Place. * Maty, Diction.

CRINITUS (Peter) a Florentine, tried his Talent in ſeveral kinds of Poetry: His Compoſitions are printed in the firſt Tome of the Deliciæ Poetarum Latinorum Italiæ. Lylius Gyraldus gives them but a moderate Character. To ſpeak clearly, ſays he, his Performances in Poetry diſcover the ſame Tincture and Genius with the reſt of his Writings: He promiſes a great deal, and appears much ſmitten with himſelf: His Expreſſion affects the Sublime, but miſcarries into Bombaſt, and affords nothing but Froth and Trifles. Borichius thinks Gyraldus's Cenſure ſomewhat ſevere. Crinitus's Lives of the Latin Poets in five Books, are learnedly written in Paulus Jovius's Opinion. But according to Voſſius, Crinitus has done nothing above the ſize of Indifferent. * Paulus Jovius, in Elog. Cap. 55. Lylius Gyraldus Lib. 1. Hiſt. Lat. Lib. III. Cap. 12. Olaus Borichius, Diſſert. de Poet. Lat. p. 97. Baillet, Jugement des Sçavans, &c.

* CRIOLES, Creoles, or Credoces. A Name given to the Families deſcended from thoſe Spaniards who firſt ſettled in Mexico. We are to obſerve, that there are three ſorts of Spaniards dwelling in America, diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Spaniards, Meſtecies, and Crioles: Theſe laſt, tho' more numerous than the other two Clans, could never riſe to any conſiderable Poſt: This Management has occaſioned a ſtrange Antipathy between theſe old Mexicon Spaniards, and thoſe of Europe. The Averſion is ſo ſtrong, that the Crioles would entertain any European Nation whatever, provided they could diſengage themſelves from the Juriſdiction of the European Spaniards. For this Reaſon the Kings of Spain watch them very narrowly, and always take care that none of the Crioles may be Vice-Roy, or Head of his own Clan. * Georg. Hornius Orb. Polit. Hoffman, Lexicon. Univerſ. Leyden Edition, 1698.

CRIONERO, a River of Natolia in Aſia: It riſes in Mount Taurus, croſſes the leſſer Caramania, runs by Candeler, and falls into the Mediterranean at Side. * Maty, Diction.

CRISPUS, (John Baptiſt) a Divine, and tolerable good Poet; lived in the beginning of the XVIth Century, and was born at Gallipoli within the Kingdom of Naples. Criſpus's Works are as follow. Two Speeches upon the Subject of the Holy War againſt the Turks, printed at Rome, A. D. 1594. in Quarto. De Medici Laudibus Oratio ad Cives ſuos Gallipolitanos, printed at Rome A. D. 1591, in 4to. A Plan of the Town Gallipoli, dedicated to Flaminio Caraccioli, January, 1591. But Criſpus's chief Performance, in Writing, is his Book De Ethnicis Philoſophis Caute Legendis, printed at Rome in Folio, 1594. 'Tis a critical Work to ſhew with what Precaution and Judgment People ſhould prepare themſelves for reading the Heathen Philoſophers. Poſſevin gives this Performance a great Character, and ſays it ought to be read in all the learned Seminaries in Europe. He adds, that the Author had a very nice and diſtinguiſhing Judgment: And that his Precautions and Maxims are founded on the true Philoſophy; that is, they are drawn from the Holy Scriptures, Councils, Fathers, and eminent Divines; ſo that according to Poſſevin, his Rules are remarkably ſerviceable to diſcover the Miſtakes of Philoſophers, and lead the Reader to that which is ſolid and certain in Philoſophy. Merſennus likewiſe recommends this Book as an excellent Performance. * See Bibliotheca Napolitana du Toppi, p. 134. Poſſevin, Apparat. Sacr. Tom. 2. p. 117. Merſenn. à la fin de ſes Obſervationes & Emendationes in Problemata Georgii Veneti in Geneſim. Bayle, Dict. Crit. 2 Edit. 1702. Baillet, Jugement des Savans ſur les Critiques Hiſtoriques. Cap. 165, & 267.

CRISSA, an ancient Town of Greece in Achaia. It lies between the Ruins of Delphi, and the Gulph of Salona, a League and a half from each. * Maty, Diction.

CRITICK. The Art of judging, particularly applied to Books, either with reſpect to the Senſe, or the true reading of ſome Paſſages, or to ſome part of Hiſtory. The old Grammarians were called Criticks. Their Skill lay chiefly in correcting the Texts of Books, and paſſing a Judgment upon them. Politian, as Scioppius relates, was the firſt modern Critick, who examined and corrected old Authors, before he put them to the Preſs. The celebrated Criticks of theſe laſt Ages are Eraſmus, Lipſius, the two Scaligers, Father and Son; Budeus, Turnebus, Salmaſius, Caſaubon, &c. A Man that ſets up for a Critick ought to be furniſh'd with a good Share of Senſe and Learning.

CRITICKS of the Byzantine Hiſtory. Thoſe who have ſpent their Pains to beſt Advantage upon the Authors of this Hiſtory ſhall be juſt mention'd.

1. Charles de Chanticler, Henry Valeſius, and Philip Labbe, made Notes and Emendations upon the Extracts from Embaſſies. Collected by the Order of Conſtantine Porphyrogenetus.
2. Philip Labbe, wrote Notes upon the Remains of Olympiodorus, upon Candidus Iſaurus, Theophanes and Suidas.
3. Meurſius upon Heſychius the Illuſtrious, touching the Origin of Byzantium.
4. Maltrate, a Jeſuit, upon all Procopius, and Nicholas Alamannus upon the Anecdotes.
5. Bonaventure Vulcanius upon Agathias, touching the Hiſtory of the Emperor Juſtinian's Reign.
6. Pontanus, a Jeſuit, and Annibal Fabrot, a famous Barriſter at Aix in Provence, upon Theophilactus Simocattus.
7. Raderus, and Philip Labbe, both Jeſuits, upon the Chronicum Alexandrinum; but the Louvre Preſs has not yet printed this Work.
8. James Goar, a famous Dominican, upon Georgius Syncellus.
9. James Goar, and Francis Combefis, Dominicans, upon Theophanes the Confeſſor.

10. Dionisius Petavius, a Jesuit, upon Nicephorus, Patriarch of Constantinople.
11. Xylander, Goar, and Annibal Fabrot, upon Georgius Cedrenus.
12. Goar, and Fabrot upon Scylitzus Curopalates.
13. Leunclavius, and Philip Labbe, upon Michael Glycas.
14. Charles du Fresne, Sieur du Cange, upon Johannes Zonaras. 'Twas printed at the Louvre in 1685. with Wolfius, Goar and Labbe's Notes.
15. Peter Possin, or Poussine, a Jesuit, upon Comnenus.
16. Du Fresne, Sieur du Cange, upon Johannes Cinnamus.
17. Meursius, Leunclavius, Fabrot, and Leo Allatius, upon Constantine Manasses.
18. Wolfius and Annibal Fabrot, upon Nicetas Choniates.
19. Theodore Douza, and Leo Allatius, upon Georgius Logotheta Acropolites, the Chronology of Joel, and upon Johannes Cananus.
20. Peter Possin, a Jesuit, upon Georgius Pachimeres, inserted in the Body of this History, though printed at Rome.
21. Meursius, upon Theodorus Metochites.
22. Wolfius, and Annibal Fabrot, upon Nicephorus Gregoras.
23. James Pontanus, and James Gretzer, Jesuits, upon Johannes Cantacuzenus.
24. Annibal Fabrot, with Clauser's Version upon Chalcondilas.
25. Ishmael Bouilliaud, a famous Mathematician, upon an anonymous Chronicle of the Turks.
26. Pontanus, a Jesuit, upon Georgius Franzes.
27. Gretzer, a Jesuit, and Goar, a Dominican, upon Georgius Codinus.
28. Peter Lambecius, Library-keeper to the Emperor of Germany, upon the same Codinus, concerning the Origin and Antiquities of Constantinople.
29. Leo Allatius, upon Georgius Hamartolus.
30. The same Allatius, upon the Continuator of Theophanes, supposed to be Leontius Byzantinus.
31. Possin, a Jesuit, and du Cange, upon Nicephorus of Brienne, printed with Procopius; but that done by du Cange, is thrown into Cinnamus.
32. Combefis upon Leo Gramaticus. Printed with Theophanes upon the Continuator of Constantine Porphyrogenetus, and several other Remains of the Byzantine History.
33. Bouilliaud, upon Ducas's History, printed with Georgius Acropolites.

Amongst all these Criticks, the two most considerable are Father Goar, a Person thoroughly acquainted with the History of the Eastern Church, who has wrote learned Notes upon the Greek Euchologion.. The second is Fabrot, an eminent Lawyer: He has published the Basilicæ in 6 Volumes; all Cujacius's Works in 10 Volumes; Theophilus's Institutes with Notes. He has likewise made Remarks upon Balsamon, upon Ecclesiastical History, and upon the Popes mentioned by Anastasius Bibliothecarius, upon several Titles of the Theodosian Code, upon the Subject of Usury against Salmasius, and some Tracts upon Arguments in his own Faculty. * Baillet Jugemens des Sçavans sur les Critiques Grammariens. Ch. 603.

CRITICKS. Dauphins, called likewise Scholiasts, or Dauphin Commentators: 'Twas by King Lewis the XIV^th^'s Order, for the use of Monseigneur, then under the Care of M. de Monteausier, and M. Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, and by the Advice of Huetius Bishop of Auranches, that the Dauphin Criticks wrote Notes and Emendations upon a great many Classick Authors. For Instance, the Abbot Danet publish'd Phœdrus, and a Dictionary Latin and French, and French and Latin, and the Roman Antiquities. Sallust was done by Daniel Crespin. Nicholas Camus did Terence. Nicholas Courtin, Cornelius Nepos. P. Robert Rigaez, a Jesuit, worked upon Velleius Paterculus. La Rue did Virgil. Joseph Cantel, a Jesuit, who died in 1684, published Justin and Valerius Maximus. Le Tellier (Michael) a Jesuit, published Quintus Curtius. James de Louvre, furnished out Plautus. Michael la Faye printed Manilius with Huetius's Notes. Lewis Desprez work'd thro' Juvenal and Persius. G. Pyron was a Critick for Claudian. Vincent Collesson did Martial. John Doujat published Livy, with Freinshemius's Supplement, with large Commentaries and Emendations in 6 Volumes. Bauhinius, a Jesuit, published the Panegyrici Veteres. This critical Author is particularly remarkable for his Learning, as appears by his clearing up a great many Historical and Chronological Passages, relating to the lower or Greek Empire, and some other Matters upon the Subject of Criticism. Anne le Fevre, now called Madam Dacier, has done Florus, Aurelius, Victor, Dictys Cretensis, Eutropius, and Callimachus. Andrew Dacier, a Member of the French Academy, publish'd Pompeius Festus, or rather Verrius Flaccus, abridg'd by Pompeius Festus. Philip du Boise has done Catullus, Tibullus, and Propertius. Augustin Babelon work'd upon Suetonius. Charles Merouville publish'd Tully's Orations; where he has given an Analysis of each Oration, with a short Explanation of the difficult Passages and principal Points of Learning. N. Pichon has furnished Tacitus. John Hardouin, a Jesuit, publish'd Pliny in 5 Volumes. He is a very judicious Critick, and explains a great many difficult Passages in this Author. To conclude, there are several other Criticks in usum Delphini, who have shewn their Talent upon Cæsar's Commentaries, Aulus Gellius, Statius, Horace, Ovid, Lucretius, and Boethius. * Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans sur les Critiques Grammariens.

CRITO, Prince of the Rugians, built the Town of Lubeck, and was a cruel Persecutor of the Christians. He murthered Buthuces, Prince of the Obotritæ, and seized his Dominions: But Henry, Brother to the deceased, revenged his Death, and dispatched Crito. He was assisted in this Enterprize by Flavina, Crito's Wife, whom Henry afterwards marry'd. Razo, Son or Kinsman to Henry, succeeded him, was a warlike Prince, and built Roselbourg in the XII^th^ Century. * Spener, Syl. Geneal. Hist. in Familia Vandalica.

* CROCODILON, or Crocodilopolis, a Town in Thebais, or the upper Egypt; so called, because the Crocodiles are worshipped there. To make some Addition to what has been said in the first Volume of this Work, and describe the Crocodile a little farther. This Beast has very short Feet, and almost creeps upon the Ground; and tho' 'tis an amphibious Animal, she lays her Eggs upon the dry Ground, sometimes to the Number of above fifty. Some Crocodiles are so very large, that they will swallow a Child at a mouthful. In the Indies their Bulk is sometimes such, that a tall Man may stand upright between their Jaws when their Throat is open. In the Isle of Bantam they have the knack of taming Crocodiles, which they fatten, and reckon them delicate Meat; when they are wounded or opened, their Bowels are high scented, and perfume the Air. They sometimes find Flints in the Belly of these Animals, which 'tis suppos'd they make use of to give their Body a stronger Gravitation, and carry them to the bottom of the Water, not being in a Condition to dive so low without such an Assistance. In the West-Indies they call them Caymans; and some are so strong, and well fenced, that one of them was seen to defend himself against thirty Men, who discharged a Cross-Bow six times against him without entering his Skin. * Herrera.

They are not to be met with, but in great Rivers and hot Countries, as the Nile, the Ganges, the Oronoko, &c. Thomas Gage reports, that he secured himself against a Crocodile by running away, not strait forwards, but turning sometimes to one side, and sometimes to another; for the Crocodile is a stiff limbed Animal, and bends her Body with great Difficulty; but to make Amends for this Disadvantage, she will run in a right Line as fast as a Mule. Pliny calls the Crocodile a scurvy Animal, equally dangerous in the Water and upon the Land, Quadrupes malum, & Terra pariter ac Flumine Infestum, and gives an extraordinary Description of her, He observes there is no Animal which grows so much from the first Rudiments of Life; for the Egg she comes out of is no bigger than that of a Goose, and notwithstanding this slender setting out, she often shoots to eleven Yards in length, with proportionable thickness. This Animal, by a sort of prognosticating Instinct, chooses a proper Place for her Eggs, and always lodges them beyond the overflowing of the Nile. Strabo observes, that the Ædile Marcus Scaurus had five live Crocodiles codiles at the publick Shews he furniſh'd for the People, which was the firſt time this Animal was ſeen at Rome.

When Auguſtus made himſelf Maſter of Egypt, a Medal was ſtruck with a Crocodile chain'd to a Palm Tree, with this Legend, Nemo antea Religavit; as much as to ſay, 'twas as difficult a Buſineſs to make Ægypt a part of the Roman Empire, as 'tis for a Fiſherman to lay a Crocodile in Chains. For by the way, the fiſhing or hunting the Crocodile, has always been look'd on as a very dangerous Undertaking. * Plin. Lib. VIII. Cap. 25. Strabo, Lib. XVII. Marmol. Lib. I. Cap. 23.

CROCUS (Cornelius) a Jeſuit of Amſterdam, who died in the Year 1550. He was ſo zealous in his Religion, that he did his utmoſt to get the Grammars written by Hereticks or Libertines, thrown out of the Schools. For this purpoſe he made a Grammar to beat down that written by Melancthon: He likewiſe wrote Formulæ, or Collections of Phraſes; and Colloquies for Children, to throw thoſe of Eraſmus out of Credit: He likewiſe furniſhed a Dictionary, and another Collection, entituled, Farago Sordidorum Verborum, or Lima Barbarica. He had the Reputation of writing with great Perſpicuity; and Adrianus Junius, though of a different Perſuaſion, gives Father Crocus the Commendation of writing up to the Politeneſs of Terence and Tully. * Adrianus Junius in Bataviâ ſuâ. Phil. Alegamb. Biblioth. Soc. J. Valer. Andr. Deſſel, Biblioth. Belg. Alard Amſtfeld. apud Phil. Alegamb. Adrien Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Grammariens Latins, Cap. 654. p. 93.

* CROESUS. For C. Tenobis in Morerey, Vol. firſt, read Cleobis, and Bito; and for, Do not ſtrike my Father, read, Don't ſtrike Cræſus. Atys, Cræſus's eldeſt Son, was not executed by Cyrus, but unfortunately killed by his Friend Adraſtus at the Hunting of a Boar, which Accident happened long before the taking of Sardis. * Herodot.

CROIX de Caſtries: (La) A noble and ancient Family in Languedoc. John de la Croix, who ſtands third upon the Line, is honourably mention'd in the French Hiſtory: He diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the Battle of Baugé in Anjou, in the Reign of King Charles the VI^th^, A. D. 1421. This Gentleman and his Men defended themſelves with great Reſolution in a Church, which occaſioned the routing of the Engliſh.

RENATUS Gaſpar de la Croix, Marquis of Caſtres, Baron of Gourdiége, of Caſtelnau, &c. Lieutenant General of the King's Forces; Lieutenant General likewiſe in Languedoc, Knight of the Orders, Governor of Sommierés and Montpellier; made his firſt Campaign 1636, with no more than a Captain's Commiſſion of a Troop of Light Horſe. This Summer brought him to the Sieges of Corbie, Landrecy, Catelet, Turin and Perpignan; in all which Places he diſtinguiſhed himſelf to an extraordinary Degree. This Service the King rewarded with the Marquiſate of Varembon, then forfeited to his Majeſty, and made him one of the Gentlemen of his Bedchamber. In 1643, he had Letters Patent to qualify him to ſit with the Eſtates of Languedoc, as his Anceſtors had done: He was made Governor of Sommieres in 1646, and the Nobleſs within the Precinct of Montpellier made him their Repreſentative at the meeting of the States of the Kingdom ſummoned in 1651, and now he was preferred to the Council Board. He was likewiſe this Year made Captain-Lieutenant of the Gens d'Arms of Gaſton, Duke of Orleance; and in 1660, he was Governor of Montpellier, and made Knight of the Orders the Year following. In 1668, he was made Lieutenant-General of Languedoc, and in 1670 he received Orders to reduce a revolted Canton in Vivarais. The Marquis de Caſtres immediately marched thither, attended with the chief Gentry of lower Languedoc; but ſoon after the King ſent him Regular Troops, and part of his Houſhold; with this Reinforcement he diſperſed the Rebels, put the Country in a State of Repoſe, and got Roure, the head Rebel, apprehended, and executed at Montpellier. In 1672 the Province having raiſed two Regiments at their own Charge for the King's Service, the Marquis de Caſtres received an Order from the King to name all the Officers, and in 1674 his Majeſty gave him leave to raiſe two Regiments, one of Foot, and another of Horſe, to be called by his own Name. He had the Honour to be ſeveral times Preſident of the States General of his Province, where he was always remarkably careful to ſerve both the King and the Country. His Death, which happen'd in 1674, was generally regretted.

JOSEPH FRANCIS de la Croix, Marquis of Caſtres, &c. his Majeſty's Lieutenant Governor in Languedoc, Governor and Steward of Montpellier, Gentleman-Uſher to the Dutcheſs of Orleans, and Field-Marſhal. He was made Collonel of a Regiment of Foot at eleven Years old. In 1684 he charged at the Head of this Regiment at the Battel of Pont Major, and at the Aſſault of Gironne in Catalonia, and at the Retreat of Nnys in the Electorate of Cologne; where, by his Conduct and Courage, he had the good Fortune to bring off his Regiment, tho' charged in the open Field with near five thouſand of the Enemy's Horſe. The King ſenſible of his Bravery, made him a Brigadier, put particular Marks of Honour in his Commiſſion, and recited the Detail of the Action laſt mentioned. The ſame Year his Regiment made part of the Garriſon of Bonne; where, during the Siege, he gave new Proof of his Courage. This Marquis had the Honour to treat a Capitulation with the Elector of Brandenbourg, and got very good Articles for the Garriſon in this Town. In 1690 he commanded a Brigade of Foot at the Battle of Flerus, where he was wounded, and had his Horſe ſhot under him. In 1691 he was at the Siege of Mons; and 1693 was made Field-Marſhal, or Quarter-Maſter-General. * Chronique de France Andoque, Hiſtoire de Languedoc. P. Benôit, Dominicain, Hiſt. de Albigeois. Généalogie, par M. d' Hozier en 1637. Nobiliaire de Picardie. Nobiliaire de Champagne. Procès Verbeaux des Etats de Languedoc, & Archives de Montpellier.

CRONACH, a Town in Germany, within the Circle of Franconia: It lies in the Biſnoprick of Bamberg, nine Leagues from Bamberg to the North. Cronach ſtands at the Confluence of the Rivers Radach, Haſlac, and Cronach. The Town is well fortify'd, and has a good Citadel built upon a Hill, which commands the Place. * Maty, Diction.

CROTOY, a Town in Picardy: It ſtands at the Mouth of the Somme overagainſt St. Vallery, four Leagues above Abbeville. Cluverius believes 'twas the Caracotinum, or Gravinum in Gallia Belgica, which other Geographers take for Havre de Grace.

CROUVE, or Crow, (William) Prieſt of the Church of England, wrote a Catalogue of the Commentators upon the Bible, entituled, Elenchus Scriptorum in S. Scripturam, printed at London in 1672. Theſe Authors are mark'd by their Country, their Profeſſion, and the time when they died. He diſtinguiſhes them farther by their reſpective Communions and Sects; P. ſtands for Roman Catholicks or Papiſts: The Lutherans are marked by an L, the Calviniſts by a C, and the Socinians by an S. He mentions the Title Pages of the Tracts, in what Volumes they were printed, and how many Editions they ran through: Farther, he runs a Commendation upon ſome of theſe that appear beſt qualified for this Undertaking. But this Crow falling ſhort in his Liſt, P. le Long, Prieſt of the Oratory, has written two Latin Volumes in 8^vo^ upon the ſame Subject, where Crow's Omiſſions are ſupplied: This Work was firſt printed at Paris in 1708, and afterwards in Germany, with ſome Additions. * Baillet, Jugemens de Sçavans ſur les Critiques & Hiſtoriques.

CTESIPHON, a great Architect, drew a Model of Diana's famous Temple at Epheſus, which Draught was built partly by his Direction, and partly by that of his Son Metagenes, and other Architects. Cteſiphon invented a Machine for the Carriage of Pillars for ornamenting this Temple. They were brought from the Quarries as far as Epheſus; and not willing to venture them upon Carts, becauſe the Roads being ſomewhat rotten, the weight of the Load would ſink the Wheels, and ſet the Horſes: To prevent this Inconvenience, he clapt four pieces of Wood together, four Inches Square, two of theſe were laid croſs the two others, which were longer, and equal to the Shank of each Pillar. At the two ends of each Pillar he drove in Iron Pegs, with great Notches in them, and ſoddred them with Lead, putting Iron Rings into the croſs pieces of Wood where the Pegs were faſtned; beſides, at the two ends of this Carriage two long pieces of Oak were nailed, thus the Oxen drawing by theſe Bâtons or Shafts, the Pegs within the Iron Rings had room to turn with a free Motion; and thus the Shaft of the Pillars rolled without check upon the Ground: Plutarch mentions another of this Name who was an Hiſtorian, and wrote ſeveral Books. * Vitruvius in Præf. Lib. VII. Plin. Lib. VII. Cap. 37. & Lib. XXXVI. Cap. 14. Plutarch, in Parallel. XII. &c.

CTESEPHON, an Athenian, perſuaded the Burghers to paſs an Ordinance for crowning Demoſthenes with a Gold Crown at a full Seſſion, in Conſideration of the Service he had done his Country; but Æchines grudging Demoſthenes this Honour, proſecuted Cteſephon for Sedition: But Demoſthenes being of Council for Cteſephon, pleaded off the Impeachment in his Fine Oration de Coronâ. * Demoſthenes de Coronâ. Cicero.

CUENCA, a good Town in Peru, though not large: It ſtands in the Province of Quito, about forty Leagues from the Town Quito to the South, and upon the Borders of the Country de les Quixos. * Maty, Diction.

* CUJACIUS, (James) the moſt celebrated Lawyer of the XVI^th^ Century. He was one of thoſe happy Genius's who are their own Maſter in every part of Learning: For Inſtance, he got through the Difficulties of the Greek and Latin Languages, and every part of polite Learning, without Inſtruction or Aſſiſtance. He is the only modern Lawyer who has reach'd farthest into the Origin and Sources of Law in general, and the Civil Law in particular: To ſucceed in theſe Reſearches, he has made uſe of Etymology for the true Signification of Terms, and the Lights from Hiſtory, purſuant to the Method of the Lawyers in ancient Times. Thus Antonino del Camp, who moved in the ſame Tract, read two Lectures every Day; one upon the Roman Hiſtory, and the other upon the Inſtitutes. He us'd to ſay, that the Inſtitutes and Hiſtory were the two Doors which open'd into the Apartment of the Civil Law. Cujacius was likewiſe a Man of Diſcretion and Reſerve; for when his Opinion was asked upon ſome Queſtions in Divinity, which made a great Noiſe in his time, he anſwer'd very prudently, nil hoc ad edictum prætoris. This was quite foreign to a Decree in Chancery, as much as to ſay, 'twas fit every one ſhould confine himſelf to Queſtions, in his own Faculty. * Papyre Maſſon, in vit Jac. Cujas. Sainte Marthe, in Elog. Doct. Gal. Lib. 4. Thuan, Hiſt. la Croiz du Maine, & du Verdier Vauprivas, Biblioth Franc.

CULLERA, a Town upon a Cape of the ſame Name. 'Tis ſcituate at the Mouth of the Xucar, within the Kingdom of Valencia in Spain. * Maty, Diction.

CULLY, a ſmall Town in Switzerland, upon the Lemman Lake near Vevay, within the Canton of Berne. 'Tis a pretty Place, and well built. In the Neighbourhood of Cully, there is the beſt Wine in all Switzerland, and is really very good; but then it muſt be drank in Winter, for 'tis too heady and intoxicating for the Summer Seaſon. The Arms of this Town are a Bunch of Grapes. * Plantin, Deſcription of Switzerland.

CUMANUS, Governor or Procurator of Judea, ſucceeded Tiberius Alexander. In the time of his Adminiſtration there happened a flaming Sedition at Jeruſalem, by the inſolent Misbehaviour of a Soldier, at the Feſtival of the Paſſover; the Commotion happen'd thus: Cumanus, according to Cuſtom, having ordered a Company of Soldiers to keep Guard at the Gate of the Temple, a Centinel was ſo impudent as to appear publickly naked and licentious. This Effrontery was ſo provoking, that the People cried the Outrage was not only an Abuſe upon themſelves, but a Contempt upon God Almighty. Some of the Jews charged Cumanus with this Indignity, and notwithſtanding all his Excuſe and Proteſtations, the People were too much prejudiced to give any Credit to what he ſaid. They came at laſt to pelt him with Reproach and ill Language, upon which he order'd his Troops to march into the Fort Antonia. The poſting his Men here frighted the Mob terribly; they diſperſed with great Precipitation, being apprehenſive they ſhould all be maſſacred; and here the Crowd was ſo great in the narrow Streets, that about a thouſand was ſtifled to Death. This Cumanus haraſſed and oppreſſed the Jews and Samaritans to that Degree, that at laſt they joined in a Remonſtrance to Quadratus, Governor of Syria: Upon this, Cumanus and ſeveral of his Creatures and under Pullers, were apprehended and ſent to the Emperor Claudius in Chains. This Emperor baniſhed Cumanus, and gave the Government of Judea to Claudius Felix, Pallas's Brother. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XX. Cap. 5.

CUNCAN, (the Kingdom of) a Country within the Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide the Ganges. 'Tis one of the Provinces of the Kingdom of Decan, on the North 'tis bounded with Decan, properly ſo called; on the Eaſt with the Province of Balaguate, from which 'tis parted by the Gate Mountains. The Kingdom of Canara bounds it on the South, and the Indian Ocean lies to the Weſt. The principal Towns in Cuncan are Viſapor, Saliapor, and Paranda; all three upon the River Mandona, to which muſt be added Goa, which ſtands upon the Coaſt, and belongs to the Portugueze. * Maty, Diction.

CUNGCHANG, a Town in China. 'Tis the fifth in bulk, within the Province of Xenſi, and reaches to a large Juriſdiction, having ſixteen other Towns for Dependencies. Cungchang ſtands near the Head of the River Guei, about ſixty Leagues above Sigan. * Maty, Diction.

CUNIBERT, or Hunibert, (St.) Biſhop of Cologne in the VII^th^ Century, extracted from a Noble and Religious Family, in a Province upon the Moſelle in Auſtraſia, towards the latter end of the Reign of Childebert II^d^. He was a Deacon in the Church of Treves, and was elected Biſhop of Cologne in the Year 623. He aſſiſted at the Council of Rheims, A. D. 625. and was afterwards made Preſident of King Dagobert's Council. His Advice was very ſerviceable to this Prince, who made him Governor to Sigebert, King of Auſtraſia, then a Minor. He acquitted himſelf handſomely in this Employment, and after Dagobert's Death, Pepin and Cunebert had the joint Adminiſtration of the Kingdom of Auſtraſia. The Reputation of the latter ran very high as long as Sigebert lived; after his Death Grimoald, Pepin's Son, wreſted the Crown from Dagobert, Son to Sigebert, to ſet it on the Head of his Son Childebert: Upon this Stretch Cunebert threw up Secular Buſineſs, and retired to his Biſhoprick. Clovis II^d^, Sigebert's Brother, and after him Clotair the III^d^, reigned ſingle; but Auſtraſia being granted to Childerick, Clovis's ſecond Son, Cunebert was again employ'd in State Affairs. He died November 12, 663. * Baillet Vies des Saints mois de Novembre.

* CUNIBERT, for Paris, in Morery, Vol. firſt, read Pavia.

CUNTUR, a famous Bird in Peru, worſhipped by the People as one of their chief Deities; ſome of them are five or ſix Ells long, when meaſured from the extremity of one Wing to the other: They are likewiſe ſo ſtrong and fierce, that ſome of them will kill a Man. 'Tis a Bird of Prey, but without any Talons, her Feet being like thoſe of a Hen; her Beak is ſo very ſtrong and hard, that it will enter the Hide of an Ox, and when two of them range together they'll fight a Bull, and make a Meal of him. This Bird is ſpotted Black and White like a Pye, with a Comb upon her Head like a Razor; when ſhe is upon the Wing ſhe makes a frightful Noiſe, eſpecially when ſhe ſowſes down upon her Game. The Spaniards call this Bird, Condor. Father Jerôm Lobo relates, that there are Condors in Africa: For Inſtance, in the Country of Sophala, in that of the Caffres in Monomotapa, as far as the Kingdom of Angola. They reſemble an Eagle; ſome of their Feathers are four and twenty Foot long, and three Foot broad; the Quill is five Foot long, about the thickneſs of a Man's Arm. Some of them are reported as big as two Elephants clapt together, that they have carry'd off Cows and other large Cattle, and that from one end of their Wing to the other, they make thirty Foot. Some of them have been ſeen to vomit up two hundred pound of Fleſh. 'Tis probable this Bird is called Rouch by the Arabians. In the Treaſury of the Holy Chapel at Paris, there is the Pounces of a Bird to be ſeen, which is ſufficient Proof that ſome of the winged Kind ſhoot out to a very bulky Proportion. * Hiſtoire des Indes. Father Bolivart's Hiſtory of Æthiopia. Relat. des Voyages.

CUPER, (Gilbert) Burgher-maſter of Deventer, wrote three Books of Critical and Chronological Obſervations, printed in the Year 1684. He has likewiſe publiſhed Homer's Apotheoſis, taken from an Inſcription, with a good Commentary. Borremans and Spanheim give him the Character of a Perſon of great Ability. He is ſtill living, and much valu'd by Men of Learning. * Anton. Borreman. var. Lect. &c. Ezech. Spanh. Obſerv. ad Julian. Cæſar. Gal. Baillet, Jugemens des Scavans ſur les Critiques Grammariens.

CURATORS. There were ſeveral Sorts of them at Rome: For Inſtance, Curatores omnium Tribuum, were a ſort of Syndicks, or Aldermen of a Ward.

Curatores operum Publicorum, or Surveyors of the publick Buildings.

Curatores Alvei, Tiberis, & Cloacarum: Thoſe that had the Care of ſeeing the Common-Shores and the Dreins of the Town cleared, and kept in order. Suetonius informs they were ſetled by Auguſtus. Nova Officia excogitavit, curam operum Publicorum, Viarum & Aquarum, Alvei & Tiberis.

Curatores, Viarum extra Urbem. Surveyors of the great Roads out of Rome, of the Bridges and Cauſeys.

Curatares Denariorum Flandorum, abridged upon ancient Inſcriptions by theſe three Letters, C, D, F. They were Maſters of the Mint, otherwiſe called Viri Monetales, who had the Management of Coinage. There are ſome ancient Inſcriptions upon Gold and Silver Coins with theſe five Letters, A. A. A. F. F. they ſtand for Ære, Argento, Auro, flando fereundo; that is, Mint Officers for Melting and Coining Copper, Silver, and Gold.

Curatores Kalendarii, thoſe Roman Officers who put out the Money lodged in the City Chamber to Intereſt, which was paid at the Kalends, or the firſt Day of the Month, for which Reaſon they were called Kalendarii. * Danet.

CURDO, formerly Niphates; a long chain of Mountains, which makes part of Mount Taurus. It ſtretches from Euphrates to the Mountains of Tchildir, the Caſpian Hills of the Ancients. Theſe Mountains formerly parted great Armenia from Meſopotamia and Aſſyria; but according to the modern Diſtinction of Countries, they part Turcomania from Diarbeck, and afterwards croſs the Country of the Curds, from whence they take the Name of Curdo. * Baudrand.

CURE. (A) The Name of a Benefice, where the Incumbent has the Direction of Conduct and Conſcience within a certain compaſs of Ground called a Pariſh. Curates in this Senſe are as old as Chriſtianity; for the Apoſtles, in Churches newly form'd, ſetled Prieſts for Diſcipline and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, who were to manage under the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop. This Biſhop, conſecrated and fixed by the Apoſtles, had Authority to ordain Prieſts as occaſion required; afterwards, Converts increaſing to a great Number, 'twas found neceſſary to have ſeveral Churches in the ſame Town, and to appoint Prieſts for managing the Congregations in the Country. In Optatus his time there was forty Baſilicæ, or Churches, in Rome, governed by Prieſts; and Pope Cornelius in his Letter to Fabius, acquaints him there were ſix and forty Prieſts in the Church of Rome. When Athanaſius was Biſhop of Alexandria, there were ſeveral Curates both in that City and within the Precinct of Mareotis. Theſe Prieſts had each of them a diſtinct Church, where their reſpective Congregations met. This was the Cuſtom through the whole Chriſtian Church. For the purpoſe, there were Prieſts ſetled in Cities, ſome of which belonged to the Cathedral, ſome had their diſtinct Churches in the Town, and a great many others were fixt upon Cures in the Country; amongſt theſe latter the moſt conſiderable were thoſe called Chorepiſcopi, and Rural Deans Some Divines believe theſe Curates Succeſſors to the ſeventy two Diſciples, and that their Office has a Jure Divino Authority. This is the Sentiment of the Faculty of Divinity at Paris. Since the VIII^th^ Century, Cures have been annexed to Chapters and Monaſteries; but then ſince that time Monks have been excluded from this Parochial Function: The Canons regular however, have kept on their Claim and Practice for officiating upon Cures. Chapters and Monaſteries, who have Cures annex'd, are oblig'd to ſettle perpetual Vicars upon them; theſe Curates are not removable at the Pleaſure of their Religious Patrons. This Branch of Authority and Juriſdiction is lodged with the Biſhop; however, to void the Living a Canonical Proceſs is neceſſary. The Spiritual Rights of the Curates are the Government and Direction of the Pariſh, in things relating to the other World; that is, to adminiſter the Sacraments, to confeſs, and communicate their Pariſhioners. Their Temporal Privileges and Property are to receive Tithes, Offerings, Mortuaries, and other Perquiſites at Weddings, &c. * Thomaſſin, Diſciplin. Eccleſ. Fileſac, &c.

CURIA, a Court or Hall, where according to Feſtus, the Romans uſed to meet for publick Affairs: But with this Author's Favour, Curia ſignifies the Perſons rather than the Place; for the Place was not certain, the Roman Senate meeting ſometimes in one Temple, and ſometimes in another. However, they had certain Places called Curiæ, as Curia Hoſtilia, Curia Calabra, Curia Saliorum, Curia Pompeii, Curia Auguſti: But what ſort of Buildings theſe were is not exactly known. Theſe Places or Courts were of two Sorts; one where the Prieſts met for regulating the Affairs of Religion, theſe were called Curiæ Veteres: There were four of them, viz. Forienſis, Ravia, Vellenſis, & Velitia. Theſe were all in the tenth Ward and Diviſion of the Town, the Senate met in the Reſt for diſpatching Matters relating to the Government. This Diviſion of the Curiæ into Religious and Secular, is mentioned by Varro in his fourth Book de Lingua Latina: Curiæ duorum genera; & ubi Sacerdotes res divinas curarent, ut Curiæ Veteres: & ubi Senatus humanas, ut Curia Hoſtilia.

The Curia Calabra was built by Romulus upon Mount Palatin near his Houſe, according to Varro; or as others will have it, at the Capitol in the Place where the Warehouſes of Salt are at preſent: 'Twas called Calabra from Calare, which ſignifies to call; becauſe 'twas the Place appointed by Romulus where the Rex Sacrorum was to call the Senate and People together, to acquaint them with the New Moons, with the Days for Sacrificing, and publick Spectacles.

CURIA Hoſtilia was built by Tullus Hoſtilius, in the Forum Romanum, or Roman Square, where the Senate frequently met.

CURIA Pompeii ſtood next to the Theatre built by Pompey the Great, in the Place called Campo di fiere. 'Twas a ſtately Palace where the Senate met when Julius Cæſar was aſſaſſinated, and diſcoloured Pompey's Statue with his Blood. At the coming into this Palace there was a noble Portico, ſupported by one hundred fine Pillars. This Building ſtood intire near 300 Years, and was burnt in the Reign of Philip, Succeſſor to Gordian III^d^.

The Court, or Curia Saliorum, ſtood upon Mount Palatin: Where, when 'twas burnt down, if we may believe Tully, Romulus's Divining Staff was found whole, and undamaged by the Fire. There were likewiſe Curia Julia, or Julii, Curia Auguſti, Curia Octavia, Curia Pompiliana, Curia Catonis.

Vopiſcus, in the Life of the Gordians, mentions more of this Denomination. All theſe Places laſt mentioned were built by thoſe whoſe Names they carry'd; they were dedicated by the Augurs, otherwiſe 'twas not lawful for the Senate to meet there. * Danet.

CURJAT, a ſmall Town of Jaman, a Country in Arabia the Happy. It ſtands upon the Coaſt over-againſt the Iſland Mazira, about fifty five Leagues from the Cape Raz-al-Gate. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the ſame with that which Ptolemy calls Dianæ Oraculum. * Baudrand.

CURIGA, a ſmall Town in the Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide the Ganges: 'Tis within Malabar, and about ſeven Leagues from the Coaſt, and the Town Cranganor. Curiga is the Capital of a Kingdom, under the Protection of the King of Calecut; 'tis likewiſe called Cirigat. * Baudrand.

CURISCH-HAFF: In Latin Lacus Coronenſis, a Lake in Ducal Pruſſia near the Baltick, into which 'tis diſcharged hard by the Fort Memel. It receives a great many ſmall Rivers, reaches to a conſiderable length, but without much breadth; for 'tis only a ſlip of Land, or rather of Sand, between this Lake and the Sea. * Baudrand.

CURISCH-NERUNG, a Peninſula in Ducal Pruſſia: It lies between the Lake Curiſch-Haff and the Baltick. This Peninſula ſtretches about twenty Leagues in length, but the greateſt breadth does not exceed above three of our Miles: There are ſome Villages in it, Sarckaw and Roſſiten are the chief. * Maty Diction.

CURSORES Apoſtolici, Officers belonging to the Pope, reſembling the Somners or Apparitors mentioned in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; who in the times of Perſecutions carry'd the Biſhops Letters, to acquaint the Faithful when they were to come to the publick Aſſemblies. Thus theſe Apoſtolical Couriers give Cardinals and Ambaſſadors

baſſadors Notice when they are to appear at Conſiſtories and Cavalcades: When they execute this Office, they wear a Violet coloured Gown, and a black Thorn Stick in their Hand: When one of this Fraternity is admitted, the oldeſt Courier preſents him to the Pope, with this ſhort Addreſs to his Holineſs; Beatiſſime Pater, iſte eſt Curſor novus, qui humiliter à Sanctitate veſtra petit oſculum pedis. Two of theſe Couriers go to the Palace in their Turns, to receive the Pope's Orders. When a Conſiſtory is to be held, they are introduced by the Lord Chamberlain, where kneeling they ſalute his Holineſs with this Sentence, Sanitas & longa Vita, Beatiſſime Pater, Cras erit Conſiſtorium? The Pope giving them his Bleſſing, anſwers, Erit Conſiſtorium. Upon this they give Notice of the holding a Conſiſtory to the Treaſurer and Auditor of the Chamber, and to the Governor of Rome. Every Cardinal is obliged to give them Audience immediately, and to receive them ſtanding and uncovered: Theſe Curſores or Sumners, kneeling upon one Knee, deliver their Meſſage thus, Eminentiſſime ac Reverendiſſime Domine, die N. erit Conſiſtorium. If their Buſineſs is to bring the News of a Cardinal's Cap, they ſalute him that is to receive it thus: Salus & Gaudium. Eminentiſſime ac Reverendiſſime Domine, Die N. erit Conſiſtorium, in quo SS. P. noſter tradet Pileum Eminentiæ veſtræ, ac aliis Eminentiſſimis nuperrime creatis. If the Notice is for appearing at the Pope's Chapel, they obſerve the ſame Ceremonies; but when they are ſent to Ambaſſadors and Princes, that hold of the Pope, they don't kneel. They likewiſe give Notice of a Cardinal's Funeral to all the Sacred College, and to the four Mendicant Orders, and the Deceaſed Cardinal's Heirs are obliged to give them ten Ducats di Camera, twenty four pounds of Wax, and eight Ducats di Moneta. Every new Cardinal pays them ten Ducats di Camera; theſe Officers aſſiſt at Cavalcades where the Pope is preſent; they ſurround his Chair, habited in a Violet colour'd Gown, with a Silver Mace in their Hands, and riding upon Mules. They are nineteen in Number, one of which is Head of the Reſt for three Months, and 'tis to this Temporary Chief, that all Commiſſions are ſent, ſigned either by the Pope, or by the Cardinal Preſident of the Signature of Juſtice. * Carlo Bartol. Piazza, Euſevolog. Rom. Tract. II^d. Cap. 16.

CURTISIUS, (Titus) a Soldier belonging to the Guards, who endeavoured to raiſe the Slaves in Italy upon the Government. This happen'd in the tenth Year of Tiberius's Reign, and the twenty fourth from the Incarnation. He began to carry on the Inſurrection at Brunduſium or Brinde, by private Cabals, and afterwards got Libels diſperſed to diſpoſe the Country to run to Arms, and recover their Liberty; but Curius Lupus, the Queſtor, defeated theſe Rebels, ſeized their Chief, and ſent him to Rome. * Tacit. Annal. IV. Cap. 27.

CURUBE, (Curubis & Curobis) a ſmall Town in Africk, ſtanding upon the Cape of Mercury towards Sicily, and about ten or a dozen Leagues from Carthage. 'Tis ſomewhat a barren Place, but a good Air: St. Cyprian was baniſh'd here by the Proconſul Paternus, September 13, A. D. 257; 'Twas ſince made a Biſhop's See, and at laſt called Calybia. * Baillet, Topographie des Saints.

CUTH, or Cutha, a Town of Aſſyria. The Burghers were tranſplanted to Samaria by Merodach. This Remove made the Samaritans called Cutheans, they worſhipped the Idol Nargal. * 2 Kings Cap. XVII. ℣. 24.

CUTHBERT, (St.) Biſhop of Lindisfarme, upon the Coaſt of Northumberland: He was born amongſt the Picts in the Scotch Marches. The firſt part of his Youth was ſpent in the Buſineſs of a Shepherd, afterward he turned Monk in the Abbey of Mailerоſs, and was Prior of this Monaſtery about twelve Years; after this, with his Abbot's Permiſſion, he lived nine Year in Solitude, and went through great Auſterities. In the Year 684 he was elected Biſhop of Hagulſtad; he refuſed this Promotion, but accepted the ſame Station at Lindisfarme, or Holy Iſland. He governed this Church about two Years, and died March 20, A. D. 687. * Bede, Vit. S. Cuthbert, Mabillon Siecle IV. p. 2. Collier's Eccleſ. Hiſt. Vol. firſt.

CUTENBERG, a Town in Bohemia near the Pits, where 3000 Huſſites were thrown in alive, A. D. 1418; afterwards, at an Aſſembly of the States held here 1485, an Ordinance paſs'd for allowing every one Liberty of Conſcience. * Lancius, Lib. I. Daubr. Hiſtory of this Country. Lætus, Abridgment of Univerſal Hiſtory.

CYCLE, (the Paſchal) a Revolution of five hundred thirty two Years, at the end of which Eaſter returns to the ſame Day of the Month on the Sunday. Dionyſius Exiguus, and Venerable Bede have taken a great deal of Pains upon this Subject. 'Tis compoſed of the Cycles of the Sun, and of the Moon, multiplied by each other, and ſo diſpoſed, that the beginning of it is fixt to the Year immediately preceding the firſt Year of the Chriſtian Æra. This Period being run through A. D. 532, another was begun, and after that a third, and ſo on: But this Computation laſted no longer than the Year 1582, when Pope Gregory the XIII^th ſtruck ten Days out of the Calendar. However, 'tis requiſite to obſerve this Dionyſian Period for the right underſtanding the time of Eaſter, and other moveable Feſtivals, mentioned in ancient Hiſtory. * Petavius, Doctrina Temporum.

* CYCLOPS, the firſt Inhabitants of Sicily, where they lived with the Leſtrigones. Heſiod makes them the Sons of Heaven and Earth, but Euripides and Lucian will have them the Children of Neptune and Amphitrite: Mythology gives them a round Eye in the middle of their Forehead, from whence they were called Cyclops. Brontes, Steropes, and Pyrachmon, three of the Chief of this Family were Vulcan's Journeymen, and worked Jupiter's Thunderbolts. The Poets Report Apollo killed them with his Bow; 'twas to revenge the Death of his Son Æſculapius, transfixed by Jupiter with a Thunderbolt, which theſe Cyclops had furniſhed. To draw ſomewhat of Hiſtory out of theſe Fables; by theſe Cyclops we are to underſtand the firſt Planters in Sicily, who grew formidable to their Neighbours. Some Writers will have them called Cyclops, becauſe they were always waiting, and looking out ſharp, to ſurprize and rob thoſe that lived near them. They are repreſented in the Figure of Gyants, upon the ſcore of their Savageneſs and Strength. * Heſiod, Theogon. Homer, Odyſſ. Virgil, Æneid. Lib. VIII. Thucydid, Lib. I. Juſtin, Lib. IV.

CYMBALS, in Latin Symbala; a muſical Inſtrument made hollow, like two ſmall Porringers, and Braſs being the Metal, they are ſometimes called Æra in Latin; they were made round, as appears by their Figure upon Medals, and by this Verſe in Propertius.

Quâ numeroſa fides, quaque Æra rotunda Cybeles.

Caſſiodorus gives a Deſcription of theſe Inſtruments, and calls them Acetabula, which ſignifies a Concave Figure, like the Cavity of a Bone which receives the Head of another Bone into it; which is called Acetabulum, or the Box for a Bone. St. Auguſtin in his Commentary upon the hundred and firſt Pſalm, obſerves that the Cymbals muſt touch one another to ſtrike out a Sound, and that the Ancients frequently compare them to the Lips. Thus Fulgentius makes the two Lips a ſort of Cymbals, which furniſh the Sound; that the Tongue is like the Bow, which cuts and divides it into Diſtinction. Iſidore Peluſiota, after having compared the Harp, the Drum, the Organ, and the Strings made uſe of at the Solemnities of the Ancients; having compared theſe to ſeveral Parts in Human Bodies, he reſembles Cymbals to the Lips, becauſe unleſs they preſs and ſtrike one another like Cymbals, no Sound can be formed. Ovid in his III^d Book de Arte Amandi, gives them a Name which looks ſomewhat miſty;

Diſce etiam duplici, Genialia nablia Palmâ
Verrere——

He calls them Genialia, becauſe Cymbals were played on at Weddings, and other Entertainments. * Danet.

*CYPRIAN, (St.) an African, living in the III^d Century; his other two Names were Thaſcius and Cecilius, which laſt he took from the Prieſt who converted him. In the Popedom of Stephen a famous Conteſt happened between the Churches of Africk and Rome, concerning the Validity of Baptiſm received from Hereticks. St. Cyprian, and the other African Biſhops, argued gued ſtrongly for the Rebaptizing thoſe who had been baptized by Hereticks, urging this Uſage had been ſettled in a Council held under Agrippinus, one of St. Cyprian's Predeceſſors. Pope Stephen ſtood up ſtiffly for the contrary Practice, inſiſted on the Cuſtom of the Church of Rome, and not only refuſed Communion, but common Entertainment to the Agents of the African Biſhops: For theſe Rigours he is ſharply reproved by Firmillian, Biſhop of Ceſarea in Cappadocia, and by St. Cyprian. This latter, though he does not carry his Satyr ſo far as the other, always treats Stephen upon Terms of Equality, calls him Brother, is very plain in his Reprimands, and gives him to underſtand, he is under no Obligation to be governed by Stephen's Sentiments and Practice. The Reſt of the African Biſhops were of the ſame Opinion, adhered to St. Cyprian, and declared againſt the Validity of Hereticks Baptiſm, in a National Council at Carthage. However, they came to ſomewhat of a Temper as to Communion. They reſolved not to break with the Church of Rome upon the ſcore of a different Practice; for which Moderation they are commended by St. Auguſtin, though of a different Sentiment. In the Year 257, in the Reign of the Emperor Valerian, St. Cyprian was baniſhed to Curubis by the Proconſul Aſpaſius Paternus; and after having been confin'd here eleven Months, he was recalled by the Proconſul Valerius Maximus; who order'd him to reſide at his own Gardens, or Villa near Carthage. St. Cyprian having received Advice, that the Proconſul had ſent ſome Soldiers to ſeize him, and carry him to Utica, retired and abſconded, to prevent his Suffering, out of Carthage, and remote from his People. At laſt coming back to his Villa, at the return of the Proconſul to Carthage, he was apprehended and brought before him; and having generouſly confeſſed himſelf a Chriſtian, was beheaded at a Place called Sexti, near Carthage, September 14, A. D. 258, in the Conſulſhip of Tuſcus and Baſſus.

There are LXXXI Epiſtles of St. Cyprian extant, and ſeveral Diſcourſes, without reckoning his Epiſtle to Donatus: This Letter written ſoon after his Baptiſm gives an Account of the extraordinary Force of this Sacrament. Here St. Cyprian, with a great deal of Rhetorick, deſcribes the Danger ſurrounding thoſe that court the World, the Knavery and Flagitiouſneſs of the Pagans, and the Happineſs of thoſe that make the Service of God their main Buſineſs: Here he exhorts his Friend to make for a Retirement, to throw up the World, and ſpend great part of his time in Reading and Prayer. This Letter is floridly written, and St. Auguſtin obſerves 'tis unreſembling the reſt; for afterwards St. Cyprian's Elocution was more maſculine and grave, and particularly his Epiſtles are very inſtructive, upon the moſt conſiderable Branches of Diſcipline. His Diſcourſe de Vanitate Idolorum was written ſoon after the Epiſtle to Donatus. That de Teſtimoniis to Quirinus, is a Collection of Scripture Paſſages againſt the Jews, with ſome Strictures in Morality. His Tract de Habitu & Diſciplina Virginum, is an excellent Diſcourſe, and well finiſhed. His Tract de Lapſis, and that de Unitate Eccleſiæ, are Maſter-Pieces in their kind. The firſt was occaſioned by the Misbehaviour of Feliciſſimus, who was over indulgent in readmitting thoſe to Communion who had been guilty of Idolatry during the Perſecution. The ſecond is levell'd againſt Schiſmaticks. His Book de Oratione Dominica, is an excellent Expoſition upon the Lord's Prayer. His Exhortation to Martyrdom, addreſſed to Fortunatianus, is a Collection of Texts of Scripture, to exhort the Chriſtians to Reſolution and Martyrdom. That de Mortalitate occaſioned by the Plague, which haraſs'd the Empire in the Reigns of Voluſianus and Gallienus, is a very affecting Diſcourſe for Patience and Reſignation. His Letter to Demetrianus was written to diſprove the Calumny thrown upon the Chriſtians, as if their Religion had brought the Plague upon the World. His Diſcourſe de Opere & Elemoſyna is written with great Force, to make an Impreſſion upon the wealthy, and work them to Charity and Compaſſion. That de Patientia recommends Patience from the beſt Topicks. His Book de Livore & Zelo is a ſtrong Diſſuaſive from Envy, and argues movingly for the oppoſite Virtue of Humility. There are ſeveral other Tracts miſtakenly reckon'd to St. Cyprian.

St. Cyprian, as Lactantius obſerves, is the firſt Eloquent Chriſtian Writer. St. Jerome reſembles his Diſcourſes to a Stream which runs ſmooth and clear; however, he may likewiſe be compared to a rapid Torrent which ſweeps every thing in its way: For his Motions are oftentimes very ſtrong, and almoſt irreſiſtable, but then his Manner is natural, without Bombaſt and Affectation. But notwithſtanding the Correctneſs of his Style, there is now and then ſome little Appearance of the African Genius, and Tertullian's hard manner: St. Cyprian uſed to call this Author his Maſter; however, he generally takes care to poliſh his Roughneſs, and avoid his Defects. St. Cyprian generally argues with Conſequence and Logick, and not only ſtands clear of groſs Miſtakes, but likewiſe of thoſe leſſer Overſights which occur in ſome of the Fathers of the three firſt Centuries. He treats Diſcipline and ſeveral moral Subjects at large, and gives great Light into the Government and Belief of the Church in the Primitive Ages. The beſt Edition of St. Cyprian's Works is that printed at Oxford, A. D. 1682; 'twas furniſh'd by Fell, Biſhop of Oxford, and Pearſon, Biſhop of Cheſter. 'Tis publiſh'd in a beautiful Character, and corrected by four new Manuſcripts; the different readings are exactly marked, and the beſt Notes of Pamelius, and Rigaltius inſerted. St. Cyprian's Life, and the African Hiſtory relating to this Saint, are thrown into this Edition, in the Annales Cyprianici, written by Biſhop Pearſon. M. Baluzius is at work upon a new Edition of St. Cyprian, and is furniſhed for Improvement with a great many Manuſcripts. M. Lombart has made a beautiful French Tranſlation of St. Cyprian's Works. * Vit. Cyprian. Lactant, Inſtit. Divin. Lib. V. cap. 4. Hieron. de Viris Illuſtribus. Preface de Lombart ſur la Verſion. Annales Cyprianici. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. III.

CYPRIAN, (St.) Biſhop of Antioch, and born in that Town; but then we are to obſerve, that this is not the great Antioch, but poſſibly that in Phœnicia. He was a Perſon of Birth, Wit and Intereſt; but made an ill uſe of theſe Advantages, and was deeply engaged in the Myſteries of Paganiſm. Magick was much his Inclination, and to go to the bottom of this pretended Science, he ſpared neither Money nor Pains, nor ſcrupled any Practice of Inhumanity; for he is ſaid to have ſacrificed Men and Women, and eſpecially Children, for Preparation and Diſcovery. He was over and above a profeſſed Enemy of the Chriſtians, blaſphemed their Religion, harraſſed the Prieſts, and made it his Buſineſs to ſolicit the Virtue of the Women; but at laſt one Juſtina was ſo happy as to bring him to better Practice. In ſhort, he was deſperately in love with this young Woman, and play'd all his magical Engines to batter her Honour; but Magick and Conjuring was to no purpoſe, Juſtina's Virtue was impregnable. Cyprian ſurprized to ſee the Force of his Art, and the Power of the Devils give way to a young Chriſtian, broke looſe from Heatheniſm and Magick, and became a Convert to Chriſtianity: He confeſſed his Misbehaviour, renounced Idolatry, burnt his Magick Books, and after he was baptized made a great many Proſelytes. He was afterwards made Biſhop of his native Town. He govern'd his See to Commendation, and when Juſtina was apprehended in the Diocletian Perſecution, he was likewiſe carry'd before the Governor of Antioch. This Magiſtrate having put them to the Torture, ſent them to Diocletian, who beheaded them both at Nicomedia, A. D. 304. This St. Cyprian, if his Life and Martyrdom are truly related by St. Gregory Nazianzen, and by Photius in his Bibliotheca, is certainly not the ſame with St. Cyprian of Carthage; for Cyprian Cecilius ſuffered Martyrdom at Carthage, and the other at Nicomedia. The firſt lived in Decius's Reign, and the other a great while after in that of Diocletian. Gregory Nazianzen is plainly miſtaken in making his Cyprian Biſhop of Carthage; from whence we may conclude, that he has reckoned ſeveral Paſſages to the Biſhop of Carthage which belong to another Cyyprian, or elſe, that he made uſe of faulty Memoirs for the Life and Martyrdom of St. Cyprian Biſhop of Carthage. * Greg. Nazianzen. Orat. XVIII. Phot. Biblioth. Cod. CLXXXIV. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III^d.

* CYPRUS, for Theophilus, Patriarch of Jeruſalem, in Morery, Vol. I. read Patriarch of Alexandria.

* CYPRUS, one of the largeſt Iſlands in the Mediterranean. As to the Condition of Chriſtianity in this Place, we are to obſerve, that the Church there was always govern'd by its own Biſhops: The Biſhop of Conſtantia or Salamis, Metropolitan of Cyprus, was never ordained by the Biſhop of Antioch, as we may learn from the Acts of the general Council of Epheſus, where the Biſhops of Cyprus complain'd of the Encroachment of the Biſhop of Antioch, who endeavoured to draw the Churches of Cyprus within his Juriſdiction, and claimed the Privilege of Ordaining their Metropolitan. The Cauſe being heard at length, the Council gave Judgment that the Ordination of the Biſhop of Conſtantia, and the Eccleſtaſtical Government of the whole Province ſhould be veſted in the Biſhops of the Iſland. This Independent Condition was enjoy'd by the Metropolitan not only during his Reſidence upon the Iſland, but even after the Incurſions of the Barbarians had forced him to remove to the Helleſpont. The Council in Trullo confirms him in the ſame Independent Juriſdiction which was decreed him by the Fathers at Epheſus, and paſt a Canon for his preſiding over all the Biſhops of the Helleſpont; that he ſhould be conſecrated by ſome of his Comprovincials, and be entirely exempt from all foreign Juriſdiction. In the Year 643, there was a Council held at Salamis againſt the Monotholites, as appears by a Letter written to Pope Theodorus. * Concil. Epheſ. Act. VII. Concil. in Trullo. Can. 49. Baron, Annal.

* CYRIL, (St.) Biſhop of Jeruſalem, after having been ordained Prieſt by Maximus Biſhop of that Town, refuſed, as St. Jerom reports, officiating higher than a Deacon, as long as this Biſhop lived. Upon Maximus's Death Cyril ſucceeded him A. D. 349, or 350. He was promoted to this See by Acacius, and the Biſhops of his Party, which made his Orthodoxy ſomewhat queſtioned; but the Intimacy between Acacius and this Prelate, was of no long continuance. The Diſputes they had concerning the Prerogative of their Sees, and the Ordination of Biſhops in Paleſtine, broke their Correſpondence. Acacius puſhed the Diſagreement ſo far as to get St. Cyril depoſed at a Council held A. D. 357. The Charge againſt the Biſhop of Jeruſalem was, that he had ſold the Church Ornaments, and the conſecrated Plate, to relieve the Poor in a time of Famine. Eutychius, Biſhop of Eleutheropolis, was put in his Place. St. Cyril threw in an Appeal from this Synod to a more numerous Council; but he was obliged to retire to Tarſus, where he continued ſometime with Silvanus Biſhop of this Town, who gave him leave to conſecrate the Holy Euchariſt, and preach in his Dioceſs. While he was thus entertained at Tarſus, the Synod of Meletina, or Malathia, convened, notwithſtanding it conſiſted moſtly of the Biſhops in Acacius's Intereſt: St. Cyril appeared there: He came afterwards to the Synod of Seleucia, where he was received amongſt the reſt of the Biſhops, at the Inſtance of Baſilius, Biſhop of Ancyra, Euſtathius of Sebaſtia, and ſome others reckoned Semi-Arians. Acacius, to reach at a Revenge, cloſed with Eudoxius, and got St. Cyril depoſed in a Council at Conſtantinople. Upon this Turn Herennius was conſecrated Biſhop of Jeruſalem, becauſe Eutychius refuſed to quit his See of Eleutheropolis. After Herennius, one Heraclius was elected for the See of Jeruſalem, and ſucceeded by Hilarius: Upon the Death of the Emperor Conſtantius, his Succeſſor Julian, recalled the exiled Biſhops. Thus St. Cyril was reſtored, and held the See of Jeruſalem 'till Valens's Reign. This Emperor threw him out a third time, neither could he recover 'till after Valens's Death, which happen'd in the Year 378. The next Year a Council was held at Antioch, where the Diſturbances of the Church at Jeruſalem were reported, and St. Gregory Nyſſen took a Journey thither to bring things to repoſe. At laſt St. Cyril was confirmed, and his Conſecration approved by the General Council of Conſtantinople, held A. D. 380. He died in March, A. D. 386. and had John for his Succeſſor. St. Jerom aſſures us, that St. Cyril wrote his Catecheſes when young; there are eighteen of them extant, directed to the Catechumens, and five others, called Miſtagogical, deſigned for the Inſtruction of Perſons newly baptized. The firſt are cited by Theodoret, and other ancient Writers, and the five laſt are promiſed in the firſt: Theſe latter are likewiſe quoted by the Ancients, and the Style and Manner is the ſame. There is a Letter extant of St. Cyril's to the Emperor Conſtantius, in which he gives an Account of a luminous Croſs ſeen for ſome Hours in the Sky near the middle of the Day at Jeruſalem. There is a Sermon goes under his Name, upon the Subject of our Saviour's Preſentation in the Temple, which is plainly none of his. His Letter likewiſe to St. Auguſtin, concerning the Miracles wrought by St. Jerom, is notoriouſly Counterfeit. St. Cyril's Style is plain and unaffected, and without much Ornament. He reports the Doctrine of the Church intelligibly enough, and confutes the Miſtakes of the Hereticks. * Hieron, in Chron. Epiphan. Hær. 66. & 73. Bellarmin, de Scriptor. Eccleſ. Baron, Annal. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. IV. de Tillemont, Mem. pour l'Hiſt. Eccleſ.

* CYRIL (St.) Patriarch of Alexandria, living in the V^th^ Century. In October 412 he ſucceeded Theophilus his Uncle by the Mother's ſide. He was no ſooner Inſtalled, but he expelled the Novatians the Town, and diſſeized their Biſhop Theopompus of his Eſtate; ſoon after the Jews happening to inſult the Chriſtians at Alexandria, he put himſelf at the Head of the Chriſtians, ouſted the Jews of their Synagogue, and ſuffered the Mob to plunder them; which puſhing Warmth brought on a Miſunderſtanding between this Prelate and Oreſtes, Governor of Alexandria. Thus the Town ſplit into two Parties, and five hundred Monks marching in a Body to revenge ſome ill Uſage, as they thought, put upon their Biſhop, ſet upon Oreſtes, and wounded him in his Coach, and the famous Philoſopher Hypatia was murder'd in a Tumult by the Mob. Theſe precipitate Motions are no recommending Parts of St. Cyril's Life, that which is more ſerviceable to his Memory, is the Conteſt between him and Neſtorius. This Biſhop of Conſtantinople, not only allowing his Prieſt Anaſtatius, and the Biſhop Dorotheus, to preach openly, that the bleſſed Virgin ought not to be called the Mother of God; but ſupporting their Heterodoxy in his own Sermons, gave offence to his Church: The Clergy, the Monks, and the People, appeared againſt this Error. In ſhort, the Conteſt ſpread, and reached into Egypt, whither Neſtorius's Party had conveyed his Sermons. Some Ægyptian Monks ſtriking in on the wrong ſide, St. Cyril wrote to them againſt Neſtorius. After a great many Papers had appeared from oppoſite Quarters, the Buſineſs was carry'd to Rome, and reported to Pope Celeſtine; St. Cyril ſent his Deacon Poſſidonius thither, and Neſtorius likewiſe wrote to the Pope upon the ſame Subject. Celeſtin thus furniſhed with Intelligence and Papers, convened a Synod at Rome in Auguſt, A. D. 430, and here Neſtorius's Doctrine was condemned, and St. Cyril's approved. This Biſhop being authorized by the Pope to put the Sentence againſt Neſtorius in Execution; by virtue of which he was to be Depoſed and Excommunicated, unleſs within ten Days after his having Notice of the Sentence, he acquieſced in the Council at Rome. St. Cyril acquainted Neſtorius with what had paſſed, and drew up twelve Anathematiſms againſt his Doctrine. This Conteſt kindling in the Courſe, many of the Eaſtern Biſhops taking Neſtorius's part, the Emperor Theodoſius the younger, thought the convening a general Council the beſt Expedient for Truth and Quiet: For this purpoſe, November the 19^th^, A. D. 430, he gave Notice for the convening an Oecumenical Synod at Epheſus, at Whitſontide next enſuing. St. Cyril was Preſident of this Council; ſome pretend he repreſented the Pope, but 'tis much more probable, as even the French Supplementer confeſſes, that he preſided for himſelf. Neſtorius was Condemned and Depoſed by the Fathers at Epheſus, and St. Cyril's Anathematiſms received as Orthodox. John of Antioch, and the other Eaſtern Biſhops, went off from this Council, ſupported Neſtorius, and held a Synod by themſelves, where St. Cyril was depoſed. The Emperor's Court, though at firſt inclined to Neſtorius, declared at laſt for St. Cyril: The Eaſtern Biſhops ſtood out for ſome time, but at laſt, by the Mediation of Paul, Biſhop of Emiſſa, they came to an Accommodation with St. Cyril. Neſtorius, who had occaſioned all this Diſturbance, was baniſhed to Oaſis, and his Writings order'd to be burnt. As for St. Cyril, he continued upon the See of Alexandria till the Year 444, in which he died. His Works are extant in Greek, with a Latin Verſion in VI. Tomes; which makes ſeven Volumes, Folio, collected and printed by John Aubert, Canon of Laön, A. D. 1638. The firſt Tome furniſhed his Books concerning the Worſhip of God in Spirit and Truth; with his Glaphyra, or Expoſition upon the five Books of Moſes. The ſecond gives his Comment upon Iſaiah. The third is an Expoſition upon the XII. ſmall Prophets. The fourth is his Commentary upon the Goſpel of St. John. The fifth Tome is divided into two Parts, which make two Volumes; the firſt takes in his Theſaurus, and the Dialogues upon the Trinity and Incarnation, and the ſecond conſiſts of Homilies and Epiſtles. The ſixth Tome furniſhes his Tracts againſt Neſtorius, his Books againſt Julian, a Diſcourſe againſt the Anthropomorphites, and a Treatiſe upon the Subject of the Trinity. There are ſome other Performances in Writing, reckoned to St. Cyril, which don't belong to him, and ſeveral genuine Pieces are loſt. This Father work'd with a great deal of Eaſe, and pitched upon a manner of Writing proper for furniſhing; for he either made large Tranſcripts from the Scripture, or run an Argument to its full length, or made uſe of Allegories. Photius obſerves, that his Style was altogether ſingular; he had a Metaphyſical Head, and makes uſe of his Talent in Logick There is a Lexicon, and a Diſcourſe of Animals, which goes under St. Cyril's Name, but is evidently not written by this Patriarch of Alexandria. The Greek Menology ſets him on the 9th of June, and the Latin Church at the 28th of January. Socrates, Euvagrius and Nicephorus mention him in their Hiſtory, and he is cenſured by ſome Authors for going off his Temper, and managing his Conteſts with too much Heat. * Gennadius, Cap. 57. de viris Illuſt. Photius, Biblioth. Baron, Annal. Godeau, Hiſt. Eccleſ. T. 3. L. 1. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

CYRIL, Deacon of the Church of Heliopolis, near Mount Libanus, was very zealous in deſtroying Pagan Idols in the Reign of Conſtantine the Great; for being warmed, as Theodoret ſpeaks, with an holy Ardor, he broke a great many Images worſhipped by the Heathens. This Indignity, as they counted it, was remembred in Julian's Reign, when Paganiſm was uppermoſt; and now they revenged themſelves with great Barbarity, for not being contented with murdering Cyril, they ripped him up, and eat his Liver: but thoſe concerned in this Cannibal-inhumanity were remarkably puniſh'd, for firſt they loſt all their Teeth, then their Tongue dropt out, and after that their Eyes. * Theodoret, Lib. III. Cap. 7.

CYZ, (Mary de) was born at Leyden, A. D. 1656. extracted from a Gentleman's Family, and bred a Calviniſt. At nineteen Years of Age ſhe was marry'd to one Combe, a very wealthy Gentleman, who maltreated her ſo much, that after a Year and a half 'twas found neceſſary to part them, but about ſix Months after he left her a Widow; and now her Husband's Brother carrying her into France, ſhe turned Roman Catholick, and abjured Calviniſm at Paris. This Change of Religion diſobliged her Relations to that Degree, that they refuſed to allow her a Maintenance; but the Curate of St. Sulpicius, the Pariſh where ſhe lived, undertook to inſtruct and ſubſiſt her. Having ſpent ſome Years in Retirement, ſhe entertained ſeveral ſingle and marry'd Women, who had loſt their Honour, and were willing to ſubmit to a Courſe of Penance: And in a little time ſhe formed a ſort of Society, which ſhe called, du Bon Paſteur, or, the Good Shepherd; and Company of this kind coming in beyond Expectation, a larger Dwelling was neceſſary to receive them. The King acquainted with this Succeſs, gave her a Houſe in 1688, in Chaſſmidy-Street, within the Fauxbourg of St. Germains, belonging to a Calviniſt, who had quitted the Kingdom; his Majeſty likewiſe gave 1500 Livres for Reparations. Here Madam de Combe had the Conduct of an hundred Penitents, which ſhe govern'd like an Abbeſs till her Death, which happen'd in 1692, being but thirty ſix Years of Age. Her religious Rule is ſpread through ſeveral Towns in France, and there are three of theſe Houſes in Paris. * See her Life printed in 1700.

CZERIM, or Cherſim, in Latin Zerenum, was formerly a ſtrong Town in the Poliſh Ukraine, upon the River Taſmin, two Poliſh Leagues diſtant from the Boryſthenes, and ſeven from Czyrkaſſi to the South: The Walls were demoliſhed by the Turks, who took it from the Muſcovites. The Loſs of this important Place was the laſt fatal Blow to the Province of the Ukraine. The Seraskier, Kara Muſtapha Pacha, beſieg'd it with a formidable Army, and the Muſcovite General marched with a conſiderable Force to its Relief, and threw ſeveral Detachments into the Town to reinforce the Garriſon. The Turkiſh General percieving theſe Succours would be hard to deal with, applied to a Stratagem: He made a Feint to quit the Enterprize, and drew off from Cherſim. The Muſcovite not penetrating this Deſign, countermarched likewiſe, after having changed the Garriſon he fancy'd Fatigu'd, and put freſh undiſciplin'd Troops in their Place. This News being quickly brought to the Seraskier, he concluded the Town might be gained, and that the Muſcovites themſelves would make it an eaſy Enterprize. In ſhort, the Turkiſh Army came up a ſecond time, made a brisk attack, and carry'd the Place in a few Days, and that in the ſight of 200000 Men drawn together to preſerve it. * Memoirs de Beaujeu.

CZONGRAD, (the County of) a ſmall Province in the upper Hungary. It lies almoſt all of it between the Maroſe, the Keres, and the Theiſſe. This laſt parts it to the Weſt from the Counties of Bodrog and Zolnoc. The Counties of Turtur and Kalo, bound it on the North, the latter likewiſe is its Eaſtern boundary. The County of Chonad lies to the South of it, and partly to the Eaſt; beſides the little Town of Czongrad, which is the Capital; there are likewiſe Giula, Jena, and Sarawas. * Maty, Diction.

CZYCASSI, a ſmall Town in Poland, in the lower Volhinia. It ſtands upon the Boryſthenes, about five and thirty Leagues below Kiovia. 'Tis fortified with Walls, Works, and a Citadel; which however has not ſecured it from being frequently attacked by the Coſſacks and Muſcovites. * Maty, Diction.

D.

DABUH, a wild Beaſt in Africk, about the bigneſs of a Wolf, and almoſt of the ſame Shape, but has Feet and Hands like a Man; he drags dead Bodies out of their Graves and eats them. 'Tis ſaid this Creature is ſo much affected with the Muſick of Trumpets and Kettle-Drums, that the playing upon theſe Inſtruments is the way the Hunters make uſe of to take him. The Arabians call this Beaſt Hyena, and the Africans Jeſife. Busbequius Ferdinand, the firſt Ambaſſador to the Grand Signior, relates the manner in his Epiſtles how this Animal is taken. * Abl. Mar. Tom. 1. L. 1. Cap. 23.

DAC, (John) a Dutch Painter, was born at Cologn 1556. After he had been Sprangers Eleve for ſome time, he ſtudied in ſome of the chief Towns of Italy; from thence he returned into Germany, where the Emperor Rodolphus took a Fancy for him, and ſent him to make Draughts of Antique Pieces. 'Twas the Cuſtom of this Prince to encourage all Ingenious Profeſſions where he diſcovered a Genius; for he was a great Admirer of polite and creditable Buſineſs, and underſtood a great deal of it. Dac at his Return painted a great deal for this Emperor, and was counted the beſt Maſter of his time. He died at the Court of Vienna, and left a great deal of Wealth and Reputation behind him. * De Piles, Abrigé de la Vie des Peintres.

DACA, a Town belonging to the Mogul in Aſia. It lies within the Kingdom of Bengale, where the River Caor falls in with the Eaſtern Mouth of the Ganges, between the Towns Gouro and Chatigan, about ſixty Leagues from each. Daca is one of the moſt conſiderable Towns in the Kingdom of Bengale. * Maty, Diction.

D'ACIER, (Andrew) a Member of the French Academy, and Library-keeper of the French King's Cloſet, has publiſhed Notes upon Verrius Flaccus, and Pompeius Feſtus, with conſiderable Additions. His Notes upon theſe two old Authors are very Learned, and his Corrections of the Text made with Judgment. In 1683 and 1684, he printed Critical Remarks upon Horace, with a French Tranſlation; but the third Impreſſion of all the Works of this Poet, in X Tomes, 12°, printed in Latin and French, in 1709 at Paris, with Critical and Hiſtorical Remarks, was conſiderably inlarged by the Author. He likewiſe wrote Notes upon Theocritus, which he mentions in his Remarks upon Horace. Farther, M. D'Acier wrote Notes upon Longinus's Diſcourſe of the Sublime, which Boileau order'd to be printed at the end of the laſt Edition of his own Works. He likewiſe tranſlated Ariſtotle's Tract upon Poetry into French; ſome of Plato's Dialogues, and ſome Lives of Plutarch. To theſe may be added Pythagoras's Life, his Symbols and Golden Verſes; Hierocles's Life, and his Commentaries upon Pythagoras's Verſes, &c. Madame D'Acier (Ann le Fevre, M. D'Acier's Wife) has tranſlated ſome Greek and Latin Poets into Proſe; as Anacreon and Sappho, two Comedies of Ariſtophanes, viz. his Plutus and his Nubes, ſome of Sophocles's Plays, three of Plautus's; that is, Rudens, Epidicus and Amphitryo, and Terence's Comedies: Theſe two laſt Performances were reprinted in Holland in 1715. Madam D'Acier has reviewed her Verſion of Terence with great Exactneſs, and added new Remarks, which make this Edition preferable to the former. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid ſhe has tranſlated Euripides, &c. But her moſt conſiderable Performance, is, her Tranſlation of Homer's Iliad's into French, printed in 1711. with a long Preface and curious Remarks upon this Poet. The learned M. de la Monnoye has made a Greek Diſtick in Commendation of what this Gentlewoman has done upon Homer.

Ιλιάδ' ἣ Φαίειῃ Κελτῇσιν ἔδωκεν ἀληθῶς
Νῦν Πηληιάδεω μωλῶν ἄεισε θεά.

Madam D'Acier has publiſhed a Diſcourſe of the Cauſes of the Corruption of Taſte, in 1715. 'Tis a Critick upon M. de la Motte's Diſcourſe upon Homer. * Memoirs du Tems. Baillet, Jugemens des Sçavans ſur les Critiques Grammariens, Art. 597, 979.

DADASTUNE, a Town between Galatia and Bythinia. The Emperor Jovian reſiding at Antioch, A. D. 362, and making it his Buſineſs to ſettle the Chriſtian Religion, which Julian, his Predeceſſor, endeavoured to extirpate, recalled the exiled Biſhops, returned the Eccleſiaſticks their Privileges granted them by Conſtantine the Great; but ſoon after theſe Commendable Advances he came to Dadaſtune, where he died February the 19th, 363. * Godeau, Hiſt. de l'Egliſe, IV. Siecle, Liv. 4. Cap. 37.

DAEN MAALLE, an Indian Prince, Brother to Craen Sombanco, King of Macaçar, and Father to two young Princes, Lewis Daën Rourou, and Lewis Dauphin Daën Toulôlo, whom Lewis the Fourteenth, King of France, bred in the Jeſuits College at Clermont in Paris. Daen Maalle pretended a Right to the Crown after the Death of Sombanco; for in that Country, and in the greateſt part of India beſides, the Brothers of the deceaſed Prince ſucceed him: But the Dutch made the King his Brother ſuſpect him, and got him removed from the Court; and thus his Abſence gave Craen Biſet, Sombanco's only Son, an opportunity of ſtepping into the Throne. When Daen Maalle was forced to leave the Court he retired into the Iſland of Java, where he marry'd a Daughter of one of the chief Lords of the Country: After he had lived three Years in this Iſland, the King at Java, who had given him an hoſpitable Reception, being threatned with a War, was obliged to ſend Daen Maalle out of his Dominions. Upon this he went off to Siam, where he was well entertain'd in 1664. The King of Siam put him in the Poſt of Doja Pacdi, that is, Lord Treaſurer; and having ſettled Eſtates in Land upon his Retinue, he order'd them to give him the ſame Reſpect, and pay him the ſame Acknowledgments or Taxes, which would be his due in Caſe he reigned in the Iſle of Macaçar. Daen Maalle made a return of Fidelity and Service for ſeveral Years; but at laſt his Zeal for the Mahometan Religion diſpos'd him to encourage the Revolt of the Moors againſt his Benefactor: The Conſpiracy of the chief Rebels being diſcovered, the King pardon'd thoſe concern'd; but Daen Maalle pretending himſelf innocent, refus'd the Benefit of the King's Clemency. In ſhort, being apprehenſive of Danger, he ſhut himſelf up in a ſtrong Town, where he was beſieg'd and kill'd in a Sally with all his Troops; but by extraordinary good Luck, the two Princes his Sons got off, and arrived in France; and here when they were baptized, King Lewis the XIVth and the Dauphin his Son, were their Godfathers. * Deſcription du Royaum de Macaçar.

DAFIS, (James) Advocate General to the Parliament of Toulouſe, was barbarouſly murdered with Stephen Duranti, by the Rebels, in the Reign of King Henry the IIId; and though their Loyalty was their only Crime, they were dragged about the Streets with the King's Effigies, and then hanged upon a Gibbet. * Mezerai, Hiſtory of France. Hiſtoire de Toulouſe.

DAGALAIPHUS, one of the Emperor Julian's Generals in his Expedition againſt the Perſians, A. D. 362. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf handſomly in the following Reigns, at the Head of the Roman Army. * Ammian. Marcell. Lib. XXV, &c.

* DAGOBERT IId of this Name, King of Auſtraſia, and Son to Sigebert IId. His Father dying when Dagobert was about four Years old, left him to the Care of Grimoald, Mayor of the Palace, who ſet his Son Childebert upon the Throne, and put up Dagobert in a Monaſtery. Queen Innechild, Sigebert's Widow, came to Paris to King Clovis IId for Protection; and the Auſtraſians ſeizing Grimoald and Childebert, ſent the firſt to King Clovis, who put him in Priſon, where he died. Afterwards Clovis expelled Childebert, and upon a falſe Report of Dagobert's Death, put himſelf in Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of Auſtraſia; which, after his Deceaſe, was held by his Son Clotair the IIId, and upon his Demiſe, by his ſecond Son Childerick; Dagobert living all this time incognito in Ireland, where he marry'd one Maud, and had Children by her. Upon Childrick's Death Dagobert return'd home, A. D. 673. and recover'd cover'd the Kingdom of Auſtraſia, after an Exile of eighteen Years. He proved a pious Prince, govern'd well, and founded ſeveral Monaſteries; but his General's declaring War againſt Thierri I^ſt, King of France, and Dagobert coming in Perſon to the Army, he was killed in an Ambuſcade laid by Ebroin, Mayor of the Palace. Some Chronologers reckon this Accident to the Year 678, others to the Year 680; but the moſt probable Opinion is that which fixes it to December 23, A. D. 679. 'Tis thought it is this Dagobert which ſtands in ſeveral Kalendars and Martyrologies at December 23. Mabillon, with the moſt learned modern Criticks, believes this Dagobert is the ſame with him bury'd at Stenay, where he has the Reſpect of a Martyr. Thoſe who are farther inquiſitive may conſult Adrianus Valeſius in his Borengarius Auguſtus, Father Jourdan, a Jeſuit, in his Hiſtory of France, and Henſchenius's Diſſertation of the three Dagoberts. * Le P. Mabillon, Preface du 3 Tom. des Siecles Benedict. Le P. Cointe, Actes de S. Agobert, publiés par le Pere Alexandre Wiltheim. Voyez la Vie de Saint Menge Eveque de Châlons, & la vie de Saint Vilfride.

* DAILLE, notwithſtanding his Learning and Parts, he has frequently diſcovered too ſlender a Regard for the Primitive Eccleſiaſtical Writers, particularly in his Book de Uſu Patrum. He has ſtrained his Criticiſms upon the Fathers, ſeems to write on purpoſe to leſſen their Authority, and make them in a manner inſignificant. His Pſeude-Epigrapha, where he endeavours to prove St. Ignatius's Epiſtles counterfeit, is learnedly and ſubſtantially confuted by Biſhop Pearſon in his Vindiciæ, &c.

DALANGUER, (the Mountains of Dalanguer or Naugracut) a great Chain of Mountains in the Mogul's Dominions. They ſurround the Province of Naugracut to the North, and partly on the Weſt, and divide it from the Country of Kakars. Some Geographers give the Name of Dalanguer to all that Chain of Mountains which parts the Mogul's Dominions from great Tartary, and which are commonly called Caucaſus. * Baudrand.

DALMATIUS, Archemandrite of the Monaſteries at Conſtantinople, after having lived a ſecular Life, retired in the Year 383, with his Son Fauſtus, under the Diſcipline of the Abbot Iſaac. 'Tis ſaid this Iſaac, in the Year 378, gave the Emperor Valens an uncomfortable Prediction. When this Prince marched from Conſtantinople againſt the Goths, the Abbot told him he ſhould never return unleſs he forbore his Hoſtilities againſt our bleſſed Saviour. Dalmatius lived like a private Monk in this Monaſtery till the Year 410, when he ſucceeded Iſaac, not only in the Government of this, but of the other Monaſteries at Conſtantinople: He lived to the Council of Epheſus, and was one of the moſt zealous againſt the Heretick Neſtorius. He left his Monaſtery, and took a Journey with ſeveral of his Monks to Court. His Buſineſs was to undeceive Theodoſius the younger, who had entertained ſome Prejudices againſt St. Cyril: He acquainted the Council with what he had done, and had a Commiſſion to act for them at Conſtantinople. He was then eighty Years of Age, and died ſoon after. The Greek Church honours him with a Feſtival upon the third of Auguſt. * Actes du Concile d'Epheſe. Sozomene, Lib. VI. Cap. 4. Lib. VIII. Cap. 10. Theodoret, Lib. IV. Cap. 34. Bulteau, Eſſai de l'Hiſt. Monaſt. d'Orient. Baillet, Vies des Saints mois d'Août.

* DAMASCIUS; after Lives and Sentiments of Philoſophers, expunge the remainder of this Article except the Authorities.

* DAMASCUS, formerly the Capital of Syria: It has been taken, retaken, ruin'd, and rebuilt ſeveral times by the Aſſyrians, Babylonians, Perſians, Macedonians, Romans, Parthians, Tartars, and Soldans of Ægypt; to which laſt it belonged till the Reign of Selim the I^ſt Turkiſh Emperor, who made himſelf Maſter of it in 1517, and from this time forward it has remained in the Turks Poſſeſſion. 'Tis the Seat of a Beglerbeg, or Governor General; but notwithſtanding this Advantage, 'tis much ſunk from its former Greatneſs: However, its Scituation makes it pretty Populous, lying in a manner in the middle between Antioch to the North, and Jeruſalem to the South, and about 140 Miles from each; 240 from Aleppo to the South, and 60 from Barcet, and the Sea Coaſt of Syria to the Eaſt. The Beglerbeg of Damaſcus, in Latin Damaſci Præfectura, is a Province or general Government of Turky in Aſia: There are ten Sangiacats, or ſubaltern Governments, which take in the Southern Part of Syria and the Holy Land, according to Sir Paul Ricaut, and others; but ſome of theſe Governments are Hereditary, and may rather paſs for Principalities. Damaſcus was the Capital of Syria before this Honour was transferred to Antioch by the Seleucidæ; 'twas afterwards the chief Town of the Saracens Dominion under the Caliphs, and has now the ſame Diſtinction with reſpect to Phœnicia. * Joſeph. Lib. I. Antiq. Cap. 6. Pliny, Strabo, Ptolemy, &c. Miræus, Geogr. Eccleſ. &c.

* DAMASUS, Biſhop of Rome, was a Spaniard, according to Anaſtatius, and the Author of the Pontificat, and had a Siſter called Irene, who vowed Virginity, and died at twenty Years old. 'Tis ſaid likewiſe that his Father was a Prieſt of the Church of Rome, but all this is but Conjecture; 'tis only certain that he was a Deacon under Liberius, and that he attended this Pope in his Exile. Liberius dying September 366, Damaſus was ſometime after elected to his See by the greateſt part of the Clergy and Laity at Rome, and conſecrated upon the Election; but on the other ſide Urſiſinus, who ſolicited for the Chair, procured a Conſecration by ſome other Biſhops. This Conteſt ſplit the Town of Rome into two Parties, occaſioned a Sedition, which was not ſuppreſſed without Trouble and ill Conſequences. The oppoſite Electors came to Blows, and great Numbers of Chriſtians were killed in the City Churches about this Quarrel. Pretextatus, the Governor of Rome, baniſhed Urſiſinus by the Emperor's Order, to bring things to a State of Repoſe: But this Commotion was not altogether laid by his Baniſhment, for his Adherents met in the Churches they were Maſters of, and refuſed to communicate with Damaſus; and even when the Emperor ordered their Churches to be ſeized, they held their Meetings without the Town. Inſomuch, that 'twas found neceſſary to drive them quite out of Rome; but notwithſtanding all this Precaution Urſiſinus had ſtill a Party, which favoured him privately both in Italy and at Rome. Florentius, Biſhop of Puzzoli, and the Biſhop of Parma, were his moſt zealous Partizans: Theſe Prelates were condemned in a Council held at Rome, A. D. 372, and afterwards baniſhed by the Emperor; however, they found an opportunity to return, and occaſioned new Diſturbances. They practiſed with one Iſaac a Jew, to bring in a Charge of Licentiouſneſs againſt Damaſus. This Article was examined in a Council held at Rome, A. D. 378, where Damaſus was acquitted. This Council wrote to the Emperor Gratian, requeſting him to exert his Authority upon thoſe who diſturbed the Peace of the Church at Rome: His Majeſty wrote back that Urſiſinus was confined at Cologn, that he had ordered Iſaac ſhould be baniſhed to a remote Corner in Spain, and that the Biſhops of Puzzoli and Parma ſhould be expelled their Country. In the mean time Urſiſinus made his way back into Italy, A. D. 381; and here he embroiled Things once more, and tried to prepoſſeſs the Emperor in his Favour: But the Biſhops of Italy met in Council at Aquileia, A. D. 381, wrote ſo powerfully to his Majeſty, that he baniſhed him for good and all; and thus Damaſus had the quiet Poſſeſſion of the See of Rome. This Pope held a Council at Rome, A. D. 369, where the Arians, Urſaſius and Valens, were condemned; he held another at the ſame Place againſt the Arians, A. D. 370, where Auxentius, Biſhop of Milan, was excommunicated. Damaſus entertained Valerian, Biſhop of Aquileia, and Peter, Biſhop of Alexandria at Rome, and ſtruck in with Paulinus againſt Meletius, two rival Biſhops at Antioch. He was near being over-reached by Vitalis the Apollinarian, but being afterwards better informed of this Heretick's artificial Practice, he held a Council at Rome, A. D. 377; where Apollinarius, Vitalis, and Timotheus, were cenſured. He made Anſius, Biſhop of Theſſalonica, his Vicar, or ſpiritual Lieutenant in Illyricum. He declared againſt the Luciferians, and had St. Jerom ſome time for his Secretary. He ſate eighteen Years at Rome, died A. D. 384, and was buried, as Anaſtaſius Reports, in the Church-Yard which goes by his Name. St. Jerom reckons Damaſus amongſt the Eccleſiaſtical Writers, upon the ſcore of a great many Performances, though though very ſhort ones, written by him in Heroick Verſe; to which we may add his Epiſtles, two of theſe are directed to St. Jerom, and inſerted in the Works of this Father. There is a third Letter written in the Name of this Pope, and the other Weſtern Biſhops met at Rome A. D. 370. It reports the Sentence paſs'd againſt Auxentius, and ſent to the Biſhops of Illyria. 'Tis mentioned by Theodoret and Sozomen. Damaſus his fourth Letter is pointed againſt Vitalis, and directed to Paulinus, Biſhop of Antioch. His Anathematiſms, publiſhed at the ſame time, are related by Theodoret and Holſtenius. There is another Letter of his mentioned by Theodoret, written againſt Timotheus the Apollonarian; 'tis directed to the Eaſtern Biſhops: All the other Epiſtles reckoned to Damaſus are plainly ſpurious. The Decrees likewiſe which go under his Name in Gratian's Collection, are without any Authority. He wrote a Poem upon the Subject of Virginity, of which there is nothing remaining. Farther, there are Epigrams and Epitaphs in Verſe, ſaid to be written by Damaſus; Baronius and Gruter ſuppoſe them taken from Inſcriptions on the Martyrs Tombs. They are collected by Sarazaiüs, and printed at Rome, A. D. 1639, but there is no certainty of their being Damaſus's Compoſition. The Pontifical, or Hiſtory of the Popes, reckoned to him is certainly none of his. Prudentius has given a Deſcription of the Font at Rome, ſuppoſed to be made by Damaſus; 'tis likewiſe ſaid that he built two Churches, ornamented St. Peter and St. Paul's Tombs, had the Pſalms ſung by St. Jerom's Correction, and brought in the Cuſtom of ſinging the Hallelujah during the Eaſter Feſtival; but all this is without good Vouchers. * Hieron. Cap. 105. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. & in Chron. Ambroſ. Ep. 30. Optat. Lib. II. Ruffin, Lib. I. Cap. 10. Auguſtin. Ep. 164. Marcellin, Lib. Prec. Sulpit. Sever. Socrat. Sozomen, Lib. VI. Cap. 23. Theodoret, Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. II. Cap. 22. Lib. V. Cap. 11. Lib. V. Cap. 10. Godeau, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Tom. 1. Lib. V. Tillemont, &c.

DAMASIA, an old Fortreſs of the Lycarians in Vindelicia upon the Lech. In the Place, according to Cluverius, and ſome other Geographers, where Augſbourg was afterwards built; but then ſome other Writers are of Opinion, that Damaſia is the old Name for Dieſſen, a Town of the Rhetians or Grizons, called afterwards Pontes Theſſenii upon the Confines of Vindelicia. See Ausbourgh.

DAMATRIO, a Spartan Woman, who killed her Son with her own Hand, becauſe he behaved himſelf like a Coward in the War between the Spartans and Meſſenians. There was a Greek Epitaph upon his Tomb, which ſtands thus tranſlated in old French.

Damatrion tua ce Gendarme fuitif,
Combien qu'il fût ſorti de ſon ventre fidelle,
Et puis le vint jetter dans ce vallon chetif
